Sure, Smṛtijñānakīrti, in his Commentary on the Bodhicittavivaraṇa remarks that svasaṃvedana (so so rang rig), often translated as self-awareness, etc., simply refers to sensations that one has that one is unable to communicate with others. He defines it in this in contrast to the svasaṃvedana proposed by cittamantrins, as self-aware aspectless consciousness.

Yes, and in fact also Dzogchen texts, as you know, take great pains to distinguish rang rig, as the term is used in Dzogchen texts, from the false-aspectarian Yogacāra usage, etc., specifically so that people do not mistake Dzogchen view for the position of Yogacāra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, November 29th, 2021 at 6:14 AM

Title: Re: Comparison of Kagyu and Gelug schools?

Content:

tobes said:

I'm not sure why you think a 19th century master takes precedence on this question, over the actual genesis of the tradition as it unfolded 1500's'ish.

Malcolm wrote:

Because said master was the main lineage holder of the Ganden Mahāmudra tradition, so according to your reasoning, as the main person responsible for this transmission, his opinions on related matters should hold considerable sway.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, November 29th, 2021 at 6:28 AM

Title: Re: Comparison of Kagyu and Gelug schools?

Content:

tobes said:

I think you need to examine more closely. In Highway of the Conquerors

Malcolm wrote:

I'll read it and get back to you. The auto-commentary to which you refer, the Utterly Clear Lamp (yang gsal sgron ma), is not terribly long.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, November 29th, 2021 at 9:06 AM

Title: Re: Question about dependent origination

Content:

Sherab said:

So, a cause is a convention of a cause which is a convention of a convention of a cause

Malcolm wrote:

All the way down, and there is no bottom,

Sherab said:

Since conventions are mind made, therefore, as far as your analysis goes, it applies only to whatever is in the mind. It cannot say anything as regards whatever is external to the mind, and the nature of whatever is external to the mind.

Malcolm wrote:

“Mind” is also a convention, just like everything else, both external and internal.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, November 29th, 2021 at 9:12 PM

Title: Re: Biden is doing a great job.

Content:

PeterC said:

He almost certainly loses the senate (formally) in the mid-terms next year, and may actually lose congress at the same time. Then in 2024 it's going to be very hard to get a democrat elected with all the gerrymandering and election board dismembering that the republicans are doing in the states they lost in 2020. So three years from now we could have a republican president, house and senate again.

Malcolm wrote:

Agreed.

PeterC said:

The republicans have abandoned democracy at this point.

Malcolm wrote:

Clearly. The GOP “elites” have fully embraced Fascism.

PeterC said:

Biden isn't a turning point, he's a pause before the downwards journey continues.

Malcolm wrote:

That depends. If the SCOTUS overturns Roe, it might just be the push needed to keep all three houses in the hands of the Democrats, because there will a huge number of pissed of women in the USA.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, November 29th, 2021 at 9:15 PM

Title: Re: CV Jones - The Buddhist Self: On Tathāgatagarbha and Ātman

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Text critical scholarship moves slowly. Frankly, we don't have time. Someone can always come along later and improve our translations.

Zhen Li said:

Translation simply isn't the priority I think. In the west, it doesn't usually count for tenure review or hiring considerations, so academics, if they do it, do it in their spare time. This seems to gradually be changing, but the situation is still not ideal.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, academics, in Western Buddhist studies, resemble forensic pathologists.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, November 29th, 2021 at 10:01 PM

Title: Re: Thrangu R. on prayer and deities, etc.

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

So from the Vajrayana point of view, there is in fact something topiary to, and doing so does facilitate one's attainment of the result.

DW has a lot of threads and posts about these points. I just thought I'd share how an authority on Karma Kagyu view sees it.

Malcolm wrote:

Of course there is an object of supplication, relatively speaking, and the merit of making such supplications supports the attainment of buddhahood. No one rejects this.

But not even buddhas exist from their own side.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, November 29th, 2021 at 10:49 PM

Title: Re: Thrangu R. on prayer and deities, etc.

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

The King of Samadhi Sutra extols the benefits of supplications and offerings the result being the samadhi of non origination of phenomena aka dharmakaya.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, of course.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, November 29th, 2021 at 11:02 PM

Title: Re: Sakya Trichen and Sakya Trizin Avalokiteshvara Empowerment and Instructions

Content:

KoreanDharma said:

Will there be a link to the for the YouTube livestream?

Seeker12 said:

This is all I have

<https://sites.google.com/sakyatemple.org/great-compassion-mahamudra/home>

Malcolm wrote:

It will be on facebook, Sakya Dolma Phodrang, and Youtube.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, November 29th, 2021 at 11:09 PM

Title: Re: Biden is doing a great job.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

That depends. If the SCOTUS overturns Roe, it might just be the push needed to keep all three houses in the hands of the Democrats, because there will a huge number of pissed of women in the USA.

PeterC said:

It may well be. The republican takeover of the judiciary is really the worst part of their project. A majority of the court throwing out settled precedent may make people wake up to the fact that the third branch of government no longer protects them.

Malcolm wrote:

It's funny, you know. One thing the right wing media never talks about is the globalization of the media. CNN, for example, for all its faults, is fully committed to liberal democracy, and is fully US based. Fox, on the other hand, is controlled by a corrupt media oligarch who has been pushing a far right wing agenda as long as anyone can remember, first destroying the British media, and now ours, for their own financial gain and power. It pretends to be "patriotic," but it is not, because it does not support democracy at all. Democracy is inconvenient for oligarchs.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, November 30th, 2021 at 12:12 AM

Title: Re: Thrangu R. on prayer and deities, etc.

Content:

Astus said:

Blessings are the inspiration gained by devotion to progress on the path.

'Sometimes people think that blessings are something that will make them shake, tremble, and even levitate. But that is not what blessings are. Blessings are the power of the Dharma. When we encounter the power of the Dharma, we start to feel faith, and then we become diligent. We feel love and compassion, and we develop tranquility and insight. This is what blessings are. They are the absence of greed, aversion, and delusion. If we can entirely rid ourselves of those three things right away, that is wonderful, but even if not, we can decrease and suppress them. That is blessings.'
(Vivid Awareness by Thrangu Rinpoche, p 41)

Malcolm wrote:

Exactly.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, November 30th, 2021 at 2:23 AM

Title: Re: Realization and realized masters

Content:

clyde said:

I don't think that is the understanding in the Zen tradition. (This is a Zen forum.) Can you provide references?

Lobsang Chojor said:

I received these teachings in the grounds and paths material, I believe it's from Asanga in the abhidharma-samuccaya. Malcolm will know far more than me here though.

It's also in the dharmagupta vinaya

clyde said:

Can you or Malcolm provide the text (or a pointer to its location) which states that Pratyeka Buddhas cannot appear "while Sakyamuni's dharma is existent" I know of no Zen teacher or text that states such a thing.

Malcolm wrote:

It's basic buddhism.

clyde said:

II. I. The Period In Which No Buddha Exists

Paccekbuddhas are said to exist only in periods when there are no Buddhas. "A person realises Paccekabodhi only when reborn at a time when there is no Buddha” (S-a III 189 and 208). Other expressions to denote this period are: ”the time which lies between (the appearances of) a Lord” (A-a I 194); ”a period in which no Teacher has appeared” (Pv-a III 144); and ”the period between the Buddha (-periods)” (A-a II 192). One of the main characteristics of the Paccekabuddha’s career is that he attains insight during such a period. But this does not mean that his whole aspiration to enlightenment is restricted to this time; it is invariably a matter of many existences of hard work, during which he practises the perfections and accumulates the conditions for enlightenment.

Malcolm wrote:

https://www.bps.lk/olib/wh/wh305_Kloppenborg_Paccekabuddha-Concept-In-Pali-Canon-Commentary.pdf, pg. 41.

We are in the period of Buddha Śākyamuni, hence there are no prayekabuddhas in our age.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, November 30th, 2021 at 2:33 AM

Title: Re: Sakya Trichen and Sakya Trizin Avalokiteshvara Empowerment and Instructions

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It will be on facebook, Sakya Dolma Phodrang, and Youtube.

Seeker12 said:

Do you happen to know the exact name of the empowerment and/or any other information about it?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, it is literally the initiation of the Union of Mahākāruṇika and Mahāmudrā. Here is the full text in Tibetan:

<http://www.tbrc.org/eBooks/W23681-2418-13-28-any.pdf>

It is an important Sakya sadhana tradition that comes from Sachen Kunga Nyingpo, and ultimately from Mahāsiddha Vajrasanapa, the guru of Bari Lotsawa. Bari Lotsawa was Sachen's tutor and the second throne holder of Sakya.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, November 30th, 2021 at 4:38 AM

Title: Re: Question about dependent origination

Content:

Sherab said:

What I was asking is whether the thing being referred to in "fundamentally there is no thing", only refers to the mental image in the mind and not to the physical thing from which the perceiving mind generates its image, or the physical thing or both. We all know that the mental image of a thing is NOT a true representation of the physical thing. The mental image is only a functional representation of the physical thing. Since it is only a functional representation, that thing being represented does not truly exist. But the physical thing out there could still truly exist. Therefore how the thing in "fundamentally there is no thing" is interpreted needs clarification.

krodha said:

This phenomena-noumena dichotomy is not found in Buddhist teachings. Positing a noumena beyond your senses is positing a svabhāva.

Sherab said:

What you say is all in your mind, not mine.

Malcolm wrote:

Conventionally, there are things out there. It's not a problem unless one wants to propose that things exist from their own side. That includes everything, both subject and objects, insides and outsides.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, November 30th, 2021 at 4:55 AM

Title: Re: Thrangu R. on prayer and deities, etc.

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

ibid p.144: [of the old edition]

Thrangu R. said:

Q: Could you talk about the relationship between purification and blessing?

A: These two--purification and receiving blessings--are distinct. They are not exactly the same. Purification means that the obscurations--the cognitive obscurations, which is ignorance, and the afflictive obscurations, which are the mental afflictions and the karmic obscurations or the negative karma that you have accumulated--are gradually purified, which means removed from you. And receiving blessing means that through your supplication of the Buddhas or of the Dharma, you receive their blessing. For example, when you supplicate the Medicine Buddha, through the power of you own supplication combined with the power of the twelve aspirations made by the Medicine Buddha, something happens, and that is called blessing. On the other hand, while purification and blessing are distinct, either one can cause the other. The removal of obscurations allows you to receive the blessings (more fully) and receiving blessings brings about the removal of obscurations.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

(formatting mine)

Okay, so "something happens"? Tell me more! Oh well, I guess he just doesn't want to go there.

we start to feel faith, and then we become diligent. We feel love and compassion, and we develop tranquility and insight.

Malcolm wrote:

There is your something.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, November 30th, 2021 at 5:35 AM

Title: Re: Question about dependent origination

Content:

Matt J said:

How about the snang ba - snang yul dichotomy?

Malcolm wrote:

Neither exists from its own side.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, November 30th, 2021 at 5:39 AM

Title: Re: Sakya Trichen and Sakya Trizin Avalokiteshvara Empowerment and Instructions

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Is this the same Sadhana called 'Ocean of Compassion' or a different one?

Malcolm wrote:

Completely different. That is from Thagthong Gyalpo. HHST gave the transmission for that a few weeks ago.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, November 30th, 2021 at 6:53 AM

Title: Re: Thrangu R. on prayer and deities, etc.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

But not even buddhas exist from their own side.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

They don't have to in order to function in the way Rinpoche explains.

Malcolm wrote:

of course. If they did, they couldn't.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, November 30th, 2021 at 7:09 AM

Title: Re: CV Jones - The Buddhist Self: On Tathāgatagarbha and Ātman

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

What LJS says in Gongchig is that TG relates with Buddha activities.

Malcolm wrote:

That's unsurprising, since that is the basic point of the Uttaratantra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, November 30th, 2021 at 11:12 AM

Title: Re: Sakya Trichen and Sakya Trizin Avalokiteshvara Empowerment and Instructions

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Is this the same Sadhana called 'Ocean of Compassion' or a different one?

Malcolm wrote:

Completely different. That is from Thagthong Gyalpo. HHST gave the transmission for that a few weeks ago.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Cool, thanks. I could swear it is not Thangtong Gyalpo though, I thought that was Filling Space to Benefit Beings. I'll check my copy.

EDIT: it's credited to Ngorchen Gonchok Lhundrub. This sadhana (it is not restricted and ok to discuss here afaik) contains a "mahamudra" section and in the preface refers to itself as combining Great Compassion and Mahamudra in the preface by Dagchen Rinpoche, that is why I am asking whether it is the same.

Malcolm wrote:

Ok, that's not the actual Tibetan title of Konchok Lhundrup's text, but yes, it is that text.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, November 30th, 2021 at 11:20 AM

Title: Re: Sakya Trichen and Sakya Trizin Avalokiteshvara Empowerment and Instructions

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Is this the same Sadhana called 'Ocean of Compassion' or a different one?

Malcolm wrote:

Completely different. That is from Thagthong Gyalpo. HHST gave the transmission for that a few weeks ago.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Cool, thanks. I could swear it is not Thangtong Gyalpo though, I thought that was Filling Space to Benefit Beings. I'll check my copy.

EDIT: it's credited to Ngorchen Gonchok Lhundrub. This sadhana (it is not restricted and ok to discuss here afaik) contains a "mahamudra" section and in the preface refers to itself as combining Great Compassion and Mahamudra in the preface by Dagchen Rinpoche, that is why I am asking whether it is the same.

Malcolm wrote:

BTW:

At the vajra advice of His Holiness the Sakya Trichen, Vajrayana texts are not to be posted or transmitted by electronic means in order to preserve the samaya commitment of secrecy. Therefore, The Simultaneous Practice of the Greatly Compassionate One and Mahamudra with Instructions by Very Venerable Dezhung Rinpoche is available only in paper copy through the postal service. Granted, in this day and age...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, November 30th, 2021 at 12:29 PM

Title: Re: Sakya Trichen and Sakya Trizin Avalokiteshvara Empowerment and Instructions

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Cool, thanks. I could swear it is not Thangtong Gyalpo though, I thought that was Filling Space to Benefit Beings. I'll check my copy.

EDIT: it's credited to Ngorchen Gonchok Lhundrub. This sadhana (it is not restricted and ok to discuss here afaik) contains a "mahamudra" section and in the preface refers to itself as combining Great Compassion and Mahamudra in the preface by Dagchen Rinpoche, that is why I am asking whether it is the same.

Malcolm wrote:

BTW:

At the vajra advice of His Holiness the Sakya Trichen, Vajrayana texts are not to be posted or transmitted by electronic means in order to preserve the samaya commitment of secrecy. Therefore, The Simultaneous Practice of the Greatly Compassionate One and Mahamudra with Instructions by Very Venerable Dezhung Rinpoche is available only in paper copy through the postal service. Granted, in this day and age...

Johnny Dangerous said:

Ok so to be clear though, the initiation is for the text I'm talking about? I don't mind ordering it if not, if it is the text I'm talking about, I own it and have had the lung, initiation, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, it's for that transmission.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 1st, 2021 at 1:07 AM

Title: Re: Realization and realized masters

Content:

clyde said:

Nevertheless, the OP's question was whether realization is possible without a realized teacher, so the existence of Pratyeka Buddhas of the past and the potential of Pratyeka Buddhas in the future seems to answer the question in the positive.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, you see, even pratyekabuddhas trained under a buddha, so yes, a realized teacher is still needed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 1st, 2021 at 1:59 AM

Title: Re: Question about dependent origination

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

You are changing the terms.

An appearance indeed belongs to a mind; but an apparent object does not (as Longchenpa shows in both chapter 8 and chapter 12 of his commentary on the Treasury of the Dharmadhātu). For this reasons there are appearances for sentient beings, but not for rocks and trees. Saying that neither appearances nor apparent objects exist from their own side does not entail that that both exist from the mind's side. The mind itself does not exist from its own side.

Matt J said:

Well, if they don't exist from their own side, and are only mere appearances, and mere appearances only appear in minds...

How about the snang ba - snang yul dichotomy?

Malcolm wrote:

Neither exists from its own side.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 1st, 2021 at 4:54 AM

Title: Re: Question about dependent origination

Content:

Matt J said:

This is Mipham's phrasing in his Beacon at 6.2.1.3.2.1 states that "the common perceptual object is a mere appearance (snang tsam)." This is not to say that things exist from the mind's side, or that the mind exists. However, it is unclear how a non-existent object can appear absent a mind.

Malcolm wrote:

The common perceptual object is liquid. How it appears to beings in the six realms is a mere appearance for the mind of a sentient being in one of the six realms. However, the point here is that there is a common perceptual object.

Matt J said:

Even Longchenpa cites scriptures about how everything is an illusion. How can there be illusions absent minds?

Malcolm wrote:

Illusions are perceptual objects. How can there be an illusion without the sticks, mud, paper, mantra of the illusionist?

Matt J said:

criticizes the notion that there is some nature to objects apart from their various appearances, positing a common substance with multiple appearances, or some sort of slightly existing object.

Malcolm wrote:

Mipham is criticizing here Tsongkhapa's assertion that the common perceptual object is composed of six parts, making it possible for it to appear as six different entities to six different kinds of sentient beings.

All we need to know is that, conventionally speaking, there are common perceptual objects. Even Mipham cannot avoid using the term "object" as the basis for a mental appearance. Why? Because it is incoherent to posit the arising of a sense consciousness in absence of a sense organ and a sense object. Hence nothing in the triad exists from its own side.

Matt J said:

However, it is unclear how a non-existent object can appear absent a mind.

Malcolm wrote:

A nonexistent object cannot appear at all, for example, the child of a barren woman or the horns of a hare. An existent object can certainly appear, such as liquid to the sentient beings of the six realms, without having to posit that existence as anything more than a convention. Certainly, one cannot establish such an object ultimately, but on the other hand, one cannot speak of the emptiness of a nonexistent, such as the child of a barren woman either. Thus appearances are neither true, nor are they false, just like the moon in the water. Without the moon reflected in the water, an appearance of the moon in the water cannot exist, and thus a mind in which the moon in the water appears cannot exist. The mind in which the moon appears to be reflected in the water cannot exist before the moon is reflected in the water, nor after. The mind in which the moon appears to be reflected in the water can exist only while it is apprehending the moon reflected in the water. When the moon is no longer reflected in the water, the mind in which the moon reflected in the water appears ceases.

Nothing exists from its own side. Objects are not primary, nor are minds. They are mutually dependent, therefore, neither are established in truth, and all is conventional. This is the meaning of arising from conditions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 1st, 2021 at 6:50 AM

Title: Re: Question about dependent origination

Content:

Sherab said:

What you say is all in your mind, not mine.

Malcolm wrote:

Conventionally, there are things out there. It's not a problem unless one wants to propose that things exist from their own side. That includes everything, both subject and objects, insides and outsides.

Sherab said:

As I have argued previously, it is all mental representations based on your argument. Because of that kind of argument, whether things that are out there actually exist from their own side is not a knowledge accessible to such a mind which itself is also a convention.

Malcolm wrote:

Things can't exist from their own side because if they did, that would require them to exist inherently. Further, no one at any time has ever beheld an inherently existing thing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 1st, 2021 at 10:42 PM

Title: Re: Awareness, and consciousness, (rig pa) ... oh my!

Content:

Riju said:

Consciousness is bound by an ego. Awareness goes beyond ego and Emptiness.

PadmaVonSamba said:

This has sort of been my understanding.

Malcolm wrote:

This has nothing to do with the teachings of the Buddha. The Buddha never identified something as "awareness" which is separate from the consciousness and which "goes beyond the ego and emptiness." This is some kind of Advaita idea.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 1st, 2021 at 10:45 PM

Title: Re: Realization and realized masters

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

50,000 years ago, you could cross by land from Asia to what is now North America.

Today, you need to rely on a boat or a plane. You can't do it just by yourself.

Malcolm wrote:

You couldn't do it by yourself at the time either.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 2nd, 2021 at 3:30 AM

Title: Re: Realization and realized masters

Content:

LucasGP said:

. . . can one achieve realization in Zen even if one cannot find any realized teacher?

Matylda said:

no

clyde said:

If there are no realized (fully awakened) living Zen Masters (This is not a position I hold, but seems to be a position held by many and which also applies to other Buddhist traditions.) and realization is not possible without a realized teacher (Again, not a position I hold, but one held by many.), then it would seem that the effort, at least in this lifetime, is fruitless.

And if there are realized Zen Masters (or teachers in other Buddhist traditions), who are they?

Malcolm wrote:

Full awakening is rare. But awakening is less so. You don't need a buddha for a teacher, you just need a bodhisattva on the paths and stages, and then, maybe not even a first stage bodhisattva, but someone who has some measure of training and realization on the path of application.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 2nd, 2021 at 5:58 AM

Title: Re: Question about dependent origination

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The common perceptual object is liquid. How it appears to beings in the six realms is a mere appearance for the mind of a sentient being in one of the six realms. However, the point here is that there is a common perceptual object.

Matt J said:

This is exactly the position that Mipham negates. He also negates the idea that there are degrees of emptiness or existence, or that there is a separation between emptiness and appearances.

Malcolm wrote:

He is just negating what Gorampa has already negated: in other words, the appearance of liquid in the human realm is invalid in the preta realm. Calling liquid a common perceptual object is merely a convention to conform to the fact that different beings perceive liquids. It does mean that one is asserting some really existing common perceptual object.

And of course, there are no degrees of existence or emptiness, nor is there a separation between appearance and emptiness. No one suggested there was.

Matt J said:

Illusions are perceptual objects. How can there be an illusion without the sticks, mud, paper, mantra of the illusionist?

Interestingly, in his explanations in the autocommentary to the Sems nyid ngal gso (212:3-223:4), he says phenomenon are "hallucinatory appearances produced by the mind's habitual tendencies." (Trans Padmakara Trans Group) and then references phlegmatic seeing hairs in the sky. No mud necessary.

Malcolm wrote:

This is only one of the eight examples. One can only understand them by using all eight.

As I have pointed out to you before, specifically, Longchenpa rejects that idea that, conventionally-speaking, there are no outer objects. This is well known. He summarizes a long complex argument about illusionists, mountains, and dead people and so on, with this statement, "That appearance for that deceased is no more, but because the cessation of the outer play cannot be accepted, and there is a difference between appearances and apparent objects, there is no fault and it is valid." He then cites Samadhirāja sūtra to the effect that everything is just a designation.

So, positing a common perceptual object is just a designation; likewise the liquid, likewise the water. Likewise the moon in the water. These things are neither true nor false, as Jetsun Drakpa Gyaltsen points out:

The moon in the water is not the moon in the sky,
but without the latter the former will not appear.
Similarly, the nature of all things is taught in the two truths.
There are no dharmas not included in the two truths.
Because the nature is not true and not false, grasping to the two truths is deluded.
It is a fools errand to try and prove that there are no outer objects. The very endeavor itself proves that there are, just as in absence of water there is no reflection of the moon, and in absence of the moon, there is no reflection either. As Chandra points out:

Empty things, reflections and the like, dependent on conditions, are not imperceptible.
And just as empty forms reflected in a glass create a consciousness in aspect similar, so all things, though empty, strongly manifest within their very emptiness, and since inherent nature is in neither truth, phenomena are neither nothing nor unchanging entities.

Intro to Middle Way, pg. 73, Padmakara.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 2nd, 2021 at 8:41 AM

Title: Re: Realization and realized masters

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Full awakening is rare. But awakening is less so. You don't need a buddha for a teacher, you just need a bodhisattva on the paths and stages, and then, maybe not even a first stage bodhisattva, but someone who has some measure of training and realization on the path of application.

clyde said:

You've lowered the bar to "someone who has some measure of training and realization" which could be almost any serious Buddhist practitioner.

Malcolm wrote:

I never claimed a high bar. I just said "realized."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 2nd, 2021 at 9:16 PM

Title: Re: Question about dependent origination

Content:

Sherab said:

As I have argued previously, it is all mental representations based on your argument. Because of that kind of argument, whether things that are out there actually exist from their own side is not a knowledge accessible to such a mind which itself is also a convention.

Malcolm wrote:

Things can't exist from their own side because if they did, that would require them to exist inherently. Further, no one at any time has ever beheld an inherently existing thing.

Sherab said:

You missed my point.

If all things are only mental representations (as you have argued previously) to your mind which itself is also a mental representation (as you have argued previously), how can your mentally represented mind know the nature of things are only known to you through your mental representations of those things?

Therefore, if you say that things do not exist inherently, that would only be your assertion. If you say that things exist inherently, that too would only be your assertion.

Malcolm wrote:

I never argued all things are merely mental representations, not once. That's not what "conventional" means. A "convention" is a term for a dependent designation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 2nd, 2021 at 10:11 PM

Title: Re: Skepticism of Pure Land among Mahayana adherents

Content:

LastLegend said:

Those who get this consciousness to disappear will then destroy the obstructing confusions of the Bodhisattvas of the ten stages. Once this consciousness is gone, then the mind is open and still, quiet, serene and calm, perfectly pure, and enormously stable.[/i]

<https://terebess.hu/zen/daman.html>

Aemilius said:

The author does not say how long it will take to traverse the Ten bodhisattva stages. It can be 10 000 years, 100 000 years, 100 000 000 years or more..

In the Lotus Sutra...

Queequeg said:
Actually, Buddhahood can be instantaneous.

Malcolm wrote:
The Naga girl was already an eighth stage bodhisattva, so, not exactly.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, December 3rd, 2021 at 1:30 AM
Title: Re: Skepticism of Pure Land among Mahayana adherents
Content:

Queequeg said:
Actually, Buddhahood can be instantaneous.

Malcolm wrote:
The Naga girl was already an eighth stage bodhisattva, so, not exactly.

Queequeg said:
...but arguably, it was within the 8 years of her life after hearing the Lotus from Manjusri.

Malcolm wrote:
No, definitely not. In fact, the Chogyal Phakpa, fifth founder master of Sakya, has a text specifically aimed at addressing misconceptions about the Nāgā princess tale. He was the imperial preceptor to Kublai Khan, was fluent in Chinese, and interacted daily with the Chinese Buddhists.

He addresses your contention that she was able to traverse the entire path in eight years, soup to nuts. According to him, the Lotus itself shows that the retinue of nāgās were not ordinary trainees who had never entered the path and that there was no training in method. Why? Those nāgās had previously entered Mahāyāna as evidenced by the fact that they praised the qualities of Mahāyāna and the six perfections. Chogyal Phagpa contends that the nāga girl was an tenth stage bodhisattva in fact, from birth, based on the passage, "She has great wisdom, sharp faculties. The actions of her body, speech, and mind are preceded by wisdom..." He claims all these are qualities of a tenth stage bodhisattva, and cites the Sutrālaṃkāra in support of this. Specifically he cites power over the doors of dhāraṇi as being a quality only of tenth stage bodhisattvas. He then defines how long it takes to attain that stage. It takes one uncountable eon to reach the first stage. A second to reach the eighth stage. At that time, one attains patience to the nonarising of dharmas and receives a prediction of buddhahood by the buddhas. It takes a third incalculable eon to attain unsurpassed buddhahood.

He points out that the full awakening of a tenth bodhisattva is not an instant awakening without traversing the paths and stages, but is in fact the conclusion of the ordinary progress of a bodhisattva. Further, he also points that she, as a tenth stage bodhisattva, was an emanation, that as an ordinary women with karmic obscurations, she could not attain the tenth bhumi. As one who was irreversible and had realized the gnosis of the tenth stage, the nāgā princess was an emanation of a tenth stage bodhisattva, which was revealed by her transformation into a male, her actual form. He further asserts her buddhahood in the southern world system was an emanational act of a tenth stage bodhisattva, rather than the attainment of buddhahood. Again, based on the sūtra's actual words, he claims the texts reads that she exhibited buddhahood to all, not that she was a buddha, pointing out that exhibiting full buddhahood and emanating a buddha kāya, including all the deeds of a buddha, such as residing Tuṣita, conception up through parinirvana, are among the listed powers of a tenth stage bodhisattva such as Avalokiteśvara, etc., as explained in the Sutra of the Ten stages.

Chogyal Phakpa, when setting out the intention of this sūtra, agrees it is a definitive sūtra, but for entirely different reasons. He says the intent of this sūtra is, ""Since all phenomena are of one taste and all vehicles are accomplished in a single vehicle, the Sūtra of the White Lotus of the Sublime Dharma was produced to show that the result is of one taste in the ocean of gnosis of Tathāgata," and so on.

So, a very different perspective.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 3rd, 2021 at 3:33 AM

Title: Re: Skepticism of Pure Land among Mahayana adherents

Content:

Queequeg said:

So, Shariputra was just wrong in his perception.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, he is regularly presented as the stooge in Mahāyāna Sūtras.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 3rd, 2021 at 4:33 AM

Title: Re: Skepticism of Pure Land among Mahayana adherents

Content:

Queequeg said:

So, Shariputra was just wrong in his perception.

When you have to use so much ink to explain what something really is...

But if such views encourage beings... who am I to argue?

Malcolm wrote:

This are the three main passages that Phakpa explains. First, in order to point out that he was teaching myriad bodhisattvas in the ocean:

As soon as Mañjuśrī Kumārabhūta said those words, many thousands of lotuses rose up into the sky from within the oceans. Many thousands of bodhisattvas were seated upon those lotuses. Then those bodhisattvas came through the sky to Vulture Peak and remained suspended in the sky above it. Mañjuśrī Kumārabhūta had guided all of them toward the highest, complete enlightenment. Those bodhisattvas who had previously entered the Mahāyāna praised the six perfections and the qualities of the Mahāyāna, while the bodhisattvas who had previously been śrāvakas praised the Śrāvakayāna. All of them knew the qualities of the Mahāyāna and the emptiness of all phenomena.

Then, the qualities of Sāgara's daughter, as we already discussed, are qualities of a tenth stage bodhisattva described at length in various sūtras, of those, these are included.

The daughter of Sāgara, king of the nāgas, said, “Venerable Śāriputra, if I have great miraculous power, I will attain the highest, complete enlightenment of perfect buddhahood even more quickly than that jewel was accepted.”

And:

That bodhisattva now went to the south and, in a southern world realm named Vimalā, manifested the attainment of perfect buddhahood while seated at the foot of a tree made of the seven precious materials.

Note, the future tense, "I will" and then the actual statement "manifested".

As mentioned above, a tenth stage bodhisattva has the power to demonstrate any form to any being to be tamed.

This raises the question, when does buddhahood begin? We have an answer, actually. According to Maitreya-nātha, buddhahood begins on the tenth bhumi, as he says, because the gnosis beyond the ninth bhumi is the gnosis of a buddha. So, the "sudden awakening" of the daughter of Sāgara is just another one of your favorite things, it's an upaya, but that does not mean it ought to be taken literally.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 3rd, 2021 at 5:45 AM

Title: Re: Skepticism of Pure Land among Mahayana adherents

Content:

Queequeg said:

Like I said... spilling more ink to explain what was actually meant... like lawyers splitting hairs until precedents are revealed to mean the exact opposite of what they appear to mean. I like the interpolation of the snakes on flying lotuses. Maybe these are the UFOs people have been looking for.

Must be boring as F in a monastery. The mind is a skilled painter indeed.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, in this case, more like Kublai's court...baiting Chinese subitists sounds like a fun pastime to me.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 3rd, 2021 at 6:28 AM

Title: Re: Biden is doing a great job.

Content:

Queequeg said:

We don't want the executive stronger than it is, and every time a president exercises more power, it just makes the presidency more powerful.

Malcolm wrote:

"The first man put at the helm will be a good one. Nobody knows what sort may come afterwards. The executive will be always increasing here, as elsewhere, till it ends in a monarchy."

-- Benjamin Franklin

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 3rd, 2021 at 8:13 AM

Title: Re: Skepticism of Pure Land among Mahayana adherents

Content:

Zhen Li said:

In the big picture, Jōdo Shinshū suggests that all Buddhas attain Buddhahood through the same Dharmakāya.

Malcolm wrote:

Considering that the dharmakaya of all Buddhas is the same, that's not much of a stretch.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 3rd, 2021 at 11:12 AM

Title: Re: Roe is toast

Content:

PeterC said:

After getting Roe overturned on a "states' rights", the next stage in the campaign will be at the state level to push back on, well, states' rights. Most of the energy will go into blue or purple states. Even in places like California there's a big enough Republican minority to infiltrate zoning commissions, municipal governments etc. The brilliant thing about this is that even no progress in those states is a win for them, because they get to fuel the outrage machine by railing against the immorality and unamericanism of the coastal elites.

Malcolm wrote:

Well be ok in New England.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 3rd, 2021 at 9:26 PM

Title: Re: Skepticism of Pure Land among Mahayana adherents

Content:

Aemilius said:

Suppose you attain the buddhahood in one second, what then? What do you do for the next five million kalpas?

Do you think Buddhahood is substantially existent?

Queequeg said:

The answer to the first question... time? what's that?

In answer to the second I pose another question - is any of this stuff in these sutras substantially existent? What is Buddha saying in the Lotus? If everything, from his birth to death was a show, what does that make everything he uttered or purported to utter? "Come children, get your toys!"

My daughter said to her older brother, "The tooth fairy is mommy and daddy." He didn't want to hear it, but at some point, when belief in those words wasn't necessary for his pecuniary gain, he came around to accepting them. My daughter, on the other hand, is now losing her teeth and bought in.

Malcolm wrote:

The point of the bodhisattva career, as opposed to the arhat, is that it is supposed to be arduous, difficult, and seemingly impossible. If one isn't up for that, then one's bodhicitta is for shit. On the other hand, if one wants to tarry on the path, and not attain awakening as rapidly as possible, then one's bodhicitta is for shit. Hence the conflicting narratives about the length of the bodhisattva path.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 3rd, 2021 at 9:59 PM

Title: Re: separating pure and impure prana

Content:

bhava said:

Dear dharma friends, I read in a text by Jigme Lingpa, (Dilgo Khyentse Rinpoche's collected works, vol.3), about him practising separation of pure and impure prana every morning. I m wandering, what is it refering to. Apart from nine purification breathing (lungdro selwa), is it a particular pranayama or tsalung? Thanks for your asnwers...

Malcolm wrote:

"Apart from nine purification breathing (lungdro selwa)"

That's it. FYI, people keep translating rlung as prāṇa, but that is actually incorrect. rLung is a translation of vāyu, of which prāṇa is only one.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 3rd, 2021 at 10:21 PM

Title: Re: Skepticism of Pure Land among Mahayana adherents

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

The path may be long, but who knows where you are on it?

Malcolm wrote:

That's pretty clear, based on the qualities one has. They are described in detail in various sūtras and commentaries. Of course, there is a lot of wishful thinking amongst those of subitist bents about this stuff, but the reality is that we don't have those qualities. We are lucky if we are on the path of application, let alone the path of accumulation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 3rd, 2021 at 10:24 PM

Title: Re: Roe is toast

Content:

Queequeg said:

Left/Progressives will need to get our asses handed to us. Some time in the wilderness to regroup and reorient. We got too caught up in ideology ourselves. Maybe we need to drop some and blow the tubes out. Start fresh with the elements.

Malcolm wrote:

Right, enough with this pansy-ass microdosing--heroic doses for everyone!

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 3rd, 2021 at 10:35 PM

Title: Re: Roe is toast

Content:

PeterC said:

Yeah don't be too sure of that...

<https://www.latimes.com/california/story/2021-11-29/la-me-california-covid-mandates-constitutional-republic>

KristenM said:

Oh, I'm quite aware of the State of Jefferson malarkey. I live next door. My own county had a Sheriff who was in the national news for declaring our own county a "sanctuary county" and refusing to enforce mask mandates. Then he got Covid...

PeterC said:

What exactly is going on there? It's just a batshit crazy town council, or does it go any further? It sounds like the sort of thing you'd expect from Kentucky, not California

Malcolm wrote:

California was a GOP bastion between 1948-1992.

PeterC said:

While voter registration statewide has increased by about 8.5 million people since 1990, the poll found "virtually no increase" in the number of registered Republicans. GOP registration has held steady at 5.3 million voters, but voters registering as Democrats have surged by about a third and now outnumber Republicans by almost two to one. "No party preference" voters nearly quadrupled in that time, drawing roughly even with the GOP.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://news.berkeley.edu/2020/11/03/as-demographics-change-california-gop-fades-as-a-political-force/>

These folks are found in the Central Valley and Northern California, aka the State of Jefferson, (which would include the counties of S. Oregon in the Rogue River region to the coast).

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 3rd, 2021 at 10:40 PM

Title: Re: Skepticism of Pure Land among Mahayana adherents

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

The path may be long, but who knows where you are on it?

Malcolm wrote:

That's pretty clear, based on the qualities one has. They are described in detail in various sūtras and commentaries. Of course, there is a lot of wishful thinking amongst those of subitist bents about this stuff, but the reality is that we don't have those qualities. We are lucky if we are on the path of application, let alone the path of accumulation.

Queequeg said:

LOL. Or elaborate world building is just another way the mind distracts itself from the immediate task.

Malcolm wrote:

People would be very fortunate to attain the path of seeing in this life, let alone buddhahood. My observation is that subitists continually lower the bar, so they can claim even the slightest meditative stability as the height of the two-fold omniscience.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 3rd, 2021 at 11:12 PM

Title: Re: Awareness, and consciousness, (rig pa) ... oh my!

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

This has sort of been my understanding.

Malcolm wrote:

This has nothing to do with the teachings of the Buddha. The Buddha never identified something as "awareness" which is separate from the consciousness and which "goes beyond the ego and emptiness." This is some kind of Advaita idea.

Riju said:

Lotus sutra on earth was spoken by Guatam Buddha (16th son of Great Universal Wisdom Excellence Buddha-----ref phantom city chapter 7).

Guatam Buddha was capable of experiencing only the consciousness of His father. He never experienced the awareness that was guiding His father. This is the reason that Guatam never commented on God and awareness. Awareness comes not from Emptiness but from a different source.

Malcolm wrote:

No matter which way you slice, the dharmakāya is never separate from the rūpakāya. They are in union, a whole.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 4th, 2021 at 12:04 AM

Title: Re: Roe is toast

Content:

Queequeg said:

Left/Progressives will need to get our asses handed to us. Some time in the wilderness to regroup and reorient. We got too caught up in ideology ourselves. Maybe we need to drop some and blow the tubes out. Start fresh with the elements.

Malcolm wrote:

Right, enough with this pansy-ass microdosing--heroic doses for everyone!

Queequeg said:

500 mics is something, but

<https://www.urbandictionary.com/define.php?term=thumbprint> are heroic.

Kids: joking. Don't actually try this at home.

Malcolm wrote:

You haven't lived until you've dosed with two four-way windowpanes in the eyes (roughly 1600 mics, straight to the brain). Definitely, don't try this at all...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 4th, 2021 at 12:10 AM

Title: Re: Skepticism of Pure Land among Mahayana adherents

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

My observation is that subitists continually lower the bar, so they can claim even the slightest meditative stability as the height of the two-fold omniscience.

Queequeg said:

Maybe there are some wide eyed dreamers who fly the banner of Sudden Awakening over their rather ordinary achievements, but that wouldn't be unique to people claiming lineage in such traditions. The cuckoos and quacks are everywhere, aggrandizing their experiences with impressive sounding labels. If every tradition is judged by their flakes, charlatans, conmen, etc., then every single one is a failure, if not yet, just give it time.

Malcolm wrote:

I was more referring to the idea of instant BUDDHAHOOD. Attaining the first bhumi "suddenly" is much more reasonable notion, though, even that is beyond most of us.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 4th, 2021 at 12:18 AM

Title: Re: Skepticism of Pure Land among Mahayana adherents

Content:

haha said:

The dharmakaya does not take birth and die, nor does it get enlightenment in course of time. The sutra uses different narrative to say it. People with different disposition may read it differently.

Malcolm wrote:

the dharmakāya isn't an agent, so of course it does not "get enlightened." It is the result of the gnosis accumulation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 4th, 2021 at 1:10 AM

Title: Re: Roe is toast

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, basically.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 4th, 2021 at 1:33 AM

Title: Re: Question about dependent origination

Content:

Matt J said:

Not sure if Mipham even had access to Gorampa.

Malcolm wrote:

Oh, yes. He most certainly did. He read him quite thoroughly.

Matt J said:

Perhaps fitting him into such categories distorts what he writes. Mipham was not afraid to call scholars on their BS, even as he adopted similar media. He was clearly grounded not only in a rime approach, but also a practical, experiential one.

Malcolm wrote:

No. Mipham's commentaries are in the tradition of Gorampa. This is not even a question. It is just a fact.

Matt J said:

And of course, there are no degrees of existence or emptiness, nor is there a separation between appearance and emptiness. No one suggested there was.

It sounds like these posts grant special privilege to physical objects. To some extent, it is an academic point given emptiness.

Malcolm wrote:

You have to understand, Mipham is responding to Gelukpas, since they indeed privilege the object-- for them the object is the truth, not the perception. Gorampa and Mipham both privilege the perception.

Matt J said:

I don't defend ontological idealism either like neo-Advaitins. This is a category error. I'm simply forwarding epistemological idealism--- we don't really know what lies beyond mind. Failing to distinguish the two is problematic.

Malcolm wrote:

When it comes to the basis, the perception of ordinary beings, Madhyamaka in general does not forward epistemological idealism. Sapan summarizes this quite well:

With the intent of functioning in common with worldlings, he that external objects exist,

but having in mind the reasoning that investigates conventional reality, he taught that phenomena are mind.

Again, having in mind ultimate reality,

he that that all phenomena are elaborationless.

So, it really all depends on whether what perspective you are addressing things from.

The Gelug POV always takes into consideration common mundane convention as the baseline for discussion. But even they, when it comes to meditating the path in Vajrayāna, consider phenomena to be mind, and ultimately, free of proliferation.

What Gorampa, and later Mipham, are criticizing the Gelug point of view for, is granting an undue existential status that is not required at all to explain the conventional truth of ordinary persons, that is, the point of view of people who have not analyzed anything.

Relative truth does not bear ultimate analysis, but on the other hand, claiming we cannot know anything of the world beyond our five senses is also not an argument that any Mādhyamika would seriously propose, since even Mādhyamikas admit that a sense consciousness will not arise in absence of a sense object, and that the two truths are objects of true and false cognitions. For example, Aryadeva clearly states:

Dependent on eye and form, the mind arises like an illusion, it is not reasonable to call illusory that which has existence.

Yogic Deeds of Bodhisattvas, Sonam, Snow Lion, 1994, pg. 261.

This verse itself is sufficient to show that Mādhyamikas accept outer objects conventionally.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 4th, 2021 at 1:37 AM

Title: Re: Skepticism of Pure Land among Mahayana adherents

Content:

Queequeg said:

Sagara's daughter still treads the path...It just doesn't take eons.

Malcolm wrote:

Of course it does. Three asamkhya kalpas, and only then if you are a superior practitioner.

This is why people want rebirth in Sukhavati.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 4th, 2021 at 4:22 AM

Title: Re: Roe is toast

Content:

Nemo said:

Biden may not be as good an ally as you think.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, no, not in 1974, when he said this.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 4th, 2021 at 6:30 AM

Title: Re: Biden is doing a great job.

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

They're into a bottom to top strategy to upend everything.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, the CSA in 1861 was the Confederate States of America. The CSA in 2021 is the Christian States of America. Basically no difference, and yes, they will legalize slavery again, but they won't call it that...It'll be more like Handmaidens.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 5th, 2021 at 10:28 PM

Title: Re: Biden is doing a great job.

Content:

Nemo said:

The giveaway is how little policy changes. Less than most single party states in practice.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, because representative democracy is inefficient by design, compared to authoritarian states. In fact, it is the desire to change policies quickly that leads people on both the left and the right to embrace authoritarian governments at the expense of democracy. Thus, at present, we see the persistent abandonment of democracy by the GOP at present, largely due to an huge influx of people from the Southern Democrats into the GOP in the 70's, the people who sought to undermine democracy before the civil war, and the architects of Jim Crow. This turned the GOP into an engine for undermining democracy. In a word, the civil war never ended in the United States.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 6th, 2021 at 1:15 AM

Title: Re: HH Sakya Trichen's Empowerment of Avalokiteshvara: Combination of Great Compassion and Mahamudra lineage?

Content:

ratna said:

The lineage is Śākyamuni, Vajrāsanapāda, Bari Lotsawa, Sönam Tsemo, Drakpa Gyaltzen, Sakya Paṇḍita, etc.

stoneinfofocus said:

Thanks, but I mean where is the empowerment from, who wrote it, in what cycle, etc...? Like, is it from the King's Tradition, etc...? Perhaps lineage was too broad of a term.

Malcolm wrote:

It is a permission rite, and the actual permission rite was composed by Zhuchen Tsultrim Rinchen, an 18th century Sakya lama from Derge, Kham. It is not the Kings Tradition. That is a major empowerment. The cycle it is from is the Bari Gyatsa.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 6th, 2021 at 3:04 AM

Title: Re: Biden is doing a great job.

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Also, the Democrats on the whole don't give a shit about democracy either, they care about 'the rule of law' inasmuch as it supports commerce these days. I mean, there are exceptions, and their shittiness pales in comparison to the GOP, but let's be honest, there isn't much there.

Malcolm wrote:

All political discussion on DW (including mine):

Bitching 'bout the things we've seen
Bitching 'bout the things we've been Bitching 'bout the loves we've had
My, oh my it wasn't so bad
When we had that to loosen our minds
Hey little baby in the front row be kind

Bar bitching: telling you the gospel truth
Bar bitching: why don't you all go get screwed?

Bar bitching: why don't you tell me something new?
Bar bitching: Bar bitching

Bitching 'bout the Windsor C
Bitching 'bout the Western Sea
Why can't you all be like a Grainger man?
Or even a Pheland man?
I'll tell you what we'll meet in Amsterdam
Then you'll see what should be really can

Bar bitching: telling you the gospel truth
Bar bitching: why don't you all go get screwed?
Bar bitching: why don't you tell me something new?
Bar bitching: Bar bitching That's what I'm talking about

Got anything to say
No
Well shut up

There's a place with a lot of eyes
Strange smoke perfume around the peacock guys
And the girls they move their heat
To the impulsive compulsive beat
But that's another place another time
Maybe we'll meet there in quite a short while

Bar bitching: telling you the gospel truth
Bar bitching: why don't you all go get screwed?
Bar bitching: why don't you tell me something new?
Bar bitching:

I really don't know what to say
It's gonna happen to us all one day
And when it does you could have me too
But until then I really don't know what to do
I'm just gonna keep
Bar bitching: telling you the gospel truth
Bar bitching: why don't you all go get screwed?
Bar bitching: why don't you tell me something new?
Bar bitching:
Bar bitching, Bar bitching, Bar bitching, Bar bitching

--The Stranglers.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, December 6th, 2021 at 5:00 AM

Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor

Content:

Unknown said:

I see, again and again, teachers put in the position of having to cater, if not pander, to students, or risk losing them

Malcolm wrote:

That's only a problem for teachers who want an ever-expanding retinue.

A real teacher only needs a few good students. Not hundreds or thousands of slackers.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 6th, 2021 at 6:49 AM

Title: Re: Two truths in Mahayana Buddhism

Content:

Astus said:

even in the abhidharma texts.

Malcolm wrote:

BzzzzzzzzzzzzzzT

Yes, it is certainly found in the Kośabhaṣya.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 6th, 2021 at 8:41 PM

Title: Re: US Election Day Aftermath

Content:

Nemo said:

Nothing will happen until the left realizes liberals are also the enemy.

Malcolm wrote:

Ok, Robespierre. The reason why “liberal” are nervous about the far left is it’s impulse to tyranny which ends in circular firing squads.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 6th, 2021 at 8:45 PM

Title: Re: Mindfulness vs Awareness

Content:

Zhen Li said:

The foundations of mindfulness, and also the five faculties (which include mindfulness), come up a lot in Mahāyāna sūtras, but they are not given exposition, rather, it seems like it is assumed the reader/listener would already be familiar with them.

Malcolm wrote:

Thus not true, for example, a fairly detailed description of the four foundations of mindfulness is to be found in the Bodhisattvapitaka.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 6th, 2021 at 9:46 PM

Title: Re: Mindfulness vs Awareness

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

Mindfulness is a practice through which awareness develops.

Carefulness is not relying too much on English language words used to translate Buddhist concepts.

Malcolm wrote:

Actually, mindfulness and awareness are mutually supporting mental factors.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 6th, 2021 at 9:49 PM

Title: Re: Mindfulness vs Awareness

Content:

Zhen Li said:

The foundations of mindfulness, and also the five faculties (which include mindfulness), come up a lot in Mahāyāna sūtras, but they are not given exposition, rather, it seems like it is assumed the reader/listener would already be familiar with them.

Malcolm wrote:

Thus not true, for example, a fairly detailed description of the four foundations of mindfulness is to be found in the Bodhisattvapitaka.

Zhen Li said:

Thanks for pointing that out. Is what you are thinking of inside or outside of the Dhyāna Chapter?

Malcolm wrote:

I have to go look. I pulled it out the other day for a lama who was teaching on the FFM and needed an Mahayana source.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 6th, 2021 at 10:42 PM

Title: Re: US Election Day Aftermath

Content:

tobes said:

"Liberal" here is meaning the American sense of "progressive" rather than the actual liberal tradition? Because I think the latter could help us a lot to restore a bit of civility in the polis.

Malcolm wrote:

No, he means Nancy Pelosi as opposed to AOC.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 7th, 2021 at 4:47 AM

Title: Re: HE Jhado Rinpoche teachings in CA

Content:

tony_montana said:

Also, I don't wanna start a fuss but is Begtse Chen a Wisdom/Enlightened Protector? For a person practicing Most Secret Hayagriva that Jhado Rinpoche so kindly gave empowerment for, how would be the appropriate way to supplicate Begtse for support and help?

Lobsang Chojor said:

I'm pretty sure Rinpoche said Begtse Chen was a supramundane (enlightened) protector.

zerwe said:

Good question. All I could gather from Rinpoche, is that adoption of Begtse began between the reign of the 2-3 Dalai Lamas, that Chamsing and Nechung are of one-nature, and that Chamsing (supramundane) is uncommon aspect and Nechung mundane?

Chamsing is one of the chief dharma protectors of Tamdrin Yangsang's mandala and is mentioned/invoked in FPMT's protector practices.

One (controversial) source lists him as a wisdom/enlightened protector along side Kalarupa, Palden Lhamo, and Six-armed Mahakala. Also, says he originally had Indian roots and came to Tibet beginning 11th century through Sakya/Kagyu via Marpa and Sachen Kunga Nyingpo?

Shaun

Lobsang Chojor said:

I was a bit unsure on the first point I think Rinpoche was just saying that the titles "black and red" protectors depends on the context. The Tibetan government mean Palden Lhamo and Nechung, whereas in Mongolia it refers to Palden Lhamo and Begtse Chen.

In the lineage list Rinpoche recited it came through Sachen Kunga Nyingpo, I don't think I heard Marpa.

Could you PM me the second mantra? I didn't write any down

zerwe said:

PM sent

"In the lineage list Rinpoche recited it came through Sachen Kunga Nyingpo"

Excellent, your ears are sharper than ours.

Shaun

Malcolm wrote:

There are two sources for the Marutse brother and sister. The Drogmi long lineage passes to him from Gayadhara. The short lineage is a term revealed by Marpa Lotsawa, originally connected with the Most Secret Hayagriva. They are combined in Sakya.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 7th, 2021 at 5:32 AM

Title: Re: CV Jones - The Buddhist Self: On Tathāgatagarbha and Ātman

Content:

nyonchung said:

bTsan kha bo che received the "gzhan stong dbu ma chen po" lineage from Sajjana, he from Akarashanti, he from Anandakirti, he from Maitripa - Tsen Khawoché (who was not a sanskritist),

Malcolm wrote:

Which leaves open the question, how much did Tsen Khawoché actually understand?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 7th, 2021 at 9:47 AM

Title: Re: Question about dependent origination

Content:

Matt J said:

I don't think that is correct. Per Mipham in the Adornment of the Middle Way (trans Padmakara):

Malcolm wrote:

For you, Mipham seems to be the summum bonum of Madhyamaka, even though for me, he just another in a long line of Tibetans. The fact mainstream Madhyamakas accept outer objects conventionally is noncontroversial. It's true that Shantaraksita, of whom Mipham is very fond, likes Yogacara for conventional truth. But as the passage from Sapan demonstrates, Madhyamakas tend to be content different presentations of conventional truth. Certainly, most Mainstream Madhyamakas accept the Sautrantika perspective. This again is noncontroversial. Also, Mipham defense of rang rig is uncertain. Candrakirti clearly understands rang rig as memory, not a self-illuminating mind, but that may simply be a fault in the translation,

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 7th, 2021 at 10:34 PM

Title: Re: Sakya Pandita and medicine question.

Content:

alderjerry@gmail.com said:

Recently I had seen somewhere on this forum a comment by Malcolm about Sakya Pandita's advice regarding taking medicine. The quote/text would be very helpful for a friend (currently in hospital) who wants to ask their lama a clear question. The context is their (and mine) concern that a position of being anti 'scientism' has led to a anti Covid vaccine stance within our sangha. Thank you,

Malcolm wrote:

you can find this citation in Clarifying the Sages Intent, In The Stages of the Buddhist Doctrine, Wisdom Pubs.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 7th, 2021 at 10:39 PM

Title: Re: US Election Day Aftermath

Content:

Nemo said:

Liberalism has always been a scam Tobes. It pretends progressiveness while keeping property rights accumulated through generations of slavery, imperialism and theft sacrosanct. It fixes the secondary contradictions of capitalism but does nothing to prevent more from being created. Since it cannot confront capital it is a path to extinction.

Malcolm wrote:

How silly. "Confront capital." What are people supposed to do? Assembly in mobs and go relieve capitalists of their holdings. What a naive view of the world.

"Beings are owners of karmas, student, heirs of karmas, they have karmas as their progenitor, karmas as their kin, karmas as their homing-place. It is karmas that differentiate beings according to inferiority and superiority."

Hierarchy will never be eliminated among sentient beings because karma is unerring.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 7th, 2021 at 10:48 PM

Title: Re: Mindfulness vs Awareness

Content:

Ode to Joy said:

Even though rig pa or awareness is not mentioned in this literature, perhaps this one taste of suchness taught by Buddha here is something like the rig pa awareness of the higher teachings.

Malcolm wrote:

Rig pa (vidyā) is a path dharma, and it exists in practitioners below the path of seeing, so no, it is not the "one taste of suchness," at least not in the beginning.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 8th, 2021 at 12:17 AM

Title: Re: US Election Day Aftermath

Content:

Nemo said:

It sounds like you worship the abstraction called capital Malcolm.

Malcolm wrote:

"Capital" is just an economic store which can be preserved, employed, or squandered. If you have fifty seeds, that is your capital. It is not abstract at all.

The Buddha recommended that lay people preserve a quarter of their capital against emergencies, use half to generate profits, and use the other quarter to enjoy their lives.

If you want to be specific, rather than make grandiose and pompous proclamations, great. But you're just bar bitching.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 8th, 2021 at 12:25 AM

Title: Re: US Election Day Aftermath

Content:

tobes said:

Yes, this seems to be a problem in many traditional labour/working class/egalitarian parties in western/liberal democracies. i.e. the rise of a white collar political class, usually trained in law or economics, who claim to "represent" the interests of working people.

Malcolm wrote:

Oh, you mean unlike the intellectuals of the revolution? There will always be educated people who claim to represent the interests of the "workers." The right does it, the left does it, it's all bollocks all the way through.

Theory sucks.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 8th, 2021 at 12:42 AM

Title: Re: Comparison of Kagyu and Gelug schools?

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Tsonkhapa made a lineage off of visions.

Malcolm wrote:

And, even if it were true (it isn't), this is a problem because...?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 8th, 2021 at 1:00 AM

Title: Re: Comparison of Kagyu and Gelug schools?

Content:

zerwe said:

"The difference between Geluk and Kagyu is guru loyalty."

Also, what exactly are you saying here?

Malcolm wrote:

Some sectarian, triumphalist bullshit, I imagine. But it is pervasive throughout Tibetan Buddhist world, so it is not surprising. Everyone feels their guru is the best, their blessings are the best, their lineage is the best, their practice is the best, their opinion is the best. That's the nature of egotism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 8th, 2021 at 1:20 AM

Title: Re: US Election Day Aftermath

Content:

Queequeg said:

Theory is great. Now if we could just get these pesky humans to cooperate. I have a grand plan for all of us!

Malcolm wrote:

The reason for the turn to identity politics to begin with is that after the white labor movement secured their interest following WWII, they abandoned the rest of the working class (blacks, latinos, etc.) completely, whereas before, what they did was ensure blacks, latinos, and so on were just a marginal force.

This is why I completely laugh at white men who spend their time bitching and moaning about identity politics and fantasizing about a return to color-blind class based labor movements (which never existed).

Theory sucks.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 8th, 2021 at 5:55 AM

Title: Re: Two truths in Mahayana Buddhism

Content:

Astus said:

The two truths doctrine is a commentarial development...

Malcolm wrote:

No, it is found in Mahāyāna Sūtras. After all, the thread is called "The Two Truths in Mahāyāna Buddhism."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 8th, 2021 at 6:25 AM

Title: Re: US Election Day Aftermath

Content:

tobes said:

On one level, many of the political benefits we enjoy have arisen out of ideas/theory; kids don't work in Manchester coal mines anymore etc.

Malcolm wrote:

That was not a function of theory. That was a function of empathy.

tobes said:

But, I think we live in a time where theory has become increasingly unhinged from reality, and the dangers of this are all too clear for us to see.

Malcolm wrote:

It's always been unhinged from reality.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 8th, 2021 at 10:52 AM

Title: Re: US Election Day Aftermath

Content:

tobes said:

On one level, many of the political benefits we enjoy have arisen out of ideas/theory; kids don't work in Manchester coal mines anymore etc.

Malcolm wrote:

That was not a function of theory. That was a function of empathy.

tobes said:

But, I think we live in a time where theory has become increasingly unhinged from reality, and the dangers of this are all too clear for us to see.

Malcolm wrote:

It's always been unhinged from reality.

tobes said:

Theory played a big role. The labour movement that won many such freedoms is incoherent without notions of 'labour' 'class' 'capital' 'economics' etc. If you're saying that empathy played a role in informing that theory, then sure.

Malcolm wrote:

No, theory did not play any role. People saw their inequality and did something about it, leaving privileged journalists like Marx to write theories about their daily experience, while he pursued his bourgeoisie lifestyle, disconnected from their lives.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 8th, 2021 at 9:22 PM

Title: Re: US Election Day Aftermath

Content:

Sādhaka said:

What do you guys think about Thomas Sowell's talks?

Malcolm wrote:

I strongly disagree with his advocacy of charter schools. I think they are 1) undermining public school education, 2) creating a two tier system that actually privileges white communities and sucks resources away from communities of color, and 3) is a back door for the public funding of religious education.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 8th, 2021 at 10:35 PM

Title: Re: Two truths in Mahayana Buddhism

Content:

Astus said:

In other words, the Sarvastivadins and the Sautrantikas...did not have the idea of two truths from their sutras...

Malcolm wrote:

This is not true. For example. Śamathadeva's commentary on the Kośa preserves in its entirety an agamic text called the don dam stong pa nyid kyi mdo. There is another text which provides a canonical source for the term kun rdzob.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 8th, 2021 at 10:47 PM

Title: Re: Comparison of Kagyu and Gelug schools?

Content:

zerwe said:

"The difference between Geluk and Kagyu is guru loyalty."

Also, what exactly are you saying here?

Malcolm wrote:

Some sectarian, triumphalist bullshit, I imagine. But it is pervasive throughout Tibetan Buddhist world, so it is not surprising. Everyone feels their guru is the best, their blessings are the best, their lineage is the best, their practice is the best, their opinion is the best. That's the nature of egotism.

Crazywisdom said:

Let's not pretend we're ecumenical Malcolm. We all know the Geluk view as applied in Vajrayana is considered wrong view in Kagyu and Nyingma.

Malcolm wrote:

No, we do not know this. It's a ridiculous assertion. If it were true, then one would be accusing Jigme Lingpa, Shabkar, Dodrupchen Tenpé Nyima, and so on, of having wrong views, because all these men trained in the Geluk system and promulgated Geluk Yikcha in their monasteries, which remain the curriculum current in most Nyingma monasteries in Golok and Amdo. Moreover, it amounts to a claim that Geluk Vajrayāna is invalid and is incapable of producing awakening. This is a ridiculous assertion and merely shows narrow mindedness and lack of education on the part of those who sponsor such views, no matter who they are. This is illustrated by the shame expressed by Khenpo Jigme Phuntsok, for example, for having naively criticized the views of Tsongkhapa when he was young, whom he later came to understand was a great mahasiddha, etc. Just study Tsongkhapa's praise to dependent origination. You will be unable to find in it a single fault.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 8th, 2021 at 10:54 PM

Title: Re: Comparison of Kagyu and Gelug schools?

Content:

nyonchung said:

Certainly views differ (notably on the definition of kyerim and dzogrim) as certainly some Sakyapas don't consider kindly some of Khedrub Jé's view on tantra.

Malcolm wrote:

These things do not matter and should be left to moulder in the 15th century, where they belong. Every major school of Tibetan Buddhism produces awakened people in every generation, despite differences in explanation and approaches.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 8th, 2021 at 11:40 PM

Title: Re: US Election Day Aftermath

Content:

Nemo said:

I love how invested you are in capitalist hierarchy. Like debt and money were real things, not created by an elite to maintain control. The strong ruling over the weak is the natural order. It should be celebrated. Your net worth is your score in capitalism. So which one are you?

Malcolm wrote:

Your central thesis, that debt and money created by elites to maintain control is an unsupportable assertion. That debt and money can be used that way, however, is certainly true. You might read David Graeber's Debt, the First 5000 Years.

As for myself, I just deal with the practical reality of putting food in my mouth, without getting tangled up in ideologies about economics, certainly Marxism is an abject failure. Capitalism is not going away any time soon. So better get used to it and try and make sure it at least is contained by democratic ideals.

My way of thinking is more result-oriented. I am more interested in policy than theory.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 8th, 2021 at 11:44 PM

Title: Re: Two truths in Mahayana Buddhism

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This is not true. For example. Śamathadeva's commentary on the Kośa preserves in its entirety an agamic text called the don dam stong pa nyid kyi mdo. There is another text which provides a canonical source for the term kun rdzob.

Astus said:

That sutra was mentioned by Aemilius, and so I linked its English translation. See <https://www.dharmawheel.net/viewtopic.php?p=610404#p610404>. On terminology <https://www.dharmawheel.net/viewtopic.php?p=610610#p610610>.

Malcolm wrote:

You said, "did not have the idea of two truths from their sutras."

They most certainly did derive or have their idea of the two truths from their sūtras. Those passages prove it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 9th, 2021 at 12:41 AM

Title: Re: Comparison of Kagyu and Gelug schools?

Content:

nyonchung said:

if somebody refused to visit Ganden monastery or Kumbum, Tsongkhapa's birthplace in Amdo and pay homage there ...

Malcolm wrote:

Been there, beautiful place.

Tsonghapa's birthplace.jpg (478.91 KiB) Viewed 1831 times

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 9th, 2021 at 1:11 AM

Title: Re: Comparison of Kagyu and Gelug schools?

Content:

nyonchung said:

Kumbum is now mostly a Chinese tourist destination.

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed, but it is still a nice place. We also visited HHDL's birthplace on the same day.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 9th, 2021 at 1:26 AM

Title: Re: Comparison of Kagyu and Gelug schools?

Content:

nyonchung said:

add the 37 verses of Ngülchu Thogmé Zangpo (nominally a drugpa-kagyüpa)

Malcolm wrote:

Ahem, Sakyapa.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 9th, 2021 at 1:31 AM

Title: Re: Comparison of Kagyu and Gelug schools?

Content:

nyonchung said:

Now

in fact doesn't change much as a beginner, in the center, you'll probably have a Bouddha statue, Tsongkhapa instead of a Karmapa or of Jigten Sumgön or Guru Rinpoché ... daily recitations will be different, basic teachings also - there will be probably a form of lojong (mind training), Kagyü an Gelug tradition come anyway from the same source, Potowa -, and from there Atisha, Serlingpa

Nicholas2727 said:

How would the basic teachings differ between Gelug and Kagyu? Im assuming Gelug would teach more from the Lam Rim and Kagyu from Jewel Ornament of Liberation? Or are you referring to this in a different way?

nyonchung said:

Right, not only Lamrim, but Atisha's "Lamp of Wisdom", but I was thinking to the practice of tonglen (taking and giving) and its root verses in the Lojong (Basic verses of Mind Training) by Potowa, add Langrithangpa's eight verses, all this part of basic teachings in both schools - add the 37 verses of Ngülchu Thogmé Zangpo (nominally a drugpa-kagyüpa)

There is also Atisha's teachings on the "three classes" of being - Kalu Ripoché's centers were supposed to use Taranatha's commentary (Kyebu Sumgyi Lamrim)

There is an immense Gelug collection commentaries on Kadampa teachings accumulated through centuries, including contemporary ones

Malcolm wrote:

BTW, your use of me is wrong. Should be "The sky and I don't hold views, etc." "I" is the subject here, not an object, "me."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 9th, 2021 at 1:36 AM

Title: Re: Comparison of Kagyu and Gelug schools?

Content:

nyonchung said:

I couldn't visit HHDL birthplace (restrictions applied) but nearby Drotsang, a magnificent Chinese style (but Tibetan buddhist)

Malcolm wrote:

We were not allowed either, but we went anyway, much to the terror of the caretaker when we arrived unannounced. We got a fifteen minute tour because our teacher's 75 year old mother was along for the ride, as well as the senior teachers at the Tibetan Medical College.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 9th, 2021 at 1:59 AM

Title: Re: Two truths in Mahayana Buddhism

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

They most certainly did derive or have their idea of the two truths from their sūtras.
Those passages prove it.

Astus said:

How so? Neither the idea of there being two truths, nor the definition of those truths are found there.

Malcolm wrote:

You really aren't that dense.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 9th, 2021 at 2:15 AM

Title: Re: Comparison of Kagyu and Gelug schools?

Content:

nyonchung said:

The list of his teachers is long (includes Butön, Dölpopa, Lama Dampa, Pang Lotsawa ...)

Malcolm wrote:

Butön, Dölpopa, Lama Dampa...all Sakyapas.

- thugs rje chen po'i dmar khrid, also Sakya, through Thuje Tsondru.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 9th, 2021 at 2:20 AM

Title: Re: Inner circles and cults

Content:

nyonchung said:

years! OMG, so fast, and now lecturing about it - one French guy - former Sogyal's translator (English to French) - doing same after 20 years or so profiteering of the system, now still profits by denouncing it and started his own groups ... to teach "pure Dharma", while saying that the only teachings he ever received were from Sogyal (and in English) ...

Malcolm wrote:

That is seriously distorted, whatever one thinks of Sogyal.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 9th, 2021 at 3:07 AM

Title: Re: Inner circles and cults

Content:

nyonchung said:

As for France, I don't think there was any formal case started against Sogyal - and French criminal law is as much stricter than the US one, and police possibly more reactive ... I found some peoples' reaction pretty strange, specially this guy who showed up in magazines, TV, just to start his own Dharma business after disparaging his own teacher - well if there was anything wrong, he was so high up in the organization and close to Sogyal, must have noticed something in 20 years or so, no?

Malcolm wrote:

Sogyal may have been a bully, a sybarite, and corrupt, but to his credit, he did introduce literally thousands of people to very qualified teachers, like Khenpo Namdrol. Much the same could be said of Trungpa.

nyonchung said:

A certain German site loves this stuff

Malcolm wrote:

Well, that guy escaped from the Scientology of Buddhism, aka NKT.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 9th, 2021 at 4:00 AM

Title: Re: Two truths in Mahayana Buddhism

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

The division of the dharmas by the Ābhidharmikas into "real" svabhāva dharmas and unreal concepts in their matrices is arguably their version of the two truths. You'll notice that in the 11th century treatise, it also didn't outrightly outline two truths. Instead, it outlined the ultimate, and the conventional is what is imputed over that ultimate, the fourfold ultimate in the case of the Theravāda sect. Now, the fourfold paramattha is not from the Theravādin Adhidhamma itself. It is a systematization of their dhamma-matrices as presented in texts like Dhammasaṅgaṇī. These matrices were the "ultimate truth" of many of the Śrāvaka Abhidharma traditions, one could argue.

Malcolm wrote:

Śamathadeva's commentary refers to sentient beings as relative (saṃvṛti), since they appropriate aggregates. Don dam, pāramārtha is a reference to emptiness.

Arguing that the Sarvastivadins did not have a concept of two truths derived from sūtras, is, frankly just dumb. Astus is applying strict text critical criteria to the question, but that is useless here, because the fact is that it is discussed by Vasubandhu, and earlier, etc. It is scholastic myopia only that would lead one to claim that there is not evidence of the two truths in the agamas. Nāgārjuna would not have bothered mentioning it had he thought there would be a serious contest about his claim:

The dharma taught the buddhas properly relies on two truths.

His opponents here are not Mahāyānis.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 9th, 2021 at 5:00 AM

Title: Re: Comparison of Kagyu and Gelug schools?

Content:

nyonchung said:

Well, Taranatha was certainly holding Sakya transmissions
Dölpopa being zhentongpa, what do we do?

Malcolm wrote:

He was Sakya. Jonang is a subschool of Sakya. Dolbupa lived long before Gorampa's views were declared the official Sakya position in the late 15th century.

nyonchung said:

As for Butön, the Zhalu Ribug tradition (see Losel Tenkyong) describes him as a zhalupa forefots (if not as a trophu-kagyüpa), even if certainly received and transmitted innumerable Sakyapa teaching

Malcolm wrote:

Zhalu is Sakya as the day is long, from Buton down to Losal Tenkyong.

nyonchung said:

For Thugjé Tsöndrü, alas no, the dmar khrid is one of four specific teachings of Jonang (see Gö Lotsawa's deb ther) lineage:

- Tsembupa

Malcolm wrote:

Thugje Tsondu was a Sakyapa. The only lineage that has extensive teaching on the Tsembupa Markhrid is Sakya, notably the very profound commentary by Lama Dampa and the one by Ngorpa Sangye Phunstog, and the various instructions on it Zhuchen Tsultrim Rinchen, also of Ngor. It was the first teaching I ever received.

nyonchung said:

Back to Thogmé Zangpo, if one checks his writings and the lineages he transmitted they are overwhelmingly kadampa, plus the tö-drugpa lineage of Yanggönpa Gyeltsen Pel (1213-1258) he received from Sherab Bum (who received two lineages) so the tö-drugpa claim may be not that excessive (G-granted, Yanggönpa, heir to Götsangpa, is also a disciple of Sakya Pendita)

I will not contest of course for Lama, a splendid figure

But Pang Lotsawa, later considered as a forefather of the bodongpas, can certainly be also described as a Sakyapa

Malcolm wrote:

There is no conflict. Sangphu, by the 14th century was effectively a branch of Sakya.

Jonang, Zhalu, and Geluk can all be generally included in the schools that branched from Sakya. Most of their Vajrayāna transmissions come from Sakya, and so on. Kunga Drolchok was Sakya, through and through, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 9th, 2021 at 5:41 AM

Title: Re: Comparison of Kagyu and Gelug schools?

Content:

nyonchung said:

this to say that Thogmé Zangmo teachings entered also the Gelugpa tradition through Gyama Yönten Ö, a master Khedrub Jé Geleg Pelzang but he also transmitted (is it becoming an obsession) the tö-drugpa lhan gcig skyes sbyor gyi khrid yig rgyal sras lugs / yon tan 'od kyi zin bris who was later received by Drugpa Ngagwang Chögyel (1465-1540) another important disciple, still relevant to the subject Radreng Shakya Sönam (1356-1442), also a disciple of Tsongkhapa Like Yönten Ö

He had many disciples among Gelugpas (like him often also disciples of Tsongkhapa) but also notable Sakyapa teachers like Ga rab 'byams pa Künga Yeshé (1397-1470) this to say that important teachings always widely circulated, and that kadampa teachings can be obtain from teachers of all school - certainly Kagyüpas and Gelugpas will insist on them as a foundation

Must be noted that the lojong practice was included in the shangpa 3 years-retreat before starting the chö practice

Malcolm wrote:

It must be noted that all Mahāyāna teachings are included in Parting From the Four Attachments, the very first text in the Jo nang brgya rtsa.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 9th, 2021 at 6:23 AM

Title: Re: Two truths in Mahayana Buddhism

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Arguing that the Sarvastivadins did not have a concept of two truths derived from sūtras, is, frankly just dumb.

Astus said:

The reason it practically cannot be derived from the sutras is that the definition of the two truths requires the ideas that come from the Abhidharma, that is, the distinction between truly existing dharmas and nominally existing worldly conventions. Such linguistic separation is not found in the sutras...

Malcolm wrote:

I don't agree with this. The Buddha is very clear in a passage that appears in Śamathadeva's commentary [mngon, ju 47a (Toh. 4094)] that one is not to have attachment to the etymologies (nirukti) of the people (jānapada), one is not to hasten to mundane names. It is because they are false.

Prior to this, [mngon, ju 40b (Toh. 4094)], the Buddha is quoted as "Bhikṣus, the supreme (mchog) falsity is the phenomena that are false and deceptive. Bhikṣus, the supreme truths are like this, this is how they are. Therefore, the bhikṣus who possess that possess, the supreme blessings of truth." Moreover, there is a whole section later, where he discusses that which is empty as being false, deceptive, etc.

So you really just have not looked well enough, because of a literal mindedness you have been infected with through reading too much text critical literature. To insist that the two truths are not in the agamas because the term "satyadvaya" does not explicitly occur is very myopic. But the two truths are there, you just have to know to see them. Maybe you should get your eyes checked again.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 9th, 2021 at 6:49 AM

Title: Re: US Election Day Aftermath

Content:

tobes said:

The fact that nearly a decade on, the real popular uprising is fascistic, and neoliberalism is still running unabated should be cause for serious reflection on how the left has deeply failed, but it seems unwilling to self-reflect on it's own shortcomings. There is often a sense of moral righteousness that precludes such reflexive awareness - and very often the arguments made are tautological in that sense. i.e. "we're right because we're right. We don't even need a clear argument."

Malcolm wrote:

You see, the right focuses on policies, not theory. They focus on getting shit done.

Bernie is a good model. He doesn't give a shit about theory either. The left needs to follow him and stop their post-Marxist, bullshit, theoretical navel-gazing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 9th, 2021 at 6:54 AM

Title: Re: Comparison of Kagyu and Gelug schools?

Content:

nyonchung said:

If I understand well Lama Dampa received it from Mūnmé Dragkha Dragpa Senggé

(1255-1343), a major disciple of Thugjé Tsöndrü, but possibly from other teachers

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

nyonchung said:

Butön transmissions includes a considerable amount of kadampa, kagyüpa, zhijé transmissions - he mentions that he received nyingma teachings from his grandfather, but doesn't see too happy with them

Malcolm wrote:

Buton' was a major fan boy of Sapan. That's all you need to know.

nyonchung said:

Sakya proper sometimes got into political hard times, but transmissions were still going in many places, not necessarily politically or administratively controlled by Sakya. But certainly Sakya (as a center of power) had for long a say in the nomination of abbots in many places and up to c. 1350 and sometimes much later. Most scholars (sutras and tantras) had a connection with Sakya, be they otherwise tö-drugpa, kagyüpas etc ... almost all shangpa-kagyüpa teachers from Tsang up to 1650 went at some point of their carrier to study in Sakya or received Sakyapa teachings.

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 9th, 2021 at 7:57 AM

Title: Re: US Election Day Aftermath

Content:

tobes said:

The fact that nearly a decade on, the real popular uprising is fascistic, and neoliberalism is still running unabated should be cause for serious reflection on how the left has deeply failed, but it seems unwilling to self-reflect on it's own shortcomings. There is often a sense of moral righteousness that precludes such reflexive awareness - and very often the arguments made are tautological in that sense. i.e. "we're right because we're right. We don't even need a clear argument."

Malcolm wrote:

You see, the right focuses on policies, not theory. They focus on getting shit done.

Bernie is a good model. He doesn't give a shit about theory either. The left needs to follow him and stop their post-Marxist, bullshit, theoretical navel-gazing.

tobes said:

I think that a big part of what is making the (hard/far) right successful is the galvanizing force of direct ad hom. i.e. the objects of their hatred are strong enough to unify them.

But the more moderate right: they are drenched in theory. It's called free market economics, and they apply it to literally everything.

I also think people who resist this, like Sanders, are necessarily very engaged in theoretical critiques. And so they should, it can't be pure sentiment.

Maybe when you're saying 'theory' you mean political-social-cultural theory?

Malcolm wrote:

Nerds geek out on Milton F., but serious GOP people just make money and make sure policies benefit themselves.

Bernie is not a theory guy. He is a policy guy, guided by a very simple set of principles: universal healthcare, universal education, cut defense spending by at least half, tax the ultra rich out of existence.

Proof he is not a theory guy, the Bookchin folks are perpetually pissed at Sanders. In deed, Sanders is very much what municipal libertarianism would look like, but he could care less about all the theoretical posturing and historical analysis behind it. Sanders is a legislator, not a theorist,

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 9th, 2021 at 9:30 AM

Title: Re: US Election Day Aftermath

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Yet just about anything beats the decades-old public-fool system, which aims to turn out corporate drones.

Malcolm wrote:

The sole reason public education is in decline is due to its defunding beginning with Reagan, a as racist reaction to school busing in the 70's. But you are way too young to to know this. Before Civil Rights legislation tried to secure parity for Blacks, public schools in this country in the post-war period were excellent.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 9th, 2021 at 8:11 PM

Title: Re: Two truths in Mahayana Buddhism

Content:

Astus said:

Are there any specific sutras named/known as the sources for those quotes?

Malcolm wrote:

Most of the sutras in that commentary are unnamed, as are these.

Astus said:

To identify two truths there have to be two ways of perception and expression specified

Malcolm wrote:

Two truths are specified, seeing correctly and seeing falsely. That's enough. No need to have the Buddha declare that aggregates and so on are ultimate, otherwise it would have been game over for Madhyamaka at the beginning.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 9th, 2021 at 10:05 PM

Title: Re: Extinction as a result of global warming

Content:

KathyLauren said:

Trying to create a better samsara is how you manifest compassion. Of course, samsara being what it is, you won't succeed. But if you can't be bothered making the effort, where is your practice?

Dharmasherab said:

Yes it is a way to manifest compassion. However when done mindlessly it is also a good way to develop delusion even further. It is not unusual to increase their disturbing emotions based on trying to change things which are far beyond their control so they miss the time and waste their effort which could be used for practice of the mind. In an age like this including in the West, most people's deepest disturbing emotions tend to lie within their beliefs in politics and some of whom are into engaged Buddhism who try to promote and push their own political narrative on others in the guise of engaged Buddhism. This is not compassion. Instead, it is manipulative behaviour based on delusion. For others who are of the more sincere type, it's the attitude of trying to cover the entire surface of the earth with rubber instead of wearing rubber shoes.

Malcolm wrote:

Lot of judgement of others in your post, buddy. I guess you don't see the yak on your own nose because you are too busy looking for spots on the noses of others.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 9th, 2021 at 11:21 PM

Title: Re: Two truths in Mahayana Buddhism

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Two truths are specified, seeing correctly and seeing falsely. That's enough.

Astus said:

However, that's not how the two truths are understood in Theravada. At least we'd need some identifiable agamas to say that conventional language is false.

Malcolm wrote:

Who cares what what Theravada thinks? Their tradition has no observable influence on this topic.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 10th, 2021 at 1:33 AM

Title: Re: Two truths in Mahayana Buddhism

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Who cares what what Theravada thinks? Their tradition has no observable influence on this topic.

Astus said:

Assuming that Sarvastivadins worked from generally the same sutras, since their version of the two truths is somewhat different, if the origin of the two truths doctrine is the sutras, there should be some sutras not found in the Theravada canon to explain the discrepancy.

Malcolm wrote:

You are speculating. It's very clear the two truths are the Buddha's teaching, as Nagarjuna proclaims. If there was any disagreement at all, it would be evident in polemics against his assertion, but none can be found anywhere. All there there is pushback against his, and one presumes, his teachers formulation of ultimate truth, and none against his formulation of mundane convention, which also is found in sutra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 10th, 2021 at 3:30 AM

Title: Re: Two truths in Mahayana Buddhism

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Speaking to the issue of Theravādin exegesis, which I don't think is completely off-topic since they are still a Śrāvaka Abhidharma school...

Malcolm wrote:

The Theravadin tradition had zero impact on the continental Indian thought of the period we are discussing. While the record of debates at the time of Aśoka in the Kathāvatthu is certainly interesting, as is the Vibhaṅga, and so on, this predates the Theravadin tradition by hundreds of years.

What Astus is looking for is the term "satyavidhaṃdvaya" in a sūtra in the same way we find "catursatya" in order to confirm the Buddha taught two truths. What I am pointing out is that term needn't be there for the intention to be there. And the intention is clearly there.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 10th, 2021 at 3:54 AM

Title: Re: Opinions on the school system?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Totally opposed to charter schools.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 10th, 2021 at 4:03 AM

Title: Re: Two truths in Mahayana Buddhism

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

...they've had no significant impact on continental Vibhajjavādin thought, let alone a significant impact on mainstream Indian Buddhism, but the period we are speaking of has had an effect on them. Knowing that, I'd argue that discussing them is not utterly irrelevant. They are one particularized stream of Buddhism that has been necessarily influenced by certain continental trends.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, to the extent that Sarvāstivāda comes from Vibhajjavāda, sure.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 10th, 2021 at 4:23 AM

Title: Re: Two truths in Mahayana Buddhism

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

I had thought that Sarvāstivāda-Vibhajjavāda was its own schism, the Sarvāstivādins "not" having ever been Vibhajjavādins, because Vibhajjavāda was formed by the schism, just like "Sarvāstivāda." What do you know to the contrary?

Malcolm wrote:

There are different accounts. Some accounts maintain that the Vibhajjavāda and Sarvāstivāda formed from a split, others maintain the latter broke off from the former. I find the former account more convincing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 10th, 2021 at 4:26 AM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Ode to Joy said:

Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Malcolm wrote:

There are two basic Buddhist cosmologies: Hinayāna and Mahāyāna. Which one do you mean?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 10th, 2021 at 4:30 AM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

and ends up with a Dzogchen (monism) paradigm.

Malcolm wrote:

Most misunderstood part of that book. Dzogchen cosmogony is not monistic at all. It is just Abhidharmakośa cosmogony.

Stay in yer lane, bub.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 10th, 2021 at 4:53 AM

Title: Re: Two truths in Mahayana Buddhism

Content:

Astus said:

not as some special truth to be analysed or considered.

Malcolm wrote:

As something to NOT follow.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 10th, 2021 at 6:27 AM

Title: Re: Two truths in Mahayana Buddhism

Content:

Astus said:

Why would anyone disagree when the doctrine of two truths is accepted by practically everyone? But it doesn't mean it's accepted because of what's in the sutras. Nagarjuna argues against ideas that are rather Abhidharma based, like the whole dharma-theory.

Malcolm wrote:

It must be accepted because of what's in the sūtras, hence the notion of "Sautrantikas," and so on. If the two truths had no basis in the agamic sūtras, for what reason then did the Sautrantikas accept it without question? If as you imply, Nāgārjuna was a species of Sautrantika, why would he accept and promote the two truths? After all, the term "two truths" does not occur in the PP in 8000 lines either, assuming this is one of the earliest and it was before Nāgārjuna. But it discusses dharmas as being mere conventions and names. It also mentioned pāramārtha five times only.

Kāśyapaparivarta only mentions don dam pa, pārmārtha, twice, pāramārthasatya once. If there is an ultimate truth, there must be something which is not ultimate.

Are you suggesting that the idea of two truths in Mahāyāna also comes from Abhidharma commentaries, which we have no evidence of? Its unclear which sūtras Nāgārjuna has before him, other than a PP sūtra and probably the Kāśyapaparivarta, but given that he and Lokāṣema were contemporaries, it is reasonable to assume at least he had these sūtras in front him. Sūtrasammucaya, attributed to Nāgārjuna, has only three references to ultimate truth and a relative truth, in a text called the Candragarbha Chapter (zla ba snyin po le'u), another called the Candraprabha Chapter (zla ba 'od kyi le'u) and a third text, Meeting of the Father and Son Sutra (Pitāputrasamāgamana), where the term "two truths" is explicitly introduced.

Now if your position is that the two truths are not found in either seven-text Abhidharma collections, and only appears in commentaries substantially dated after Nāgārjuna, then you have to accept, by your own reasoning, that the "two truths" as a term occurs only in Mahāyāna, and that its presence in śrāvaka sources after Nāgārjuna are polemical response against emptiness as ultimate truth.

If on the other hand one accepts that the notion of two truths is discernible in agamic sūtras, no such admission is required, and the two truths doctrine can be seen to develop along different lines in Abhidharma and Mahāyāna, since it is certainly the case that Nāgārjuna cites it as a basic fact which no one would question at all. And there is the possibility, quite distinct and equally remote, that a text like the Pitāputrasamāgamana was "converted" into a Mahāyāna text. As something to NOT follow.

Astus said:

Not follow?

'Of that which the wise in the world agree upon as not existing, I too say that it does not exist. And of that which the wise in the world agree upon as existing, I too say that it exists.' (SN 22.94, tr Bodhi)

Malcolm wrote:

It contradicts what the Buddha says in that agama passage, thus, there is a contradiction to resolve.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 10th, 2021 at 8:33 PM

Title: Re: Opinions on the school system?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Totally opposed to charter schools.

PeterC said:

When you look at who the political proponents of charter schools are, it's easy to reach that conclusion.

The countries with the best performing Education systems all have very strong, nationally standardized public school systems. US politicians would learn a lot about public service provision by looking at the other countries who get it right, but of course they never do that.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, I have come to the conclusion that the state by state system we have makes US democracy weak. There is no nationally standardized curriculum, just as there is no nationally standardized and fair system of voting. The same people promoting charter schools try to undermine the federal govt. At every turn,

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 10th, 2021 at 8:37 PM

Title: Re: Opinions on the school system?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Totally opposed to charter schools.

PeterC said:

When you look at who the political proponents of charter schools are, it's easy to reach that conclusion.

The countries with the best performing Education systems all have very strong, nationally standardized public school systems. US politicians would learn a lot about public service provision by looking at the other countries who get it right, but of course they never do that.

Dan74 said:

I don't know if nationally standardised is the way to go.

Malcolm wrote:

Switzerland is a tiny country. It's solutions are not applicable to us. They don't scale well. For instance:

In Texas, a Battle Over What Can Be Taught, and What Books Can Be Read

<https://www.nytimes.com/2021/12/10/us/texas-critical-race-theory-ban-books.html?>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 10th, 2021 at 9:57 PM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

TannersHatch said:

Going out on a limb here...

Malcolm wrote:

And sawing the branch off behind you.

TannersHatch said:

The book of the dead text which is read to the being after death could be thought of as talking someone through a bad dream or 'trip'.

Malcolm wrote:

No. It has no function at all for someone who has not received the empowerment of the peaceful and wrathful deities and done some of its practice in this life.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 10th, 2021 at 10:27 PM

Title: Re: Two truths in Mahayana Buddhism

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It must be accepted because of what's in the sūtras, hence the notion of "Sautrantikas," and so on. If the two truths had no basis in the agamic sūtras, for what reason then did the Sautrantikas accept it without question?

Astus said:

Sautrantikas accepted momentariness and had their karmic seed theory, but neither of them are found in the sutras.

Malcolm wrote:

You are certain of this?

Astus said:

Nagarjuna lived after the creation of the Mahavibhasa...

Malcolm wrote:

This is not certain.

Astus said:

As for his sources for the two truths teaching, he does not actually specify, does he?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, he does. He specifies the Buddha as the source this teaching. Nagarjuna also proclaims that since nirvana alone is true, everything else is false.

Astus said:

Its unclear which sūtras Nāgārjuna has before him, other than a PP sūtra and probably the Kāśyapaparivarta, but given that he and Lokāṣema were contemporaries, it is reasonable to assume at least he had these sūtras in front him.

Nagarjuna was familiar with various abhidharma works, as discussed in chapter 7 of Nagarjuna in Context.

Malcolm wrote:

Of course. But that is irrelevant.

Astus said:

Now if your position is that the two truths are not found in either seven-text Abhidharma collections, and only appears in commentaries substantially dated after Nāgārjuna, then you have to accept, by your own reasoning, that the "two truths" as a term occurs only in Mahāyāna, and that its presence in śrāvaka sources after Nāgārjuna are polemical response against emptiness as ultimate truth.

The Mahāvibhāṣa precedes Nagarjuna.

Malcolm wrote:

Again, this is uncertain. Walser claims that Ratnavali was written between 175-225. But it could easily have been written 50 years earlier. The Mahāvibhāṣa was supposedly compiled during the Reign of Kanishka (127-151 CE) in Bactria. This is 24 year period is a pretty narrow window to compose such a monumental text and then distribute it across India to Andhra Pradesh, to be received and studied by Nāgārjuna.

Astus said:

Beyond that, it would take some further research to identify early occurrences of the two truths doctrine.

Malcolm wrote:

That being the case, you should not make confident proclamations about it.

Astus said:

If on the other hand one accepts that the notion of two truths is discernible in agamic sūtras, no such admission is required, and the two truths doctrine can be seen to develop along different lines in Abhidharma and Mahāyāna, since it is certainly the case that Nāgārjuna cites it as a basic fact which no one would question at all. And there is the possibility, quite distinct and equally remote, that a text like the Pitāputrasamāgamana was "converted" into a Mahāyāna text.

The idea that there are just two truths is not that fixed, as the Pudgalavadins had a threefold division (Pudgalavada Buddhism, p 105),

Malcolm wrote:

The Pitāputrasamāgamana explicitly negates this "three truths," in no uncertain terms. If this text was in front of Nāgārjuna, as tradition maintains, Yogacara also has a threefold version, No. This is an error. The three natures are not three truths, but that is beyond our discussion here.

Astus said:

and the Mahavibhasa notes the existence of twofold, threefold, and fivefold divisions according to different interpreters (Sarvastivada Abhidharma, p 77-78). So, if the two truths doctrine were such a clear case in the sutras, there would be no reason for differences.

Malcolm wrote:

We are here discussing pāramārthasatya and samvṛtisatya. There are also four truths, but that is not relevant here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 10th, 2021 at 11:25 PM

Title: Re: Two truths in Mahayana Buddhism

Content:

LastLegend said:

The two truths can be understood through yogacara (Lankavatara Sutra).

Malcolm wrote:

The term occurs once in that whole text.

But that was not my point. The three natures certainly are an attempt to describe the two truths, but there is no three truths in Yogacāra. The imputed nature is not a truth, though the imagination of the unreal (the dependent nature) is relative truth for Yogacāra, and the absence of the imputed nature in the dependent nature is what Yogacāra asserts to be ultimate truth (the perfected nature).

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 10th, 2021 at 11:50 PM

Title: Re: Opinions on the school system?

Content:

Queequeg said:

Maybe a big reason education is floundering can be found if we look in the mirror.

Malcolm wrote:

There is some truth to this, but not all. As I mentioned before, the defenestration of the US educational system has been a GOP policy since bussing. White people literally moved away from school districts where their kids are educated alongside Black kids, taking their tax dollars with them. A large driving force behind the "white flight" to the suburbs in many urban areas was because of education. Black majority schools have outdated textbooks, no computers, you name it, they don't have it. School policy and curriculum should set at the national level, not the local or state level. Want to educated your kids apart from that, fine, send your kids to private school, but no funding from the state, period, no grants, etc., nothing. Schools should focus on liberal arts as well as STEM. What we turn out now is a bunch of uneducated dummies who do well enough in STEM programs but understand nothing about history, literature, how governments work, and so on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 11th, 2021 at 12:10 AM

Title: Re: Opinions on the school system?

Content:

Queequeg said:

The thing is, society is raising these kids. We're at such a pitiful stage that as Malcolm is arguing

Malcolm wrote:

We also need to kill Instagram, break up Facebook, and generally regulate social media into the grave.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 11th, 2021 at 1:01 AM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

TannersHatch said:

How can you be sure of this please?

Malcolm wrote:

I have the empowerment, the lung, and the instruction for this system.

TannersHatch said:

Perhaps it could be of some use regardless?

Malcolm wrote:

Nope. There is the entire of teaching of the Dzogchen system behind this one little text.

TannersHatch said:

I'm no expert so I'm just talking here...

Malcolm wrote:

One needs the empowerment, the lung, and the instruction.

TannersHatch said:

although I don't think these ideas are exclusive to Buddhism are they?

Malcolm wrote:

Not only are they exclusive to Buddhism, they are exclusive to the Dzogchen system within Buddhism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 11th, 2021 at 1:46 AM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

TannersHatch said:

Not only are they exclusive to Buddhism, they are exclusive to the Dzogchen system within Buddhism.

The idea of other realms after death are exclusive to Buddhism?

Malcolm wrote:

The general bardo (antarabhāva, literally the "in-between existence") is not another realm. It describes the state a sentient being goes through for 7 weeks until it takes birth in one of the six realms—hell being, ghost, animal, human, titan, or god—which in turn are part of the three realms, the desire realm, form realm, and formless realm.

TannersHatch said:

Isn't this 'wheel' largely a Hindu concept?

Malcolm wrote:

No, actually, not at all. The hindu concept of rebirth is not recognizable in Buddhism at all.

The bardo that "Liberation from Hearing in the Bardo" describes is unique the Dzogchen system. It is called the bardo of dharmatā. It is not described in any other tantric system outside of the Dzogchen system. The Dzogchen system describes four or six bardos. The other tantric traditions in Buddhism only describe one.

TannersHatch said:

I should exclusively learn from learned folks such as yourself do you advise?

Malcolm wrote:

If you wish to learn about the teachings which come from Dzogchen, then you should rely on teachers who are expert in that system. If you want to learn about ayahuasca, then you should learn from teachers expert in that system. If you want to learn about Hinduism, you learn from teachers expert in that system. But what you must not do is confuse and conflate these systems in a naive, its-all-one-man ecumenicism.

TannersHatch said:

Guess the Bardos are closed to me until I get the lung eh? Where will I go do you think?

Malcolm wrote:

Everyone goes through all the bardos. Without instruction, however, you won't even recognize the bardo of this life, never mind the bardo of death or the bardo of dharmatā. You will die, not recognizing the bardo of death or the bardo of dharmatā, passing straight into the bardo of rebirth, where you will take birth again in the six realms after seven weeks. A day in the bardo equals the amount of time one is able to remain in samadhi. So for most beings, those 49 "days" pass in 49 moments, less than a minute after the consciousness separates from the body, according to the Dzogchen teachings of which "Liberation through Hearing in the Bardo" is a part.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 11th, 2021 at 3:10 AM

Title: Re: Two truths in Mahayana Buddhism

Content:

LastLegend said:

I wasn't reading closely....

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 11th, 2021 at 6:47 AM

Title: Re: Two truths in Mahayana Buddhism

Content:

Astus said:

On the issue of two truths and Nagarjuna: <https://fh.pku.edu.cn/docs/2018-11/20181119234424438102.pdf>

Malcolm wrote:

This paper adds nothing new.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 11th, 2021 at 6:51 AM

Title: Re: Two truths in Mahayana Buddhism

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

You are certain of this?

Astus said:

'There can be no doubt that the theory of momentariness cannot be traced back to the beginnings of Buddhism or even the Buddha himself. It does not fit the practically orientated teachings of early Buddhism and clearly bears the mark of later doctrinal elaboration. Thus in the Nikayas/Agamas there are many passages which attribute duration to material and even mental entities, whereas there is, at least to my knowledge, no passage which testifies to the stance that all conditioned entities are momentary.'

(The Buddhist Doctrine of Momentariness, p 15)

Malcolm wrote:

Inconclusive.

Astus said:

Can be uncertain, sure. However, the Mahavibhasa is a compendium, and the information contained therein most likely predates it,

Malcolm wrote:

Again, uncertain. Face it Astus, you just don't have very strong evidence to be making the confident statements you've been making on this subject.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 11th, 2021 at 9:59 PM

Title: Re: Two truths in Mahayana Buddhism

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Again, uncertain. Face it Astus, you just don't have very strong evidence to be making the confident statements you've been making on this subject.

Astus said:

Let's put it this way then: there is no evidence so far of the existence of the two truths doctrine in the sutras or the main 7 abhidharma texts, only in somewhat later works like the Mahavibhasa. To maintain that nevertheless there is would need finding such references.

Malcolm wrote:

Often in Vasubandhu and earlier Abhidharma texts references are made to doctrines belonging to sutras not found in one or another canon, like the bardo, for example, or in sutras that did not survive at all. The best you can say is that YOU personally don't see such evidence; others, such as myself, disagree. The difference, I suspect, is how much credibility one wants to lend buddhologists as being the final arbiters of Buddhism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 11th, 2021 at 10:32 PM

Title: Re: A question on Bardo

Content:

Dharmasera said:

Now this question may touch esoteric topics so please don't answer if one feels they are violating their precepts and tantric vows.

This is a question asked by a Zen priest who regularly visits our monastery (I am a Theravada novice living in a Theravada monastery). He asked me two questions -

1. In the Bardo stage, why do practitioners focus on the Form aspect of the being? Shouldn't they be focussing on the mind aspect?

2. At what point does the being no longer recollects that she or he was not a human in a past life?

Malcolm wrote:

1. Body and mind are not dual.

2. After the 21st day, one forgets one past life.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 12th, 2021 at 12:04 AM

Title: Re: US Election Day Aftermath

Content:

Sādhaka said:

I'm sure everyone has more or less their own definitions of what leftism, rightism, conservatism, and liberalism are....

I mean I'm pretty rightist, and liberal in ways; and all I can say here, is screw leninism, stalinism, trotskyism, & maoism (weren't these guys the epitome of leftism?), and screw neoconservatism.

Malcolm wrote:

Left libertarian. This means, governments pay for everything necessary to keep everyone healthy, well educated, and prosperous, while also respecting to the utmost degree civil rights, freedom of the press, and the right to assembly. Yes, taxes are high, but so are benefits.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 12th, 2021 at 12:07 AM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Aemilius said:

There is a Vinaya rule against boasting about one's spiritual accomplishments or spiritual experiences.

Malcolm wrote:

This applies only to the ordained and is probably at the root of the śrāvaka notion that anyone who attains stream entry and does not ordain within seven days, dies.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 12th, 2021 at 12:55 AM

Title: Re: Opinions on the school system?

Content:

Dan74 said:

US kids are different, how exactly? The maths they learn or should be learning is different, how exactly?

Malcolm wrote:

Dan, you have no idea how bad education in this country is at the primary and secondary level. How unequal it is from district to district. And don't get me started on the college loan scam.

So yeah, you don't really get it, and your solutions won't scale. Part of that is because you live in a little European country.

It is not STEM that is the problem, it is about the liberal arts side of the issue, where kids learn about government, ethics, history, and so on, the side that trains children in citizenship and so on.

The right have become such a bunch of snowflakes in the US, they are now banning books from schools because they might cause some white child to cry. Teachers cannot honestly teach about Columbus' genocidal presence in the West Indies in many red states now because some white child might feel bad about being white, and on and on it goes. So yeah, it's not just about math.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 12th, 2021 at 2:28 AM

Title: Re: US Election Day Aftermath

Content:

Nemo said:

Vietnam is interesting. Highly democratic with local representation, worker co ops and multi party elections. Neoliberals even ran in the last election. Cuba has elections as well.

China for all it's faults under Deng brought 800m million people out of the worst poverty imaginable and created a Western standard of living for 300 million.

Malcolm wrote:

Thanks to Walmart.

Nemo said:

It was ironically the largest period of economic growth in the history of capitalism.

China under Deng was fun and felt more free than here.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, if you were a westerner, clueless, and no idea what is happening there around you.

Nemo said:

Much better than bombing random brown people like we do.

Malcolm wrote:

Right, now they just randomly imprison Tibetans and Uigers, etc. in massive concentration camps by the hundreds of thousands at a time.

Nemo said:

The West generally had a big economic head start from genocide, slavery, colonialism and imperialism. It will be interesting when those advantages expire.

Malcolm wrote:

They've just been passed onto China, that's all. They haven't expired at all. China is the biggest colonial force in Africa, at the moment. Its a player in the neoliberalism game, now it is just trying to control neoliberalism to its own advantage. It is engaged in "internal" colonialism and genocide in Tibet and Xinjiang.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 12th, 2021 at 5:54 AM

Title: Re: Two truths in Mahayana Buddhism

Content:

Astus said:

To meet this criticism, Pārśva made the extraordinary claim that the reason these matters could not be found in the sūtras must be because they had been in sūtras that the Buddha had preached, but that had been subsequently lost.'[/i]

Malcolm wrote:

An entirely reasonable assumption. Vasubandhu, speaking as a Mahāyāni, addresses the issue of the loss of many sūtras in both śrāvakayāna and Mahāyāna, https://www.jstage.jst.go.jp/article/ibk1952/55/3/55_3_1106/_pdf

<https://journals.ub.uni-heidelberg.de/index.php/jiabs/article/viewFile/9178/3036>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 12th, 2021 at 11:24 AM

Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor

Content:

Charlie123 said:

Taken alltogether, they represent a nuanced and well-thought out body of advice on how disciples should relate to gurus.

Malcolm wrote:

My personal point of view is that how gurus relate to disciples is actually more important than how disciples relate to gurus.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 12th, 2021 at 9:12 PM

Title: Re: Opinions on the school system?

Content:

Dan74 said:

US kids are different, how exactly? The maths they learn or should be learning is different, how exactly?

Malcolm wrote:

Dan, you have no idea how bad education in this country is at the primary and secondary level. How unequal it is from district to district. And don't get me started on the college loan scam.

Dan74 said:

I do have an idea of how bad it is. What I am not aware of is compelling evidence that the lack of a national curriculum is the root cause of that. But I am happy to learn.

Malcolm wrote:

Its obvious. For example, in the South, they still refer to the Civil War as the war of Northern Aggression, and they still use textbooks on the Civil War written by "Lost Cause" historians. In Texas, you will find virtually no reference at all to the fact that Texas as the last state after the Civil War to receive the Emancipation Proclamation (Juneteenth), and so on, or that Texas was founded to promote slavery.

There is no little to no civil studies taught in primary or secondary schools any more. There is little to no PE taught in Inner City schools because of lack of funding. Classrooms sizes range from 40 to 60 students at all levels in public schools systems. Teachers are not given living wages. Teachers Unions are demonized on the smallest pretexts. It goes way beyond curriculums.

The US educational system has been rendered dysfunctional by a whole host of issues beyond teaching reading, writing, and arithmetic, and as far as the latter three are concerned, I would say that most students in the US in the public school system graduate with insufficient skills in grammar and composition. Every college in the US has writing and grammar class requirements for freshman, because the functional literacy rate in the US has been plummeting for the past five decades. For example:

According to the U.S. Department of Education, 54% of U.S. adults 16-74 years old - about 130 million people - lack proficiency in literacy, reading below the equivalent of a sixth-grade level.

<https://www.forbes.com/sites/michaelnietzel/2020/09/09/low-literacy-levels-among-us-adults-could-be-costing-the-economy-22-trillion-a-year/?sh=56130fbe4c90>

So yeah, the US needs a complete overhaul in the primary and secondary school system, and it needs to be done at the Federal level, because the states are just not doing an adequate job.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 12th, 2021 at 9:50 PM

Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor

Content:

Charlie123 said:

Taken altogether, they represent a nuanced and well-thought out body of advice on how disciples should relate to gurus.

Malcolm wrote:

My personal point of view is that how gurus relate to disciples is actually more important than how disciples relate to gurus.

nyonchung said:

I'm a poor disciple but met teachers who were remarkably attentive to their disciples' spiritual development, material welfare, mental well-being...

Malcolm wrote:

My personal role model is ChNN. He was always unfailingly polite, kind, humble, and never lashed out or behaved in a "crazy" manner. He never gaslighted anyone. This is not to say that he was never sharp, never scolded anyone, or never used sarcasm. He would get angry if a situation warranted it. But for the most part he was pretty relaxed, and at the same time, intensely focused on benefitting his students.

He was very clear about what he was doing and one could either "be in his boat" or not. His list of 27 personal samayas he adopted before he began teaching Dzogchen is illustrative of his whole approach to being a teacher. He did not give a flying fk about Tibetan hierarchy per se, while at the same time caring deeply about Tibetan culture and history. But he never tried to turn his students into little imitation Tibetans nor did he try to invent a dharma culture by creating a mashup of Asian and Western cultures, like Trungpa, etc. He understood westerners were westerners, and that what we needed was the essentials of Dharma, not all the cultural bullshit that has hitched a ride with Vajrayāna teachings. He always put Dzogchen Community first, even when it caused problems in his personal life. He always used to called himself Dzogchen Community member #1, as we all have membership numbers. When he passed, the world lost a treasure.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 12th, 2021 at 10:09 PM

Title: Re: Opinions on the school system?

Content:

Dan74 said:

An overhaul you are suggesting, Malcolm, is not tantamount to a national curriculum, or at least, doesn't need to be. And if there is no grass-roots movement for it, won't it be resisted tooth-and-nail, challenged in court, etc?

Malcolm wrote:

For public schools, there needs to be a national curriculum, for example, in history, literature, social, and civil studies, as well as in the sciences, biology, physics, etc. You do realize that there are school districts (not many, but they exist) in the US that require teaching that the holocaust is only an OPINION; that evolution is only an OPINION, and one must also teach creationism alongside it; that one has to provide a fair and balanced picture of SLAVERY, showing that slaves also benefitted from the system, and so on. You are aware of these things, correct? And of course, there is, in most secondary school textbooks on US history, no account of the real story of America's westward expansion and oppression of native people, beginning in the 1830's with Jackson's Indian Removals, etc. These things are not an issue where I live but they are serious issue in South, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 12th, 2021 at 10:40 PM

Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor

Content:

nyonchung said:

What a confusion, patriarchy is mostly a meaningless gimmick drawn possibly from Foucault...

Malcolm wrote:

No.

Oxford:

pa·tri·arch·y

/ˈpātrē, ărkē/

Learn to pronounce noun

noun: patriarchy

a system of society or government in which the father or eldest male is head of the family and descent is traced through the male line.

"the thematic relationships of the ballad are worked out according to the conventional archetypes of the patriarchy" a system of society or government in which men hold the power and women are largely excluded from it.

"the dominant ideology of patriarchy" a society or community organized on patriarchal lines.
plural noun: patriarchies
"we live in a patriarchy"

Merriam Webster

pa·tri-ar·chy | \ 'pā-trē-,är-kē \ plural patriarchies
Essential Meaning of patriarchy
1 : a family, group, or government controlled by a man or a group of men

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 12th, 2021 at 10:43 PM

Title: Re: The underrepresented genre of personal memoir in Tibetan Buddhism

Content:

nyonchung said:

to be a poet yourself.

Malcolm wrote:

Nah, attempts to translate Tibetan poetry poetically usually results in sentimental drivel.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 12th, 2021 at 11:41 PM

Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor

Content:

nyonchung said:

"patriarchy" is a gimmick of sorts...

Malcolm wrote:

Well, certainly supporters of patriarchal relations and social systems based on them would have one believe this. But I suspect you just don't like the feminist critique of patriarchy because it is primarily coming from American scholars, and you are French, and you are still mad about Quebec.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 13th, 2021 at 12:26 AM

Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor

Content:

nyonchung said:

A great part of the US scholarship in the 80's drawn heavily on Foucault, Derrida (again, badly translated at times)...

Malcolm wrote:

No serious philosophers (i.e. Anglo-American analytical philosophers) paid any attention to those guys, since the Anglo-American tradition has written off everything in Europe from Hegel onward as a waste of time.

The folks you are talking about are just literary critics, fashionable among people who don't like to think.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 13th, 2021 at 1:09 AM

Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor

Content:

nyonchung said:

A great part of the US scholarship in the 80's drawn heavily on Foucault, Derrida (again, badly translated at times)...

Malcolm wrote:

No serious philosophers (i.e. Anglo-American analytical philosophers) paid any attention to those guys, since the Anglo-American tradition has written off everything in Europe from Hegel onward as a waste of time.

The folks you are talking about are just literary critics, fashionable among people who don't like to think.

nyonchung said:

American exceptionnalism? hope not, but if what you say is factual, then all the best.

Malcolm wrote:

My late father was a "professional" philosopher, a colleague of Jay Garfield at Smith. He was an analytical philosopher and in his opinion, guys like Foucault, Derrida, and so on couldn't frame a coherent argument even if their lives depended on it. Guys like Heidegger, etc., are just not that coherent, what need to mention Nietzsche? Basically, for the analytical tradition, the European contribution ends in Kant. He was a bit distressed that what was passing for philosophy in some peoples mind's was this mishmash of continental incoherence, especially with 80's faddism around deconstruction and Derrida. There are some universities in which this stuff gained a foothold, but not so much in the Ivy League schools, at least not when I was of college age, forty years ago.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 13th, 2021 at 2:22 AM

Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The folks you are talking about are just literary critics, fashionable among people who don't like to think.

treehuggingoctopus said:
The first bit of this is just inaccurate.

Malcolm wrote:
It's accurate.

treehuggingoctopus said:
The second part is grossly unfair, and I am truly sorry to hear it coming from you.

Malcolm wrote:
I admit it was gratuitous, but it was fun to write.

treehuggingoctopus said:
Yes, there is a split between the analytical tradition and the continental tradition -- although in recent years it has been healed to some extent, and the healing continues (most philosophers writing in the areas which I follow have been mixing both voices since the 1990s).

Malcolm wrote:
There is a place for literary criticism, certainly philosophical texts are not immune from literary critique. But in general, I find western philosophy logorrheic, and this isn't helped when we have people mistaking Nietzsche, Marx, and Freud for philosophers, or worthy of attention from philosophers.

treehuggingoctopus said:
I stand firmly with the continental camp, but I would never parody the analytical philosophers' attitude along the lines of your crass mischaracterization.

Malcolm wrote:
It's basically a question of excluding evidence that is worthy of investigation, the analytical tradition has a much more narrow criteria for what they think is worth investigating or even deemed "philosophy." As Buddhists, our criteria is even more narrow.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, December 13th, 2021 at 3:24 AM
Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor
Content:

treehuggingoctopus said:
they are both theorists, the theory in question being the capital-letter Theory aka literary theory aka cultural theory -- which is not literary criticism but "theory" as in the Frankfurters' Critical Theory (which indeed is in many ways Derrida's, but not Foucault's, starting point.

Malcolm wrote:

Having theories does not make one a philosopher. Having a theory of literature is little different than literary criticism, pumped up on self-importance.

Careful argumentation, grounded in logic and rationality, makes one a philosopher: example, John Rawls.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 13th, 2021 at 4:05 AM

Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Having theories does not make one a philosopher. Having a theory of literature is little different than literary criticism, pumped up on self-importance.

treehuggingoctopus said:

Theory has nothing to do with having theories. It is related to the Greek theoria, interpreted the way Frankfurters did (after Kant), i.e., laying bare that which is hidden, i.e., one's preconceptions, necessary blindnesses, ideological involvements, conditions of possibility, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

Oh, I quite like Adorno's take down of Heidegger.

I just found very little of substance in Derrida, for example. Just yawn, add to this of course his and Foucault's support for sex with preteens...just not worth bothering at all. Freaking perverts.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 13th, 2021 at 4:21 AM

Title: Re: Opinions on the school system?

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Oversized focus on standardized testing is what's killing a lot of kids education right now.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. people get real good at filling in circles, checking off squares, and drawing lines between two things. But they still don't learn a damn thing.

You see, you live in WA. I live in New England. We enjoy the highest rates of literacy in the US. Even New York scores at the bottom of the literacy charts, surprisingly, or maybe not, because parts of upstate NY are as poor as parts of Appalachia.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 13th, 2021 at 9:39 AM

Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor

Content:

tobes said:

The issue is not what Derrida writes, it is in the army of Derrideans, who take him as a kind of guru, and make no effort to read or think outside of his paradigm. Same with Foucauldians et al.

Malcolm wrote:

Addressed by my comment about those who don't like to think.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 13th, 2021 at 9:44 AM

Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor

Content:

tobes said:

For example, 20th century analytic philosophy is unthinkable

Malcolm wrote:

The Anglo-American analytical traditions isn't an ethnic grouping, it is a grouping assembled in the Anglo-American academy in the 1950s, characterized by a certain approach to knowledge.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 13th, 2021 at 10:20 AM

Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor

Content:

tobes said:

For example, 20th century analytic philosophy is unthinkable

Malcolm wrote:

The Anglo-American analytical traditions isn't an ethnic grouping, it is a grouping assembled in the Anglo-American academy in the 1950s, characterized by a certain approach to knowledge.

tobes said:

Some of the literature on this topic suggests otherwise. i.e. a lot of the hard divisions crystallized during/after WWII. The analytic distaste for Hegel, Nietzsche etc has a lot to do with misreading them as somehow directly responsible for Nazi Germany.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it is just a recognition that Hegelianism, with it focus on Hegel being the apex of history, in turn influenced Nietzsche's reactionary nihilism, as well as Marx, which ideologies led directly to anti-democratic regimes in Europe of both the left and the right in the twentieth century. This perception you speak, of course, was not positively reinforced by Nietzsche's posthumous Will to Power, compiled and edited by his virulently-antisemitic sister.

Of course Adorno aptly shows how Heidegger's pseudo-philosophy is fascism in its very essence, a sterling example of literary criticism of a philosophical text if there ever was one.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 13th, 2021 at 10:34 AM

Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor

Content:

tobes said:

Some of the literature on this topic suggests otherwise. i.e. a lot of the hard divisions crystallized during/after WWII. The analytic distaste for Hegel, Nietzsche etc has a lot to do with misreading them as somehow directly responsible for Nazi Germany.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it is just a recognition that Hegelianism, with its focus on Hegel being the apex of history, in turn influenced Nietzsche's reactionary nihilism, as well as Marx, were ideologies that led directly to anti-democratic regimes in Europe of both the left and the right.

PeterC said:

The common interpretation of this is more than a little unfair to Nietzsche. Hitler never read him, his main philosophical motivation was Heidegger. Nietzsche's actual ideas were consistently misrepresented from the Nazi era to today - GötzenDämmerung contains extensive anti-statist thoughts, and the "what does not kill you" line is almost always taken out of context to mean exactly the opposite of what he was actually saying.

Malcolm wrote:

Nietzsche was a cipher, meaning that one could selectively read whatever one wanted into him. Unfortunately, Will to Power is the most read title of one of his least understood books, inspiring many mini-Hitler wannabes. The other thing is that N has always ironically been more inspiring to the right than the left, because they interpret his anti statism not as a critique of state power, but as critique of consensus and cooperation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 13th, 2021 at 11:05 AM

Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor

Content:

tobes said:

There's nothing in Will to Power that remotely looks fascistic.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, I know, that was my point. People read the title and that's about it.

However, Nietzsche's skepticism of states leads directly to skepticism of democratic institutions. A bias or an operating principle in analytical philosophy is the defense of liberalism. Attempts to rehabilitate N's thought as conducive to democratic liberalism are failures, in my estimation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 13th, 2021 at 9:34 PM

Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor

Content:

treehuggingoctopus said:

I am (to an extent, in a fashion, etc.) a good Marxist. I wish anything happening in academia was capable of significantly contributing to such political changes as the election of POTUS. I suspect none of us uni people has really been able to believe it since the 1960s. Burroughs quipped that the Vietnam War provoked the longest and most sustained grassroots protests in the 20th century, supported by the vast majority of public intellectuals -- and, he says, all of it amounted to a fart.

Malcolm wrote:

Burroughs was wrong. It led to the US Military exiling the press. When I was a child, every night between 1968-1975 there was unedited, raw news footage of the Vietnam war on ABC, CBS, and NBC. Now, we see at best sanitized footage with grim journalists standing in other countries reporting on the latest war news. So, the effect of the anti-war movement was to cause the US military to end press access to war zones. This is one reason we stayed in Iraq and Afghanistan for so long. As for the latter, many people in the US had no idea we were still there when Biden finally pulled us out.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 14th, 2021 at 12:23 AM

Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor

Content:

Matt J said:

It wasn't an argument more than an observation. And if it were silly, that WaPo article never would have been written. One story that can be told is that the post-structuralist attitude, filtered via countless ways through higher learning, may have shifted the intellectual (and eventually the popular) culture in such a way that people are more open to Trumpian (and Putinian) forms of discourse.

Malcolm wrote:

And this relates directly to why Madhyamaka isn't a challenge to conventional knowledge, unlike deconstruction and other post-modernist trends, for which it is consistently mistaken.

Madhyamaka, if anything, does not seek to dismantle conventional knowledge, so much as site it appropriately in the context of liberation. It makes strong arguments against incoherent, essentialist claims which undermine conventional knowledge, in order to show that knowledge requires functionality in order to be considered knowledge at all. Its appeal to the illusory nature of phenomena and knowledge is not an argument for pure subjectivity, as it is often mistaken for. Instead, its appeal to the illusory nature of phenomena and knowledge is an argument for consensus and convention, while at the same time, negating the irrationality of imputing essences to dependently originated things.

I would argue that the present interest in Yogacāra, for example, is as much a function of the penetration of postmodernism into Buddhist studies as it is a function of increased linguistic understanding of Buddhist texts and so on. It is not an accident that in America and England, the continental fascination with yogacāra has met with quite a bit of resistance.

Now that we have scholars moving from being disinterested coroners of religion to invested proponents, this is changing, and it is not surprising that the strongest proponents of gzhan stong and yogacāra are Europeans. Frankly, a lot of argument between modern Mādhyamikas such as myself and those who adhere to various species of yogācara can be traced to a divide between how knowledge is handled by analytical and continental philosophy in general.

On the other hand, I can't tell you how many dissertations I have read in Buddhist studies over the years complete with accounts of methodologies derived from Said, Tambiah, etc. and so on. It seems that modern professors in Buddhist studies departments are demanding 100 pages or so filled with bullshit about the student's methodology and approach rooted in some postmodern drivel.

It is also not surprising that we have modern lamas who seem to have grasped onto Nietzschean moral nihilism with respect to the behavior of "mahāsiddhas," especially of the modern variety, whose main siddhis seem to be gathering students and bilking them of their money, just to bring this whole exchange

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 14th, 2021 at 12:30 AM

Title: Re: Yogacara + Tathagatagarba = Shentong

Content:

Matt J said:

Any progress?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, his translation is certainly challenging.

I hope at some point to bring out a new translation of this this text, as well as the second of the trilogy, An Investigation into the Meaning of the Luminous Original Mind, the Differentiation of the Basis, Path and Result of the Great Perfection entitled Illuminating Wisdom.

No, I have more important work to do than translating Mipham.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 14th, 2021 at 2:05 AM

Title: Re: Buddhahood In This Life

Content:

Terma said:

What are the requirements to read this (and any other of Malcolm's recent Dzogchen textual translations)?

Thanks.

Malcolm wrote:

The lung, if you can get it. Tulku Dakpa periodically gives the lung for Buddhahood.

He is planning to give the lung for the seventeen Tantras sometime following Tibetan New Year, 2022.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 14th, 2021 at 2:24 AM

Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor

Content:

PeterC said:

He also wasn't really a nihilist, the first few sections of Zarathustra make that very clear, he found meaning in the transformation of the individual, but he rejected finding meaning in the collective.

Malcolm wrote:

He was definitely a nihilist. His argument that the superior man was not obligated by the moral constraints imposed upon rest of us is a nihilism of narcissistic vanity.

He would be thrilled with the interpretation that some Vajrayāna wannabes promote that there are superior humans who may transgress the moral restrictions imposed on the herd because of their spiritual accomplishments.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 14th, 2021 at 2:34 AM

Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor

Content:

Matt J said:

I suppose it depends on what side of Yogacara/Shentong you focus on. If you focus on the "no externality" side, you get solipsism.

But what Yogacara/Shentong presents to my mind is the basic, underlying goodness, which is about as far from PoMo as you can get. In fact, this line of teaching is often justified as a corrective to nihilistic Madyamaka misinterpretations.

Malcolm wrote:

I would argue that the present interest in Yogacāra, for example, is as much a function of the penetration of postmodernism into Buddhist studies as it is a function of increased linguistic understanding of Buddhist texts and so on. It is not an accident that in America and England, the continental fascination with yogacāra has met with quite a bit of resistance.

It's a correction without an error to correct.

But my point really is that Yogacāra offers much more of a narratology than Madhyamaka. It's loaded with many more concepts, fine distinctions, and path narratives than Mādhyamikas typically offer.

There just isn't much juice for the POMO scene to squeeze out of Madhyamaka. Madhyamaka is more akin to ordinary language philosophy than anything else in the Western scene.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 14th, 2021 at 4:11 AM

Title: Re: Buddhahood In This Life

Content:

ManiThePainter said:

Is it permissible to receive this lung if one has not yet received direct introduction

Malcolm wrote:

According to Rinpoche, yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 14th, 2021 at 7:28 AM

Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor

Content:

PeterC said:

He also wasn't really a nihilist, the first few sections of Zarathustra make that very clear, he found meaning in the transformation of the individual, but he rejected finding meaning in the collective.

Malcolm wrote:

He was definitely a nihilist. His argument that the superior man was not obligated by the moral constraints imposed upon rest of us is a nihilism of narcissistic vanity.

He would be thrilled with the interpretation that some Vajrayāna wannabes promote that there are superior humans who may transgress the moral restrictions imposed on the herd because of their spiritual accomplishments.

tobes said:

I can't believe I'm here defending Nietzsche, but there's no way he's espousing nihilism...So, it is reactionary and it is aristocratic. But not nihilistic.

Malcolm wrote:

I disagree. His nihilism is evident in his moral contempt.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 14th, 2021 at 8:34 AM

Title: Re: Buddhahood In This Life

Content:

Terma said:

What are the requirements to read this (and any other of Malcolm's recent Dzogchen textual translations)?

Thanks.

Malcolm wrote:

The lung, if you can get it. Tulku Dakpa periodically gives the lung for Buddhahood.

He is planning to give the lung for the seventeen Tantras sometime following Tibetan New Year, 2022.

climb-up said:

Do you know if this will be online or in person, and how long the lung takes (quite a few days presumably, right?)

Malcolm wrote:

Online, TBD.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 14th, 2021 at 10:05 AM

Title: Re: Buddhahood In This Life

Content:

climb-up said:

Do you know if this will be online or in person, and how long the lung takes (quite a few days presumably, right?)

Malcolm wrote:

Online, TBD.

climb-up said:

Yay! That means it's possible! Keeping my fingers crossed for no scheduling conflicts.

Malcolm wrote:

You have to decide what is important.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 14th, 2021 at 10:47 PM

Title: Re: US Election Day Aftermath

Content:

Nemo said:

The West generally had a big economic head start from genocide, slavery, colonialism and imperialism.

tingdzin said:

China was centuries ahead of "the West" as far as genocide, colonialism, and imperialism. As for slavery, it has been almost ever-present across the world until recently.

Malcolm wrote:

Maybe Nemo is cashing in:

<https://www.nytimes.com/interactive/2021/12/13/technology/china-propaganda-youtube-influencers.html>

Kirk Apesland, a Canadian living in China, calls his channel Gweilo 60. ("Gweilo" is Cantonese slang for foreigner.) He rejects news of repression in Xinjiang and cites his own happy experiences to contest the idea that China's people are oppressed.

After The Times contacted Mr. Apesland, he posted a video titled "New York Times vs Gweilo 60." In it, he acknowledges that he accepts free hotels and payment from city and provincial authorities. He compares it to being a pitchman for local tourism.

"Are there fees for what I do? Of course," he says. "I'm doing a job. I'm putting the videos out to hundreds of thousands of people."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 15th, 2021 at 1:01 AM

Title: Re: US Election Day Aftermath

Content:

Queequeg said:

All I got from it was that we have too many guns in the country.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.thetrace.org/2021/12/atf-time-to-crime-gun-data-shooting-pandemic/>

Queequeg said:

ATF data shows that in 2020, police recovered almost twice as many guns with a short “time-to-crime” — in this case, guns recovered within a year of their purchase — than in 2019. Law enforcement officials generally view a short time-to-crime as an indicator that a firearm was purchased with criminal intent, since a gun with a narrow window between sale and recovery is less likely to have changed hands. Altogether, more than 87,000 such guns were recovered in 2020, almost double the previous high. And almost 68,000 guns were recovered in 2020 with a time-to-crime of less than seven months (meaning they were less likely to have been purchased the previous year).

Malcolm wrote:

This applies to the Rittenhouse case. He purchased his gun in May, 2020, and used it in a homicide in August, 2020.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 15th, 2021 at 1:29 AM

Title: Re: US Election Day Aftermath

Content:

Queequeg said:

No one involved there, Rittenhouse included, had the eyes McVeigh had.

Malcolm wrote:

My point was in support of your idea that there are too many guns. McVeigh was a former soldier. Rittenhouse is a puppy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 15th, 2021 at 2:19 AM

Title: Re: US Election Day Aftermath

Content:

Queequeg said:

No one involved there, Rittenhouse included, had the eyes McVeigh had.

Malcolm wrote:

My point was in support of your idea that there are too many guns. McVeigh was a former soldier. Rittenhouse is a puppy.

Queequeg said:
oops.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, December 15th, 2021 at 2:25 AM
Title: Re: Sakya Pandita and medicine question.
Content:
Sādhaka said:

Well back then, Sakya Pandita could have only been talking about natural medicine (i.e. medicine that most anti-scientism people wouldn't object to); therefore it's kind of irrelevant.

Malcolm wrote:
No, he was talking about Tibetan Medicine and people who refuse medical treatment of any kind claiming that accepting medical treatment proved one had no faith the Buddha. Also, there are many strongly poisonous substances that can be used, treated and altered for use as medicine, no better than any modern medical poisons, from the perspective of medicines used to combat severe illnesses.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, December 15th, 2021 at 5:04 AM
Title: Re: Western-Born (English) Tibetan Buddhist Teachers Like Alan Wallace
Content:
fckw said:
Gautama Buddha could not read Tibetan at all.

Malcolm wrote:
Well, that is certainly true, since there was no written language in Tibet at that time.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, December 15th, 2021 at 6:11 AM
Title: Re: Western-Born (English) Tibetan Buddhist Teachers Like Alan Wallace
Content:

fckw said:
Gautama Buddha could not read Tibetan at all. Same is true for the majority of Buddhist masters of past and present.

Pero said:

Strange point to bring up when it says Tibetan Buddhist in the title of the topic which is also in the Tibetan Buddhism forum.

fckw said:

Yeah, it's really odd that the person does only bother about Tibetan explicitly, and does not seem to bother about any other language spoken, read or written by Vajrayana Buddhists throughout history, like Sanskrit, Zhang Zhung.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no living tradition of Vajrayāna in Sanskrit anymore. Zhangzhung is at best a faux language reconstructed out of fragments in the 11th century by a person who never spoke it (Shenchen Luga) nor knew it's grammar.

fckw said:

Chinese, Japanese and quite a few others.

Malcolm wrote:

There is so little in Western languages on Mikkyo in general, that there is really nothing to talk about. One can read a few books, learn a few prayers, but without going to Japan and living on Koyasan or Heizan, you are not going to get much.

fckw said:

Nor for Indian Vajrayana masters who never traveled to Tibet and did not speak the language.

Malcolm wrote:

Indian Vajrayāna, as a living tradition, ended in the 16th century, maybe the early 17th.

fckw said:

But then again, it indeed is the "Tibetan Buddhism" subforum, so it's obvious to all of us that any discussions around other forms of Vajrayana (much less so: other forms of Buddhism!) are not to be expected here, are they?

Malcolm wrote:

Yeah, there is really is not much point because all those other traditions are either dead, faux, or inaccessible.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 15th, 2021 at 8:58 AM

Title: Re: Western-Born (English) Tibetan Buddhist Teachers Like Alan Wallace

Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

The two Tendai centers and the few Shingon temples seem to have access to Mikkyo no?

I can't say this out of experience but the priests there were trained at Koyasan or Heizan, so it seems there is some options available for those in the west.

Malcolm wrote:

Not as much as you might think. For example, can you name one single major commentary translated from Japanese on Mikkyo into English? I can't either.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 15th, 2021 at 9:05 AM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Nadereme said:

Because many are still vexed in materialist views and think science is somehow superior.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, no, we think that Buddhist epistemology should be taken seriously. The latter depends on valid direct perception and inference. If you can prove through valid direct perception and inference there is a Mt. Meru out there, I am all ears.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 15th, 2021 at 9:09 AM

Title: Re: Western-Born (English) Tibetan Buddhist Teachers Like Alan Wallace

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Not as much as you might think. For example, can you name one single major commentary translated from Japanese on Mikkyo into English? I can't either.

Nicholas2727 said:

I believe they teach the practices tho. But I do see your point. Are you aware of any translators focusing on Japanese Mikkyo? With Tibetan Vajrayana becoming more popular in the west I think it would be great to see the East Asian side of Vajrayana in more detail

Zhen Li said:

Rolf Giebel and Thomas Eijō Dreitlein.

Malcolm wrote:

Neither of whom have yet to produce a major translation of any significance. Not saying they won't, but tap tap tap tap tap tap tap...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 15th, 2021 at 9:15 AM

Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor

Content:

tobes said:

Heidegger

Malcolm wrote:

I think we can all agree Heidegger was utterly full of shit, and should be cancelled.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 15th, 2021 at 10:01 AM

Title: Re: Buddhahood In This Life

Content:

climb-up said:

Yay! That means it's possible! Keeping my fingers crossed for no scheduling conflicts.

Malcolm wrote:

You have to decide what is important.

climb-up said:

Of course I do.

Accordingly, if it comes down to it I will prioritize feeding my children and keeping a roof over there head.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, this is how it goes. We don't need every lung, every empowerment.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 15th, 2021 at 10:10 AM

Title: Re: US Election Day Aftermath

Content:

Queequeg said:

White people take everything in the end. LOL

Malcolm wrote:

That's what they said about the Romans.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 15th, 2021 at 10:31 AM

Title: Re: When are we Bodhisattvas?

Content:

Padmist said:

When do we become Bodhisattvas?

Can we be Bodhisattvas in this life?

Is this something that you can confirm (to yourself) or confirmed by others that you are one?

or are our actions in this life a preparation for our Bodhisattva path in the next lives?

Malcolm wrote:

The first moment we develop bodhicitta.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 15th, 2021 at 10:47 AM

Title: Re: Western-Born (English) Tibetan Buddhist Teachers Like Alan Wallace

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

There is no living tradition of Vajrayāna in Sanskrit anymore.

Varis said:

Newar Vajrayana uses Sanskrit as a liturgical language. And AFAIK there's been a few Westerners initiated in it. Difficult to access, yes, but not impossible.

Malcolm wrote:

It's not the same, that's like saying the Latin Mass still exists and a few old fogies converse in Latin at the Vatican.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 15th, 2021 at 11:16 AM

Title: Re: Western-Born (English) Tibetan Buddhist Teachers Like Alan Wallace

Content:

Varis said:

Newar Vajrayana uses Sanskrit as a liturgical language. And AFAIK there's been a few Westerners initiated in it. Difficult to access, yes, but not impossible.

Malcolm wrote:

It's not the same, that's like saying the Latin Mass still exists and a few old fogies converse in Latin at the Vatican.

Zhen Li said:

The comparison is not accurate. Latin mass is now performed only by a minority, whereas all vajrācāryas use only Sanskrit for ritual and recitation. Newar is only used for popular Buddhist songs sung outside of formal rituals. Even the Newar laity uses Sanskrit at home for daily recitation.

Malcolm wrote:

I lived with a Newar family for some years, I know exactly what they do. They recite rituals in Sanskrit, like Brahmins. The Vajracaryas, a restricted caste in Nepal, are a fast dying tradition. At this point, it's practically museum Buddhism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 15th, 2021 at 11:36 AM

Title: Re: Western-Born (English) Tibetan Buddhist Teachers Like Alan Wallace

Content:

Zhen Li said:

It is also quite demeaning to those who actually practice, or sponsor these rituals (including myself), to suggest that they are just performing museum displays. What an incredibly orientalist attitude.

Malcolm wrote:

There are all kinds of museum Buddhism these days, including Tibetan monks who travel around doing mandala rites in...museums.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 15th, 2021 at 11:42 AM

Title: Re: When are we Bodhisattvas?

Content:

Padmist said:

Is it correct then to say that as long as a Mahayana Buddhist is generating bodhicitta, they are Bodhisattva?

Malcolm wrote:

Once you generate bodhicitta you are a bodhisattva. You don't even really need to put much effort into bodhicitta itself. Once you have made up your mind to become a buddha to benefit others, that mind will carry you the rest of the way. But it will take a long time and require courage.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 15th, 2021 at 9:04 PM

Title: Re: Western-Born (English) Tibetan Buddhist Teachers Like Alan Wallace

Content:

Zhen Li said:

It is also quite demeaning to those who actually practice, or sponsor these rituals (including myself), to suggest that they are just performing museum displays. What an incredibly orientalist attitude.

Malcolm wrote:

There are all kinds of museum Buddhism these days, including Tibetan monks who travel around doing mandala rites in...museums.

Zhen Li said:

Granted. Still there's a lot of Tibetan Vajrayāna supremacy in Buddhist studies, which is a big part of why Newar Buddhism has been overlooked, despite the fact that it's very much not merely a museum, but a changing and evolving tradition. It's interesting that effectively the study of Buddhism in the west effectively got its first major push from Nepal with Brian Hodgson and Eugène Burnouf, but most of the tradition still remains sidelined in scholarship on Vajrayana Buddhism in India (Davidson's book comes to mind).

Malcolm wrote:

That's largely because it is caste restricted. Newars who are serious about practicing Vajrayana seek out Tibetan gurus, because the Vajracaryas don't teach outside their clique.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 15th, 2021 at 9:13 PM

Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor

Content:

tobes said:

I think that Heidegger's big contribution was to hermeneutics, and in fact it has become so naturalised that we may utilise it without even realising. Malcolm, as a translator - I wonder if 'text critical' methods would have even arisen without H?

Malcolm wrote:

FFS, modern hermeneutics begin with Schleiermacher, and text critical methodology predates H by centuries, originating during the Enlightenment, in the West. Also Tsongkhapa, Buton, Ngorchen, and so on were astute text critical scholars, who needed to wade through multiple translations and compare them. And H's Ancient Greek was a pretense, and let's not even begin to discuss Vasubandhu, Candrakirti, and so on, who all were astute text critical scholars and practitioners of hermeneutics.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 15th, 2021 at 10:29 PM

Title: Re: Western-Born (English) Tibetan Buddhist Teachers Like Alan Wallace

Content:

Pero said:

Strange point to bring up when it says Tibetan Buddhist in the title of the topic which is also in the Tibetan Buddhism forum.

fckw said:

Yeah, it's really odd that the person does only bother about Tibetan explicitly, and does not seem to bother about any other language spoken, read or written by Vajrayana Buddhists throughout history, like Sanskrit, Zhang Zhung. Chinese, Japanese and quite a few others. Nor for Indian Vajrayana masters who never traveled to Tibet and did not speak the language. But then again, it indeed is the "Tibetan Buddhism" subforum, so it's obvious to all of us that any discussions around other forms of Vajrayana (much less so: other forms of Buddhism!) are not to be expected here, are they?

Tata1 said:

Good way of making a simple, straight forward thread, of someone asking help with a very specific question, go off topic. Whats the necessity of posting this kind of thing?

Malcolm wrote:

Shits and giggles, I think.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 15th, 2021 at 10:36 PM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

nyonchung said:

this was arriving in the Western Continent of endless riches, Balanchö

Malcolm wrote:

They didn't go far enough west, that's America.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 16th, 2021 at 9:05 AM

Title: Re: Some Observation on the Guru-Chela Relationship by Tulku Sherdor

Content:

tobes said:

No one can avoid Gadamer...

Malcolm wrote:

We can completely ignore that, at least I have. Gadamer has zero influence on my work. I just don't cotton to Spenglerian interpretations of culture and history.

We work from commentaries and just translate what the texts actually say, as best we can. That's a function of understanding both the context and grammar of the source language, as well as being able to compose adequate sentences in the target language. Everything else is extraneous to that.

You can examine my work for yourself.

No translation is perfect, of course. But we do not need to pile theories upon theories, particularly by people who never did any serious translation work in their entire lives.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 16th, 2021 at 10:14 AM

Title: Re: Western-Born (English) Tibetan Buddhist Teachers Like Alan Wallace

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Granted. Still there's a lot of Tibetan Vajrayāna supremacy in Buddhist studies, which is a big part of why Newar Buddhism has been overlooked, despite the fact that it's very much not merely a museum, but a changing and evolving tradition. It's interesting that effectively the study of Buddhism in the west effectively got its first major push from Nepal with Brian Hodgson and Eugène Burnouf, but most of the tradition still remains sidelined in scholarship on Vajrayana Buddhism in India (Davidson's book comes to mind).

Malcolm wrote:

That's largely because it is caste restricted. Newars who are serious about practicing Vajrayana seek out Tibetan gurus, because the Vajracaryas don't teach outside their clique.

Zhen Li said:

In cases where this happens, they usually maintain a Vajrācārya as the family priest and seek teachings from the lama for personal practice. Of course, there are also non-Vajrācāryas Newars who have become lamas, some of whom in turn serve in that capacity for other non-Vajrācāryas. Some non-Newars (and a few Newars too) follow a member of the Rana family who became a rinpoche. The main thing is, lamas cannot really do Newar lifecycle rites, so even those who are really into Tibetan Buddhism need to have a Vajrācārya family priest. Anyway, things are changing gradually, as I mentioned, and it is conceivable that eventually people without Vajrācārya parents could be given acāryābhiṣekha, but yes, if someone is interested in practising Newar Buddhism, at least for now, it's going to exclude esoteric practices and essentially be exoteric Mahāyāna with a few exoteric vajrayāna elements thrown in. Frankly, I think a lot of Śākyas prefer it the way it is because they don't have to learn all the procedures personally, they can just sponsor a guru to do it and due to the saṃkalpa they still get all the benefits.

Malcolm wrote:

So, you've basically ceded my point. Tibet is the place that preserved and the depth and breadth of the Indian Vajrayana tradition. People who are interested in practicing Vajrayana will naturally seek out Tibetan teachers or teachers in this tradition. No other tradition is as complete.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 16th, 2021 at 9:18 PM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Nadereme said:

Because many are still vexed in materialist views and think science is somehow superior.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, no, we think that Buddhist epistemology should be taken seriously. The latter depends on valid direct perception and inference. If you can prove through valid direct perception and inference there is a Mt. Meru out there, I am all ears.

Aemilius said:

The main point in Buddhists cosmology is that the three worlds and six or five worlds where being reincarnate exist. Neither does science take them to be reality, why is that? Why do scientists not perceive these worlds?

Malcolm wrote:

Beings in lower realms are incapable of seeing the beings in the higher planes of existence, for example, desire realm devas are incapable of perceiving form realm devas and so on. You can read this in chapter four of the koshabhasyam.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 16th, 2021 at 9:27 PM

Title: Re: Western-Born (English) Tibetan Buddhist Teachers Like Alan Wallace

Content:

2ndchance said:

Someone I know is desperately searching for such a Western-Born (English) Tibetan Buddhist Teacher to be engaged on an extremely long-term basis and He has more than enough financial resources to pay for it.

PeterC said:

Maybe others are being too polite to say this, but a lama isn't like a coach that you hire. Of course lamas need money because everyone needs money. But an approach like "hey I'm rich go find me a personal tutor for this" is going to be a bit offensive to any teacher of the Dharma of any nationality.

Malcolm wrote:

It's only a matter of time before the "lama as life coach" becomes a thing, complete with branding and guest appearances on Oprah.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 17th, 2021 at 12:49 AM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Aemilius said:

There is a Vinaya rule against boasting about one's spiritual accomplishments or spiritual experiences.

Malcolm wrote:

This applies only to the ordained and is probably at the root of the śrāvaka notion that anyone who attains stream entry and does not ordain within seven days, dies.

Anders said:

[pedantry]Arhatship, not stream entry.[/pedantry]

Malcolm wrote:

Yup, my bad.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 17th, 2021 at 2:28 AM

Title: Re: restricted texts

Content:

gelukman said:

Your reading is not worthless...dont believe the jealous etc....

Malcolm wrote:

Reading Dzogchen texts, and other tantric texts without transmission is indeed worthless, improper, and condemned in those very texts themselves. Only fools ignore this.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 17th, 2021 at 2:33 AM

Title: Re: restricted texts

Content:

sokol said:

My question now concerns their possibly restricted status – I've seen it written in a few places that the Great Completion tantras can only be read after receiving and appropriate personal transmission from a qualified teacher.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. That is the correct way. Find a teacher to study under. Do not read Dzogchen books prior to having received transmission and instruction. Otherwise, you are being a thief of the teachings. This is very negative.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 17th, 2021 at 2:50 AM

Title: Re: restricted texts

Content:

gelukman said:

You have right to be in the "natural state". You can practice mindfulness,

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, but without a teacher there is no Dzogchen to speak of. One cannot introduce themselves to Dzogchen. It is impossible. The Dzogchen tantras themselves assert that this is the case. A book cannot introduce one to Dzogchen, etc. Claiming otherwise is irresponsible, basically, one is breaking samaya to make a claim that one can study and practice Dzogchen without a guru, on one's own, from a book. Worse, one is encouraging others to travel down a false path.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 17th, 2021 at 3:05 AM

Title: Re: restricted texts

Content:

gelukman said:

You still need to practice and study.

Malcolm wrote:

One should not read Dzogchen texts without guidance of teacher, one should not even look at them. There is plenty to study and practice in sūtra without reading restricted texts.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 17th, 2021 at 3:18 AM

Title: Re: restricted texts

Content:

gelukman said:

According you.

Malcolm wrote:

Not according to me. According to the tantras, like the Self-Arisen Vidyā Tantra, the commentary tantra of the utterly secret unsurpassed cycle:

“The faults of not obtaining the empowerment are as follows: In the bardo one is alarmed, panicked, exhausted, impeded, and one can also lose consciousness.

“While one has not yet left the body of traces, migrating beings will not see one as worthy of respect. One’s merit will be small, one’s life short, one’s enjoyments of living will be few, one will be powerless, and many obstacles will occur. Nothing will be accomplished. Those are the faults of not obtaining the empowerment for the conduct of secret mantra. A yogin of secret mantra conduct must first obtain empowerment.

gelukman said:

But many give dzogchen teachings freely on the internet

Malcolm wrote:

In this case, they are acting as teachers.

gelukman said:

and through books.

Malcolm wrote:

Qualified practitioners need access to books.

gelukman said:

And you have your self published dzogchen books too.

Malcolm wrote:

And they all say, as in the Introduction to Tantra Without Syllables:

Only someone who has obtained the necessary empowerments and reading transmissions is qualified to study these texts.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 17th, 2021 at 3:40 AM

Title: Re: restricted texts

Content:

sokol said:

Well, from my own recent experience I certainly wouldn't say the uninitiated reading of these text is worthless.

Malcolm wrote:

Worse than useless. You don't know what you are reading.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 17th, 2021 at 3:50 AM

Title: Re: Regarding Shar Khentrul Rinpoché Jamphel Lodrö (No Debates Please)

Content:

Gaden_Wangchuk said:

I've attended sessions and empowerments with this teacher,

Malcolm wrote:

You've already taken empowerments with this person. You've sealed the deal. All you are going to do is wind up breaking your samaya if continue down this path.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 17th, 2021 at 4:01 AM

Title: Re: restricted texts

Content:

sokol said:

thanks for replies everyone!

Well, from my own recent experience I certainly wouldn't say the uninitiated reading of these text is worthless. Quite the contrary - even the little I did glimpse of some of these texts that I got - before realizing their possibly restricted status- has proven extremely useful in bringing some clarity where I really needed it and thus getting me a step closer to freedom. Do consider.

Sherab Rigdrol said:

You are conceptualizing your meditative experiences and equating them with what you are reading in dzogchen texts. This is the #1 reason why people should NOT read dzogchen texts without a teacher and transmission. Throw your experiences away, find a teacher, receive transmission, ask them what you should read and go from there.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 17th, 2021 at 6:14 AM

Title: Re: restricted texts

Content:

sokol said:

The question probably is: where would you look for a teacher that makes sure I respect Dzogchen tradition...

Malcolm wrote:

There is only one way to respect Dzogchen tradition, which is to follow it in the proper way.

sokol said:

guides me to study these texts with necessary respect but doesn't insist on me devoting myself to orthodox, tantric ways from the start?

Malcolm wrote:

Such a teacher is not a teacher who is teaching Dzogchen in a correct way. You cannot study these texts without transmission. Transmission comes with responsibilities. There is no authentic teacher of Dzogchen who will permit you to read these texts without proper transmission. That means receiving empowerment, the reading transmission for the text you want to practice or study, and the instruction on that text, called wang, lung, and tri.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 17th, 2021 at 10:15 AM

Title: Re: Western-Born (English) Tibetan Buddhist Teachers Like Alan Wallace

Content:

Zhen Li said:

My approach is, take the claims of all seriously, evaluate them for their merits, and decide on the course of action in this life that gets you to Buddhahood the fastest. Buddhahood or bust, otherwise we're just messing around and will end up right where we started.

Malcolm wrote:

If that were true, you would already be a Dzogchen practitioner. Just sayin....

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 17th, 2021 at 10:20 PM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Ode to Joy said:

Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Malcolm wrote:

There are two basic Buddhist cosmologies: Hinayāna and Mahāyāna. Which one do you mean?

Shinjin said:

First time I heard this. What is the difference?

Malcolm wrote:

Avatamsaka gives the Mahayana cosmology.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 17th, 2021 at 11:24 PM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Shinjin said:

First time I heard this. What is the difference?

Malcolm wrote:

Avatamsaka gives the Mahayana cosmology.

Shinjin said:

Is the Mahayana cosmology more "scientific" than the hinayana one? Your thoughts?

Malcolm wrote:

It is more cosmic and expansive.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 17th, 2021 at 11:32 PM

Title: Re: Regarding Shar Khentrul Rinpoché Jamphel Lodrö (No Debates Please)

Content:

Gaden_Wangchuk said:

Inquiring about a teacher (post empowerment) can be considered as such?

Malcolm wrote:

Depends, you should have made your inquiries before receiving samayas.

Gaden_Wangchuk said:

So, and this is in general and not pertaining to my original question, if a teacher does commit a scandal, then those students who renounce that teacher break samaya?

Malcolm wrote:

That depends on how they go about it. If they leave quietly, no. If they raise hell and cause a scandal themselves, then yes, it is bad for all involved.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 18th, 2021 at 1:03 AM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Shinjin said:

Is the Mahayana cosmology more "scientific" than the hinayana one? Your thoughts?

Malcolm wrote:

It is more cosmic and expansive.

Shinjin said:

I will give it a read if it isn't too long.

Malcolm wrote:

It is very long.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 18th, 2021 at 6:16 AM

Title: Re: Western-Born (English) Tibetan Buddhist Teachers Like Alan Wallace

Content:

treehuggingoctopus said:

I do not understand either.

Malcolm wrote:

I am sure this person is participating through google translate. "Basic lama" = root guru.

He is claiming that root gurus are basically prostitutes who are only your friend for $$$

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 18th, 2021 at 6:31 AM

Title: Re: restricted texts

Content:

sokol said:

I do make it a point to keep my mind open ...and that exactly is why I don't let myself simply decide to arbitraly embark on a chosen structuralised path (with its powerful rituals as is the case) because -as you yourself said - on the base of which certain standard could I possibly evaluate it as good for me to take.

Malcolm wrote:

The most important choice is making one's choice of a guru. It is not a light choice, and qualified gurus who can actually teach Dzogchen are vanishing rapidly, there are virtually none under sixty that I know of personally, and not very many above sixty left either.

Of course, there are many qualified lamas who can give this "Dzogchen" empowerment and that empowerment, but teaching Dzogchen is something very specific, and has very little to do with practicing mantras and getting involved with complicated tantric systems, per se.

There is a lot of hanging out the tail of white deer to sell venison, and sending off the customer with a packet of horse meat. Chogyal Namkhai Norbu used to complain about this all the time. In other words, there are a number of teachers who advertise themselves as Dzogchen teachers, who are really are guilty of false advertising and worse.

Caveat emptor.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 18th, 2021 at 8:25 AM

Title: Re: restricted texts

Content:

Inge said:

does one need lung for every text?

Malcolm wrote:

Ideally one does.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 18th, 2021 at 11:25 PM

Title: Re: Regarding Shar Khentrul Rinpoché Jamphel Lodrö (No Debates Please)

Content:

zerwe said:

In reading this thread one question does come to mind. If you politely step away from said teacher, then should you no longer engage in the practices you have received?

Malcolm wrote:

Generally, unless you have received them from other teachers as well, in whom you have faith and confidence.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 18th, 2021 at 11:36 PM

Title: Re: Regarding Shar Khentrul Rinpoché Jamphel Lodrö (No Debates Please)

Content:

Gaden_Wangchuk said:

To your second point and out of curiosity, does raising hell here mean bring public attention to the bad behavior of a teacher?

Malcolm wrote:

In general, yes, it means not bring public attention to what one perceives as the negative behavior of a teacher with whom one has entered into samaya. Criticizing them for their drinking habits, drug habits, spending habits, eating habits, personal habits, social habits and skills, and so on, is really not permissible. Of course, if they are not your teacher, you can criticize them for these issues as much as you like, with the caveat that you may be criticizing a bodhisattva.

This does not apply, however, in case where the teacher has themselves utterly broken their samaya with their students, where they have actually harmed the lives and health of their students, which is quite another thing. In this case, no obligation exists between teacher and and of their students. [And please, peanut gallery, refrain from the Tilopa-Naropa anecdotes].

Gaden_Wangchuk said:

This seems like a very confusing area, so if there are more resources I'll have to learn more and look elsewhere on the forums like I mentioned. It's also not the main topic of this thread, so I will make that my last question on that aspect of samaya and teacher/student relationships.

Malcolm wrote:

The best thing to do, in the beginning, is to choose well-known teachers with proven track records over many years.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 18th, 2021 at 11:40 PM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Aemilius said:

The things that Mahadeva made public agree with the Lotus Sutra, i.e. that the attainments of the Sravakas had turned out to be impermanent and illusory. And the majority of the Sangha knew it, and accepted it as an undeniable fact.

Malcolm wrote:

Not permanent and illusory, merely that some arhats could fall back into the state of being never returners, but inevitably, they attain arhatship.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 18th, 2021 at 11:44 PM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Aemilius said:

"Land rests on water" in the sense that the earth's inner core is liquid.

Malcolm wrote:

Definitely not. Land rests on water in the sense that continents are surrounded by oceans. You are forgetting the water rests on fire, fire rests on air, etc. The ancients had no idea of an inner core, nor that the world was round, not even the egg cosmologies state this.

Aemilius said:

I think the Mt Meru -cosmology is much older than Iron-Age...

Malcolm wrote:

Axial mountain cosmology is certainly quite ancient. You should examine Witzel's The Origins of the World's Mythologies.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 19th, 2021 at 12:18 AM

Title: Re: restricted texts

Content:

sokol said:

The real ultimate guidance however, which you will obviously all agree about is beyond human, beyond our ideas about paths etc. The living awareness we all parttake in.

Malcolm wrote:

As long as you have this perennialist idea, you will never understand Dzogchen. There is no awareness in which we all partake. In fact, Dzogchen explicitly rejects this idea as eternalism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 19th, 2021 at 12:22 AM

Title: Re: is the date of losar based on kalachakra?

Content:

Toenail said:

Is the calculation of the losar date based or described in Kalachakra?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, calendars in Tibetan Buddhism are calculated on the basis of instructions found in the Vimalaprabha commentary of Kalacakra, of which there are two systems: Phukluk, followed by most schools; and Tsurluk, followed by Karma Kagyu. The latter places new years one month prior to the former.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 19th, 2021 at 12:29 AM

Title: Re: restricted texts

Content:

sokol said:

Why I kept discussing this beyond the first post and your initial answers was rather to get a better picture of how it all works for people here that do follow the Dzogchen path to the letter, to form a better picture about how prominent the ritual side of this tradition really is and to search if there is a way for me to work within this tradition that doesn't go against my gut feeling discussed above.

Malcolm wrote:

You cannot expect the tradition to adapt to you. Instead you have to adapt to the tradition.

Read Crystal and the Way of Light, by my root guru, the late Chogyal Namkhai Norbu.

Ritual is not a prominent part of Dzogchen teachings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 19th, 2021 at 2:41 AM

Title: Re: is the date of losar based on kalachakra?

Content:

Nemo said:

The last water tiger year was something. First live trans-Atlantic television signal, First Beatles single "Love Me Do" released, Oral Polio Vaccine used to combat Polio, Marilyn Monroe is found dead, Cuban Missile Crisis takes world to brink of nuclear war,...

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and I was born. It was definitely something.

Nemo said:

It's late this year. March 3rd. Hopefully omicron has burnt out by then and we can have a normal celebration.

Malcolm wrote:

No chance.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 19th, 2021 at 9:31 AM

Title: Re: is the date of losar based on kalachakra?

Content:

Toenail said:

Isn't that an obstacle year for you then?

Malcolm wrote:

According to one belief system, yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 19th, 2021 at 9:55 AM

Title: Re: In regards to meditation (feeling like on the outside)

Content:

undefineable said:

And yes, the 'essencelessness' of phenomena (sunyata?) is harder to grasp than the 'essencelessness' of apparent objects (anatta?), and I can't claim to have got there myself. Even at an academic level, the language is always confusing when taken out of context by people unfamiliar with the concepts..

Malcolm wrote:

It's mainly confusing to people who have too many concepts and no experience.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 19th, 2021 at 10:07 AM

Title: Re: In regards to meditation (feeling like on the outside)

Content:

undefineable said:

No experience of sunyata?

Well yeah, that's going to leave one confused (with regard to the definition of sunyata) past one point or another, but then it's accepted that this experience only comes after a lot of experience and progress in meditation.

Malcolm wrote:

Progress in meditation is measured by a reduction in conceptuality.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 19th, 2021 at 11:00 AM

Title: Re: restricted texts

Content:

tingdzin said:

Ideally, traditionally, these instructions would be granted to an individual or in a very small group of disciples who were personally well known to the teacher. In this way, the teacher could be sure that the student was ready to receive and seriously practice them.

Charlie123 said:

Is this actually true? For example, reading the bio of ChNN's uncle, Togden Orgyen Tenzin, it seems pretty clear that TOT mostly received instructions from Adzom Drukpa in large groups and had very little face time with AD. I can think of a few other examples.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 19th, 2021 at 9:41 PM

Title: Re: restricted texts

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Ritual is not a prominent part of Dzogchen teachings.

sokol said:

So I thought

Malcolm wrote:

Ritual isn't, but the necessity for empowerment and instruction is. There are also Dzogchen preliminary practices, which are indispensable.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 19th, 2021 at 10:49 PM

Title: Re: restricted texts

Content:

sokol said:

The prevailing tone here has not been entirely inviting or encouraging to get any deeper (with few notable exceptions, thank you guys).

Malcolm wrote:

There is only one way to get deeper, and you have been advised upon how to do that.

sokol said:

By the way curious fact and maybe something worth considering: the only way I got to know part of the content of the Six Lamps, Twenty-One Nails and some other parts of Zhang Zhung NyenGyud for instance, that as someone here informed me are forbidden "to even look at" without transmission (additionally suggesting that I am a "fool" and a "thief" having done so) is through quotations in a book by Geshe Tenzin Wangyal Rinpoche, that has been prefaced and recommended to anyone by other high Dzogczen authorities and HH Dalai Lama himself – and there hasn't been a single mention about a need for formal authorisation to read it throughout the book.

Malcolm wrote:

The whole of Zhang Zhung snyan rgyud is samaya restricted, as are all texts and commentaries on Dzogchen. Sure, there are a few popular books out there that discuss Dzogchen view, and so on, but these contain virtually nothing of the actual instructions of Dzogchen practice. The books that are out there, like Achard's Six Lamps, and so on, are all published in order to provide practitioners with access to primary source material. Even then, they are not very useful without someone to explain them.

sokol said:

Not a warm welcome to say the least.

Malcolm wrote:

The welcome you received was in response to the tone of your greeting. Some of us have been practicing these teachings for three decades and moreover, read Tibetan and have clocked many hours sitting at the feet of such masters as Chogyal Namkhai Norbu, and so on. Making statements like "I am intimately familiar with rigpa (in my own spontaneous way)" is laughable from someone who has never sat and received Dzogchen teachings.

As for calling you a fool and thief, I didn't call you either thing. I said, "Reading Dzogchen texts, and other tantric texts without transmission is indeed worthless, improper, and condemned in those very texts themselves. Only fools ignore this" and "Do not read Dzogchen books prior to having received transmission and instruction. Otherwise, you are being a thief of the teachings. This is very negative."

As for the first statement, this is because no one these days can understand Dzogchen teachings immediately, even with proper transmission. Not even Namkhai Norbu Rinpoche understood the meaning of Dzogchen immediately. Before he met his root guru, he had thirteen Dzogchen teachers and had received the whole tradition of Buddhist Dzogchen teachings. It was only when he sat with Rigzin Changchub Dorje that he understood the real meaning of Dzogchen teachings. As for the second statement, Dzogchen teachings are guarded by very powerful guardians. While some claim the Bonpos assert their guardians have loosened restrictions on Dzogchen teachings, this is not the case with Buddhist Dzogchen teachings. There are no lineage masters of Buddhist Dzogchen teachings who can loosen such restrictions, because the last lineage holder of Dzogchen teachings was Longchen Rabjam, and there won't be another one for thousands of years. Thus, since the guardians are the owners of the teachings, one who transgresses the seal of secrecy placed on Dzogchen teachings risks their wrath.

While it is often said that Dzogchen is the teaching for this age, for many reasons, this does not mean that people can just do what they like with them. The integrity of Dzogchen teachings is maintained through respecting the methods of transmission and promulgation of Dzogchen teachings described in the Dzogchen tantras themselves and the commentaries on them by ancient masters such as Vimalamitra, and so on. You haven't even begun to learn about such things because you have no teacher.

You are confused because some teachers like my guru, Tenzin Wangyal, HH Dalai Lama, and so on, have published some books that are "open," meaning that they describe a little bit about the Dzogchen teaching. But actually, they really do not say very much at all. They offer only a glimpse for the curious, nothing more.

So if you are actually interested in becoming a practitioner of Dzogchen, rather than just adding to the collection of spiritual teachings you have gathered, develop some humility, go find a qualified teacher of Dzogchen, and listen more than you talk.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 19th, 2021 at 11:09 PM

Title: Re: Western-Born (English) Tibetan Buddhist Teachers Like Alan Wallace

Content:

Varis said:

Why didn't the Tibetan and Chinese disciples of the Indian panditas manage to maintain Sanskrit as the language of practice and study?

Malcolm wrote:

Sanskrit studies were at a pretty high level until 15th century in Tibet, but tapered off as contact with Indian panditas waned.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 20th, 2021 at 12:25 AM

Title: Re: Shitro mantra... Where does it first appear?

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

I'm speaking of the mantras of the peaceful and wrathful mandalas. In which text do they first appear?

Malcolm wrote:

The rulu mantra appears in Guhyagarbha and some others translated during the imperial period. Based on a limited preliminary survey, looks like the bodhicitta mantra first appears in the treasures of Nyang ral Nyima Ozer, so late 12th century. However, Nyangral was famous for finding old tantras that were translated during the imperial period and rehabilitating them. Text criticism only gets one so far.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 20th, 2021 at 1:58 AM

Title: Re: restricted texts

Content:

Lingpupa said:

The idea that by even looking at written dzogchen texts before we have received "pointing out" (and I think the OP pointed out how flimsy that sometimes is as a "qualification") we will cut ourselves off from ever being able to practice meditation or dzogchen is, imho, an idea for the spiritually immature.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, immature (ma smin pa) people who have not been matured (smin pa) though empowerment and received the liberating instructions shouldn't read Vajrayāna texts at all, let alone Dzogchen texts. What my teachers have stressed about Dzogchen teachings, especially Chogyal Namkhai Norbu, is that one is at risk of blocking one's path by reading material for which one does not have the transmission. Longchenpa is quite explicit about the need for secrecy in Dzogchen teachings. If one doesn't want to follow his advice, then whose advice should one follow? This does not mean that Dzogchen is secret like a top secret document. It means that it should only be approached in the proper way to ensure the integrity of the lineage. Included in that proper way are not reading texts for which one does not have the appropriate level of transmission. It's a rule I have followed all of my life.

Lingpupa said:

That's what I mean by being grown-up about these things. It does not include a retreat into dogmatism or into a childish fear of reading something that will ruin our progress for this life and perhaps more to come.

Malcolm wrote:

People do ruin their progress for life. There are whole public forums filled with people talking about Vajrayāna and Dzogchen who have blocked their progress for life because of the extreme depth of their misconceptions.

Lingpupa said:

The warning about reading texts for which we are not qualified or prepared has merit, of course, but there is no need to get crazy about it.

Malcolm wrote:

No, we should just be serious about it, as it is a serious matter, and there are consequences for one's path when one makes light of such warnings or disregards them.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 20th, 2021 at 2:32 AM

Title: Re: restricted texts

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Yes, it's a confusing situation with people getting all fire and brimstone even though there are so many openly published texts, it is a bit surreal and you have come up against the absurd incongruity of the situation, forcing you to make some kind of decision for your practice. It is silly in many ways, I agree. It is the reality of our circumstances though.

Malcolm wrote:

No one is getting all fire and brimstone. What I am saying is factual and is based on the benefit of the OP, whether he or she is capable of understanding that or not.

Johnny Dangerous said:

I have said in another thread that I thought either publishers need to be a lot more careful, or we are just living in a different situation now where it is not always possible to do what we are 'supposed to'. I have looked at a number of texts that were restricted to me before I even knew they were.

Malcolm wrote:

Innocently stumbling onto a text is quite different than reading things one ought not read. But once one knows what one ought not read, well, then you know.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Still, the best approach is to take Dzogchen seriously and consider the advice to at least be careful about what one exposes themselves to without guidance, without getting neurotic or worrying unnecessarily in the manner often preferred by orthodoxy;)

Malcolm wrote:

It is preferred by the guardians. There is nothing to be worried about. The requirement is simple. Don't read what you don't have transmission to read.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 20th, 2021 at 2:42 AM

Title: Re: nyingma lineages/cycles structures of practice.

Content:

yagmort said:

vima nyingthig

Malcolm wrote:

The Vima Nyingthig is four volumes of dense and difficult material.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 20th, 2021 at 3:18 AM

Title: Re: Alpha waves

Content:

avatamsaka3 said:

Scientific research has shown that meditation (any kind?) produces alpha waves...

Malcolm wrote:

These kinds of studies are often not well designed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 20th, 2021 at 3:50 AM

Title: Re: restricted texts

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

[

As the OP points out, it is a little strange to immediately jump on people with interest in the teachings because they do not understand a fraught and contradictory situation such as the abundance of openly available texts they aren't supposed to read.

Malcolm wrote:

The OP's post showed they are already heading down the wrong path. They're already convinced they know what "rig pa" is.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Having been in the position myself, I sympathize with new people who come here with interest in the teachings and then feel like they basically get scolded for their questions.

Malcolm wrote:

They weren't scolded for their questions, they were scolded for their presumptions. Just try telling ChNN that you already know what "rig pa" is when you have not even had any kind of Vajrayāna teachings at all and just read a couple of very general books that are decades old.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 20th, 2021 at 4:36 AM

Title: Re: restricted texts

Content:

heart said:

Seems to me that everyone think they know what rigpa is these days...

Malcolm wrote:

Sadly, this is true.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 20th, 2021 at 10:59 AM

Title: Re: nyingma lineages/cycles structures of practice.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The Vima Nyinthig is four volumes of dense and difficult material.

yagmort said:

how much of it strictly practice-related?

Malcolm wrote:

About 70 percent.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 20th, 2021 at 1:17 PM

Title: Re: Criticism of Prayer Flags, Treasure Vases, etc.

Content:

Zhen Li said:

...whose role is essentially promoting ethnic integration of China's minorities into Mandarin culture and promoting ethnic propaganda.

Malcolm wrote:

This is false. I know Thubten Phunstog personally. He is a Tibetan nationalist. He is not a propagandist at all. He is not criticizing these practices per se, he is criticizing how they are exploited by fake lamas in Tibet.

Like many modern Tibetans, he takes a critical view of institutional Buddhism in Tibet. He is quite expert in Tibetan medicine, history, and so on. He also understands the Chinese are not going anywhere, so like many of his contemporaries he advocates for modernization in Tibet, which is still quite underdeveloped.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 20th, 2021 at 11:25 PM

Title: Re: Criticism of Prayer Flags, Treasure Vases, etc.

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Prayer flags are chump change when it comes to China's role in environmental destruction and the taking of animal life.

Malcolm wrote:

He is making a different point, he is claiming these practices do not yield the promised benefits (and in the case of prayer flags, do not even have a Buddhist origin), that the pursuit of them robs poor Tibetans of money better spent elsewhere, and so on, that practices like life ransom (srog bsu), in the manner in which it is pursued in Tibet, is harmful to the rivers and streams of Tibet through the introduction of invasive species from China, and that the push towards vegetarianism is a result of the undue influence of Chinese Buddhism, which comes at the expense of the health of Tibetan people, who have traditionally enjoyed a diet high in dairy and meat.

Frankly, I don't approve of the practice of life release. It is generally practiced without thought of the consequences for the local environment:

In Asian Buddhist societies, life release has led to significant ecological harm when invasive species, parasites and disease are introduced to wild populations of animals. It has led to the introduction of American bullfrogs in China and tilapia and red-eared sliders, a species of turtle, in Taiwan, according to the Society for Conservation Biology.

The practice has also caused problems outside of Asia. In 2017, two Buddhists from London were fined a total of £28,000 (about $36,000) after pleading guilty to illegally releasing more than 700 non-native crabs and lobsters into the Atlantic Ocean off the English coast, according to the Guardian.

<https://www.sfgate.com/travel/article/Buddhist-life-release-ritual-complicates->

13601643.php

If people who did these things did so in a thoughtful manner, I be less opposed, but most people do it out of idiot compassion, not understanding the wider impacts of their desire to accumulate merit.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 21st, 2021 at 12:09 AM

Title: Re: HHDL on Satipatthana

Content:

Queequeg said:

In the first video, HHDL states that the mind and body are distinct streams.

Can someone please explain this duality? This duality suggests that there is a deeper paradigm in which mind and body are distinctions. What is that deeper paradigm?

Malcolm wrote:

It is based on the fact that the mind leaves this body at death.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 21st, 2021 at 12:17 AM

Title: Re: Shitro mantra... Where does it first appear?

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

The "RULU" mantra in Guhyagarbha is not the same as appears in Shitro.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure it is, I looked it up in Tibetan, སྒམ་པའི་སྟིང་པོ་དེ་ཀོ་ན་ལྷོ་ལྷོ་པའི་བླ་མ་ཅན་པོ་, gsang ba'i snying po de kho na nyid nges pa'i bla ma chen po, f. 55a.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 21st, 2021 at 12:31 AM

Title: Re: nyingma lineages/cycles structures of practice.

Content:

yagmort said:

well, i thought as much, but that begs the question of how many cycles are actually available for an english-speaking western practitioner?

Malcolm wrote:

There are endless terma cycles of Dzogchen out there, but in they do nothing more than repeat what is in the 17 tantras.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 21st, 2021 at 2:43 AM

Title: Re: HHDL on Satipatthana

Content:

Queequeg said:

To the point saying they are different streams somewhat confusing. I imagine stream here is a translation of a specific term?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, rgyud, saṃtāna.

When we are alive, the body and mind are inseparable; but when we die, its really the body that dies, it loses its integrity, while the mind continues on its merry way in samsara, taking up another body. Of course, there is really never a time that the mind is without A body, it is just not always with this present body.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 21st, 2021 at 2:50 AM

Title: Re: Sensory deprivation/float tanks

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Lsd/acid is manufactured or contrived (and not surprisingly was developed by government).

Malcolm wrote:

No, it was developed by accident, by Swiss chemist named Albert Hoffman at Sandoz, who discovered its properties by accident in 1943, resulting in the famous bicycle trip.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/History_of_lysergic_acid_diethylamide#Discovery

My favorite LSD video from the 1950's, the housewife:

Best line: "If you can't see it, you'll just never know it. I feel sorry for you."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 21st, 2021 at 3:04 AM

Title: Re: Criticism of Prayer Flags, Treasure Vases, etc.

Content:

Toenail said:

What about buying crickets and shit in the pet store and freeing them? I do that in the summer. Also bad?

Malcolm wrote:

If they are native to your region, no problem.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 21st, 2021 at 4:06 AM

Title: Re: Sensory deprivation/float tanks

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Regardless of who actually first synthesized it from ergot, gathered from rye, I believe; there's this:

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, the MK Ultra program is well known.

<https://www.history.com/topics/us-government/history-of-mk-ultra>

LSD is synthesized from rye ergot, so it has a natural source. But rye ergot is poisonous. LSD is not, no matter how much one ingests.

<https://www.vice.com/en/article/epgeb/ergot-fungus-psychedelic-lsd-witchcraft>

Personally, I find such drugs boring. I've done them all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 21st, 2021 at 4:51 AM

Title: Re: Criticism of Prayer Flags, Treasure Vases, etc.

Content:

Toenail said:

African crickets?

Malcolm wrote:

Are they from Germany?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 21st, 2021 at 5:49 AM

Title: Re: Criticism of Prayer Flags, Treasure Vases, etc.

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

Worms from a local bait shop are often a good bet.

Malcolm wrote:

Little known fact: earthworms, in North America, are an invasive species that changed the character of North American forests by consuming fallen leaves, eliminating the habitat of many plants.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 21st, 2021 at 5:52 AM

Title: Re: Music time

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Fun story. Roger Miller of Mission of Burma came to one of my shows back in 1983 or so. I had my synth set in such way that it was causing subsonic vibrations in the building, shaking the whole building. He left and listened to the show from across the street during my set.

Heh.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 21st, 2021 at 6:44 AM

Title: Re: Shitro mantra... Where does it first appear?

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

The "RULU" mantra in Guhyagarbha is not the same as appears in Shitro.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure it is, I looked it up in Tibetan, སྐྱུང་པ་འི་སྟིང་པོ་དེ་མོ་ན་འཇུག་པའི་བླ་མ་ཅན་པོ་, gsang ba'i snying po de kho na nyid nges pa'i bla ma chen po, f. 55a.

Crazywisdom said:

Interesting. It's not in either translation. But ok, thanks. And your referring to the Guhyagarbha Tantra and not an explanatory tantra or supplementary tantra, right? And is it presented as the main recitation mantra? Is there any other, namely the bija?

Malcolm wrote:

It's in the large tantra, it's the same text, but expanded.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 21st, 2021 at 10:59 AM

Title: Re: HHDL on Satipatthana

Content:

tobes said:

I hope this intra-tradition dialogue continues.

I think that Pali canon scholar-practitioners such as Analayo and Bodhi have been pretty good at finding points of continuity with the Mahayana, whilst respecting the differences.

It is good for us Mahayanists to do the same.

Malcolm wrote:

Well of course, we have the same teacher, we just follow a broader set of his teachings. The question has never been what we accept, it's always been what teachings we follow that they accept.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 21st, 2021 at 8:59 PM

Title: Re: HHDL on Satipatthana

Content:

Queequeg said:

To the point saying they are different streams somewhat confusing. I imagine stream here is a translation of a specific term?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, rgyud, saṃtāna.

When we are alive, the body and mind are inseparable; but when we die, its really the body that dies, it loses its integrity, while the mind continues on its merry way in samsara, taking up another body. Of course, there is really never a time that the mind is without A body, it is just not always with this present body.

Queequeg said:

Where can I find explanations of this process? Abhidarmakosa?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and BITL.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 21st, 2021 at 11:48 PM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

"When a great wind amidst the ākāśa disturbs the water, a flood follows. The flood disturbs the entire earth and it shakes."

How does this line up? If the water is lava, what is the wind? Keep in mind, whatever the wind is, it must also be the support of the water.

Aemilius said:

May be it is just wrong, it plainly contradicts the modern view of the causes of earth quakes.

Malcolm wrote:

The four elements, as you correctly point out, are just four qualities of matter: solidity, liquidity, motility, and heat. Even consciousness, and beyond that, jñāna, have these four qualities. Everything in the universe is made of the four great elements. There is nothing that is not made of the four great elements.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 22nd, 2021 at 1:15 AM

Title: Re: Shitro mantra... Where does it first appear?

Content:

conebeckham said:

Isn't the Rulu Mantra found in Yangdak Thuk---or are those later than the Guhyagarbha?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and more or less contemporary.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 22nd, 2021 at 1:40 AM

Title: Re: Music time

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 22nd, 2021 at 1:52 AM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Aemilius said:

May be it is just wrong, it plainly contradicts the modern view of the causes of earth quakes.

Malcolm wrote:

The four elements, as you correctly point out, are just four qualities of matter: solidity, liquidity, motility, and heat. Even consciousness, and beyond that, jñāna, have these four qualities. Everything in the universe is made of the four great elements. There is nothing that is not made of the four great elements.

Queequeg said:

Does this mean mind is matter?

Malcolm wrote:

It means that matter is derived from mind. But I forgot to include, this is the great perfection understanding of the elements. Simply put, the four or five elements are experienced in their gross form only because sentient beings do not recognize the four or five elements in their true form, as the five lights* of the five pristine consciousnesses (ye shes, jñāna).

*Do confused this light with photons. Despite having no mass or charge, photons are compounded entities and can be created and destroyed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 22nd, 2021 at 3:16 AM

Title: Re: Correct but not right

Content:

Nadereme said:

Based on what I've seen so far with the vastness of Tibetan/Vajra, it's almost like everyone is 'correct' in the sense that everything that everyone says, does, experiences, believes, practices, etc...

Malcolm wrote:

No, they follow mistaken paths. They are not correct in any sense at all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 22nd, 2021 at 5:05 AM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Queequeg said:

Does this mean mind is matter?

Malcolm wrote:

It means that matter is derived from mind. But I forgot to include, this is the great perfection understanding of the elements. Simply put, the four or five elements are experienced in their gross form only because sentient beings do not recognize the four or five elements in their true form, as the five lights* of the five pristine consciousnesses (ye shes, jñāna).

*Do confused this light with photons. Despite having no mass or charge, photons are compounded entities and can be created and destroyed.

Queequeg said:

Do the four elements spontaneously arise together or do they arise sequentially? For some reason I have in my mind:

mind/space + ignorance -> air/wind/motility -> fire/heat -> water/liquidity -> earth/solidity

I think I have in mind the descent of beings from formless realms as described in ADKB and the myth of the devas and asuras frothing up the ocean to create Jambudvīpa, crossed with the description of the appearance of beings at the beginning of a major kalpa.

Alternatively, in Samantabhadra's case:

mind/space + awareness -> five lights

?

Malcolm wrote:

Once the process of nonrecognition occurs, it is sequential, as in ADKB. etc.. with the appearance of beings at the beginning of a major kalpa.

BITL 88-87 describes this very briefly.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 22nd, 2021 at 6:19 AM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Queequeg said:

ty

Malcolm wrote:

We can discuss elsewhere.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 22nd, 2021 at 6:39 AM

Title: Re: HHDL on Satipatthana

Content:

Queequeg said:

Where can I find explanations of this process? Abhidarmakosa?

Malcolm wrote:
Yes, and BITL.

Caoimhghín said:
I've noticed you mention "BITL" a few times. If you don't mind me asking, what is this acronym? There is a lama with an acronym of "LOTR" who was "Lord of the Rings" in my mind for a while until someone wrote out his actual name. What is BITL?

Malcolm wrote:
My translation, "Buddhahood in this Life."

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, December 22nd, 2021 at 10:29 PM
Title: Re: Criticism of Prayer Flags, Treasure Vases, etc.
Content:

treehuggingoctopus said:
I wish I knew more about the Tibetan present-day "modernizing" movement, it looks very hopeful.

Malcolm wrote:
Well, if Tibetans could or would set up casinos...that's exactly what it looks like. The Chinese have used our treatment of native people as a pretext for ignoring US complaints about their human rights abuses. They have done exactly what we did during our westward expansion (1883, anyone?). They have fenced off traditional grazing grounds, moved nomads into fixed settlements, and so on. A way of life that existed even twenty years ago has all but vanished everywhere but the most remote parts of the Tibetan plateau.

So, Tibetan modernization means advocating for Tibetan language and religious rights combined with assimilation into broader Han culture. They have no choice. Tibetan independence is an impractical dream and everyone but some holdouts in Dharamshala know this. Nevertheless, Tibetans are a stubborn bunch and many refuse to assimilate, refusing to learn Chinese beyond a kind of pidgin, despite the obvious economic and social advantages. While I sympathize with the anti-assimilationists, theirs is, in the long run, a losing cause. They need to shift from resistance to advocacy.

QQ said:
Whatever Tibetan society survives is going to be indelibly transformed.

Malcolm wrote:
That's a done deal already.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, December 22nd, 2021 at 10:35 PM

Title: Re: Tathāgataguhyā Sūtra (Secrets of the Tathāgata) translation now published

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Hello everyone. My translation of the Tathāgataguhyā Sūtra (The Secrets of the Tathāgata) is now published. It can be read online for free from my <https://sites.google.com/view/shingans-portal/s%C5%ABtra-translations>, and hard copies are available for purchase on <https://www.lulu.com/en/gb/shop/shaku-shingan-/the-secrets-of-the-tath%C4%81gata/hardcover/product-4gjw98.html?page=1&pageSize=4>. Please feel free to share your thoughts. I look forward to discussing this sūtra in the days to come.

Malcolm wrote:

Good job. I've purchased a copy because I believe independent translators who demonstrate good scholarship should be supported.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 22nd, 2021 at 10:50 PM

Title: Re: Criticism of Prayer Flags, Treasure Vases, etc.

Content:

Queequeg said:

I don't see how advocacy would be effective. Maybe its the only thing possible.

Malcolm wrote:

Casinos in Lhasa (they're already there, but not controlled by Tibetans).

Can you imagine, Casino Potala. Wish I had photoshop skilz.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 23rd, 2021 at 10:04 PM

Title: Re: Meditation on Amitābha by Sakya Paṇḍita Kunga Gyaltsen

Content:

Mirror said:

Please does someone know, if I need empowerment to practise this?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, you do. It specifies that you are to visualize yourself as a yidam, that you have a guru, and so on. Anyone familiar with Sakya Pandita's point of view, the author of this text, will understand that this is a sleeping yoga, which is a Vajrayāna practice. While the text does not specify what yidam one should visualize oneself as, this practice is most commonly combined with the practice of Avalokiteśvara.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 23rd, 2021 at 10:10 PM

Title: Re: HHDL on Satipatthana

Content:

tobes said:

I actually think we get far too wrapped up in the rhetoric of non-dualism, and for this reason the body-mind unity remains a conceptual fiction far removed from our everyday experience.....which is usually pretty damned dualistic.

Malcolm wrote:

In sūtrayāna, the distinction between mind and body is substantial, they are considered to be different substances (dravya). Dharmakīrti, for example, goes to great lengths to prove the mind and body are substantially different in order to prove rebirth.

In higher tantras, and especially Dzogchen teachings, this substance dualism is abandoned.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 23rd, 2021 at 10:36 PM

Title: Re: HHDL on Satipatthana

Content:

tobes said:

I actually think we get far too wrapped up in the rhetoric of non-dualism, and for this reason the body-mind unity remains a conceptual fiction far removed from our everyday experience.....which is usually pretty damned dualistic.

Malcolm wrote:

In sūtrayāna, the distinction between mind and body is substantial, they are considered to be different substances (dravya). Dharmakīrti, for example, goes to great lengths to prove the mind and body are substantially different in order to prove rebirth.

In higher tantras, and especially Dzogchen teachings, this substance dualism is abandoned.

Queequeg said:

Ah. A different approach than the Mahayana teaching on emptiness... or rather, perhaps its best to suggest this teaching addresses the implied space left over following Madhyamaka analysis.

Malcolm wrote:

Madhyamaka does not contest the conventional presentations of either sūtra or tantra. Within their own context, both presentations are functional, hence conventionally valid, since neither depend on essences for their function.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 23rd, 2021 at 10:40 PM

Title: Re: Meditation on Amitābha by Sakya Paṇḍita Kunga Gyaltsen

Content:

Mirror said:

Thank you so much Malcolm for the explanation! I'll try to find a teacher, who can give me the teachings and empowerment.

Malcolm wrote:

His Holiness Sakya Trichen has been giving initiations online. You should check his schedule to see if there are any upcoming events.

In the meantime, you can recite the Noble King of Prayers, which concludes with an aspiration to be born in Sukhavati. This is the best way to accumulate the merit needed to meet an authentic teacher of Buddhадharma.

Also, Jhado Rinpoche, a highly esteemed, reputable, and nonsectarian Gelukpa Lama, has been giving some initiations online recently and I think plans to continue to do so.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 23rd, 2021 at 11:51 PM

Title: Re: Meditation on Amitābha by Sakya Paṇḍita Kunga Gyaltsen

Content:

Mirror said:

You mean The Extraordinary Aspiration of the Practice of Samantabhadra?

Malcolm wrote:

Not sure, I mean the one that comes from the Gandhavyuha Sūtra, the Bhadracaryapranidhana.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 24th, 2021 at 12:25 AM

Title: Re: Sensory deprivation/float tanks

Content:

Sādhaka said:

I'd rather try some of the other 'entheogens' that I mentioned, that is to avoid long-term of side-effects of synthetic drugs (I admit that most natural plants can have toxic short-term side-effects; however most synthetic drugs have possible long-term side-effects)

Malcolm wrote:

LSD is gone from your system in 6 hours, max. It has no known toxic side effects. Pure LSD is the cleanest drug out there. However, LSD found on the street may not be manufactured under ideal laboratory conditions, or be counterfeit. Therefore, it should not be ingested.

However, with renewed interest psychedelics, properly manufactured LSD administered clinically is complete safe, from a toxicity point of view. I haven't done LSD myself since 1979, I wouldn't take anything found on the street today at all. The downside to acid is that it lasts a good 12 hours. This is why people like DMT and analogues, because it lasts ten minutes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 24th, 2021 at 2:26 AM

Title: Re: HHDL on Satipatthana

Content:

Queequeg said:

Ah. A different approach than the Mahayana teaching on emptiness... or rather, perhaps its best to suggest this teaching addresses the implied space left over following Madhyamaka analysis.

Malcolm wrote:

Madhyamaka does not contest the conventional presentations of either sūtra or tantra. Within their own context, both presentations are functional, hence conventionally valid, since neither depend on essences for their function.

Queequeg said:

In referring to "sutra", are you including both Sravakayana and Mahayana?

Malcolm wrote:

The collection of reasoning in Madhyamaka is mainly concerned with removing misconceptions about dependent origination.

Queequeg said:

My sense of Madhyamaka is that it brings us to a certain point - emptiness - but doesn't go beyond that. In a sense, that's the point - Madhyamaka brings us to Vimalakirti's silence. Madhyamaka refers to but doesn't actually address bodhisattva activity and its practice.

Malcolm wrote:

That is not true. Āryadeva's 400 verses is actually titled Bodhisattvayogācāracatuḥśataka, i.e. The Four Hundred Verses on the Yoga Practice of Bodhisattvas. The first half is on relative bodhicitta and conventional truth; the second half is on ultimate bodhicitta and ultimate truth. There there is Nāgārjuna's Ratnavali, Mahāyanavimsika, the four praises, and so on, which give more detail on the bodhisattva path from a Mahayāna perspective. While it is certainly true the Yogacāra school greatly elaborated on the details, its all there in Madhyamaka.

Queequeg said:

I'm not sure how Tantra fits into this conceptualization except to refer to the teaching

I've encountered that says Tantra is not a difference in view from Mahayana, but rather a difference in practice.

Malcolm wrote:

The Madhyamaka perspective on the path is that it is all illusory, from beginning to end, and that doesn't depend on whether we are talking about sūtra or tantra.

Queequeg said:

Tantra seems to present a refined and immediate application of Mahayana view as well as further insights into tathagatagarbha/buddhanature.

Malcolm wrote:

The main difference is method, yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 24th, 2021 at 3:00 AM

Title: Re: HHDL on Satipatthana

Content:

Queequeg said:

I guess I have an idea of Madhyamaka in my mind that is very narrow - namely MMK and the mode of analysis set forth.

Malcolm wrote:

Unfortunately, this is very common.

Personally, when it comes to Vinaya, I consider myself a Mūlasarvastivādin upāsaka; when it comes to Sūtra, I consider myself a Mādhyamika (also my bodhisattva vows come from the Madhyamaka system); and when it comes to Abhidharma, I consider myself an exponent principally of the Great Perfection, since Vajrayāna in general is considered part of the Abhidharmapiṭaka.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 24th, 2021 at 7:31 AM

Title: Re: HHDL on Satipatthana

Content:

tobes said:

Yes, but part of the issue here is not 'which ontology we believe in' but more 'how do we experience these matters in everyday life?'

Malcolm wrote:

I think, frankly, that people are incapable of imagining any experience that is not embodied. Experience by its definition implies embodiment. We only experience the five senses directly, and the mental experience is all derived, secondary.

I think substance dualism is more difficult to accept and more abstract than substance nondualism. This is why most educated people these days are materialists, don't believe in a soul, and don't believe in a next life. For them, substance dualism is very counter-intuitive.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 24th, 2021 at 9:15 AM

Title: Re: HHDL on Satipatthana

Content:

tobes said:

All of this is pre-philosophical for most people.

Malcolm wrote:

Even in the time of the Buddha, most people thought the body was their self.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 24th, 2021 at 9:53 PM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Aemilius said:

As you probably know, in Buddhist tantra "winds" mean different currents or forces within in the body that cause body's functioning.

Malcolm wrote:

It just means the element of air inside of the body and it's ten functions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 24th, 2021 at 9:56 PM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

*Do confused this light with photons. Despite having no mass or charge, photons are compounded entities and can be created and destroyed.

Zhen Li said:

Photons, a massless particle that can be created and destroyed... Right. We can create and destroy all sorts of things in the realm of imagination. This kind of stuff is reason enough to reject secular "cosmology."

Malcolm wrote:

Well, no, photons are empirically detectable, unlike say, Mt. Meru.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 24th, 2021 at 10:41 PM

Title: Re: HHDL on Satipatthana

Content:

tobes said:

I admit that I was surprised when I saw these figures, but I think they highlight that in terms of common/everyday experience, mind or consciousness 'feels' pretty immaterial.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't agree. People are conditioned in our culture to accept cartesian dualism from the cradle. The reason why people turn away from theistic religion in general is that it does not correspond to their experience. They have never experienced consciousness in any way other than through their physical senses. Those who have a notion of an immaterial self or consciousness have it because they have been conditioned to think the mind (soul) and body are different by 500 years of Cartesianism. They don't have to be philosophical to be influenced by ideas that have been dominant themes in our culture for hundreds of years.

Buddhist substance dualism is predicated on different principles than cartesian dualism. But we can see it still provokes problems for Westerners by their difficulty in distinguishing the Buddhist principle of karmic transmigration from the Neoplatonic/Christian concept of the soul (psyche).

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 24th, 2021 at 10:46 PM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Well, no, photons are empirically detectable, unlike say, Mt. Meru.

Zhen Li said:

When you end up with something with zero dimensions, it's not that it has no mass, but that the model is wrong.

Malcolm wrote:

No, the model isn't wrong, it functions, therefore it is conventionally valid. This does not mean that there isn't something yet to be discovered that we have not understood.

Zhen Li said:

I am not defending Mt. Meru. I am instead suggesting that we should be careful about putting too much credence in things like photons.

Malcolm wrote:

I give credence to things that can be conventionally established, based on Madhyamaka criteria for what qualifies as conventional truth--these days that includes photons and not Mt. Meru. I am not making an argument from the point of view of logical positivism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 24th, 2021 at 11:02 PM

Title: Re: Sensory deprivation/float tanks

Content:

Toenail said:

I believe it has amazing potential for treatment resistant depression, especially if you microdose it.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, though more research has been done on psilocybin in the US than LSD, thus far. It seems that psilocybin creates novel pathways in the brain, thus it is also effective for certain types of traumatic brain injuries as well. From what I understand, one controlled session of psilocybin can lift chronic depression for a year, or so I have read, but that maybe anecdotal.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 24th, 2021 at 11:37 PM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Particle OR wave explanations are always wrong on a material level.

Malcolm wrote:

You have the math to back that up?

Zhen Li said:

To put it this way, if I "believe" that magnets point north because a magician enchanted my compass, that is a functionally useful explanation, but it's not a correct explanation.

Malcolm wrote:

That not what "conventional" means. "Conventional" that which can be validated by healthy sense organs of ordinary people. No one's healthy sense organs can confirm a magicians enchantment, but everyone can confirm a compass points to magnetic north.

Zhen Li said:

This is going a bit beyond my point, however. My point is that photons are not a good comparison with Meru. Compare the nature of one mountain to another rather than an inscrutable and incomprehensible corpuscle.

Malcolm wrote:

Of course they are: photons conventionally exist, Meru does not. Both lack mass and charge, but the former explains the function of physical light, the latter explains nothing at all anymore. But we still use this axial cosmology symbolically. I was recently reminded (in the new bio of Dogen by Steve Heine) of John McRae's four dictums of Zen studies, the first of which is "it's not true, therefore, it is more important." I think this can be applied to Buddhist mythopoeia across the board.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 24th, 2021 at 11:44 PM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Aemilius said:

Certainly not air.

Malcolm wrote:

Certainly it is the air element.

There are only four or five elements that make the human body. One of those is air. If you wish to confirm this read the Nandagarbhavikranti sūtra, which describes how the air element shapes the fetus over its thirty-eight week gestational period. Or, you can read the Vajra Rosary Tantra, which is now in English translation, and is one of the primary sources for the doctrine of the ten vāyus and how they function in the human body. Or you can read the Profound Inner Meaning by the Third Karmapa, which unifies the teachings of the vajra body in one place, translated by Elizabeth Callahan.

Translating the word vāyu/rlung as "energy" is fashionable, but it is also completely inaccurate.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 25th, 2021 at 12:09 AM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Math does not create material reality.

Malcolm wrote:

Math is an explanatory device. It is used to explain observable properties and to predict things in physical reality yet to be observed, it is thus a tool of both deduction and inference. No one claimed it was tool of direct perception. That's what experiment is for.

Zhen Li said:

I am not talking about conventions, I am talking about belief and merely functional versus correct explanations.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, then we are talking about two different things entirely. In any case, something conventionally is said to exist, if it functions according to expectations. For example, a car: a car that cannot drive is a non-car by definition, something we refer to as a "broken-down car." But even a broken-car is more of a car than Meru is a mountain. Sure, we can call Meru an mythical mountain, since it is myth. But it is not a real mountain, even conventionally speaking.

Zhen Li said:

I actually think that "explanation" is not something Buddhism needs to do so well. That's the role of philosophy and science (when properly done).

Malcolm wrote:

Meru belongs in the world of science, since it is a claim about the structural of physical reality.

Zhen Li said:

These pertain to the world of illusion, and are not, ultimately, of import. Suchness is beyond such calculative thought.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no Meru, nor cars in suchness; but there is suchness in cars, unlike Meru. Suchness cannot exist in something which is totally unreal, like the child of a barren woman. There is no dharmatā without dharmin.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 25th, 2021 at 12:20 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Shinjin said:

Meanwhile many poor and desperate around the world who would love to come take these jobs without hesitation. Are they doing the right thing or are Americans just spoiled and ungrateful?

Malcolm wrote:

Customer-facing service industry jobs suck. Most of the "big quit" is a result of unruly, ill-mannered customers who refuse to follow masking guidelines, get vaccinations etc. Thus, people are leaving customer facing jobs in the service industries at record rates for their personal safety.

Even so, unemployment is at an all time low in the US, because there are plenty of other service industry jobs that do not require dealing with customers personally.

And, in fact the US is responsible for the employment of millions of people overseas, from call center jobs to manufacturing. You might complain that these jobs pay much less than they would in the US, and this is true. But this is a function of comparative advantage.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 25th, 2021 at 12:29 AM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Aemilius said:

Modern anatomy hasn't found channels of air in the body. Instead there are nerves and pathways of chemicals messages.

There is not much future for the conception of the air flowing in the body.

Malcolm wrote:

That very much depends on what one understands the element of air to be. If one understands it to be the motile property of matter, as described Abhidharma, and so on, it works just fine.

Not only this, the great Tibetan scholar Desi Sangye Gyatso, points out in his commentary on the medical tantra, that the way things are presented in the tantras is obscure, and the same things are presented in the medical literature openly. Zurkhar opines that central, right, and left channels are respectively the arterial system, the venous system, and the nervous/lymphatic system, and that further, the way nāḍīs exist in the body is not the same as the way they are visualized and not need be. Further, the Kalacakra points out that the lower ends of these three nadis are the the urethra, the seminal vesicle channel, and the rectum, further indicating that they are to be understood as physical structures in the body, but not as they are visualized. If you want to understand these things properly, you ought to study Ayurveda or Tibetan Medicine rather than making a mishmash by trying to adapt these things to some modern scientists naive attempt to explain ancient knowledge systems and make it fit with modern science.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 25th, 2021 at 12:37 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

I'm not sure I understand your logic. Why should people stay in jobs that make them miserable simply because there are other people who would be willing to take those jobs?

Malcolm wrote:

And they are not staying in these jobs, because they are not safe and there are better opportunities for them elsewhere.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 25th, 2021 at 2:32 AM

Title: Re: Criticism of Prayer Flags, Treasure Vases, etc.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

You might try aiming first before pulling the trigger...

Sonam Wangchug said:

The emphasis of his argument seems displaced, and his logic twisted and underdeveloped.

He is emphasizing that it is "Fake lama's" who spread these practices, and that they are merely superstitious.

however it is a dishonest emphasis because clearly many authentic lama's of the past and present have recommended these practices (which as Buddhists should be our emphasis). In one vein he talks about the masters of the past having an important opinion when it regards eating meat, but then he also disregards the blessings of authentic masters validating these practices.

Malcolm wrote:

No, he just thinks there are a lot of Tibetans being taken advantage of.

Sonam Wangchug said:

Instead of focusing on the angle that these are authentic practices, and emphasizing that they should be done with natural materials etc, he is imploring people to cease them, which is ignorance.

Malcolm wrote:

No, he is asking people to use their common sense.

Sonam Wangchug said:

Whether one sees prayer flags as an adopted practice, the fact of the matter is that prayer flags are not merely colored cloth, they have the sacred words of the Dharma on them, and as such bring benefit to the world.

Malcolm wrote:

He addresses this, by pointing out that spreading pieces of paper with mantras and so on written upon them, a kind of cheap prayer flag, which get blown about on the wind, inevitably wind up being trampled upon. How is this a correct practice from any point of view?

Sonam Wangchug said:

Thinking of an authentic master for merely a moment has the power to clarify myriad wrong views and discursive thoughts. I recall Kyabje Garchen Rinpoche, who, when passing under Lungta, touches them to his forehead with total reverence, this is how people with devotion in dharma act, and as such why I said without -much- faith.

Malcolm wrote:

Maybe, Zen people might ignore prayer flags altogether-- is their devotion to Dharma lacking?

Sonam Wangchug said:

As far as life release goes, life release is one of the most powerful and beneficial karmic actions which can be performed, and it has prolonged the life of many who were destined for death (humans not only animals) and as such that is why it is recommended. Of course it can be performed in the wrong way, and every attention should be given to that...

Malcolm wrote:

Again, Thubten Phuntsok is criticizing the practice of throwing river fish from China into the headwaters of rivers on the Tibetan plateau. He is not criticizing the practice of srog bslu per se, he is criticizing the incorrect application of it.

Sonam Wangchug said:

It is more a characteristic of Chinese Buddhism which may emphasize vegetarianism. Scriptures like the Lankavatara, Shurangama etc add to the fact that Chinese culture is also influenced by Taoism and Confucianism in terms of being very conduct leaning.

Malcolm wrote:

Which Thubten Phuntsok is criticizing.

Sonam Wangchug said:

the same author spent 21 years as a Gelug monk,

Malcolm wrote:

No, Thubten Phuntsok is a Karma Kagyu person from Derge, associated with Palpung Monastery and never spent one day as a monk. You have the wrong guy. You have confused this guy:

<https://www.patreon.com/thuptenphuntsok>:

Thupten Phuntsok is a former ordained Buddhist monk for 21 years, studying under his main teacher Sermey Kensur Geshe Lobsang Tharchin.

For this guy:

Sonam Wangchug said:

Thubten Phuntsok is a prolific scholar of Tibetan Studies with dozens of books and numerous articles published in the fields of Tibetan history, Tibetan medicine, and Tibetan literature, grammar, and poetry. Originally a Tibetan medicine doctor in his hometown of Derge, he has an academic background in archeology and Tibetology. He is currently a professor and researcher in the department of Tibetan Studies at the Central Nationalities University in Beijing, China. He is also the director of the Tibetan Medical Institute and the president of Tibetan AIDS Prevention Association. He has won many national awards for his publications on language, history, religion, and medicine.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.trace.org/node/194>

Sonam Wangchug said:

"In Tibet, more than a thousand years ago, many great saints possessed the knowledge to prevent wars, famines and disease.

Malcolm wrote:

Clearly it didn't work, since the history of Tibet is filled with war, famine, and disease.

Sonam Wangchug said:

From the time the vases were 'planted' until the time the Chinese Communist forces brought about the 'cultural revolution' it was recorded in Tibetan history that there were no major wars, famines or disease.

Malcolm wrote:

This is complete and total nonsense. Read One Hundred Thousand Moons by Tsepon Wangchuk Dedon Shakabpa. It might open your eyes.

Sonam Wangchug said:

We, of the technological societies, have for many years witnessed the reckless deterioration of the world. Our Earth's resources are being rapidly raped, plundered or polluted and will eventually be exhausted, or will exhaust themselves.

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhist societies have no better a track record in the destruction of environments than non-buddhist ones.

Sonam Wangchug said:

The peoples of this degenerate age are inflamed with desire, hatred and jealousy and no understanding of giving up negative actions and developing positive ones is cultivated.

Malcolm wrote:

The Kali Yuga will not be fixed with bandaids.

Sonam Wangchug said:

With the motivation that the turbulence and suffering of sickness, famine, wars and conflicts throughout the whole world may be pacified and that the auspiciousness of virtue and well-being may pervade over all the world and that all beings may continuously enjoy the splendor of exaltation, the vases are made. When the vases are placed, all the various countries where they are buried will abide in supreme virtue, the wealth and splendor of the dharma will remain long and they will bring good fortune and long life free from illness. All beings will turn away from quarrels and strife, gathering in sublime perfection and remaining till the end of the Age.

Malcolm wrote:

These are all nice aspirations, but the decline of humanity will not be prevented by burying pots filled with gems in the ground and so on, if it can be prevented at all. Not all the treasures vases in Tibet, nor stupas, statues, and so on, prevented the Chinese from rolling in and smashing Tibetan civilization into smithereens.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 25th, 2021 at 3:42 AM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Anders said:

Also, the whole blood flow system is basically transporting transformed oxygen throughout the body. "Air" is fundamental to every process of the body.

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed. And actually, what happens when blood flow is restricted anywhere in the body? That part begins to die. Why? Because of lack of air

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 25th, 2021 at 4:34 AM

Title: Re: Acceptable ways of Transmissions (Lung, Jenang, Wang)

Content:

Aloke said:

I was pondering about this subject in the last months, and since there's no consensus even among the great Masters, I was a little bit reluctant to put some questions here. But I think, with the due respect to different teachers and different ways, this kind of discussion could be of benefit for the better understanding of how things really work or should work in Vajrayana and Dzogchen.

Malcolm wrote:

We have to work with scripture and reasoning, and see what shakes out from that.

Since the fourth empowerment is given with words, it can be given online.

Since the gnosis of the wisdom consort empowerment is only symbolic now, it can be given online.

Since the secret empowerment too is a symbolic blessing of speech, which is no longer practiced according to the requirements of the ancient manuals, it too can be given online. Thus the three inner empowerments can be given online.

The eleven empowerments of the vase empowerments however, require the disciple to receive actual substances from the guru at some point during the rite. Therefore it cannot be given online. Therefore, major empowerments cannot be given or received online. Not only this, but the preparation day for a major empowerment contains many procedures needed to make the disciple a suitable recipient for each one of the four main empowerments in the rite.

Meaning empowerments (don dbang) sometimes also called symbolic empowerments (brda dbang) can be given on line. In particular, since these generally include the empowerment of the potential of vidyā (rig pa'i rtsal dbang), they are satisfactory as ripening empowerments. Also, the empowerment of the potential of vidyā alone, sometimes calls "direct introduction" is satisfactory as a ripening empowerment. This is because the empowerment of the potential of vidyā is the mother of all other empowerments.

Permissions (rje gnam) can be given online. Blessings (byin brlabs) cannot, since they also require substances.

The idea that one can receive empowerments and lungs from recordings is not reasonable, just as it is not reasonable to claim one can receive monastic ordination from a recording. Someone who claims to have received such empowerments and lungs via recordings should understand that other people will not accept this.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 25th, 2021 at 4:51 AM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

An unintuitive mystery of Buddhism is that the elements can "glow" when viewed in samādhi.

Malcolm wrote:

It's not a mystery at all. The fundamental nature of the elements is actually jñāna, solidified into matter through ignorance.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 25th, 2021 at 5:07 AM

Title: Re: Criticism of Prayer Flags, Treasure Vases, etc.

Content:

treehuggingoctopus said:

Tibetan societies are certainly plagued with many problems. But truth be told, I do not think any "Westerner" can afford to pronounce it unhealthy or nightmarish. However environmentally destructive and uninformed they are, they have still so much to learn from the masters of the genre.

Malcolm wrote:

It's pretty bad. Monasteries have no means of waste disposal, so they just pitch their garbage over the sides of ravines, where it washes down into rivers.

The Tibetan landscape is littered with millions upon millions of plastic bags, which get caught on fences, prayer flags to modern consumerism. In many places in Amdo the forests were cut down before the Chinese arrived in force, for example, Amdo used to have millions of acres of forest land, which was all leveled for pasturing sheep in the 30's and 40's. The only reason the trees in Kham were not similarly raised is that the those forests are on steep mountain sides. Now there is very little old growth forest left in Amdo. Of course, the Tibetans in U and Tsang cut down all their trees more than a thousand years ago. Tibetans are human beings, with the same faults as everyone else. They are not masters of deep ecology or conservationism by any means. The Tibetans themselves hunted snow leopards, as well as Himalayan tigers, nearly to extinction. They hunted lions into extinction in their territory, .

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 25th, 2021 at 5:43 AM

Title: Re: Acceptable ways of Transmissions (Lung, Jenang, Wang)

Content:

Aloke said:

What you think of some Lamas that give the Major Empowerments online, asking students to arrange some objects/substances in theirs places, or visualizing?

Malcolm wrote:

All I can say is caveat emptor. I don't think this is valid, but that's just me. People generally speaking do whatever they want and justify whatever they do, regardless of what anyone else says. Innocent people have no way of knowing what is correct and what is not correct. But as far as I am concerned, this is not correct. With respect to the five deity Cakrasamvara, I am pretty sure Jhado Rinpoche would consider this incorrect, even though he does give permissions online.

Aloke said:

As I consider CNNR as one of my Gurus, and really love His way of teaching and approach, I tend to see things as the Master would said always, in the way of working with circumstances. This for me is the more reasonable and logic way.

Malcolm wrote:

He explicitly excluded the possibility of giving major empowerments online, and absolutely dismissed the possibility that people could receive empowerments and lungs from recordings, not once but repeatedly, over more than a decade.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 25th, 2021 at 10:09 AM

Title: Re: Eight precepts

Content:

Mirror said:

Hello,

I'm interested in keeping precepts, but as a lay practitioner I don't have much possibilities except for the basic 5 lay precepts and bodhisattva vows at my level of practice. Can I keep "officially" (properly taking them with a teacher and other stuff that has to be done according to a tradition) eight mahayana precepts (sojong vows if I'm not mistaken) for entire life like pratimoksa vows?

Sorry for my confusion. I'll be glad for any answer and clarification. Thank you

Malcolm wrote:

Generally you receive the fast days vows, even the Mahayana version from someone who has them. Then can administer them in your own. The reason for this is that there is no Mahayana rite for taking fast days vows. What makes them Mahayana is intent, but unlike bodhisattva vows, no rite is specified for taking them in absence of a preceptor.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 25th, 2021 at 10:27 PM

Title: Re: Acceptable ways of Transmissions (Lung, Jenang, Wang)

Content:

Aloke said:

Malcolm, could the Vajrayogini Empowerment/Blessing (Naro Kachod) be given online? It is a Jenang, based on a previous 2 day Major Empowerment right?

Malcolm wrote:

Yogini is a blessing, not a permission, so no.

There are yogini permissions, this not one.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 26th, 2021 at 12:18 AM

Title: Re: Criticism of Prayer Flags, Treasure Vases, etc.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Your aim is still off. You need to adjust the sights of your rifle.

Sonam Wangchug said:

it's not only that he is criticizing the wrong application of the practices, since he prefaces it with believe in science and do away with superstitious beliefs, so he is directly calling these profound skillful means left behind by Guru Rinpoche as superstitious and not effective.

Malcolm wrote:

He is criticizing motivation:

This may be an ancient tradition but certainly it is not a genuine Buddhist practice.

Hoisting flags in the mountains with the hope of increasing one's fortune is not a Buddhist aspiration. The main Buddhist principle is the law of cause and effect. Without accumulated merit from previous lives or without any genuine bodhicitta, there is no reason that by simply putting up prayer-flags in the mountaintops would bring one any good result Again, here he is criticizing motivation for the same reason he is criticizing hoisting prayer flags for personal benefit.

In order to fool their patrons, fake monks and lamas these days make all kinds of terbums or treasure vases stuffed with various items claiming that these will enhance their wealth, life and luck and patrons are then made to buy them.

As for his embrace of science, well, Tibetans need to study the sciences so they can secure decent employment for themselves. Tibetans are among the most underemployed people in the PRC, primarily because of their illiteracy and lack of education. There is really nothing wrong in advocating that Tibetans get up to speed in the sciences. In Tibetan schools in India, physics, math, and so on are taught. No one but you has a problem with this. And yes, he is criticizing Tibetans for not following the Buddha's understanding of cause and effect and giving into superstitions. For example, he really criticized Tibetan doctors for charging for nagpo gujur pills, even though he thinks they are worthless for preventing rums nad like covid. He points out if those pills really had the proper amount of musk in them, if any at all, they would be selling for $50.00 a piece (300 rmb), an exorbitant price. Hence, he accused Tibetan doctors of profiting off the superstitions of Tibetans through selling them cheap, counterfeit nagpo gujur pills.

Sonam Wangchug said:

However, masters who are capable of perceiving local deities, or diagnosing problems via divinations, like Dilgo Khyentse Rinpoche, or Lama dawa rinpoche for example, can see that sometimes problems stem from unseen sources which require such spiritual solutions.

Malcolm wrote:

Such lamas are as rare as stars during the day.

Sonam Wangchug said:

Of course if one looks with a doubtful mind one can find flaws in any teacher, sutra, tantra, etc .. However for practitioners there is a different way of handling perceived inconsistencies with humility.

Although a prophecy may give a description of benefits, at the end of the day these still depend on the causes and conditions, so perhaps in ideal circumstances it would unfold as such, however depending on circumstances it depends. It still would bring nothing but benefit if done in the right way, and if we do not believe it, then we do not believe Guru Rinpoche, and that is I suppose ones right, but one thing is for sure Guru Rinpoche , and the methods he left behind, will never deceive anyone and are unfailing.

Malcolm wrote:

That depends on whether one accepts treasure teachings or not. I suspect Thubten Phuntsok is suspicious of treasure teachings, and more to the point, people who claim to be tertons. Tibetan history is littered with false tertons, and even some of the supposedly authentic ones are pretty dodgy characters who plagiarize whole texts from other schools, barely altering a single word, other than substituting Guru Rinpoche's name for the original Tibetan author.

Sonam Wangchug said:

I'm not really sure who started the tradition of throwing colored papers, or if it has any authentic history at all, possible that it doesn't. I've mainly only seen it happening with Khampas.

Malcolm wrote:

All Tibetans do it.

Sonam Wangchug said:

The problem with such writings and defense of them is as the end of the day it will only decrease peoples faith and devotion in the three jewels, and the root of all benefit comes from devotion. There are countless things we do in Vajrayana that to skeptics would be called nothing but superstition, are we going to start cow towing every time some modern mind gets a namtok? no.. we can truly trust our teachers. All this modern minded pujas don't really work and are superstitious jargon has to go. Pujas when performed correctly can bring tremendous benefit and are not 'superstitions' as the author claims.

Malcolm wrote:

He isn't claiming what you imagine he is claiming. He is a traditionally-trained doctor of Tibetan medicine. I am quite sure he knows far more about pujas and so on than do you or I.

Sonam Wangchug said:

We don't hear HHDL, HHST, etc proclaiming these practices as "superstitious" and not having authenticity,

Malcolm wrote:

It is well known that HHDL thinks elemental calculation is nonsense. It is also well-known that HHDL is keen enthusiast for science, and strongly supports modern education for Tibetans.

Sonam Wangchug said:

just think of how many compositions of various masters there are on methods of life release, prayer flags, lung ta etc (khyentse wangpo, miphram etc) .. These were not deluded beings, they compose these works because they bring great benefit to sentient beings, so let's instead argue for their continued "correct" application, as they were intended.

Malcolm wrote:

Thubten Phuntsok is arguing for their correct application, apart from prayer flags, which are just a pre-Buddhist custom in Tibet, as everyone knows:

On prayer flags:

Throwing up papers printed with mani and other mantras everywhere has two negative consequences – from the religious point of view it shows disrespect to the mantras; and from the scientific point of view it causes pollution to the land. Hence the throwing of paper prayer-flags is harmful both for this and the next life. This is a result of not knowing how to practice Buddhism.

On treasure vases:

These water bodies that have never witnessed any pollution are contaminated. Living things in these larger waters die whereas smaller water bodies dry up. Large lakes turn dirty as can be seen from many pictures available online. This too is a result of not knowing how to practice Buddhism.

On life ransom:

But the fish suffer 1. they suffer from being caught in the first place; 2. they suffer as they are transported long distances from east to west and consequently many die because of a lack of native water. Hence water bodies are filled with dead fish and they become polluted. This too is a result of not knowing how to practice Buddhism.

On vegetarianism:

But for the poor and subsistence of ordinary people, this choice does not exist. In the Kham region of eastern Tibet, because of the ban on eating meat, a large quantity of old and out of date food items from cities are transported and sold in villages where Tibetans live. This has become a kind of habit for people to show off by eating these Chinese foods. This is one of the main consequences of banning eating of meat. This too is a result of not knowing how to practice Buddhism.

He concludes:

Tibet may be filled with monks
But the land is filled with conflicts,
They may be praying for world peace
But their land is filled with fighting.

Mountains and valleys are filled with prayer-flags
Amidst these flags are the carcasses of dead yaks,
Businessmen may ransom many fish
But dead bodies of these fish fill the water bodies.

Nomads avoid slaughtering
But lamas commit murders,
Farmers abide by the five precepts
But monks engage in sexual acts.

There are things here in Tibet
That do not exist elsewhere,
This religious education,
A la la! What a wonder!

And every words of what he says is true. Frankly, your only complaint is that he advocates that Tibetans become educated in tshan rig, science, because when they do, they will abandon some traditional practices when they understand that they do not correspond to the principle of cause and effect. It is also well known that he thinks practices like mantra healing and so are completely fraudulent. But that is his right. Just as you have the right to credulously accept any story you hear about this lama and that lama, he has the right to doubt these things. But from his point of view, Tibetans are being ripped of and exploited by their own religious and secular authorities, and that, and nothing else, was the real cause of the Chinese Invasion of Tibet.

Tibet, prior to the fall, was a corrupt, medieval society, where aristocrats felt they could treat common people anyway they liked, where there was no democracy, and so on. It is not a surprise to discover that most of the Red Guards who engaged in the cultural revolution in Tibet were Tibetan cadres made up of illiterate Tibetan peasants, and not Chinese cadres. After the 13th Dalai passed in 1936, the Lhasa elites became too absorbed in their own power games to look up and see the train that was bearing down on them, the 14th Dalai Lama was too young to fend off the Communists, and those in Eastern Tibet were apathetic to hostile to the Lhasa Gvt.

You can claim all you like that building this statue and following that prophecy would have saved Tibet the indignity of being occupied by the Chinese Communists, but as they say, hindsight is 20/20. It is very common to blame the other guy for your own problems—— So sectarian Nyingmapas and Kagyupas blame the Gelukpas (like you are doing here), sectarian Gelukpas blame the Nyingmas and the Kagyus, etc.

The reality is that Tibet was not a unified nation, it was more like Germany or Italy in the mid 19th century. It was not unified, there was no effective national army with modern weapons and training. At the root of the issue was that the Khampas, hating Lhasa rule, did little to nothing to prevent the Chinese occupation. Similarly, the Amdowas did little to nothing to prevent the Chinese occupation. The history of the Chinese Occupation is well documented, so these facts are not disputable.

To reiterate: Tibet fell because it was not a unified country. That Lhasa nobles ignored advice from Khampa lamas is not surprising in the least. So, in reality, the real cause of the fall of Tibet was elite self-absorption combined with seething ethnic rivalry, which resulted in a situation where Tibetans, divided amongst themselves, could not stand against the Chinese occupation, a state of affairs that continues to this day.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 26th, 2021 at 12:31 AM

Title: Re: Criticism of Prayer Flags, Treasure Vases, etc.

Content:

Sonam Wangchug said:

I'm not threatened by science, as Buddhists we should have confidence in Buddhist methods and teachers.

Otherwise you take refuge in science.

Malcolm wrote:

If one should forgo medical treatment, say for cancer, because accepting medical treatment somehow means one lacks faith in the Dharma, then one is a fool.

There are no effective methods at all for treating internal cancers in Tibetan Medicine. I have this on the authority of one of Tibetan doctors I studied with who is the head of internal medicine in the Qinghai Tibetan Medical hospital.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 26th, 2021 at 12:44 AM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Math is an explanatory device. It is used to explain observable properties and to predict things in physical reality yet to be observed, it is thus a tool of both deduction and inference. No one claimed it was tool of direct perception. That's what experiment is for.

Zhen Li said:

,

Math is purely the quantitative language of symbols, it cannot help us infer anything qualitative about nature.

Malcolm wrote:

Nonsense, for example, math, as applied to evolution, can and has been used to predict species in environmental niches.

Zhen Li said:

It has nothing to do with the physical world, it's a symbolic representation.

Malcolm wrote:

Like any language.

Zhen Li said:

Experimentation is not for direct perception—that would negate the requirement for experiments.

Malcolm wrote:

Of course it is. It is used to prove inferences. The only way an inference can be proven is with a direct perception.

Well, then we are talking about two different things entirely. In any case, something conventionally is said to exist, if it functions according to expectations. For example, a car: a car that cannot drive is a non-car by definition, something we refer to as a "broken-down car." But even a broken-car is more of a car than Meru is a mountain. Sure, we can call Meru a mythical mountain, since it is myth. But it is not a real mountain, even conventionally speaking.

I agree with regard to the mythical mountain part. A car that cannot drive is neither necessarily a non-car nor a broken-down car. This underscores the importance of clear definitions. A lot of the issues with the photon situation are simply a lack of clear definitions for generations of particle physics.

I don't think physicists will agree you here.

Meru is a concept. It's a mental dharma.

So is the son of a barren woman, but it is mental representation of a total nonexistent. It may have suchness in how it exists—as a concept—but not in what it represents, a total nonexistent.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 26th, 2021 at 12:51 AM

Title: Re: Dharma Protectors of HYT

Content:

tony_montana said:

This might be uber-noob question, I beg for patience. But, do we ever self-generate as a Protector?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, we can, provided we have the right transmission and know what we are doing. Otherwise, better not. There are some protectors however which are almost always give as self-generation, the so-called White Mahākāla (dgon dkar) is one of these, even though white and mahākāla are contradictions in terms.

In all schools, Mahākāla is frequently given as a self-generation practice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 26th, 2021 at 2:08 AM

Title: Re: Criticism of Prayer Flags, Treasure Vases, etc.

Content:

Sonam Wangchug said:

However, I know one tibetan doctor, the Ven paltul rinpoche who told me he has been very effective in treating breast cancer using Tibetan medicine, he gets his medicine fresh from Tibet, and not from Men-tsee-khang in dharamsala. He said though that the Tibetan medicine is effective if they had not yet gotten radiation, but if they had radiation therapy already it was less effective.

Malcolm wrote:

Tibetan Medicine can be used as an adjunct therapy, it has no methods nor herbs that can deal with internal cancers.

Sonam Wangchug said:

however i'm not sure if that is what you classify as an internal cancer.

Malcolm wrote:

Cancerous tumors that generally require surgery for removal. Tibetan medicine can deal with external cancers, like skin cancer and so on.

Sonam Wangchug said:

"One of his specialties is cancer. He has treated thousands of cancer patients from all over the world, including women with breast cancer The rate of survival for people treated with ancient Tibetan herbal therapies with or without adjunct Western cancer treatments appears to be much higher than those receiving allopathic cancer treatments alone.

Other diseases those are successfully cure are AIDS, Brain Tumors, Multiple Sclerosis, Hepatitis, Leukemia, Stroke, Stomach Cancer."

Malcolm wrote:

There are no evidence-based studies in support of such claims.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 26th, 2021 at 2:17 AM

Title: Re: Acceptable ways of Transmissions (Lung, Jenang, Wang)

Content:

Aloke said:

Oh ok, because of the substances. Which lineages do have Yogini Jenangs? Thank you very much again!

Malcolm wrote:

The Bari Gyatsa. But it is usually given a whole collection. You might find some lama willing to give the separate jenang.

But you don't need, since you have Mandarava.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 26th, 2021 at 2:22 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

We're heading into AI Technocratic era anyway where most of the jobs will be done artificially by robots, computers and code

Malcolm wrote:

This will be mostly in agribusiness, services, logistics, and manufacturing. But there will always be a need for plumbers, electricians, farmers, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 26th, 2021 at 3:47 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Dan74 said:

It was really meant as a question, given what I can gather of the culture, not just "the proles" but all round. Effort is just not worth making for a lot of people.

Malcolm wrote:

??? WTF is that supposed to mean?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 26th, 2021 at 8:20 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Dan74 said:

It means that as always there are many sides to the story.

One side is surely that in many sectors in the US people are paid peanuts and enjoy shocking working conditions. Unions have been destroyed. This is exploitation and abuse pure and simple.

Another one is that many people can't be bothered doing much at all, especially if they can somehow eke out an existence with doing little. It's like a lingering depression. It just doesn't appear to them that the effort is worth making. I don't want to moralise or judge, because it's not a happy state of mind, but yeah, those values mentioned above do appear in short supply among many people, it seems.

Malcolm wrote:

People do what they. You are being judgmental, which is fine, but only if you own it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 26th, 2021 at 8:28 AM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed. And actually, what happens when blood flow is restricted anywhere in the body? That part begins to die. Why? Because of lack of air

Aemilius said:

Not lack of air but of oxygen in a dissolved liquid form, which would make it "water element" in the ancient thinking.

PadmaVonSamba said:

Buddhist "elements" is a poetic way of conceptualizing the molecular world. Oxygen itself isn't inherently a liquid, gas, or solid.

Malcolm wrote:

Not poetic, phenomenological.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 26th, 2021 at 10:07 AM

Title: Re: Acceptable ways of Transmissions (Lung, Jenang, Wang)

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

None of my teachers said recordings were valid, personally. However, I've read Garchen's explanation for why he allows empowerment via recording, and by my reading it tracks with your first paragraph.

If I was a Garchen student (I'm not) I would follow it without endless deliberation on DW.

PeterC said:

I agree, and HEGr is a great lama.

Whatever one believes about validity of these things, one should always seek at some point to meet the lama in person to receive empowerment anyway.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Yeah, I think that making a genuine effort to make those connections is, in itself a part of serious practice. Whatever the technical answer, developing that attitude towards practice would make -anything- more effective, the dogs tooth story is pretty on the nose, but it makes a point.

Malcolm wrote:

The dog's tooth story is for gullible rubes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 26th, 2021 at 10:12 AM

Title: Re: Criticism of Prayer Flags, Treasure Vases, etc.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

And when Tibetan doctors get cancer, like Chogyal Namkhai Norbu, and so on, they are first in line for allopathic treatments for it.

Sonam Wangchug said:

However, I know one tibetan doctor, the Ven paltul rinpoche who told me he has been very effective in treating breast cancer using Tibetan medicine, he gets his medicine fresh from Tibet, and not from Men-tsee-khang in dharamsala. He said though that the Tibetan medicine is effective if they had not yet gotten radiation, but if they had radiation therapy already it was less effective.

PeterC said:

Obviously it was less effective, because the fact they has received radiotherapy indicates the cancer had progressed. But Malcolm is right, if you have a solid cancer you will probably be having surgery at some point. The limitations of chemotherapy are well known.

Other diseases those are successfully cure are AIDS, Brain Tumors, Multiple Sclerosis, Hepatitis, Leukemia, Stroke, Stomach Cancer."

You seem to be mistakenly thinking that "Science" doesn't want to learn anything from traditional medicine. Nothing could be further from the truth. It's a field that has been and is studied quite extensively for ideas on treatment of diseases. If someone had achieved a functional cure for AIDS there would be researchers all over it, since there's so much research money in that field. There are to date only two known cases of a functional cure for AIDS, and they hadn't seen a Tibetan doctor.

You need to get over your belief that relying on modern science and medicine is somehow disrespectful to the Dharma. You're trying to be excessively pious and adopting a position that I doubt any of your lamas ever held.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 26th, 2021 at 9:02 PM

Title: Re: Acceptable ways of Transmissions (Lung, Jenang, Wang)

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The dog's tooth story is for gullible rubes.

Lingpupa said:

On a personal note, I would feel uncomfortable being quite so dismissive of either the story or of those you call "rubes", even if they might be less educated than I am.

There would not, of course, be many takers for a literalistic understanding of the story. But who does that? Tibetan "rubes"? I wouldn't be so sure. But if we ask, as I suspect most people would, what this amusing folk tale is telling us, it seems clear that it is making a perfectly valid point about the importance of confidence.

Malcolm wrote:

It's a fairytale, used to excuse blind faith.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 26th, 2021 at 10:19 PM

Title: Re: Acceptable ways of Transmissions (Lung, Jenang, Wang)

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It's a fairytale, used to excuse blind faith.

Lingpupa said:

I would not be in a position of insight into the motives of the tellers.

Malcolm wrote:

That's how it is presently employed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 26th, 2021 at 10:27 PM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Dan74 said:

I've been poor, sleeping rough, couch surfing and living in a tent at a "white trash" trailer park at the outskirts of the city. Doing whatever jobs I could find. Abusive employers crushing any self-esteem I still clung on to. It's not really fun, no. As always, there are different sides to it. One could amp one's anger at it all and go down the destructive path. One could tighten the belt and do the best one can. Or one can channel the anger somewhere constructive, unionise, advocate for those even less fortunate, and try to keep one's shit together.

Malcolm wrote:

The usual conservative argument, that you tiresomely repeat here, is that these issues boil down personal character, with all moral judgements that go along them, complete with a “I buckled my belt” that usually goes along with such sentiments.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 26th, 2021 at 10:48 PM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Do you realize what its like here with benefits and vacations?

Malcolm wrote:

Dan has no idea about America, just like I have no idea about Switzerland, which is why I don't comment on Swiss politics or social life. It's outside my experience.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 26th, 2021 at 11:09 PM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Queequeg said:

Working for the sake of working is brain damage, dudes.

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

Also there are so many areas where you can be a self-taught entrepreneur I taught myself code and had a 9 year career out of it. You can do the same with Graphic Design so many areas apply to that.

Malcolm wrote:

That requires computer literacy, in which, believe it or not, the US has a deficit because of the structural ways the poorest people in this country also have the least access to technology. It is so glaring, it is hard to believe it is not by design.

You also have to take into consideration that 130 million Americans, between the ages of 14 and 65, barely read at a sixth grade level. That is 40% of the US population.

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

Working a slave job like in an Amazon Warehouse to make someone else rich isn't the only way. Put together a plan and execute. There are even University courses being sold on an online platform these days.

Malcolm wrote:

That depends on being functionally literate, and 40% of Americans are not, through no fault of their own. They've been failed by the public school system.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 26th, 2021 at 11:28 PM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

I see I researched this years ago they've really dumbed down the mainstream education system for quite a few hundred years. They used to teach the Trivium which I practiced a bit also a few years ago but it made people think for themselves too much literally became autonomous. So they changed the model.

Malcolm wrote:

Theoretically, American Democracy was designed with idea that an educated populace would make good decisions in aggregate. But conservatives in the US have always sought to undermine education to keep themselves in power. First, conservative Democrats in the old South, and later, the Republican Party, when the Dixiecrats fled to the GOP over civil rights and abortion.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 1:09 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Dan74 said:

I wondered about how many of the people who left their positions did so not because of better prospects elsewhere, but because it was too much effort.

Malcolm wrote:

You sound like this:

<https://www.foxnews.com/opinion/tucker-carlson-bidens-economic-policy>

Dan74 said:

But either way, here's the core point. The incentives that we've constructed in this country over a long period of time, to be fair, but accelerating recently have a very specific effect. Those policies reward people who don't want a job and they punish people who do want a job. What they do is they degrade work. They strip it of its inherent meaning. And that's a problem in a country that is running out of things that have inherent meaning. They're telling you that your religion means nothing. Your patriotism means nothing. Your family means nothing. Now they're telling you your work means nothing? What does mean anything? And how long can a society continue that doesn't have meaning and that doesn't revere work?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 1:12 AM

Title: Re: Acceptable ways of Transmissions (Lung, Jenang, Wang)

Content:

Lingpupa said:

I would not be in a position of insight into the motives of the tellers.

Malcolm wrote:

That's how it is presently employed.

Lingpupa said:

Like I said - I don't have that breadth of insight.

Malcolm wrote:

Doesn't take insight, it just takes listening.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 1:41 AM

Title: Re: Extinction as a result of global warming

Content:

Dharmasherab said:

Just because I don't share your political views it doesn't make you more holier.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it just makes me more sensible.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 1:54 AM

Title: Re: Ordained Life as a Monastic

Content:

Dharmasherab said:

1. On the use of money - Do Gelongs use money the same way as Getshuls?

Malcolm wrote:

Tibetan monks are all Mahāyānas, therefore, they observe no restrictions over the handling of money.

Dharmasherab said:

2. Is it compulsory to do an occupation while being a monastic? Or if not is this what usually happens in the West as part of the culture among those who are ordained in Tibetan Buddhism in the West?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, all Tibetan monastics in monasteries have some kind of job, cooking, cleaning, etc. Also, every single monastic I know in the West worked some kind of job if they wanted to eat. Thus, most people who ordain, and then try to live in the West, give back their ordination.

Dharmasherab said:

3. Travelling - is it required to travel to different monasteries on a frequent basis (which costs money)?

Malcolm wrote:

Generally, no.

Dharmasherab said:

Apart from these questions please feel free to give information which you think may help me. I am particularly interested in the aspects which people may find typically unusual for an ordained life including the idiosyncrasies.

Malcolm wrote:

Tibetan monks are not very careful about Vinaya. If you want to understand this, you should read Sakya Pandita's A Clear Differentiation of the Three Codes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 1:59 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

So from everything I can tell, people are working. I see no evidence for some Great Staycation, or a systemic malaise. I think, rather, that people prefer good jobs to lousy jobs, and will leave lousy jobs for better jobs if they have the choice.

Malcolm wrote:

It is mostly small business owners who are bitching, because people are bailing on their shitty jobs for better jobs.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 2:04 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Dan74 said:

I don't think there is an equivalent anywhere else in the developed world.

Malcolm wrote:

You didn't look to hard, obviously:

<https://www.theguardian.com/commentisfree/2016/dec/20/working-homeless-britain-economy-minimum-wage-zero-hours>

<https://www.theguardian.com/society/2019/sep/15/25pc-households-at-risk-of-homelessness-are-in-work>

<https://news.sky.com/story/covid-19-how-the-pandemic-has-led-to-a-rise-in-the-working-homeless-12362730>

<https://www.bigissue.com/news/housing/how-many-people-are-homeless-in-the-uk-and-what-can-you-do-about-it/>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 2:07 AM

Title: Re: Extinction as a result of global warming

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

No, it just makes me more sensible.

Dharmasherab said:

No. That's just being arrogant and conceited.

Malcolm wrote:

All views are not equal, if they were, it wouldn't matter if one was a Buddhist or a Christian as far as liberation goes. This also applies to politics, where some views, the views of liberals who are committed to democracy, are better than the views of others, such as conservatives, who are not committed to democracy and never have been.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 2:13 AM

Title: Re: Acceptable ways of Transmissions (Lung, Jenang, Wang)

Content:

oldbob said:

Merry Christmas to all,

This is not a story showing the failure / limits of blind faith, but instead, a story of how blind faith can lead to enlightenment

Malcolm wrote:

It can't. Not ever. That's why it is a bullshit story.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 2:38 AM

Title: Re: Acceptable ways of Transmissions (Lung, Jenang, Wang)

Content:

Lingpupa said:

On a personal note, I would feel uncomfortable being quite so dismissive of either the story or of those you call "rubes", even if they might be less educated than I am.

There would not, of course, be many takers for a literalistic understanding of the story. But who does that? Tibetan "rubes"? I wouldn't be so sure. But if we ask, as I suspect most people would, what this amusing folk tale is telling us, it seems clear that it is making a perfectly valid point about the importance of confidence.

Malcolm wrote:

It's a fairytale, used to excuse blind faith.

Tenma said:

In a similar vein, wouldn't the dog tooth story be used to explain other such practices as a lama circumambulating a dog, Lama Zopa Rinpoche teaching about visualizing a stupa and circumambulating that instead, bowing down to a visualized Tathagata, regarding a pot as more precious than other disciples' offerings, Drukpa Kunley's poems regarding bowing down to a maiden's feet (amongst other things like swear words as mantras), and so forth?

Malcolm wrote:

All I know is what Āryadeva says—realization comes from view.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 2:41 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Waxing philosophical about this is just silly and bougie, to be honest...

Malcolm wrote:

Yup:

YEO, STÉPHEN. "ON THE USES OF 'APATHY.'" European Journal of Sociology / Archives Européennes de Sociologie / Europäisches Archiv Für Soziologie 15, no. 2 (1974): 279–311. <http://www.jstor.org/stable/23998532>.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 3:17 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

I'm not sure I understand your logic. Why should people stay in jobs that make them miserable simply because there are other people who would be willing to take those jobs? I rather think the converse is the tragedy: people forced to stay in jobs they hate because they have no choice.

Edit: in case it wasn't clear, this was a response to the op, not Malcolm

Shinjin said:

Not every single person quitting is doing it out of pure misery.

Malcolm wrote:

Hanging light fixtures for a living sounds like pure misery to me.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 3:23 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Waxing philosophical about this is just silly and bougie, to be honest...

Malcolm wrote:

Yup:

YEO, STÉPHEN. "ON THE USES OF 'APATHY.'" European Journal of Sociology / Archives Européennes de Sociologie / Europäisches Archiv Für Soziologie 15, no. 2 (1974): 279–311. <http://www.jstor.org/stable/23998532>.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Seems interesting. I just think it's kind of pointless focusing on people's inner attitudes about work when there are really obvious reasons that lots of people in the US hate their jobs. It just doesn't seem like much of a mystery to me.

I think a lot of people outside the US also don't realize that there is actually ton of poverty here, comparable in places to developing nations, and that a ton of people live hand to mouth, and have none of the social safety net that exists in many European countries.

Malcolm wrote:

The gist of the article is that there is a long-standing, self-serving, as well as self-contradictory capitalist narrative about apathy. On the one hand the wealthy are apathetic, because they are too wealthy (this targets the aristocrats); the poor are apathetic because, well, they are poor (targets the workers); on the other hand, if people are not politically apathetic, this is troublesome, so political apathy on the part of the poor is encouraged, while being simultaneously derided. And all of this is couched in moral judgement. And yes, it is a very bougie attitude...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 3:26 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

So from everything I can tell, people are working. I see no evidence for some Great Staycation, or a systemic malaise. I think, rather, that people prefer good jobs to lousy jobs, and will leave lousy jobs for better jobs if they have the choice.

Malcolm wrote:

It is mostly small business owners who are bitching, because people are bailing on their shitty jobs for better jobs.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Yep. I used to work for a guy like this. It was a non-profit even, lol.

He used to lament how only I would work for him based on the good working conditions (they really weren't, there were some good things but I was -very- overworked), and that others were "lazy and just wanted a good benefits package" - he had -no- benefits package and as the business was three people he didn't have to. No shit, he really said something like that. People's insane attitudes towards there jobs here are mindblowing.

I kind of relish seeing all the upset and surprise from shit employers now that they can't fill their awful jobs as easily. Hmm, I wonder what would change that.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, the bullshit, "Just work harder and you will get ahead..." carrot and stick promise of American Capitalism, as if the shitty job they are paying you for far less than a living wage is a fking favor and you are lucky to have it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 3:30 AM

Title: Re: Acceptable ways of Transmissions (Lung, Jenang, Wang)

Content:

Tenma said:

In a similar vein, wouldn't the dog tooth story be used to explain other such practices as a lama circumambulating a dog, Lama Zopa Rinpoche teaching about visualizing a stupa and circumambulating that instead, bowing down to a visualized Tathagata, regarding a pot as more precious than other disciples' offerings, Drukpa Kunley's poems regarding bowing down to a maiden's feet (amongst other things like swear words as mantras), and so forth?

Malcolm wrote:

All I know is what Āryadeva says—realization comes from view.

Tenma said:

So how come the dog tooth story is BS if there's Aryadeva's statement?

Malcolm wrote:

Blind faith has no view because it is blind.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 5:16 AM

Title: Re: Acceptable ways of Transmissions (Lung, Jenang, Wang)

Content:

pemachophel said:

Loppon-la, What is the Tibetan that you are equating with the English "blind faith"?

Malcolm wrote:

The term "blind faith" or "blind devotion" does not occur in Tibetan. But we can infer by means of analogy that it is not acceptable to the Buddha. Aryadeva quotes the Buddha in the Jñānasārasamuccaya:

Just as gold is burned, cut, and filed,
bhikṣus or scholars
thoroughly investigate and accept my words,
but not because of respect.

This has direct bearing on accepting the claims of this or that person about the effectiveness or validity of various kinds of assertions about online transmissions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 6:56 AM

Title: Re: Acceptable ways of Transmissions (Lung, Jenang, Wang)

Content:

pemachophel said:

Loppon-la, What is the Tibetan that you are equating with the English "blind faith"?

Malcolm wrote:

The term "blind faith" or "blind devotion" does not occur in Tibetan. But we can infer by means of analogy that it is not acceptable to the Buddha. Aryadeva quotes the Buddha in the Jñānasārasamuccaya:

Just as gold is burned, cut, and filed,
bhikṣus or scholars
thoroughly investigate and accept my words,
but not because of respect.

This has direct bearing on accepting the claims of this or that person about the effectiveness or validity of various kinds of assertions about online transmissions.

Johnny Dangerous said:

I didn't see a lot of assertions either way in this thread, only advice for people to generally listen to their teachers and engage with the question that way.

Malcolm wrote:

Not on this thread, but generally speaking, nothing in Buddhadharma should be accepted purely on faith just because someone said "it is so."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 7:49 AM

Title: Re: What calendar to buy for 2022?

Content:

Toenail said:

I believe there is none from Dzogchen community for 2022.

Malcolm wrote:

There will be.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 7:53 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Shinjin said:

Not every single person quitting is doing it out of pure misery.

Malcolm wrote:

Hanging light fixtures for a living sounds like pure misery to me.

Shinjin said:

Worker in question quit because of laziness and entitlement, not because he wasn't being payed a living wage or treated poorly by managers and coworkers. All the best to him in his future endeavors.

Malcolm wrote:

Maybe he just didn't like the job. I wouldn't. And the last thing I am is "lazy." Of course, I don't know the guy, but you were using him as some of exemplar, generalizing from a particular.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 9:01 PM

Title: Re: Buddhahood In This Life

Content:

Toenail said:

Can you vouch for Tulku Dakpa? How should someone planning to receive this familiarize him or herself with this lama?

Malcolm wrote:

Thus lung by Tulku Dakpa is being given at my request. Incidentally, all donations are going to go to a project to build a stupa at his center in Finland.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 9:05 PM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

That is not an explanation, that is a quantitative prediction. Your claim was that math has an explanatory function. You cannot explain without descriptive words, it's just not possible.

Malcolm wrote:

Math is a language, just like any other construct of symbols. We use math to describe all kinds of things.

Zhen Li said:

Your claim is that experimentation is direct perception.

Malcolm wrote:

Experimentation is used to confirm inferences with direct perception.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 10:22 PM

Title: Re: What holds consciousness? (pretas, devas, asuras)

Content:

Nalanda said:

In other realms without any forms or brain to hold consciousness, what holds it for pretas, devas and asuras?

What do Buddhist texts say about this?

Malcolm wrote:

Consciousness located in the center of the body, no matter what kind of body you have, according to Buddhist texts.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 10:27 PM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Shinjin said:

Dan articulated the issue well but nobody wants to listen. It's ok, no problem.

Malcolm wrote:

We listened, but some of us just don't agree with his assessment, or that his concerns are particular well-founded.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 10:32 PM

Title: Re: Criticism of Prayer Flags, Treasure Vases, etc.

Content:

ManiThePainter said:

Tibetan medicine is also not a static and unchanging entity. Promoting medical conservatism accomplishes nothing good

I believe I read a post by Malcolm once that Tibetan medicine has drawn upon influences from Galen and Ayurvedic medicine (and perhaps even Chinese?) as well as the indigenous medicines of Tibet. This makes perfect sense when we consider that medicine is primarily results-based and this has been a factor in all medical traditions (Western medicine drawing upon Islamic medicine etc.).

Point is, it would not be constructive for Tibetan medicine to reject anything it can learn from Western medicine. This should also not be taken to mean that Tibetan medicine is then obsolete. They are not mutually exclusive.

Malcolm wrote:

Tibetan Medicine is indeed derived from the medical traditions of the Byzantine Empire, China, and primarily, from Ayurveda, combined with indigenous herbal and healing traditions. It is also the case, as you point out, that Tibetan Medicine and Allopathic Medicine are not mutually exclusive. Tibetan Medicine, like Ayurveda, excels in the treatment of chronic diseases, whereas Allopathic Medicine is much better equipped to deal with acute care, such as car accidents, cancer, and other types of conditions that require immediate intervention.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 10:37 PM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

So again: where is the evidence that people are leaving their jobs en masse because they're too lazy to work?

Malcolm wrote:

[sarcasm]Obviously, we have not done enough to eradicate welfare queens from the face of the earth.[/sarcasm]

The "dignity of hard work" is a meme that should go in the dumpster right alongside the Christian "dignity of poverty."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 10:46 PM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Unknown said:

Maznevski says there are likely two broad categories of people participating in the Great Resignation: "One is people who are professionals, who are making a choice between 'good' and 'better'. The other category is people who are making a choice between something that is really terrible, unhealthy and toxic, and survival. Those are two very different dynamics."...

In other words, we may only be seeing the Great Resignation through the eyes of those who have the privilege to quit, like top executives or financially secure workers. But the reality is that it's hard to parse from the existing data which workers are quitting more and why, which can distort what's really happening, and might encourage people to boldly quit and think everything will work out for them.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.bbc.com/worklife/article/20211028-what-were-getting-wrong-about-the-great-resignation>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 10:49 PM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

So again: where is the evidence that people are leaving their jobs en masse because they're too lazy to work?

Malcolm wrote:

[sarcasm]Obviously, we have not done enough to eradicate welfare queens from the face of the earth.[/sarcasm]

Genjo Conan said:

There was an excellent book a couple years back about Reagan's prototypical welfare queen. More broadly it was about how singular examples get blown up to create broad stereotypes.

<https://www.littlebrown.com/titles/josh-levin/the-queen/9780316513272/>

Malcolm wrote:

It's obvious, but it bears repeating, most of these stereotypes are driven by racism, and many of the people repeating them are engaging in racism unconsciously.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 11:15 PM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Math is a language, just like any other construct of symbols. We use math to describe all kinds of things.

Zhen Li said:

It's purely quantitative, it is unlike almost all other constructs of symbols. It cannot describe anything without the aid of other words.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't think we are talking about the same math, you seem to talking about $2 + 2 = 4$; there are 26 varieties of math.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 27th, 2021 at 11:24 PM

Title: Re: Buddhahood In This Life

Content:

Archie2009 said:

So I assume Rinpoche will be doing the lungs from Finland. This sounds too good to pass on.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, he will, from 4:00 pm -- 9:00 pm, EET March 18, 19, 20, 21st.

A registration link will be posted here as well as on his facebook page.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 28th, 2021 at 1:03 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Queequeg said:

More seriously - Its my right as an American to not want to work like an immigrant.

Totally fine with immigrants doing the shit jobs we don't want to do.

Malcolm wrote:

Actually, they do work we are physically incapable of doing ourselves. If they didn't, food prices would be skyhigh:

In 1960, half of all the native-born men in the U.S. labor force were high school dropouts eager to take unskilled outdoor jobs in agriculture and construction. Today, fewer than 10 percent of the native-born men in the work force lack high school diplomas. But the economy still generates plenty of unskilled jobs, and most unskilled immigrants don't displace American workers. They fill niches — not just farmhand, but also chambermaid, busboy and others — that would otherwise go empty. And they support more skilled, more desirable jobs — foremen, accountants, waiters, chefs and more — at the businesses where they work and others in the surrounding community.

<https://www.nytimes.com/roomfordebate/2011/08/17/could-farms-survive-without-illegal-labor/without-immigrant-labor-the-economy-would-crumble>

Some Americans referred for jobs at Fortin's nursery couldn't do the grueling work.

"A few years ago when domestic workers were referred here, we saw absentee problems, and we had people asking for time off after they had just started," he said. "Some were actually planting the plants upside down."

<https://www.cbsnews.com/news/despite-economy-americans-dont-want-farm-work/>

All we've done is work and work to make a better life for our children, we haven't seen anything, we haven't been anywhere. Even if I'm sick or injured, there's no help, I can't even afford a dentist. We feed this country, I've never seen a fking gringo in the fields, but they don't value what we do."

<https://www.theguardian.com/environment/2021/may/13/meet-the-workers-who-put-food-on-americas-tables-but-cant-afford-groceries>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 28th, 2021 at 2:36 AM

Title: Re: What holds consciousness? (pretas, devas, asuras)

Content:

Nalanda said:

In other realms without any forms or brain to hold consciousness, what holds it for pretas, devas and asuras?

What do Buddhist texts say about this?

Malcolm wrote:

Consciousness located in the center of the body, no matter what kind of body you have, according to Buddhist texts.

Aemilius said:

Which text says it? Is it mentioned in a Sutra or an Abhidharma text?

Malcolm wrote:

Many Vajrayāna texts, the Medicine Tantra, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 28th, 2021 at 2:40 AM

Title: Re: Avalokiteśvara as the Jewel of Windhorse

Content:

Chenda said:

"Jewel of Windhorse".

Malcolm wrote:

This is interpolated by the translator, presumably on the basis of some comment. You should write him and ask .

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 28th, 2021 at 5:18 AM

Title: Re: Acceptable ways of Transmissions (Lung, Jenang, Wang)

Content:

oldbob said:

not to [be] open to innovations, what would be acceptable ways of given/receiving Transmissions according to the teachings?"

Malcolm wrote:

There are certain "innovations" that will destroy Vajrayāna teachings. So, it is necessary to exercise caution and apply scripture and reasoning to these issues. Things like receiving lungs and empowerments from recordings are unacceptable innovations. It's not really that hard to understand.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 28th, 2021 at 7:46 AM

Title: Re: What holds consciousness? (pretas, devas, asuras)

Content:

Nalanda said:

But if the being has no "form" then what body is there? Figurative body?

Malcolm wrote:

It's "held" by the faculty of life force.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 28th, 2021 at 9:32 AM

Title: Re: Acceptable ways of Transmissions (Lung, Jenang, Wang)

Content:

oldbob said:

That said, ChNN allowed as valid, Lungs (many, many times) and Worldwide Transmissions many many times - on the web that were sometimes delayed by 10+ minutes.

Malcolm wrote:

That's a dumb argument Bob, since everyone was participating at the same time even if there was buffering.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 28th, 2021 at 10:08 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

KristenM said:

But, I don't buy the tropes of calling the American kids lazy and entitled, and alternatively glorifying the immigrant kids as more hard-working and appreciative of the so-called "American dream."

Malcolm wrote:

I don't buy it either. It's still an issue comparative advantage.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 28th, 2021 at 11:01 PM

Title: Re: Acceptable ways of Transmissions (Lung, Jenang, Wang)

Content:

Aloke said:

Malcolm, I asked if you please would elaborate a little bit about this because it may seem that having Mandarava would allow someone to practice Naro Kachod (as it is in Sakya and Gelug).

Malcolm wrote:

That's not what I meant. I meant that they are both dakini practices.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 28th, 2021 at 11:46 PM

Title: Re: HHDL on Satipatthana

Content:

avatamsaka3 said:

In contrast, Mahayana is defined by the view that all dharmas are empty from the beginning precluding grasping altogether.

There are teachings on emptiness in the Pali.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no teaching in this canon on profound emptiness.

avatamsaka3 said:

There are teachings on ultimate realities in the Abhidhamma literature in the Pali, and these are understood to be empty of what is habitually imputed to them.

Malcolm wrote:

This level of teaching is realist.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 29th, 2021 at 1:07 AM

Title: Re: Did I make a mistake taking empowerment?

Content:

James84 said:

A well known Tibetan Lama came to give a talk at a local temple so I decided to go give him a listen and enjoyed his talk. Many new people to Buddhism were at the talk and while there they handed out a schedule for upcoming empowerments of Vajrasattva and Medicine Buddha and told everyone they were welcome. After talking with the monks they suggested I come and see the ceremony. I have studied some Tibetan Buddhism and have an interest in it, but also enjoy zen. I decided I would go although now I am having some doubts. I'm not sure if I am doing the practice right and I'm not sure if I took any vows? He mentioned briefly that the Samaya was to recite the mantra each day and if we can do the practice that's even better. Did I take more vows then this without knowing? Am I also stuck practicing Vajrayana now? Or am I able to focus on Zen and leave Vajrayana behind if I decide its a better fit for me? Is this common too? I thought Vajrayana was more secretive although people who mentioned they were very new to Buddhism were suggested to come to the empowerment so I'm feeling lost.

Malcolm wrote:

You are not stuck with anything.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 29th, 2021 at 3:28 AM

Title: Re: Acceptable ways of Transmissions (Lung, Jenang, Wang)

Content:

Aloke said:

I think you meant that one Dakini practice would be enough.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

As far as Naro Khacho goes, one has to receive this according to how it is given in Sakya and Geluk.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 29th, 2021 at 9:29 AM

Title: Re: Upcoming Translations

Content:

ManiThePainter said:

This is indeed very exciting.

I've been reading the introduction and Coghlan mentions that he has used three of Tsongkhapa's works as references. I wonder if this will have had any influence on the way the text is interpreted in English.

Malcolm wrote:

I did a preliminary translation of the first 7 chapters, years ago, it looks fine, other than his decision to merge dharmata and tathata into a single term.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 29th, 2021 at 11:35 AM

Title: Re: How do I know I have enough bodhichitta?

Content:

jewel123 said:

Hello! How can I determine that my Bodhichitta is sufficient? How to measure it?

What would be the way to understand if I even have it?

Thank you so much!

Malcolm wrote:

If you wish to become a buddha for the benefit of all sentient beings, you have enough bodhicitta.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 29th, 2021 at 9:08 PM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

There is nothing new here Dan. This just generational bitching, “kids these days.” Some kids find their direction in life early; some a bit later; some, never. And it’s the same in Japan and China.

For example, I was utterly bored in school. I had taught myself to read when I was a toddler. I generally finished reading my schoolbooks within the first month of school, and was often punished for reading other books in class. I was pretty much done with school by age 14, though between 15-17, I was sent to an alternative private school, from which I was expelled. I met Buddhism there, however. I drifted along for another ten years, working this shit job and that, until I attended Harvard extension, but never matriculated. I got a job in a bookstore, became a Buddhist, and drifted along into a three year retreat. After I got out, I drifted into a bad marriage, drifted out of that, and drifted back to Western Massachusetts about twenty years ago, where I had “grown up.” I’ve found a nice pool in the stream of my life, and the current so far hasn’t pushed me out. I am a well—published translator, but I didn’t plan any of it. I didn’t “work” for it, or have any sense of purpose or mission. I still don’t, other than seeing a certain body of literature translated into English. So I don’t buy, for one minute, much of what you are trying to sell. It doesn’t fit my experience or observations.

One other thing: Black people get to use the Uncle Tom metaphor, you and I don’t. It’s racist to do so. And your use of it is incorrect:

The first has to do with an erroneous interpretation of the novel. The original Uncle Tom is, well, no Uncle Tom. Like millions of his real-life counterparts at the time, Tom is enslaved. He also has courage, dignity and a strong sense of what is right. When ordered by his cruel master, Simon Legree, to whip another slave, Tom refuses; he later encourages two other slaves to escape, and when Legree confronts him, asking where they have gone, Tom refuses to reveal their whereabouts, a decision that costs him his life. Tom heartily (but not blindly) embraces Christianity, the religion of his white oppressors; but then so do most of the black Americans I know.

https://www.washingtonpost.com/outlook/dear-white-people-stop-using-the-term-uncle-tom/2018/11/15/8a68e9c0-e84e-11e8-a939-9469f1166f9d_story.html

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 29th, 2021 at 9:16 PM

Title: Re: NASA Is Hiring Religious Leaders To Prepare For Encounter With Aliens ?

Content:

Aemilius said:

The theologians are attempting to assess how major religions would react to news of alien life being found.

...

The theme of theology and ufology has gained some momentum in the ufo-platforms very recently, when do Dharma folks wake up to this?

Malcolm wrote:

We already know there is intelligent life in countless planetary systems.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 29th, 2021 at 9:48 PM

Title: Re: 84000: The Sūtra on Transmigration Through Existences (Bhava-saṅkrānti-sūtra) & Some Questions

Content:

Leo Rivers said:

It is my understanding that this text represents a unique view that the last moment of consciousness at death is IMMEDIATELY followed by the first moment of the subsequent mindstream. No afterlife. No bardos. No just biding one's time.

Malcolm wrote:

It does not necessarily follow that this sūtra is rejecting the antarabhāva.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 29th, 2021 at 10:51 PM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Dan74 said:

What you describe as your experience is probably less common than most, but no less valid. You are fortunate to have found your way, many people never do. Our world, with its bewildering array of choices sometimes leads to folks such as yourself doing great things with their lives and many others losing themselves in addiction and mental illness.

Malcolm wrote:

That's karma for you.

Dan74 said:

Apart from the ~150 young people I teach every week, I have three kids at home. I worry about them, wonder how well they are navigating the challenges this world throws their way and how well (or poorly) our culture is guiding them. This ultimately is my interest. Here, in the context of the job market, but even earlier, their studies, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, that's one reason I avoided having children. I did not want the responsibility, nor the choices it would force on me as a parent. My partner is a parent, and she has the same worries you do, though her kid is a successful professional, too driven, if anything.

Dan74 said:

And for myself, having twice moved countries and continents, having something of a foot in three cultures, I guess I have a strange life experience and a stranger outlook that most people will are not likely to relate to, or find any value in.

Malcolm wrote:

Mostly it is the judgy tone I don't relate to. Why? I would have been one of those kids in your school about whom you would have thrown up your hands in exasperation, shaking your head about wasted talent, etc., and eventually you would have just addressed my recalcitrance to some moral flaw.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 29th, 2021 at 10:57 PM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

KristenM said:

We should have been giving billions to encourage higher education and home ownership, rather than keeping people in situations where getting a Section 8 voucher apartment and staying on welfare makes more financial sense than actually getting a job because jobs pay less than the monthly government check and you don't have child care or a supportive plan to move up from your crappy job.

Queequeg said:

Homeownership - the standards for qualifying for a loan were relaxed by the Clinton and Bush Jr. administrations in order to increase home ownership. It led to the 2008 crash.

Malcolm wrote:

Thats the conservative story. The real reason the crash happened is that investment firms were taking out insurance on bad debt.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 29th, 2021 at 11:02 PM

Title: Re: Acceptable ways of Transmissions (Lung, Jenang, Wang)

Content:

oldbob said:

Many old practitioners go elsewhere.

Malcolm wrote:
It's the name of the game.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, December 30th, 2021 at 12:55 AM
Title: Re: The Great Quit
Content:
Queequeg said:
it wasn't just Lehman Bros. playing with junk bonds.

Malcolm wrote:
It was mostly that. Has the insurance companies not allowed investment firms to buy insurance on bad debts mixed with good debts (CDO, collateralized debt obligations), AIG, for example, would not have needed a bail out. In fact, every firm that needed a bail out, got one.

<https://www.institutionalinvestor.com/article/b150qdkrd30ggk/the-fall-of-aig-the-untold-story>

Queequeg said:
As of December 31, 2007, AIGFP had a portfolio of credit default swaps totaling $527 billion, of which $78 billion was written on multisector CDOs, most of which had some exposure to subprime mortgages. Indeed, it has become widely accepted that without -Cassano and AIGFP around to insure the risk that Wall Street was taking in underwriting these increasingly squirrely assets, the debt bubble might have run out of air far before it did in 2007. In its defense, which shows up, among other places, in an August 2009 court filing by law firm Weil, Gotshal & Manges in a shareholder lawsuit, AIG argues that it wrote credit default swaps on only the supersenior portion of the multisector CDOs — that is, those payments made first. Incredibly, AIGFP believed it had little real exposure “because the supersenior tranche has priority of payment ahead of even the AAA tranches, [and so] is regarded as having a better-than-AAA rating.”

Malcolm wrote:
And this also played a part:
While that last bit of legal spin is certainly debatable, what soon became crystal clear — and a major problem for AIG — was that as the value of the toxic securities it had insured before 2006 fell, AIG’s counterparties ratcheted up their demands for collateral. At the forefront of these increasingly strident collateral demands was none other than Goldman Sachs Group. Unlike every other Wall Street firm, in 2006, Goldman became nervous about the growing risks its traders perceived in the free-for-all that the market for mortgage-related securities had become. The traders’ concerns eventually bubbled up to the 30th floor of 85 Broad Street, where Goldman’s top executives had their offices, and in December 2006 the firm decided to “get closer to home,” in the words of CFO David Viniar. The firm started to make huge bets that the mortgage market would fall by shorting individual mortgage-backed securities and the newly created ABX index, which was a basket of mortgage-related securities, and by creating synthetic CDOs and selling the risk related to them to the likes of AIG.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 30th, 2021 at 12:59 AM

Title: Re: Nichiren Shonin's teachings

Content:

Aemilius said:

Is the final and complete teaching in human or some being's consciousness or is it a pile of paper?

Malcolm wrote:

There are two kinds of dharma: scripture and realization. Pretty sure QQ is referring the the last.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 30th, 2021 at 5:25 AM

Title: Re: NASA Is Hiring Religious Leaders To Prepare For Encounter With Aliens ?

Content:

Giovanni said:

If aliens exist..and mathematics suggest that it is likely, then they are subject to the Three Signs OF Being.

That's all Dharma students NEED to know. The rest is understandable curiosity.

Aemilius said:

That sounds kind of logical, but in practice it is not like that. It is more like Europeans going to South and North America or in Africa and Australia. Europeans had new conceptual constructions and their own laws and new and amazing weapons with them, and they wanted their gold and other minerals, plus workers for their plantations, and other things...

For example, we hear in some ufo-reports that slavery exists in the stars,... Its methods maybe different and quite modern, but it is still slavery.

Tenma said:

So what are you going to do if aliens exist and we encounter them?

Malcolm wrote:

See what kind of booze they like.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 30th, 2021 at 7:01 AM

Title: Re: Nichiren Shonin's teachings

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Speaking of the first Buddhist council, it is possible there was a universal council of Buddhists that determined one particular recension of the buddhavacana that is substantially "truer" than later sectarian recensions. The texts concerning it do not date from said council. To the authors of those texts mentioning it, it was long gone mythohistory.

Malcolm wrote:

Ananda did not recite these texts at the first council, for that, Vasubandhu criticizes him. The "I" in "Thus I heard this spoken at one time" of Mahāyāna sūtras is not Ananda.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 30th, 2021 at 9:02 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Dan74 said:

I will take the judgy tone on board, Malcolm,

Malcolm wrote:

This, Dan, is illustrative as to why in America structure trumps agency:

The Bill for My Homelessness Was $54,000

Debt is a hidden burden for Americans experiencing homelessness.

<https://www.nytimes.com/2021/12/29/opinion/debt-homelessness.html?>

It's the difference between Marshall Mathers and his Cranbrook-educated "gangster" competitors in 8 Mile. Even so, Marshall Mathers, being white, is far less likely to be shot during a routine traffic stop than those black kids with prep school educations.

So when you talk to Americans, you should keep that in mind. Those of us who are not blind, observe that structure limits agents more than you apparently would like to admit.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 30th, 2021 at 9:12 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Dan74 said:

. On a personal level, I don't judge - I've been hard-working and I've been very slack, it's more that I am responsible for them, to some extent.

Malcolm wrote:

When you are teacher, you do have responsibilities, of course, and boundaries.

As I have told you before, I don't know shit about Australia or Switzerland, or the USSR, and so I don't comment on their cultures or mores. But you seem very keen to comment on what goes on the US, which is understandable, because we are Rome. But you don't understand us, or our history, very well. Even Canadians, like Nemo, don't really understand the US very well, and they live next door. You might read Heather Cox Richardson's daily newsletter. Perhaps it will provide you some insight you lack at present.

.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 30th, 2021 at 10:10 AM

Title: Re: Where did the Buddha go after death? Where is the Buddha now? Where do Buddhas go after death?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Thanks Schrödinger's Yidam. Looks like I'm going to have to go keyword search using Google to scour this room. The ones you shared are good start. Thanks.

Malcolm wrote:

It's better to listen to what the Buddha said:

E ma ho! The secret of all perfect buddhas

Is that perfect buddhas do not arise.

Everything arises from nonarising,

And even arising never arose.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 30th, 2021 at 9:25 PM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Dan74 said:

Malcolm, I could say the same about your commenting on Zen here on the forum. And also that your comments on Zen have at times been instructive.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't know much about Chan or Zen, other than how it has been presented, pro and con in Tibetan sources. I've always been clear about that.

Dan74 said:

I think it's more that my take doesn't always align with yours that is the issue here.

Malcolm wrote:

You don't live here, you have no stake nor voice in the outcomes of our elections, but more importantly, you don't see us clearly and you don't grasp our history and cultures. Your comment about Uncle Toms, for example, is a clear indicator of that.

Dan74 said:

I am not really allowed to say anything?

Malcolm wrote:

You can say whatever you like.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 30th, 2021 at 9:33 PM

Title: Re: NASA Is Hiring Religious Leaders To Prepare For Encounter With Aliens ?

Content:

Sādhaka said:

If Mahayana cosmology is traditionally flat Earth, then how exactly does billions of world-systems work here?

Malcolm wrote:

Worlds have kinds of different shapes in Mahayana cosmology.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 30th, 2021 at 9:38 PM

Title: Re: Nichiren Shonin's teachings

Content:

Aemilius said:

Where does Vasubandhu say that? Elsewhere, in Mahayanasutra-alankara Commentary and in Vyakhyayukti "Principles of Exegesis", Vasubandhu defends the position that Mahayana sutras were taught by the Shakyamuni. By whom were they heard then?

I have read some passages of Vyakhyayukti that have been translated into english. I have heard that Vasubandhu discusses the origin of Mahayana in that work, but I haven't seen it with my own eyes.

Malcolm wrote:

Manjushri, Samantabhadra, etc.

Vasubandhu makes this argument in the Vyakhyayukti. There is a paper on it at academia.edu.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 31st, 2021 at 1:45 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Dan74 said:

I am also skeptical of big narratives and they generally need a lot of qualifiers. But I do think the pandemic has taken a toll on young people's mental health, which already wasn't in great shape.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, being cooped up with anxious parents won't be good for anyone's mental health.

Dan74 said:

We don't have anywhere near the levels of poverty the US (and to some extent, the UK, thanks, Malcolm) have (the gaps between rich and poor is similar to Canada, 3 times less people in % living on less than $10 a day and sort of universal health care). We also have much safer cities and much lower rate of violent crime (homicide ~10 times less per capita, rape ~ 4 times less than the US).

Malcolm wrote:

Notice the correlation?

Dan74 said:

It's a cliché but the world really has become a global village, especially the Western world, so socio-culturally I think there are the same issues everywhere, in a somewhat different mix and intensity.

Malcolm wrote:

Different histories cause similar pressures to play out very differently, in people, and in nations. Without understanding the trauma of Indian Resettlement act of 1830, then the Civil War, then the abandonment of Reconstruction in 1877, and the westward migration of a large portion of the population that supported the Confederacy, and so on, one cannot possibly hope to understand what is happening in the US today. It is no accident that the Don't Tread On Me Flag (Gadsen Flag)—favored by pro-Trumpists and the Tea Party and designed by gentleman from South Carolina during the Revolutionary War—was seized as the symbol of the delinquent branch of the GOP.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 31st, 2021 at 2:03 AM

Title: Re: Where did the Buddha go after death? Where is the Buddha now? Where do Buddhas go after death?

Content:

Nalanda said:

How is it explained in our tradition?

Would you use the trikaya to answer this question?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, you would. The mind of a buddha is the dharmakāya. The dharmakāya is free of birth and death. A nirmāṇakāya, which is what you are talking about, is an emanation of the sambhogakāya. When a nirmāṇakāya demonstrates the deed of passing into nirvana, it does not go anywhere, no more than a rainbow goes somewhere in the sky when the causes and conditions for its appearance are no longer present. Similarly, when a nirmāṇakāya manifests the deed of birth, it does not come from anywhere, not more than a rainbow comes from somewhere in the sky when the causes and conditions for its appearance are present.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 31st, 2021 at 2:09 AM

Title: Re: Where did the Buddha go after death? Where is the Buddha now? Where do Buddhas go after death?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Hey friend, is dharmakaya the same as Dharmadhatu?

<https://www.dharmawheel.net/viewtopic.php?p=322592#p322592>

Malcolm wrote:

No. The dharmadhātu (object) is the emptiness that pervades all things, whether sentient or inert. The dharmakāya (subject) is the realization of that emptiness.

Sometimes you see the dharmadhātu equated with the nature of the mind, but this is an incomplete presentation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 31st, 2021 at 2:30 AM

Title: Re: NASA Is Hiring Religious Leaders To Prepare For Encounter With Aliens ?

Content:

Sādhaka said:

If Mahayana cosmology is traditionally flat Earth, then how exactly does billions of world-systems work here?

Malcolm wrote:

Worlds have kinds of different shapes in Mahayana cosmology.

Johnny Dangerous said:

What texts cover these?

Malcolm wrote:

Avatamska

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 1st, 2022 at 2:14 AM

Title: Re: Buddhist Hell

Content:

mechashivaz said:

The hell realms are understood to be real, as real as the experiences we are having now.

Malcolm wrote:

Only as mental projections.

mechashivaz said:

I've heard it said from the Mahayana (or overall Buddhist?) POV the demons doing the torturing in these realms are mind made being, meaning, they only exist as an aspect of "ourselves", therefore there are no demons in a perpetual negative karma feedback loop. However, I'm unable to find sources for this; if any one knows where this is sourced I'd greatly appreciate the info!

Malcolm wrote:

Vasubandhu, 20 verses.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 1st, 2022 at 2:25 AM

Title: Re: Buddhist Hell

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

According to certain narratives, didn't Śākyamuni begin his bodhisattva career as a hell torturer when he decided not to torture for a while?

Malcolm wrote:

No, he started his career as a hell-being who offered to take on the suffering of others in hell, according to certain narratives.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 1st, 2022 at 3:32 AM

Title: Re: 5 Elements

Content:

Ode to Joy said:

Since the five physical elements in Buddhism are usually given as earth, air, fire, water and space (akasha) sometimes called aether, what exactly is this last one, akasha/space/ether? I

Malcolm wrote:

It is nonobstruction, according to Buddhist texts. There is also relative space, which is any kind of empty cavity.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 1st, 2022 at 3:55 AM

Title: Re: How do I know I have enough bodhichitta?

Content:

jewel123 said:

Hello! How can I determine that my Bodhichitta is sufficient? How to measure it?

What would be the way to understand if I even have it?

Thank you so much!

Malcolm wrote:

If you wish to become a buddha for the benefit of all sentient beings, you have enough bodhicitta.

jewel123 said:

Thank you very much. That wish is sufficient?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 1st, 2022 at 9:29 PM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

KristenM said:

I'm late to replying...maybe it was merely relaxing the lending standards, but it was also feeding predatory lending practices, going totally unchecked and allowing people to get way over their heads in debt. The same goes for educational loans. You can provide people with better opportunities to make sensible investments without allowing people to become victims of financial abuse. You're more an expert than I am in this stuff, though.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, for example, Wells Fargo was forcing its loan associates to give loans to basically anyone who has a pulse.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 1st, 2022 at 9:35 PM

Title: Re: Jamyang Khyentse Chökyi Lodrö's Prophecy of Things to Come?

Content:

Ode to Joy said:

The following is all self-explanatory and as stated, it explicitly stressed that this prophecy must be shared as widely as possible to all sentient beings at this time to avert the disasters predicted.

Malcolm wrote:

This text is the Tibetan equivalent of a chain letter.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 1st, 2022 at 9:39 PM

Title: Re: ChNN and his awakening

Content:

Nalanda said:

ChNN is an awakened person - Malcolm

Source: <https://www.dharmawheel.net/viewtopic.php?p=66939#p66939>

Does this mean he was a Bodhisattva....?

Malcolm wrote:

It means he was an awakened person, a bodhisattva on the stages.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 1st, 2022 at 9:42 PM

Title: Re: ChNN and his awakening

Content:

jmlee369 said:

Even in The Life and Times of Jamyang Khyentse Chökyi Lodrö: The Great Biography, you can see how students of Jamyang Khyentse Chökyi Lodro made various comments of how they did not feel devotion or faith to this or that lama, which was fine as they had no student-teacher relationship with those lamas.

Malcolm wrote:

It's fine even if they did have a teacher student relationship. Faith is not something one can or should contrive. HHDL has discussed this at length. All this insistence on mandatory pure vision just turns people into neurotic messes and cult followers.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 1st, 2022 at 9:46 PM

Title: Re: Deepen Your Daily Practice with Khenpo Samdup Rinpoche (many transmissions from Drikung Kagyu Practice Book)

Content:

chokyi lodro said:

I wonder, would this be suitable for someone like me?

I have taken Refuge (from a lovely karma kagyu lama) some years ago, although circumstances including coronavirus have prevented me from deepening that connection. I'm a bit of a lamrim aficionado, but that's just because I find it easy to understand. I've never received any transmissions; I just practice analytical meditation. Any thoughts would be welcome.

Malcolm wrote:

One should not promiscuously take lungs. One should know why one is receiving a lung for this and that practice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 1st, 2022 at 10:58 PM

Title: Re: Being on the high bhumis without knowing?

Content:

alx said:

Does anybody know when the Sambhogakaya becomes visible - which Bhumi please?

Thnx Guys Alx

Malcolm wrote:

Eighth.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 2nd, 2022 at 2:39 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Nemo said:

. A first step would be the separation of capital and the state.

Malcolm wrote:

Ummmm....that is modern day neoliberalism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 2nd, 2022 at 7:41 AM

Title: Re: 5 Elements

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The basic definition of space is found in Abhidharma. That's the one we use in Buddhadharma.

Ode to Joy said:

Since the five physical elements in Buddhism are usually given as earth, air, fire, water and space (akasha) sometimes called aether, what exactly is this last one, akasha/space/ether? I

Malcolm wrote:

It is nonobstruction, according to Buddhist texts. There is also relative space, which is any kind of empty cavity.

Ode to Joy said:

Thank you for that answer. I understand about the idea of nonobstruction but I am curious if there is any other function of this element besides simple nonobstruction and how does it exactly get differentiated from the relative space you mentioned? How is "akasha-dhatu" different from "infinite space" or unconditioned space? In a way, the two concepts sound so similar I'm not clear what is the distinction. For instance, is there any sense in Buddhism that the element akasha is similar to this Hindu definition found in the Monier-Williams Sanskrit-English lexicon: "the subtle and ethereal fluid (supposed to fill and pervade the universe and to be the peculiar vehicle of life and of sound) per Vedanta"? Or is the Buddhist concept not like the Vedanta philosophy. Another interesting point is that Sanskrit akasha apparently comes from the root kAsh meaning "to shine, to appear, to be visible, to be brilliant" whence other common words like prakAsh. Which points to something beyond vacuity or mere nonobstruction - not that the Buddhist texts have to be concerned with the etymology of the word of course, I'm not suggesting that. But that root syllable gives the impression that akasha could be a medium for light to propagate - and again I'm not suggesting that this has anything to do with Buddhist teachings. Actually, the reason I even ask is because in Phillippe Cornu's book Tibetan Astrology, he specifically (at least, his translator from French) calls akasha as "aether", rather than "space". In English, "aether" has a special meaning, quite different from "space" and I am curious as to whether Mr. Cornu had a particular reason for using this term.

And what do we make of this statement on the Wikipedia page of Akasha in the Buddhism section: "The Vaibhashika, an early school of Buddhist philosophy, hold the existence of akasha to be real"? What does it mean to say that "akasha is real" and what would it mean to claim it is not real?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 2nd, 2022 at 8:19 PM

Title: Re: Jamyang Khyentse Chökyi Lodrö's Prophecy of Things to Come?

Content:

Ode to Joy said:

The following is all self-explanatory and as stated, it explicitly stressed that this prophecy must be shared as widely as possible to all sentient beings at this time to avert the disasters predicted.

Malcolm wrote:

This text is the Tibetan equivalent of a chain letter.

Ode to Joy said:

Its teachings are self-explanatory, it is a profoundly powerful and important text, crucial at this very moment. It clearly states the benefits for those who understand and have faith, as opposed to those who don't.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, like a chain letter. There is no point in distributing such texts. They make people unreasonably fearful & paranoid.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 2nd, 2022 at 8:28 PM

Title: Re: 5 Elements

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The basic definition of space is found in Abhidharma. That's the one we use in Buddhadharma.

Ode to Joy said:

Okay. So what is the meaning of this statement: "The Vaibhashika, an early school of Buddhist philosophy, hold the existence of akasha to be real"? Is it just a case of Vaibhashika considering everything to be real, including space. And is akasha as a "mahabhuta" the same thing as unconditioned void between universes or world systems described in chapter one of Kalacakra Tantra?

Malcolm wrote:

Space is not a mahabhuta, but it is a dhatu. Unconditioned space is considered "real" in the sense that it is a dharma, that's all, along with the two cessations.

Kalacakra is an entirely different thing. It's "particles of space" are compounded. But this idea has no relevance outside of the Kalacakra system,

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 2nd, 2022 at 9:20 PM

Title: Re: Jamyang Khyentse Chökyi Lodrö's Prophecy of Things to Come?

Content:

PeterC said:

I don't have the transmission for that. What's the Tibetan title, and what makes it a sutra? Does it eg call itself མཛྙན་?

GrapeLover said:

I were just going by the format & content really, in that it starts:

I prostrate to all the Buddhas and the Bodhisattvas. Thus have I heard at one time, while the Buddha was staying at Bodhgaya...

and continues with a Mahayana sutra-style narrative of Shakyamuni. I'd thought that kind of general structure was what the OP meant by 'presented in the form of a Sutra'. That one doesn't call itself do, but there's another terma of Tennyi Lingpa with a similar format called "Phag-pa Chog-chui Mun-pa Tham-ched Nam-par Sel-wa Zhe-ja-wa Theg-pa Chen-poi Do" (sorry, don't have access to any more standardised transliteration)—— shares a title with a longer 'actual' sutra

I don't mean to make any kind of claim or implication with respect to the text in the OP though

PeterC said:

That's a fair question - whether it starts with evam maya srutam etc. I guess I was questioning whether anything which we accept as a sutra had been revealed in Tibet as a pure vision. If there is, I'm not aware of it. That's an easily falsifiable statement though.

Malcolm wrote:

There are a number of texts in the collection of dharani that likely began life as Chinese pseudographia before they were translated into Tibetan. Then there is the much disputed Shurangama Sutra; the Vajrasamadhi Sutra, a Korean composition translated into Tibetan, and so on. So there are a number of texts in the Kenjur of dubious origin.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 2nd, 2022 at 10:25 PM

Title: Re: Prophecies of Dolpopa

Content:

Terma said:

"The etymology of 'Dolpo' is still unknown, though the word is found in several religious teachings of the Buddha...the word was uttered by the Buddha in 6th century BC while predicting the birth of the great 13th century scholar, Dolpopa Sherab Gyaltzen."

Malcolm wrote:

Highly unlikely.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 2nd, 2022 at 11:10 PM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Dan74 said:

Suppose we lived in the world, where being a selfish greedy asshole was never acceptable. Where people would get viscerally ill at just imagining themselves behaving in such a way. How would capitalism work in such a world?

Well, I think there are capitalists like that. There are companies in capitalist economies that are majority worker-owned. There are companies where employees are treated like family. It is possible to run an ethical and successful business, at least sometimes.

Sure, capitalism encourages the ruthless pursuit of profit. Milton Friedman taught that the sole responsibility was to the shareholders. So we can blame the system and rightly so. But at the end of the day, it is human beings taking advantage of the system in an unscrupulous unprincipled way. Or gradually coming to do so more and more, as is often the case.

But they don't all do so.

To use a crude analogy, capitalism is bad in the same way that guns are bad - both are bound to be misused. Well, in case of capitalism, this misuse isn't even considered to be misuse. So it's kinda worse. But basically capitalism needs control in the same way that guns need control, because human beings are bound to ride roughshod over their kind. That's something we should look at in a deeper, more creative way, not instead of changing the system, but as well as, IMO.

Malcolm wrote:

What you are referring to is European-styled Capitalism, aka Coordinated Market Economies, which trade growth for stability. The US—and to a lesser extent—England, Canada, Australia and New Zealand have liberal market economies, which trade stability for growth.

But the issue with international capitalism is that the watchdogs of it, the WTO, etc., almost always side with corporate interests over national interests, under the present neoliberal principles which govern it, and to which signatories of the treaty that gave birth to the WTO are bound by law to uphold. In other words, neoliberalism favors liberal market economics on an international scale, as opposed to coordinated market economics, something which underdeveloped economies, like India, and formerly, China, actually insist upon. There are no unions in China, for example.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 2nd, 2022 at 11:21 PM

Title: Re: Prophecies of Dolpopa

Content:

Terma said:

"The etymology of 'Dolpo' is still unknown, though the word is found in several religious teachings of the Buddha...the word was uttered by the Buddha in 6th century BC while predicting the birth of the great 13th century scholar, Dolpopa Sherab Gyaltzen."

Malcolm wrote:

Highly unlikely.

Terma said:

Agreed. This is in general, a topic that one can chase their own tail over.

Malcolm wrote:

It's like the use of the Mañjuśrīmūla Kalpa. Many people are predicted using the same passages...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 2nd, 2022 at 11:53 PM

Title: Re: Jamyang Khyentse Chökyi Lodrö's Prophecy of Things to Come?

Content:

PeterC said:

Am I right in thinking that these all claimed to originate from a historical figure in this world (the Buddha, Vimalakirti, Srimaladevi, etc), and not a visionary revelation?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. The Vajrasamadhi Sūtra (Toh. 135) was is text critically analyzed by Robert Buswell in <https://press.princeton.edu/books/hardcover/9780691654164/the-formation-of-chan-ideology-in-china-and-korea>:

This book is a translation and study of the Vajrasamadhi-Sutra and an examination of its broad implications for the development of East Asian Buddhism. The Vajrasamadhi-Sutra was traditionally assumed to have been translated from Sanskrit, but some modern scholars, principally in Japan, have proposed that it is instead an indigenous Chinese composition. In contrast to both of these views, Robert Buswell maintains it was written in Korea around A.D. 685 by a Korean adept affiliated with the East Mountain school of the nascent Chinese Ch'an tradition. He thus considers it to be the oldest work of Korean Ch'an (or Son, which in Japan became known as the Zen school), and the second-oldest work of the sinicized Ch'an tradition as a whole. Buswell makes his case for the scripture's dating, authorship, and provenance by placing the sutra in the context of Buddhist doctrinal writings and early Ch'an literature in China and Korea. This approach leads him to an extensive analysis of the origins of Ch'an ideology in both countries and of the principal trends in the sinicization of Buddhism. Buddhism has typically been studied in terms of independent national traditions, but Buswell maintains that the history of religion in China, Korea, and Japan should be treated as a whole.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 3rd, 2022 at 1:29 AM

Title: Re: Jamyang Khyentse Chökyi Lodrö's Prophecy of Things to Come?

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Okay, I haven't read through this thread thoroughly; but is it written by Jamyang Khyentse Chökyi Lodrö or not?

Malcolm wrote:

No. It is a random, anonymous prediction text, posing as Buddhavacana, that circulated, like a chain letter, in Eastern Tibet in the early twentieth century.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 3rd, 2022 at 1:40 AM

Title: Re: Jamyang Khyentse Chökyi Lodrö's Prophecy of Things to Come?

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Okay, I haven't read through this thread thoroughly; but is it written by Jamyang Khyentse Chökyi Lodrö or not?

Malcolm wrote:

No. It is a random, anonymous prediction text, posing as Buddhavacana, that circulated, like a chain letter, in Eastern Tibet in the early twentieth century.

Tenma said:

Like the Middle Ages, did different Tibetan writers ever try attributing their works to famous writers (much as a random Medieval scholar might claim their text was written by Aristotle!) and was that a common practice?

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, many of Milarepa's songs are clearly forgeries. There are a number of fake Sakya Pandita texts, etc, and so on. And then, depending on your level of incredulity, many termas...not to mention Mahāyāna sūtras in general, etc., many texts attributed to Nāgārjuna, etc.

Tenma said:

Either way, people are still going to believe in this anonymous text and its mantra, whether criticized or not!

Malcolm wrote:

People believe all kinds of things.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 3rd, 2022 at 3:27 AM

Title: Re: Regular mantra as opposed to...?

Content:

Chenda said:

In BDK America's translation of <https://bdkamerica.org/download/1875>, the term regular mantra gets used from Chapter Seven (606b) onwards. While I don't think the sutra is in any way relevant to my current level of studies, I am interested in knowing the context behind the term.

Malcolm wrote:

The term in the Tibetan text is rang gi sngags, one's personal mantra, that's all, nothing more.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 3rd, 2022 at 4:03 AM

Title: Re: 5 Elements

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Space is not a mahabhuta, but it is a dhatu. Unconditioned space is considered "real" in the sense that it is a dharma, that's all, along with the two cessations.

Kalacakra is an entirely different thing. It's "particles of space" are compounded. But this idea has no relevance outside of the Kalacakra system,

Ode to Joy said:

The space-particles, specifically connected to the genesis of a new universe, are a different thing than what I was thinking of which is Kalacakra Tantra, chapter 1, verse 10 where it's stated:

"Outside of that, [the limit of wind to the border of wind], is the single void (shunyameka), separate from the three existences, without qualities and bereft of properties (nirgunam tattvahina)".

I am wondering if the space of this "nirgunam tattvahina" single void outside of our universe so specifically described here is the same as the space within the border of wind and border of Meru, the space for the continents, Meru, wheel of houses and stars. In other words, is it akasha-dhatu? Since the emphasis on lack of qualities and reality (Tattva) for this space is this meant to suggest that the space within our universe holds certain qualities and properties..such as those ascribed to "aether" in Veda and medieval West and that some people talk about today. (I understand that Abhidharma wouldnt support this idea). Especially since importance is placed on the element of wind as the basis of the universe. Does the wind element somehow condition the space element within samsara? This could have something to do with the Vedic theories and remember that in Kalacakra Buddha explains that he himself taught the 4 Vedas.

Malcolm wrote:

The dhātu of space pervades everything without obstruction, so no, that is the just the void between worlds.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 3rd, 2022 at 4:08 AM

Title: Re: Regular mantra as opposed to...?

Content:

Chenda said:

In BDK America's translation of <https://bdkamerica.org/download/1875>, the term regular mantra gets used from Chapter Seven (606b) onwards. While I don't think the sutra is in any way relevant to my current level of studies, I am interested in knowing the context behind the term.

Malcolm wrote:

The term in the Tibetan text is rang gi sngags, one's personal mantra, that's all, nothing more.

Chenda said:

And this may refer to any mantra of one's choosing?

Malcolm wrote:

No, it refers to the mantra one has received from one's ācārya.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 3rd, 2022 at 4:14 AM

Title: Re: Regular mantra as opposed to...?

Content:

Chenda said:

In BDK America's translation of <https://bdkamerica.org/download/1875>, the term regular mantra gets used from Chapter Seven (606b) onwards. While I don't think the sutra is in any way relevant to my current level of studies, I am interested in knowing the context behind the term.

Malcolm wrote:

The term in the Tibetan text is rang gi sngags, one's personal mantra, that's all, nothing more.

Ode to Joy said:

BDK's translation is from the Chinese translation, not the Tibetan. Perhaps the Chinese is also "one's own", but the translator used the word "regular". Or, perhaps the Chinese does say "regular". In either case the sense is comparable: familiarity, regularity, primacy, default, go-to, automatic, personal, main.

Malcolm wrote:

The original is in Sanskrit, now lost. Nevertheless, it just means one's personal mantra, nothing more. The Tibetan is very clear.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 3rd, 2022 at 4:17 AM

Title: Re: Jamyang Khyentse Chökyi Lodrö's Prophecy of Things to Come?

Content:

Ode to Joy said:
That line is glossed (Im not exactly sure by whom)

Malcolm wrote:
Adam's translation is much better than the one you've posted.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, January 3rd, 2022 at 6:02 AM
Title: Re: Jamyang Khyentse Chökyi Lodrö's Prophecy of Things to Come?
Content:

Ode to Joy said:
That line is glossed (Im not exactly sure by whom)

Malcolm wrote:
Adam's translation is much better than the one you've posted.

Ode to Joy said:
...the translation posted here is accompanied by the following interesting comments:

"...an American translator of Tibetan Buddhist texts, Malcolm Smith, who is a long-term student of Chogyal Namkhai Norbu, a well-known teacher of Dzogchen practices, attested to the accuracy of the translation below on the Tibetan Buddhist Altar Facebook page,⁵ saying: "There is no problem with the translation, it is fine as it is."

Malcolm wrote:
Yes, that was based on a superficial examination of the text I made many years ago. Adam's is much better since he consulted multiple editions and had the assistance of a direct disciple of JKCL, Alak Zankar Rinpoche. But if you looked a little further, I also disputed the idea that the dates were necessarily in the immediate future, etc.

I don't give much credit to prediction texts. They are too vague and can be read a hundred ways.

Ode to Joy said:
No further details are offered as to this but this indicates a sort of "mind terma" or other kind of terma which is perfectly reasonable for someone like Jamyang Khyentse Chokyi Lodro.

Malcolm wrote:
It is not a mind terma of JKCL.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 3rd, 2022 at 6:07 AM

Title: Re: 5 Elements

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The dhātu of space pervades everything without obstruction, so no, that is just the void between worlds.

Ode to Joy said:

So the kind of space indicated by the line "tad bahye shunyamekam tribhuvanarahitam nirgunam tattvahnām" ("Outside of that [the three worlds] is the single void, separate from the three existences, without qualities and bereft of properties") is simply referring to the ordinary akasha-dhatu found within the world system, as taught in Abhidharma...

Malcolm wrote:

It is referring to compounded space as dimension and area, not uncompounded space, which is unimpeded and penetrates mount Meru, and cannot be conceived of as outside the three realms, and so on.

Ode to Joy said:

I see how this is sensible, space is space after all, but still curious why such a specific description of in Kalacakra. And also curious about Philippe Cornu's use of the specific term "aether" in his Tibetan Cosmology to render the space element.

Malcolm wrote:

You'll have to ask him. For me personally, it makes no sense to confuse things by translating nam mkha' as aether.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 3rd, 2022 at 6:10 AM

Title: Re: Regular mantra as opposed to...?

Content:

Ode to Joy said:

incidentally it doesn't specify "the mantra given by one's acarya".

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, the tantra does in general.

Ode to Joy said:

One may come to adopt a mantra as one's personal, regular mantra by oneself due to karma from previous lives, without the direct intercession of a teacher in this life.

Malcolm wrote:

No, one may not. Such practice is disallowed. You should consult Sakya Pandita on this point in his Differentiation of the Three Codes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 3rd, 2022 at 10:42 AM

Title: Re: Prophecies of Dolpopa

Content:

Terma said:

Agreed. This is in general, a topic that one can chase their own tail over.

Malcolm wrote:

It's like the use of the Mañjuśrīmūla Kalpa. Many people are predicted using the same passages...

Tenma said:

Over in the sectarian spirit cult, I've seen their deceased teacher

Malcolm wrote:

Not deceased. Alive and living in Spain.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 3rd, 2022 at 11:14 AM

Title: Re: Jamyang Khyentse Chökyi Lodrö's Prophecy of Things to Come?

Content:

Ode to Joy said:

What is still not clear is where the text or perhaps body of texts originally came from

Malcolm wrote:

Correct. That alone makes it of dubious value. It may be an utter forgery.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 3rd, 2022 at 11:33 AM

Title: Re: Regular mantra as opposed to...?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

One may come to adopt a mantra as one's personal, regular mantra by oneself due to karma from previous lives, without the direct intercession of a teacher in this life.

No, one may not. Such practice is disallowed. You should consult Sakya Pandita on this point in his Differentiation of the Three Codes.

Ode to Joy said:

There are too many teachings to name which contradict that, that's alright.

Malcolm wrote:

There are no such teachings in Buddhadharma which contradict this. You can't name even one. For example, the Vajramāla Tantra states:

A mantra is not to be given to a sentient being who has not received empowerment, nor should the wise show an image or a book to such a one.

Similar admonitions occur in Kālacakra, Abhidhānottaratantra, Mahāmudrātilaka, and so on. As far as practicing secret mantra goes without a proper teacher and empowerment, this is strictly prohibited for the same reason. The Mahāmudrātilaka states:

Whoever pridefully elucidates the tantras and upadeśas to one lacking empowerment as soon as they die, both master and disciple go to hell, even if siddhi is obtained.

And:

If one pleases the guru, the king of mantras will doubtlessly be attained.
If it is not attained in that way, it is faulty, and even if one receives a mantra, it will not be effective.

Even in lower tantras, it is the same, for example, the Vairocana-abhisambodhi states:

Without empowerment, the source of secret gnosis, there is no mantra.

And of course in the Tenjur, there are hundreds of such admonitions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 3rd, 2022 at 12:58 PM

Title: Re: 5 Elements

Content:

Ode to Joy said:

So..."nirgunam tattvahinam" space - devoid of qualities and apart from reality - is compounded space?

Malcolm wrote:

Actually, according to the commentary by Lama Dampa (who composed the most extensive Tibetan commentary on the text), it refers to a void with lacks qualities. Hinam in this context refers to the ordinary five elements, tattva refers to the principle (tattvahnim, de nyid kyis dman pa'o) which is the single void (stong pa gcig pu) that pervades the five elements, so it is not space at all in the normal sense of the term. So this translation you are relying on is also slightly incorrect. It should be something like:

Outside that is the single void, separate from the three realms, the principle devoid of qualities that [pervades] the inferior [elements].

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 3rd, 2022 at 8:58 PM

Title: Re: How can you tell if a lama is a monk? Confused about robes.

Content:

Nalanda said:

I know white robes are for lay teachers.

But sometimes you see orange/red colored robe wearing lama...with hair or long hair.

Then I learned that Dzongsar Khyentse Rinpoche isn't a monk.

So how can I know if a lama is a monastic?

Are khenchen, khenpo and geshe monastics?

Malcolm wrote:

You can figure it out based on whether they wear a lower robe (monk) or a half chuba (upasaka).

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 3rd, 2022 at 9:08 PM

Title: Re: How can you tell if a lama is a monk? Confused about robes.

Content:

Nalanda said:

I know white robes are for lay teachers.

But sometimes you see orange/red colored robe wearing lama...with hair or long hair.

Then I learned that Dzongsar Khyentse Rinpoche isn't a monk.

So how can I know if a lama is a monastic?

Are khenchen, khenpo and geshe monastics?

KathyLauren said:

One way would be to ask, either the lama himself or someone in his entourage.

Geshe is an academic degree, like doctor of divinity. In the old days, most geshes would have been monks. That is less true nowadays. I knew a couple of geshes who were lay people. Both had been monks in the past, but had given up their robes when they moved to the West. The geshe degree, of course, remains.

Om mani padme hum
Kathy

Malcolm wrote:
In general, in the Gelug school, if you give up your monastic vows you also give up the title "Geshe."

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, January 3rd, 2022 at 9:19 PM
Title: Re: How can you tell if a lama is a monk? Confused about robes.
Content:

Malcolm wrote:
In general, in the Gelug school, if you give up your monastic vows you also give up the title "Geshe."

KathyLauren said:
Interesting. Of the two gentlemen I knew, both Gelugpa, one went by the title 'Lama', and the other, who taught at the local university, went by 'Professor'. So that makes sense.

However, in both cases, their students referred to them as 'geshe-la', as a sign of respect, in recognition that the degree was something earned by hard work.

Om mani padme hum
Kathy

Malcolm wrote:
Yes, but in Old Tibet, their career would have been finished.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, January 3rd, 2022 at 10:12 PM
Title: Re: Jamyang Khyentse Chökyi Lodrö's Prophecy of Things to Come?
Content:
Ode to Joy said:
Everything about the sutra...

Malcolm wrote:
It is not a sūtra. One, the system of animal years is unknown in any text uttered by the Buddha. Two, the so-called "mantra" in the text is clearly just a Tibetan phrase with svāhā appended to it. Not harmful in and of itself, but also not a valid mantra.

Ode to Joy said:

What other texts in the other collected works of other masters are you going to question as to their validity, and on what grounds? You will need to second guess the whole process of how such collections are compiled, the knowledge and qualifications of the individuals and communities doing the compiling and so forth.

Malcolm wrote:

There are many dubious texts found in the collected works of various people, just as there are dubious texts found in the Kenjur and Tenjur. Buton excluded hundreds of tantras from the Kenjur because, in his opinion, they were of dubious origin. Ngorchen Kunga Zangpo gives an entire list of kriya tantras, including the Tārā Tantra, which are forgeries, in his opinion.

For example, I have found texts authored by Tibetans that were repurposed as termas. In one case, a core text of Lamdre authored by Sachen Kunga Nyingpo was repurposed and included in the collected termas of a rather famous 17th century tertön, whose name I won't mention, because some feelings might be hurt.

There are a lot of politics around what gets included and excluded from a given collection. So yes, there is often a "need to second guess the whole process of how such collections are compiled, the knowledge and qualifications of the individuals and communities doing the compiling and so forth..."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 3rd, 2022 at 10:50 PM

Title: Re: 5 Elements

Content:

Ode to Joy said:

So..."nirgunam tattvahnā" space - devoid of qualities and apart from reality - is compounded space?

Malcolm wrote:

Actually, according to the commentary by Lama Dampa (who composed the most extensive Tibetan commentary on the text), it refers to a void with lacks qualities. Hīnam in this context refers to the ordinary five elements, tattva refers to the principle (tattvahnā, de nyid kyis dman pa'o) which is the single void (stong pa gcig pu) that pervades the five elements, so it is not space at all in the normal sense of the term. So this translation you are relying on is also slightly incorrect. It should be something like:

Outside that is the single void, separate from the three realms, the principle devoid of qualities that [pervades] the inferior [elements].

Ode to Joy said:

Thanks for that citation it's interesting. The whole topic is difficult to think about I'm still not clear on the difference between ordinary space and the single void. If a single void pervades even the akasha dhatu does that mean something is being pervaded and what could that thing be? Otherwise it would be space pervading space which sounds counterintuitive. What is the exact difference between the single void and the ordinary akasha element - is there a difference? Maybe this is why you find the word aether to distinguish it from "the principle devoid of qualities that pervades the inferior elements" because people are trying to comprehend space pervaded by space.

Malcolm wrote:

The commentary makes it clear that this single void is not the same as "space with qualities." Other than that, there is not much else on this point.

Basically, the quality of "formed" space is sound, whose particles correspond to taste, and who permeate the other four elements and provide space between objects. See Ornament of Stainless Light, Khedrup Norzang Gyatso, pg. 79, and page 87m ,where he discusses this passage specifically. He says this space, which is a dimension where the particles of the five elements are disconnected, is a "mere emptiness" or as I translated above, a void.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 3rd, 2022 at 11:33 PM

Title: Re: Regular mantra as opposed to...?

Content:

Ode to Joy said:

Those are all good citations, the meaning of which is clear and well known and undisputed.

For my part, I submit The Sutra that Brings Together the Contemplations of All the Buddhas, where there are statements such as:

""Great monk, I have heard that the skillful means of the teacher is a path in which one practices howsoever. Can that be understood as just the present [state]?" "

"To which came the reply, "O son of good lineage, it is indeed suitable to say that the [path] is whatever occurs in the present".

Malcolm wrote:

This is not a citation that proves your point on any level, you've also misunderstood the context of the passage, which concerns Black Liberation (thar pa nag po) and his servant Danpag.

In any case, you will not find in any Dzogchen text your central claim:

One may come to adopt a mantra as one's personal, regular mantra by oneself due to karma from previous lives, without the direct intercession of a teacher in this life.

This is just your own fabrication, with no support from any source.

I am afraid here, you are closer to Black Liberation than Danpag.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 3rd, 2022 at 11:41 PM

Title: Re: When did the Buddha teach the Prajñāpāramitā and Pure Land Sūtra?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Possibly. It strikes me as odd that there isn't a Mahāyāna "life of the Buddha" text, or several, that outline the supposed chronology of the sūtras to the śrāvakas and the bodhisattvas.

Malcolm wrote:

Sapan gives somewhat of an account. But I have not taken to the time to summarize it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 4th, 2022 at 12:38 AM

Title: Re: Being on the high bhūmis without knowing?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

There are three stages: weak, medium, and strong. The first is practiced in secret, the second, in your back yard, only the third can be carried out in the marketplace.

Sādhaka said:

Is this all explained in the above-mentioned text?

Of course there are a few extensive texts on Lamdre out there in English, however I'm not practicing Sakya Lamdre as of now, and currently have other studies; therefore am hoping that Jetsun Drakpa Gyaltsen's text is available in English.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

It is not yet available in English.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 4th, 2022 at 2:56 AM

Title: Re: Jamyang Khyentse Chökyi Lodrö's Prophecy of Things to Come?

Content:

PeterC said:

Very, very little is self-explanatory. One point that is absolutely not self-explanatory in this text is which century it refers to, for instance.

Ode to Joy said:

Since the Master revealed the text in the 1950s

Malcolm wrote:

No, he collated it from two different source texts, as the 1979 colophon clearly states:

ston mchod thub pa'i dbang po'i ma 'ongs lung bstan 'di la yi ge 'dra min gnyis snang yang...

Literally, "Though this prediction by the supreme teacher, the powerful Muni, appears in two different texts..."

In fact, the introduction to the four volume set of predictions published by Palyul (lung bstan phyogs btus/. TBRC W3CN532. 4 vols. dpal yul rdzong /: dpal ya chen o rgyan bsam gtan gling /, [n.d.]. <http://tbrc.org/link?RID=W3CN532>) states on page 1:

Here, though the mother text of this prediction of the future that originates in sūtra was found in Ngari in the past, because its origin was unknown, it was neglected for some time. Later, the mother text was found in a collection of prediction texts at Rahor, Trakgo Dzongtsang, with slightly different wording. Jamyang Khyentse Chokyi Lodo collected these (phyogs bsdus mdzad) in India...

Then this introduction just goes on to say it was published in Delhi in 1979, etc. And also it adds that as the later mother text (the one from Rahor) was thought to be uncorrupted, this is the version presented in the Karma Kagyu publication.

Thus, it is most definitely not a modern text, it is most definitely not a terma, and it is most definitely one of two witnesses—one from Ngari in western Tibet, one from Rahor, in Kham—collected, but not revealed, by Jamyang Khyentse Chokyi Lodo.

Ode to Joy said:

it is perfectly reasonable to accept that it refers to a current 60 year cycle, and not hundreds of years in the future.

Malcolm wrote:

In fact, since there are different versions of the text which predate JKCL, these predicted events could have happened hundreds of years ago, especially since it is claimed it is a prediction sourced in the sūtras.

Ode to Joy said:

Benedictory Verses for The Clarifying Light: A Prophecy of the Future
by Jamyang Khyentse Chökyi Lodrö

Malcolm wrote:

This a separate text.

This prediction text also exists in a form attributed to Dujdom Rinpoche, Jigdral Yeshe Dorje.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 4th, 2022 at 3:01 AM

Title: Re: Regular mantra as opposed to...?

Content:

Ode to Joy said:

As for your comments on Dzogchen, I submit that the entire body of Dzogchen outlines a path that is entirely non conceptual and beyond mind, and it states endlessly that it transcends the dialectics of the lower 8 vehicles

Malcolm wrote:

It does not mean that empowerment is not required. Empowerment is required in Dzogchen, point is made very clearly in the Self-Arisen Vidyā Tantra, the Sound Tantra, which is the root tantra of all Dzogchen teachings, and others.

It also does not provide justification for your initial claim, " One may come to adopt a mantra as one's personal, regular mantra by oneself due to karma from previous lives, without the direct intercession of a teacher in this life."

You really ought not argue with me about such issues. You are just making yourself look pompous and foolish.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 4th, 2022 at 3:11 AM

Title: Re: Jamyang Khyentse Chökyi Lodrö's Prophecy of Things to Come?

Content:

Tenma said:

What was the origin of these Benedictory Verses, out of curiosity?

Malcolm wrote:

The smon lam is not an issue at all.

Tenma said:

Is the term "prophecy" correct in translation like in English or are there some underlying things we need to know about rather than just meaning a "prediction"?

Malcolm wrote:

ma 'ongs lung bstan: literally a declaration (vyākaraṇa, lung bstan) about what has not yet come to pass (anāgata, ma 'ongs).

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 4th, 2022 at 3:24 AM

Title: Re: Jamyang Khyentse Chökyi Lodrö's Prophecy of Things to Come?

Content:

Tenma said:

What was the origin of these Benedictory Verses, out of curiosity?

Malcolm wrote:

The smon lam is not an issue at all.

Tenma said:

Is the term "prophecy" correct in translation like in English or are there some underlying things we need to know about rather than just meaning a "prediction"?

Malcolm wrote:

ma 'ongs lung bstan: literally a declaration (vyākaraṇa, lung bstan) about what has not yet come to pass (anāgata, ma 'ongs).

Tenma said:

I'm assuming that the "declaration about what has not yet come to pass" in the smon lam may refer to something else I guess rather than the alleged prophecy text in that case?

Also, what other prophecy texts in the Himalayas have been made in the past with similar sorts of wording, styles, themes, etc., whether on the local level or not? And would you count Delog Drolma as a visionary who would expound ma 'ongs lung bstan even though she was more about saying who was where at birth or are there different categories of a "visionary"? And how different would this be from Tibetan divinatory terms?

Malcolm wrote:

Generally, most predictions come from termas, can be quite cryptic, often include events that have already happened to bolster their credibility, are sometimes employed by tertons for political leverage, and so on.

Most (but not all) delogs are uneducated Tibetan women, ordinary people who wake up from comas, and report visions of the six realms, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 4th, 2022 at 3:29 AM

Title: Re: Jamyang Khyentse Chökyi Lodrö's Prophecy of Things to Come?

Content:

Ode to Joy said:

But as with any prophecy, one wouldn't know until the time comes; just as for instance the Buddha's predictions about the Abrahamic lineage given in the Kalacakra Tantra

Malcolm wrote:

Was written in the mid-10th century, so no.

Ode to Joy said:

as with the line of Indian kings prophesied in the Manjushri Mula Kalpa;

Malcolm wrote:

Was written no earlier than the 7th century, so no.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 4th, 2022 at 3:48 AM

Title: Re: Regular mantra as opposed to...?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It also does not provide justification for your initial claim, " One may come to adopt a mantra as one's personal, regular mantra by oneself due to karma from previous lives, without the direct intercession of a teacher in this life."

Ode to Joy said:

If so, then one should not be able to adopt the mantra "Om Mani Padme Hum" as one's personal, regular mantra by oneself.

Malcolm wrote:

In the sūtra where it is first found, the Karaṇḍavyūha, it is specified that the maṇi must be bestowed in a mandala rite. The text also discusses the qualities of the master (ācārya), maṇḍalas, etc. So, correct, the maṇi should not just be adopted as a mantra. In practice, people do so, and it is somewhat harmless, but it does not actually correspond how it is taught in that text.

In the tantra in question, a personal mantra is the mantra given during empowerment.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 4th, 2022 at 4:13 AM

Title: Re: Regular mantra as opposed to...?

Content:

Ode to Joy said:

If so, then one should not be able to adopt the mantra "Om Mani Padme Hum" as one's personal, regular mantra by oneself.

Malcolm wrote:

In the sūtra where it is first found, the Karaṇḍavyūha, it is specified that the maṇi must be bestowed in a mandala rite. The text also discusses the qualities of the master (ācārya), maṇḍalas, etc. So, correct, the maṇi should be just be adopted as a mantra. In practice, people do so, and it is somewhat harmless, but it does not actually correspond how it is taught in that text.

In the tantra in question, a personal mantra is the mantra given during empowerment.

Tenma said:

How does a complex, secret mantra become a commonplace mantra recited by everyone such as that of the Maṇi mantra? Any recommended sources on this phenomenon?

Malcolm wrote:

Largely because of Atisha. He revived the practice in Tibet.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 4th, 2022 at 7:02 AM

Title: Re: Regular mantra as opposed to...?

Content:

ManiThePainter said:

Malcolm holds the Acharya title and has been practicing Dzogchen and Buddhism for decades. Anyone who browses these forums regularly also knows that he is an extremely meticulously translator, having published several books, and that he places a lot of importance on terminology, grammar and semantics.

Tell us, what are your Buddhist credentials?

Ode to Joy said:

Appeal to authority fallacy isn't going to help you here I'm afraid, we are talking about something specific. He has stated that people reciting the 6 syllable mantra is "somewhat harmless" - not even beneficial - which is an extraordinary statement, completely against the Buddhist spirit, I am sure you can agree. Or perhaps you don't think that laypeople should be allowed to recite the Mani mantra. Fine...you're allowed to think that.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. Reciting some mantras without transmission is somewhat harmless, and not of much benefit. Dharanis on the other hand, for the most part do not require transmission, but vidya mantras always do.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 4th, 2022 at 10:15 AM

Title: Re: Regular mantra as opposed to...?

Content:

Ode to Joy said:

another poster here say that it WAS alright to recite dharanis from the Tantra class?

Malcolm wrote:

Another poster did not say this. Another poster said certain dharanis. The mani is a vidya mantra, it requires transmission. It's that simple.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 4th, 2022 at 10:57 AM

Title: Re: Regular mantra as opposed to...?

Content:

Ode to Joy said:

So in other words that sutra, Karandavyuha, is indeed found in the sutra section. Why did you say it was in the Tantra section?

Malcolm wrote:

I didn't. I said it was considered a kalpa tantra. There is no independent section for this class of tantra. I explained what that meant.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 4th, 2022 at 11:46 AM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Well, no, photons are empirically detectable, unlike say, Mt. Meru.

Ode to Joy said:

Whether or not photons do empirically exist (there are many Buddhist sutra teachings on the nature of light which in my opinion are much more valuable than modern scientific ones), Mt Meru isn't meant to be empirically detectable, it's a spiritual phenomenon.

Malcolm wrote:

So it isn't responsible for the sky being blue?

Ode to Joy said:

What troubles me is why these very easily understood teachings which are founded on simple principles cause people so much trauma. And why people are aggrieved at Buddhists who follow the Buddha's teaching. Shouldn't they also be aggrieved at the Buddha for teaching a spiritual cosmology and not the current nihilist one - which has, after all, only existed for the last 500 out of the countless years and kalpas of our universe.

Malcolm wrote:

Buddha didn't teach a "spiritual cosmology." Buddhists taught a version of samsara's three realms based on an axial mountain cosmology, which has since been falsified.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 4th, 2022 at 11:49 AM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Ode to Joy said:

To describe him as having limited knowledge is not right at all.

Malcolm wrote:

It's perfectly fine. As Dharmakirti quipped, Buddha's omniscience did not extend to knowing the number of worms in the ground.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 4th, 2022 at 12:02 PM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

(I'm not sure if he understood the moon wasn't really a 'disc' as it appears in visualization practice).

Although he seemed a bit perplexed, as the night went on, the lama was very eager to learn all sorts of new things he'd never been taught growing up in a monastery.

As lovely as Buddhist cosmology is, with the universe having directions like East and West for example, and as useful as Buddhist astrology might be for offering a unified theory of everything, it all pales compared to even the limited scientific knowledge we have of the known universe so far.

Sorry, I know that's going to piss some folks off.

Ode to Joy said:

In fact, there are many grounds to suppose that the Sun and Moon are indeed discs.

Malcolm wrote:

Such as?

Ode to Joy said:

Instead, a nihilistic universe

Malcolm wrote:

Universes can't be nihilistic.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 4th, 2022 at 12:06 PM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It's perfectly fine. As Dharmakirti quipped, Buddha's omniscience did not extend to knowing the number of worms in the ground.

Ode to Joy said:

In the Shurangama Sutra,

Malcolm wrote:

It's a Chinese pseudographia, so I really don't care what it says.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 4th, 2022 at 12:13 PM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Ode to Joy said:

"Buddhist cosmology is doubtlessly true because it comes from the teachings of the Buddha,

Malcolm wrote:

Fallacy of argument from authority, I, and most people, don't consider ancient Buddhist texts on cosmology authoritative descriptions of the physical universe.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 4th, 2022 at 12:17 PM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Ode to Joy said:

On the contrary, Buddhist cosmology is entirely spiritual: Tell me how many times the word "Spiritual" occurs below in these excerpts from A Cascading Waterfall of Nectar. I

Malcolm wrote:

It really doesn't matter how many times Trinley Norbu uses the word "spiritual." It does not make his point of view about Buddhist cosmology valid.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 4th, 2022 at 12:20 PM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It's a Chinese pseudographia, so I really don't care what it says.

Ode to Joy said:

Well, since you mentioned Dharmakirti stating that Buddha couldnt count the number worms in the ground, and there is a Buddhist classic, whether it's to your liking or not, in which a statement is found that Buddha could count the number of raindrops that fell in a day, you can't blame a person for comparing the two - they eminently invite contrast and comparison.

Malcolm wrote:

The difference is that Dharmakirti was a real person, whereas the Buddha of the Shurnagama is a fictional character.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 4th, 2022 at 10:39 PM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Aemilius said:

"The Śūraṅgama Sūtra was translated into Tibetan...

Malcolm wrote:

A Tibetan translation is no guarantee of an Indian source: example, Vajrasamādhī Sūtra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 5th, 2022 at 12:12 AM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Aemilius said:

It is not merely a matter of faith.

Malcolm wrote:

It is purely a matter of faith.

Aemilius said:

There are hundreds, thousands or hundred thousands and millions of people who have practiced various spiritual disciplines and have attained the capabilities of seeing with the celestial eye (divya chakshu) or hearing with the celestial ear (divya shrotra) or seeing the past lives or future lives (purvanivasanusmriti). This is factual evidence for the phenomenon of extra sensory perception.

Malcolm wrote:

No, there is no evidence whatsoever, since there is no empirical evidence of such capacities among human beings at all. There are only anecdotal claims. Anyone can claim anything about such abilities, but since no one can verify their claims, such claims do not form proofs of any sort. Such claims merely form narratives, which some people adopt and other people ignore. Then of course there are some people that are completely bereft of common sense and reason who still insist the earth is flat, that the sun and moon rotate around Mt. Meru, and so on, using arguments that sound just like Roman Inquisition, who convicted Galileo of heresy:

In February 1616, an Inquisitorial commission declared heliocentrism to be "foolish and absurd in philosophy, and formally heretical since it explicitly contradicts in many places the sense of Holy Scripture". The Inquisition found that the idea of the Earth's movement "receives the same judgement in philosophy and ... in regard to theological truth it is at least erroneous in faith" https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Galileo_Galilei

Aemilius said:

There is only a reluctance or a denial of studying and investigating it. And a reluctance of investing money and resources in the studying and researching this aspect of reality.

Malcolm wrote:

Not so. There is also a lack of ability to test such claims, since such claims could only be verified by people with similar faculties, and not by people lacking them. This requires that people who lack such faculties accept on faith the claims of people who claim to possess such faculties, since the former cannot verify the claims of the latter at all, as you admit below, and the latter can never prove their claims to the former, which is something you overlook.

Aemilius said:

We would quite certainly get results in this field, if equal amount of money was spent in this field, as is spent in the construction of particle accelerators and other gadgets of that kind.

Malcolm wrote:

Probably not, since one could not create a proper double-blind study, and so on, to test such claims. And we already know, according to the Abhidharmakośa and so on, that beings in a lower realm are incapable of perceiving those in higher realms, absent some special power, which cannot be reliably reproduced.

Aemilius said:

There is knowledge that is not accepted by the great multitudes, and it is still knowledge. Buddha speaks of the Arhats or Aryas that are above the great multitudes of people. They are like someone who has climbed on a great mountain peak and can see far from it. They can see what the ordinary people and the vast multitudes on the plains cannot see.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and so ordinary people, those not blinded by religion, generally don't accept things they cannot personally verify, either through direct perception or inference. And it is certainly the case that one's liberation does not hinge upon whether one accepts or rejects Meru cosmology and so on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 5th, 2022 at 1:25 AM

Title: Re: When did the Buddha teach the Prajñāpāramitā and Pure Land Sūtra?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Sa skya Paṇḍita's perspective is as follows:

First, he taught the śravaka sūtras for 7 years, beginning in Varanasi. Then, during the reign of Bimbisara, the Buddha taught Prajñāpāramita for 10 years. Then, he taught the third turning for 28 years, with various sūtras of both provisional and definitive import. So, he divides the Buddha's teaching into three periods.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 5th, 2022 at 2:12 AM

Title: Re: When did the Buddha teach the Prajñāpāramitā and Pure Land Sūtra?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

What is Sa skya Paṇḍita's understanding of what "the third turning" is? The tantras or another particular class of sūtra?

Malcolm wrote:

Sutras, such as the Lanka, and other cittamatra texts, and those sutras such as the Samadhirāja.

He considered the cittamatra sūtras of the third turning and the first turning provisional, and third turning sutras like Samadhirāja and the second turning definitive.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 5th, 2022 at 2:19 AM

Title: Re: Tsigdön Dzö translations?

Content:

Rune said:

Hello all

Does anybody know anything about the presumably in process translations of Tsigdön Dzö, by Richard Barron

Malcolm wrote:

I think that project was cancelled for lack of funding.

Rune said:

and David Germano?

Malcolm wrote:

To be published by Wisdom, or so I have heard.

But you will never get a better explanation than Khenpo Namdrol's commentary.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 5th, 2022 at 3:16 AM

Title: Re: Tsigdön Dzö translations?

Content:

Rune said:

May I ask, are you considering translating further Tantras? I've been looking around, but there's nothing definite out there. Hope it's OK that I ask you directly, then

Malcolm wrote:

I am presently working on the root text and commentary to the sgra thal 'gyur, aiming for a publication date of no later than mid 2024.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 5th, 2022 at 4:10 AM

Title: Re: When did the Buddha teach the Prajñāpāramitā and Pure Land Sūtra?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

What is Sa skya Paṇḍita's understanding of what "the third turning" is? The tantras or another particular class of sūtra?

Malcolm wrote:

Sutras, such as the Lanka, and other cittamatra texts, and those sutras such as the Samadhirāja.

He considered the cittamatra sūtras of the third turning and the first turning provisional, and third turning sutras like Samadhirāja and the second turning definitive.

Könchok Thrinley said:

Since C mentioned it, did Buddha teach the tantras also physically to few students or through manifestations?

Malcolm wrote:

According to tradition, the Buddha taught the lower tantras in the deva realms as a bhikṣu, and the higher tantras such as Kalacakra and Guhyasamāja in sambhogakāya forms, meaning, this was not visible to ordinary people or even bodhisattvas below the 8th bhumi.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 5th, 2022 at 5:24 AM

Title: Re: Killing a living being when it's sick

Content:

seeker242 said:

100% fatal case of rabies.

Malcolm wrote:

Sometimes, killing IS the Mahāyāna thing to do. And if one refuses, then one breaks one's Mahāyāna vows. It depends, it's case by case. If a horse breaks its leg, it is best to kill it, and so on. A rabid dog or any other animal must be put down. A human intent on harming other humans out of sheer malice, well, if you have a gun...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 5th, 2022 at 5:30 AM

Title: Re: Why don't Buddhists believe in Buddhist cosmology?

Content:

Tenma said:

In the Indian and Tibetan understanding of the elements, were they meant to be literally taken as the 5 literal elements (like the body is literally made out of fire, water, etc.) or more their "essences" (like the Aristotelians and Medievalists with a "fiery property" of a plant making it rise, the "earthy property" of objects making them fall down, etc.)?

Malcolm wrote:

According to the Indian Buddhist, and later Tibetan ideas of the elements, all matter is made up of the four elements in differing proportions. The four elements never exist as differentiated substances, they are properties of matter——solidity (earth), liquidity (water), heat (fire), and motility (air)——according to the Kośa. The most extensive Buddhist teachings on the elements is in Dzogchen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 5th, 2022 at 9:43 AM

Title: Re: Living Dzogchen Masters?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Hello,

Does anyone know who the genuine, accessible, Dzogchen Masters are of today?

The ones who don't appear to have any controversy surrounding them.

The ones who will take on Western students.

The ones who are part of a legitimate lineage.

The ones who have reached completion. (I realise this one is speculative)

Thanks for your help.

Regards

Malcolm wrote:

Chokyi Nyima, etc.,

Rabjam Rinpoche,

Tulku Dakpa,

Erik Pema Kunsang,

Khenchen Namdrol

Sangye Khandro and lama Chonam

Sogan Rinpoche

Just off the top of my head

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 5th, 2022 at 12:48 PM

Title: Re: Living Dzogchen Masters?

Content:

gelukman said:

Before covid you could fly to chengdu for 400usd. From chengdu you are very close the ancient tibetan gompas. I would start there.

Malcolm wrote:

That works for those fluent in Tibetan, for others, not so much.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 5th, 2022 at 10:13 PM

Title: Re: True Mind is No Mind

Content:

yinyangkoi said:

After I read this my mind stopped and there was just reality, I was so present and awake like never before. It stopped after a few moments.

Malcolm wrote:

Your mind needs a brake job.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 5th, 2022 at 10:26 PM

Title: Re: True Mind is No Mind

Content:

yinyangkoi said:

After I read this my mind stopped and there was just reality, I was so present and awake like never before. It stopped after a few moments.

Malcolm wrote:

Your mind needs a brake job.

yinyangkoi said:

What does that mean? You mean the brakes are old and it doesn't brake enough? I should brake more?

It was like a melt away or disappearing.

Malcolm wrote:

It was a joke...since you said it did not stop immediately...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 5th, 2022 at 11:28 PM

Title: Re: Living Dzogchen Masters?

Content:

naljor said:

When it comes to vast and deep knowledge of dzogchen, like three series, i remember only one - ChNN, otherwise there are many great teachers with knowledge and lineages of transmissions.

Malcolm wrote:

Unfortunately, that ship sailed in 2018. The world has been a shit show ever since.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 5th, 2022 at 11:44 PM

Title: Re: Living Dzogchen Masters?

Content:

naljor said:

Yes, we all know...but we have to work with circumstances

Malcolm wrote:

In this case, how? He is not a "living" dzogchen master, other than in the hearts of his direct disciples.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 6th, 2022 at 1:18 AM

Title: Re: Living Dzogchen Masters?

Content:

gelukman said:

Not forgetting Yungdrung Bon. If you are after dzogchen, probably easy to connect.

Some have issues to see it as one school within others like nyingma, sakya, kagyu, geluk.

And what school is very kuntuzangpo? Yungdrung Bon...Maybe more than nyingma?

Malcolm wrote:

It depends on how one is approaching Dzogchen, as a school or a vehicle. If approached as vehicle, then the name, Buddhist or Bon does not matter much, not to mention, Nyingma etc. If one approaches it from the point of view of school, then Dzogchen becomes limited by sectarian considerations.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 6th, 2022 at 3:14 AM

Title: Re: Living Dzogchen Masters?

Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

I can't say for certain that they are masters, but Alan Wallace and Lama Surya Das are some names that come to mind. I am not a dzogchen practitioner, but I have listened to a few talks from them and they are quite inspiring.

Malcolm wrote:

The term "Dzogchen master" does not exist in Tibetan. It is cribbed from the earlier neologism, "Zen master," coined by D.T. Suzuki and appearing first in an article he wrote for the Journal of the Pali Text Society in 1906.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 6th, 2022 at 5:12 AM

Title: Re: Upcoming Translations

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

other than his decision to merge dharmata and tathata into a single term.

ManiThePainter said:

I've been thinking about this recently. What is the significance of translating them all as "reality"? Does it alter the meaning of the text based on the context?

Patacelus said:

One is naked reality and one is suchness. They seemed to me to be speaking to the nature of reality in general and the nature of a specific thing in particular. But that is just my own sense of it, it could be that they are technical terms in tantra and translating them both that way was just sloppy. I'm guessing someone with more knowledge will answer eventually. I'm looking forward to it.

Malcolm wrote:

Dharmatā is a complicated technical term, used in many contexts. It is usually contrasted with dharmin. In short, in the context it is used in Buddhapalita is illustrated in one case in this way. Take this passage, which is a very minor point, but I would do it differently:

དེ་ལྟར་དུ་གཞན་ནས་ཀྱང་འདུས་བྱས་དེ་ནི་སྤྱོད་པའི་ཆོས་ཀྱང་ཡིན། དེ་ནི་རབ་ཏུ་འཇིག་པའི་ཆོས་ཀྱང་ཡིན་ནོ་ཞེས་འདུ་བྱེད་ཐམས་ཅད་སྤྱོད་པའི་ཆོས་ཅན་ཡིན་པར་གསུངས་སོ། །དེའི་ཕྱིར་འདུ་བྱེད་ཐམས་ཅད་སྤྱོད་པའི་ཆོས་ཉིད་དེས། ཐམས་ཅད་བརྟན་པ་ཉིད་ཡིན་ཏེ།

Coughlin (pg. 174, line 3-6) has:

Furthermore, he also declared in another [sūtra]:

Conditioned states are also deceptive phenomena. They are also phenomena that fully distintegrate.

This states that all formations are deceptive phenomena. Since all formations are deceptive phenomena, therefore, all of them are false.

I would have rendered this passage in this way:

In the same way, elsewhere [he stated] that all formations are deceptive phenomena (dharmin), "The compounded are also deceptive phenomena (dharma), and they are also phenomena that totally perish." Therefore, since all formations have deceptive natures (dharmatā), all are false.

Otherwise, his translation is just fine.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 6th, 2022 at 11:30 PM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

Queequeg said:

I've read and heard a lot of names for the events in D.C. on Jan. 6, 2020, but I think Cornpone Intifada might be the best one by far. It captures the ridiculousness of those events, even as serious and dangerous as they were.

Malcolm wrote:

well, this question from the Atlantic article is easily answered:

[W]hy some of the best-educated men and women in the country, the most invested in its power, the luckiest, have overseen the destruction of their institutions like spoiled teenagers smashing up their parents' house on a weekend bender.

Christian Nationalism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 7th, 2022 at 5:15 AM

Title: Re: Living Dzogchen Masters?

Content:

Miorita said:

I don't think it's permissible to fragment my opinion. It's personal and not up for discussion.

Malcolm wrote:

"Nothing is true, everything is permitted."

--Last testament of Hassan I Sabbah

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 7th, 2022 at 5:29 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, you can have a great career as as grifter, just like this guy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 7th, 2022 at 6:40 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Shinjin said:
What do you disagree with?

Malcolm wrote:
This dude is just a grifter, that's all.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, January 8th, 2022 at 12:02 AM
Title: Re: Living Dzogchen Masters?
Content:

Tata1 said:
I dont think this is good advice at all. One should not choose a teacher based on his rank and fame.

Malcolm wrote:
On the other hand, it is a bit easier to research such teachers and make sure of their qualifications. After all, selecting a guru is not a personality contest, it's about their qualifications to transmit the Dharma.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, January 8th, 2022 at 12:16 AM
Title: Re: The Great Quit
Content:

Dan74 said:
it's really hard to imagine that people can't rally around an issue like this. Even in the US.

Malcolm wrote:
Especially in the US. The US thrives on international conflict. We have since the beginning. It is the organizing principle of this country. And when we don't have an external enemy we turn on ourselves: such as the lull after the War of 1812, there were the Indian Clearances; in the lull after the Mexican-American War, the Civil War; after reconstruction, the labor struggles; luckily, we had two world wars in a row, and that kept us occupied, and then there was the Cold War. But after the downfall of the USSR, we again turned on ourselves, principally, the conservatives started economic and social witchhunts, predicated on the false narratives of Christian Nationalism.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, January 8th, 2022 at 12:32 AM
Title: Re: Living Dzogchen Masters?
Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

I can't say for certain that they are masters, but Alan Wallace and Lama Surya Das are some names that come to mind. I am not a dzogchen practitioner, but I have listened to a few talks from them and they are quite inspiring.

Nalanda said:

Lama Surya Das - Google the name. There's been some sad news on that front.

Malcolm wrote:

Yeah, the Dzogchen lap dance goes a little too far, considering he was one of the first people to go after Sogyal back in the early nineties.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 8th, 2022 at 10:22 PM

Title: Re: How does Buddhism describe the mechanics of the mind, consciousness, etc.

Content:

Aemilius said:

What are you aiming at? In ancient India there was no knowledge of the functioning of brains and nerves.

Malcolm wrote:

That's not true. You need to read the Sushruta Samhita.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 8th, 2022 at 11:15 PM

Title: Re: What is your opinion on the presentation of Buddhism by StudyBuddhism by Dr. Berzin?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

I found his distinction between Dharma-lite and real-thing Dharma to be very helpful.

Malcolm wrote:

This distinction was coined back in the hoary old days of alt.buddhism.tibetan, Punnadhammo used the term "Buddh lite" in a post, 8/4/99. It was being used consistently by 2001.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 8th, 2022 at 11:27 PM

Title: Re: Living Dzogchen Masters?

Content:

Tata1 said:

I dont think this is good advice at all. One should not choose a teacher based on his rank and fame.

Malcolm wrote:

On the other hand, it is a bit easier to research such teachers and make sure of their qualifications. After all, selecting a guru is not a personality contest, it's about their qualifications to transmit the Dharma.

SilenceMonkey said:

And some people seem to have the karma of getting involved with charlatans.

Maybe it's a bit rare to find a great dzogchen master who goes unknown within the Buddhist community. Hidden mahasiddhas...

Malcolm wrote:

There has not really been a true Dzogchen master since Longchenpa. Everything since then has been footnotes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 9th, 2022 at 1:23 AM

Title: Re: mostly Raw organic vegan diet for mental health?

Content:

Artziebetter1 said:

I have had ocd since I was about 9 or 10 years old and it really makes my life hard and not fun.

Malcolm wrote:

Generally OCD is considered a seizure disorder. An adjunct to controlling that is a balanced diet that includes cooked grain and vegetables, fruits, and some amount of animal protein.

A raw diet will most certainly aggravate your condition.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 9th, 2022 at 3:58 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

I would be cautious about painting all Christians as conservative ideologues.

Malcolm wrote:

We are talking about Christian Nationalists aka Dominionists, like Josh Hawley, Steve Bannon, Ted Cruz, etc.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dominion_theology

See:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 9th, 2022 at 5:48 AM

Title: Re: Living Dzogchen Masters?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

There has not really been a true Dzogchen master since Longchenpa. Everything since then has been footnotes.

Lingpupa said:

You love a grand, sweeping pronouncement, don't you Malc? I'm totally overawed.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, considering that there has not been a lineage of holder of Dzogchen since Longchenpa and won't be another one until Ḍākinī Matīśrī in the distant future, I stand by my grand, sweeping pronouncement. And of course, this grand, sweeping pronouncement isn't mine at all. It belongs to Khenpo Ngachung.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 9th, 2022 at 6:17 AM

Title: Re: Living Dzogchen Masters?

Content:

Lingpupa said:

You love a grand, sweeping pronouncement, don't you Malc? I'm totally overawed.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, considering that there has not been a lineage of holder of Dzogchen since Longchenpa and won't be another one until Ḍākinī Matīśrī in the distant future, I stand by my grand, sweeping pronouncement. And of course, this grand, sweeping pronouncement isn't mine at all. It belongs to Khenpo Ngachung.

climb-up said:

What does it mean to be a lineage holder?

I've never been clear on this.

Malcolm wrote:

In this case it means a bstan 'dzin, a śāsanadhara. The actual name of the Buddha's teaching is śāsana. A śāsanadhara is one who "holds the teaching." There is a gap in the prediction in the Sound Tantra of the holders of the Dzogchen teaching between Longchenpa and the ḍākini mentioned above. Recently, Khenchen Namdrol mentioned this, apologizing slightly while stating that even tertons cannot be considered "holders of the Dzogchen teaching" in the sense mentioned above. Of course everyone who has received Dzogchen teachings is a brgyud 'dzin, paramparādhara, or holder of the lineage in a minor sense.

But in reality, what I mean is that no one other than Longchenpa could have written his treasures, with all his finesse and mastery of the seventeen tantras and their commentaries, not to mention the whole of Buddhist scholarship. There has been no Tibetan like him since he passed away in the middle of the 14th century. I am not talking about realization. Thousands of Tibetans have realized Dzogchen teachings to the highest level. I am talking about true mastery expressed for the benefit of sentient beings, and frankly, no one compares to him. Chogyal Namkhai Norbu himself said that among Tibetans, Longchenpa is the final word on Dzogchen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 9th, 2022 at 6:28 AM

Title: Re: no conditioned entity can arise from anything other than another conditioned entity?

Content:

Artziebetter1 said:

if you can demonstrate this rationally, I will know for sure a creator God cannot exist.

Malcolm wrote:

It's fairly straight forward, an unconditioned cause must produce all of its effects simultaneously, because if it exists in time, it is conditioned, and not unconditioned. It can only produce these effects once, because if they are produced serially, then this means the unconditioned has parts, making it conditioned. There are all kinds of arguments you can read in Pudgala chapter of Abhidharmakoshabhasya, the Tattvasamgraha, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 9th, 2022 at 6:32 AM

Title: Re: Living Dzogchen Masters?

Content:

climb-up said:

Thank you

Malcolm wrote:

And I should add, the aforementioned Sound Tantra is the original Dharma teaching of this eon, from whence all other Dharmas spring. So there is that too.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 9th, 2022 at 11:26 PM

Title: Re: Living Dzogchen Masters?

Content:

Sādhaka said:

I think that perhaps what is implied here, is Longchenpa being the most recent Major Lineage Holder of Dzogchen.

Maybe something similar to the Buddha Shakyamuni being the most recent Uttamanirmanakaya, vs other subsequent Buddhas being Nirmanakayas; with the next Uttamanirmanakaya being Maitreya.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, what I am really pointing out, along the lines mentioned, is that no one since Longchenpa has demonstrated his level of mastery of Dzogchen teachings, not to mention his grasp of general Buddhist teachings. He is the gold standard. No one matches Longchenpa's achievements in writing and systematizing Dzogchen for later generations. Everyone who comes later, including Bonpos, are not even building on Longchenpa's work, it is so definitive. At best they just summarize and simplifying what he covers extensively.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 12:06 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

Episcopalians right off the top of my head. Anyway, I honestly don't believe there is an interest to look at this with a mind that is open. This is just a personal opinion I have, based on my interaction with interfaith groups I have worked with.

Malcolm wrote:

Umm....you live in New Haven, two hours south of me. We are New Englanders, and Christians in most of New England are also Democrats.

Your interfaith experience would be very different in GA, OK, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 12:19 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

My response to the reasons for 1/6 was that it was primarily racially motivated, not religiously motivated. People of all religions use their faith to bolster their ignorance, hatred, and greed. That's the topic at hand.

Malcolm wrote:

Christian Racism, as well as their support for slavery, is a well known phenomena: Slaves, obey your earthly masters with respect and fear, and with sincerity of heart, just as you would obey Christ. 6 Obey them not only to win their favor when their eye is on you, but as slaves of Christ, doing the will of God from your heart. 7 Serve wholeheartedly, as if you were serving the Lord, not people, 8 because you know that the Lord will reward each one for whatever good they do, whether they are slave or free. This passage, among many others was used to justify slavery in the old South.

<https://www.nbcnews.com/think/opinion/racism-among-white-christians-higher-among-nonreligious-s-no-coincidence-ncna1235045>

KeithA said:

Even at a glance, the Racism Index reveals a clear distinction. Compared to nonreligious whites, white Christians register higher median scores on the Racism Index, and the differences among white Christian subgroups are largely differences of degree rather than kind.

Malcolm wrote:

So yes, Christians are more racist than non-Christian. One cannot so neatly separate people's motivations. A racist who is a Christian is a Christian racist.

There were plenty of bibles and invocations of Jesus at the insurrection as well.

<https://www.rollingstone.com/culture/culture-features/capitol-christian-right-trump-1121236/>

KeithA said:

Within hours, insurrectionists had surrounded the Capitol, beaten police, battered down barricades and doors, smashed windows and rampaged through the halls of the Capitol, breaching the Senate chamber. In video captured by The New Yorker, men ransacked the room, rifling through senators' binders and papers, searching for evidence of what they claimed was treason. Then, standing on the rostrum where the president of the Senate presides, the group paused to pray "in Christ's holy name." Men raised their arms in the air as millions of evangelical and charismatic parishioners do every Sunday and thanked God for allowing them "to send a message to all the tyrants, the communists and the globalists, that this is our nation, not theirs." They thanked God "for allowing the United States of America to be reborn."

Malcolm wrote:

Christians are not our friends.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 12:23 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

My opinion still remains that racism, and not religion, is root cause of 1/6. Racism is what brought the last administration to power, and what keeps it's figurehead in place.

Malcolm wrote:

They are completely intertwined in White Christianity in America as above. And I am quite certain that European Christians are more racist than nonbelievers there as well.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 12:29 AM

Title: Re: mostly Raw organic vegan diet for mental health?

Content:

Artziebetter1 said:

I have had ocd since I was about 9 or 10 years old and it really makes my life hard and not fun.

Malcolm wrote:

Generally OCD is considered a seizure disorder.

Charlie123 said:

Hi Acarya,

OCD as a seizure disorder sounds a little strange. Can you elaborate?

Malcolm wrote:

<http://www.anncaserep.com/full-text/accr-v3-id1541.php>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 12:59 AM

Title: Re: What is the motivation for Tibetan Buddhists to join the monastics?

Content:

zerwe said:

Lay or ordained, CEO or panhandler, renunciation takes place in the mind. The very same renunciation described at the level of sutra is considered vital to practice in the Vajrayana.

Without it, practice becomes another form of attachment for that of this life and future lives.

Malcolm wrote:

What is being renounced here is samsara. But in Vajrayāna, one does not renounce pleasures of the senses because it is a path of transformation, not a path of renunciation. This is why we have yogas of eating, washing, passion, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 1:40 AM

Title: Re: What is the motivation for Tibetan Buddhists to join the monastics?

Content:

Damchö_Dorje said:

Is there anything we renounce in Vajrayana? Like anger? If a person is predisposed to negativities instead of what's positive, does that get transformed as well?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 2:06 AM

Title: Re: What is the motivation for Tibetan Buddhists to join the monastics?

Content:

zerwe said:

Yes, but it would seem that too often we have people who forget fundamentally what is being renounced and where or how this is taking place.

Malcolm wrote:

Hence the word "practice." Renunciation cannot be contrived. It is a realization, not a rule.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 2:20 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

"Christians are not our friends"

Then sadly, we are no better.

/

Malcolm wrote:

I don't bear animosity towards Christians. I just don't trust them en masse. The history of Christianity is far too bloody for me to imagine that if Christian Nationalists gained power in this country, as in seizing the gvt., that many of them would do much in the face of oppression, just as few Christians openly opposed the Nazis and the Fascists. Some did of course, but not enough.

We are Buddhists, we do not accept one thing they believe. They don't like that. You may not remember this but several Buddhist temples were burnt down in Western MA. and Southern Vt. in the late 70's. Personally, I am more comfortable with atheists.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 2:31 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

On Christian racism and historical slavery , the abolitionists were also Christian and some saw the abolition of slavery as connected to their beliefs.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, mainly in New England, as the Puritans objected to slavery, and this was baked into New England culture, despite the presence of slaves in the Massachusetts Bay Colony beginning in the early 18th century.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 2:47 AM

Title: Nepal's biggest stupa turns to biodegradable prayer flags

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

https://www.france24.com/en/live-news/20211218-nepal-s-biggest-stupa-turns-to-biodegradable-prayer-flags?mc_cid=e1820c16ee&mc_eid=d8758c9896

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 3:54 AM

Title: Re: no conditioned entity can arise from anything other than another conditioned entity?

Content:

Artziebetter1 said:

in the atemporalist picture, all of God's successive creation and acts in history are seen as aspects of one integrated atemporal act of will. since God in classical abrahamic theism (Maimonides, Aquinas, Ibn Sina etc) is self-diffusive, its outpouring will tend toward the greatest quantity of being possible. God's being is qualitatively infinite, therefore His creativity is infinitely inexhaustible.

Malcolm wrote:

Casuistry as argument is common among theists.

Something unconditioned cannot perform actions at all. At the end of the day, you will be required to admit you cannot prove the absurd thesis above, and will have to resort to argument from faith in the end.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 4:49 AM

Title: Re: Is there a 'true self'?

Content:

Nalanda said:

But rather the buddha-nature is universal self (大我) or true self (真我), and it is something which is shared by every sentient being. The true-self is interconnectedness between all sentient beings.

Malcolm wrote:

No, this is just Hinduism in Buddhist drag.

The statement before it does not even make sense:

The tathagatagarbha sutras state that buddha-nature (the tathagatagarbha) is atman (self), but not as in the conventional sense of self as in individual and unique which is tied to the 5 aggregates which are actually illusory and emptiness.

There is no person to be found apart from the five aggregates, so a putative buddhanature that is not part of the five aggregates can't connect sentient beings at all.

Buddhanature is just a name for the potential of a given sentient being to realize buddhahood.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 5:13 AM

Title: Re: Is there a 'true self'?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Is it Buddhist to say "5 aggregates is self".

From Sujato's recent post (Jan 7, 2021)

For the EBTs, on the other hand, it is precisely the five aggregates that are taken as self. Indeed, it seems as if they were originally developed as a scheme for classifying self theories. If you had tried to argue, "What you take as self is nothing more than the aggregates" you would be met with, "Yes, exactly, that is my self."

Malcolm wrote:

They are the basis for imputing a self.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 5:18 AM

Title: Re: Is there a 'true self'?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

No, this is just Hinduism in Buddhist drag.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Yes, this is the standard objection.

Malcolm wrote:

This is the standard objection to the misconception that buddhanature is some transpersonal woo woo.

SY, the tathātatagarbha sūtras themselves error check against this misconception. You might try reading them sometime.

As the Uttaratantra and the Lankāvatara point out, tathātatagarbha was taught so that people would not become discouraged by the length of the path, or for those who are frightened of emptiness, like our pal here, SY.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 5:25 AM

Title: Re: no conditioned entity can arise from anything other than another conditioned entity?

Content:

Artziebetter1 said:

why can something unconditioned perform no actions?

Malcolm wrote:

Because actions have parts.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 5:33 AM

Title: Re: Is there a 'true self'?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Oh I fully accept self-emptiness as the nature of observable universe. No problem there. I just don't think it's the final word on Truth.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, because emptiness terrifies you, so you cling to some idea that there must be something which is not empty, that you label "true."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 5:37 AM

Title: Re: Is there a 'true self'?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Wow. This can easily be weaponized by Hindus against newbies like me. Which seems to be what's happening here.

Malcolm wrote:

SY is our resident buddhanature troll. He hangs out under the buddhanature bridge, waiting to suck the marrow out of bones of any unlucky traveller who happens to invoke him with the word, "buddhanature."

Sometimes, he is also our resident buddhanature zombie, who staggers around looking for brains to eat...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 5:40 AM

Title: Re: no conditioned entity can arise from anything other than another conditioned entity?

Content:

Artziebetter1 said:

if buddhas exist in a state of unconditioned Nirvana

Malcolm wrote:

They don't exist in some woo woo state of unconditioned nirvana. Buddhas arise from causes and conditions. Nirvana is simply the cessation of afflictions. Buddhahood is the realization of emptiness, the unconditioned nature of conditioned phenomena.

Artziebetter1 said:

then how can they act like incarnating, teaching the path, bodhicitta action etc ?

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhahood has causes and conditions, which is why buddhas can act.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 5:51 AM

Title: Re: Is there a 'true self'?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Oh I fully accept self-emptiness as the nature of observable universe. No problem there. I just don't think it's the final word on Truth.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, because emptiness terrifies you, so you cling to some idea that there must be something which is not empty, that you label "true."

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Well, if you put it that way, then I guess I'm guilty as charged!

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, of course you are. You are an advocate of Yogacāra substantialism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 8:18 AM

Title: Re: no conditioned entity can arise from anything other than another conditioned entity?

Content:

Artziebetter1 said:

if buddhas exist in a state of unconditioned Nirvana

Malcolm wrote:

They don't exist in some woo woo state of unconditioned nirvana. Buddhas arise from causes and conditions. Nirvana is simply the cessation of afflictions. Buddhahood is the realization of emptiness, the unconditioned nature of conditioned phenomena.

Artziebetter1 said:

then how can they act like incarnating,teaching the path,bodhicitta action etc ?

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhahood has causes and conditions, which is why buddhas can act.

Artziebetter1 said:

So buddhas have complex awareness and intelligence/perception?because by definition a unconditioned mindstate or mind would be utterly simple intelligence or awareness.

Malcolm wrote:

An unconditioned mind is impossible. Minds exist in time, even a Buddha's continuum is conditioned, albeit, unafflicted.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 8:27 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

Sādhaka said:

however Jan. 6 was an false-flag IMO.

Malcolm wrote:

That's the stupid thing you've ever said. Some people are so fcking dumb they will even deny the evidence of their senses.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 8:33 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

Because, quite simply, it isn't all Christians. Again, a completely closed mind, no room for growth. Just an ossified point of view, no different than the most hardened Christian fundamentalist.

Malcolm wrote:

No growth necessary. We've all grown up surrounded by Christians and Christianity, it's not a mystery. They can believe whatever they want. But Christian Nationalists are dangerous, and history shows that religious groups tend to stick together even when they are engaged in atrocities, for example Buddhists in Myanmar.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 8:37 AM

Title: Re: Is there a 'true self'?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Well, if you put it that way, then I guess I'm guilty as charged!

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, of course you are. You are an advocate of Yogacāra substantialism.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Lol, I love how you say that like it's a bad thing.

Malcolm wrote:

It's not a bad thing, it's just where you are at. It's a stage. It's just not definitive by any measure.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 8:44 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

Because, quite simply, it isn't all Christians. Again, a completely closed mind, no room for growth. Just an ossified point of view, no different than the most hardened Christian fundamentalist.

Malcolm wrote:

No growth necessary. We've all grown up surrounded by Christians and Christianity, it's not a mystery. They can believe whatever they want. But Christian Nationalists are dangerous, and history shows that religious groups tend to stick together even when they are engaged in atrocities, for example Buddhists in Myanmar.

KeithA said:

Christian Nationalist are dangerous - yup

Religious group think can result in atrocities - yup

Malcolm wrote:

On the other hand, it's demonstrable that Buddhist tolerance towards other religions has lead to Buddhism being undermined by the intolerance of others. The old paradox of tolerance. Firm believer in separation of religions and politics, all religion, including Buddhism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 8:47 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

Because, quite simply, it isn't all Christians. Again, a completely closed mind, no room for growth. Just an ossified point of view, no different than the most hardened Christian fundamentalist.

Malcolm wrote:

No growth necessary. We've all grown up surrounded by Christians and Christianity, it's not a mystery. They can believe whatever they want. But Christian Nationalists are dangerous, and history shows that religious groups tend to stick together even when they are engaged in atrocities, for example Buddhists in Myanmar.

KeithA said:

Christian Nationalist are dangerous - yup

Religious group think can result in atrocities - yup

Malcolm wrote:

On the other hand, it's demonstrable that Buddhist tolerance towards other religions has lead to Buddhism being undermined by the intolerance of others. The old paradox of tolerance. Firm believer in separation of religions and politics, all religion, including Buddhism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 8:51 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Why I have more of a affinity with Ron Paul-style libertarian conservatives than trump's ilk.

Ron Paul, even though a christian himself, is more about the values of 'the founding fathers' (whatever limitations these may have had aside for the moment); e.g. freedom of religion and so forth.

Malcolm wrote:

Demonstrably, the founders advocated freedom FROM religion, not freedom of religion. Freedom of religion is just a necessary consequence of the establishment clause of the first amendment.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 8:54 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

Christian Nationalist are dangerous - yup

Religious group think can result in atrocities - yup

Malcolm wrote:

On the other hand, it's demonstrable that Buddhist tolerance towards other religions has lead to Buddhism being undermined by the intolerance of others. The old paradox of tolerance. Firm believer in separation of religions and politics, all religion, including Buddhism.

KeithA said:

Also agree...where we seem to differ is that I am of the opinion that 1/6 had little do with religion, and that the root cause was racism. I might broaden that to fascism. Religion is just the thing some fascists are hiding behind. Of course, I could be completely wrong. We are just shooting the proverbial doo-doo here. I am no political or social scientist.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and I am arguing that racism is baked into Christian Nationalism, so much so you cannot separate them. You have three ingredients, the flour is Christianity, the salt is racism, the yeast is Trump.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 9:21 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

Also agree...where we seem to differ is that I am of the opinion that 1/6 had little to do with religion, and that the root cause was racism. I might broaden that to fascism. Religion is just the thing some fascists are hiding behind. Of course, I could be completely wrong. We are just shooting the proverbial doo-doo here. I am no political or social scientist.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and I am arguing that racism is baked into Christian Nationalism, so much so you cannot separate them. You have three ingredients, the flour is Christianity, the salt is racism, the yeast is Trump.

KeithA said:

.

There is our disagreement. I think the recipe is faulty. Christian Nationalists prone to violence make up a small fraction of the Christian Population.

Malcolm wrote:

Christian Nationalism is itself the problem. The violence is simply an expected consequence of their belief system.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 9:55 AM

Title: Re: Is there a 'true self'?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Now that we're done talking to Dolpopa....

How is the dharmakaya and buddhanature not actually atman? I mean I get that it lacks self-hood in a sense, but we ARE positing an unchanging, fixed, eternal, essence of sort and merely branding it as "emptiness" is it not?

Malcolm wrote:

Emptiness does not exist apart from things to be empty, so, no, we are not positing some fixed essence.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 10:37 AM

Title: Re: Is there a 'true self'?

Content:

Nalanda said:

^^ Not to be obtuse or totally beginner on you but please forgive me when I say what a normal secularist would say...

How is that "empty" not anything but what secularists are saying. That what happens after all this (existence) is a big nothing. Empty. As in totally devoid of essence, everything ceasing their essentiality toemptiness.

Malcolm wrote:

Emptiness means things do not exist inherently. Apart from things to be empty, there are is no emptiness either. Emptiness is also empty.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 11:22 AM

Title: Re: Is there a 'true self'?

Content:

Nalanda said:

I mean nevermind that this Baptist pastor is a known anti-semite, anti-LGBTQ, and a fundamentalist character, but his analysis of what Buddhists are saying is exactly what you would expect from someone like him and secularists when they hear (or what we would say 'misunderstand') the Buddhist position:

Malcolm wrote:

Emptiness is a "secret" teaching. It's not for outsiders. It's not to be discussed with nonbuddhists.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 11:28 AM

Title: Re: Is there a 'true self'?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

The Nirvāṇa Sūtra and Śūraṅgama Sūtra indeed suggest that Buddha-nature is a Self.

The affirmation of Self is just part of a fourfold affirmation about Buddha-nature: it is Permanent, Bliss, Self, and Purity. This is because the Buddha is not a saṃsāric phenomenon, and thus the marks of existence, impermanence, suffering, and no-self, do not apply to it.

Malcolm wrote:

Nirvana also lacks self. All dharmas lack identity. Nirvana is a dharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 11:48 AM

Title: Re: Is there a 'true self'?

Content:

Nalanda said:

^^ Not to be obtuse or totally beginner on you but please forgive me when I say what a normal secularist would say...

How is that "empty" not anything but what secularists are saying. That what happens after all this (existence) is a big nothing. Empty. As in totally devoid of essence, everything ceasing their essentiality toemptiness.

Malcolm wrote:

Emptiness means things do not exist inherently. Apart from things to be empty, there are no emptiness either. Emptiness is also empty.

Nalanda said:

Emptiness is also empty. How do critics respond to this historically and what is our rebuttal?

From my own mind, 0×0 is 0 or $0 + 0$ is 0. So saying emptiness is also empty is saying nothing as it is only affirming the first/main point. We might as well say "really empty" or absolute empty which means we are just reaffirming what our critics say. (that after death, there's just really nothing. aka annihilation, cessation, end of all experience.) The pastor above would just say "That's what I said. You are saying after death, there's just nothing nothing absolute nothing." Even if we say he's wrong, his answer is the natural response upon hearing what we believe.

Unless by saying emptiness is also empty we are saying it is NOT empty, which is a suggestion that there is something, in which case, we're back in the sphere of argumentations.

And finally if we insist on; it is not something/anything, AND it is also not empty/nothing, but that empty is also empty, then aren't we just subjecting ourselves to absurdity and contradiction which delegitimizes our place in any serious intellectual/philosophical conversation?

My head hurts.

Not disagreeing. I'm learning. Hope you can help.

Malcolm wrote:

Emptiness is empty because it is also a dependent designation, in other words, emptiness also lacks inherent existence. There are sixteen kinds of emptiness. It's best if you study some Madhyamaka under a qualified instructor before asking more questions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 12:02 PM

Title: Re: Is there a 'true self'?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

The Nirvāṇa Sūtra and Śūraṅgama Sūtra indeed suggest that Buddha-nature is a Self.

The affirmation of Self is just part of a fourfold affirmation about Buddha-nature: it is Permanent, Bliss, Self, and Purity. This is because the Buddha is not a saṃsāric phenomenon, and thus the marks of existence, impermanence, suffering, and no-self, do not apply to it.

Malcolm wrote:

Nirvana also lacks self. All dharmas lack identity. Nirvana is a dharma.

Zhen Li said:

Yes it does, but it is also unconditioned. The reason why Nirvāṇa is described as being Permanence, Bliss, Self, and Purity is different from the kind of reasoning you are employing here. The Self, in those affirmations, is not self—not-self.

Malcolm wrote:

Since the compounded is not established, it follows the un compounded is not established. The terminology of permanence, bliss, self, and purity is intentional, not definitive, not to be taken literally or at face value.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 12:06 PM

Title: Re: Is there a 'true self'?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Emptiness is also empty. How do critics respond to this historically and what is our rebuttal?

From my own mind, 0×0 is 0 or $0 + 0$ is 0. So saying emptiness is also empty is saying nothing as it is only affirming the first/main point. We might as well say "really empty" or absolute empty which means we are just reaffirming what our critics say. (that after death, there's just really nothing. aka annihilation, cessation, end of all experience.) The pastor above would just say " That's what I said. You are saying after death, there's just nothing nothing absolute nothing. " Even if we say he's wrong, his answer is the natural response upon hearing what we believe.

Unless by saying emptiness is also empty we are saying it is NOT empty, which is a suggestion that there is something, in which case, we're back in the sphere of argumentations.

And finally if we insist on; it is not something/anything, AND it is also not empty/nothing, but that empty is also empty, then aren't we just subjecting ourselves to absurdity and contradiction which delegitimizes our place in any serious intellectual/philosophical conversation?

My head hurts.

Not disagreeing. I'm learning. Hope you can help.

Malcolm wrote:

Emptiness is empty because it is also a dependent designation, in other words, emptiness also lacks inherent existence. There are sixteen kinds of emptiness. It's best if you study some Madhyamaka under a qualified instructor before asking more questions.

Nicholas2727 said:

Do you have suggestions on an introductory book or videos for Madhyamaka? Or is it best to ask a teacher to study it with them directly? Slightly difficult since the few Tibetan Teachers I have studied with follow Shentong philosophy, but there is a Gelug center about an hour and a half away that I would assume could teach the subject well.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, if you only have exposure to gzhan stong, it would very good for you to study Geluk Madhyamaka.

But in reality, if you carefully read Aryadeva, Buddhapalita, and Candrakirti, you should be all set.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 12:10 PM

Title: Re: Is there an atman in your school? (Shentong)

Content:

Nalanda said:

Just curious if you see dharmakaya and/or buddhanature as atman/brahman.

Nicholas2727 said:

No Buddhist school sees Buddhanature/Dharmakaya as atman or brahman. Even Dolpopa/Jonang do not view Buddhanature in this way. One of my teachers refers to true being as in the verb, not as a being.

Malcolm wrote:

It falls apart in the face of Nagarjuna's kind of analysis:

"Apart from whatever has been or has not been, there no [present] being."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 12:30 PM

Title: Re: Is there a 'true self'?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

So, conventional logic and reasoning is always going to be insufficient for Tathāgatagarbha thinking, which is far more suited to a more poetic or evocative language.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't really have much patience for appeals to poetics, and find that a lot of sloppy thinking gets excused in the name of "poetry."

It's true that there is a great deal of metaphor employed in various classes of Buddhist literature, but it must be treated with care, its employment is generally not so obvious. For example, the nine classic examples of tathagatagarbha, understood incorrectly lead one directly to holding a nonBuddhist view of self. On the other hand there is a correct way to understand these examples, which actually lead one to a definitive understanding the absence of identity taught by the Buddha. However, most people take theses examples literally and so wind up holding wrong views.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 12:41 PM

Title: Re: Is there an atman in your school? (Shentong)

Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

No Buddhist school sees Buddhanature/Dharmakaya as atman or brahman.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Apparently the Karma Kagyu lama Khenpo Tsultrim thinks Shentong and Advaita Vedanta are similar in their view.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, structurally speaking, in so far as both propose that the ultimate and relative are mutually exxclusive. But he did not agree that the content or the result was the same.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 10:25 PM

Title: Re: Is there a 'true self'?

Content:

Nalanda said:

<https://madhyamaka.com> OK? It's by Alex Li Trisoglio, an instructor appointed by Dzongsar Khyentse Rinpoche to teach.

Malcolm wrote:

It's not a very on point, based on my superficial perusal of the transcripts. you would better off doing courses with IBA or Rangjung Yeshe, which are more traditional,

<http://www.ibastudiesonline.com/Home/Course/7d65b48e-08c8-4b84-8dee-076ae70ec031>

I know Khenpo Jorden, he speaks excellent English and is quite learned in Madhyamaka.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 10:39 PM

Title: Re: mostly Raw organic vegan diet for mental health?

Content:

Toenail said:

Is this a joke? I am a therapist and studied this. I never heard this. Also your case study with one brain damaged individual is no evidence.

Malcolm wrote:

Nope, no joke. For example, in the US, OCD is often treated with an anti-seizure drug called Depakote.

<https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/PMC3181953/>

I am not claiming that every case of OCD is a seizure related disorder without evidence, and there are a wide variety of behaviors associated with OCD, but it is certainly the case that seizure disorders correlate with OCD, and I suspect, in the end we will discover that most OCD is brain based.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 10:57 PM

Title: Re: What is the motivation for Tibetan Buddhists to join the monastics?

Content:

Nalanda said:

So we're back to it being not a path of renunciation, which is what I've always thought.

Brunelleschi said:

No, I do not agree with this view.

What you have to remember is that Sutrayana and Vajrayana both share the same outlook on Samsara (the three sufferings). E.g., when in Vajrayana you do deity practice it is important to remember that both you and the deity share the same ground - dharmakaya. You and the deity are the same, but you are temporarily obscured by adventitious stains/temporary defilements. The deity meanwhile, is not.

In Sutrayana, generally the way is to avoid sense pleasures. In Vajrayana they are transformed. However, like I mention above the view on Samsara is the same.

Malcolm wrote:

Nevertheless, the PATHS are different. There are in general three types of paths: renunciation (Hinayāna, Common Mahāyāna), transformation (lower tantras, mahāyoga and anuyoga), and self-liberation (Ati, Mahāmudra).

The confusion arises because the word renunciation in English translates different terms in Tibetan. Renunciation as a path is termed "spangs (utkṣiptā) lam," literally "the path of discarding or giving up." Whereas the idea of renunciation of samsara is niḥsaraṇa (nges par 'byung). So yes, all Buddhist paths are predicated on niḥsaraṇa, but not all Buddhist paths are predicated on the idea of utkṣiptā.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 11:10 PM

Title: Re: mostly Raw organic vegan diet for mental health?

Content:

Toenail said:

Is this a joke? I am a therapist and studied this. I never heard this. Also your case study with one brain damaged individual is no evidence.

chokyi lodro said:

I too was sceptical regarding the labelling of OCD as a seizure disorder.

Malcolm wrote:

Just look at the mounting evidence. Then draw your conclusion.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 11:38 PM

Title: Re: What is the motivation for Tibetan Buddhists to join the monastics?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Renunciation as a path is termed "spangs (utkṣiptā) lam," literally "the path of discarding or giving up." Where as the idea of renunciation of samsara is niḥsaraṇa (nges par 'byung). So yes, all Buddhists paths are predicated on niḥsaraṇa, but not all Buddhists path are predicated on the idea of utkṣiptā.

Seeker12 said:

It seems perhaps even that the higher paths require even more authentic niḥsaraṇa, even as the aspect of utkṣiptā reduces, as the aspect of utkṣiptā is essentially only a scaffolding-type support for the development of true maturation in the dharma.

Malcolm wrote:

Eventually, even niḥsaraṇa must be liberated.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 10th, 2022 at 11:49 PM

Title: Re: Is there an atman in your school? (Shentong)

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

"Regarding the sutras that teach emptiness, as many as were taught by the Victor, By al of them afflictions are reversed. But Buddha Nature is never refuted in them... Within the afflictions, primordial wisdom abides as immaculate Suchness." - In Praise of the Dharmadhatu

It's not universally accepted that this book was written by the same Nagarjuna. If it was, then I personally am shocked.

Nicholas2727 said:

I was unaware of this. I looked at other threads and it seem that there is no mention of this text by other Indian authors and other historical evidence that it was written much later. Interesting!

Malcolm wrote:

There are three hundred texts attributed to Nāgārjuna in the tengyur. Very few could actually have been composed by Nāgārjuna I.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 11th, 2022 at 12:02 AM

Title: Re: mostly Raw organic vegan diet for mental health?

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

The DSM doesn't use brain science as diagnostic criteria

Malcolm wrote:

Correct. And as such, it's diagnostic criteria are pretty subjective, not really evidence-based.

<https://pubmed.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/19181456/>

Johnny Dangerous said:

Evidence based medicine claims to be the paradigm for modern psychiatry. It represents proven treatments for defined diagnoses. But there are major problems with this position, starting with the fact that while they are superior to placebo, evidence based treatments too often are ineffective. It cannot be assumed that classifying psychopathology diagnostically is the best way to move forward. Established diagnostic entities, are as much wish as reality. They are the result of committee decisions so tentative that DSM III and IV refuse to use the term "diagnoses" in the diagnostic manual.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://pubmed.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/27071528/>

Johnny Dangerous said:

In the 1990s, the rise of evidence-based medicine cast doubt on the reliability of expert consensus. Since then, medicine has increasingly relied on systematic reviews, as developed by the evidence-based medicine movement, and advocated for their early incorporation in expert consensus efforts. With the partial exception of DSM-IV, such systematic evidence-based reviews have not been consistently integrated into the development of the DSMs, leaving their development out of step with the larger medical field.

Depakote is also a pretty serious drug with considerable side effects. Not to say it isn't important in some circumstances, but plenty of people have successfully controlled their OCD without it.

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed, if your OCD is limited to not being able to carry magazines out of the bathroom once you have brought them in, or get in a new car with dirty underwear (true story), well, probably Depakote is probably overkill.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 11th, 2022 at 1:36 AM

Title: Re: mostly Raw organic vegan diet for mental health?

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

but there are also a lot of issues with taking imaging or presumed balance of neurotransmitters or whatever and saying "this physiological sign is x disorder".

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, and this results in a lot of people being treated for symptoms, rather than causes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 11th, 2022 at 4:49 AM

Title: Re: Is there an atman in your school? (Shentong)

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

Cite a source please?

Malcolm wrote:

A conversation I had with Khenpo in 1992 at the Newton Dharmadhātu, when he was teaching a program there.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 11th, 2022 at 5:02 AM

Title: Re: What is the motivation for Tibetan Buddhists to join the monastics?

Content:

Shinjin said:

It would be sweet to be a monastic. Sounds like a simple and blissful way to live.

Malcolm wrote:

People have a lot of fantasies about what it is like to be bhikṣu.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 11th, 2022 at 8:50 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

To me the framing here is off.

IMO there is virtually no chance of some theocratic takeover of federal machinery or some such.

What there is a possibility of is a heavier version of what we have now with right leaning states getting rid of legal abortion, teaching their nonsense in schools, funneling more public money into their religion, etc.

KeithA said:

Agree. In my opinion, Christianity is the group name. The "religion" is white supremacy. These fascists aren't any more Christian than I am a Satan worshiper.

Malcolm wrote:

That's disingenuous, it's like claiming Ashoka wasn't a Buddhist when he executed 18k

Jains—of course he was a Buddhist. Likewise Christian Nationalists are certainly Christians. We may not admire their version of Christianity, but they are indeed Christians.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 11th, 2022 at 12:11 PM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

Agree. In my opinion, Christianity is the group name. The "religion" is white supremacy. These fascists aren't any more Christian than I am a Satan worshiper.

Malcolm wrote:

That's disingenuous, it's like claiming Ashoka wasn't a Buddhist when he executed 18k Jains—of course he was a Buddhist. Likewise Christian Nationalists are certainly Christians. We may not admire their version of Christianity, but they are indeed Christians.

KeithA said:

Disingenuous implies an intent to be untruthful. As I have admitted to all along, everything I have typed so far is my opinion. I am not a social scientist, nor do I play one on TV.

For some background, Dae Soen Sa Nim (Zen Master Seung Sahn), used to sit joint retreats with the Christian monks at Gethsemane in Kentucky. He even came up with some Christian kong ans (koans) for his collection in Whole World is a Single Flower. They are based on poems of a German Christian mystic. We still hold regular Christian/Buddhist retreats. There is another way.

/

Malcolm wrote:

It means here that you are denying these people their own self-identification. That's not an honest assessment of them. it's not correct to claim that Christian Nationalists are not Christians. It's similar to Protestants claiming Catholics are not really Christians, or Theravadins claiming Tibetan Buddhists are not real Buddhists. We have to deal with the fact they consider themselves Christian and theologically justify their beliefs, just as do intolerant Muslims, Jews, Buddhists, Hindus and so on.

We share nothing in common with Christians, apart from valuing compassion. There is no valid refuge In Christianity, so apart from having a positive influence on more open-minded Christians, I don't really see the point in such ecumenical exercises. But it's a free country, for the time being—just make sure you keep one eye open.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 11th, 2022 at 12:16 PM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

And yet, hatred isn't the answer. It never is.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't hate white Christians, I just know, based on their record, when push come to shove, they are happy to persecute minorities. They are quite expert at it. Christian intolerance is the reason we have an establishment clause in the First Amendment, since large percentage of the founders were atheists, or at least acutely aware of the long history religious persecution in Europe by state religions. It's written about quite a bit by Madison in the Federalist Papers.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 11th, 2022 at 1:08 PM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

But I also agree that fundamentalist right-wing Christianity is a bad thing in general and has been particularly toxic in the USA recently.

Malcolm wrote:

Not just recently, but for our entire history.

"Those who do not remember the past are condemned to repeat it."

—Santayana

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 11th, 2022 at 1:17 PM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

Queequeg said:

I don't think this putative Christian Right take over will succeed - the country is just too big and too pluralistic and becoming more so everyday.

They're not interested in having a dialogue as far as I can tell. So how do you propose we should dispose ourselves toward this aggression?

Malcolm wrote:

They have already taken over a large portions of the country, our top military leaders are openly discussing fears of a military-backed coup, and so on, and the Christian Right's seditious rhetoric has become mainstream.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 11th, 2022 at 11:20 PM

Title: Re: How does general Mahayana see Vajrayana claims of being X?

Content:

Nalanda said:

I hope this is okay. Don't want to step on anyone's shoes.

I ask this because there's an absolute silence I hear from General Mahayana on how they view Vajrayana.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, of course. Those who belong to what Vajrayāna terms "common Mahāyāna" fail to see the utility of the special methods for attaining buddhahood in a single life, using for example Zhen Li's reference to Shinran:

Real teachings of the difficult practices, the Path of Sages. These are the teachings of the Busshin (Zen), Shingon, Hokke (Tendai), Kegon and other schools.

However, Tripiṭakamāla's Nayatrayapradīpa states:

Although the goal is the same, since it is unconfused, with many methods, not difficult, and mastered by those of sharp faculties,
Mantrayāna is superior.

Here, sharp faculties is not a reference to intelligence, it is a reference to what is referred faith, śraddhā, the first of the five powers (indriyas). Shinran was exposed to Vajrayāna, and since in Japan it was an elite practice, complicated, hard to study, etc., his attitude toward Japanese Mantrayāna is understandable. But his attitude is situated in his culture and does not apply to streams of Vajrayāna outside of his experience.

There is however a certain egalitarianism in Kamakura developments. All of them, including Soto Zen, were inclusive of anyone who wanted to participate. Dogen encouraged lay participation (and did not buy into the whole Mappo thing at all); Honen and Shinran crafted a Buddhism for the masses which relieved many people of samsaric anxiety about their future lives; Nichiren, very much influenced by Vajrayāna ideas, created a whole school around devotion to the Lotus Sūtra, asserting that people could exclusively attain awakening in this very lifetime by chanting the title of the Lotus Sutra and so on.

Nalanda said:

I would like to hear the perception of general Mahayana (historically and in the present) to Vajrayana's view of itself as X...

X could be...

- Faster than regular Mahayana?
- More profound / advanced?
- Enlightenment in one lifetime?

Malcolm wrote:

You can read Paramitayāna responses to Vajrayāna claims in such texts Sonam Tsemo's General Presentation of the Divisions of Tantra, and so on.

Also, you must understand that outside of India, the diffusion of Buddhism is extremely complex, and the notion of a "common Mahāyāna" is primarily an Indian idea taken up by Tibetans. Chan, for example, certainly never would accept this characterization.

Sino-Japanese Buddhism evolved outside the Indian Buddhist University system, and owes very little to developments in India after the 6th century, beyond the very restricted influences of Mantrayāna that was introduced to China in the late 7th century.

Nalanda said:

Do General Mahayana....

- (1)-just roll their eyes and ignore this?
- (2)-say "yeah maybe they are right, who knows?"
- (3)-accept, recognize, verify what Vajrayana says?
- (4)-"no way, that's just sectarian cheerleading"

Malcolm wrote:

(1) Usually. (2) Never. (3) Never. (4) Usually.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 11th, 2022 at 11:51 PM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

Putting entire groups into "bad" box is pretty awful behavior. The Christian worldview is not monolithic, as quite obviously, the Buddhist worldview isn't either.

Malcolm wrote:

I personally think all religion, including Buddhism, goes in bad box, when it is mixed with politics. But I don't see a burgeoning movement of Buddhist nationalists in the US, nor do I see Muslim nationalists, and so on. What I do see is a burgeoning Christian Identity Movement, aka Christian Nationalists, whose membership cuts across denominational lines in ways that were not possible prior the 1960's. One of the dominant themes of this movement is White European ethnocentricity, along with beliefs in the cultural superiority of European civilization, xenophobia, and yes, of course, racism. No one here is saying that all Christians in America subscribe to these beliefs, but there are sufficient number of them who do subscribe to these beliefs to represent an actual threat to American Democracy.

As for Christianity itself, while I personally find it to be a preposterous set of beliefs, I am also aware that Christians find Buddhism to be preposterous as well, so I am content to leave Christians alone as long as they leave us alone. I don't see much point in the ecumenical thing, since Christianity has nothing of value to offer Buddhism, while Christians have shown that they are mainly interested in appropriating and distorting our contemplative traditions, since Protestants and Catholics lack such a tradition of their own.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 12th, 2022 at 12:23 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

Queequeg said:

Local politics is where the voting maps are drawn that can throw a few seats in the house one way or another, as well as state and local offices that in determine those local maps. It would be heartening to see the rest of the Democratic party start working like Georgia.

Malcolm wrote:

Difficult without national or judicial reform...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 12th, 2022 at 12:48 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

Queequeg said:

Chicken/egg. Not going to get reform without political machinery. Political machinery is mostly brute force - voter turn out. Voter turnout is local organization, local issues, local effort. Ie. what Abrams has been building in GA.

Malcolm wrote:

Only made possible by the fact that Democrats are moving to Atlanta and surrounding suburbs, attracted by a strong job market. I mean, who is going to move to North and South Dakota? Kansas? Oklahoma? Nebraska? Alabama? Arkansas?

We need national electoral reform at the federal level. Otherwise, the Voter Suppression party will keep winning the electoral college vote.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 12th, 2022 at 1:50 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

Queequeg said:

Then maybe we can have some ecumenical discussions.

Malcolm wrote:

Still don't see much point in it, unless it prevents the torches and pitchforks approach to interfaith dialogue, with us being on the receiving end. For example, if a Christian is interested in Dzogchen teachings, it's fine with me. Dzogchen teachings are for everyone. But if then they turn around and start promulgating a "Christian" Dzogchen (tm) the way some like to pretend there is a Christian Zen, then I am against it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 12th, 2022 at 2:04 AM

Title: Re: How does general Mahayana see Vajrayana claims of being X?

Content:

Shinjin said:

Not sure. I just want to take the easiest path available.

Malcolm wrote:

Oh, well, hands down, Dzogchen is the easiest path, but it might be the hardest to understand.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 12th, 2022 at 2:38 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

The last sentence actually helps me to understand the lack of respect for Christianity. There is an incredibly rich and deep contemplative tradition within Christianity, especially in the Orthodox and Catholic traditions. The statement is patently false.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it is isn't. I deliberately excluded Eastern orthodox traditions, and the exercises of Ignatius Loyola hardly qualify. And we may not mean the same thing by "contemplative"

In any case, there are also so-called "contemplative" traditions in Judaism, Islam, Hinduism, Taoism, and Confucism, but it doesn't matter because they all suffer from wrong view, various species of eternalism (just as materialists such as humanists suffer from annihilationism) and their religions are spiritual dead ends, just as secular humanism, etc., are dead ends.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 12th, 2022 at 2:43 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

Here we fundamentally disagree, but I won't argue this our much longer. The last sentence actually helps me to understand the lack of respect for Christianity. There is an incredibly rich and deep contemplative tradition within Christianity, especially in the Orthodox and Catholic traditions. The statement is patently false.

narhwal90 said:

Very true. Until covid closed it down I was attending an episcopalian meditation group that had been meeting weekly for in the churches chapel for about 20 years; 30 mins silent sitting, a reading by John Main, and a quick pass around the room for each person to say something brief about what they were grateful for that day. They didn't use a bell but instead a CD with 30 mins of quiet followed by a brief Gregorian chant to signal the conclusion. A number of the folks through that room had serious time on the cushion. If grasping at doctrine and ritual is suspended while listening to the readings, there is a lot of common ground to be observed.

Malcolm wrote:

"Beauty in things exists merely in the mind which contemplates them."

-- David Hume

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 12th, 2022 at 2:48 AM

Title: Re: Living Dzogchen Masters?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

And I should add, the aforementioned Sound Tantra is the original Dharma teaching of this eon, from whence all other Dharmas spring. So there is that too.

amanitamusc said:

This really is amazing that it still exists and that it will for the first time be translated with commentaty by Vimalamitra in English.

Lingpupa said:

This perhaps doesn't need saying, but do bear in mind, white-flecked red one, that while Malc's statement here is a presumably perfectly correct formulation of the position of the system he espouses, scholars generally see the datable appearance of the seventeen tantra as later than, say, many of the Indian tantras promoted by the New Translation schools.

Me? I know nothing.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, the datable appearance of the Sound Tantra is around 1060 CE, after the passing of Atisha, and but well before the turn of the 12th century. But that is just a dating of a physical artifact. The original Sound Tantra, taught to beings of apparitional birth by the first nirmāṇakāya in the first minor eon of this major eon by Nangwa Dampa, was taught in the language of birds, not the language of Oḍḍiyāna, Sanskrit, or Tibetan.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 12th, 2022 at 4:53 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

The last sentence actually helps me to understand the lack of respect for Christianity. There is an incredibly rich and deep contemplative tradition within Christianity, especially in the Orthodox and Catholic traditions. The statement is patently false.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it isn't. I deliberately excluded Eastern orthodox traditions, and the exercises of Ignatius Loyola hardly qualify. And we may not mean the same thing by "contemplative"

In any case, there are also so-called "contemplative" traditions in Judaism, Islam, Hinduism, Taoism, and Confucism, but it doesn't matter because they all suffer from wrong view, various species of eternalism (just as materialists such as humanists suffer from annihilationism) and their religions are spiritual dead ends, just as secular humanism, etc., are dead ends.

Queequeg said:

Eastern Orthodox contemplation is basically God-smṛti?

Malcolm wrote:

Jesus anusmṛti, yes. But unlike Hinduism, which shares practices with Buddhism such as samādhi, dhyāna, dharāṇa, prāṇāyama, mantra and so on (and no, the Jesus prayer is NOT a mantra), these Abrahamic traditions share no such meditative traditions. Their contemplative traditions are mainly derived from Neoplatonism (which one can argue was itself influenced by Indian spiritual trends—Plotinus supposedly had a "gymnosophist" teacher); and Christian mysticism overall is generally ecstatic rather than "contemplative" in the sense that Buddhādharma understands samādhi and dhyāna.

This is a useful article outlining the dependence of Christian mysticism upon Neoplatonism:

Inge, W. R. "The Permanent Influence of Neoplatonism upon Christianity." The American Journal of Theology 4, no. 2 (1900): 328–44. <http://www.jstor.org/stable/3153114>.

It shows very clearly that what we know as Christian Mysticism is directly founded upon Plotinus, via Augustine. We can see the ecstatic aspect in this passage Inge quotes from the Confessions of St. Augustine:

"What is this light which now and again breaks in upon me, and thrills through my heart without a wound? I tremble and I burn: I tremble, because I am unlike Him; I burn because I am like Him. It is Wisdom, Wisdom's own self, which thus shines upon me."

This fellow addresses all the great Christian mystics, including Eckhardt, Böhme, and Bruno, concluding with the Cambridge Platonists and their horror at Hobbe's revival of Epicureanism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 12th, 2022 at 5:03 AM

Title: Re: How does general Mahayana see Vajrayana claims of being X?

Content:

Nalanda said:

I would like to hear the perception of general Mahayana (historically and in the present) to Vajrayana's view of itself as X...

Astus said:

The idea of 'general Mahayana' is an abstract one, just as the idea of 'general Hinayana', or even 'general Vajrayana'. Dogen had this to say on the matter:

'Remember, among Buddhists we do not argue about superiority and inferiority of philosophies, or choose between shallowness and profundity in the Dharma...

Malcolm wrote:

Clearly, Dogen never encountered any Tibetan Buddhists during his sojourn in China. I think the "no true Scotsman" fallacy might apply to this statement.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 12th, 2022 at 5:26 AM

Title: Re: Britain's Growing Far-Right Party Is a Serious Threat

Content:

Ayu said:

It's creepy in many European countries.

In Germany the left antivaxers do not get that they are walking side by side with a nazi movement that seriously dreams of taking over the power.

Our new minister for health affairs received 250 threats of murder already. Some of them were not even sent anonymously, because those nazis literally believe it's their right and they are save with threatening politicians.

Malcolm wrote:

Its a world-wide thing, this growing ethnonationalism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 12th, 2022 at 6:07 AM

Title: Re: Britain's Growing Far-Right Party Is a Serious Threat

Content:

Dan74 said:

I don't see evidence of it been a groundswell.

Malcolm wrote:

Then you haven't been paying attention....maybe the air is a little thin were you live?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 12th, 2022 at 11:34 AM

Title: Re: Britain's Growing Far-Right Party Is a Serious Threat

Content:

Dan74 said:

I don't see evidence of it been a groundswell.

Malcolm wrote:

Then you haven't been paying attention....maybe the air is a little thin were you live?

Dan74 said:

Do you have evidence for a groundswell? Maybe in the US?

Malcolm wrote:

Again, you are not paying attention: Russia, China, and India are all countries dominated by ethnonationalists, not to mention Poland, Hungary, Israel, Turkey, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 12th, 2022 at 11:38 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

Again with the lecture. I didn't realize I was conversing with sole arbiter of what the Dharma of Sakyamuni is.

PeterC said:

Don't blame me, I didn't make up the sutras. But it really doesn't matter who the arbiter is, if you're an eternalist you're not practising the Buddhadharma. It's bizarre that things like this even need to be said here.

Kim O'Hara said:

Peter, it's possible that 'things like this' don't need to be said here and in fact are quite unhelpful in the context of the present discussion. Keith (and I, though I don't rate my opinion as highly as I rate his) have good company:

<https://www.lionsroar.com/the-dalai-lama-and-desmond-tutu-the-best-of-spiritual-friends/>

<https://www.dalailama.com/pictures/final-days-of-conversation-on-joy-dharamsala-hp-india> etc...

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

Precisely the same Dalai Lama who said, "I tell my Christian Friends, 'Emptiness is none of your business.'"

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 12th, 2022 at 11:46 AM

Title: Re: How does general Mahayana see Vajrayana claims of being X?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Clearly, Dogen never encountered any Tibetan Buddhists during his sojourn in China. I think the "no true Scotsman" fallacy might apply to this statement.

Astus said:

Surely he was aware of the various classifications of the teachings that are found in any Mahayana school, so his response was quite intentionally like that.

Malcolm wrote:

I was referring to arguing about superior/inferior, shallow/deep, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 12th, 2022 at 11:57 AM

Title: Re: Living Dzogchen Masters?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:
was taught in the language of birds

Losal Samten said:
Anything related to Kyeuchung Lotsawa's bird-teaching abilities with this?

Malcolm wrote:
No, I don't think so.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, January 12th, 2022 at 1:06 PM
Title: Re: How does general Mahayana see Vajrayana claims of being X?
Content:
Nalanda said:
Dzogchen is spoken here as if it's a separate yana from Vajrayana. Is it.... Dzogchenyana?

Malcolm wrote:
Dzogchen is it's own vehicle, including, but not depending on the nine vehicles. You might say it is the basis of all vehicles.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, January 12th, 2022 at 9:36 PM
Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020
Content:
KeithA said:
. I crossed the DW party line, which is basically whatever Malcolm says.

Malcolm wrote:
That is an insult to others. I think an apology is in order here. In this thread you've repeatedly accused others of "group think" and so on, as if people besides myself, who disagree with your notion that Christian Nationalists are not deserving of the appellation of "Christian," and that the religious views of the majority of the insurrectionists are of no account in their actions on 1/6/2021 are not capable of thinking for themselves without my help.

No one suggested you were not a Buddhist, it was suggested that one following a nonBuddhist theistic religion could not practice Buddhism at the same time. In other words, whatever the "zen" Christians might be practicing, it can't be the Zen of Bodhidharma. I think it's pointless to engage in ecumenical dialogues with Christians, Hindus, and so on, but then, I am not a pastoral counselor, a hospital chaplain, or someone whose work is likely to cause them to be in a position of having to give solace to nonBuddhists or even Buddhists who might be struggling with their chosen path, nor am I an ecclesiastical representative of the Sangha. Such people may have good reason to engage in interfaith events, but I am under no such burden.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 12th, 2022 at 10:19 PM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

Sigh, no, I won't be making an apology to anyone. I bowed out to avoid exactly this nonsense.

Take care,
Keith

Malcolm wrote:

The nonsense initially came from you, when you began accusing others of not being able to think for themselves, because they disagreed with your point of view. Since you can't along with Buddhists, how do you expect to be able to get along with Christians?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 12th, 2022 at 10:38 PM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

Dan74 said:

Does anyone realise that folks here are using exactly the same rhetoric to besmirch all Christians, as Conservatives used against the Muslims, following the terror attacks? That it is inherent to their belief system, that their establishment doesn't condemn it enough, that they are taking over, that given a chance, they will [insert your favourite fear]. It's like you guys work off the same script.

Malcolm wrote:

You need to watch the movie Jesus Camp. And recall, ethnic cleansing in God's name is a major feature of the Old Testament.

And you didn't read the thread carefully, since you missed the part where I point out religion in politics is toxic, no matter what religion it is. In the case of the US, the main danger to democracy is Christian Dominionism, look it up.

The establishment clause was not written to protect religions from state interference. It was written to ensure freedom from religion.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 12th, 2022 at 10:52 PM

Title: Re: How does general Mahayana see Vajrayana claims of being X?

Content:

Nalanda said:

The question then becomes, how do I get started with Ati Yoga?

Is that Dzogchen?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and no, within Dzogchen itself, there are three divisions, mind, space, and intimate instruction series, and within the last, there are four cycles: outer, inner, secret, and utterly secret unsurpassed. Only the last is considered to be definitive.

Generally speaking the difference between Dzogchen and the nine vehicles is that the practice of the former is grounded in a direct experience of gnosis, whereas the practice of the latter is grounded in mind. Another way to put it is that the nine yanas are vehicles of cause and result, whereas Dzogchen is the vehicle which is beyond cause and result.

There are some similarities between Dzogchen mind series, Kagyu Mahamudra and Dogen's Zen, and Chan in general, but there are also important differences.

In the nine yana scheme all sutric Buddhism is included in the shravaka, pratyekabuddha, and bodhisattva vehicles, which are the three vehicles of the cause.

From another point of view, Dzogchen is also part of what is termed Ekayana in common Mahayana.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 12th, 2022 at 11:40 PM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

Queequeg said:

Does the ecstatic experience have an analog in Buddhism? I can't imagine a yogini collapsing like St. Teresa.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, not in the Christian/Neo-platonic sense.

Certainly, some visionary experiences among Buddhists might be described as ecstatic. For example, Chetsun Senge Wangchuk's visionary encounters with Vimalamitra in the late eleventh century do not seem very ecstatic, since they consisted of instructions, nor Shangton's visionary encounter with Senge Wangchuk 60 years later for the same reason, but Khyentse Wangpo's visionary recollection of attaining rainbow body as Senge Wangchuk when he visited the site of Senge Wangchuk retreat place does seem to bear some aspect of what we would term ecstatic. He reports his experience of outer ordinary appearances dissolving into luminosity, and then recalling the experience of attaining rainbow body as Senge Wangchuk and so on. So, we might find ecstatic tendencies in the treasure tradition. Spontaneous visions of Padmasambhava, of Tsongkhapa, Sapan, Longchenpa, protectors, yidams, and so on might also be classifiable as ecstatic experience.

But these experiences do not form part of the normal path of a Buddhist nor are they considered particularly valuable in and of themselves since they are just mental phenomena. Though a person may find personal confirmation of their path in such experiences, they would rarely be communicated to others. Usually we only find out about such experiences in their inner and secret biographies and autobiographies.

Certainly trance shamanism, which is has never been completely abandoned in Buddhist countries from Tibet to Japan is ecstatic.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 12th, 2022 at 11:54 PM

Title: Re: Living Dzogchen Masters?

Content:

Lingpupa said:

What I am saying is that we should not confuse any particular visionary "history" with conventional facts.

Malcolm wrote:

Right, which is why I provided you with the earliest known date for the appearance of the physical witness (as text scholars like to say these days) of the sgra thal 'gyur.

The tantra itself however reveals these facts about itself. Whether someone is inclined to accept the myth and legend it presents or not is precisely the same kind of decision one faces with Mahāyāna sutras and the tantras.

Lingpupa said:

But it would, I think, be unwise to invest an awful lot of time or money in a search for physical evidence of the Sound Tantra being taught many centuries or millennia earlier than what scholars currently accept.

Malcolm wrote:

The same qualm applies to Kālacakra, the Lotus Sūtra, etc. However, in the case of the Sound Tantra, it is the definitive text of the system of Dzogchen, so regardless of whether one accepts its claims for itself, it occupies the most important position among all tantras of the great perfection, and thus cannot be ignored because it makes claims that text critical scholarship is likely to dismiss. Text critical scholarship is limited by artifacts, physical objects, and inferences and deductions it can safely make on the basis of that evidence. So, it is limited.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 13th, 2022 at 12:21 AM

Title: Re: How does general Mahayana see Vajrayana claims of being X?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Lama Lena good to start with Dzogchen for beginners?

Malcolm wrote:

You have to investigate your prospective gurus for yourself. She is among the people out there teaching Dzogchen in a somewhat open way. But not every teacher is suitable for every student. Only you can discern that. So you have to be like a bee, you have to visit many flowers, not only one. This is the recommended behavior for a person who is interested in Dzogchen teachings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 13th, 2022 at 12:43 AM

Title: Re: How does general Mahayana see Vajrayana claims of being X?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Therefore it interpenetrates and includes Dzogchenyāna...

Malcolm wrote:

No, because Shinjin is not based on direct perception.

Shinjin is not the direct perception of dharmatā.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 13th, 2022 at 2:07 AM

Title: Re: How does general Mahayana see Vajrayana claims of being X?

Content:

Nalanda said:

perception of dharmatā.

direct perception.

What are these?

Malcolm wrote:

That's what you will learn, eventually, if you are wise in choosing your teachers.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 13th, 2022 at 2:10 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

we are far from the topic.

Malcolm wrote:

That's Dharmawheel for you...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 13th, 2022 at 2:57 AM

Title: Re: How does general Mahayana see Vajrayana claims of being X?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

There is some truth in that. But the same goes for Zennists. Nichirenistas, Pure Landistas, Theravadins etc. You would not pick a tradition if you were not convinced it was the most effective path, not just for oneself, but in general.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 13th, 2022 at 3:19 AM

Title: Re: How does general Mahayana see Vajrayana claims of being X?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

There is some truth in that. But the same goes for Zennists. Nichirenistas, Pure Landistas, Theravadins etc. You would not pick a tradition if you were not convinced it was the most effective path, not just for oneself, but in general.

Shinjin said:

Just a lighthearted joke my friend.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, I understood, it made me smile.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 13th, 2022 at 9:00 AM

Title: Re: How does general Mahayana see Vajrayana claims of being X?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Therefore it interpenetrates and includes Dzogchenyāna...

Malcolm wrote:

No, because Shinjin is not based on direct perception.

Shinjin is not the direct perception of dharmatā.

Zhen Li said:

Shinjin itself is dharmatā, it is Buddha-nature, it interpenetrates all things and implies all vehicles, and yet the full realisation of this occurs upon birth.

Since Dzogchen affirms the ability for a human to perceive dharmatā...

Malcolm wrote:

It's not the same, but I don't need to press my point. Anyone who is interested can find a teacher who can explain this point in more detail. It's not suitable for public discussion, beyond a simple mention.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 13th, 2022 at 11:27 PM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

"We" and "they", the source of all wars.

Malcolm wrote:

As a matter of pragmatics, there will always be "we" and "they" because that's just how sentient beings roll. Therefore, it is useful to understand who are "we" and who are "they." At this point in the history of the US, Christians are "we," Buddhists are "they." You and I are fortunate to live in the Northeast where "we" is considerably more tolerant of "they" than in other places in the US, by your own admission. And I still think Christianity is a preposterous religion. I'm with Porphyry on that one.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 14th, 2022 at 12:23 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

"We" and "they", the source of all wars.

Malcolm wrote:

As a matter of pragmatics, there will always be "we" and "they" because that's just how sentient beings roll. Therefore, it is useful to understand who are "we" and who are "they." At this point in the history of the US, Christians are "we," Buddhists are "they." You and I are fortunate to live in the Northeast where "we" is considerably more tolerant of "they" than in other places in the US, by your own admission.

KeithA said:

Not really interested in worldly pragmatics in this context. Sure, if someone breaks into my house, I will engage in some worldly self-defense. And I'll also vigorously oppose the policies that this "they" support. But, in the end, as has already been pointed to me, this is a Buddhist forum. "We" and "they" are destructive ideas when it comes to practice.

Malcolm wrote:

This is the "news, politics, and other hot topics forum." The Kumbhaya forum is over there... The discussion here is discussing the danger to democracy that the Christian Right represents.

Heather Cox Richardson wrote this last night:

This evening, Senate Majority Leader Senator Chuck Schumer (D-NY) announced that he would bring voting rights legislation to the Senate floor for debate—which Republicans have rejected—by avoiding a Republican filibuster through a complicated workaround. When the House and Senate disagree on a bill (which is almost always), they send it back and forth with revisions until they reach a final version. According to Democracy Docket, after it has gone back and forth three times, a motion to proceed on it cannot be filibustered. So, Democrats in the House are going to take a bill that has already hit the three-trip mark and substitute for that bill the Freedom to Vote Act and the John Lewis Voting Rights Advancement Act. They'll pass the combined bill and send it to the Senate, where debate over it can't be filibustered.

And so, Republican senators will have to explain to the people why they oppose what appear to be common-sense voting rules.

This is what we are discussing here, not practice.

KeithA said:

What I saw on 1/6 was a bunch of suffering beings, in the grip of an insane desire for white supremacy and fealty to a mentally unwell narcissist, creating some awful Karma for themselves. They are very much "we".

Malcolm wrote:

Might be you, it isn't me.

KeithA said:

One time I remarked to a Sangha member that I would welcome Trumpers to the Center any time. To my surprise, he recoiled pretty strongly against the idea.

Malcolm wrote:

I am not surprised at all. I frankly don't even see how one can square being a Republican and a Buddhist, but I know such creatures exist, even here.

Social justice is important. Making Trumpsters feel warm and cozy so they will practice zen, etc., not so much.

Christian Nationalism is identity politics suffering from roid rage.

KeithA said:

But, it is there, sitting together, where we can do the best work. I have chafed mightily as my larger Sangha has drifted into the realm of social justice and the various strains of identity politics. It has driven away people who would otherwise be practicing. And practicing together is the most important thing, regardless of pragmatic concerns. IMHO, of course.

Malcolm wrote:

This is how Tibet lost their nation, by being passive and thinking that religious practices would fix everything. It didn't work then, it won't work now.

Chanting sutras, bowing to statues of the Buddha, and sitting in meditation never prevented an invasion or the overthrow of a government, as much as people like to fantasize to the contrary. It's like thinking one can heal illnesses with mantras alone, and forgo medical treatment with that idea in mind.

If we don't identify enemies to democracy, and respond to the threats they pose, we will lose our democracy. Our nation is in a precarious place. I hope you see this.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 14th, 2022 at 12:27 AM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

Dgj said:

Can you conceive of, or agree that someone else could conceive of a hypothetical scenario where dependent origination, emptiness, etc. are entirely false and disproven?

Malcolm wrote:

Nope. I mean, I can conceive that someone might have this mistaken idea.

Dgj said:

Or, do you feel that Nagarjuna's teaching, and the teaching in general that everything is empty, impermanent, etc. is irrefutable, and incontrovertibly true?

Malcolm wrote:

Yup.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 14th, 2022 at 2:05 AM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I cannot image an object that is permanent, so no.

Malcolm wrote:

How about a permanent subject?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 14th, 2022 at 2:24 AM

Title: Re: What is the motivation for Tibetan Buddhists to join the monastics?

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

I think you have misunderstood this. If you are a monk or nun, you are not allowed to work.

Malcolm wrote:

Not so. Bodhisattva bhikṣus are not obligated to follow this rule, just as they are allowed to handle money, farm, have possessions, property, and so on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 14th, 2022 at 3:06 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

<https://fpmt.org/lama-zopa-rinpoche-news-and-advice/lama-zopa-rinpoche-news/unveiling-and-blessing-of-saint-francis-of-assisi-statue-at-the-great-stupa-of-universal-compassion/>

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. And?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 14th, 2022 at 3:42 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

I don't blame Christians for 1/6.

Malcolm wrote:

Neither do I. I blame Christian Dominionists. As Sara Posner https://www.salon.com/2011/08/21/posner_nar_dominionism/:

If people really understood dominionism, they'd worry about it between election cycles.

KeithA said:

That's not what motivates them, though. It's simple racism. It's the glue that binds Trumpism.

Malcolm wrote:

I disagree. I think an extremist version of Christianity does motivate them, just as an extremist version of Islam motivates followers of ISIS, just as an extremist version of Buddhism motivates the junta in Myanmar, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 14th, 2022 at 3:47 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

As far as the last sentence goes, I stand by my words, as I feel they accurately describe what happens when the orthodox Dharmawheel position is veered away from.

Malcolm wrote:

It isn't "groupthink," what you are witnessing is a natural consensus which is not governed by any one person. "Groupthink" requires an authoritarian arbiter of opinion. That does not exist here.

Groupthink is a psychological phenomenon that occurs within a group of people in which the desire for harmony or conformity in the group results in an irrational or dysfunctional decision-making outcome. Cohesiveness, or the desire for cohesiveness, in a group may produce a tendency among its members to agree at all costs.

That does not describe Dharmawheel's members. No one really gives a flying fk about harmony and cohesiveness here, least of all me.

Also, there is no "orthodox" Dharmawheel position on anything.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 14th, 2022 at 4:14 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

I personally know 4 people who no longer practice with the Sangha due to the hard left turn we have taken.

ManiThePainter said:

I'm very curious what it means for your sangha to have turned "hard left." Is it expressing solidarity with African-Americans protesting police brutality and with people who suffer from gender dysphoria? If so, is this different from expressing solidarity with Christians who vaguely share some tenets of faith with Buddhists?

Malcolm wrote:

Just shows how far right Americans have drifted when they think "hard left" means BLM. It used to mean Lenin, Trotsky, and Stalin.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 14th, 2022 at 4:37 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

ManiThePainter said:

I'm very curious what it means for your sangha to have turned "hard left." Is it expressing solidarity with African-Americans protesting police brutality and with people who suffer from gender dysphoria? If so, is this different from expressing solidarity with Christians who vaguely share some tenets of faith with Buddhists?

Malcolm wrote:

Just shows how far right Americans have drifted when they think "hard left" means BLM. It used to mean Lenin, Trotsky, and Stalin.

Brunelleschi said:

Well, Patrisse Cullors is a marxist (not that there's anything wrong with that).

Malcolm wrote:

Bernie, by Faux News standards is far or hard left. By leftwing standards he is center left. BLM is center left. Marxism itself has various shades of left, soft pink to crimson red.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 14th, 2022 at 5:38 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

Already answered the question, friend. Nothing left to say on the subject.

ManiThePainter said:

You reiterated that a "hard left turn" had led to some people leaving your sangha. You did not say what a "hard left turn" entailed.

Malcolm wrote:

Apparently Keith thinks the civil rights movement (aka the social justice movement) is hard left, since that's all he has said about it:

KeithA said:

I have chafed mightily as my larger Sangha has drifted into the realm of social justice and the various strains of identity politics
I personally know 4 people who no longer practice with the Sangha due to the hard left turn we have taken.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 14th, 2022 at 6:20 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

Never got Marx never did it for me

Malcolm wrote:

Marx has some pretty funny things to say at the end of Capital about British colonials in Burma. But mostly it is a snore of a book.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 14th, 2022 at 6:29 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

ManiThePainter said:

You reiterated that a “hard left turn” had led to some people leaving your sangha. You did not say what a “hard left turn” entailed.

Malcolm wrote:

Apparently Keith thinks the civil rights movement (aka the social justice movement) is hard left, since that's all he has said about it:

KeithA said:

I have chafed mightily as my larger Sangha has drifted into the realm of social justice and the various strains of identity politics

I personally know 4 people who no longer practice with the Sangha due to the hard left turn we have taken.

Ah well, it will be just a matter of time before this is locked, so I will throw in my two cents. This is bullying.

Malcolm wrote:

I am sorry you feel bullied by your own words.

KeithA said:

Then the minions jump in, to support the bullying. It happens over and over. If you cross Malcolm, you will pay. Everybody knows this, I am just saying it out loud. And no, I won't apologize for voicing this opinion.

Malcolm wrote:

What were you saying about "we" and "they"?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 14th, 2022 at 6:37 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

Ah well, it will be just a matter a time before this is locked, so I will throw in my two sense. This is bullying. This is chastising someone for not toeing the DW company line. This is exactly what I am talking about. But, bring it. I won't be bowed. Tired of the nonsense.

I made a simple point. That in my opinion, 1/6 was motivated by racism, and I also chose not to join in the Christian blame train, which is doctrinal here, by virtue of Malcolm's opinion. Then the minions jump in, to support the bullying. It happens over and over. If you cross Malcolm, you will pay. Everybody knows this, I am just saying it out loud. And no, I won't apologize for voicing this opinion.

Ah well, round and round. I do think a lot of this medium based. If we were sitting in the tea room talking, it would be much more civil.

/

Keith

Norwegian said:

I really don't see what it is that you think you see is taking place here. Honestly, a lot of posts here wouldn't be necessary if you could communicate clearly with people instead of speaking vaguely and not actually answering people's questions.

KeithA said:

It's a two way street friend...listening and reading with an open mind is necessary.

Malcolm wrote:

It seems you just want people to agree with you. I could care less if people agree with me. I am just expressing my opinion. Our opinions differ. The difference between you and me, apparently, is that I have never felt bullied on an internet forum in my life, no matter how many people disagree with me, en massé or individually.

Apparently, when several people disagree with you and express similar points of view, you feel a need to identify a ring leader and then castigate the rest of the people with whom you are having a discussion as that person's minions. SMH.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 14th, 2022 at 8:10 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

KeithA said:

listening and reading with an open mind is necessary.

ManiThePainter said:

Then heed your own advice.

For the sake of keeping the dialogue going, I will confess that I was being overly aggressive in my rhetoric about Christian political ambition in the beginning of the thread or at least that I made a monolithic entity out of them. I still think that there's a danger to democracy coming from the political aspirations of many Christians though.

Malcolm wrote:

Christianity is antidemocratic by nature. It goes all the way back to Paul.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 14th, 2022 at 8:37 AM

Title: Re: The Cornpone Intifada - Jan. 6, 2020

Content:

ManiThePainter said:

Then heed your own advice.

For the sake of keeping the dialogue going, I will confess that I was being overly aggressive in my rhetoric about Christian political ambition in the beginning of the thread or at least that I made a monolithic entity out of them. I still think that there's a danger to democracy coming from the political aspirations of many Christians though.

Malcolm wrote:

Christianity is antidemocratic by nature. It goes all the way back to Paul.

ManiThePainter said:

I cannot speak for Catholicism and Protestantism since my forté was related to the Eastern Orthodox Byzantines (both before and after the Ottoman conquest), and even then my knowledge of the intersection of theology and politics is weak (I know vastly more about Muslim theology and political theory) but suffice to say that for the Byzantines they considered faith and politics to be wed in the form of the Christian Roman emperors.

That being said, I find many Christian movements in North America very disturbing from a Western European point of view.

Malcolm wrote:

Of interest:

Sessions says the Bible justifies separating immigrant families. The verses he cited are infamous.

The passage has been seen as an unequivocal order for Christians to obey authority, has been used to justify Southern slavery, authoritarian rule in Nazi Germany and South African apartheid.

By Kyle Swenson

<https://www.washingtonpost.com/news/morning-mix/wp/2018/06/15/sessions-says-the-bible-justifies-separating-immigrant-families-the-verses-he-cited-are-infamous/>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 15th, 2022 at 12:02 AM

Title: Re: Deism - An Error

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Deism actually is the view attributed to the materialist philosopher Epicurus, through the latin poem of Lucretius. <https://plato.stanford.edu/entries/lucretius/>

In section six, the attitude of Epicureans to religion is discussed:

Lucretius presents Epicurus' chief achievement as the defeat of religio. Although this Latin word is correctly translated into English as 'religion', its literal meaning is 'binding down', and it therefore serves Lucretius as a term, not for all attitudes of reverence towards the divine, but for those which cow people's spirits, rather than, as he thinks such attitudes should, elevate them to a joyful state of tranquility

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 15th, 2022 at 12:06 AM

Title: Re: Deism - An Error

Content:

Queequeg said:

For Owsley, The Kybalion "was perfect because it put into total context all the things I had experienced on acid. The universe is a creation entirely within a being that is outside time and space, and dreaming what we are. Everything is connected, because it's all being created by this one consciousness. And we are tiny reflections of the mind that is creating the universe. That's what alchemy says."

<https://www.rollingstone.com/feature/owsley-stanley-the-king-of-lsd-82181/>

(interesting read)

What is a Buddhist critique of that view? I have some ideas, but curious how others would unpack that.

Malcolm wrote:

It is a nonbuddhist view. There is no universal consciousness.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 15th, 2022 at 3:09 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

KristenM said:

A little robot running down the sidewalk making food deliveries.

Malcolm wrote:

Somehow, this just brings out my inner Luddite.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 15th, 2022 at 3:52 AM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

Aemilius said:

Chandrakirti says somewhere that Niravana is a conventional truth. Humanity is a population, and a society. Language and knowledge exist in a society, in a population.

Malcolm wrote:

"Convention" (vyavahāra) refer to the appearances of ordinary life, not the designations of those appearances. This is a poorly understood point of Madhyamaka. If it were true that "convention" referred to designations, then polka-dotted elephants would appear simply by named.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 15th, 2022 at 4:14 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

In England too in the East Midlands

Malcolm wrote:

Obviously it is time for the Butlerian Jihad.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 15th, 2022 at 7:40 AM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

Miorita said:

On a relative level, the Sun is a permanent object/being who shines.

Malcolm wrote:

There are no permanent objects on the relative level, the sun included.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 15th, 2022 at 7:44 AM

Title: Re: Deism - An Error

Content:

Queequeg said:

I guess I'm wondering about the experience through which one comes to this view.

Owsley said this Alchemist book explained what he had experienced on LSD.

What are the errors in interpreting an experience that might lead to a conception of a Creator? We're not talking about someone with a https://youtu.be/i1Nh_3JCFj8 of God. I suppose its too much speculate about Owsley in particular, or anyone in particular.

The way I'm thinking about it now -

1. There is the error of assuming the subject-object dichotomy.
2. There is the error of assuming that some particular object is the fundamental source of one's own consciousness and that of all others.

Thinking out loud on the keyboard here.

Kim O'Hara said:

For as long as I've had an opinion on the matter (i.e. decades), I have believed that the "standard mystical experience" (unity of creation, floating in a sea of light, universal beneficence, etc) is pretty much universal, and independent of the experiencer's religious background; but that it is beyond words and afterwards, the experiencer needs to put it into words to try to communicate it - even, perhaps, to try to remember it.

Malcolm wrote:

Such descriptions are notably absent in Buddhist literature. One of things we learn right off of the bat in Buddhadharma, in all schools, is that experiences are transient and not very important. Realization, on the other hand is not transient and is very importantl.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 15th, 2022 at 7:47 AM

Title: Re: Is there an atman in your school? (Shentong)

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:
Cite a source please?

Malcolm wrote:
A conversation I had with Khenpo in 1992 at the Newton Dharmadhātu, when he was teaching a program there.

Anders said:
They are quite similar. And why not? Shankara was greatly inspired by Nagarjuna.

Malcolm wrote:
Gzhan stong is not the view of Nagarjuna.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, January 15th, 2022 at 9:48 AM
Title: Re: Deism - An Error
Content:
Shinjin said:
Richard Nixon was a Deist too.

Malcolm wrote:
Not exactly. He was a Quaker. But I am pretty sure the Quakers were not fans of Epicurus.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, January 15th, 2022 at 9:04 PM
Title: Re: Does shedra style debate have any place in the Dzogchen tradition?
Content:
dharmafootsteps said:
As the title says, is this kind of debate useful to sharpen your conceptual understanding given that Dzogchen is predicated on direct perception?

Malcolm wrote:
In Buddhism, no. In Bon, yes.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, January 16th, 2022 at 1:17 AM
Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?
Content:

Miorita said:

On a relative level, the Sun is a permanent object/being who shines.

Malcolm wrote:

There are no permanent objects on the relative level, the sun included.

Miorita said:

Lavoisier does not agree with you.

Malcolm wrote:

Lots of people did not agree with Nāgārjuna, but they were all wrong.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 16th, 2022 at 4:35 AM

Title: Re: Please Enlighten Me Regarding Ngondro Variations 🙏

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 16th, 2022 at 5:09 AM

Title: Re: Please Enlighten Me Regarding Ngondro Variations 🙏

Content:

Archie2009 said:

Sweet or salty?

Malcolm wrote:

Parmesan and truffle oil.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 16th, 2022 at 11:11 PM

Title: Re: Extinction as a result of global warming

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

All views are not equal, if they were, it wouldn't matter if one was a Buddhist or a Christian as far as liberation goes. This also applies to politics, where some views, the views of liberals who are committed to democracy, are better than the views of others, such as conservatives, who are not committed to democracy and never have been.

Dharmasherab said:

When it comes to religion this is correct. But when it comes to politics it doesn't matter given that politics will always let us down. Liberalism hasn't made the world a better place.

Malcolm wrote:

Liberalism most certainly has made the world a better place. The examples are legion.

The fact that you can communicate your ideas without fear that some governmental authority will arrest you is an example of the benefits of liberalism you overlook.

Dharmasherab said:

Actually in one year abortion became the number one cause of death around the world and this is partly due to the popularity of liberal ideals.

Malcolm wrote:

Since you don't care about the sufferings of countless myriads of nonhuman sentient beings, and see no reason at all to be concerned about mass extinctions, why care about abortions? Your nihilism is quite obvious.

Dharmasherab said:

By considering that Buddhists who are liberals are more sensible than conservative Buddhists you are creating a the grounds for further division among Buddhists.

Malcolm wrote:

There has always been division amongst Buddhists. It's baked in. The Buddha anticipated this.

Dharmasherab said:

What is liberalism today will not be the liberalism in another 2 decades or more. The same labels will be used over and over again but their meanings would change. Today's liberals are for censorship and authoritarianism which is more aligned with fascism than with democracy.

Malcolm wrote:

This is a very silly statement. I am by all considerations a liberal, and I am neither for censorship nor authoritarianism. Quite the opposite.

Dharmasherab said:

This is part of the reason why I am no longer of the left and I left the left.

Malcolm wrote:

What is considered "left" today was considered centrist 50 years ago. I have recently been informed by another participant on this forum, much to my surprise, that the Civil Rights movement the United States was a "hard left" political movement.

Dharmasherab said:

When it comes to being Buddhist what political party you support is not much different from which football team you support.

Malcolm wrote:

This is quite naive, in my opinion. There are no consequences to being a supporter of Man United, for example. There are many consequences if one supports the Tories in England, for example, or the GOP in the United States.

Dharmasherab said:

Its the Buddhist teachings that really matter, other forms of knowledge whether that is communism, socialism or capitalism are samsaric forms of knowledge and practice and will only lead to suffering and disappointment.

Malcolm wrote:

Communism, capitalism, and socialism are not forms of knowledge, they are economic systems. At present, it is quite clear that a mixed economy, one constituted of a mixture of capitalism and socialism, is best for people.

The problem with your point of view, is that by utterly withdrawing from your civic responsibilities, you are abdicating your responsibility to help the myriad sentient beings who cannot help themselves and protect themselves from our economic activity. It is as if you don't care at all about sentient beings because you do not care about the environment. So we are right where we started. You clearly don't care about the happiness and wellbeing of the myriads of sentient beings on this planet and see no reason at all to act to mitigate and reverse the present climate crisis we have caused as a species. Sadly, you have confused nihilism for Buddhadharma. You really need to work on that bodhicitta.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 16th, 2022 at 11:19 PM

Title: Re: How do you feel about Buddhists getting involved in politics?

Content:

Dharmasherab said:

His advice to rulers was within the realms of the Dharma especially in relations to matters on Sila. So in a way one could see that he was encouraging rulers to be more ethical with what they are doing. The same goes for his advice and recommendation when it comes to doing occupations which doesn't involve breaking precepts.

Malcolm wrote:

In a democracy, the people are the rulers, so we can take this advice ourselves.

Dharmasherab said:

But it doesnt mean that he was a Social Justice Warrior either which is the way today's modern progressive liberals engage in.

Malcolm wrote:

Please define your terms, what exactly is negative about social justice, and why should one not fight for it?

Dharmasherab said:

This is the way today's liberals try to hijack Buddhism to use Buddhist groups as instruments to propagate their ideology. The greater interest among them is with their politics and less interest in the Dharma.

Malcolm wrote:

I notice that you fail to criticize conservatives who do the same thing, that is, hijack Buddhism to propagate their ideology, for example, in Śrī Lanka, Burma, and so on.

Dharmasherab said:

Spiritual bypassing - Its just another shame tactic for those who want to fully focus on the Dharma and not engage with worldly matters such as politics. Today's global politics involves waging wars and putting populations in debt. Buddhists are best to keep distance from that. Definitions don't mean much. The map is not the territory.

Malcolm wrote:

You are like a man who prefers to keep himself warm at his own stove, but chooses to ignore the fact that his whole neighborhood is on fire.

Dharmasherab said:

Not getting involved in politics is not the same as avoiding politics.

Malcolm wrote:

Pretty much the same.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 16th, 2022 at 11:24 PM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

The great mass of people will therefore be surplus to requirements.

Malcolm wrote:

World population is already headed in the other direction.

And face it, we have no idea what the world will look like in 2122.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 16th, 2022 at 11:33 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics

Content:

Dharmasherab said:

Plants do need carbon dioxide. Without carbon dioxide plants cant make glucose. If there was no carbon dioxide in the atmosphere then food production would diminish considerably.

Malcolm wrote:

Too much atmospheric carbon dioxide makes some plant foods less nutrient-rich: Likewise, a landmark study in 2018 found that growing rice in high-CO2 conditions makes it less nutritious. As a basic grain, rice plays a critical role in feeding the world's population. The extra CO2 caused an imbalance within the crop's chemical makeup, which resulted in rice that had lower amounts of protein, iron, zinc, and B-vitamins. "The entire elemental balance is out of whack," explained plant physiologist Lewis Ziska, an author of the study. This result is yet another example of how the recipe of nature is being disrupted by excess CO2.
<https://yaleclimateconnections.org/2020/12/more-co2-in-the-atmosphere-hurts-key-plants-and-crops-more-than-it-helps/>

Dharmasherab said:

In addition to ignoring the long-term outlook, he says, many skeptics also fail to mention the potentially most harmful outcome of rising atmospheric CO2 on vegetation: climate change itself. Its negative consequences—such as drought and heat stress—would likely overwhelm any direct benefits that rising CO2 might offer plant life. "It's not appropriate to look at the CO2 fertilization effect in isolation," he says. "You can have positive and negative things going at once, and it's the net balance that matters." So although there is a basic truth to skeptics' claim, he says, "what's missing from that argument is that it's not the whole picture."

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.scientificamerican.com/article/ask-the-experts-does-rising-co2-benefit-plants1/>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 17th, 2022 at 12:14 AM

Title: Re: What do you call a gift of respect to someone more accomplished than you?

Content:

2ndchance said:

just because the health tonic has an alcoholic content of 14%?

Malcolm wrote:

Depends on the monk.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 17th, 2022 at 1:41 AM

Title: Re: What do you call a gift of respect to someone more accomplished than you?

Content:

Miorita said:

The alcohol burns the herbs, it takes away some of the virya. It also packs blood vessels with fat.

Malcolm wrote:

That depends on how it is made. Medicinal alcohol has long history in Ayurveda.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 17th, 2022 at 2:58 AM

Title: Re: Conversion of mahayana texts into indian languages

Content:

khemindas said:

I think it would be a nice idea, if somebody would convert mahayana texts into original indian languages into pali and sanskrit...

Malcolm wrote:

This won't work, because even the Tibetan texts are not as uniformly translated as many people imagine. It is best to just translate them straight out of the languages in which they are presently preserved.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 17th, 2022 at 9:42 AM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

The great mass of people will therefore be surplus to requirements.

Malcolm wrote:

World population is already headed in the other direction.

And face it, we have no idea what the world will look like in 2122.

Kim O'Hara said:

2122?

With the way things are changing now, we will have either crashed and burned long before that or decided we're smart enough to make some hard choices.

Malcolm wrote:

As I said, we have no idea how things are going to go. Right now, it doesn't look very good.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 17th, 2022 at 9:22 PM

Title: Re: The Great Quit

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

(which I take to be primarily economics and social justice)

Malcolm wrote:

I was thinking of the the whole.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 17th, 2022 at 11:09 PM

Title: Re: What is the motivation for Tibetan Buddhists to join the monastics?

Content:

Miorita said:

Of course, the expenses might weigh easier on someone, but a monastery offers education, different horizons and perspectives, and a way of life in which there is a chance to excel. Living high up in the mountains does not allow much interference from the social...

Malcolm wrote:

This a pretty Shangri La account. It's not very grounded in reality.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 18th, 2022 at 12:00 AM

Title: Re: So Many Mahayana Sutras - Do They All Agree - Why So Many?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

So, yes, Ānanda memorised the Mahāyāna but also some people received it in revelation from Vajrapāṇi.

Malcolm wrote:

This is disputed. Vasubandhu in the Vyākhyāyukti criticizes Ānanda because he did not know all the sūtras, meaning the Mahāyāna sūtras.

See Skilling, <https://journals.ub.uni-heidelberg.de/index.php/jiabs/article/viewFile/9178/3036>

Also the Tibetan tradition clearly maintains that the compilers of the general Mahāyāna was not Ānanda, but rather Mañjuśrī, Avalokiteśvara, and Samantabhadra on Mt. Potala in South India.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 18th, 2022 at 12:48 AM

Title: Re: Does shedra style debate have any place in the Dzogchen tradition?

Content:

tigerneptune said:

Good to know, i didnt have idea

Malcolm wrote:

Chapter 69 in the Self-Arisen Vidyā Tantra gives keys to refuting opponents of Dzogchen teachings, but we Buddhists have never really turned them into a courtyard debate format.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 18th, 2022 at 3:49 AM

Title: Re: Chod Teachers England UK

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

I do have the Lord Jigten Sumgon Mahamudra Chod but stopped practicing as I felt I needed a personal teacher to guide.

Malcolm wrote:

Understanding the principle of Chod far more important than playing a chod liturgy, which in any case should only be taken up after one has really understood the meaning of Machik's presentation of the four mārās.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 18th, 2022 at 6:28 AM

Title: Re: Chod Teachers England UK

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

I do have the Lord Jigten Sumgon Mahamudra Chod but stopped practicing as I felt I needed a personal teacher to guide.

Malcolm wrote:

Understanding the principle of Chod far more important than playing a chod liturgy, which in any case should only be taken up after one has really understood the meaning of Machik's presentation of the four mārās.

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

Thanks Acharya I'm not in a rush with it but would love to find a teacher to seriously hone down the points and finer points

Malcolm wrote:

As I said, I would try to find instruction on the Great Collection. Practicing Chod liturgies without this is a waste of time.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 18th, 2022 at 6:59 AM

Title: Re: Chod Teachers England UK

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

Is that in this book?:

https://www.amazon.co.uk/Machiks-Complete-Explanation-Clarifying-Foundation/dp/1559394145/ref=sr_1_2?crid=7ERXOASU30MC&keywords=machig+labdron+complete+explanation&qid=1642459714&srefix=machig+labdron+complete+explanation%2Caps%2C134&sr=8-2

I have this but not sure if it requires transmission?

Malcolm wrote:

The great collection can be approached from both a sutra and Vajrayana pov, so the lung transmission is good, but not absolutely needed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 18th, 2022 at 4:08 PM

Title: Re: So Many Mahayana Sutras - Do They All Agree - Why So Many?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

So, yes, Ānanda memorised the Mahāyāna but also some people received it in revelation from Vajrapāṇi.

Malcolm wrote:

This is disputed. Vasubandhu in the Vyākhyāyukti criticizes Ānanda because he did not know all the sūtras, meaning the Mahāyāna sūtras.

Zhen Li said:

Haribhadra suggests...

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, there are various accounts, but the main point I was making is that in general the idea is that Mahayana sutras were not compiled by Ananda, but rather by high bodhisattvas. As far as I know, the first person to point this out was Vasubandhu.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 19th, 2022 at 12:48 AM

Title: Re: Chod Teachers England UK

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

Is it OK to read the whole book or do the other parts require transmission?

Thanks Malcolm

Malcolm wrote:

It's a little better to have the empowerment before reading the ritual sections, but the instructions in the first part are fine to read.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 19th, 2022 at 1:19 AM

Title: Re: Chod Teachers England UK

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

Is it OK to read the whole book or do the other parts require transmission?

Thanks Malcolm

Malcolm wrote:

It's a little better to have the empowerment before reading the ritual sections, but the instructions in the first part are fine to read.

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

So up to section 13 'Door Opening Empowerments'?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. Unless you have received such an empowerment.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 19th, 2022 at 2:46 AM

Title: Re: Nyingthiks

Content:

Passing By said:

Besides the Khandro and Vima Nyingthiks what are the main Nyingthik cycles in Nyingma?

The big three are Nyingthik Yabzhi, Gongpa Zangthal and Chetsun Nyingthik right?

Also how do you tell if a cycle is Nyingthik (as opposed to other divisions of Menngagde) or not since just having the word in the name is not a sure indicator and they may not be as detailed as the main three above? Are cycles like Dudjom Saraha Nyingthik and Khandro Thuktik considered as Dzogchen Nyingthik?

Malcolm wrote:

The term "snying thig" in actuality refers to the teaching of the Seventeen Tantras, that is where the term comes from. Of the many teachings called "snying thig," only the Vima Snying thig, Bla ma yang thig, and the Zab mo yang thig are solely devoted to the teachings of the Seventeen Tantras. The mKha' 'gro Snying thig is based in the klong gsal tantra, which is sort of a compilation of the key topics of the Seventeen Tantras. Then there is the Ati zab don of Terdag Lingpa, this is about is stripped down a Dzogchen Snying thig cycle as one is likely to find. Most of the others, including the dgongs pa zang thal, focus mainly on the teachings of the Seventeen Tantras, but have other more elaborate cycles for intermediate practitioners.

All the other snying thigs have supporting practices derived principally from Anuyoga, but their dzogchen teachings are based on the utterly secret unsurpassed cycle, so they can be included in "snying thig". Otherwise, the term "snying thig" has become kind of a popular name.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 19th, 2022 at 2:57 AM

Title: Re: So Many Mahayana Sutras - Do They All Agree - Why So Many?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Yeah it looks like it hasn't been translated yet by 84000.co

Malcolm wrote:

Everything you really need to know about Mahāyāna is in the Prajñāpāramitā Sūtras and their commentaries. This is the class of sutras, according to Sakya Paṇḍita, the Buddha spent the most time teaching (ten years), out of his 45 year long career. These are the most important sūtras of Mahāyāna, the most extensive class of sūtras (20 volumes in their Tibetan translation), and the sūtras most commented upon in surviving Indian sources.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 19th, 2022 at 3:46 AM

Title: Re: So Many Mahayana Sutras - Do They All Agree - Why So Many?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Yeah it looks like it hasn't been translated yet by 84000.co

Malcolm wrote:

Everything you really need to know about Mahāyāna is in the Prajñāpāramitā Sūtras and their commentaries. This is the class of sutras, according to Sakya Paṇḍita, the Buddha spent the most time teaching (ten years), out of his 45 year long career. These are the most important sūtras of Mahāyāna, the most extensive class of sūtras (20 volumes in their Tibetan translation), and the sūtras most commented upon in surviving Indian sources.

Nalanda said:

I like that. Thanks. And I might actually do just that, put all my eggs in Prajanaparamita.

Could you please tell me though why people like Alex Duncan would study all Mahayana sutras like this?

<https://palisuttas.wordpress.com/2013/02/18/how-to-study-buddhism/>

If this is not necessary, then why do it? Personal accomplishments? Job?

Malcolm wrote:

You will have to ask him.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 19th, 2022 at 3:59 AM

Title: Re: So Many Mahayana Sutras - Do They All Agree - Why So Many?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Yeah it looks like it hasn't been translated yet by 84000.co

Malcolm wrote:

Everything you really need to know about Mahāyāna is in the Prajñāpāramitā Sūtras and their commentaries. This is the class of sutras, according to Sakya Paṇḍita, the Buddha spent the most time teaching (ten years), out of his 45 year long career. These are the most important sūtras of Mahāyāna, the most extensive class of sūtras (20 volumes in their Tibetan translation), and the sūtras most commented upon in surviving Indian sources.

Nalanda said:

Also I love that you called out before that some Chinese Sutras are not Sutras. lol Platform Sutra for example. Can we rely on some notable sutras of East Asian Tradition / Pureland Tradition as sutras?

Malcolm wrote:

It has been the case from the time sutras were being set down in writing that different schools did not accept some or all of sutras of some other school. For example, outside of a very few tantras that were basically too important to exclude, virtually all of the tantras of the Nyingma school were excluded from the official Tibetan canon in the 14th century, including all the most important Dzogchen tantras. But we don't care. Likewise there are many sutras likely composed in China that are important to Chinese Buddhists, and they don't care that we do not accept them. We Mahāyānis in general don't care that the Theravadins do not accept our sūtras, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 19th, 2022 at 5:06 AM

Title: Re: So Many Mahayana Sutras - Do They All Agree - Why So Many?

Content:

Nalanda said:

What do you think?

Malcolm wrote:

I think this guy is a perennialist. I have no patience with that sort of inclination.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 19th, 2022 at 5:31 AM

Title: Re: So Many Mahayana Sutras - Do They All Agree - Why So Many?

Content:

Nalanda said:

What do you think?

Malcolm wrote:

I think this guy is a perennialist. I have no patience with that sort of inclination.

Nalanda said:

Oh...I thought he's strong defense of Mahayana and Tantra against fundamentalist sravakayana make him the opposite of Perennialist. I don't know tho.

Malcolm wrote:

He equates rainbow body with Christian stuff. He also writes stuff on Aleister Crowley, Taoism, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 19th, 2022 at 6:18 AM

Title: Re: So Many Mahayana Sutras - Do They All Agree - Why So Many?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Oh ok then. I just like his take on Early Buddhist Schools. That's all

Malcolm wrote:

There is no reason to criticize early Buddhist schools.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 19th, 2022 at 6:21 AM

Title: Re: mostly Raw organic vegan diet for mental health?

Content:

Artziebetter1 said:

whenever I used entheogens and the ocd went away...

Malcolm wrote:

Sounds to me like a brain chemistry issue.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 19th, 2022 at 11:11 PM

Title: Re: What is the Orthodox position of your school on alcohol, narcotics, psychedelics?

Content:

Padmist said:

Or does it break the precepts as well?

Malcolm wrote:

It breaks the fifth precept. But one does not have to follow the fifth precept at all, in the Tibetan tradition. One can choose to follow only the vows against killing, stealing, and lying.

Of course, if you are a Dzogchen practitioner, there really are no hard and fast rules. You can try anything, but if you get habituated to anything, this is negative.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 19th, 2022 at 11:54 PM

Title: Re: What is the Orthodox position of your school on alcohol, narcotics, psychedelics?

Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

I believe I remember you saying there are not many rituals in Dzogchen either in a different post.

Malcolm wrote:

A Dzogchen practitioner can use a lot of rituals, if they find this useful, or none at all. The main point is knowledge (rig pa) of one's own state.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 20th, 2022 at 10:51 PM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

PeterC said:

Omicron is, hopefully, the end of all of this...

Malcolm wrote:

Nope. Wishful thinking. Think 2024. My guess is that since we are far away from global vaccination, there will continue to be dangerous variants like Omicron (from which one can still die, and still get "long" covid) that will bypass older vaccines, and continue to stress our healthcare systems every year.

Plus, Western Europe is preparing for a war in Eastern Europe in response to Russian aggression over Ukraine, etc. etc.,

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 20th, 2022 at 10:55 PM

Title: Re: Is there an atman in your school? (Shentong)

Content:

Anders said:

They are quite similar. And why not? Shankara was greatly inspired by Nagarjuna.

Malcolm wrote:

Gzhan stong is not the view of Nagarjuna.

Anders said:

There was neither a "gzhan stong" nor "rang stong" for Shankara to take inspiration from in 8th century India.

But even if there were, how does that relate to what I posited? I am simply saying that it is understandable that Advaita Vedanta and Gzhan stong should be quite similar, given how much inspiration Shankara took from nagarjuna.

Malcolm wrote:

I guess you don't seem to understand here is that gzhan stong isn't derived from Nāgārjuna, but is instead a distortion of Nāgārjuna.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 20th, 2022 at 11:21 PM

Title: Re: Is there an atman in your school? (Shentong)

Content:

Anders said:

There was neither a "gzhan stong" nor "rang stong" for Shankara to take inspiration from in 8th century India.

But even if there were, how does that relate to what I posited? I am simply saying that it is understandable that Advaita Vedanta and Gzhan stong should be quite similar, given how much inspiration Shankara took from Nagarjuna.

Malcolm wrote:

I guess you don't seem to understand here is that gzhan stong isn't derived from Nāgārjuna, but is instead a distortion of Nāgārjuna.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Correct. It comes from Asanga and the Kalachakra Tantra.

Malcolm wrote:

Many people overlook the fact that the Agamaśāstra, the source Anders alludes to, combines Madhyamaka and Yogacāra views indiscriminately to present a nondual view of Vedanta. This is what influenced Shankara, since Gaudapāda, the author of the Agamaśāstra, was Shankara's guru's guru.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 20th, 2022 at 11:36 PM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

PeterC said:

My moneys on annexation of Ukraine by early March.

Malcolm wrote:

My bet is no later than February 23, Men's Day aka the Defender of the Fatherland anniversary.

PeterC said:

He won't do it during the Winter Olympics as that would annoy China.

Malcolm wrote:

This year, I don't think China will care much.

PeterC said:

By April the ground will have melted and will be harder going for tank regiments, and by May the troops will have rotated and he'll have less experienced recruits on the border.

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed, tanks don't do so well in thick, Ukrainian mud. That lesson was learned in WWII.

PeterC said:

And the demands he's making now are ones that nobody can or will agree to - he's not trying to negotiate, he's preparing an excuse for more aggressive measures.

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed, Putin wants this war. He needs it because of growing unrest in Russia.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 21st, 2022 at 12:22 AM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

PeterC said:

My moneys on annexation of Ukraine by early March.

Malcolm wrote:

My bet is no later than February 23, Men's Day aka the Defender of the Fatherland anniversary.

PeterC said:

He won't do it during the Winter Olympics as that would annoy China.

Malcolm wrote:

This year, I don't think China will care much.

PeterC said:

The 23rd is days before the closing ceremony. One person in Beijing will be seriously pissed if Putin upstages that, and it's a person Putin needs to stay on good terms with.

Malcolm wrote:

Then I think it will be next week, so they can declare victory on the 23rd. March is already pretty muddy in the Ukraine:

<https://www.climatestotravel.com/climate/ukraine>

I think they will take Kiev, and stop at the Dnieper River...for now.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 21st, 2022 at 1:20 AM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

One thing the pandemic has really shown is the folly of deregulation and austerity measures, but I doubt we will learn the appropriate lessons.

Malcolm wrote:

Oh, we've known this from the 80's, but you know, union busting, etc. It's like when the pension fund in Detroit collapsed, driving the city into bankruptcy. Why? Because pension funds were for the first time allowed to invest in stocks, and when those collapsed, that pension fund collapsed, and went bankrupt. Had they stayed in bonds, Detroit would have never gone into receivership.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 21st, 2022 at 1:27 AM

Title: Re: Emptiness as negation

Content:

cyril said:

Ok, so I am currently reading Avi Sion's "Logical criticism of Buddhist doctrines" and I came across the following argumentation:

Emptiness cannot be claimed as a one-off experience because it is defined by negation as the absence of essence or self-nature. Negation is a basic act of reason. It is not something ever directly experienced, not a positive phenomenon. Thus, to claim that what Buddha experienced is precisely emptiness, it would be necessary to claim a positive character to emptiness; otherwise it must be admitted his rational faculty was involved.

Can anyone spot what is wrong in this line of thought? I've been ruminating on this for a couple of days now and I still cannot find any fault in the author's reasoning. And yet, since it denies the Aryas' non-conceptual cognition of emptiness, there must be something wrong there.

Malcolm wrote:

It is very faulty. Buddha's awakening was predicted on seeing dependent origination. Whatever is empty is dependently originated, whatever is dependent originated is empty. Negations are merely an analytical manner of approximating emptiness. Negations are not themselves the insight into the absence of inherent existence of dependently originated phenomena. When an ārya cognizes emptiness, they are cognizing the emptiness of something, and that something is always something which arises dependent on causes and conditions.

So, basically Avi Sion is an idiot who did not bother to even understand the thought of the person he was refuting.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 21st, 2022 at 4:24 AM

Title: Re: Emptiness as negation

Content:

cyril said:

Ok, so I am currently reading Avi Sion's "Logical criticism of Buddhist doctrines" and I came across the following argumentation:

Can anyone spot what is wrong in this line of thought? I've been ruminating on this for a couple of days now and I still cannot find any fault in the author's reasoning. And yet, since it denies the Aryas' non-conceptual cognition of emptiness, there must be something wrong there.

Malcolm wrote:

It is very faulty. Buddha's awakening was predicted on seeing dependent origination. Whatever is empty is dependently originated, whatever is dependent originated is empty. Negations are merely an analytical manner of approximating emptiness. Negations are not themselves the insight into the absence of inherent existence of dependently originated phenomena. When an ārya cognizes emptiness, they are cognizing the emptiness of something, and that something is always something which arises dependent on causes and conditions.

So, basically Avi Sion is an idiot who did not bother to even understand the thought of the person he was refuting.

cyril said:

Ok, understood. But when we say all dependently originated phenomena are empty of inherent existence, we do not negate that which arises as dependently originated; that's only the basis for our negation. What we negate is the inherent existence; but, since that is a concept, it follows that the non-conceptual mind could not cognize it as such. It looks like there is something I fail to grasp here.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, inherent existence, an existence that is nondependent, is a false concept that we negate in relation to mere existence, an existence that arises dependent on causes and conditions. When we search for inherent existence, we cannot find it. That nonfinding is called "emptiness." For example, we can say a pot is empty of water, without implying there is water somewhere else. No one refutes this kind of negation, if they do, it is what is termed an exaggeration, no one argues that saying something is empty of water necessarily implies water elsewhere. Also, no one can argue that the perception of the absence of water is invalid. Sion's thesis, that one cannot perceive an absence is foolish and naive. As I said, he is an idiot.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 21st, 2022 at 5:29 AM

Title: Re: Who is Goddess Prajnaparamita and is she a valid part of the Buddhist pantheon?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

I believe that god and goddess are terms that shouldn't be used in Buddhism...

Malcolm wrote:

It results in strained sadhana translations. For devas, asuras, and pretas, these terms are preferred over gods, titans, and ghosts, but in a sadhana, when we are describing an offering goddess, for example, washing water, I think goddess is preferable to devi. But it is a fairly arbitrary choice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 21st, 2022 at 5:53 AM

Title: Re: Emptiness as negation

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

As I said, he is an idiot.

Shinjin said:

He has a phd in philosophy according to his bio.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, well, you know what Ph.D stands for? Pinheaded Dope.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 21st, 2022 at 6:40 AM

Title: Re: Who is Goddess Prajnaparamita and is she a valid part of the Buddhist pantheon?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

I believe that god and goddess are terms that shouldn't be used in Buddhism...

Malcolm wrote:

It results in strained sadhana translations. For devas, asuras, and pretas, these terms are preferred over gods, titans, and ghosts, but in a sadhana, when we are describing an offering goddess, for example, washing water, I think goddess is preferable to devi. But it is a fairly arbitrary choice.

Miorita said:

It doesn't. It's called a deity.

Malcolm wrote:

Can you imagine, "the female deities of washing water...." Thanks, I'll keep "goddesses."

Anyway, goddess is a fine English word, as is god:

goddess (n.)

mid-14c., female deity in a polytheistic religion, from god + fem. suffix -esse (see -ess). The Old English word was gyden, corresponding to Dutch godin, German Göttin, Danish gudine, Swedish gudinna. Of mortal women by 1570s. Related: Goddesshood.

god (n.)

Origin and meaning of god

also God; Old English god "supreme being, deity; the Christian God; image of a god; godlike person," from Proto-Germanic *guthan (source also of Old Saxon, Old Frisian, Dutch god, Old High German got, German Gott, Old Norse guð, Gothic gup), which is of uncertain origin; perhaps from PIE *ghut- "that which is invoked" (source also of Old Church Slavonic zovo "to call," Sanskrit huta- "invoked," an epithet of Indra), from root *gheu(e)- "to call, invoke." The notion could be "divine entity summoned to a sacrifice. "

But some trace it to PIE *ghu-to- "poured," from root *gheu- "to pour, pour a libation" (source of Greek khein "to pour," also in the phrase khute gaia "poured earth," referring to a burial mound; see found (v.2)). "Given the Greek facts, the Germanic form may have referred in the first instance to the spirit immanent in a burial mound" [Watkins]. See also Zeus. In either case, not related to good.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 21st, 2022 at 8:45 AM

Title: Re: Emptiness as negation

Content:

Shinjin said:

He has a phd in philosophy according to his bio.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, well, you know what Ph.D stands for? Pinheaded Dope.

PeterC said:

Relative to BS, I thought it stood for Piled Higher and Deeper

Malcolm wrote:

That too....

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 21st, 2022 at 10:10 AM

Title: Re: Who is Goddess Prajnaparamita and is she a valid part of the Buddhist pantheon?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

, but Buddhists are usually fairly adamant in their assistance that the Buddha is not "god." If we are going to call PP devī a goddess, we have to start saying "our god is Buddha"—no thanks.

Malcolm wrote:

I was referring to offering goddesses, not major figures, even so, in Tibetan Buddhism we refer to the creation stage as Deity Yoga. And in that context PP is a deity, like Tara, etc. but thus all an argument over nothing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 21st, 2022 at 10:44 AM

Title: Re: Who is Goddess Prajnaparamita and is she a valid part of the Buddhist pantheon?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

, but Buddhists are usually fairly adamant in their assistance that the Buddha is not "god." If we are going to call PP devī a goddess, we have to start saying "our god is Buddha"—no thanks.

Malcolm wrote:

I was referring to offering goddesses, not major figures, even so, in Tibetan Buddhism we refer to the creation stage as Deity Yoga. And in that context PP is a deity, like Tara, etc. but thus all an argument over nothing.

Zhen Li said:

Even deity, I have noticed, has been something that many newcomers to Mahāyāna/Vajrayāna have found to be a confusing term.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, given that newcomers to Mahayana and Vajrayana are usually completely confused about everything, there are only so many training wheels which be provided. A lot they have to sort out themselves.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 21st, 2022 at 9:28 PM

Title: Re: mostly Raw organic vegan diet for mental health?

Content:

Toenail said:

So criticizing them for only treating symptoms is ridiculous and unfounded since they are only for diagnostics...

Malcolm wrote:

Proper diagnostics must account for causes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 21st, 2022 at 10:09 PM

Title: Re: mostly Raw organic vegan diet for mental health?

Content:

Toenail said:

So criticizing them for only treating symptoms is ridiculous and unfounded since they are only for diagnostics...

Malcolm wrote:

Proper diagnostics must account for causes.

Toenail said:

I would say that it should be included in treatment. You are taking one aspect of treatment/curing an illness (diagnosing it) and criticize it for not including other aspects of the big thing. That is unfair and really just semantics. At the end all medicine should be evidence based. You look at how patients with this problem feel before the treatment and ask them how they feel afterwards. As simple as you would check whether or not a medicine works.

Malcolm wrote:

If you don't know the cause of an illness, you cannot treat it effectively since you have no evidence to address its causation and hence its cessation. The most you can do is give palliative treatment for symptoms, which sadly, is where most psychiatric medicine is at these days.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 21st, 2022 at 10:49 PM

Title: Re: mostly Raw organic vegan diet for mental health?

Content:

Toenail said:

I would say that it should be included in treatment. You are taking one aspect of treatment/curing an illness (diagnosing it) and criticize it for not including other aspects of the big thing. That is unfair and really just semantics. At the end all medicine should be evidence based. You look at how patients with this problem feel before the treatment and ask them how they feel afterwards. As simple as you would check whether or not a medicine works.

Malcolm wrote:

If you don't know the cause of an illness, you cannot treat it effectively since you have no evidence to address its causation and hence its cessation. The most you can do is give palliative treatment for symptoms, which sadly, is where most psychiatric medicine is at these days.

Toenail said:

Psychiatric medicine as well as all other schools of thoughts about this do believe they know the causes of these illnesses. Obviously this "OCD is a seizure disorder" thing you defended so strongly before brings no benefit for patients and your medication you referred to as evidence is a shit treatment. CBT is the best option we have to treat mental illnesses. And cbt has a very clear idea of what the causes of most mental illnesses are. It addresses them and when these causes are annihilated the illness is gone.

Malcolm wrote:

CBT is a management strategy only. It does not "cure" anything. But we should define what we mean by "illness" as opposed to "behavior." We will probably avoid unnecessary disagreement by doing so. For me, an illness is a disorder in the physical organism. There are many behaviors which may result from such illnesses, but not all pathological behaviors are "illnesses."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 21st, 2022 at 10:55 PM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

I currently have the coronavirus. For me, it was a rather intense but not deadly 3-day flu. Some difficulty breathing, a lot of coughing. The worse part by far was actually the fever. What am I doing about it? Just hanging out around the house. I predict that today will be the day when just hanging out around the house gets very boring, since I no longer have a fever and am no longer preoccupied with aches and pains in my joints etc.

Malcolm wrote:

My friend, who contracted covid a month ago, is still suffering from exhaustion. And his symptoms would remerge from time to time over the past month, after the first ten days when the vid first ran its course.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 21st, 2022 at 11:09 PM

Title: Re: mostly Raw organic vegan diet for mental health?

Content:

Toenail said:

Psychiatric medicine as well as all other schools of thoughts about this do believe they know the causes of these illnesses. Obviously this "OCD is a seizure disorder" thing you defended so strongly before brings no benefit for patients and your medication you referred to as evidence is a shit treatment. CBT is the best option we have to treat mental illnesses. And cbt has a very clear idea of what the causes of most mental illnesses are. It addresses them and when these causes are annihilated the illness is gone.

Malcolm wrote:

CBT is a management strategy only. It does not "cure" anything. But we should define what we mean by "illness" as opposed to "behavior." We will probably avoid unnecessary disagreement by doing so. For me, an illness is a disorder in the physical organism. There are many behaviors which may result from such illnesses, but not all pathological behaviors are "illnesses."

Toenail said:

That is not true at all. CBT can cure most mental illnesses completely. Evidence? Follow-up studies. Also behavior in the phrase CBT means physical behavior as well as thought patterns and emotions etc. It does not just refer to observable behavior.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, I understand this. My point is quite different. Mental illnesses are subjective and culturally determined, even physical illnesses, to some extent, are as well. Example— oracles, who clearly from a western diagnostic point of view are sufferers of petite and grand mal seizures, are elevated to important positions in the Tibetan Buddhist hierarchy. Things like cancer, infections, etc., on the other hand are recognized everywhere as physical pathologies. So, again, we are talking at cross purposes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 21st, 2022 at 11:21 PM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

I'm double vaxxed. For me, perhaps because I'm young, it seems like it was a very uncomfortable 3-day affair that is coming to a conclusion. We'll see if I still have symptoms next week.

I did cough up blood once, which was worrying, but only once, and now my coughing is quite mild.

Malcolm wrote:

Covid continues to damage internal organs, even if you don't notice it. The fact you coughed up blood is something you should take seriously.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 21st, 2022 at 11:28 PM

Title: Re: mostly Raw organic vegan diet for mental health?

Content:

Toenail said:

All the evidence shows that these are probably real conditions that can be treated.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, and seizure disorders are a real possibility in OCD. Many people with epilepsy have associated symptoms of OCD. There are a vast range of seizures in severity. People have mini seizures they do not even recognize. We really do not know very much about the brain. But one thing I do know, having known many people with OCD disorders, is that their conditions is aggravated by what we call vata diets and behaviors. In traditional Tibetan medicine and Ayurveda, OCD is considered a vata disorder, and that it is better for such people have vata reducing diets, etc. Vata diseases are real diseases and they can be treated.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 21st, 2022 at 11:57 PM

Title: Re: mostly Raw organic vegan diet for mental health?

Content:

Toenail said:

All the evidence shows that these are probably real conditions that can be treated.

Malcolm wrote:

by what we call vata diets and behaviors. In traditional Tibetan medicine and Ayurveda, OCD is considered a vata disorder, and that it is better for such people have vata reducing diets, etc. Vata diseases are real diseases and they can be treated.

Toenail said:

So now you are basically saying these diseases can be cured by adjustments of behavior?

Malcolm wrote:

Not alone, no. They require changes in behavior, diet, combined with herbs and physical therapies. But the Western Medical establishment does not recognize Ayurveda, etc., so...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 22nd, 2022 at 12:01 AM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

PeterC said:

He's not really winning any right now.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, he has two people in his party in the Senate who decided to throw in their lot with the party of the insurrection for personal gain.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 22nd, 2022 at 12:33 AM

Title: Re: mostly Raw organic vegan diet for mental health?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, and seizure disorders are a real possibility in OCD. Many people with epilepsy have associated symptoms of OCD. There are a vast range of seizures in severity. People have mini seizures they do not even recognize. We really do not know very much about the brain. But one thing I do know, having known many people with OCD disorders, is that their conditions is aggravated by what we call vata diets and behaviors. In traditional Tibetan medicine and Ayurveda, OCD is considered a vata disorder, and that it is better for such people have vata reducing diets, etc. Vata diseases are real diseases and they can be treated.

n8pee said:

Now I'm curious about what a vata reducing diet would entail...

Malcolm wrote:

It is not hard to find out:

<https://www.banyanbotanicals.com/info/ayurvedic-living/living-ayurveda/diet/vata-pacifying-diet/>

There is none of the standard meats added here, but to this list one could add oily fish such as salmon, tuna, etc.; meats such as lamb, duck, and dry aged beef, buffalo, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 22nd, 2022 at 12:43 AM

Title: Re: Every school/tradition's most effective method/practice to reach enlightenment...

Content:

Aemilius said:

There are many stories in modern and ancient times when some person practices under the impression and conviction that it is a technique that will take him to enlightenment/nirvana/vimoksha. Then after many years and even decades of searching for and practicing a "perfect technique", he finally meets a person who shows him/her the truth in some simple way or manner.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, this is true, there is no special technique for awakening, there is just recognition, realization, and liberation. But paths based on mind are limited and produced a limited, and temporal result.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 22nd, 2022 at 1:11 AM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

ManiThePainter said:

Will Trump win again or will someone worse come in?

Malcolm wrote:

If Trump manages to steal the next election, he will be a smarter, more dangerous Trump.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 22nd, 2022 at 1:30 AM

Title: Re: mostly Raw organic vegan diet for mental health?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Proper diagnostics must account for causes.

Johnny Dangerous said:

There are all kinds of idiopathic diseases which are defined primarily by symptoms.

chokyi lodro said:

Correct. And for many mental health conditions, the cause becomes somewhat irrelevant to both the patient and practitioner.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, this is the Western paradigm, the Hippocratic approach to treating illnesses.

I don't actively practice Tibetan medicine any more, but in Tibetan Medicine and Ayurveda, this view of illness is not favored. If there is an effect, there must be a cause. If the cause is not addressed—and some causes cannot be addressed in the case of karmic illnesses, for example—the effect cannot be removed, just palliated.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 22nd, 2022 at 1:36 AM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I would not at all be surprised with a De Santis or Doctor Oz presidency.

Malcolm wrote:

I would. Trump might win. These two? Never.

More likely would be an MOR Republican like Romney who can catch independent voters and centrists on both sides, leaving the extremes to fume and sputter.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 22nd, 2022 at 1:41 AM

Title: Re: mostly Raw organic vegan diet for mental health?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

I don't actively practice Tibetan medicine any more, but in Tibetan Medicine and Ayurveda, this view of illness is not favored. If there is an effect, there must be a cause. If the cause is not addressed—and some causes cannot be addressed in the case of karmic illnesses, for example—the effect cannot be removed, just palliated.

chokyi lodro said:

Understood, but my point is that in many instances the cause is simply unknown.

Malcolm wrote:

I understand that Western Medicine leaves these causes as unknown. That is not the case with Tibetan Medicine and Ayurveda. The cause of all diseases is known. They are the three humors: vata, pitta, and kapha. Those in turn arise from desire, hatred, and confusion. Its a complete different way of looking at illness, including mental illness.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 22nd, 2022 at 2:05 AM

Title: Re: What exactly is it that leads to Enlightenment? (arhat and buddhahood)

Content:

Nalanda said:

What exactly is it that leads to Enlightenment? (arhat and buddhahood)

Malcolm wrote:

A guru.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 22nd, 2022 at 2:12 AM

Title: Re: Every school/tradition's most effective method/practice to reach enlightenment...

Content:

Aemilius said:

There are many stories in modern and ancient times when some person practices under the impression and conviction that it is a technique that will take him to enlightenment/nirvana/vimoksha. Then after many years and even decades of searching for and practicing a "perfect technique", he finally meets a person who shows him/her the truth in some simple way or manner.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, this is true, there is no special technique for awakening, there is just recognition, realization, and liberation. But paths based on mind are limited and produced a limited, and temporal result.

Queequeg said:

By mind, are you referring to mano, manas and alaya vijnananas? I.e. conditioned levels of mind?

Malcolm wrote:

The eight consciousnesses.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 22nd, 2022 at 2:30 AM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

More likely would be an MOR Republican like Romney who can catch independent voters and centrists on both sides, leaving the extremes to fume and sputter.

ManiThePainter said:

I thought that Romney, as one of the few Republicans who dared speak out against Trump, was on the Republican shitlist?

Queequeg said:

Yeah, there's no frickin way.

The benches of both parties are pretty thin.

A third party candidate might actually have a shot here. I don't know what that party would look like.

Right of Center? A little populist/working class?

Malcolm wrote:

How about a Romney/Cheney ticket?

Or HRC again?

We are so fcked.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 22nd, 2022 at 3:47 AM

Title: Re: What exactly is it that leads to Enlightenment? (arhat and buddhahood)

Content:

Nalanda said:

I'm sold, teacher. I'm sold. But some teacher don't accept any more students.

Malcolm wrote:

There are many good teachers out there. But you have a lot of learn just about General Buddhadharma to begin with. It's better to make a connection with a principle lineage, and then when you know what you are doing, continue from there.

I do not recommend connection with rando teachers on the internet.

Making a connection with a guru is serious business and many so-called teachers presenting themselves as as so-called gurus have concocted or exaggerated credentials. Nor do they have any idea how to care for their students. Being a teacher is a serious responsibility, as is being a student.

So one has to be discerning in the beginning. You have to be like a bee, and see which teachers and lineages resonate, and then investigate them, and see what faults and qualities they have. What you do not need is an old fraud like me.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 22nd, 2022 at 7:57 AM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

I'm double vaxxed. For me, perhaps because I'm young, it seems like it was a very uncomfortable 3-day affair that is coming to a conclusion. We'll see if I still have symptoms next week.

I did cough up blood once, which was worrying, but only once, and now my coughing is quite mild.

Malcolm wrote:

Covid continues to damage internal organs, even if you don't notice it. The fact you coughed up blood is something you should take seriously.

Caoimhghín said:

Well, I certainly didn't cough up blood and then think "Well, it's just my time of the month."

Malcolm wrote:

Sorry I expressed concern.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 22nd, 2022 at 9:02 AM

Title: Re: Question about White Tara Initiation bestowed by H.H. The Sakya Trichen Rinpoche

Content:

Aloke said:

Dear all,

H.H. The Sakya Trichen Rinpoche just bestowed the White Tara Wish Fulfilling Wheel Initiation online today.

Can anyone confirm if it was the Six-Domed White Tara Empowerment?

As it was given at the same time of the scheduled White Tara Retreat at Sakya Canberra:

<https://www.sakya.com.au/civicrm/event/info/?reset=1&id=435>

Thank you very much!

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and you can purchase the sadhana on Amazon as arranged by Khenpo Migmar

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 22nd, 2022 at 11:23 AM

Title: Re: What exactly is it that leads to Enlightenment? (arhat and buddhahood)

Content:

Nalanda said:

So what is it that actually brings about enlightenment in someone?

Malcolm wrote:

Insight.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 22nd, 2022 at 9:00 PM

Title: Re: Question about White Tara Initiation bestowed by H.H. The Sakya Trichen Rinpoche

Content:

Aloke said:

Thank you so much!

Couldn't find the Sadhana, but I found this very interesting and appropriate book by Lama Choedak Rinpoche:

Meditation on White Tara: The Goddess of Vitality and Longevity

https://www.amazon.com.br/dp/0994581319/ref=cm_sw_r_apan_glt_i_AZEB351KCYGQGWSF8AHB

Malcolm wrote:

The sadhana in in this book.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 22nd, 2022 at 10:35 PM

Title: Re: NASA Is Hiring Religious Leaders To Prepare For Encounter With Aliens ?

Content:

Aemilius said:

Has there been any discussion or guide lines about aliens taking refuge in the Three Jewels?

Malcolm wrote:

Nonhuman beings cannot receive upasaka precepts. Nor, for that matter, can all humans. Chapter 4, Kishabhasya.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 23rd, 2022 at 10:13 AM

Title: Re: Refuge as a pre-requisite for lung

Content:

Inedible said:

Do you really have to ask? Without going for Refuge, you aren't a Buddhist. You don't have to have a formal ceremony, but you have to say the words. And mean them.

Malcolm wrote:

Not really. It's sufficient to be sincerely interested in the Dharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 23rd, 2022 at 8:53 PM

Title: Re: Refuge as a pre-requisite for lung

Content:

ManiThePainter said:

Quite a few different views on this it seems.

From my own basic knowledge I'd assume that practice necessitated refuge.

But is receiving a lung a practice?

Malcolm wrote:

For a practitioner it is a practice, part of the three wisdoms.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 23rd, 2022 at 11:29 PM

Title: Re: Are we living in a virtual reality?

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

...Chalmers argues that we could already be inhabitants of a virtual reality: "We can never prove we're not in a computer simulation because any evidence of ordinary reality could be simulated."

This is known as the simulation hypothesis, the scenario that is explored in the recently released Matrix Resurrections. Chalmers points out that humans have already invented games that simulate real life, such as The Sims. These will become more sophisticated over time, with versions of them running on millions of devices. Furthermore, out there in the rest of the universe, "if any aliens have human-level intelligence, they should eventually develop computers and program them. If these alien civilisations survive long enough, they'll likely create simulated universes." Statistically speaking, that means simulated beings probably already vastly outnumber "real" ones. In other words, it's more likely we're living in a simulation than in the original version of our world. ...

Ultimately, Reality+ is about extending our sense of the real. Chalmers's central idea, that "there is more to reality than we thought", is seductive, and I was surprised to find his arguments delightfully – or perhaps worryingly – convincing.

He has taken a subject most people would dismiss as pure science fiction and produced a brilliant and very readable philosophical investigation. This is the David Chalmers who defined the 'hard problem' of consciousness so we should take him (at least a little) seriously. His new book Reality+ is reviewed here - <https://www.theguardian.com/books/2022/jan/19/reality-by-david-j-chalmers-review-are-we-living-in-a-simulation>.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

This is just a variation of Descarte's demon:

And yet firmly rooted in my mind is the long-standing opinion that there is an omnipotent God who made me the kind of creature that I am. How do I know that he has not brought it about that there is no earth, no sky, no extended thing, no shape, no size, no place, while at the same time ensuring that all these things appear to me to exist just as they do now?...I will suppose therefore that not God, who is supremely good and the source of truth, but rather some malicious demon [mauvais génie] of the utmost power and cunning has employed all his energies in order to deceive me.

<https://plato.stanford.edu/entries/descartes-epistemology/#EvilGeniDoub>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 23rd, 2022 at 11:54 PM

Title: Re: Thich Nhat Hanh has passed away

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

TNH's commentary on the Heart Sutra was one of the first Buddhist teachings I ever heard. His social engagement, which grew out of his experience dealing with colonial repression in Vietnam caused him to coin the term "engaged Buddhism." He is the OG Engaged Buddhist teacher, one of the most important Buddhist teachers of the 20th and early 21st century.

"Our ecology should be a deep ecology—not only deep, but universal."

--Thich Nhat Hahn.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 24th, 2022 at 12:08 AM

Title: Re: How to know if a Dharma Center is a "Sangha" or "official"?

Content:

zerwe said:

There are layers of meaning to the word "Sangha." I can't remember, but technically a group would have at least 3 ordained to qualify.

Malcolm wrote:

This refers only to a monastic Sangha.

zerwe said:

The term "Sangha" gets thrown around a lot and, in the west people consider a group of dharma brothers and sisters to be a "Sangha," but this is not the true meaning of the word.

Malcolm wrote:

Of course it is.

saMgha m. (fr. $\%{\text{sam}}$ + $\%{\text{han}}$) ` " close contact or combination " , any collection or assemblage , heap , multitude , quantity , crowd , host , number (generally with gen. pl. or ifc. , e.g. $\%{\text{muni-s-}}$, ` " a multitude of sages " BhP. ; $\%{\text{zatru-s-}}$, a host of enemies Ra1jat.) MBh. Ka1v. &c. ; any number of people living together for a certain purpose , a society , association , company , community ; a clerical community , congregation , church Mn. Sa1h. &c. ; (esp.) the whole community or collective body or brotherhood of monks (with Buddhists ; also applied to a monkish fraternity or sect among Jains) Buddh. Sarvad. MWB. 176.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 24th, 2022 at 12:43 AM

Title: Re: Sotapannas and killing

Content:

Shinjin said:

Do Sotapannas/stream enterers have the ability to kill according to the Mahayana understanding?

Malcolm wrote:

Assuming you are referring to Mahāyāna stream entrants, i.e. first stage bodhisattvas, sure—they definitely can end the life of evil beings in order to protect sentient beings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 24th, 2022 at 1:13 AM

Title: Re: Did Buddha really teach the Middle Way?

Content:

Realmwalker said:

To me it comes across that you are agitated with my words, and instead of responding indepthly you simply tell me I am incompetent and refer me to go seek out a teacher.

Malcolm wrote:

The Dunning–Kruger effect is the cognitive bias whereby people with low ability at a task overestimate their ability.

-- https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dunning%E2%80%93Kruger_effect

Realmwalker said:

I am comparing Buddha's wisdom to my own mystical experience in order to deepen my understanding of that experience

Malcolm wrote:

The Dunning–Kruger effect is usually explained in terms of meta-cognitive abilities. This approach is based on the idea that poor performers have not yet acquired the ability to distinguish between good and bad performances. They tend to overrate themselves because they do not see the qualitative difference between their performances and the performances of others

-- https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dunning%E2%80%93Kruger_effect

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 24th, 2022 at 1:33 AM

Title: Re: Does buddhism require taking scripture literally?

Content:

wonderingaround said:

Hi,

I recently encountered an online conversation whether buddhists must accept deities, the other realms etc. as fact and believe in them.

Malcolm wrote:

This rather fundamentalist idea mainly circulates in some Nyingmapa circles.

wonderingaround said:

I have considered myself as a Buddhist for some time and frankly, got slightly upset that my view that I have assumed is very mainstream especially in the West is considered an insult to "real buddhists".

Malcolm wrote:

There are fanatics everywhere.

wonderingaround said:

I would really appreciate any views on this and also how to respond if I encounter this sort of claims again.

Many thanks in advance!

Malcolm wrote:

Treat it the same way you would treat any fundamentalist claim.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 24th, 2022 at 1:37 AM

Title: Re: Sotapannas and killing

Content:

Shinjin said:

Do Sotapannas/stream enterers have the ability to kill according to the Mahayana understanding?

Malcolm wrote:

Assuming you are referring to Mahāyāna stream entrants, i.e. first stage bodhisattvas, sure—they definitely can end the life of evil beings in order to protect sentient beings.

Shinjin said:

I'm talking about the Hinayana stream enterer.

Malcolm wrote:

It's not possible.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 24th, 2022 at 1:58 AM

Title: Re: Sotapannas and killing

Content:

Shinjin said:

I'm talking about the Hinayana stream enterer.

Malcolm wrote:

It's not possible.

Shinjin said:

Even out of self defense or if they have a mice infestation inside their homes? How is that practical for them?

Malcolm wrote:

They live with the mice, they have no self to defend.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 24th, 2022 at 2:01 AM

Title: Re: Sotapannas and killing

Content:

Arnoud said:

Since stream enterers get rid of view of self, clinging to rituals and doubt, how does it follow that they can't kill?

Malcolm wrote:

They are incapable of breaking precepts, the most basic of which is refraining from killing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 24th, 2022 at 3:39 AM

Title: Re: Sotapannas and killing

Content:

Unknown said:

"And what does it mean to be consummate in virtue? There is the case where a noble disciple abstains from taking life, abstains from stealing, abstains from illicit sexual conduct, abstains from lying, abstains from taking intoxicants that cause heedlessness. This is called being consummate in virtue.

Malcolm wrote:

https://www.accesstoinight.org/lib/study/into_the_stream.html#association

Unknown said:

"Monks, there are these six rewards in realizing the fruit of stream-entry. Which six? One is certain of the true Dhamma. One is not subject to falling back. There is no suffering over what has had a limit placed on it. [1] One is endowed with uncommon knowledge. [2] One rightly sees cause, along with causally-originated phenomena.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 24th, 2022 at 5:15 AM

Title: Re: Does buddhism require taking scripture literally?

Content:

wonderingaround said:

Like with all internet arguments, I felt like an idiot for engaging in one, but couldn't help myself reading these outrageous claims.

I was so taken aback by someone claiming that a literal interpretation of the scriptures is mainstream and that I must follow some "american Zen way" to think otherwise.

Malcolm wrote:

There are two doctrines, without which Buddhadharma makes no sense: karma and rebirth. These are the two main existential issues Buddhadharma seeks to address. Without these two doctrines, Buddha's solutions to the problem of suffering do not make sense.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 24th, 2022 at 7:20 PM

Title: Re: Refuge as a pre-requisite for lung

Content:

Inedible said:

I'm not Catholic so I don't take Communion. My parents tried, but it didn't take. I don't know about other religions. Why would someone want to be involved with someone else's religion without actually joining it?

Malcolm wrote:

The Buddha never said to anyone, "Before you sit and listen to me, you must go for refuge to me." However, very often at the end of a discourse, people, impressed by his words, then went to refuge in the Three Jewels.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 24th, 2022 at 7:27 PM

Title: Re: Asoka and the Jains

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Aśokāvadāna, but this is mixing Ājīvakas and Jains and is more legendary than historical.

tingdzin said:

Thanks, I thought it might be something like that.

Malcolm wrote:

It's a strange thing to include if there is no truth to it at all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 24th, 2022 at 10:51 PM

Title: Re: Does buddhism require taking scripture literally?

Content:

wonderingaround said:

That to call oneself a Buddhist, one must have faith in these things and that it is wrong to view the stories as metaphorical.

Malcolm wrote:

Wrong view in Buddhadharma is confined to rejecting rebirth, karma, and dependent origination. Questioning the existence of nāgās and so on does not rate as wrong view.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 24th, 2022 at 11:02 PM

Title: Re: Asoka and the Jains

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

There is a mistake in the text, but it is clear that Jains were the intended targets of the purge.

Screen Shot 2022-01-24 at 10.00.41 AM.png (119.32 KiB) Viewed 4216 times

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 25th, 2022 at 12:57 AM

Title: Re: Asoka and the Jains

Content:

Zhen Li said:

In fact, as far as what can be established by the edicts alone, Aśoka himself was supportive of Buddhism, Jainism, Brahmanism and Ajīvikism.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, after a certain point in his reign. But the Avadana records that he was a tyrant, very cruel, and explains the reason for his softening to be the execution of his brother.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 25th, 2022 at 1:03 AM

Title: Re: Refuge as a pre-requisite for lung

Content:

ManiThePainter said:

Nobody here is saying anything about never taking refuge.

Since I'm planning on taking an online lung within a couple of months but might be unable to take formal refuge (I would like to do so in person at a temple or with a sangha and to take vows) due to the current coronavirus strain, I was merely wondering if it was pointless to receive the lung if I hadn't already gone for refuge.

PeterC said:

You can take refuge anywhere, at any time. If you feel a little formality would be desirable, look into Garchen R's 'refuge at a distance' arrangement.

ManiThePainter said:

Thanks PeterC. I thought I had read somewhere that one had to go for refuge and take vows in person (one could say it by oneself but it would not be the same). Clearly I was misinformed.

Malcolm wrote:

Mahayāna refuge can be taken by visualizing the Buddhas and bodhisattvas in front of you and reciting refuge formula. You do not need a preceptor. This system is clearly taught in the Mahāyāna sūtra. However, you should not let other people's religious trips make you anxious.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 25th, 2022 at 1:20 AM

Title: Re: Refuge as a pre-requisite for lung

Content:

ManiThePainter said:

Thanks PeterC. I thought I had read somewhere that one had to go for refuge and take vows in person (one could say it by oneself but it would not be the same). Clearly I was misinformed.

Malcolm wrote:

Mahayāna refuge can be taken by visualizing the Buddhas and bodhisattvas in front of you and reciting refuge formula. You do not need a preceptor. This system is clearly taught in the Mahāyāna sūtra. However, you should not let other people's religious trips make you anxious.

ManiThePainter said:

Thanks. I appreciate the help.

So the cutting of hair as part of the refuge ceremony is just a formality?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, it is a formality. You never read in the sutras where someone cuts hair just for going for refuge. All ordination rites are later developments. None of them come from the Buddha himself.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 25th, 2022 at 1:57 AM

Title: Seventeen Tantras Lung with Tulku Dakpa

Content:

Unknown said:

Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche, the director of Danakosha Ling in Finland, at the request of Zangthal Editions in association with Wisdom Publications, has kindly agreed to bestow the reading transmission (lung) of the Seventeen Tantras online beginning March 18, 2022, the anniversary of Nirmāṇakāya Garab Dorje's birth on Danakosha Island.

Malcolm wrote:

Register here:

<https://wisdomexperience.org/seventeen-tantras-lung/>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 25th, 2022 at 9:16 AM

Title: Re: Asoka and the Jains

Content:

Zhen Li said:

but Ajātaśatru killed his father so he committed one of the five heinous crimes.

Malcolm wrote:

This is debatable, actually. He didn't actually slay Bimbisara, rather, Bimbisara starved to death. As Ajatashatru attained stream entry, etc., according to some accounts, it's questionable if he committed an uninteruptible deed, and is a topic of debate among Tibetan scholars.

As far as Ashoka goes, I think it certainly plausible that early in his conversion he may have engaged in sectarian violence, despite his later turn toward tolerance.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 25th, 2022 at 9:38 AM

Title: Re: Is Jamyang Losel a monk?

Content:

Nalanda said:

<https://sakyachodcholing.org/blueflower/>

Asking because the website says he is an ordained monastic but he seems to have a lot of hair on his head.

Malcolm wrote:
He is a getsul, not a gelong.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, January 25th, 2022 at 11:03 AM
Title: Re: Seventeen Tantras Lung with Tulku Dakpa
Content:

Charlie123 said:
Thank you, I am excited for this. Do you know who Tulku Dakpa received this transmission from?

Malcolm wrote:
Sangye Nyenpa, who received it from Dilgo Khyentse.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, January 25th, 2022 at 10:17 PM
Title: Re: Buddhahood In This Life
Content:
Shaiksha said:
Hi All

Here is the registration link (just in case anyone needs it):

https://wisdomexperience.org/seventeen-tantras-lung/?fbclid=IwAR1aZyyMvIQyBl3bEhJ0o5iKH7qWrbDY8MKzqrRV0ZoQfn0nxYIDJ5ut_ok

I have a question and hopefully someone can help me. Once I receive this transmission, can I also read and practice with the Buddhahood in this life since it is a related text? Or, do I need to have a separate transmission?

Thank you all in advance.

Malcolm wrote:
In general, you to have received Dzogchen transmission and instructions on how to practice. There is no DIY Dzogchen for beginners.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, January 25th, 2022 at 11:27 PM
Title: Re: Buddhahood In This Life
Content:
Shaiksha said:
Another question, if I may though: how does Buddhahood relate to the Seventeen Tantras in terms of practice? If I receive the transmission and instructions for the Seventeen Tantras, should I still get a transmission and instruction on Buddhahood when an opportunity arises? E.g. are they complementary or one is more complete than the other?

Malcolm wrote:

If you have received the lung for the Tshig Don mDzod (Treasury of Genuine Meaning) then you can read Buddhahood, providing of course you have received Dzogchen transmission. Both it and Buddhahood present how one is to systematically approach the material in the 17 tantras, the former being an expansion of the latter by Longchenpa.

If you receive the lung for the 17 tantras you can study those tantras that have been translated, as well as their commentaries.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 25th, 2022 at 11:41 PM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

truthb said:

I am wondering about Mahayana/Vajrayana Teachers, Schools or Sutras which talk about the inevitable "salvation" of all from Samsara?

Malcolm wrote:

You have to distinguish between two types of gotra, or inclination for awakening: natural and activated.

Only those sentient beings who have activated their inclination for awakening will attain buddhahood. There is no guarantee that all sentient beings will awaken to full buddhahood, since there is no guarantee that all sentient beings will eventually take birth as human beings with eight freedoms and ten endowments and meet the Dharma. And meeting the Dharma is the condition for attaining Buddhahood. And, the Buddha did say:

Misdeeds cannot be washed away with water.

Suffering cannot be removed by hand.

I cannot give liberation to you, but I can demonstrate the path.

Meeting the path of the Dharma always requires some cause, some gathering of merit. No one can meet the Dharma and practice the path without first attaining the precious human birth. Various examples are taught by the Buddha to illustrate the rarity of the fully qualified human birth, one of the most famous of which is that a precious human birth is as rare as a blind sea turtle who rises to the surface of the ocean every one hundred years, and just happens to put his head through a golden yoke that has been floating on the surface of the ocean.

So, no, there is no valid Mahāyāna tradition that teaches it is inevitable that all sentient beings will attain buddhahood. It is a realistic probability that some sentient beings, despite having the potential to attain buddhahood, will never gather the causes and conditions for meeting the Dharma, much less even be reborn as a human being who can attain buddhahood.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 25th, 2022 at 11:50 PM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Shinjin said:

It's impossible since the number of sentient beings is infinite.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, but it is an infinity that has a limit. Meaning, no new sentient beings come into being. So it could be possible, but there are other factors that make it improbable.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 26th, 2022 at 12:32 AM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Shinjin said:

It's impossible since the number of sentient beings is infinite.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, but it is an infinity that has a limit. Meaning, no new sentient beings come into being. So it could be possible, but there are other factors that make it improbable.

Shinjin said:

In other words the number is actually finite but there's a high improbability of it ever happening because of icchantikas.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, we Madhyamakas don't actually admit there is such a thing as real icchantikas, but allow that there are de facto "icchantikas" in so far as there are some sentient beings who may never have the causes and conditions to meet the Dharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 26th, 2022 at 1:28 AM

Title: Re: Buddhahood In This Life

Content:

Shaiksha said:

Another question, if I may though: how does Buddhahood relate to the Seventeen Tantras in terms of practice? If I receive the transmission and instructions for the Seventeen Tantras, should I still get a transmission and instruction on Buddhahood when an opportunity arises? E.g. are they complementary or one is more complete than the other?

Malcolm wrote:

If you have received the lung for the Tshig Don mDzod (Treasury of Genuine Meaning) than you can read Buddhahood, providing of course you have received Dzogchen transmission. Both it and Buddhahood present how one is to systematically approaches the material in the 17 tantras, the former being an expansion of the latter by Longchenpa.

If you receive the lung for the 17 tantras you can study those tantras that have been translated, as well as their commentaries.

Shaiksha said:

Oh okay - good to know the relation between Longchenpa's Precious Treasury of Genuine Meaning and Buddhahood. How does theg mchog mdzod (Treasury of Supreme Vehicle) come into the picture? Do we even have a translation on this work?

I note that a new book is coming out - the Precious Treasury of the Fundamental Nature. I wonder if this is a translation and commentary of theg mchog mdzo?

Thank you.

Malcolm wrote:

The Theg mchog mdzod is a treatment of the 17 tantras in 25 chapters. It is in two volumes and has not been translated. And it really shouldn't be translated until all 17 and their extant commentaries have been translated.

The text you mention, the gnas lugs mdzod, is not the theg mchog mdzod.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 26th, 2022 at 3:15 AM

Title: Re: Creating representations of the Buddha = Wealth, Fame, Happiness?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Question about the sutra "Describing the Benefits of Producing Representations of the Thus-Gone One"

Āryatathāgata-pratibimba-pratiṣṭhānuśaṃsa-saṃvarṇananāmadharmaparyāya

<https://read.84000.co/translation/toh320.html>

It says that you will get this as benefits:

excellent life circumstances such as happiness and fame physical beauty wealth they will accrue
the donor will become a universal emperor enjoying all the advantages of that position that the donor will be reborn among the gods and enjoy all divine distinctions.
and this is over "benefits accrued by creating representations of the Buddha."

What is this "representation" being talked about here? Statues of the Buddha?

And, really? Those benefits are to be expected for creating statues of the Buddha?

Malcolm wrote:

Statues and paintings. But this does not mean just coming up with some drawing.
Images of the Buddha have to be made according to very strict rules of composition and need to be studied under a qualified teacher.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 26th, 2022 at 3:19 AM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Shinjin said:

In other words the number is actually finite but there's a high improbability of it ever happening because of icchantikas.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, we Madhyamakas don't actually admit there is such a thing as real icchantikas, but allow that there are de facto "icchantikas" in so far as there are some sentient beings who may never have the causes and conditions to meet the Dharma.

Shinjin said:

Does everything cease to exist if every sentient being attains parinirvana? No more earth, deva realms, pure lands, rainbow bodies etc?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, because the cause of outer universe is the result of collective karma of all sentient beings. No sentient beings, no karma, no outer universe left. All that will be left is the field of the wisdom of Buddhahood, which is actually all there is anyway, we just don't see it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 26th, 2022 at 4:04 AM

Title: Dodrupchen is in Thukdam

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Sad news.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 26th, 2022 at 5:13 AM

Title: Re: Dodrupchen is in Thukdam

Content:

Arnoud said:

Indeed. Did you ever meet him?

Malcolm wrote:

Once.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 26th, 2022 at 5:19 AM

Title: Re: Monastic Advice for Modern Society

Content:

BodhiPrajna said:

My friend then asked me, "How can someone who has spent their whole life in a monastery, cloistered away from the real world, offer any advice on how to live in the real world, when they don't have bills to pay, and they don't get stuck in traffic or have a boss that talks down to them, and they don't deal with any of the things that people in the real world have to deal with on a daily basis?"

Malcolm wrote:

Samsara is samsara no matter where you. Monasteries also have bills to pay, monks get stuck in traffic, and have pushy bosses too, etc. Your friend has a misunderstanding of monastic life.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 26th, 2022 at 6:36 AM

Title: Re: Dodrupchen is in Thukdam

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Sad news.

Seeker12 said:

I saw a facebook post saying that reports of his death were misinformation and he was in fact doing just fine. Do you have reliable info that he has passed?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

It has been confirmed to me by a Tibetan tulku. Also Khenpo Tsewang Dongyal announced it earlier today.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 26th, 2022 at 10:07 AM

Title: Re: Monastic Advice for Modern Society

Content:

BodhiPrajna said:

My friend then asked me, "How can someone who has spent their whole life in a monastery, cloistered away from the real world, offer any advice on how to live in the real world, when they don't have bills to pay, and they don't get stuck in traffic or have a boss that talks down to them, and they don't deal with any of the things that people in the real world have to deal with on a daily basis?"

Malcolm wrote:

Samsara is samsara no matter where you. Monasteries also have bills to pay, monks get stuck in traffic, and have pushy bosses too, etc. Your friend has a misunderstanding of monastic life.

KeithA said:

This. Monks have many of the same concerns lay people have. They are just framed a little different. No one escapes the fire of samsara.

Malcolm wrote:

Plus they have added anxiety of modeling awakening, whether they are or not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 26th, 2022 at 11:22 AM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

So, Dzogchen also teaches that it is inevitable that all beings will attain Buddhahood.

Malcolm wrote:

It's interpretable and can't be taken at face value, since Dzogchen texts also state some Buddhas err and return to the state of being sentient beings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 26th, 2022 at 11:26 AM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

So, no, there is no valid Mahāyāna tradition that teaches it is inevitable that all sentient beings will attain buddhahood.

Zhen Li said:

Jōdo Shinshū.

Malcolm wrote:

It's not a claim you can validate.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 26th, 2022 at 10:00 PM

Title: Re: Buddhahood In This Life

Content:

Toenail said:

can I read Buddhahood in this life?

Malcolm wrote:

It's better if you the lung for BITL.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 26th, 2022 at 10:04 PM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

some Buddhas err and return to the state of being sentient beings.

ConfusedOne said:

If I may, would you explain what err is? Sounds really interesting. Can't seem to find more about this on google.

Queequeg said:

It would mean that some beings, after attaining buddhahood, fall back into the error of not recognizing their fundamental state, buddhahood. Its a logical impossibility.

Malcolm wrote:

For lower yanas, yes, it seems impossible. But the Buddhahood they assert is reversible.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 26th, 2022 at 10:14 PM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Queequeg said:

I agree with Zhen Li here - there is ample scriptural support for the assertion that all sentient beings will become buddhas;

Malcolm wrote:

No, there is scriptural support for the idea all _can_ become Buddhas. Even the Lotus only asserts a prediction. Such assertions are interpretable, like the teachings on buddhanature itself. Thus is not a guarantee that all will become Buddhas. This is why Indian Madhyamakas, no slouches when it comes to reading and interpreting sutras, deny the existence of icchantikas while allowing that there are some beings so benighted that they will never attain buddhahood.

They amount to a "Sure, buddy, you can do it!" In contrast to the sourpuss shravakayana assertions that one has to receive a prediction in person from a buddha, while being male and so on.

And, if all sentient beings are actually going to become Buddhas, thus undermines the reason for having bodhicitta in the first place. There are a number of negative consequences for taking such a position literally.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 26th, 2022 at 10:40 PM

Title: Re: Dude, you're just a sim.

Content:

Queequeg said:

Some people who think very highly of their intelligence think we're living in a computer simulation.

Malcolm wrote:

Such people failed Phil101.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 26th, 2022 at 10:45 PM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Queequeg said:

I agree with Zhen Li here - there is ample scriptural support for the assertion that all sentient beings will become buddhas;

Malcolm wrote:

No, there is scriptural support for the idea all can become Buddhas. Even the Lotus only asserts a prediction. Such assertions are interpretable, like the teachings on buddhanature itself. Thus is not a guarantee that all will become Buddhas. This is why Indian Madhyamakas, no slouches when it comes to reading and interpreting sutras, deny the existence of icchantikas while allowing that there are some beings so benighted that they will never attain buddhahood.

They amount to a “Sure, buddy, you can do it!” In contrast to the sourpuss shravakayana assertions that one has to receive a prediction in person from a buddha, while being male and so on.

And, if all sentient beings are actually going to become Buddhas, thus undermines the reason for having bodhicitta in the first place. There are a number of negative consequences for taking such a position literally.

Queequeg said:

I think I come around more or less without carrying the one, so to speak. As edifying stories, they imply what needs to be done now, by someone who chooses to undertake the path. Whether such calculations are even possible where the absolutes are inestimable is beside the point. One must conduct themselves as though this is a literal possibility. At bodhi, from what I can infer, the actual answer to this question doesn't matter.

Malcolm wrote:

Also, Dzogchen teachings assert that while all sentient beings manifested in this mahakalpa will attain buddhahood, in the next kalpa, an infinite number of latent sentient beings will manifest.

Above, I said “traditions”, I should have said “positions.” The position that all sentient beings will attain buddhahood is not a valid Mahayana position, IMO.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 26th, 2022 at 11:10 PM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Queequeg said:

It would mean that some beings, after attaining buddhahood, fall back into the error of not recognizing their fundamental state, buddhahood. Its a logical impossibility.

Malcolm wrote:

For lower yanas, yes, it seems impossible. But the Buddhahood they assert is reversible.

Queequeg said:

I've encountered this teaching in Tiantai, also. They assert the buddhahood of lower teachings (doesn't follow the same yana model in Dzogchen) is provisional in nature and not authentic Buddhahood.

Malcolm wrote:

It's a symptom of an incomplete gnosis.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 26th, 2022 at 11:15 PM

Title: Re: Prajnaparamita Translations & Commentaries

Content:

Zhen Li said:

"Groundless Paths" is also the same kind of work, but from the Nyingma tradition.

Malcolm wrote:

The AA commentary by Paltrul is basically just a crib of Tsongkhapa's AA commentary. So, one should just get Sparhams translation of Tsongkhapa's commentary.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 26th, 2022 at 11:22 PM

Title: Re: Buddhahood In This Life

Content:

Toenail said:

can I read Buddhahood in this life?

Malcolm wrote:

It's better if you the lung for BITL.

Toenail said:

Any idea when he will give it next?

Malcolm wrote:

I have no idea. Recently Shechen Rabjam gave the lung for the 7 treasures of Longchenpa. If you attended that, that is sufficient. But in reality, it is a text you should hear, not just read.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 26th, 2022 at 11:31 PM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Queequeg said:

I've encountered this teaching in Tiantai, also. They assert the buddhahood of lower teachings (doesn't follow the same yana model in Dzogchen) is provisional in nature and not authentic Buddhahood.

Malcolm wrote:

It's a symptom of an incomplete gnosis.

Queequeg said:

Yes. The degree of incompleteness is commensurate with the relative insight of the particular yana. The thing that distinguishes the highest teaching from the penultimate teaching is whether fundamental nescience, the ignorance beyond the myriad dust like afflictions, is overcome.

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhology is fun!

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 26th, 2022 at 11:34 PM

Title: Re: Does buddhism require taking scripture literally?

Content:

wonderingaround said:

That to call oneself a Buddhist, one must have faith in these things and that it is wrong to view the stories as metaphorical.

Malcolm wrote:

Wrong view in Buddhadharma is confined to rejecting rebirth, karma, and dependent origination. Questioning the existence of nāgās and so on does not rate as wrong view.

wonderingaround said:

Thank you Malcolm. Are there any (possibly) beginner friendly resources on this I could do further readings on?

Malcolm wrote:

There is an interesting book by Bhikku Analayo on rebirth:

<https://www.amazon.com/Rebirth-Early-Buddhism-Current-Research/dp/1614294461>

wonderingaround said:

German Buddhist monk and university professor Bhikkhu Analayo had not given much attention to the topic of rebirth before some friends asked him to explore the treatment of the issue in early Buddhist texts. This succinct volume presents his findings, approaching the topic from four directions. The first chapter examines the doctrine of rebirth as it is presented in the earliest Buddhist sources and the way it relates to core doctrinal principles. The second chapter reviews debates about rebirth throughout Buddhist history and up to modern times, noting the role of confirmation bias in evaluation of evidence. Chapter 3 reviews the merits of current research on rebirth, including near-death experience, past-life regression, and children who recall previous lives. The chapter concludes with an examination of xenoglossy, the ability to speak languages one has not learned previously, and chapter 4 examines the particular case of Dhammaruwan, a Sri Lankan boy who chants Pali texts that he does not appear to have learned in his present life. Rebirth in Early Buddhism and Current Research brings together the many strands of the debate on rebirth in one place, making it both comprehensive and compact. It is not a polemic but an interrogation of the evidence, and it leaves readers to come to their own conclusions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 26th, 2022 at 11:54 PM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Nalanda said:

In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Malcolm wrote:

There are some well-known pure lands: Khechari realm, where the vidyādhara hang out (but you only get there by realizing mahāmudrā); the Copper Colored Mountain where Padmasambhava hangs out; Sukhavati where the Amitabha devotees hang out. There is Tara's pure land, called the Turquoise realm, Avalokiteśvara's pure land, Mt. Potala in S. India, Mañjuśrī's pure land, Wutai Shan, in China, Medicine Buddha's pure land (which you can take birth in if you recite the dhāraṇī of Medicine Buddha seven times every day), etc. All of these pure lands are "generated nirmāṇakāya" pure lands, which arose out of the aspiration of this or that bodhisattva to purify a buddhafiield, one of the important deeds of a bodhisattva on the stages.

There are also natural nirmāṇakāya buddhafiields, which are buddhafiields emanated by the five sambhogkāya buddha families. Birth in these is guaranteed for the average practitioner of Dzogchen teachings, people who have received Dzogchen teachings but are unable to practice them well in this life.

The special feature of these nirmāṇakāya buddhafiields is that the door to the three realms is permanently closed, and perfect, full buddhahood is attained within five hundred human years, without taking another birth in samsara, rather than the interminably long, albeit blissful and edifying, time one spends in other pure lands. It should also be mentioned that middling practitioners of Dzogchen attain perfect, full buddhahood in the bardo. The best practitioners attain perfect, full buddhahood either in this life or at the moment of death.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 12:13 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Shinjin said:

According to Machig Labdron:

For those who wish to become buddhas swiftly, it is necessary to pray for rebirth in a pure buddha-field...

Malcolm wrote:

Everything she says is true with respect to common Mahāyāna practitioners.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 1:02 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Shinjin said:

There are many Dzogchen/Vajrayanists who encourage practitioners to pray for rebirth in Sukhavati. Karma Chagme for example, a well known Dzogchen master.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, but most practitioners are not Dzogchen practitioners. And a lot of Vajrayāna practitioners like to hedge their bets. But Dzogchen practitioners don't need to be concerned about this, but if they like to recite aspirations for birth in Sukhavati, there is no problem with this either. Everytime I recite the Bhadracaryapranidhana, etc., I don't deliberately exclude the aspiration for birth in Sukhavati. But I also know that for me it is not necessary. YMMV.

Just to add a point: Dzogchen is its own vehicle, it does not depend on the lower vehicles in any way. One can of course approach it from lower vehicles, but it is independent and stands on its own.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 1:09 AM

Title: Re: Seventeen Tantras Lung with Tulku Dakpa

Content:

Marenz said:

Do you know if Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche has plans to give the rigpa'i tsal wang at some point? Does he offer this from time to time, and would you have a suggestion on how to best connect with him?

I think this an excellent opportunity and would like to receive these verbal transmissions, but as I have not received Dzogchen transmission up until now, I'm wondering what would be the benefit in my receiving the lungs only.

Malcolm wrote:

It is not hard to become a student of Tulku Dakpa. He is very kind.

The benefit of the receiving the lungs now is that you won't have to receive them again later. In any case, I am not sure what empowerments you may have received, but most Nyingma empowerments contain the rig pa rtsal dbang in a brief form, at minimum. At worst, you will create a positive connection to receive Dzogchen teachings in the future, so there is really no downside to attending.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 1:40 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Wait, there's a distinction?

Pure Buddhafield (Sukhavati) - aspiration of common Mahayana?

natural nirmāṇakāya buddhafiels, which are buddhafiels emanated by the five sambhogkāya buddha families - aspiration of Dzogchen/Vajrayanist? (although they can opt for Sukhavati as well?)

Malcolm wrote:

No. b) is not an aspiration. It is a guaranteed result of practicing the path for people of minimal diligence. One doesn't need to have faith in the aspirations of this or that buddha or rely on "other power" in order to take birth in these buddhafiels. However, one does need to a) have the fortune to meet Dzogchen teachings, b) have faith in them, and c) try to put them into practice as best one can.

It is not a competition however. Sukhavati teachings are a perfectly suitable and valid path.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 2:04 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Nalanda said:

So for Dzogchenyanist, they don't bother with Purelands at all except those who like hedging bets in common Mahayana aspirations?

Malcolm wrote:

I can't speak for most Dzogchen practitioners.

I can tell you that my main teacher never emphasized pure lands at all. And I can tell you for sure that in the Dzogchen tantras and commentaries, there is little emphasis on pure lands at all, outside of what I just mentioned, that is, how it is explained for average practitioners. Most Dzogchen practitioners attain buddhahood in the bardo, eliminating the need for pure lands at all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 2:09 AM

Title: Re: After enlightenment, can a Buddha return/manifest/emanate to samsara?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Delaying Buddhahood is not part of the bodhisattva path.

Caoimhghín said:

This is something that Mahāyānikas often end up explaining exhaustively to their critics. It is Parinirvāṇa that is delayed, not Bodhi.

Malcolm wrote:

Even then, Mahāyāna nonabiding nirvana can encompass the display of parinirvana.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 2:31 AM

Title: Re: After enlightenment, can a Buddha return/manifest/emanate to samsara?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

This is something that Mahāyānikas often end up explaining exhaustively to their critics. It is Parinirvāṇa that is delayed, not Bodhi.

Malcolm wrote:

Even then, Mahāyāna nonabiding nirvana can encompass the display of parinirvana.

Caoimhghín said:

Yes, but the skandha-parinirvāṇa does not actually occur at the apparent end of life of an Āryabodhisattva. They aren't Śrāvakabuddhas. The display is just a display. Kleśa-parinirvāṇa occurs arguably far before the stage at which one is called an "Ārya" bodhisattva. The bodhisattvas do not indefinitely put-off kleśa-parinirvāṇa, surely, even though one might appear as such to guide defiled beings as one of them.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no such thing as a śrāvakabuddha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 2:40 AM

Title: Re: Biden would beat Trump in 24

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

1 point is well within the margin of error, and polling has consistently understated Trump's actual turnout.

I don't think that Trump is a lock (and he might get indicted soon, which would throw a crimp in things), but I don't think a 1-point lead two years out is a slam dunk for Biden either.

Malcolm wrote:

Especially with GOP's record of attempted and successful election rigging.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 2:52 AM

Title: Re: Nyingthiks

Content:

Pema Rigdzin said:

It's in these upadeshas from our guru that we find our realization.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, as the Tantra Without Syllables states:

"The dharmakāya is encountered in the intimate instructions."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 3:34 AM

Title: Re: Biden would beat Trump in 24

Content:

Shinjin said:

Polls were showing Hillary would beat trump by landslide in 2016 .

Malcolm wrote:

Well, she did. Trump pulled off an electoral college win by the thinnest of margins, 77k votes across four states. The GOP knows they can only win by cheating now.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 4:21 AM

Title: Re: After enlightenment, can a Buddha return/manifest/emanate to samsara?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

This is incorrect. I do not expect you to be familiar with terminologies for "Arhats" from foreign sects that you've not studied though. Likely there is no such term in your tradition, so you've mistakenly stated that such a term does not exist.

Malcolm wrote:

Oh I am familiar enough with the term as used in Hinayāna schools. But there isn't any such thing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 4:37 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Toenail said:

I feel like practice with little diligence may still be really hard in reality? What are the criteria of it?

Malcolm wrote:

Pretty sure you already know. Anyway, people who are interested can just go to teacher and find out.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 4:58 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Who needs Pure Land when you have Dzogchen?

Malcolm wrote:

It's not like that. Despite whatever petty quarrels people have, all Dharma is good in the beginning, the middle, and the end. For example, Zhen li is a Jodo Shinshu person, he always slips in a plug for Jodo Shinshu, where ever he can. He's really on about other power, etc. We couldn't say that he is making a mistake by forgoing Dzogchen teachings. He has likely even received some. But he is into Jodo Shinshu. All we can say is that from a Dzogchen point of view, the practices and teachings that belong to the nine yānas are based on mind (citta) and not gnosis (jñāna). But we don't expect that others will agree.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 5:01 AM

Title: Re: After enlightenment, can a Buddha return/manifest/emanate to samsara?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

This is incorrect. I do not expect you to be familiar with terminologies for "Arhats" from foreign sects that you've not studied though. Likely there is no such term in your tradition, so you've mistakenly stated that such a term does not exist.

Malcolm wrote:

Oh I am familiar enough with the term as used in Hinayāna schools. But there isn't any such thing.

Caoimhghín said:

Out of curiosity, do you interpret the fourth of the eight downfalls for ordinary persons (referencing the 18 root downfalls for those who do not know) as something like "denying the rousing of the Arhats?"

Malcolm wrote:

The elimination of afflictions is a necessary, but not a sufficient, condition for buddhahood. Also seventh stage bodhisattvas eradicate the afflictive obscuration entirely, but they do not then attain buddhahood.

As for arhats being roused from a samadhi of cessation, this is standard Mahāyāna doxology.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 5:33 AM

Title: Re: After enlightenment, can a Buddha return/manifest/emanate to samsara?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Not necessarily. Plenty of Buddhists don't believe in it and agree with Ven Hùifēng and believe that "Arhat = game over." For these, it is necessary that Arhats be a variety of Buddha, much like Aryabodhisattvas are a variety of Buddha and Pratyekabuddhas are a variety of Buddha.

Malcolm wrote:

This idea of three gotras is provisional.

Caoimhghín said:

If Arhats are not a variety of Buddha, then the Śrāvakas do not have an authentic path to liberation.

Malcolm wrote:

Liberation comes from having eliminated the afflictive obscuration. Vasubandhu points out, however, that arhats and pratyekabuddhas possess a nonafflictive ignorance. And it is clearly stated in Mahāyāna sutras, such as the Lanka, that arhats are roused from their samadhi of cessation and required to join the path again.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 5:41 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Does citta-based practice mean of a different (higher-grade) than jhana-based practices?

Malcolm wrote:

No, Dhyāna is citta based practice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 5:56 AM

Title: Re: After enlightenment, can a Buddha return/manifest/emanate to samsara?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Not necessarily. Plenty of Buddhists don't believe in it and agree with Ven Hùifēng and believe that "Arhat = game over." For these, it is necessary that Arhats be a variety of Buddha, much like Aryabodhisattvas are a variety of Buddha and Pratyekabuddhas are a variety of Buddha.

Malcolm wrote:

This idea of three gotras is provisional.

Caoimhghín said:

To be fair, they say that the doctrine of the rousing is provisional.

I believe in the rousing myself, it's in the Lotus Sūtra and the Prajñā Treatise, but there are plenty that don't. Furthermore, we are talking about Buddhahood in two different ways with regards to two different things. I am familiar with imperfect degrees of Buddha, including "(Ārya)Bodhisattva" and "Pratyekabuddha."

Malcolm wrote:

Who are "they?" Some modern academicians?

There are all kinds of grades of bodhi, that is not at issue here. We can certainly consider tenth stage bodhisattvas a type of buddha, since the Abhisamayālaṃkāra deems it so, since their omniscience is very nearly that of a samyasambuddha. But to claim that arhats and pratyekabuddhas cannot be roused from their samadhi a) defies scripture b) defies logic. In the first place, we have already agreed that there is scriptural evidence that arhats, etc. are roused. In the second place, asserting they cannot be roused means they are essentially icchantikas, that their continuums have ceased to exist, and so on. Moreover, such as assertion harms the bodhisattva path, because the consequence of this assertion is that no one can attain samyaksambuddhahood, not even the buddha, since as soon as their afflictions are completely eradicated, a bodhisattva can no longer proceed on the bodhisattva path. So I stand by my initial claim. There is no such thing as a śrāvakabuddha. They may not like the idea since an arhat, once roused from cessation, has to begin at the Mahāyāna path of accumulation, rendering them effectively ordinary sentient beings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 6:01 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Nalanda said:

I see. I'm confused by this. So Dzogchen is jhana or Citta?

All we can say is that from a Dzogchen point of view, the practices and teachings that belong to the nine yānas are based on mind (citta) and not gnosis (jñāna). But we don't expect that others will agree.

Malcolm wrote:

You are confusing the Sanskrit term jñāna (gnosis) with the Pali term jhana (concentration).

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 6:04 AM

Title: Re: Biden would beat Trump in 24

Content:

Shinjin said:

Polls were showing Hillary would beat trump by landslide in 2016 .

Malcolm wrote:

Well, she did. Trump pulled off an electoral college win by the thinnest of margins, 77k votes across four states. The GOP knows they can only win by cheating now.

Shinjin said:

Both sides are always accusing the other of cheating.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, but only one actually does cheat, the GOP, at least in modern elections since Reagan. For example, the Gore recount was shut down because of a riot fomented purposefully at the counting precinct by Roger Stone. Had the ballots continued to be counted, it is a sure thing, a matter of fact and not speculation, that Florida would have to have gone to Gore.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 6:16 AM

Title: Re: After enlightenment, can a Buddha return/manifest/emanate to samsara?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Other than that, the only other I've heard of is Ven Hùifēng based on his reading of the Śakra section of the Prajñāpāramitā.

Malcolm wrote:

can you point me to a link.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 6:32 AM

Title: Re: After enlightenment, can a Buddha return/manifest/emanate to samsara?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

It's the link from earlier. It's poorly formatted, not being clearly integrated into my text well. I'm on my phone, so hyperlinks are a bit dodgy. Look on page 1, the fourth post from me. There's a hyperlink there.

I had thought I had read you two disagreeing over it, but likely it was something else I'm misremembering. I think I'm conflating you explaining the rousing in one of the old "three vehicles/ekayāna" threads with that linked thread from ages ago.

Malcolm wrote:

Here is the passage:

If a person has already entered into the status of certitude [to perfection], they are unable to generate mental aspiration toward anuttarāsamyaṅ sambodhi. For what reason? Because they have already constructed an embankment against [the torrent of cyclic] birth and death.

-- An Annotated English Translation of Kumārajīva's Xiaōpīn Prajñāpāramitā Sūtra

This is not a problem. This requires that arhats be roused in order to be introduced to Mahāyāna aspiration. It is not a passage claiming arhats cannot be roused by a buddha. The reason it is possible for an arhat to realize perfect buddha eventually is given a little later:

Then, Ānanda said: "Teaching the meaning of Prajñāpāramitā in this way, avinivartin bodhisattvas, those who possess right views, and arhats who have fulfilled their aim; [people] such as these will be able to take it up."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 6:39 AM

Title: Re: After enlightenment, can a Buddha return/manifest/emanate to samsara?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

I can agree with that. I can also see the other side's logic, even if I don't agree with it and think that the conclusion is flawed.

There's more issues than that though, as I see it. By his logic voiced elsewhere that I can find in a bit, a Bodhisattva becoming a Bhūmika would be like a Śrāvaka stream-entrant: seven lifetimes and then it's "over." According to the more radical consequences of his thought, attaining the first bhūmi would have to be indefinitely postponed.

Malcolm wrote:

There are many issues with such a position, such as the one you just mention.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 7:19 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Nalanda said:

That is such a great promise of Dzogchen.

A good slogan might be:

Who needs Pure Land when you have Dzogchen?

or

Dzogchen, why settle?

Skip the lines, take Dzogchen.

Shinjin said:

The same can be said about pure land. It has a success rate.

Malcolm wrote:

There are in fact various points of view on that in Tibetan Buddhism. The general point of view is that it is not so easy as Japanese schools maintain.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 8:27 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Pure Land - It ain't easy but its guaranteed.

Malcolm wrote:

Well,that's the point. It's not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 10:21 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Pure Land - It ain't easy but its guaranteed.

Malcolm wrote:

Well,that's the point. It's not.

Nalanda said:

It's not?

The idea is you end up there and your enlightenment is guaranteed. Isn't this a universal understanding?

Malcolm wrote:

If you end up there.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 10:56 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

As for TB, people practice all their lives to accumulate merit and realisations, and yet, at the end of the day, they rely on Amitābha to gain birth and attain actual buddhahood.

Malcolm wrote:

Even then, it's not guaranteed, even from the point of view of the tradition of Karma Chakme. A commentary by Tujey Zhanphen Pel on Karma Chakme's famous aspiration specifies four requirements for birth in Sukhavati: the support, the recollection of the merit field at the time of death; the cause, gathering of accumulations and the purification of obscurations; the assistant, the generation of bodhicitta; and the condition, the pure aspiration.

The point is that if, at the time of death, one cannot maintain this recollection of Amitabha and his host, even if one spent a lifetime aspiring to birth in Sukhavati, one will not succeed in the end. From this perspective, mere faith is not a sufficient cause, in our tradition.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 11:04 AM

Title: Re: How do you replace negative thoughts with positive thoughts?

Content:

2ndchance said:

How do you replace negative thoughts with positive thoughts?

Let me give you two examples.

1) A middle-aged man has an attractive younger female platonic friend. He likes to develop bodhicitta / loving-kindness / compassion for his attractive younger female platonic friend without triggering any lustful emotions and/or romantic emotions at all.

How does he replace negative lustful emotions and/or romantic emotions towards his attractive younger female platonic friend with bodhicitta / loving-kindness / compassion?

Malcolm wrote:

He should cultivate the thought this woman is his daughter or his younger sister.

2ndchance said:

2) A middle-aged man has a very aggressive hot-tempered younger brother who has been attacking the middle-aged man with verbal abuse and vulgarities and even threatening the middle-aged man with physical violence and challenges to physical fights.

How does he replace negative angry emotions towards his younger aggressive hot-tempered bully brother with bodhicitta / loving-kindness / compassion?

Malcolm wrote:

He should understand this younger man is not in his right mind. And if necessary, place distance between himself and the aggressor.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 11:15 AM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Beings are infinite, I vow to liberate them all.

This is what it means to be a bodhisattva. Infinite means infinite. Liberate means liberate. It's so simple and yet it's beyond calculative thought.

Malcolm wrote:

In the Tibetan tradition this is understood to be an impossible aspiration, though meritorious. For example, the Buddha, as Shantideva points out, perfected generosity not because he could actually relieve the poverty of all sentient beings, but because he wished to—the merit of such aspirations exceeds the fact that they cannot possibly be achieved. And it goes without saying, Buddhas cannot liberate anyone. The proof of this is that there are still sentient beings. No Buddha with the capacity to liberate sentient beings would ever leave so many in samsara. One can only liberate oneself from this samsara. No Buddha or bodhisattva can do it for you. There is no choice but to practice a path taught by the Buddha, and without a precious human birth, that choice isn't even available.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 11:30 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Birth in the lowest grade and lowest rank is rendered possible by one's own power, thinking of Amida even only ten times, including by those who committed the five grave offences.

Malcolm wrote:

This is definitely not considered adequate for birth in Sukhavati in the Tibetan tradition.

Buddhas cannot hand you liberation. All they can do is show you the path.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 11:45 AM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Beings are infinite, I vow to liberate them all.

This is what it means to be a bodhisattva. Infinite means infinite. Liberate means liberate. It's so simple and yet it's beyond calculative thought.

Malcolm wrote:

In the Tibetan tradition this is understood to be an impossible aspiration, though meritorious. For example, the Buddha, as Shantideva points out, perfected generosity not because he could actually relieve the poverty of all sentient beings, but because he wished to—the merit of such aspirations exceeds the fact that they cannot possibly be achieved. And it goes without saying, Buddhas cannot liberate anyone. The proof of this is that there are still sentient beings. No Buddha with the capacity to liberate sentient beings would ever leave so many in samsara. One can only liberate oneself from this samsara. No Buddha or bodhisattva can do it for you. There is no choice but to practice a path taught by the Buddha, and without a precious human birth, that choice isn't even available.

Zhen Li said:

This is conflating the time of aspiration with the time it takes to liberate beings. The time it takes is also infinite. Buddha activity is continuous and infinite. From the perspective of an ordinary being it will appear like nothing is being done, but actually, awakening activity is continually being wrought upon one unawares.

Again, the idea that one is liberating oneself is from the ordinary perspective. From the ultimate perspective, all hearing, understanding, and practice are performed by the Buddha, who dwells within the bodies of all beings. This is taught in Chapter 1 of the Tathāgataguhya.

Malcolm wrote:

From the ultimate perspective there is no Buddha, sentient being, liberation, or bondage. There isn't even a dharmakaya.

Did you have in mind a specific passage from your translation?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 12:02 PM

Title: Re: After enlightenment, can a Buddha return/manifest/emanate to samsara?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

To be fair, they say that the doctrine of the rousing is provisional.

I believe in the rousing myself, it's in the Lotus Sūtra and the Prajñā Treatise, but there are plenty that don't. Furthermore, we are talking about Buddhahood in two different ways with regards to two different things. I am familiar with imperfect degrees of Buddha, including "(Ārya)Bodhisattva" and "Pratyekabuddha."

Malcolm wrote:

Who are "they?" Some modern academicians?

There are all kinds of grades of bodhi, that is not at issue here. We can certainly consider tenth stage bodhisattvas a type of buddha, since the Abhisamayālaṃkāra deems it so, since their omniscience is very nearly that of a samyasaṃbuddha. But to claim that arhats and pratyekabuddhas cannot be roused from their samadhi a) defies scripture b) defies logic. In the first place, we have already agreed that there is scriptural evidence that arhats, etc. are roused. In the second place, asserting they cannot be roused means they are essentially icchantikas, that their continuums have ceased to exist, and so on. Moreover, such an assertion harms the bodhisattva path, because the consequence of this assertion is that no one can attain samyaksambuddhahood, not even the buddha, since as soon as their afflictions are completely eradicated, a bodhisattva can no longer proceed on the bodhisattva path. So I stand by my initial claim. There is no such thing as a śrāvakabuddha. They may not like the idea since an arhat, once roused from cessation, has to begin at the Mahāyāna path of accumulation, rendering them effectively ordinary sentient beings.

ItsRaining said:

This view is very popular amongst those that study or specialise in Yogacara, particularly Xuanzang's transmission of it in China. One text reports that before Xuanzang returned to China he asked Śīlabhadra on whether he should teach the five gotras as it was extremely unpopular among Chinese Buddhist. Śīlabhadra replied that if he were to teach anything he must teach the five gotras as that was the definitive view of the Mahayana. People kept carrying on this legacy I guess.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, Yogacara accepts icchantikas. But their view on this is incorrect.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 6:34 PM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Astus said:

Imagining that there are sentient beings and buddhas out there somewhere, how is that not delusion?

Malcolm wrote:

No more deluded than imagining that there are Buddhas and sentient beings "in here somewhere"

Poor Huineng, the delusions perpetrated in his name...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 7:26 PM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

. but not having enough monoclonals for transplant recipients in my hometown.

Malcolm wrote:

They don't work against omicron, that's why the FDA pulled authorization on their use.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 8:03 PM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

No more deluded than imagining that there are Buddhas and sentient beings “in here somewhere”

Astus said:

Such an assumption was meant to be avoided by the subsequent quotes. Another one on that specifically:

Malcolm wrote:

Quotes are boring, unless couched in reasonings which they support. Proof texts are not arguments. They are to be used to support arguments. You can't just imitate the words of old masters. You have to use your own words, which show your own understanding.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 9:38 PM

Title: Re: For myself

Content:

KathyLauren said:

I am home now. It won't be a speedy recovery, but I am on the mend.

Om mani padme hum

Kathy

Malcolm wrote:

Glad to hear it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 10:35 PM

Title: Re: After enlightenment, can a Buddha return/manifest/emanate to samsara?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Is it mainstream/majority Mahayana view that arhats are to walk the Bodhisattva path eventually?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, this is the mainstream view.

Nalanda said:

Does that mean then that they are reborn (inspite of what they expected: arhats = end of rebirth) reborn as regular sentient beings to become Bodhisattva?

Malcolm wrote:

This is a difficult point. Some scholars assert that, once roused from the absorption of cessation (nirodhasamāpatti), arhats are basically equivalent to 7th stage bodhisattvas and some even assert they can enter the bodhisattva path on the eighth bodhisattva stage because it is asserted that arhats are equivalent to bodhisattvas in realizing the selflessness of phenomena that is the absence of inherent existence.

Other scholars assert that once roused from the absorption of cessation (nirodhasamāpatti) arhats must begin at the beginning of the Mahāyāna path of accumulation since they have not generated Mahāyāna bodhicitta nor have they realized the profound emptiness free from extremes. I personally favor the latter position because the Abhisamayālaṅkāra clearly describes the superiority of the hearing and reflection on signlessness in the Mahāyāna path of accumulation, and so on. Gorampa summarizes it as follows in his Moonrays:

Therefore, in our own system of Madhyamaka, although the selflessness of the three yānas is equivalent, the difference between whether freedom from proliferation, the two accumulations, the ultimate nature and reality are realized or not realized is clear in all Madhyamaka textual systems.

Basically, arhats have a subtle grasping to true existence because they do not realize four-fold signlessness. Since they have this subtle grasping to true existence, they continue to grasp a self. Because they continue to grasp a self, they accumulate action. And since they continue to accumulation action, they can continue to take birth, having been roused from nirodhasamāpatti. And because of this arhats, in order to realize buddhahood, must begin at the beginning of the Mahāyāna path of application where one reviews through hearing and reflection signlessness, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 27th, 2022 at 11:51 PM

Title: Re: After enlightenment, can a Buddha return/manifest/emanate to samsara?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Wow, that's just wow. I have some adjustments in thinking to do. I just thought arhats are enlightened (but that their enlightenment is not similar to that of the Buddha) and that once enlightened there is nothing further to do. I didn't know they are still in samsara and will take rebirth in spite of the belief that there is nothing further after their reaching their arhatship.

Malcolm wrote:

Arhats, after they die, are basically formless realm beings, who because they have subtle traces, wind up taking birth again. They are among the "some buddhas" who err and re-enter samsara. It's not very shocking, since we already know that arhats can fall away from arhatship, according even to śrāvaka sources.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 12:54 AM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

From the ultimate perspective there is no Buddha, sentient being, liberation, or bondage. There isn't even a dharmakaya.

Zhen Li said:

That's why this discussion is going in circles. The ultimate perspective is continually being responded to with the conventional perspective.

Malcolm wrote:

The ultimate perspective is that no buddha, sentient being, liberation, bondage, or buddhakāyas can be established at all. Buddha, sentient being, liberation, bondage, kāyas, gnosés, etc. are all just conventional designations and do not refer to anything real. Why? Your sūtra itself states it as follows:

The tathāgata kāya is the kāya of space, the kāya equal with the unequalled, the kāya that is superior to all the three realms, the kāya of endowed with the suchness of all sentient beings, the kāya that is incomparable, unmatched, pure, immaculate, and without all afflictions, the kāya of natural luminosity, the kāya that does not arise by nature, the kāya that is unproduced by nature, the kāya that is not connected with mind, intellect, or consciousness, the kāya that has the nature of an illusion, mirage, and a moon in the water..."

Then of course, there is the Sūtra That Explicates the Relative and Ultimate Truth (ārya-saṃvṛti-paramārtha-satya-nirdeśa-nāma-mahāyāna-sūtra Toh. 179):

Child of a good family, all buddhafiels are not buddhafiels. Why? because there is truly is no birth in the ultimate. All buddhas are not buddhas. Why? because there is truly no production in the ultimate. All phenomena are not phenomena. Why? Because there is there is truly nothing real in the ultimate. All sentient beings are not sentient beings. Why? Because there is truly no source of suffering in the ultimate.

Zhen Li said:

Chapter 1 section 8k

Malcolm wrote:

Not seeing how this section endorses your assertion.

Zhen Li said:

But more specifically Chapter 15 section 1: the superior wisdom possessed by all Tathāgatas dwells in the bodies of all sentient beings...

Malcolm wrote:

I don't agree with your rendering of this part of the passage:

ཆོས་སྤྱི་བ་དེ་དག་ཐམས་ཅད་ཀྱི་ལུས་ལ་དེ་བཞིན་གཤེགས་པའི་ཡེ་ཤེས་གནས་སོ

This states very clearly in Tibetan, "The gnosis of the tathāgata abides in the bodies of all those dharmabhāṇakas."

It does not say the the gnosis of the tathāgata abides in the bodies of all sentient beings. This being so, I reject your argument.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 1:02 AM

Title: Re: Where does the rigpa'i tsalwang fit in?

Content:

Sonam Gyalmo said:

No, I'm not asking anyone to describe it. I have a fair idea what it "is", and it not a thing I'd ask net-writers to break "secrecy" about.

But I do need help understanding where it fits it. Such as:
Is it a Longchen Nyingtig speciality?

Malcolm wrote:

No.

Sonam Gyalmo said:

If it's found outside Longchen Nyingtig, do other dzogchen traditions put the same emphasis on it?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Sonam Gyalmo said:

Does it appear both as a stand-alone empowerment as well as embedded in other more deity-oriented or lama-oriented empowerments?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Sonam Gyalmo said:

Does it appear in equivalent form but under another name in other parts of the Nyingma and dzogchen traditions?

Malcolm wrote:

Sometimes it is referred to as the "precious word empowerment." Sometimes it is called "direct introduction." Sometimes it is called "the extremely unelaborate empowerment."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 1:28 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Shinjin said:

Are the four requirements that Karma Chakme talks about based out of the Pure Land sutras or is it only his opinion?

Malcolm wrote:

It is based on a passage from Ārya Amitābhavyūha Sūtra:

Ānanda, any sentient beings who repeatedly thinks of the aspects of that tathāgata, generates immeasurable quantities of roots of merit, totally dedicates themselves to generating the thought to awaken (bodhicitta), and offers supplications to be born in that world, when the time of death draws near will see before them the Tathāgatam Arhat, Samyaksambuddha Amitābha surrounded by many groups of bhikṣus. Upon seeing Bhagāvan Amitābha, they will die with a mind of utter faith, and be born in that world, Sukhavati."

Karma Chakme's prayer is structured around these four points from the sūtra. His aspiration is a supplement to the Sadhana practice of Amitabha found in the Sky Treasure (Nam chos) tradition, which is widely practiced in both Nyingma and Kagyu, but not really in Sakya or Geluk.

There is a shorter aspiration, set down by Namcho Migyur Dorje:

ཕྱག་ཆོས་ལ་མ་བཟུང་བ་བཞུགས།

Brief Sukhāvati Aspiration

from the terma of Mingyur Dorje

ཨམ་ཧོ་ངོ་རྩ་མཚན་སངས་རྒྱལ་བ་མཐའ་ཡས་དང་།

emaho, ngotsar sangye nangwa tayé dang

Emaho! Amitābha, magnificent Buddha of Boundless Light,

གཡས་སྤུང་པོ་ཐུགས་རྗེ་ཆེན་པོ་དང་།

yé su jowo tukjé chenpo dang

With the great compassionate lord Avalokiteśvara to his right,

གཡོན་ཏུ་སེམས་དཔའ་མཐུ་ཆེན་པོ་རྒྱམས་ལུ་ yöndu sempa tuchen tob nam la

And Vajrapāṇi-Mahāsthāmaprāpta on his left,

སངས་རྒྱལ་བྱང་སེམས་དཔག་མེད་འཁོར་གྱིས་བསྐོར་ཞུ། sangye changsem pakmé khor gyi kor

Surrounded by an assembly of countless buddhas and bodhisattvas

བདེ་སྤྱིད་ངོ་མཚར་དཔག་ཏུ་མེད་པ་ཡི།

dekyi ngotsar paktu mepa yi

In the place of wonder and boundless joy and happiness

བདེ་བ་ཅན་ཞེས་བྱ་བའི་ཞིང་ཁམས་དེར་ཞུ། dewachen shyejawé shyinkham der

That is the heavenly realm of Sukhāvatī, the Blissful Paradise.

བདག་ནི་འདི་ནས་ཆོ་འཕོས་གྱུར་མ་ཐག་ཞུ།

dak ni di né tsé pö gyur ma tak

When the time comes for me to leave this present life,

སྟེ་བ་གཞན་གྱིས་བར་མ་ཆོད་པ་རུ་ཞུ། kyewa shyen gyi bar ma chöpa ru

May I go there directly, without any other birth upon the way,

དེ་ཅུ་སྟེས་ནས་སྤང་མཐའི་ཞལ་མཐོང་གོག་ཞུ། dé ru kyé né nang té shyal tong shok

And being reborn there, may I see Amitābha face to face!

དེ་སྐད་བདག་གིས་སྒྲོན་ལམ་བཏབ་པ་འདི་ཞུ། deké dak gi mönlam tabpa di

May this, my fervent prayer of aspiration,

ཕྱོགས་བརྒྱའི་སངས་རྒྱལ་བྱང་སེམས་ཐམས་ཅད་ཀྱིས་ཞུ། chok chü sangye changsem tamché kyi

Be blessed by all the buddhas and bodhisattvas of the ten directions

གེགས་མེད་འགྲུབ་པར་བྱེན་གྱིས་བརྒྱབ་ཏུ་གསོ་ལ་ཞུ།

gekmé drubpar jingyi lab tu sol

So that it is accomplished, without the slightest hindrance!

ཏུ་ཐུ་པ་ལྷུ་རྩི་ཡ་ཨ་ལ་བོ་ནུ་ལེ་སྐ་རུ་ཞུ།

teyatha | pentsadriya awabodhanayé soha

tadyathā pañcendriyāvabodhaniye svāhā

ཞེས་པ་འདི་ནི་སྤུལ་སྟེ་མི་འགྱུར་དྲི་རྩེ་དགུང་ལ་བཅུ་གསུམ་གསེར་འཕྱང་གི་ལ་ས་ག་ལྷ་བའི་ཆོས་བདུན་ལ་གཙོ་འཁོར་རྣམས་ཀྱིས་ཞལ་གཟིགས་པའི་ཆོ་སངས་རྒྱལ་བྱང་བ་མཐའ་ཡ་ས་གྱིས་དངོས་སུ་གསུངས་པའོ།།

When Tulku Mingyur Dorje was thirteen years old, on the 7th day of the month of Saga Dawa, Fire Bird year (1657), he had a vision of the deities of the maṇḍala, and Buddha Amitābha spoke these words directly.

<https://www.lotsawahouse.org/tibetan-masters/terton-mingyur-dorje/brief-sukhavati-> aspiration

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 2:14 AM

Title: Re: Dodrupchen is in Thukdam

Content:

reiun said:

Tidwell said the Thukdam Project is working on a study of how bodies decompose in different climatic conditions in India, and Dunne said he wants to look outside the brain for signs of post-mortem consciousness."

Malcolm wrote:

They are barking up the wrong tree. I know Dunne and Tidwell, they at least know Tibetan and can check sources. But there are problems they will encounter such as the distinction made in Dzogchen texts between rig pa, which exits the body through the eyes, and mind, which exits the body through the fontanelle. Moreover, there is the fact that unlike other tantric traditions, the highest level Dzogchen practitioners do not remain in thukdam for many days. The less developed your practice is, the longer your thukdam will be.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 3:48 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Shinjin said:

Are the four requirements that Karma Chakme talks about based out of the Pure Land sutras or is it only his opinion?

Malcolm wrote:

It is based on a passage from Ārya Amitābhavyūha Sūtra:

Ānanda, any sentient beings who repeatedly thinks of the aspects of that tathāgata, generates immeasurable quantities of roots of merit, totally dedicates themselves to generating the thought to awaken (bodhicitta), and offers supplications to be born in that world, when the time of death draws near will see before them the Tathāgatam Arhat, Samyaksambuddha Amitābha surrounded by many groups of bhikṣus. Upon seeing Bhagāvan Amitābha, they will die with a mind of utter faith, and be born in that world, Sukhavati."

Shinjin said:

Thank you, but the Larger Sutra states:

(3. The lower grade)

[25] The Buddha said to Ananda, "The lower grade of aspirants are the devas and humans in the worlds of the ten quarters who sincerely desire to be born in that land. Although unable to do many meritorious deeds, they awaken aspiration for the highest Enlightenment and single-mindedly concentrate on Amitayus even ten times, desiring birth in his land. When they hear the profound Dharma, they joyfully accept it and do not entertain any doubt; and so, remembering the Buddha even once, they sincerely aspire to be born in that land. When they are about to die, they will see the Buddha in a dream. Those aspirants, too, will be born in the Pure Land. Their merit and wisdom will be next to those of the middle grade of aspirants."

<http://web.mit.edu/stclair/www/larger.html#Three%20grades%20of%20aspirants>

Nowhere does it mention the four requirements here.

Malcolm wrote:

What I quoted from is the so-called Large Sūtra, it is the passage immediately before this one above. The Sanskrit and Tibetan text certainly mentions these four requirements for those who see Amitabha before them in person. For whatever reason, in the Tibetan tradition, seeing Amitabha in a dream is not sufficient for immediate birth, only those of the first and second grade will do so.

Because the second grade also generate (1) bodhicitta, (2) the altruistic thought to attain birth there, (3) much merit, and (4) direct their minds to Sukhavati, when they approach death, an emanation of Amitabha and his retinue appear to that person and as soon as they die, they will take birth in Sukhavati.

No such stated guarantee is made for people who merely see Amitabha in dream. In its Sanskrit and Tibetan version there is no statement in the Long Sūtra that as soon as those person's die they will be born in Sukhavati. It merely says they will be born there without specifying a time frame.

Thus, there is a difference in the textual tradition which underlies a difference in understanding the requirements for birth in Sukhavati. Thus, as I said, it is not so easy to take birth in Sukhavati from the Tibetan tradition's point of view. For this reason there is a sadhana practice of Amitabha with the mantra.

Generally, in the Tibetan tradition, we focus on the longevity-providing aspect of Amitabha, Amitayuh.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 3:56 AM

Title: Re: After enlightenment, can a Buddha return/manifest/emanate to samsara?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Higher Bodhisattvas and the Buddhas are also "formless," and merely create "formed" bodies via the powers of their minds. It's a matter of two different kinds of formlessness.

The Arhats' minds are constantly preoccupied by their all-emcompassing samādhi. The minds of Āryabodhisattvas are otherwise. Buddhas do not have "minds." My opinion, obv, but one I feel confident defending.

Nalanda said:

Well the Buddha Dharmakaya obviously have no "minds" right?

But the Sambhogaya do?

And Nirmanayaka clearly do have minds.

Malcolm wrote:

The three kāyas are inseparable. The mind of the nirmāṇakāya, nominally speaking, is the dharmakāya.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 4:38 AM

Title: Re: Current status of Rumtek.

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I stumbled upon this website that purports to have been a livestream of Thaye Dorje from Rumtek last month.

<https://www.karmapa.org/kagyu-monlam-2021-live-streaming-post/>

Has there been a change in the status of Rumtek?

Thanks.

Malcolm wrote:

Rumtek has been in the hands of Thaye Dorje for some years now, after the Indian courts awarded his side control. Where have you been, Rip Van Schrödinger?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 5:13 AM

Title: Re: After enlightenment, can a Buddha return/manifest/emanate to samsara?

Content:

Nalanda said:

I think tho that that needs to be clarified to beginners. The "mind" of such dharmakaya is not material or has essence? (or is that wrong) Rather, the dharmakaya is emptiness itself, so there cannot be a "mind" that is "something". (Please correct, if this statement is in error)

So going back to Caoimhghín's post, the Buddha does not have a "mind", in the dharmakaya sense. (emptiness) And in the material/nirmanakaya sense.

So when Malcolm says the mind of the nirmanayaka is the dharmakaya, I feel like, yes that's true. But that mind is not "something" or a substance/material.

Plz correct if this is wrong. My reading of Madhyamaka and other materials is introductory level.

Malcolm wrote:

The dharmakāya is the realization of emptiness. But there are various opinions on whether buddhas have thoughts or not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 6:42 AM

Title: Re: After enlightenment, can a Buddha return/manifest/emanate to samsara?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Malcolm, I had posted in the previous page what a sravaka might say about all of this. I wonder if there are historical arguments from Mahayana/TB on this:

(about arhat not being actually final enlightenment/nirvana, only leading to formless realm, and reborn to do the Bodhisattva path...)

I think the sravakas would ask "If that's all true, why would the historical Buddha Shakyamuni not teach the actual path? Yeah yeah okay, 500 years before Nagarjuna, people are not as sharp in mental faculties, but why bother teaching the sravaka path at all considering it sounds a lot like the Jain vehicle? So either that's the case, or maybe your team's calculations is off a bit and that the Buddha Shakyamuni was actually right and sravaka is the path he taught in the buddhavacana."

Malcolm wrote:

I didn't say arhats took birth in the formless realm, that is a samsaric place. Their samadhi of cessation resembles such a state. I honestly don't care what people who belong the śrāvakayāna would say to this.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 10:17 AM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

There are multiple layers of development in the sūtra, as I demonstrate in the introduction. If you reject an argument simply because your tradition's text says differently, then you are relying purely on argumentum ad verecundiam and are simply falling into the criticism that you levelled against Astus for using quotes:

Malcolm wrote:

When someone's argument depends on a citation which does not correspond to their premise, the entire argument can be regarded as a failure.

You might think your argument hangs together on the basis of what you've judged an accurate rendering of the Chinese, but since the Tibetan translation, likely rendered in reference to the Chinese translation, is at such a stark variance, I can't accept your argument on the face of such a stark contrast. You will note I did not assert your rendering entirely wrong, merely that I consider this passage invalid based on a version I consider more authoritative.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 10:23 AM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Then it shouldn't be such a surprise to suggest that all beings can attain buddhahood.

Malcolm wrote:

All beings can attain buddhahood, that does not entail that all beings will.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 10:35 AM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

All beings will—this is also supported by the sūtras. Given infinite time, there are no beings that will not come to attain buddhahood, that would be an inconceivability.

Malcolm wrote:

There will always be some being who has not attained buddhahood.

You'd be better off asserting Lonngchenpa's resolution: primordial liberation. It's a copout, but it's easier, and in fact, more sensible.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 10:44 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

This is also an interesting topic and maybe it's worth a separate thread. But I have been taught a few times that we can take Master Shinran or Rennyō as our teacher. There's actually not the specification that the teacher needs to be alive or present before us. Hōnen, for instance, relied on Shandao's writings to gain Shinjin but did not himself meet Shandao.

Rennyō said, for instance, that if someone lacks faith, let them listen to the scriptures of our tradition (i.e. KGSS) repeatedly, up to a hundred times. If they don't have Shinjin after that, then they lack the karmic roots.

Malcolm wrote:

This is definitely a difference between common Mahayana on the one hand, and Vajrayana as well as Zen on the other. Dogen, for example, makes it absolutely clear that real Zen lies in the interaction between teacher and student.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 11:39 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

I am not saying that there is no interaction between teacher and student. Just that we ultimately rely directly on the Buddha as a teacher.

Malcolm wrote:

Of course there are virtuous friends in common Mahayāna, but it's just not same relationship as one has with one's teacher in Vajrayana and Zen.

Zhen Li said:

But even TB takes refuge in the Buddha before the Guru.

Malcolm wrote:

No, actually the Guru jewel comes first. This is ubiquitous in TB.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 8:36 PM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

I am not saying that there is no interaction between teacher and student. Just that we ultimately rely directly on the Buddha as a teacher.

Malcolm wrote:

Of course there are virtuous friends in common Mahayāna, but it's just not same relationship as one has with one's teacher in Vajrayana and Zen.

Zhen Li said:

But even TB takes refuge in the Buddha before the Guru.

Malcolm wrote:

No, actually the Guru jewel comes first. This is ubiquitous in TB.

Zhen Li said:

There you go. This is why TB doesn't work for everyone, it depends a lot on karmic connections. Actually, the same is true with Pure Land. It's not the practitioner who chooses the practice but the practice that chooses the practitioner.

Malcolm wrote:

All Buddhas attained buddhahood under the guidance of a guru, and in the common path, through attaining empowerment at the conclusion of the tenth bhumi after three asamkhyas kalpas. Your path is different only in so far as you want Amitabha to be your guru, so you put off finding a guru in this life, under whom you can receive ripening empowerment and liberating instructions to attain buddhahood in this life, at the time of death, or the bardo, for the common paths and stages which are pursued in Sukhavati under the guidance of Amitabha. It's a valid choice, but it's no short cut.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 9:04 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Good interview with Kim Stanley Robinson:

<https://apple.news/AURZkmoilS1mRnMn1oM6c-w>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 9:18 PM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

. Since there are infinite beings, yes, there will always be some beings who haven't attained Buddhahood.

Malcolm wrote:

Then it is axiomatic, some beings will never attain buddhahood.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 10:00 PM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Because of the nature of eternity and infinite arrangements, every being will come to have the arrangement of conditions that you speak about, Astus.

Astus said:

Samsara has no beginning (SN 15), therefore the infinite arrangements is already covered by that. In other words, just because something could happen does not mean it eventually happens.

Zhen Li said:

The idea that all beings will eventually become Buddhas is a Mahāyāna teaching not covered by the Śrāvakayāna texts.

Malcolm wrote:

It's one of those things one needs not take literally, since certainly there are a number of Mahayana opinions on the subject.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 10:23 PM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Choice and practice are two things that are essentially done away with in JSS. But like I said, there's no contradiction with the rest of the Dharma. You are led to what suits you.

Malcolm wrote:

That only gets you as far as Sukhavati. There are still many eons to go.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 10:27 PM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Queequeg said:

Real life is messy and indeterminate. Dogma only goes so far. Sometimes, people don't need a grand sermon on the highest teaching; sometimes they just need a hand.

Malcolm wrote:

We can't save anyone. We can benefit others through pacifying their fear, satisfying their material needs, or teaching Dharma. But the last requires active participation on the part of the person to be benefited.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 10:44 PM

Title: Re: Thereavada vs Mahayana Buddhist Goal

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Vasabandhu is a Mahayana author.

Astus said:

It is in Mahayana where one can find the doctrine of eight consciousnesses. But the eighth is not something posited on top of the five aggregates.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I don't know what you mean by "on top of".

No Shrivakayani would accept the idea of an 8th consciousness that goes from one life to another. They would say it a corruption imported from Hinduism. Vasabandhu is light years away from Shrivakayana.

Malcolm wrote:

The Theravadins have a concept of the bhavangacitta, it's a linking consciousness between this life and the next. Asanga invokes this doctrine in defense of the all-basis consciousness.

I am afraid you been hoisted on the petard of "No True Scotsman."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 10:54 PM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

The idea that all beings will eventually become Buddhas is a Mahāyāna teaching not covered by the Śrāvakayāna texts.

Astus said:

But why would all eventually become a buddha? The reasoning that "if it can happen, it will happen" does not stand. That all beings have buddha-nature is not a sufficient condition either.

Malcolm wrote:

Some people conceive of tathagatagarbha as a kind of uncompounded agent that propels one inevitably to buddhahood.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 11:40 PM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Shinjin said:

Nembutsu recitation is more than enough. Shinran, Honen, Genshin, Shandao and many other qualified teachers agree.

Malcolm wrote:

You should observe that this is the Tibetan Buddhism forum. If you care to understand the Tibetan Buddhist point of view more fully, there is Halkias' book, Luminous Bliss. It is a pretty good history book, covers the literature well.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 11:44 PM

Title: Re: Thereavada vs Mahayana Buddhist Goal

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The Theravadins have a concept of the bhavangacitta, it's a linking consciousness between this life and the next. Asanga invokes this doctrine in defense of the all-basis consciousness.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Thus proving Asanga felt the need to defend his position from Shravakayana criticisms.
QED

Malcolm wrote:

It means you erred when you claimed no śrāvaka...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 28th, 2022 at 11:50 PM

Title: Re: Thereavada vs Mahayana Buddhist Goal

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Thus proving Asanga felt the need to defend his position from Shravakayana criticisms.
QED

Malcolm wrote:

It means you erred when you claimed no śrāvaka...

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

It means I was correct in that the 8th consciousness was criticized by Shravakayanis.

Malcolm wrote:

It's also criticized by Mahāyānīs. Asanga was actually directing his rebuttal at Madhyamakas by pointing out there is this concept of bhavanga citta in śrāvaka Abhidharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 29th, 2022 at 12:17 AM

Title: Re: Thereavada vs Mahayana Buddhist Goal

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

saṃjñāvedayitanirodha.

Malcolm wrote:

As a reminder, as we are not in the Academic forum, terms like this need to have a translation next to them.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 29th, 2022 at 2:01 AM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Some people conceive of tathagatagarbha as a kind of uncompounded agent that propels one inevitably to buddhahood.

Astus said:

Even so, it is not in and of itself the cause of liberation, hence cannot guarantee it either.

'The causes of freedom from these two veils are the two jnanas, considered as being the non-conceptual jnana and the ensuing jnana.'

(Uttaratantrasastra 5.174, tr Holmes)

Malcolm wrote:

I didn't say they were right.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 29th, 2022 at 2:06 AM

Title: Re: Thereavada vs Mahayana Buddhist Goal

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

"Cessation of perception and feeling," or "cessation of cognition and hedonic tone." I'm sure there are other popular renderings too.

Malcolm wrote:

632lqn.jpg (86.84 KiB) Viewed 122 times

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 29th, 2022 at 2:11 AM

Title: Re: I read Ongi kuden chapter 16, and it left me a little perplexed..

Content:

Queequeg said:

A hippie friend of mine tried to convince me that Trump is part of some grand functioning of the universe that will ultimately bring harmony.

Malcolm wrote:

That must have been some pretty strong weed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 29th, 2022 at 5:47 AM

Title: Re: I read Ongi kuden chapter 16, and it left me a little perplexed..

Content:

Queequeg said:

Zennies in Kamakura on the other hand definitely had it out for him.

Malcolm wrote:

Unlikely. Zen Buddhism, during Nichiren's life was fledgling. When Nichiren was 3, Dogen was 25, and Eisai, the master who brought Rinzai to Kakakura had been dead for 15 years.

Anyway, it is pretty clear that the Zen that got Nichiren's back up was the Daruma school, but that had already been banned by 1194 because Eisai, recently returned from studying Chan in China, requested the Tendai school to shut Nonin down.

Both Eisai and Dogen met with a lot of resistance from the Tendai school over their versions of Zen, with Dogen eventually fleeing Kyoto politics to the mountains outside present day Fukui City in western Japan in 1243, where he built Eihei-ji.

The Pure Land school was much more immediately popular than Zen during the 13th century. The hegemony of Zen in Japanese Buddhism took considerable time to develop.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 29th, 2022 at 5:52 AM

Title: Re: Theravada vs Mahayana Buddhist Goal

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

The pratisamdhivijñāna, specifically in the case of the modern Theravāda sect (which rejects the "in-between" state between births), is compared to lighting an unlit candle with a lit candle. If there is no unlit candle to inherit the flame, then the flame goes out and dies (i.e. it becomes "extinguished"/nirvṛti). I believe that this is what Schrödinger's Yidam was referring to.

Astus said:

It might be so, although it could as well be what's taught in the <https://suttacentral.net/mn72/en/sujato> as an illustration of the Buddha not being identifiable as anything already in his life, hence the baseless conjecture about birth after death:

“Suppose that fire burning in front of you was extinguished. Would you know: ‘This fire in front of me is extinguished’?”

“Yes, I would, Master Gotama.”

“But Vaccha, suppose they were to ask you: ‘This fire in front of you that is extinguished: in what direction did it go—east, south, west, or north?’ How would you answer?”

“It doesn’t apply, Master Gotama. The fire depended on grass and logs as fuel. When that runs out, and no more fuel is added, the fire is reckoned to have become extinguished due to lack of fuel.”

“In the same way, Vaccha, any form by which a Realized One might be described has been cut off at the root, made like a palm stump, obliterated, and unable to arise in the future. A Realized One is freed from reckoning in terms of form. They’re deep, immeasurable, and hard to fathom, like the ocean. ‘They’re reborn’, ‘they’re not reborn’, ‘they’re both reborn and not reborn’, ‘they’re neither reborn nor not reborn’—none of these apply.”

Malcolm wrote:

Yup, when the beer is gone, so is the cognition and hedonic tone...or was that the cognac and hedonic tone...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 29th, 2022 at 6:06 AM

Title: Re: Thereavada vs Mahayana Buddhist Goal

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

"Cognac and tonic moans" sometimes happen in front of the toilet after a long night, or so I've been told.

Malcolm wrote:

To be followed up with Ashton Kuchner in "Dude! Where's My Māla?"

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 29th, 2022 at 11:17 AM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

So, this is probably one, among many reasons, why all beings having Buddha-nature is equivalent to all beings will attain buddhahood. It is both a necessary and sufficient condition (so I am changing my opinion from earlier that it was necessary but not sufficient).

Malcolm wrote:

The reason why your argument here is flawed is that there is a clear distinction to be made between natural gotra and “expanded gotra.” For example, all viable seeds have the potential to germinate (natural gotra), but without water, warmth, and soil, they won’t germinate (expanded gotra). It is just not inevitable that all sentient beings will develop the aspiration to attain buddhahood for the welfare of all sentient beings. As the old saying goes, one can lead a horse to water, but one can’t force it to drink. All sentient beings may be “buddhanatured”, but not all sentient will necessarily generate Mahayana bodhicitta. Without bodhicitta, buddhahood is just not possible. This also why Madhyamikas like Candrakirti entertain the probability that there are some benighted sentient beings who will never attain buddhahood, despite having the potential to attain buddhahood, just as some seeds never germinate, even though they are viable.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 29th, 2022 at 12:10 PM

Title: Re: I read Ongi kuden chapter 16, and it left me a little perplexed..

Content:

Queequeg said:

More generally, Zen has never been a popular sect -

Malcolm wrote:

The Soto School is the largest single Buddhist institution in Japan, with 14,000 temples. There are larger denominations—pure land is the largest, with 8 million followers, but it is split into ten different bodies, with Nishi Honganji being the largest, with 10,000 temples.

Despite the popularity of Zen in Kamakura and Hōjō Tokiyori’s support for it, Zen in Kamakura itself was still small potatoes, and confined to the literate elite. It was the “it” Buddhism of the day, since it was the latest Import from China. When Tokiyori ordained in 1256, Nichiren would have been 34. And had himself barely arrived in Kamakura. It would be six years more before Nichiren forwarded his Risshō Ankoku Ron to Tokiyori, who had by then ordained and left the government in the hands of Hōjō Nagatoki. The person most instrumental in spreading Zen in the Kamakura era was Hōjō Tokimune. It was he who banished Nichiren to Sado Island. Tokimune’s teacher was the Chinese monk, Mugaku Sogen. However, Mugaku did not arrive until 1279.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 29th, 2022 at 9:54 PM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

All Buddhas attained buddhahood under the guidance of a guru,

Nalanda said:

Does that mean Sakyamuni had a guru?

Malcolm wrote:

Ultimately, yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 29th, 2022 at 10:57 PM

Title: Re: After enlightenment, can a Buddha return/manifest/emanate to samsara?

Content:

Nalanda said:

I do have questions about the other things said in that quote.

“The Buddha’s body never grows decrepit with age. He is only endowed with all virtues, yet he makes a show of having a body which grows decrepit with age.”

Is this “Buddha” here the other 2 of the trikaya bodies? If so, that would make sense. Or is this referring to the nirmanakaya body itself? Is it saying that the disciples were looking at a body that was immortal and does not age but it appears to them as a “normal aging” body?

Malcolm wrote:

It refers to the sambhogakāya.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 29th, 2022 at 11:10 PM

Title: Re: "Nothingness"

Content:

Dolma said:

Is there any concept or notion of "nothingness" in TB?

I do not mean emptiness, and I do not mean e.g. "the absence of a flower in a sky", but I mean the complete absence of anything, something like in classical physics a vacuum.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, this concept exists as an object of criticism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 29th, 2022 at 11:37 PM

Title: Re: Will all eventually become Buddhas?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

There are simply two schools of thought in this matter. While on the one hand the Nirvana Sutra affirms that there are icchantikas, it also suggests that not only will they lose their icchantika status, but as with all beings, they'll attain buddhahood inevitably.

Malcolm wrote:

This is one kind of agotra. There is a second, the permanent agotra, mentioned in the Mahāyānasūtrālaṃkāra. Interestingly, gotra and tathāgatagarbha are not the same thing. All beings have tathāgatagarbha, but not all beings possess the gotra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 30th, 2022 at 8:49 PM

Title: Re: Why is the book "Tibetan Book of the Dead" so popular amongst non-Buddhists / beginners

Content:

Nalanda said:

It's so popular that even my aunt (who is a Christian) has one.

Why is this book such a hit to Westerners?

Malcolm wrote:

Hippies.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 30th, 2022 at 8:54 PM

Title: Re: Current status of Rumtek.

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I stumbled upon this website that purports to have been a livestream of Thaye Dorje from Rumtek last month.

<https://www.karmapa.org/kagyu-monlam-2021-live-streaming-post/>

Has there been a change in the status of Rumtek?

Thanks.

Malcolm wrote:

Rumtek has been in the hands of Thaye Dorje for some years now, after the Indian courts awarded his side control. Where have you been, Rip Van Schrödinger?

jmlee369 said:

I am somewhat surprised to hear that, and not sure what to make of this <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=hqYq3N6xXWw> of Goshir Gyaltsab Rinpoche purportedly visiting in early 2021.

Malcolm wrote:

The court awarded control of Rumtek to the organization that was controlled by Shamar, originally setup by the 16th. This does not bar OTD followers from Rumtek, they just don't control it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 30th, 2022 at 9:07 PM

Title: Re: Current status of Rumtek.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

http://tibetanbuddhistencyclopedia.com/en/index.php/DECISION_OF_THE_INDIAN_SUPREME_COURT_-_20

Unknown said:

This decision was the culmination of the case that the Karmapa Charitable Trust filed in 1998 to regain control of Rumtek monastery. In this decision, given in the case of Tsurphu Labrang vs. Karmapa Charitable Trust and Ors., announced in New Delhi on July 5, 2004, the court refused to hear the appeal of the Tsurphu Labrang, a group created by Gyaltsab Rinpoche and Tenzin Namgyal to represent the claims of followers of Ogyen Trinley to manage Rumtek in legal proceedings. The court rejected their Special Leave Petition to this effect. By thus refusing to interfere in the earlier decision of the Sikkim District Court and a subsequent confirmation by the High Court in New Delhi, the Supreme Court allowed the original decision to stand -- meaning that the Tsurphu group had no legal claim to Rumtek, and that the Karmapa Charitable Trust was the only group recognized to manage the monastery.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 30th, 2022 at 10:20 PM

Title: Re: Why is the book "Tibetan Book of the Dead" so popular amongst non-Buddhists / beginners

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

They aren't entirely wrong, but are missing out on the fact that the book is not for "everyone," nor is it useful to "everyone." I have a copy of one of the translations. It was given to me one Christmas. It's not a useful book for me, but I was obviously very polite when I received it.

Malcolm wrote:

It's specifically a bardo guidebook for Dzogchen practitioners. First Evans Wentz published his version, very influenced by his Theosophical leanings, totally not understanding it's context. Then, well, hippies like Leary started to read this while they were tripping. He then wrote his LSD version. Then, Trungpa collaborated with Francesca Freemantle to reestablish the book's context, Thurman did a version, that, quite frankly, is just weird. Gyurme Dorje translated the liturgical content.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 30th, 2022 at 10:34 PM

Title: Re: "Nothingness"

Content:

Dolma said:

Yep, and that's very interesting because the question is: must the object to be refuted be an object of mind.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure. Example: rabbit horn is a conceptual object.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 30th, 2022 at 10:59 PM

Title: Re: Dordrupchen is in Thukdam

Content:

reiun said:

Tidwell said the Thukdam Project is working on a study of how bodies decompose in different climatic conditions in India, and Dunne said he wants to look outside the brain for signs of post-mortem consciousness."

Malcolm wrote:

They are barking up the wrong tree. I know Dunne and Tidwell, they at least know Tibetan and can check sources. But there are problems they will encounter such as the distinction made in Dzogchen texts between rig pa, which exits the body through the eyes, and mind, which exits the body through the fontanelle. Moreover, there is the fact that unlike other tantric traditions, the highest level Dzogchen practitioners do not remain in thukdam for many days. The less developed your practice is, the longer your thukdam will be.

reiun said:

I'm guessing that mind is said to exit through the anterior fontanelle, rather than any of the other five? From what I have researched, this fontanelle evidently stays open longest (average closure is between 13 - 24 months), and is thus a pediatric feature. Not required to be open for exit of mind, as I understand your comment.

Malcolm wrote:

The purpose of phowa practice is to open a tiny opening, into which a straw is inserted as a sign of success. But it's not entirely necessary for it to be open.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 30th, 2022 at 11:22 PM

Title: Re: "Nothingness"

Content:

Dolma said:

Yep, and that's very interesting because the question is: must the object to be refuted be an object of mind.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure. Example: rabbit horn is a conceptual object.

Dolma said:

"Rabbit" is a valid object as well as "horn", so I can have an image of a rabbit with a horn in my mind. No problem.

But not of nothingness. Because then my mind would be nothing.

Malcolm wrote:

You can also have conceptual image of nothingness.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 30th, 2022 at 11:26 PM

Title: Re: Argentinian guy who remembers his past lives

Content:

Aemilius said:

He recalls that in Atlantis...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 31st, 2022 at 1:07 AM

Title: Re: Argentinian guy who remembers his past lives

Content:

Aemilius said:

Graham Hancock explains in this TED talk why Atlantis is a serious scientifically plausible concept:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 31st, 2022 at 1:31 AM

Title: Re: Current status of Rumtek.

Content:

Lingpupa said:

But I fear your link is not it. It does really look as if the situation is as muddy as it has been for more than 20 years now!

Malcolm wrote:

The Sikkim Supreme Court ruled in favor of the KCT. It was reported in the Indian media when it happened.

<https://www.telegraphindia.com/west-bengal/hc-rejects-tsurphu-labrang-plea/cid/809033>

https://www.ngofoundation.in/ngo-database/karmapa-charitable-trust-contact-number-contact-details_i62163

<https://www.thestatesman.com/opinion/the-karmapa-controversy-1502680000.html>

<https://sikkimnews.blogspot.com/2011/05/karmapa-charitable-trust-kct-terms-any.html>

Enough yet?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 31st, 2022 at 1:38 AM

Title: Re: "Nothingness"

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

You can conceive nothing,

But you can't conceive nothing ness.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure you can, you just did.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 31st, 2022 at 2:05 AM

Title: Re: Current status of Rumtek.

Content:

Lingpupa said:

But I fear your link is not it. It does really look as if the situation is as muddy as it has been for more than 20 years now!

Malcolm wrote:

The Sikkim Supreme Court ruled in favor of the KCT. It was reported in the Indian media when it happened.

<https://www.telegraphindia.com/west-bengal/hc-rejects-tsurphu-labrang-plea/cid/809033>

https://www.ngofoundation.in/ngo-database/karmapa-charitable-trust-contact-number-contact-details_i62163

<https://www.thestatesman.com/opinion/the-karmapa-controversy-1502680000.html>

<https://sikkimnews.blogspot.com/2011/05/karmapa-charitable-trust-kct-terms-any.html>

Enough yet?

Lingpupa said:

Well, in fact, no.

Your first link, from 19 years ago, does not reflect the current situation.

Your second only shows me some registration information for the Karmapa Charitable Trust, saying nothing about the current legal situation.

Your third has the merit of being less than four years old, but makes no reference to the legal situation then, now, or before.

Your fourth link, more than 10 years old, repeats the position of the KTC, but reveals nothing about the actual legal situation even then, let alone now.

It appears there has been no final legal determination. The situation is opaque - if there has been a resolution, it is being kept damned quiet.

Malcolm wrote:

2002 Sikkim Supreme Court ruled KCT owns Rumtek. Ruling supported by Indian Supreme Court who declined to hear an appeal.

Case closed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 31st, 2022 at 2:41 AM

Title: Re: Current status of Rumtek.

Content:

Lingpupa said:

Why are legal moves still ongoing?

Malcolm wrote:

Because the Tshurphu Labrang keeps filing motions in court about this thing and that thing. But the main point is that KCT won their case, showing that KCT was the legal entity that rightfully controlled Rumtek. It's all over money. Rumtek is very wealthy. Personally, I don't have a horse in this race. This is an internal affair within Karma Kagyu. I have no Karma Kagyu teachers.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 31st, 2022 at 3:42 AM

Title: Re: "Nothingness"

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

You can conceive nothing,

But you can't conceive nothing ness.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure you can, you just did.

Dolma said:

What you are referring to is the label but not the content.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, just like the son of a barren women, it's a mere label, that's all a total nonexistent can be, a mere label.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 31st, 2022 at 5:45 AM

Title: Re: Samādhirāja Sūtra Translation Plans?

Content:

Seeker12 said:

Are there any known plans for a full translation of the Samādhirāja Sūtra?

Malcolm wrote:

It has been translated by the 84000 folks. Its right there in the reading room.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 31st, 2022 at 5:54 AM

Title: Re: Samādhirāja Sūtra Translation Plans?

Content:

Svalaksana said:

Hopkins' Mediation on Emptiness

Malcolm wrote:

All hope abandon, ye who enter here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 31st, 2022 at 9:06 AM

Title: Re: Samādhirāja Sūtra Translation Plans?

Content:

Svalaksana said:
Hopkins' Meditation on Emptiness

Malcolm wrote:
All hope abandon, ye who enter here.

Svalaksana said:
Thanks for the heads-up regarding the 84000 translation, Malcolm.

Why must our hope perish in flames upon glancing on Hopkins' Meditation? Is it because of its unabashedly Gelug leaning? I must say I found Chandrakirti's Slivers exposition and the Buddhapalita/Bhavaviveka debate section quite illuminating, among other things.

Malcolm wrote:
It is the Scilla and Charybdis of Madhyamaka translations.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, January 31st, 2022 at 9:10 AM
Title: Re: Why is the book "Tibetan Book of the Dead" so popular amongst non-Buddhists / beginners
Content:

Caoimhghín said:
They aren't entirely wrong, but are missing out on the fact that the book is not for "everyone," nor is it useful to "everyone." I have a copy of one of the translations. It was given to me one Christmas. It's not a useful book for me, but I was obviously very polite when I received it.

Malcolm wrote:
It's specifically a bardo guidebook for Dzogchen practitioners. First Evans Wentz published his version, very influenced by his Theosophical leanings, totally not understanding it's context. Then, well, hippies like Leary started to read this while they were tripping. He then wrote his LSD version. Then, Trungpa collaborated with Francesca Freemantle to reestablish the book's context, Thurman did a version, that, quite frankly, is just weird. Gyurme Dorje translated the liturgical content.

Caoimhghín said:
I was given the Thupten Jinpa translation by a very well-meaning relative. Where does this translation stand amongst those?

Malcolm wrote:
Was unaware he made one. I am sure it is technically accurate enough.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, January 31st, 2022 at 8:56 PM

Title: Re: Samādhirāja Sūtra Translation Plans?

Content:

Svalaksana said:

Thanks for the heads-up regarding the 84000 translation, Malcolm.

Why must our hope perish in flames upon glancing on Hopkins' Meditation? Is it because of its unabashedly Gelug leaning? I must say I found Chandrakirti's Slivers exposition and the Buddhapalita/Bhavaviveka debate section quite illuminating, among other things.

Malcolm wrote:

It is the Scilla and Charybdis of Madhyamaka translations.

Svalaksana said:

I chuckled, but I'm honestly interested in your opinion, wouldn't mind a bit more specificity though. Does that mean it is a bad translation, a hard translation, both, or none?

Malcolm wrote:

It's book that has crushed the spirit of many Madhyamaka adventurers. It's nit so easy a book for beginners, that's all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 31st, 2022 at 9:03 PM

Title: Re: Argentinian guy who remembers his past lives

Content:

yagmort said:

it is very funny to see guys who dead sure that great masters can leave footprints on a rock, can fly or disappear as a rainbow, that dzogchen tantras have been taught in language of birds and was taught in 13 other galaxies, that there are higher beings who transmit practices to certain individuals later to be known as tertons etc., are all of a sudden take cringe when Atlantis is mentioned ..

Malcolm wrote:

Who said we were sure of any of theses things? I have mentioned many times it is important to distinguish myth (language of birds), legends, (footprints in rocks, etc.) and history (such and such a text shows up in x century and not before).

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 31st, 2022 at 9:08 PM

Title: Re: Happy New Year/ ལོ་གསར་ / 新年快樂

Content:

tingdzin said:

Thanks. Tibetan tiger year doesn't start for another month.

Malcolm wrote:

In the Tshurlug system, it starts tomorrow. In the Phuklug system, next month.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 31st, 2022 at 9:39 PM

Title: Re: "Nothingness"

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

You can conceive nothing,

But you can't conceive nothing ness.

PeterC said:

How are we discussing something if we can't conceive of it?

PadmaVonSamba said:

Nothingness? What is there to discuss?

What is there to conceive?

The problem is that one is starting out with an abstract concept. It's like talking about art, or god, beginning with an abstract concept and then only afterwards trying to determine what defines it. But nothing defines nothing. So, it can't be discussed.

Malcolm wrote:

Then how are you discussing it? It's similar claiming that one can only discuss concrete concepts, but "concrete concepts" is also abstract concept.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 31st, 2022 at 9:43 PM

Title: Re: Ancient Shamanic Bön

Content:

Kosm said:

Hello All!

Does anyone have any info about the original shamanic type of Bön from which Yungdrung Bön grew?

The ancient type was not connected to temples and organised religion, but was a system of animistic/shamanistic techniques and ritual magic. It was not even called Bön (apparently it was called "gter").

Any info/source much appreciated, thank you!

Malcolm wrote:

If you want to know about pre-Buddhist Bon, you should read Drung, Deu, and Bon, by Namkhai Norbu, Arrow and Spindle by Samten Karmay, etc. Modern Bon has no resemblance to ancient Bon.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 31st, 2022 at 11:14 PM

Title: Re: I freakin' love vaccinations now

Content:

Toenail said:

In women it can cause cancer in one part of the vagina where babies come from. I don't know the English name.

Malcolm wrote:

Uterus.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 12:06 AM

Title: Re: "Nothingness"

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

If this isn't off-topic, where does the samādhi that takes as its object the "āyatana of nothingness" (無所有入處) stand in Tibetan Buddhism and in relation to this topic?

Malcolm wrote:

Oh, this is when one makes a samadhi on the mental image of nothingness. It's a serious deviation...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 12:13 AM

Title: Re: I freakin' love vaccinations now

Content:

pemachophel said:

Actually no, not the uterus. The cervix. Cervical cancer.

Malcolm wrote:

True, my bad.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 1:04 AM

Title: Re: "Nothingness"

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

If this isn't off-topic, where does the samādhi that takes as its object the "āyatana of nothingness" (無所有入處) stand in Tibetan Buddhism and in relation to this topic?

Malcolm wrote:

Oh, this is when one makes a samadhi on the mental image of nothingness. It's a serious deviation...

Caoimhghín said:

If the yogin becomes ensnared in the samādhi, does it lead to birth as an asaṃjñasattva (unconscious being), or is that only if the yogin fails at the fourth arūpyasamāpatti?

Malcolm wrote:

If one falls into a samadhi of nonconceptuality, this results in being born among the unconsciousness devas. If one makes a samadhi on the āyatana of nothingness, then one will be born in that formless āyatana.

Caoimhghín said:

The Bodhisattvas have to master all samādhis, the dhyānas and the samāpattis, but some are evidently more dangerous than others to Bodhisattva practice. There is a time and place for arūpya cultivation, and likely this life isn't it for most. Nonetheless, is the reason for the danger the likelihood of getting entranced in it and taking birth in the arūpyadhātu as an asaṃjñasattva? Is that the specific reason?

Malcolm wrote:

There are transcendent samadhis and mundane samadhis. The four dhyānas are all mundane. They are mastered after the path of seeing in order to remove traces connected with them.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 4:06 AM

Title: Re: "Nothingness"

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

There are transcendent samadhis and mundane samadhis. The four dhyānas are all mundane. They are mastered after the path of seeing in order to remove traces connected with them.

Caoimhghín said:

If you'll humour me further, of the five powers on the path of joining, there is a samādhi component included.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, this is a reference to the indriya of samadhi, which is also one of the ten neutral mental factors belonging to all minds. It is a faculty. I assume you are talking about prayogamarga, the path of application/preparation. Actually, you need these faculties even to enter sambharamarga.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 4:13 AM

Title: Re: "Nothingness"

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

If you'll humour me further, of the five powers on the path of joining, there is a samādhi component included.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, this is a reference to the indriya of samadhi, which is also one of the ten neutral mental factors belonging to all minds. It is a faculty. I assume you are talking about prayogamarga, the path of application/preparation. Actually, you need these faculties even to enter sambharamarga.

Caoimhghín said:

So am I wrong to conclude, based on your responses here, that in your understanding, neither a single dhyāna nor the anāgamyā (much less the samādhi on nothingness) is necessary for the first bhūmi, because these are to be practiced later?

Malcolm wrote:

It is useful to have perfect śamatha/first dhyāna, but by no means required. The point of Buddhism is not meditation. The point of Buddhism is waking up. Meditating incorrectly leads to no place good.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 4:37 AM

Title: Re: Is first dhyāna necessary for the first bhūmi?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

The title says it all. Related: Is first dhyāna necessary for any particular significant degree of Bodhi?

Malcolm wrote:

Nope.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 4:48 AM

Title: Re: "Nothingness"

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

I'll make this a separate topic, since I've ventured off the topic, but I thought I had recalled you saying that perfect śamatha was the first dhyāna, and that this was necessary for the first bhūmi. As always, I could be quite wrong. I've very good at misremembering what I've read on these forums.

Malcolm wrote:

No, I never said it was a requirement. However, generally speaking śamatha is considered an important container for stable insight. And yes, perfect śamatha is the first dhyāna.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 4:59 AM

Title: Re: I freakin' love vaccinations now

Content:

Archie2009 said:

Identity politics is deranged.

Malcolm wrote:

I agree, white supremacists are quite deranged.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 5:28 AM

Title: Re: Is first dhyāna necessary for the first bhūmi?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Where does the eightfold path and threefold training stand in relation to the bodhisattva bhūmis if not even the first dhyāna is a prerequisite? What does the samādhi component entail if not the anāgāmya or first dhyāna?

I am personally familiar with first dhyāna being an absolutely mandatory necessity, but I'm open to other perspectives.

Malcolm wrote:

Samadhi is a natural mental factor of one pointedness. People with no experience, who like to follow books like recipe guides, say such things as "first dhyāna is absolutely mandatory for the path of seeing." But then you have to ask them if they have discovered the path of seeing. If they say no, then obviously they are just going to the basis of what they have heard or read in a book. If they say yes, there are other tests you can apply.

In Mahāyāna, the samadhi part is not perfected until the fifth bhumi. There is no requirement for the first dhyāna to realize the first bhumi. The first bhumi merely requires realization of śūnyatā. That can come about as a result of the union of śamatha and vipaśyāna, or it can be arrived at merely through vipaśyāna. It depends on the person. All that is really necessary is that aspiring bodhisattva can focus on their analysis on the emptiness of objects without being distracted, but is certainly does not mean that they have to first perfect all four or five factors of the first dhyāna. It won't harm them if they do, but it is not required.

You should examine Discerning the Middle from the Extremes, it presents a concise summary of the five paths and how they are realized in Mahāyāna. Madhyamaka texts do not discuss this so much, at least, not early ones.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 6:05 AM

Title: Re: Is first dhyāna necessary for the first bhūmi?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

...inherited traditional bodies of knowledge

Malcolm wrote:

That's what I meant by people who just read books. The only concentration one needs is to be able to focus on one's analysis without being distracted. That's it.

If one goes chasing after samadhi, one will waste a lot of time and never realize emptiness, and that is a fact.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 6:18 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

clyde said:

A must read by Dosho Port,

We Are All This Luminous Mind: The Possibility and Importance of Awakening

A Zen view of what awakening is and isn't, with personal stories from contemporary practitioners

<https://tricycle.org/trikedaily/zen-awakening/>

Simply put, awakening begins with an abrupt nondual embodiment.

Malcolm wrote:

It does? Why?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 6:37 AM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

Dgj said:

In other words, there is nothing stopping an understanding from being valid in which one could realize that the teaching that dependent origination and emptiness invalidate or disprove an ultimately existing Buddha Nature are wrong

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, there is quite a bit stopping such an understanding. There is not such a thing as a self which is anything more than a designation for the series of aggregates. Such an understanding that you suggest is just Hinduism in drag.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 6:45 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

KeithA said:

I hope every student of the way reads that.

Malcolm wrote:

I read it, but it sounded to me like a lot of confirmation bias and scripted realizations, and a bit Eckhart Tolle.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 6:48 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

KeithA said:

I hope every student of the way reads that.

Malcolm wrote:

I read it, but it sounded to me like a lot of confirmation bias and scripted realizations.

KeithA said:

This is the Zen forum, so no playing in the sandbox with you today, Malcolm.

Malcolm wrote:

I am not criticizing Zen. I am talking about the content of the article. Unless for some reason only agreement is allowed here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 10:04 AM

Title: Re: Haiku today.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Pizza and cold beer,
Damn it's frosty outside now,
The show's almost done.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 10:17 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Even then, it's not guaranteed, even from the point of view of the tradition of Karma Chakme. A commentary by Tujey Zhanphen Pel on Karma Chakme's famous aspiration specifies four requirements for birth in Sukhavati: the support, the recollection of the merit field at the time of death; the cause, gathering of accumulations and the purification of obscurations; the assistant, the generation of bodhicitta; and the condition, the pure aspiration.

The point is that if, at the time of death, one cannot maintain this recollection of Amitabha and his host, even if one spent a lifetime aspiring to birth in Sukhavati, one will not succeed in the end. From this perspective, mere faith is not a sufficient cause, in our tradition.

Zhen Li said:

Mere faith isn't sufficient for birth in the highest grade and highest rank in Jōdo Shinshū either. That's why Shinjin isn't one's own citta, it's the citta of Amida. Assurance is something that comes from the Buddha. However, the Pure Land sūtras permit birth by very slight causes. Birth in the lowest grade and lowest rank is rendered possible by one's own power, thinking of Amida even only ten times, including by those who committed the five grave offences.

Jangchup Donden said:

It may be just me but I feel like when sutras guarantee rebirth (or other things) by slight causes, it's that it will happen eventually, but it may be a very very long time until it happens.

Malcolm wrote:

This is generally how things are understood in the Tibetan tradition, in every commentary in every school

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 11:35 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This is generally how things are understood in the Tibetan tradition, in every commentary in every school

Zhen Li said:

Do you mind sharing some examples?

Malcolm wrote:

Read the Halkias book. He summarizes it all quite.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 9:02 PM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

I haven't gotten to Halkias' translations but so far I haven't been so fond of his translation choices and there are a few errors.

Malcolm wrote:

He does make some minor errors here and there—who doesn't?—but the point is not the accuracy of his translations, but his review of a selection of various commentaries composed by Tibetans on the subject. You will see there, invariable, they are univocal about the need for four causes to take birth in Sukhavati. I've consulted these to make sure he's got it right, and some commentaries he hasn't presented, such as the Sakya commentary mentioned, for review. The Tibetan Buddhist approach is pretty well summarized by Weihua above.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 9:36 PM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

Dgj said:

In other words, there is nothing stopping an understanding from being valid in which one could realize that the teaching that dependent origination and emptiness invalidate or disprove an ultimately existing Buddha Nature are wrong

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, there is quite a bit stopping such an understanding. There is not such a thing as a self which is anything more than a designation for the series of aggregates. Such an understanding that you suggest is just Hinduism in drag.

Aemilius said:

Conventional everyday reality/language exists even for Buddhas. Buddha Shakyamuni had a father, a mother, relatives, clan, tribe, country and upbringing. These make up one's identity and position in a society. He is called Shakya-muni, i.e. a sage/silent one of the Shakya people. That is an identity. And it is Buddhism that accepts reality as it truly is.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, a conventional designation of the series of skandhas called "Buddha." But there is no real or permanent identity there.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 11:07 PM

Title: Re: Is first dhyāna necessary for the first bhūmi?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

It seems that in a lot of Mahāyāna, the eight vimokṣas have become disassociated from the dhyānas and arūpyasamāpattis.

Malcolm wrote:

The eight dhyānas are paths of rebirth. The only reason the Buddha meditated on them was to remove traces connected with rebirth in these lokas.

Otherwise, as I mentioned, and as Astus affirms, the first bhūmi requires only one-pointedness, non-distraction, on the object of contemplation, four-fold emptiness. Upon its attainment, one can manifest one hundred bodies, visit one hundred buddhafiels and so on:

"If he wishes to, he can apply himself in such a way that in just one instant, in one moment, he can give up his entire family, wife, and possessions and be ordained in the Tathāgata's teaching. Having been ordained, in just one instant he will attain and rest in a hundred samādhis, see a hundred buddhas and know their blessings, cause a hundred worlds to shake, go to a hundred buddha realms, [F.185.b] illuminate a hundred worlds, ripen a hundred beings, remain for a hundred eons, enter a hundred previous eons and a hundred future eons, open a hundred Dharma doors, manifest a hundred bodies, and manifest each body having a retinue of a hundred bodhisattvas. <https://read.84000.co/translation/toh44-31.html#UT22084-036-002-390>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 11:11 PM

Title: Re: Most Important Empowerments in the Sakya Tradition

Content:

n8pee said:

Why is this?

Malcolm wrote:

Apart from Lamdre, Naropa's Khecari is the most important set of instructions in Sakya. It's easy to practice, profound, and complete. According to the Sakya Tradition, it's the ultimate practice lineage from the Cakrasamvara tantra tradition as preserved by this school.

Passing By said:

Easier than Ganga Mahamudra and Dzogchen? Speaking of which, is this found only in Sakya or does Kagyu Mahamudra / Samvara contain the gist of it also?

Malcolm wrote:

They are three completely different paths.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 11:25 PM

Title: Re: Is first dhyāna necessary for the first bhūmi?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

If the yogin fails at the stage of any of the dhyānas, they will lead to rebirth for him.

Malcolm wrote:

Below the path of seeing, the dhyānas are just causes for rebirth.

Caoimhghín said:

If the yogin succeeds, then he can use the dhyānas to destroy lust and hatred, as well as attachment to the kamadhātu. That's what I'm familiar with. Whether you consider it wrong is another matter.

Malcolm wrote:

Without vipaśyanā, samādhi is useless——this is why there are three prajñās, not only one. Meditation just isn't the main point of Buddhadharma. Prajñā is.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 11:28 PM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

narhwal90 said:

I suppose the dramatic awakening experiences make for dramatic reading.

Malcolm wrote:

Apparently, only Zen/Chan/Son people are allowed to confirm or question the claims of awakening of Zen/Chan/Son people. Others need not apply.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 1st, 2022 at 11:34 PM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

At least I'm not someone else's luminous mind.

That would totally suck.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 12:12 AM

Title: Re: Is first dhyāna necessary for the first bhūmi?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Wisdom is acquired through samādhi, so while samādhi may not be "the main point" of Buddhism, it is the methodology through which "the main point" is made manifest, no?

Malcolm wrote:

Prajñā is not acquired through samādhi at all. However, śīla provides a basis for a focused mind (samādhi), and a focused mind provides a basis for prajñā.

Prajñā is acquired through hearing (śrutimayāprajñā), reflection (cintamayāprajñā), and cultivation (bhāvanamayīprajñā).

The dhyānas are not required for this at all. Samādhi is just mental one-pointedness on a object. For most people, that would be TV, these days.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 12:32 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

narhwal90 said:

I suppose the dramatic awakening experiences make for dramatic reading.

Malcolm wrote:

Apparently, only Zen/Chan/Son people are allowed to confirm or question the claims of awakening of Zen/Chan/Son people. Others need not apply.

rejun said:

There shouldn't be a problem to "question" claims of awakening. But you should understand that it is only a Zen Teacher, i.e., someone like Meido Moore or Guo Gu, who is qualified to "confirm" (verify) it.

Malcolm wrote:

That supposes they are qualified to confirm it. Guo Gu claims to be a first stage bodhisattva. I find that difficult to believe. On the other hand, I don't find it difficult to believe that Dogen was an awakened person.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 12:36 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Shinjin said:

According to Lama Zopa Rinpoche <https://www.lamayeshe.com/advice/recite-amitabha%E2%80%99s-name-every-day>

If you recite Amitabha's name every day, when you die you will go to the blissful realm of Amitabha like a rocket, without any obstacle.

PRAYER:

I prostrate to the Tathagata Infinite Light Buddha.

I prostrate to the Suchness Savior Limitless Light.

MANTRA:

OM AMI DEWA HRIH

If possible, recite this 108 times daily, then dedicate:

May I be born in the Western blissful realm.

I guess he agrees with the chinese/japanese mahayana perspective.

Malcolm wrote:

No, if you examine carefully, all four characteristics discussed in the commentaries are present in this short practice. The Amitabha mantra (Amideva is a Tibetan corruption of Amitabha) is there for focus. There is a supplication. There is dedication. Prostration as an expression of faith.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 1:31 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Unknown said:
Haven't seen that claim...

Malcolm wrote:
He made it in a video presentation, when he was describing an encounter with his teacher, who informed he had achieved the first bodhisattva bhumi. One could argue that Guo Gu was not making the claim himself, merely reporting what Shenyen had told him, but even bringing it up...makes it a claim he is making for himself.

Unknown said:
Since you know Guo Gu well enough to judge his claim false, thus damaging his reputation, in the context of the above definition only, where do you think he falls short?

Malcolm wrote:
I am generally skeptical when people claim to be first stage bodhisattvas. Example, Michael Roach.

I doubt my skepticism damages his reputation. There are all kinds of claims of realization for this and that teacher and by this and that teacher. I am generally skeptical of them all.

In my book, one can claim one has some realization without being a first stage bodhisattva. But claiming one has directly realized emptiness is a big claim. To claim one is a first stage bodhisattva is to put on some big pants. A well know but somewhat controversial student of Maezumi Roshi once told me he thought he was a first stage bodhisattva, when I asked him for an explanation of Tozan's five ranks. I didn't believe him either.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 1:37 AM
Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind
Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:
I get the impression that Kensho is kind of having a moment in Western Zen these days.

Genjo Conan said:
I think it's been a response (and in some ways a useful corrective) to certain strains in American Soto Zen.

Malcolm wrote:
Personally, I rather admire the anti-kensho stance.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 1:42 AM
Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I get the impression that Kensho is kind of having a moment in Western Zen these days.

Genjo Conan said:

I think it's been a response (and in some ways a useful corrective) to certain strains in American Soto Zen.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Yeah I got that impression, and it probably is a good thing. The thing that I don't get though is what sort of differentiation there is in the article between just a basically samsaric 'peak experience' and kensho.

Malcolm wrote:

If someone has actually realized emptiness and woken up, they don't need anyone to confirm it for them. If on the other hand, they have a bit of doubt, and are not sure they have understood the meaning of emptiness, they might need a little push from a teacher to direct them in the proper way.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 1:53 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

There's no one to one comparison there, just saying, I don't think kensho necessarily implies a person has reached the first Bhumi or something, but maybe I'm wrong and there is some 'traditional' justification for that....

Malcolm wrote:

The word used in the article is "bodhi." Last time I checked, it meant realizing emptiness.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 1:57 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

reiun said:

And it is only stage one . . . As long as it is verified by a qualified teacher, for me, it's no contest.

Malcolm wrote:

That means the teacher must be such a person and so on. But as I said, if one has realized emptiness, one needn't depend on anyone to confirm it. Confirmations serve only institutional purposes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 2:00 AM

Title: Re: Biden would beat Trump in 24

Content:

Minobu said:

nightmare but I have a weird feeling he will win. the republicans are going to go ape in getting the vote out .

Malcolm wrote:

"the republicans are going to go ape throwing votes out"

There, fixed it for you.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 2:32 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

KeithA said:

where we speak of waking up just now, in this life.

Malcolm wrote:

I have no problem with the idea of waking up in this life (Dzogchen, check; Zen, check), a teaching outside of the sutras (Dzogchen, check; Zen, check), based on following a qualified teacher (Dzogchen, check; Zen, check).

I merely question the promiscuous use of the term "bodhi" to describe what appear to me to be training experiences.

Presumably, we are all trying to realize the same reality, no? the same absence of self, the same emptiness of dharmas and persons?

Bodhi, waking up, means realizing emptiness, not intellectually, but in actuality. It's inexpressible, so how can it be expressed in words?

This is why, when I see such articles like these in Trike, etc., it makes me skeptical. I don't doubt that Dosho Port is writing this in good faith. I am just skeptical.

Have these people even achieved patience towards their own afflictions? Are they still gripped by the three poisons? If they are, then they have not realized emptiness at all, but merely had an training experience that approximates emptiness. It's a good experience, a positive working basis for bodhi, but it isn't awakening, bodhi. It's like someone who opens their eyes for moment before waking up in the morning and then falls back into the early morning dream they were having. YMMV.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 2:35 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

KeithA said:

Our friend Malcolm's pov is that Dzogchen is superior...

Malcolm wrote:

Bzzzzt. Wrong answer.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 2:40 AM

Title: Re: Biden would beat Trump in 24

Content:

Shinjin said:

Yes, not very much different at all.

Malcolm wrote:

Biden is quite polite to the press compared to 45. At least Biden perceives the need for a free press, unlike the previous guy, who cannot stand the slightest disagreement or criticism from the press at all, because he is such a whiny, little bitch.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 2:44 AM

Title: Re: Biden would beat Trump in 24

Content:

Archie2009 said:

I was surprised to learn "In GA, voter roll purges are mandated by a law created by Democrats(!) in 1997-98."

Malcolm wrote:

Which is why we need federal voting standards and objective districting based on math, not gerrymandering.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 2:50 AM

Title: Re: Is first dhyāna necessary for the first bhūmi?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Because it is a threefold training, we can be confident that the one-pointedness that is supposed to be cultivated is not one like watching a TV, because watching a TV does not require śīla as a support.

Malcolm wrote:

The only difference between the samādhi of watching TV and the training of samādhi in the Dharma is that the former is contaminated, and the latter is not. But the samādhi, the mental factor, is identical in both cases, only the object is different. What makes the samādhi part hard is that it is difficult to shift one's focus from mundane contaminated objects to mundane uncontaminated objects, such as the path dharmas. Hence, the need for śīla as a basis for samādhi. But this has nothing actually to do with samādhi itself. Samādhi can be focused wherever one likes. And in the case of a practitioner, that concentration is focused on Dharma. It also has nothing developing rarified samadhis, etc. Samādhi here just means being able to focus the mind at will. That's it. People keep turning these things into strange beasts. We avoid things that disturb our minds (śīla), so that we can focus (samādhi) on developing the three wisdoms. That's it. It's not complicated.

It's better to understand the essence of a thing, rather than pile elaboration on top of elaboration.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 9:06 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Shinjin said:

According to Lama Zopa Rinpoche <https://www.lamayeshe.com/advice/recite-amitabha%E2%80%99s-name-every-day>

If you recite Amitabha's name every day, when you die you will go to the blissful realm of Amitabha like a rocket, without any obstacle.

PRAYER:

I prostrate to the Tathagata Infinite Light Buddha.

I prostrate to the Suchness Savior Limitless Light.

MANTRA:

OM AMI DEWA HRIH

If possible, recite this 108 times daily, then dedicate:

May I be born in the Western blissful realm.

I guess he agrees with the chinese/japanese mahayana perspective.

Malcolm wrote:

No, if you examine carefully, all four characteristics discussed in the commentaries are present in this short practice. The Amitabha mantra (Amideva is a Tibetan corruption of Amitabha) is there for focus. There is a supplication. There is dedication. Prostration as an expression of faith.

Charlie123 said:

If someone is trained in Phowa, are the 4 causes still necessary?

Malcolm wrote:

They're baked in.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 9:39 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

I will continue with Halkias' book. It was interesting so far and it is worthwhile considering all other perspectives.

GrapeLover said:

Perhaps you might also find interesting the commentary by Mipham Rinpoche available at the end of this Document:

https://www.academia.edu/35095965/JU_MI_PHAM_ON_PURE_LAND_DOCTRINE_AND_PRACTICE

Malcolm wrote:

One reservation I have about this paper is that Cook misleadingly follows Halkias in translating a common Tibetan term, dnegos po gi nus pa, vastushakti, as “other power.” I was going to mention this reservation earlier, but I see it is more necessary now, seeing that Cook here follows Halkias’ error.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 9:51 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

That being said, if someone successfully completes Phowa and opens one's sahasrāra,

I understood that no lack of merit and no karmic obstruction can prevent one from being born in Sukhāvati.

Malcolm wrote:

If you can manage to get your act together. Sukhavati phowa is enormously unreliable in this regard. Case in point: there was a famous phowa master in Dedham Dun, who successfully performed phowa often for other people. However, when it came time for this master to perform phowa for himself, he was unable to do so. He died before His Holiness Sakya Trichen was able to perform it for him.

There are many forms of phowa. Some involve Sukhavati, but not all. Sukhavati phowas are considered nirmanakaya phowas, because they involve a subject, an object, and an action. There are also sambhogakaya phowas and dharmakaya phowas. These later two have nothing to do with birth in Sukhavati, and instead refer to attaining buddhahood in bardo or at the time of death. Phowa is a rich tradition, which encompasses many approaches.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 9:54 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

So, it is recognition of the nature of mind. Got it.

Malcolm wrote:

So, not bodhi, check.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 10:00 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

So, it is recognition of the nature of mind. Got it.

Malcolm wrote:

So, not bodhi, check.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Yeah, from my perspective at least, "awakening" is a weird term to use for this, again I think just by use of that term there is a bit of unintentional (counter?) cultural crossover with the way Neadvaita people talk about "awakening". Until this conversation I was quite unsure whether or not it was essentially recognizing the nature of mind, it just sounded like it. Apparently there is some precedent for it being exactly that...if I am following.

Malcolm wrote:

Re: Meido's definition, it's the entrance to authentic mahamudra and Dzogchen practice as well. But we don't call this "awakening" or even "realization." It's just a recognition.

And, as I understand things, Dogen didn't like the term "kensho" because it implied an imperishable mind as opposed to a perishable body.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 10:03 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

clyde said:

For those who are interested, I posted links to interviews of Guo Gu (

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, this is where he made his comment.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 10:07 AM

Title: Re: I freakin' love vaccinations now

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Sorry to say, while antivaxx sentiment has always existed, from my point of view the Biden era CDC and related policy makers have done a bad enough job that combined with above factors, the paranoid have only dug in their heels.

ManiThePainter said:

The paranoid dug in their heels a year ago.

The blame for this lies with Trump and his cronies and no one else. Whatever antivaxxer hysteria we're dealing with today, it is something that Trump knowingly stoked and attempted to use to his political advantage. He also completely gutted the CDC as one of the first things he did when he came into office.

Blaming Biden for this is unfair.

Johnny Dangerous said:

I disagree, the CDC under Biden has been a joke,

Malcolm wrote:

Imagine, if you will, someone suffering from brain damage after a serious car accident. The car accident was Trump.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 8:29 PM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

clyde said:

For those who are interested, I posted links to interviews of Guo Gu (

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, this is where he made his comment.

clyde said:

Malcolm, Guo Gu is a respected Chan teacher and he said his highly regarded teacher, Sheng Yen confirmed Guo Gu's stream entry.

Earlier you wrote,

Malcolm wrote:

I find that difficult to believe.

clyde said:

So, is it that you believe Guo Gu is lying? Or that Sheng Yen was mistaken? Or what?

Malcolm wrote:

Mahayana stream entry is the first bhumi, so I don't believe it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 8:37 PM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Meido said:

In any case, i do not think there is confusion in Rinzai Zen regarding what kensho is and isn't vis a vis the path. I agree that the article in question expresses a needed corrective to trends especially within Soto Zen since Meiji (what the author has called the "Post-Meiji Soto Orthodoxy") arising at least partly from Christian influence. He has written in more detail regarding those things here, if anyone is interested:

<https://www.patheos.com/blogs/wildfoxzen/2021/08/the-showa-dispute-about-true-faith.html>

Malcolm wrote:

Interesting. Removing Christian influence from any Buddhist tradition is a net gain for Buddhism as a whole.

But is this anti-kensho stance in Soto actually modern?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 10:29 PM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Shinjin said:

My current practice is reciting the name at least 108 each day before going to bed followed by saying "May I be born in Sukhavati and attain supreme enlightenment". What would you add to that?

Malcolm wrote:

The sleeping yoga composed by Sakya Pandita.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 11:37 PM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Personally, I rather admire the anti-kensho stance.

Anders said:

In what way?

Malcolm wrote:

I see a lot of people chasing experiences, chasing recognition of the nature of the mind, objectifying the nature of the mind as if it is something to be grasped and held. The way it is summarized by Astus from a variety of sources here makes a lot of sense to me:

<https://www.dharmawheel.net/viewtopic.php?t=20655>

Doshu Port's article, for me, is describing are what are classified as experiences: Tib. nyams su myong ba, Skt. anubhava.

Experiences are transient. They come and go.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 2nd, 2022 at 11:57 PM

Title: Re: Biden would beat Trump in 24

Content:

Queequeg said:

Observation - seems Trump's tariffs on China are an issue for our friends from the Sinosphere... they're never mentioned here. I guess we can conclude they're making someone uncomfortable. Maybe its an effective tactic after all.

Malcolm wrote:

Tariffs just punish the intended market for goods, not the producers of those goods. Tariffs are bad foreign policy. However, once they are in place they are difficult to unwind.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 12:59 AM

Title: Re: Biden would beat Trump in 24

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

For example, I believe cancel culture is a legitimate criticism that can be leveled be against the left.

Malcolm wrote:

Whose doing the cancelling now? Trump cancels anyone who disagrees with him.

FiveSkandhas said:

America should always be a place where difference of opinion vis protected. Oversensitivity about what really are often minor verbal gaffes really do destroy lives and careers, and it's a frightening trend.

Malcolm wrote:

Who gets to decide what's minor?

FiveSkandhas said:

book-banning

Malcolm wrote:

Strictly a right-wing thing. Or haven't you been paying attention to the news?

https://www.vice.com/en/article/wxdpen/mississippi-furry-book-banning?utm_source=email&utm_medium=editorial&utm_content=news&utm_campaign=220202

As far as taking down statues of Confederate traitors, we have not been thorough enough. We also need to blow the faces off of Stone Mountain in GA.

FiveSkandhas said:

And COVID disinformation needs to be patiently rebutted with facts

Malcolm wrote:

It is, repeatedly, or haven't you been paying attention to the news?

FiveSkandhas said:

The desire to secure the southern border...

Malcolm wrote:

Is basically rooted in racism and 19th century history of US imperialism. Just when was Texas, NM, AZ, and CA part of the thirteen original colonies?

Where is the wall on the Canadian border? Oh, right, mostly white people up there with a common Anglo heritage, apart from Quebec and the First nations.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 1:22 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Experiences are transient. They come and go.

reiun said:

But they may leave their mark and open doors.

Malcolm wrote:

Oh, experiences are necessary, but they are not the point, at least not in Buddhism as I understand it, no matter what school we are referring to. Experiences are mind. Minds come and go.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 1:45 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

clyde said:

You don't believe Guo Gu is a stream enterer, so either he's lying or Sheng Yen, a renowned Chan Master who knew Guo Gu as a child and was his teacher for many years, was mistaken - and you know better. Which is it?

Malcolm wrote:

I told you, I don't believe it. That's all the answer you are going to get. What I believe is irrelevant to you, just as it is irrelevant to Sheng Yen, and Guo Gu. Why would they care what I think? And why do you care what I think?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 1:49 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Meido said:

Of course, in at least one major corner of Western Soto Zen, ayahuasca is now the hot thing. Too bad.

Malcolm wrote:

Sheesh, and here I thought it was just the inability to distinguish Advaita Vedanta from Buddhadharma that was contaminating Zen-- too much emphasis on "nonduality."

Ayakensho, who knew? It's 1964 all over again.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 2:09 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

But is this anti-kensho stance in Soto actually modern?

Matylda said:

Yes.. it was first attacked by Nishiari Bokusan,

Malcolm wrote:

So do you agree or disagree with Shohaku Okumura:

Some people think mind to be permanent and body to be impermanent. In this case, mind was considered to be atman; that is, pure and permanent. And the body was considered to be the source of delusive desire and impermanent. In this case, mind was called shinsho (mind nature) and body was called shinso (bodily form). And this mind-nature was often used as a synonym of buddha-nature. This is the reason Dogen negates the idea of kensho (seeing the nature).

http://www.thezensite.com/ZenTeachings/Dogen_Teachings/Genjokoan_Okumara.htm

Or is the case you are making that Nishiari Bokusan's influence was so strong that it has overwhelmed a more balanced view of the subject?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 2:51 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Matylda said:

Well, Rev. Okamura is very important person in American and Western soto. I am not a scholar as you know.

Malcolm wrote:

You are an important cultural informant, at the very least.

Matylda said:

Scholars with their intelectual understanding simply kill zen.

Malcolm wrote:

I'd say they are pretty well murdering Buddhism in general.

Thanks for your answer.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 2:55 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Shinjin said:

Tibetan Pure Land has a rich tradition of their own and perfect for those who are into more self power oriented practices.

Malcolm wrote:

We don't articulate it as a separate tradition. Everyone has faith in Amitabha Buddha, and everyone recites the Aspiration of Bodhisattva Samantabhadra as a matter of course, which is sufficient for birth in the pure land, sooner or later.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 3:31 AM

Title: Re: Biden would beat Trump in 24

Content:

Minobu said:

Indigenous is an oxymoron for they too migrated to to North America and are not of the land.

Malcolm wrote:

All humans are indigenous to planet earth.

But when your people have been living in the same place, more or less for the past 15,000+ years as opposed to the last 400, I think its ok to call yourself "indigenous."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 3:35 AM

Title: Re: Is first dhyāna necessary for the first bhūmi?

Content:

sun-and-moon said:

3. Since dhyana stabilizes the mind and mental factors, does stability of dhyana bring stability in rigpa too?

Malcolm wrote:

The dhyāna being discussed is not the dhyāna discussed in Dzogchen teachings. The latter does not depend on mental factors, unlike the former. So the answer is a solid no. In fact, it is the opposite. Rig pa (knowledge of one's own state) brings about natural concentration (rang bzhin bsam gtan), which is unlike the dhyānas spoken of in the lower yānas. Longchenpa writes about this extensively.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 3:38 AM

Title: Re: Biden would beat Trump in 24

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

a significant chunk of the population still looks up to the men who fought to preserve slavery as heroes worthy of public monuments.

Malcolm wrote:

Talk about lost causes...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 4:30 AM

Title: Re: Biden would beat Trump in 24

Content:

Minobu said:

(edits weird joke about what white Americans might refer to themselves in about 150 years)

Malcolm wrote:

Oh, they already think they are indigenous and have indigenous rights, you don't have to wait 150 years.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 5:00 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

ItsRaining said:

He himself used satori a lot which also refers to some kind of realisation.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, I am aware of this. Thanks for your overall reply.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 5:31 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Matylda said:

Those people were real zen people. Some of them wrote quite a lot, like Sawaki (circa 20 vol.) some wrote virtually nothing but were still famous in the inner circles. I found myself that those who were not inclined to write, talk and show up, were best.

Malcolm wrote:

Thanks.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 5:42 AM

Title: Re: What will you do...

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It's not a "Blue State" problem, it's a west coast problem, primarily. And it is somewhat overblown by the right wing media.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 6:36 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

I agree that Bhadracarī would be sufficient for birth, but would identify it as birth through the 19th and 20th vows.

Malcolm wrote:

In our tradition, Dharmakāra only makes one aspiration. It may have forty-eight parts, but they are integral to a single aspiration. One can argue over which passage is more important, but actually, it's just one aspiration.

Sure, one might argue that the 18th part is the most important because of the gatha that says:

If any sentient being hears my name,
they will be born in my buddhafiield.

But this is nothing I have ever seen any Tibetan scholar advance as a special position, Mipham included.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 6:52 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

clyde said:
slander.

Malcolm wrote:

Expressing an opinion is not slander. What is slander? "The action or crime of making a false spoken statement damaging to a person's reputation."

Now, my statement is not false. How could it be? I merely expressed an opinion, one you don't like. But that's your problem of attachment, not mine. You are certainly entitled to think my opinion is wrong, misguided, deluded, shameful, and any number of terrible things. But it isn't a false statement, since it's my opinion and I stated it directly and honestly.

But I certainly have not ruined anyone's reputation, either, and I don't answer to you, clyde. So get over yourself.

Now, this little exchange has become a meta-conversation and is therefore, out of TOS.

One other thing-- if Guo Gu was a first stage bodhisattva, do you think he would care? Of course not, so get over it. This is solely your problem. It isn't my problem, Sheng Yen's problem, or Guo Gu's problem. Maybe you ought to get in touch with that luminous mind. It would definitely solve your problem.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 11:55 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

I agree that Bhadracari would be sufficient for birth, but would identify it as birth through the 19th and 20th vows.

Malcolm wrote:

In our tradition, Dharmakāra only makes one aspiration. It may have forty-eight parts, but they are integral to a single aspiration. One can argue over which passage is more important, but actually, it's just one aspiration.

Zhen Li said:

This is the same in Jōdo Shinshū, the term 本願 (pūrva-praṇidhāna) has multiple referents:

1. The 48 vows.
2. The Gates for Birth (Essential Gate (19th), Provisional (20th), and Ocean Like (18th))
3. The Ocean Like Vow or True Gate (18th)

These distinctions were originally made by Shandao.

Hōnen added the dimension of "selection." This means that each of the 48 vows was specifically selected for a reason and to provide the Pure Land with a particular quality. It's not just a shotgun blast with a scattering of qualities here and there—they are actually selected for particular purposes. Hōnen also points out that we can select among the gate for birth, and indicates that the essential intent of the Larger, Shorter, and Contemplation sūtras is that the 18th vow is the universal vow that permits the full working of Amitābha's other power.

Shinran only added the clarification that the 19th vow is specifically meditative and non-meditative good acts, and that birth occurs by transferring the merits of those practices to birth, and that the 20th vow is Amitābha-oriented practice, but reliant upon self-power, hence it contains both "true and provisional aspects," i.e. both self and other power components. So, with Phowa, we can say that it is enabled by the 20th vow because it depends upon the practitioner's meditative act to activate, but it is enabled by Amitābha making the vow that enables birth through such methods in the first place. Malcolm wrote:

Sure, one might argue that the 18th part is the most important because of the gatha that says:

If any sentient being hears my name,
they will be born in my buddhafiield.

But this is nothing I have ever seen any Tibetan scholar advance as a special position, Mipham included.

Zhen Li said:

It also depends on the audience. 98% of the pūrva-praṇidhāna is skilful means.

Malcolm wrote:

Self-power, other-power, who cares? it's doesn't matter either way. Only the hook of faith is able to catch the ring of compassion.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 8:12 PM

Title: Re: Is first dhyāna necessary for the first bhūmi?

Content:

sun-and-moon said:

Thanks for your answer. Could you give a reference on Longchenpas texts?

Malcolm wrote:

Commentary on the treasury of dharmadhatu.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 8:20 PM

Title: Re: Seventeen Tantras Lung with Tulku Dakpa

Content:

yagmort said:

can i attend if i don't have any nyingthig wang yet?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 8:25 PM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Self-power, other-power, who cares? it's doesn't matter either way. Only the hook of faith is able to catch the ring of compassion.

Zhen Li said:

It's the difference between practising without calculation and attaining Buddhahood upon death, and wavering and spending 500 years or many kalpas to even begin hearing the Dharma again. This is an interpretation not treated in TB, so we don't have to continue this discussion here, but I personally find it interesting to explore potential overlaps and parallels. The different kinds of Phowa, for instance, are something worth exploring in this regard.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. In Tibetan Buddhism, the practice is designed on the basis of the first grade of practitioners. So if some one is serious about being in the best or second best kind of birth, they know what to do.

Apart from irmanakaya phowa, the other two do do not involve birth in Sukhavati.

In particular lamas train in nirmanakaya phowa mainly to help others. Also when train, you need to have the sign of phowa to assist others, and as proof you yourself will succeed if you can do it at the time death.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 8:32 PM

Title: Re: Buddha Nature of insentient thing.

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

However he does throw in Mipam and Longchenpa into the subject.

Malcolm wrote:

Neither would ever assert rocks and trees have Buddhanature.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 9:35 PM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Shinjin said:

My current practice is reciting the name at least 108 each day before going to bed followed by saying "May I be born in Sukhavati and attain supreme enlightenment". What would you add to that?

Malcolm wrote:

The sleeping yoga composed by Sakya Pandita.

Könchok Thrinley said:

Looking at the text, is a transmission of lung or anything necessary? It seems like a rather straightforward instruction that can be used by anyone who practices vajrayana.

Malcolm wrote:

It does not need a lung. It's sutra level.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 11:15 PM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Anders said:

Malcolm is just a guy on an internet forum.

dharmafootsteps said:

And HHDL is just a simple monk.

Malcolm wrote:

HHDL asserts, and I see no reason to doubt him, that he is not an ārya.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 3rd, 2022 at 11:58 PM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Anders said:

Malcolm is just a guy on an internet forum.

dharmafirststeps said:

And HHDL is just a simple monk.

Matylda said:

It is what he says, isn't it? And he has never said that he is a bodhisattva, the first bhumi neither any other bhumi up to the 10th. Of course Tibetans believe, that he is a kind of Avalokiteshvara in person, and that belief is shared by many non-Tibetans.

Malcolm wrote:

If Buddhism depended on enlightened teachers these days, it would have already been extinguished.

The very first Buddhist teacher I ever encountered was on a weekend field trip to go sit with Eido Shimano in 1978 at Dai Bosatsu Zendo. I was sixteen, and I thought for sure that this guy must be enlightened. When I heard about the drunken sprawl that constituted a weekend field trip sit with Trungpa at Tail of Tiger, I was pretty smug, since I was very impressed with Dai Bosatsu (I wasn't permitted to go because I was delinquent in my homework).

At Dai Bosatsu, I remember chanting the Heart Sutra in Japanese, but of course I could not keep up. And I remember being hit with a stick, which at that place you had to request. I wanted to see what it felt like. Of course I never received a Koan, etc., because I never went back there. But I always felt a kinship with the Japanese Zen tradition in general. When I went to Japan, a monk from Koyasan who spoke English asked me what kind of Buddhist I was, since I self-identified as a Buddhist, and I told him I was a Rinzai Buddhist. Of course, I did not know what I was talking about, but because I had that weekend experience at a nominally Rinzai place, that's what I said. (A funny aside, some of the kids brought valium to make it through the sitting periods, but I toughed it out).

Imagine my disappointment when, thirty-two years later, I heard he had been a serial womanizer, and that Robert Aitken had been keeping a record of his indiscretions for decades. The scandal went so deep that Myōshin-ji rejected the qualifications of all people that Shimano had designated as successors.

Now, many of the major Zen Buddhist founding teachers and their students in the US of note have been implicated in some kind of impropriety with women, financial impropriety, etc. some even claiming their bodhisattva activity justified their behavior. We all know who they are, no need to rehash the details . Many major Tibetan Buddhists like Trungpa, etc., were all deeply involved sex scandals, drug addiction, alcoholism, etc. Not just in the Kagyu school, but in Nyingma, Gelug, and so on. Even here we run into people who assert Trungpa was enlightened because x or y said so. I don't believe it.

I generally do not believe students of teachers when they assure me their guru or roshi or sensei or geshe or tulku is a highly realized being. I certainly don't believe it when a guru or roshi or sensei or geshe or tulku declares they are a highly realized being.

If someone passes, and they shows signs and relics at the time of their death, maybe I will believe it. But also signs and relics can just be the play of the four elements, and illustrate nothing special at all, so maybe I won't. Also nonbuddhist yogis sometimes sit for days without their bodies showing signs of decay, which demonstrates nothing more than function of mundane samādhis and nothing about awakening, bodhi.

All I know is that studying and practicing Dharma has brought meaning and purpose to my life. But claims of realization by Buddhist teachers and for Buddhist teachers? Meh. You can keep 'em. I am not buying.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 4th, 2022 at 12:09 AM

Title: Re: "Formally" asking a lama to be one's root guru?

Content:

KonchogUrgyenNyima said:

Hello,

I have heard it said that one has to formally ask a lama to be ones root lama?

Malcolm wrote:

Total misunderstanding of the meaning of "root guru" in Dzogchen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 4th, 2022 at 12:15 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. In Tibetan Buddhism, the practice is designed on the basis of the first grade of practitioners. So if some one is serious about being in the best or second best kind of birth, they know what to do.

Shinjin said:

[22] The Buddha said to Ananda and Vaidehi,

Malcolm wrote:

We don't read this sūtra. So it forms no part of our commentarial tradition at all. Therefore, it cannot be used to discuss the issue, since there is no common textual base for a discussion. Therefore, we are not making it complicated.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 4th, 2022 at 12:20 AM

Title: Re: Biden would beat Trump in 24

Content:

WeiHan said:

How well the pandemic is managed not just reflected in death numbers but also, as you brought out, how fast and how far people life can get back to normal.

Malcolm wrote:

That depends on getting the world vaxxed. Then there is the issue of the virus spreading rapidly among the wild life population.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 4th, 2022 at 12:33 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Matylda said:

However the competence and experience of a teacher from whom one could receive valid instructions is crucial.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, but that does not depend on some putative awakening proclaimed by devoted disciples. They just need to know what they are doing and know how to properly care for students.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 4th, 2022 at 1:21 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

We don't read this sūtra. So it forms no part of our commentarial tradition at all.

Shinjin said:

Why is this?

Malcolm wrote:

It was never translated into Tibetan. There are three reasons why this may be so: 1) it may not have a Sanskrit original 2) It may not have been sufficiently well-known among Indians to be translated based on reputation. 3) It might have been a Central Asian text, the original of which did not survive. Whatever the reason, we don't read it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 4th, 2022 at 2:00 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Matylda said:

However the competence and experience of a teacher from whom one could receive valid instructions is crucial.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, but that does not depend on some putative awakening proclaimed by devoted disciples. They just need to know what they are doing and know how to properly care for students.

Matylda said:

it is what I meant

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 4th, 2022 at 3:17 AM

Title: Re: "Formally" asking a lama to be one's root guru?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

63ucn4.jpg (67.11 KiB) Viewed 9855 times

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 4th, 2022 at 3:31 AM

Title: Re: Biden would beat Trump in 24

Content:

WeiHan said:

The number is from Edelman, a neutral to mildly anti-China America based consultancy firm.

Malcolm wrote:

I've been in China, more than once. I have many Chinese friends. One cannot trust what Chinese citizens say about China inside China. What they say inside is not what they say outside.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 4th, 2022 at 4:30 AM

Title: Re: the Zen promise is empty

Content:

clyde said:

And I believed the Zen promise that Buddhahood was attainable “in this lifetime”.

Malcolm wrote:

Bodhisattvas have great courage because they do not expect to attain buddhahood in this life. They understand the daunting task of practicing the perfections, and don't try to explain it with with clever rhetoric.

Of course everyone wants to attain buddhahood as soon as possible, however, 99.999 percent of people do not attain buddhahood in this life, no matter what path one chooses to follow.

clyde said:

I am saddened that it is not only considered improper for students or teachers to talk in public of one's progress on the path, but that it seems generally accepted that there are NO awakened living Buddhist teachers in any tradition!

Malcolm wrote:

You shouldn't be sad. It is against monastic vows to speak of one's spiritual attainments, period. This precedent has force in the lay community as well. Hence there is clear standard of conduct where teachers, generally speaking, refuse to speak of their realization. And if they do, it's only carefully selected disciples with whom they would share such information.

clyde said:

I had assumed and continue to believe that there are awakened contemporary Buddhist teachers in all the traditions (e.g. - HHDL and the recently departed TNH).

Malcolm wrote:

Why believe things of people when they themselves reject it? For example, HHDL has stated in certain terms that he is not an ārya bodhisattva. Of course, many people will ignore him and assume he is merely being humble.

clyde said:

But if it is the case that there are no awakened Buddhists, not even among the most dedicated practitioners and teachers, then the Zen promise is empty.

Malcolm wrote:

The measure of progress in Dharma: are your three poisons under control? Are you a more loving and compassionate person? Are you more patient, relaxed, and easy going? Are you wiser when viewing cause and effect? Do you have some understanding of emptiness and dependent origination? If the answer is yes to all of these questions, then you are doing pretty good job as a practitioner. In this case it does matter whether you practice Zen, Vipassana, Dzogchen, Pure Land, Nichiren Buddhism, Vajrayāna, and so on.

The awakening or enlightenment of other people is not transferrable. All teachers can do us is show us a path. As long as they understand the path they are practicing, have some core competencies in the literature of their tradition, as well as some kind of lineage transmission, then they can teach to interested people. If they happen to be awakened, great. But there is no special sign that someone is an ārya bodhisattva, they don't carry signs. One can only know a bodhisattva through their extraordinary compassion.

In the lower stages, bodhisattvas don't remember their training in past lives and will not possess the realization they had in previous lives. They practice the path and realize it again. This is why the lower bodhisattva stages are stages of retrogression. When one passes away, even if one reached the sixth bodhisattva stage, one will forget it in the next life until one meets the dharma again, whenever that is, in a future life. To be a Mahāyāna bodhisattva requires great courage and the commitment to practice the path to the end. There are many time where we will take rebirth where there will be no dharma for us to meet, no teachers to meet, no sangha to have.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 4th, 2022 at 5:44 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

rejun said:

A Zen Teacher would have made this clear.

Malcolm wrote:

Nevertheless, people chase experiences, just like dogs chase their own tails.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 4th, 2022 at 6:24 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

rejun said:

A Zen Teacher would have made this clear.

Malcolm wrote:

Nevertheless, people chase experiences, just like dogs chase their own tails.

reiun said:

Of course, since you are implying Zen people are like dogs, I am skeptical.

Malcolm wrote:

Nope, I am implying everyone.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 4th, 2022 at 6:29 AM

Title: Re: the Zen promise is empty

Content:

clyde said:

realizations

Malcolm wrote:

Realizations are not the same thing as awakening.

There are all kinds of realizations common people can have.

But when you realize bodhi, nonconceptual insight into emptiness, you are no longer an ordinary person. But even if you do realize bodhi, so what? You can't give it to anyone else. All you can do is teach.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 4th, 2022 at 6:36 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

reiun said:

Of course, since you are implying Zen people are like dogs, I am skeptical.

Malcolm wrote:

Nope, I am implying everyone.

reiun said:

And you?

Malcolm wrote:

Been there, done that. I am nobody special.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 4th, 2022 at 6:44 AM

Title: Re: Qbism... For your consideration

Content:

Queequeg said:

<https://www.scientificamerican.com/article/does-quantum-mechanics-reveal-that-life-is-but-a-dream/>

Hm.

Malcolm wrote:

Annoying webpage.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 4th, 2022 at 7:09 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

You know those three animals at the center of a Bhavachakra? Those are the same notion here as the dog, everyone in samsara is chasing their tail, and many of us can't even differentiate between when we are doing that, and when we have ceased. That's why there is so much literature (including in Zen) that addresses deviations from the path.

Malcolm wrote:

And just as clearly, the lesson we learn from history both recent and distant, is that even renowned teachers are really no different. Hence, my general distrust of authorization of any kind, institutional or otherwise.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 4th, 2022 at 9:38 PM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

I think that's a legitimate approach within a tradition. There are plenty of Pure Land sutras that Honen and others could have used to support their approach, but either they didn't know about them or they weren't available. What we today consider the "canon" isn't necessarily what historic monastic would call the Tripitaka or Twelve Section canon. Halkias makes this point too with reference to different monastic libraries in Tibet, which don't perfectly have collections that all correspond to Derge equivalents.

As for the matter of particular vows, Halkias makes the interesting point that the four requisites are in fact directly lifted from the nineteenth vow, so Tibetan Pure Land methodology is explicitly a nineteenth vow approach in contrast to East Asian methodologies. Just something interesting that came out of my reading so far.

This is pretty interesting in as far as deconstructions of the vows were used to develop these methodologies. If you deconstruct the nineteenth vow you get the four requisites, and if you deconstruct the eighteenth vow you get the threefold mind. The twentieth vow on the other hand supports more the kind of continual Nembutsu practices you see in mainland schools and Tendai.

Malcolm wrote:

Among Tibetan commentaries, there is no such deconstruction of the parts of the aspiration. It is one aspiration with 48 parts. If any of the 48 parts are not satisfied, the other 47 are voided.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 4th, 2022 at 9:53 PM

Title: Re: the Zen promise is empty

Content:

clyde said:

Not really. Imagine someone promoting a process to heal your pain and promises success, but can't (or won't) identify anyone who has been successful.

Malcolm wrote:

What exactly do you think awakening is? What does realization mean to you? Meido brings up a good point, how are you going to tell if someone is awakened if you are yourself not an awakened person with clairvoyance?

The Mahayana sutras provide a good answer to your quandry: regard anyone you consider a teacher as if they are a buddha. It really doesn't matter who they are. And it doesn't matter if they are a buddha in fact. They are a connection to the Dharma for you.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 4th, 2022 at 9:57 PM

Title: Re: "Formally" asking a lama to be one's root guru?

Content:

KonchogUrgyenNyima said:

Hello,

I have heard it said that one has to formally ask a lama to be ones root lama?

Malcolm wrote:

Total misunderstanding of the meaning of "root guru" in Dzogchen.

Sonam Gyalmo said:

Are you going to point the OP in a useful direction, or just issue a ruling?

Malcolm wrote:

The issue has been discussed to death here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 4th, 2022 at 10:15 PM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

I think that's a legitimate approach within a tradition. There are plenty of Pure Land sutras that Honen and others could have used to support their approach, but either they didn't know about them or they weren't available. What we today consider the "canon" isn't necessarily what historic monastic would call the Tripitaka or Twelve Section canon. Halkias makes this point too with reference to different monastic libraries in Tibet, which don't perfectly have collections that all correspond to Derge equivalents.

As for the matter of particular vows, Halkias makes the interesting point that the four requisites are in fact directly lifted from the nineteenth vow, so Tibetan Pure Land methodology is explicitly a nineteenth vow approach in contrast to East Asian methodologies. Just something interesting that came out of my reading so far.

This is pretty interesting in as far as deconstructions of the vows were used to develop these methodologies. If you deconstruct the nineteenth vow you get the four requisites, and if you deconstruct the eighteenth vow you get the threefold mind. The twentieth vow on the other hand supports more the kind of continual Nembutsu practices you see in mainland schools and Tendai.

Malcolm wrote:

Among Tibetan commentaries, there is no such deconstruction of the parts of the aspiration. It is one aspiration with 48 parts. If any of the 48 parts are not satisfied, the other 47 are voided.

Shinjin said:

Then the commentaries contradict the sutras since the Larger sutra itself states that the lowest grade consists of those who have only recited the name and nothing else. Why should commentaries be taken more seriously than what the actual sutra states?

Malcolm wrote:

There is no such contradiction. The Sanskrit and Tibetan recensions do not guarantee immediate birth for those of the third grade. Only the Chinese version does. It makes no sense to try and box the Tibetan tradition into a Chinese commentarial perspective. They are different traditions, with different textual histories, and different assumptions and motivational drives.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 4th, 2022 at 10:26 PM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

There is no such contradiction. The Sanskrit and Tibetan recensions do not guarantee immediate birth for those of the third grade. Only the Chinese version does. It makes no sense to try and box the Tibetan tradition into a Chinese commentarial perspective. They are different traditions, with different textual histories, and different assumptions and motivational drives.

Shinjin said:

Could you recommend a sanskrit version of the Larger sutra that is available online?

Malcolm wrote:

You should just obtain a copy of Gomez's book which has both the Sanskrit and Chinese sūtras translated separately, because they are sufficiently different to warrant such separate treatment. The short title of his book is "The Land of Bliss."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 4th, 2022 at 10:29 PM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Pablo said:

Just to be clear (I ask because I truly do not know, I'm not really interested in polemics), what Malcolm and Johnny are saying is that the language used in the Zen tradition re Buddhahood (see for instance Astus's messages in this thread) is rhetorical, and that the awakening spoken of in Zen does not correspond with awakening as understood in the general Mahayana tradition. Is this correct?

Astus said:

There is such an interpretation, especially when one takes the side of Doctrine (jiao 教 - a Zen term for the rest of Buddhism that's based on scriptures and treatises). On the other hand, it can also be said that it's the 'general Mahayana' that is rhetorical, while Zen is seeing how things are. And there's also a third option, that it's all a matter of skilful means and one works with whatever one can work for the single goal of liberation.

Malcolm wrote:

It's all rhetoric, all the way down.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 4th, 2022 at 10:36 PM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Shinjin said:

Ok, thank you.

Malcolm wrote:

Also, there is no doubt a Tibetan/Sanskrit based version that is perhaps more text critically oriented than Gomez's will appear on 84000.co.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 5th, 2022 at 12:28 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Astus said:

If there is disagreement then there is discrimination, if there is discrimination there is suffering.

Malcolm wrote:

So when the Buddha disagreed with someone, he was suffering?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 5th, 2022 at 1:15 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Pablo said:

Thanks, Malcolm.

So then the point would be not to try to "match" two different rhetoric schemes (aka bhumis on one hand and Zen on the other), or am I misunderstanding you?

Malcolm wrote:

What I am saying is that at one level, it doesn't matter what this old master said or that one. What matters is gaining personal experience in the path. That can only happen if one actually make a commitment and actually practices the path. It is useless to sit around and compare realizations. We can only have our own realization and no one else's. No one can actually confirm our realization for us, in fact, not even the Buddha.

That's why every teacher tells their students, "Great, you understood something, keep up the good work" if the student is sincere. Acknowledgement of a student by a teacher is far more about the student's sincerity than confirming that someone has achieved this or that rank.

For example, in Dzogchen teachings, there is only one level, rhetorically speaking. Where other teachings such as Vajrayāna, Lotus Buddhism, Shingon, etc., are ekayāna teachings, Dzogchen is an ekabhumi teaching. Zen is a little similar, according to my understanding. In Dzogchen, you learn to recognize your own state after it has been introduced; you work on removing doubt about that state; and then, when you have resolved your doubts, you continue in that state. But these are just words. The rubber has got to meet the road, otherwise it is all just rhetorical posturing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 5th, 2022 at 1:31 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Shinjin said:

Ok, thank you.

Malcolm wrote:

Also, there is no doubt a Tibetan/Sanskrit based version that is perhaps more text critically oriented than Gomez's will appear on 84000.co.

Shinjin said:

What problem do you have with Zhen Li's interpretation from a few pages back?

Malcolm wrote:

I don't have a problem with it per se, it just isn't how things are framed in a Tibetan Buddhist context. There is no commentarial analysis of these 48 points of Dharmakāra Bodhisattva's aspiration, for example. No distinctions are made between the 18th, 19th, and 20th point, no mokṣology connected with the kind of faith Zhen Li discusses—which isn't even one's own faith, properly speaking, but more of a pure trust in the efficacy of Dharmakāra's aspiration to do all the heavy lifting. This kind of idea is simply not present in the Tibetan Buddhist culture sphere.

The faith of simple people in Tibet is to recite the mani as much as possible, spinning prayer wheels all the while, and hope to be born in the Sukhavati after death, guided through the bardo there by a qualified lama. That's about it. When one does transference of consciousness, the form may be Amitabha, but the essence is one's guru. All phowas with three thoughts, a consciousness to transfer, a place to transfer, and the action are predicated on one transferring one's consciousness into the heart of one's guru visualized as Amitabha, Vajrasattva, etc. It is just an entirely different religious culture than Chinese or Japanese Pure Land Buddhism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 5th, 2022 at 2:24 AM

Title: Re: the Zen promise is empty

Content:

Queequeg said:

Its also interesting that Red Pine himself might be responsible for the popularity of the area because of his book.

Matylda said:

Do you think so?

Malcolm wrote:

Amongst western spiritual seekers.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 5th, 2022 at 2:29 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

He said to me there is Other Power in Tibetan Buddhism.

Malcolm wrote:

Not really. I have read literally tens of thousands of pages of Tibetan Buddhist commentaries and sadhanas, etc. The word "gzhan stobs" (tariki) does not exist in our discourse. Halkias is mistaken to suggest translating "dngos po'i nus pa" (vastuśakti) as "other power," and Cook is mistaken to follow Halkias' lead in this. It is not a big deal, but it is misleading.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 5th, 2022 at 2:42 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

He said to me there is Other Power in Tibetan Buddhism.

Malcolm wrote:

Not really. I have read literally tens of thousands of pages of Tibetan Buddhist commentaries and sadhanas, etc. The word "gzhan stobs" (tariki) does not exist in our discourse. Halkias is mistaken to suggest translating "dngos po'i nus pa" (vastuśakti) as "other power," and Cook is mistaken to follow Halkias' lead in this. It is not a big deal, but it is misleading.

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:
Thanks Acharya

Yes it was nothing official more of a personal teaching not literal or definitive like it is in Shin

Malcolm wrote:
I personally think the main defect of the Halkias book is confirmation bias. He wanted to find tariki in the Tibetan Buddhist pure land tradition, and sure enough, he "found" it in one text by Mipham, by misconstruing a common Tibetan term to confirm his bias. Cook followed him down this rabbit hole.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, February 5th, 2022 at 2:45 AM
Title: Re: the Zen promise is empty
Content:
Matylda said:
Was his book published in Chinese?

Meido said:
Yes, it was. Apparently selling 250,000 copies in China:

<https://sinosphere.blogs.nytimes.com/2014/07/17/q-and-a-bill-porter-on-travel-writing-in-china/>

Malcolm wrote:
Heh, the first time I hit that link it gave me this:

Error 503 first byte timeout first byte timeout

Guru Mediation:

Details: cache-lga21936-LGA 1644000185 1426676425

Varnish cache server

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, February 5th, 2022 at 3:16 AM
Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

It exists in its own place within the 18th Vow

What I took to mean from my old teacher was very generalistic like say praying to Guru Rinpoche as one example

Malcolm wrote:

And as I explained above, In the Tibetan tradition there is no analysis of the forty-eight parts of Dipamkāra Bodhisattva's aspiration, which can be privileged over any other, which could form the basis for a self-power/other-power distinction. It's simply foreign to the Tibetan tradition.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 5th, 2022 at 4:50 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

I guess the disagreement would be that Rigpa is not the same as Kensho? And from there the differences continue?

Malcolm wrote:

Why would rig pa be different than kensho? Both can be experienced by people who are not "enlightened." The whole point of the Dzogchen path is that one can recognize one's state. I presume this is the point of Zen. Enlightenment is overrated.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 5th, 2022 at 5:01 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

dharmafirststeps said:

The differences are just method, and that in Dzogchen one is introduced to nature of mind, in Zen one discovers it.

Malcolm wrote:

There are important differences. I would never, for example, assert expertise in Zen, claim to be able to explain koans, etc., or argue that shikantaza and trekcho are the same thing, though it is tempting to draw similarities. I would be suspicious of any Zen teacher who claimed they could explain Dzogchen unless they knew Tibetan, etc.

But as JD astutely observed, my initial response was one of discomfort with the responses reported by Dosho Port. It all seemed just a little pat to me. Slogans like "OMG, I am he as you are he as you are me and we are all together." Plus I really think that "nonduality" is an overused meme in Western "Eastern" spirituality, and when taken out of context is completely meaningless.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 5th, 2022 at 5:21 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

So when the Buddha disagreed with someone, he was suffering?

Astus said:

If he had disagreed by taking one view and opposing with another...

Malcolm wrote:

FFS, Astus, get a sense of humor. We know very well you are an excellent book dancer, ready with your handy kindle library.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 5th, 2022 at 8:15 PM

Title: Re: the Zen promise is empty

Content:

Anders said:

Longchenpa never hid his attainment

Malcolm wrote:

On what basis do you make this claim?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 6th, 2022 at 2:04 AM

Title: Re: the Zen promise is empty

Content:

Anders said:

Longchenpa never hid his attainment

Malcolm wrote:

On what basis do you make this claim?

Anders said:

That he'd in many places write about his own realisation.

Malcolm wrote:

In works read by virtually no one for three hundred years. That doesn't really count. And such references aren't in many places, but mainly in the commentary of the treasury of the dharmadhatu, written towards the end of his life.

And he doesn't really come right out and say "I attained this or that", he couches it in terms of "I understood this personally" which later scholars take as confirmations of his realization.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 6th, 2022 at 2:25 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

He concludes this section by saying that these qualities are not based solely on the "ripening force of individual beings" (sems-can rang-rang gi stobs smin-pa) but on the power of Amitābha's aspirations (smon-lam) and wisdom (ye-shes).

Malcolm wrote:

Right, without the ring of faith, there is nothing for the hook of compassion to catch. But this is beside the point. The point I keep making is that Pure Landers are inclined to focus on thus or that part of Amitabha's aspiration. We aren't.

As for accepting or rejecting sutras, if a sutra isn't in the Tibetan Canon, we don't read it, or reference it commentarily. You might regard this as short-sighted, but it isn't. It's just how our tradition evolved. Yours evolved differently. That's totally ok.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 6th, 2022 at 2:43 AM

Title: Re: Is first dhyāna necessary for the first bhūmi?

Content:

Si-va-kon said:

Intellectual comprehension of Truths is possible without dhyanas.

In this case, it is the fruit of the stream-enterer.

There are 7 remaining shackles to be eradicated from the total 10 saṃyojanāni.

Five higher bonds and five lower ones. Three of them (sakkāya-diṭṭhi, vicikicchā, sīlabbata-parāmāsa) are eliminated by the Way of Seeing the Truths, i.e. Abhisamaya - full of intellectual comprehension.

Dhyana without understanding the Truths can eliminate all degrees (strong-medium-weak) of these seven impurities, except inherent in bhavagra (8th dhyana).

Only one who has mastered the entrance to the 8th dhyana and fully comprehended the Truth is able to balance shamatha and vipashyana in such a way as to achieve nirodha-samapatti.

Vasubandhu gives the example of the Buddha himself, who "reached the 8th dhyana even before he sat under the bodhi tree."

Bhavagra - the limit of the mundane Path, i.e. Dhyana without Truth.

Defilements were recognized that could only be removed by Truths and only dhyana.

The underdevelopment of one of these two paramitas means the presence of certain impurities.

Their perfection and balance make it possible to achieve nirodha-samapatti, "calcinate" the most intractable samskaras, defilements still remaining on the bhavagra.

Malcolm wrote:

This is the general shravakayana account.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 6th, 2022 at 4:24 AM

Title: Re: the Zen promise is empty

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

In works read by virtually no one for three hundred years. That doesn't really count.

Anders said:

It counts for me in that I appreciate he did it.

Malcolm wrote:

My point is that he wasn't running around bragging to all and sundry.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 6th, 2022 at 4:55 AM

Title: Re: Is first dhyāna necessary for the first bhūmi?

Content:

Si-va-kon said:

All the theses I have presented are taken from Sanskrit texts.

Abhidharma samuccaya, Astasahasrika, Abhisamaya-alamkara, Abhisamaya-alamkara-aloka, etc.

I just tried to back them up with Pali primary sources.

Malcolm wrote:
Your creating a strange brew.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, February 6th, 2022 at 4:58 AM
Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?
Content:
Si-va-kon said:
The referent of any word/concept is "empty".
A series of one-time objects conceived by us as one and the same object.

This mental image of an object "lasting" in time, created by the consciousness, is able to enter into connection with the word, i.e. suitable for naming as well as for storing in memory.

And this "nomenclature unit" exists as a mental projection, as an artificial overlay on reality.

Cows, pudgals, pots - just such "imaginary" objects. In reality, there are only a fast change of frames, a series of different (consisting of different groups atoms) of unique instantaneous objects, divorced not only substantially, but also according to the time intervals of their existence.

Malcolm wrote:
Atoms are also imaginary objects, no less than cows, etc.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, February 6th, 2022 at 8:51 AM
Title: Re: Is first dhyāna necessary for the first bhūmi?
Content:
Si-va-kon said:
) This porridge was brewed long before me.

The gradations given by Vasubandhu in AK are refined by Maitreya/Asanga dividing the Path into five stages.
In Abhisamayā-ālamkāra and in Abhisamayā-ālamkāra-āloka says that the lowest entry level into the path, the first stage of practice, is called proximate liberation (mokṣa-bhāgiya).
The equivalent term in AS is sambhara-marga.

The second stage - proximate penetration (nirvedha-bhāgiya) is called prayoga-marga.
Its four divisions - usmagata, myrdhagata, ksanti and laukikagradharma are identical to those found in earlier Buddhism.

But Maytreya and Haribhadra frequently emphasize that stages of Mahayana penetration are superior (visistata) to the Hinayana equivalents.

Darshanamarga is Abhisamaya, she is the first bhumi.

This is the answer to the question whether dhyana is necessary here.

Everyone answered correctly - "No".

Dhyana is necessary from the second bhumi, this is already the stage of bhavanamarga.

In conclusion, a list of the degrees of pollutions eliminated on the bhavanamarga, respectively bhumi:

2 great great

3 middling great

4 soft great

5 great middling

6 middling middling

7 soft middling

8 great soft

9 middling soft

10 soft soft

Malcolm wrote:

Maitreya precedes Vasubandhu

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 6th, 2022 at 9:40 AM

Title: Re: the Zen promise is empty

Content:

clyde said:

You're making this more than it is. I was only asking if Zen practitioners could name even a few modern dead Zen teachers whom they sincerely believe were awakened as they understand the term (not needing to accept any definition but their own).

Malcolm wrote:

So you are looking for opinions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 6th, 2022 at 8:56 PM

Title: Re: the Zen promise is empty

Content:

clyde said:

You're making this more than it is. I was only asking if Zen practitioners could name even a few modern dead Zen teachers whom they sincerely believe were awakened as they understand the term (not needing to accept any definition but their own).

Malcolm wrote:

So you are looking for opinions.

clyde said:

Malcolm, I understand your point, but what proof could there be?

Malcolm wrote:

That's my point, none.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 6th, 2022 at 9:23 PM

Title: Re: Building my Dzogchen literature library, please make a suggestion

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Generally try to stick with original texts, don't waste your time on academic papers. Obtain wang, lung, and tri.

The Crystal and the Way of Light: Sūtra, Tantra and Dzogchen by Chögyal Namkhai Norbu Rinpoche

The Precious Treasury of Philosophical Systems by Longchen(pa) Rabjam

Gateway to Knowledge by Jamgön Mipham

Dzogchen Teachings - Namhai Norbu Rinpoché

Wellsprings of the Great Perfection

Buddhahood in this Life

Treasury of Genuine Meaning

Ye she Lama

Treasury of the Fundamental State

Self Arisen vidya tantra

Self liberated vidya tantra

Tantra without syllables

Blazing Lamp

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 6th, 2022 at 10:19 PM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

dharmafirststeps said:

Sorry if I misrepresented you, thanks for clarifying.

Great interview by the way. Really enjoyed it.

Malcolm wrote:

Tulku Orgyen has said that all Yanas have some aspect of trekchod in their teachings.

The term original purity is not unique to Dzogchen, it's found in the PP sutras, etc.

So it is not surprising Meido would see some similarities between Dzogchen and Rinzai Zen in his later training.

But I don't think one can just say Dzogchen and Zen are commensurate, there are important differences, not least of which is that Dzogchen is situated in a dialectic with the Path of Transformation in Vajrayana, whereas Chan/Zen/Son are situated in a dialectic with Sutric Buddhism, while largely accepting the path of renunciation advocated in Sutra as a basis for conduct, particularly in Chan and Son.

Similarities include, as noted above, teacher/student interaction that privileges oral instruction over scripture and rejection of path-based ranking schemes of realization.

A striking difference I perceive between Chan/Son/Zen is the extent to which Chan, etc., is deeply entwined with institutional practice, whereas Dzogchen practice is fundamentally a solo endeavor, carried out alone and in solitude. Of course I don't mean to suggest there is no solo Chan/zen meditation practice, because of course there is. But group meditation practice, while not completely foreign to Dzogchen, especially in an instructional context, is not the general mode of practice. There are no Dzogchendos.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 6th, 2022 at 10:27 PM

Title: Re: Why is the book "Tibetan Book of the Dead" so popular amongst non-Buddhists / beginners

Content:

Nalanda said:

It's so popular that even my aunt (who is a Christian) has one.

Why is this book such a hit to Westerners?

Malcolm wrote:

Hippies.

Aemilius said:

It is much earlier than that. What are the names of the youth- and subculture movements in 1920's, 1930's, 1940's, 1950's, and 1960's?

"Walter Yeeling Evans-Wentz (February 2, 1878 – July 17, 1965) was an American anthropologist and writer who was a pioneer in the study of Tibetan Buddhism, and in transmission of Tibetan Buddhism to the Western world, most known for publishing an early English translation of The Tibetan Book of the Dead in 1927. He had three other texts translated from the Tibetan: Tibet's Great Yogi Milarepa (1928), Tibetan Yoga and Secret Doctrines (1935), and The Tibetan Book of the Great Liberation (1954), and wrote the preface to Paramahansa Yogananda's famous spiritual book, Autobiography of a Yogi (1946)."

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and he understood none of them and interpreted all of them through the cloudy lens of Theosophy. His publications are useful for understanding the progress of the reception of Buddhism in the west, but importantly, none of his books are accurate and immediately attracted the attention of early Tibetan arrivals for their lack of accuracy. Of course the Sikkimese gentleman who translated these for him understood them perfectly well, but Evans-Wentz's editing distorted these translations not to mention his introductions, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 7th, 2022 at 12:33 AM

Title: Re: Building my Dzogchen literature library, please make a suggestion

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Gateway to Knowledge by Jamgön Mipham

ManiThePainter said:

I always thought the Gateway to Knowledge was more of a text on Abhidharma than on Dzogchen?

Malcolm wrote:

You need a little abhidharma.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, February 7th, 2022 at 12:40 AM
Title: Re: Geshe Tenzin Gelek Rinpoche
Content:

PeterC said:
I don't know why people keep flogging the dead horse of Christianity here,

Malcolm wrote:
Makes a nice dull thud.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, February 7th, 2022 at 1:21 AM
Title: Re: Building my Dzogchen literature library, please make a suggestion
Content:

ManiThePainter said:
I always though the Gateway to Knowledge was more of a text on Abhidharma than on Dzogchen?

Malcolm wrote:
You need a little abhidharma.

ManiThePainter said:
Is there anything in the Gateway which is restricted?

Malcolm wrote:
No.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, February 7th, 2022 at 1:27 AM
Title: Re: Why is the book "Tibetan Book of the Dead" so popular amongst non-Buddhists / beginners
Content:

Aemilius said:
It is much earlier than that. What are the names of the youth- and subculture movements in 1920's, 1930's, 1940's, 1950's, and 1960's?

"Walter Yeeling Evans-Wentz (February 2, 1878 – July 17, 1965) was an American anthropologist and writer who was a pioneer in the study of Tibetan Buddhism, and in transmission of Tibetan Buddhism to the Western world, most known for publishing an early English translation of The Tibetan Book of the Dead in 1927. He had three other texts translated from the Tibetan: Tibet's Great Yogi Milarepa (1928), Tibetan Yoga and Secret Doctrines (1935), and The Tibetan Book of the Great Liberation (1954), and wrote the preface to Paramahansa Yogananda's famous spiritual book, Autobiography of a Yogi (1946)."

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and he understood none of them and interpreted all of them through the cloudy lens of Theosophy. His publications are useful for understanding the progress of the reception of Buddhism in the west, but importantly, none of his books are accurate and immediately attracted the attention of early Tibetan arrivals for their lack of accuracy. Of course the Sikkimese gentleman who translated these for him understood them perfectly well, but Evans-Wentz's editing distorted these translations not to mention his introductions, etc.

Aemilius said:

Your eye of transcendental wisdom is lacking in compassionate understanding of the times and people of those times, I would kindly suggest.

Malcolm wrote:

I would suggest that EW's publications were quite typical of colonialism, and nothing like Csoma De Koros pioneering work.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 7th, 2022 at 5:16 AM

Title: Re: the Zen promise is empty

Content:

clyde said:

Yes, it will simply be Zen practitioners opinions about Zen teachers. To be honest, I've sat with a number of Zen teachers and not all Zen teachers are equal based on their personalities and tendencies, capabilities and skills, and depth of realization. Some, in my opinion (What else is there, except your opinions?) are awakened, and some not. Admittedly, even those I don't believe are awakened are often excellent teachers.

My point, as I've stated repeatedly, is that it's false modesty to not be honest about what Zen students believe about Zen teachers. Yes, it will be opinions, but our opinions about contemporary Zen teachers are no different than our opinions about the ancient Zen Masters and even the Buddha, except that we have their presence to aid our judgement.

Malcolm wrote:

But then, since there are no objective standards, it merely becomes an aesthetic judgement, much like Tibetan Buddhists who claim lama so and so is a realized master, and so on.

And now you can reconsider your outrage when I expressed my doubts about Guo Gu's declaration about his stream entry or calling into question the sort of rhetoric employed in Dosho Port's article. It amounts to no more than preferring The Rolling Stones to the Grateful Dead.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 7th, 2022 at 6:57 AM

Title: Re: the Zen promise is empty

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

dude, come on, the Stones are objectively better.

Malcolm wrote:

We think so but...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 7th, 2022 at 8:09 PM

Title: Re: Building my Dzogchen literature library, please make a suggestion

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Generally try to stick with original texts, don't waste your time on academic papers.

Obtain wang, lung, and tri.

The Crystal and the Way of Light: Sūtra, Tantra and Dzogchen by Chögyal Namkhai Norbu Rinpoche

The Precious Treasury of Philosophical Systems by Longchen(pa) Rabjam

Gateway to Knowledge by Jamgön Mipham

Dzogchen Teachings - Namhai Norbu Rinpoché

Wellsprings of the Great Perfection

Buddhahood in this Life

Treasury of Genuine Meaning

Ye she Lama

Treasury of the Fundamental State

Self Arisen vidya tantra

Self liberated vidya tantra

Tantra without syllables

Blazing Lamp

Nalanda said:

Thanks. Are any of these texts restricted requiring wang lung tri?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 7th, 2022 at 8:12 PM

Title: Re: the Zen promise is empty

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

dude, come on, the Stones are objectively better.

Malcolm wrote:

We think so but...

Anders said:

Would a Buddha's all knowledge extend to knowing which of the two are better?

Malcolm wrote:

Assuming Buddhas have ears, they would pick the Stones every damn day.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 7th, 2022 at 9:40 PM

Title: Re: the Zen promise is empty

Content:

clyde said:

but that it seems generally accepted that there are NO awakened living Buddhist teachers in any tradition!

seeker242 said:

There are plenty of awakened teachers. There is really no reason to believe there isn't.

Malcolm wrote:

There is also no reason to believe there is. Awakening is not a falsifiable phenomena. So in the end, it just amounts to a faith-based narrative. Even the Buddha was absolutely clear about this:

Excellent, Sariputta. Excellent. Those who have not known, seen, penetrated, realized, or attained it by means of discernment would have to take it on conviction in others that the faculty of conviction... persistence... mindfulness... concentration... discernment, when developed & pursued, gains a footing in the Deathless, has the Deathless as its goal & consummation; whereas those who have known, seen, penetrated, realized, & attained it by means of discernment would have no doubt or uncertainty that the faculty of conviction... persistence... mindfulness... concentration... discernment, when developed & pursued, gains a footing in the Deathless, has the Deathless as its goal & consummation."

— <https://www.accesstoinsight.org/tipitaka/sn/sn48/sn48.044.than.html>

I am not saying we should not have faith that there are somewhere awakened human beings out there. I am just saying we need to be honest that it isn't an objective fact that can be ascertained beyond doubt. Relics, light shining from bodies, etc., are also not proof of realization.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 12:44 AM

Title: Re: the Zen promise is empty

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It's still subjective, since who knows whether the "mendicant" is deluded. There is no way to book dance your way around it. And hanging out with someone for a long while is also no guarantee, as the case of Sunakshatra shows.

There is also no reason to believe there is. Awakening is not a falsifiable phenomena.

Astus said:

'There is a method—apart from faith, preference, oral tradition, reasoned contemplation, or acceptance of a view after consideration—that a mendicant can rely on to declare their enlightenment.'

(<https://suttacentral.net/sn35.153/en/sujato>)

'Great king, as a layman enjoying sensual pleasures, living at home with your children, using sandalwood imported from Kāsi, wearing garlands, perfumes, and makeup, and accepting gold and money, it's hard for you to know who is perfected or on the path to perfection.

You can get to know a person's ethics by living with them. ... You can get to know a person's purity by dealing with them. ... You can get to know a person's resilience in times of trouble. ... You can get to know a person's wisdom by discussion. But only after a long time, not casually; only when paying attention, not when inattentive; and only by the wise, not the witless.'

(<https://suttacentral.net/sn3.11/en/sujato>; also AN 4.192 & Ud 6.2)

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 5:44 AM

Title: Re: the Zen promise is empty

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It's still subjective, since who knows whether the "mendicant" is deluded. There is no way to book dance your way around it.

Astus said:

Yes, subjective, but not necessarily based on faith.

Malcolm wrote:

Necessarily. You have to have faith in these texts as authorities.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 5:47 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

And now you can reconsider your outrage when I expressed my doubts about Guo Gu's declaration about his stream entry

clyde said:

Malcolm, I have reconsidered, but, as I explained before, I still have this problem.

If Guo Gu had simply said, "I am a stream enterer" and you said you doubted it, I would understand and have nothing to say.

But you heard Guo Gu say his teacher, Sheng Yen, told him he was a stream enterer and this creates the following dilemma: either your doubt is that Guo Gu was lying (and I hope that isn't the reason for your doubt) or that Sheng Yen, a renown Chan Master who knew Guo Gu since he was a child and was his teacher for many years, was mistaken and your doubt is about Sheng Yen's discernment. Frankly, I was asking (and hoping) you would point to a third possibility for your doubt such as a difference in understanding of the causes and results of stream entry.

Malcolm wrote:

I told you. When people start talking about their realization, I just doubt it. It does not mean I think they are bad people, or even lying. Guo Gu probably believes it. But such declarations cause me personally to have less confidence in people rather than more.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 6:07 AM

Title: Re: Building my Dzogchen literature library, please make a suggestion

Content:

Nalanda said:

Then it looks like Dzogchen is closed door for me right now.

Malcolm wrote:

You need to find a teacher. That is the base line. You cannot understand Dzogchen from books. Many people try. All fail.

In the beginning, you have to be like a bee, and visit and sample several teachers. Once you find the right teacher for you, then you settle down. The teacher, in every respect, is more important than the teaching.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 6:40 AM

Title: Re: the Zen promise is empty

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Necessarily. You have to have faith in these texts as authorities.

Astus said:

What do you mean by that? One first needs to have faith in the texts initially, or there is nothing beyond faith? If the former, then why necessarily?

Malcolm wrote:

You have to believe the narrative. But there is nothing about the narrative that can be proven to anyone. So, yes, there is in the end nothing but faith, unless someone is claiming direct personal knowledge, and you know how sketchy that is.

Anyone want to stand up here and proclaim they are awakened? No? I thought as much.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 6:44 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Right, without the ring of faith, there is nothing for the hook of compassion to catch. But this is beside the point. The point I keep making is that Pure Landers are inclined to focus on thus or that part of Amitabha's aspiration. We aren't.

Zhen Li said:

It is clear that there is no inclination to focus on particular vows, but the point the reference to Mipham was making is that it is at least in the background that if not a focus on the 19th vow, then the practices of other vows are at least presumed to be subsumed under the practices specified there. You could say that the 19th vow appears to have the most detailed rundown of things you can do to be born, so from a certain point of view, it would be logical to say that is the clear area of focus in terms of finding out what it is that one should practice.

Malcolm wrote:

These are the things the aspirant can do. But they are not parsed as "vows." There is no language in the text to indicate that they are, or that they can be treated as individual aspects.

Zhen Li said:

Personally, I am interested in a holistic view of the Buddha-Dharma, so I want to know how people in all traditions understand these things

Malcolm wrote:

Then stop calling the 48 parts of the aspiration of Dharmakāra "vows." They do not satisfy the requirement of a vow (samvara) from the pov of the Tibetan tradition.

If you continue to call these things vows, you won't understand pure land practice from the Tibetan Buddhist pov. You need to set aside your frame.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 7:57 AM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

It's the closest thing we have to peer review.

Malcolm wrote:

Of course this declaration can't be checked, so it is hardly peer review.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 8:05 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

That's just the most common translation for pranidhana.

Malcolm wrote:

Maybe in Chinese, not in Tibetan. In Tibetan pranidhana is translated as smon lam.

Smon pa refers to a desire to attain something, lam refers to an utterance (tshig gi lam, literally path of words), hence we typically translate this term as "aspiration." So there is a disconnect here based on semantics.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 8:11 AM

Title: Re: the Zen promise is empty

Content:

Astus said:

What do you mean by that? One first needs to have faith in the texts initially, or there is nothing beyond faith? If the former, then why necessarily?

Malcolm wrote:

You have to believe the narrative. But there is nothing about the narrative that can be proven to anyone. So, yes, there is in the end nothing but faith, unless someone is claiming direct personal knowledge, and you know how sketchy that is.

Anyone want to stand up here and proclaim they are awakened? No? I thought as much.

PadmaVonSamba said:

Sure. I will.

Well...give me a few minutes. I haven't had my coffee yet. But then...

Ultimately, asking for someone to reveal they are fully awakened is a trick question. As soon as you say, "I" you negate "am enlightened".

Malcolm wrote:

No, this doesn't follow, since the Buddha, so we have read, did exactly that.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 8:54 AM

Title: Re: the Zen promise is empty

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

Ultimately, asking for someone to reveal they are fully awakened is a trick question. As soon as you say, "I" you negate "am enlightened".

Malcolm wrote:

No, this doesn't follow, since the Buddha, so we have read, did exactly that.

PadmaVonSamba said:

Yeah, well, he was the exception, which is probably why we are Buddhists. He also backed it up with a few miracles

Malcolm wrote:

Which he also explained didn't prove anything...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 9:10 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

As for Tibetan, for smon lam, Jeffrey Hopkins includes "vow; resolve," as does Valby, and Ives Waldo. For smon pa, JH has "resolve, vow."

I think the problem isn't really with the term "vow," it's that you may be assuming vow means saṃvāra or precept or something along those lines, when most people are using the term in a different way.

Malcolm wrote:

I was using a native Tibetan dictionary. The Valby dictionary is not reliable, it's kind of like a pastiche of different translators. It's not reflective of how Tibetans understand their own terminology at all. The native Tibetan etymology is as I explained it to you. No Tibetan considers a smon lam to be a sdom pa. As I said, there is a semantic disconnect here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 9:33 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

As I said, there is a semantic disconnect here.

Zhen Li said:

I do not have a disconnect, I am happy to recognise that praṇidhāna is smon lam and 願. That I represent this word with a different English term than you is of the lowest importance for the conversation. We shall just use praṇidhāna going forward.

Malcolm wrote:

My point related to how the term is understood in Tibetan, and we can't simply gloss over it. The point I am making, which is being astutely ignored here, is that Dharmakara didn't make 48 aspirations. He made one. His aspiration was to purify a buddhafiield, and he specified 48 conditions integral to his success in doing so. I am maintaining that distinction is critical in understanding why the Tibetan pure land traditions are quite uniform in their presentation from the eighth century onward.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 10:02 AM

Title: Re: Building my Dzogchen literature library, please make a suggestion

Content:

Nalanda said:

Then it looks like Dzogchen is closed door for me right now.

Malcolm wrote:

You need to find a teacher. That is the base line. You cannot understand Dzogchen from books. Many people try. All fail.

In the beginning, you have to be like a bee, and visit and sample several teachers. Once you find the right teacher for you, then you settle down. The teacher, in every respect, is more important than the teaching.

Nalanda said:

Yes yes. You said several times and <https://www.dharmawheel.net/viewtopic.php?p=615173#p615173>, this isn't an overnight project. It will take a few years.

By my estimation:

For the next 10 years - General Buddhism, Sutrayana Mahayana, Tibetan Buddhism. FTMP, Tergar, my <https://www.bodhicittasangha.org/> - Khenpo Sherab)

I just thought there are Dzogchen books I could read in the meantime.

Malcolm wrote:

It's better you don't, frankly. You won't understand them without explanation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 10:07 AM

Title: Re: Building my Dzogchen literature library, please make a suggestion

Content:

Nalanda said:

Got it.

Well, I saved some money and time.

Thank you.

Malcolm wrote:

You can always buy them. It's not that difficult to get teachings. For example you should attend the lung of 17 tantras that's coming up. You should not try understand these things on your own.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 10:16 AM

Title: Re: Building my Dzogchen literature library, please make a suggestion

Content:

Nalanda said:

Where is the 17 tantras?

That Bon master video above?

Malcolm wrote:

No, I posted a link a while back, you can find it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 11:19 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

I think if you reflect upon the matter, you will find that this is clearly the case, and that any mention of the four conditions for birth is a clear selection of specific aspects of the 48 conditions relevant to us.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, but that condition is not possible without all the rest, they are all integral to one another, just as it is integral to all of them. Since Dharmakara has done his job, presumably, without our participation the other 47 conditions fail. The crucial point of course is that it's our faith, through hearing Amitabha's name, upon which Dharmakara depends for the success of his aspiration. Without us, he has no buddhafiield.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 8:14 PM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

Dan74 said:

Maybe Malcolm's understanding of what attaining stream entry entails differs from that of Ven. Sheng-Yen and Guo Gu? I mean he has shown siddhis and all...

Malcolm wrote:

Mahayana streamentry means one has directly realized two-fold emptiness.

There are no observable external signs of such an attainment. So in this case, one would have to just take GG's word at face value.

I mean, that would be like me publicly claiming that I've been told by some lama I won't experience the bardo. Anyone would be quite justified in expressing their skepticism of such a claim.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 8:17 PM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

It's the closest thing we have to peer review.

Malcolm wrote:

Of course this declaration can't be checked, so it is hardly peer review.

PadmaVonSamba said:

No, but I said it's the closest thing we have to it.

Malcolm wrote:

It isn't close at all. Peer review is usually done by committee, and it is not a process free of flaws.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 8:21 PM

Title: Re: Formless shamatha + shamatha w/o object

Content:

Damchö_Dorje said:

First, are formless shamatha and shamatha without an object the same practice?

What is the relationship of this kind of shamatha to nonmeditation?

Malcolm wrote:

You need to indicate where you are taking this terminology from.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 8:58 PM

Title: Re: the Zen promise is empty

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

You have to believe the narrative. But there is nothing about the narrative that can be proven to anyone. So, yes, there is in the end nothing but faith, unless someone is claiming direct personal knowledge, and you know how sketchy that is.

Astus said:

If by faith you mean cannot be proven to others, then it's all just faith.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. And, quite honestly, having a more calm mind, etc., is just as likely to be an expression of maturity as a human being, as it is to be a result of some faith commitment to Buddhism or any other religion.

As for the rest tl;dr.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 9:11 PM

Title: Re: Most Important Empowerments in the Sakya Tradition

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Apart from Lamdre, Naropa's Khecari is the most important set of instructions in Sakya. It's easy to practice, profound, and complete. According to the Sakya Tradition, it's the ultimate practice lineage from the Cakrasamvara tantra tradition as preserved by this school.

Konchog1 said:

In the Ganden Tradition, it is recommended to practice Heruka first. It's my understanding the Sakyapa only practice Hevajra first. Do you know the reason for this?

Malcolm wrote:

Yogini includes Heruka.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 10:54 PM

Title: Re: We Are All This Luminous Mind

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

My point is that while there is no absolutely sure way to determine if a teacher has attained realization (a point on which I think you'd agree), probably the safest bet is to find out if their teacher thinks so or not.

Malcolm wrote:

It's exactly the same. Who says their teacher is realized?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 11:34 PM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

I think if you reflect upon the matter, you will find that this is clearly the case, and that any mention of the four conditions for birth is a clear selection of specific aspects of the 48 conditions relevant to us.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, but that condition is not possible without all the rest, they are all integral to one another, just as it is integral to all of them. Since Dharmakara has done his job, presumably, without our participation the other 47 conditions fail. The crucial point of course is that it's our faith, through hearing Amitabha's name, upon which Dharmakara depends for the success of his aspiration. Without us, he has no buddhafiield.

Zhen Li said:

Yes. This is why there are confirmation passages in the second half of the sūtra, confirming that indeed he is now a Buddha—therefore the praṇidhāna works and is true in all its aspects and not just in one.

Malcolm wrote:

Which means his aspiration depends on the power of our desire to take birth in Sukhavati.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 11:38 PM

Title: Re: Building my Dzogchen literature library, please make a suggestion

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I got that information from an Alan Wallace video. Unfortunately I did not bookmark it. You'll have to take my word on it—or not.

treehuggingoctopus said:

Oh, I can easily believe you got it from Alan Wallace -- the guy reputed to have made some rather extraordinary claims in a similar vein (<https://www.dharmawheel.net/viewtopic.php?f=40&t=20699&hilit=dhyana+wallace>).
It must have been a performative rather than descriptive statement -- one about what Alan Wallace would like things to be rather than about what they were (or are).

Tata1 said:

Allan wallace says that both approaches existed in tibet.

Malcolm wrote:

In fact, the way it actually is, is like this, according what I heard from HH Taklung Tsetrul, You go and get wang, lung, and tri. Since many of these Dzogchen cycles are too large to explain, point by point, you get the essential instructions you need for practice. You read the rest on your own for which you have received the lung. If you have questions, you go back and ask. Wallace is not completely wrong, but he has left out an essential part of the process. It all begins with empowerment, lung, and tri, and all Dzogchen empowerments contain direct introduction.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 8th, 2022 at 11:45 PM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Yes. This is why there are confirmation passages in the second half of the sūtra, confirming that indeed he is now a Buddha—therefore the praṇidhāna works and is true in all its aspects and not just in one.

Malcolm wrote:

Which means his aspiration depends on the power of our desire to take birth in Sukhavati.

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

Maybe the aspiration is given by Amitabha in the first place

Malcolm wrote:

No. That is not possible. If it were possible, then there would be no sentient being who had heard Amitabha's name and ignored it. Why? Because presumably Amitabha's compassion would not permit it. But buddhas are not omnipotent. They do not have the power to change the karma of sentient beings by fiat, nor to plant thoughts in their minds. If they did, the consequence would be that since there is still suffering, buddhas would be incomparably cruel for not motivating all sentient beings to attain buddhahood by taking birth in Sukhavati. The inspiration for taking birth in Sukhavati necessarily depends on a sentient being's own karma and aspirations (smon lam).

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 9th, 2022 at 12:43 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

The Aspiration to go to the Pure Land is part of the 18th Vow which is Other Power

Malcolm wrote:

I understand how these distinctions are made in JSS, and I am not arguing with them about their understanding.

However, it is not germane to the Tibetan Buddhist tradition. If we want to understand this from the Tibetan Buddhist point of view, we have to exclude imputing Jodo Shinshu, etc. interpretations, otherwise, we will not understand what Tibetan commentaries actually intend—and this is the main fault of the Halkias book and Cook paper.

The Tibetan version of the Sutra requires that sentient beings first must have generated Mahāyāna bodhicitta. Those who have not generated bodhicitta are necessarily excluded. Actually, conditions 18 and 19 are barely distinguishable, to the point where 19 is basically an elaboration of 18. For this reason, we see Tibetans selecting condition 19, with its four conditions as the critical point.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 9th, 2022 at 1:10 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

Ok fine from a Vajrayana point of view it's different

Malcolm wrote:

It isn't even a Vajrayāna perspective, it's based strictly on sūtra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 9th, 2022 at 2:45 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Shinjin said:

Yes, condition 19 is only for those who are unable to let go of self power effort.

Malcolm wrote:

That is just not how it is seen in the Tibetan tradition. At no point in any Tibetan commentary is such an indication made. My point is that this distinction that strictly differentiates one's personal effort and Amitabha's aspiration is not made in Tibetan Buddhism, in fact, it is the opposite; they are mutual, without personal effort through generating bodhicitta and so on, Amitabha's aspiration is not effective for that person. It's quite clear in the text of the sūtra as we read it. YMMV.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 9th, 2022 at 3:09 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Shinjin said:

Yes, condition 19 is only for those who are unable to let go of self power effort.

Malcolm wrote:

That is just not how it is seen in the Tibetan tradition. At no point in any Tibetan commentary is such an indication made. My point is that this distinction that strictly differentiates one's personal effort and Amitabha's aspiration is not made in Tibetan Buddhism, in fact, it is the opposite; they are mutual, without personal effort through generating bodhicitta and so on, Amitabha's aspiration is not effective for that person. It's quite clear in the text of the sūtra as we read it. YMMV.

Shinjin said:

I don't think anyone recites Amitabha without the desire for buddhahood. Generating bodhicitta isn't some sort of seperate activity.

Malcolm wrote:

Some people just want salvation, without understanding no buddha can offer this, not even Amitabha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 9th, 2022 at 4:20 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Shinjin said:

I don't think anyone recites Amitabha without the desire for buddhahood. Generating bodhicitta isn't some sort of seperate activity.

Malcolm wrote:

Some people just want salvation, without understanding no buddha can offer this, not even Amitabha.

Shinjin said:

The special feature of Sukhavati is that even ordinary worldly beings can be born there in contrast to other buddhafiels. Nobody is excluded.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, there are some beings who are excluded, those who have committed the five heinous deeds, etc.; if you have not generated bodhicitta, etc. This is how is it understood in Tibetan Buddhism. YMMV.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 9th, 2022 at 4:25 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Shinjin said:

I don't think anyone recites Amitabha without the desire for buddhahood. Generating bodhicitta isn't some sort of seperate activity.

Malcolm wrote:

Some people just want salvation, without understanding no buddha can offer this, not even Amitabha.

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

In Jodo Shinshu it is profound trust in the working of the original vow the name becomes other power in this case no further understanding is required it's a very unique teaching

With great respect to you Malcolm

Malcolm wrote:

You are completely missing my point. From the point of view of Tibetan Buddhism, no Buddha can offer you liberation. All they can do is show you a path, that includes Amitabha.

And, as I said, there is a defacto mutuality between one's desire to be born in Sukhavati and Amitabha's aspiration. But it really seems people are not interested in understanding Tibetan pure land practices on their own terms here. So this is will be my final contribution to the thread.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 9th, 2022 at 4:51 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

You shouldn't get angry if people have a different point of view in this case

Malcolm wrote:

I am not angry. But at this point I am beginning repeat myself. My final word:

There is no "other power" or "self power" in Tibetan Pure land practice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 9th, 2022 at 4:55 AM

Title: Re: In TB, is there a specific Pure Land we aim for (Sukhavati?) or you can aim for whatever you want?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

So this is will be my final contribution to the thread.

Virgo said:

Malcolm, before you go does this one need transmission or can it be done without lung?

<https://www.lotsawahouse.org/tibetan-masters/jamyang-khyentse-chokyi-lodro/brief-amitabha-sleeping-meditation>

Malcolm wrote:

It can be done without a lung.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 9th, 2022 at 5:17 AM

Title: Re: How to use dharani?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Like this one: <https://read.84000.co/translation/toh750.html>

Let me guess...need empowerment, lung, transmission, etc?

Malcolm wrote:

Some, most do not.

Nalanda said:

Are there dharanis for generating wealth for a practitioner to help with personal financial stability?

Malcolm wrote:

Tara practice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 9th, 2022 at 6:49 AM

Title: Re: Who were the previous Buddhas before Shakyamuni (who lived in this world) according to our tradition?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Who were the previous Buddhas before Shakyamuni (who lived in this world) according to our tradition?

Malcolm wrote:

Depends on the tradition.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 9th, 2022 at 6:52 AM

Title: Re: Persons whose hands have been cut off

Content:

Subcontrary said:

I have felt pretty uneasy about this section, as the decree does not seem compassionate at all. I don't see what purpose there is in excluding people with disabilities from the sangha...

Malcolm wrote:

It is meant to prevent people from joining the monastic Sangha out of a need for social services, which is the proper responsibility of their families or the state, that is all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 9th, 2022 at 7:32 PM

Title: Re: Persons whose hands have been cut off

Content:

Unknown said:

but blind people aren't, although they would be heavily dependent on others.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, actually they are forbidden to, ordain if they are already blind.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 9th, 2022 at 9:34 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Queequeg said:

Yeah. Well.

Kim O'Hara said:

So far, <https://www.vox.com/2020/11/30/21726563/kim-stanley-robinson-the-ezra-> klein-show-climate-change looks best.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

Ummmm....KSR's portrait depends heavily on actual terrorism. Just saying....

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 9th, 2022 at 10:27 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Ummmm....KSR's portrait depends heavily on actual terrorism. Just saying....

Queequeg said:

Some people need their teeth kicked in. Without malice, of course. Just saying...

Malcolm wrote:

Pretty hard to explain that to the relatives of people whose planes have been downed by drone attacks...just saying...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 9th, 2022 at 11:20 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Queequeg said:

Seriously, though, as I said, that book is like watching a trick shot. Motherf*ckers aint doin shit. Humans didn't survive as a species by being bold and brave. We survived by being cowardly and opportunistic.

Malcolm wrote:

Nope. I just question Kim's assertion that it is a remotely workable blueprint.

Now, just let me get back to my greenwashed life.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 9th, 2022 at 11:44 PM

Title: Re: Formless shamatha + shamatha w/o object

Content:

Damchö_Dorje said:

First, are formless shamatha and shamatha without an object the same practice?

What is the relationship of this kind of shamatha to nonmeditation?

Malcolm wrote:

You need to indicate where you are taking this terminology from.

Damchö_Dorje said:

On this forum, I have usually seen the term nonmeditation in connection with Mahamudra just coming through old posts. Formless shamatha I have hardly come across at all, but it's a term I've seen used on this forum as well.

Malcolm wrote:

There is object-oriented śamatha, when one uses an outer object. Objectless śamatha is when you focus on a mental image, sometimes called a "nimitta." "Formless" śamatha is a western term that as far as I know has no Tibetan correlate.

Nonmeditation means that one has reached a stage of practice where there is no distinction between equipoise and post-equipoise, buddhahood, basically.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 10th, 2022 at 1:03 AM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Nemo said:

I suggest talking to them directly.

Queequeg said:

I have, and do.

Malcolm wrote:

No point.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 10th, 2022 at 5:11 AM

Title: Single Stage:Ekabhumi

Content:

Archie2009 said:

I read in Dzogchen there are four Vidyādhara levels that correspond to the 1st, 5th, 8th, and 10th bhūmi respectively. (Source Alan Wallace.)

Malcolm wrote:

Alan Wallace might make that assertion, but I prefer to follow Garb Dorje comments on this passage from The Great Space of Vajrasattva:

The path of higher and higher purification is not consistent with the Dharma that is free of activity.

Merit and wisdom are accumulated with thoughts that arise from the worldly. Objectives of traversing somewhere—gradual progress, the stages of bodhi, the abodes of Brahma and Indra, the universal emperor, and so on—are the path of affliction, and are bondage. Free from all activity, totally peaceful like space, bliss that is totally uniform and beyond limits, the natural great perfection cannot be thought, practiced, nor mediated. It does not depend on another by nature. For example, like the great king of wishfulfilling gems, it has the power to grant all treasures, whether Dharma or not Dharma.

If there were traversing a path, nothing would be attained, like the boundary of space.

Also, the meaning commentary on the Cuckoo of Vidyā in the Bairo 'Gyud 'bum addresses the part of the title "single stage"

Since the suffering of effort is pacified because there is no progression in stages, there is the refreshment of great final solace without depending on arriving [somewhere].

As such, Dzogchen should be understood as an ekabhumi teaching.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 10th, 2022 at 5:42 AM

Title: Re: Single Stage:Ekabhumi

Content:

Archie2009 said:

The descriptions seem to correspond to the four visions of thögal?

Malcolm wrote:

Not even slightly. If you are going to go by that description of paths and stages, then the maturational vidyādhara level is only realized at the third, and the other three between it and the fourth.

Thinking in terms of paths and stages with respect to Dzogchen teachings is a great deviation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 10th, 2022 at 6:09 AM

Title: Re: Building my Dzogchen literature library, please make a suggestion

Content:

Nalanda said:

After I attend the "Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras"

What books would I be able to read? (if any)

Malcolm wrote:

Better you work with a teacher even after you have the lung, You still need at minimum Dzogchen empowerments and instructions. You cannot understand Dzogchen from books. You need instruction, step by step.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 10th, 2022 at 7:08 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Queequeg said:

Seriously, though, as I said, that book is like watching a trick shot. Motherf*ckers aint doin shit. Humans didn't survive as a species by being bold and brave. We survived by being cowardly and opportunistic.

Malcolm wrote:

Nope. I just question Kim's assertion that it is a remotely workable blueprint.

Kim O'Hara said:

First you complained about the terrorists. Like others here, I dislike the idea of eco-terrorism but concede that it may happen and may improve our chances of survival.

Malcolm wrote:

It will happen, but it much more likely to be eco-fascist terrorism against indigenous people, which is the current state of affairs, ala Edward Abbey's "shut down the border 'cause brown people are ruining my view." That won't assist anything.

Kim O'Hara said:

Then you "question" the whole thing,

Malcolm wrote:

The banking system plot is high fantasy of the first order.

Kim O'Hara said:

Can you be more constructive, e.g. suggesting improvements to it, or an alternative to it?

Malcolm wrote:

For the next ten generations, nine out of ten women pledge to have no children and voluntarily sterilize themselves. 1 out of ten are restricted to one child. That ought to do it, or something like that.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 10th, 2022 at 7:15 AM

Title: Re: Building my Dzogchen literature library, please make a suggestion

Content:

Nalanda said:

Okay, thanks. After this 17 dzogchen tantras program, what happens next? I just go and listen / watch? Is there some kind of directions on what happens next?

Malcolm wrote:

You have the satisfaction of knowing you have received the reading transmission of the 17 tantras. This itself is very certain to cement your connection with Dzogchen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 10th, 2022 at 9:16 AM

Title: Re: Single Stage:Ekabhumi

Content:

Sādhaka said:

How does this line up with Yongdzin Rinpoche (and someone also mentioned on this forum that Namkhai Norbu Rinpoche agrees with the Yongdzin on this point) talking about making sure that Dzogchen is not conflated with the Dzogchenpa?

Malcolm wrote:

It lines up perfectly. If someone thinks they are progressing from somewhere to somewhere, they deviate.

In any case, the point is that there is only one stage in Dzogchen. The practitioner of Dzogchen's job is to realize this. Dzogchen is neither a gradual path nor a sudden path, since even "sudden" implies going from here to there.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 10th, 2022 at 9:32 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

the economy (

Malcolm wrote:

Is the problem. And as far as I can tell, no one is really interested in actual change.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 10th, 2022 at 10:12 AM

Title: Re: What exactly is it that leads to Enlightenment? (arhat and buddhahood)

Content:

Shinjin said:

Nenbutsu is the easiest and most direct path especially in the current age.

Malcolm wrote:

Not so. For example, the Buddha in the Cakrasamvara tantra asserts that the practice of Heruka is the only means by which one can attain buddhahood in this degenerate age, and so on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 10th, 2022 at 5:33 PM

Title: Re: What exactly is it that leads to Enlightenment? (arhat and buddhahood)

Content:

Shinjin said:

Nenbutsu is the easiest and most direct path especially in the current age.

Malcolm wrote:

Not so. For example, the Buddha in the Cakrasamvara tantra asserts that the practice of Heruka is the only means by which one can attain buddhahood in this degenerate age, and so on.

Shinjin said:

Don't know. Even if it is not everyone has the luxury of finding a qualified guru and practicing with them. Nenbutsu on the other hand is accessible to all.

Malcolm wrote:

It very much depends on how quickly one is motivated to attain Buddhahood, from the point of view of the cause and result vehicles. It still requires three incalculable eons to attain buddhahood, even if one should take birth in Sukhavati, according to the causal vehicles.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 10th, 2022 at 10:40 PM

Title: Re: What exactly is it that leads to Enlightenment? (arhat and buddhahood)

Content:

Shinjin said:

Don't know. Even if it is not everyone has the luxury of finding a qualified guru and practicing with them. Nenbutsu on the other hand is accessible to all.

Malcolm wrote:

It very much depends on how quickly one is motivated to attain Buddhahood, from the point of view of the cause and result vehicles. It still requires three incalculable eons to attain buddhahood, even if one should take birth in Sukhavati, according to the causal vehicles.

Shinjin said:

It depends in what grade one is born into. High grade birth is instant buddhahood.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it isn't. And this is the problem: everyone claims their own path is the best, fastest, etc. but it's not a race, and everyone has to work out their own path to their own satisfaction. But the one thing necessary in all is a teacher, a spiritual friend.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 10th, 2022 at 10:52 PM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Dan74 said:

QQ, listening, like Nemo does, is good. Empathetic listening even better.

Malcolm wrote:

As an American living in America, I have in this era found it is better not to discuss politics with strangers. It makes moving through our country easier. When meeting trumpsters I smile, look for nearest exit, and leave them to their imaginations, but I don't engage them in conversation, because there is no point. They are a political cult.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 10th, 2022 at 10:58 PM

Title: Re: Is kensho stream entry?

Content:

clayde said:

I don't recall reading any Zen text that compared or equated kensho and stream entry

Astus said:

Stream entry is on the shravaka path, hence it is something to be avoided by Mahayana followers.

Malcolm wrote:

Mahāyāna also has stream entry. It's called the path of seeing. Mahāyāna has once-returners, 7th stage bodhisattvas, never-returners, eighth on up, and arhats, aka samyaksambuddhas.

Astus said:

Definitions for stream-entry are fairly standard. Here's a modern summary of the active and the abandoned qualities.

Malcolm wrote:

Which are the same fetters abandoned on the Mahayana path of seeing. The main difference is time to arhatship (full buddhahood in this case) and the kind of emptiness realized.

And yes, I recognize paths and stages are somewhat irrelevant in Zen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 10th, 2022 at 11:06 PM

Title: Re: What exactly is it that leads to Enlightenment? (arhat and buddhahood)

Content:

Shinjin said:

It depends in what grade one is born into. High grade birth is instant buddhahood.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it isn't.

PadmaVonSamba said:

What is "High grade birth"?

Malcolm wrote:

He is referring to the nine grades of birth in in Sukhavati described in the Chinese canon's contemplation sutra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 10th, 2022 at 11:32 PM

Title: Re: What exactly is it that leads to Enlightenment? (arhat and buddhahood)

Content:

Shinjin said:

It depends in what grade one is born into. High grade birth is instant buddhahood.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it isn't. And this is the problem: everyone claims their own path is the best, fastest, etc. but it's not a race, and everyone has to work out their own path to their own satisfaction. But the one thing necessary in all is a teacher, a spiritual friend.

Shinjin said:

Yes, let's not repeat the same discussion we had over at the other thread. Everyone determines a path according to their own karmic dispositions. Mine happens to be JSS but I always like to keep an open mind.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and even if the Buddha were sitting in front of us telling us in a group what the most effective teaching was, we would all hear something completely different.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 11th, 2022 at 12:08 AM

Title: Re: Single Stage:Ekabhumi

Content:

Sādhaka said:

How does this line up with Yongdzin Rinpoche (and someone also mentioned on this forum that Namkhai Norbu Rinpoche agrees with the Yongdzin on this point) talking about making sure that Dzogchen is not conflated with the Dzogchenpa?

Malcolm wrote:

It lines up perfectly. If someone thinks they are progressing from somewhere to somewhere, they deviate.

In any case, the point is that there is only one stage in Dzogchen. The practitioner of Dzogchen's job is to realize this. Dzogchen is neither a gradual path nor a sudden path, since even "sudden" implies going from here to there.

Giovanni said:

This is the pure stream. But sometimes we draw back.

Malcolm wrote:

This is why we spend so much time learning about the meaning of the basis, aka primordial state and then how delusion occurs. The Dzogchen point of view is that without understanding the process of delusion, one cannot be free of it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 11th, 2022 at 1:07 AM

Title: Re: Is kensho stream entry?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Mahāyāna also has stream entry. It's called the path of seeing. Mahāyāna has once-returners, 7th stage bodhisattvas, never-returners, eighth on up, and arhats, aka samyaksambuddhas.

Astus said:

Do you know if anyone actually called them so? I have not found such a definition for stream entry (入流, 預流, 須陀洹) in the <https://www2.buddhistdoor.net/dictionary/>.

Which are the same fetters abandoned on the Mahayana path of seeing.

But, as you noted in another thread, a first stage bodhisattva can still break even basic precepts, unlike a stream enterer.

Malcolm wrote:

A first stage bodhisattva cannot actually break even basic precepts. They can appear to break basic precepts, but they will only do so if indeed there is reason to benefit another sentient being. One late, famous master of recent vintage used this doctrine to explain his sexual relationships with his women students while maintaining he was nevertheless still fully ordained.

Also, Introduction to the Middle Way (Shambhala), ch. 1, verse 6, line 2 (pg. 60):

Three fetters they have utterly forsworn.

Compare with Abhidharmakośabhaṣya 5:41cd-45

The four kinds of āryas are defined on the basis of the fetters they have dropped. To say one is stream entrant in a Mahāyāna context is to claim to be a first stage bodhisattva.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 11th, 2022 at 2:04 AM

Title: Re: Formless shamatha + shamatha w/o object

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Nonmeditation means that one has reached a stage of practice where there is no distinction between equipoise and post-equipoise, buddhahood, basically.

Damchö_Dorje said:

Hi again. So with the four yogas in Mahamudra, is the last understood to be what you're discussing here (the result, buddhahood)? If so, that's very intriguing: I hadn't realized that those yogas were understood as progressive stages and considered attainments.

Malcolm wrote:

In Mahāmudra, yes, they are progressive.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 11th, 2022 at 3:01 AM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

Nalanda said:

Is this the one?

http://tibetanbuddhistencyclopedia.com/en/index.php?title=Seventeen_tantras

And it will take 3 days long, full days to listen/hear this read from start to finish?

Malcolm wrote:

Four days.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 11th, 2022 at 3:12 AM

Title: Re: Origin & Development of Adi-Buddha, Vajradhara, Vajrasattva, and Samantabhadra?

Content:

Nalanda said:

I know these are in the tantric texts but have you come across from the academic perspective how these ideas come about and developed over time?

Malcolm wrote:

You should subscribe to Academia.edu. There are thousands of Buddhist papers that will answer all your questions, and create thousands more.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 11th, 2022 at 3:55 AM

Title: Re: Single Stage:Ekabhumi

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

A commentary on the Soaring Garuda, one of the five lungs brought to Tibet by Vairocana:

In order to demonstrate the deviations of the stages:

Even relying on the tenth bhumi is an obstruction to awakening.

Seeking that relies on the path method of the tenth bhumi of the causal bodhisattvas and the wish to attain by relying on the tenth stage of outer, inner and secret secret mantra are unable to see the place that is free from being traversed.

The extremely rapid wisdom is free from all thoughts.

That being the case, because the self-originated wisdom, the basis of everything, is free from gradual progression, it is more rapid because of emphasizing nonprogression through mere seeing. Since that is free from all goal-oriented apprehension of objects and apprehending subjects, it is very special because there is no obscuration to purify.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 11th, 2022 at 3:55 AM

Title: Re: Single Stage:Ekabhumi

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

duplicate

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 11th, 2022 at 4:00 AM

Title: Re: Do I need transmission, empowerment, lung, requirements, etc to read Tantric texts?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Are all tantric texts not to be read without the necessary requirements/pre-requisites?

How about specifically these:

Abhisambodhi Tantra

Sarvatathāgatatattvasaṃgraha Tantra

Mahāvairocana-abhisambodhi-tantra

Kunjed Gyalpo Tantra

Malcolm wrote:

You need to have empowerment for all. There are no exceptions.

You need to understand this point: all tantric teachings are connected with transmission. Without transmission it is like trying to use an appliance without electricity. If you have received an anuttarayoga tantra empowerment, you are then permitted to read tantras. But even then, you should only do so under the guidance of a teacher. This is the tradition. Of course, no one can see what you do in your house. But this is the proper way.

To read Dzogchen texts you need Dzogchen empowerments. General anuttara empowerments like Hevajra, etc., are not sufficient because the path is different.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 11th, 2022 at 5:07 AM

Title: Re: Is kensho stream entry?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The four kinds of āryas are defined on the basis of the fetters they have dropped. To say one is stream entrant in a Mahāyāna context is to claim to be a first stage bodhisattva.

Astus said:

In light of the fetters here's a classic story:

"there was a fourteen year old novice called Daoxin (Faith in the Way) who came to pay his respects to the Third Patriarch, saying, 'Would that the Venerable Monk's compassion allow me to beg for the Dharma gate of Liberation.'

The master replied, 'Who binds you?'

'No one,' responded Daoxin.

'Why seek liberation then?' asked Sengcan.

On hearing this [Dao] Xin had a great awakening."

(Records of the Transmission of the Lamp, vol 1, 3.40)

Malcolm wrote:

Good story.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 11th, 2022 at 6:43 AM

Title: Re: What exactly is it that leads to Enlightenment? (arhat and buddhahood)

Content:

Nalanda said:

Now, let's suppose we have all these teachings/tools on a table. Tantra, Vipassana, Dzogchen, Meditation, Bodhicitta, Compassion, Devotion. Now let's say they are all effective and can lead someone to enlightenment.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no such thing as "enlightenment."

There is bodhi.

What is bodhi? Realizing there is no self in persons and no identity in phenomena. This results in freedom from clinging and burns afflictions.

What is buddhahood? Omniscience about everything that has to do with realizing bodhi.

That's it. There are many different approaches to this elephant. Most of our discussions are well represented by the six blind men who each insist only they have the right part of the animal.

Drenched with the trunk, pissed and shit upon near the tail, crushed by the side,
stepped on with the foot, brushed off with the ear, impaled on the tusk—
the six blind men can't ride the elephant.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 11th, 2022 at 6:50 AM

Title: Re: Persons whose hands have been cut off

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Again, Vinaya is not where you learn the Dharma—it's a historical and anthropological fossil. This may sound harsh but, if you are not a monk or academic you are wasting your time reading it, and even monks these days don't read or know it.

Malcolm wrote:

There is much agamic material in the Vinaya Vastu. It needs to be read and studied, and screw what some old monk thought about making it hands off for lay people.

For example, the Bhaisajya vastu is pretty interesting.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 11th, 2022 at 8:57 PM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

Queequeg said:

Hopefully nothing.

Malcolm wrote:

Don't bet on it. New variant, more lockdowns by July. Maybe not as widespread.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 11th, 2022 at 9:14 PM

Title: Re: Was the monastic tradition/lineage established in Japanese Buddhism??

Content:

Zhen Li said:

the Age of Dharma Decline

Malcolm wrote:

One of the things I've recently come to appreciate is Dogen's resistance to mappo ideology.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 12th, 2022 at 2:45 AM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

It kind of blows me away that this is a radical notion in some quarters ...humans have lived with more severe diseases than this throughout most of our history, and usually some sense of "normality", however fleeting; is one of the things that got them through it.

Malcolm wrote:

In the past, there was less health care overall, so there was less of a healthcare system to disrupt, and hence less cost, since we just let people die in those days.

Our economies are more delicate, intricate, and more easily disrupted.

That said, millions more would have died from this, but for vaccines, masking, and so on.

Johnny Dangerous said:
but we need to develop a better sense of social resilience.

Malcolm wrote:
That will only happen with a global public health system that works. We can expect more of these kinds of issues. Remember, this is SARS 2. If you think there won't be a SARS 3, well...

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, February 12th, 2022 at 3:19 AM
Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?
Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:
It kind of blows me away that this is a radical notion in some quarters ...humans have lived with more severe diseases than this throughout most of our history, and usually some sense of “normality”, however fleeting; is one of the things that got them through it.

Malcolm wrote:
In the past, there was less health care overall, so there was less of a healthcare system to disrupt, and hence less cost, since we just let people die in those days.

Our economies are more delicate, intricate, and more easily disrupted.

That said, millions more would have died from this, but for vaccines, masking, and so on.

Johnny Dangerous said:
but we need to develop a better sense of social resilience.

Malcolm wrote:
That will only happen with a global public health system that works. We can expect more of these kinds of issues. Remember, this is SARS 2. If you think there won't be a SARS 3, well...

Johnny Dangerous said:
Again, coronaviruses (most viruses I think) don't typically evolve into deadly superbugs. Anything is possible of course, and yes there will always be new variants, other viruses, etc. That actually speaks to my point of not living in permanent emergency mode, rather than against it.

As to the delicate economic structures, same thing. While we could argue masks, distancing and -especially- vaccination (vaccine have been way more effective than the other two, IMO) have been protective of the economy, lockdowns, restriction on movement, etc. have not.

Malcolm wrote:

When this bug hit, people were literally dropping dead in the streets in China. Then there was years of political sabotage from the right (which is still going on).

Johnny Dangerous said:

About 50% of Covid policy has been theatre

Malcolm wrote:

Most of the theater has been right wing theater, IMO.

Johnny Dangerous said:

In the future, given the collateral damage, civil unrest, and economic damage they caused or contributed to, I do not see most democratic governments being as quick with lockdowns and restrictions, that's a good thing as far as I'm concerned.

Malcolm wrote:

That's what happens when a man like Trump is let near an executive office.

Our health care system is still being stressed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 12th, 2022 at 6:24 AM

Title: Re: Averting Astrological Obstacles (Sok, Wang, Lungta, etc)

Content:

reiun said:

Just to clarify: Tibetan Buddhists believe that Tibetan Astrology is predictive of actual karma?

Malcolm wrote:

No.

It is basically a older version of five element calculation that comes from China. Rather than being based on the Indian elements of earth, water, fire, air, and space, it is based on the five phases of the Chinese system: wood, fire, earth, metal, and water, and the mother/son/enemy/friend relationship between these five. These five are mapped over the cycle of twelve years, beginning with the rat year and entering with the ox year, making for a sixty year cycle. Also the months, days, and hours are similarly divided. It also includes the magic square of saturn (mewa), and the eight trigrams, called parkha in Tibetan in its calculations.

It is used as a kind of almanac, a general way of knowing what are good days and bad, and so on, whether a year has a positive outlook for one or negative, and if negative, what kind of rites one needs to use to repel them. It has a broad use in Tibetan culture.

Myth has it that it was taught by Manjushri to Confucius, and it was then brought to Tibet. Like the I ching trigams and hexagrams, a tortoise figures largely in its origins. The various legends it has about the origins of the trigrams, etc., and the cosmic tortoise itself are very entertaining.

But no one believes it trumps karma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 12th, 2022 at 7:16 AM

Title: Re: Averting Astrological Obstacles (Sok, Wang, Lungta, etc)

Content:

reipun said:

Then Tibetan Astrology is predictive of potential karma only?

Malcolm wrote:

No, it's predicative of the how the elements change in the seasons, since everything is subject to impermanence and change in the elements. One can do these calculations for buildings, etc as well.

But karma always trumps calculation,

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 12th, 2022 at 10:54 PM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Queequeg said:

No, D. This is a question for YOU. Where do YOU draw the line?

Malcolm wrote:

Dan has no stake in the game. He is in Switzerland. He is just a passive observer of this mess.

Soon, of course, there will another mess to contend with: Putin invading Ukraine.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 13th, 2022 at 1:21 AM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Svalaksana said:

That won't happen for sure. Putin may be a power-hungry authoritarian with an expansionist mindset, but he's not stupid nor reckless.

Malcolm wrote:

We shall see. He wants clear passage over the overland route to the Russian Navel base in Crimea, either through taking over the contested Donbas region, where he has been sponsoring a proxy war since 2014, or through forcing Ukraine to accept the terms of MINSK II, or something like it. Failing this power move, he either backs down, which I think is very unlikely, or he goes in, which is more likely.

Naturally, everyone will think its Biden's fault.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 13th, 2022 at 1:35 AM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Shinjin said:

It will definitely be his fault since he has the power to stop it.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, no he does not, unless you think it is a good idea for Europe to capitulate to Putin. Do you? Biden has pulled NATO back together. I personally think this is a good thing. I don't like fascists and Putin is a fascist. Democracies have to stand up to fascist bullies.

Shinjin said:

Military wise a very weak president. Look how he handled the withdrawal from Afghanistan.

Malcolm wrote:

Afghanistan wasn't Biden's fault, and everyone who understands the history of the conflict and the extent to which Trump critically weakened US forces there in 2020 knows it. You recall that the Afghanistan Gvt. was left out of the negotiations with the Trump administration?

For those with short memories:

<https://www.aljazeera.com/news/2021/9/30/us-generals-say-afghanistan-collapse-rooted-in-trump-taliban-deal>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 13th, 2022 at 2:39 AM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Ayu said:

Okay, I'm sorry. The US stubbornness and ignorance about healthcare makes me quite angry. I think, I don't want to discuss it further, because I can't solve that problem anyway.

Malcolm wrote:

As we used to say in the Nixon days:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 13th, 2022 at 3:45 AM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Dan74 said:

Matt, you drew me into this exchange.

Malcolm wrote:

Take some responsibility for your own actions, man. No one drew you into anything.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 13th, 2022 at 4:55 AM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Dan74 said:

Matt, you drew me into this exchange.

Malcolm wrote:

Take some responsibility for your own actions, man. No one drew you into anything.

Dan74 said:

Yep, you're right and that will mean not participating in any more political threads.

Malcolm wrote:

Politics, by its very nature, is an exercise in misery.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 13th, 2022 at 7:02 PM

Title: Re: 84000: The Sūtra on Transmigration Through Existences (Bhava-saṅkrānti-sūtra) & Some Questions

Content:

Aemilius said:

"All words are true, because all words are false", says Mañjushri in Edward Conze's Buddhist Texts Through the Ages. I think you know the meaning.

identity
noun

The condition of being a certain person or thing. The set of characteristics by which a person or thing is definitively recognizable or known. The awareness that an individual or group has of being a distinct, persisting entity.

The American Heritage® Dictionary of the English Language, 5th Edition

Malcolm wrote:
All identity is imputed. Things don't possess identity.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, February 13th, 2022 at 11:07 PM
Title: Re: 84000: The Sūtra on Transmigration Through Existences (Bhava-saṅkrānti-sūtra) & Some Questions
Content:
Leo Rivers said:
I have been both impressed and humbled by the level of this conversation.

But then I wonder if we don't need to step back.

Recall the distinction of "true aspectarian" and "false aspectarian".

If we review the statements of Buddhist thinkers over the centuries between the Pali texts and first Tibetan translations isn't it risking anachronism to treat all those diverse and changing landscapes of language as if the same words meant the same thing?

The way the word "identity" has been discussed here demonstrates this.

Anyway, Beer and hot wings to everybody! Have a happy Valentine's day.

Malcolm wrote:
Even true aspectarian yogacarins don't believe that phenomena have integral identities...

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, February 14th, 2022 at 12:24 AM
Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
It's just a segment of the petite bourgeoisie trying to usher in another Fascist moment in history, just as they did in Italy, Germany, and Vichy France, etc. They did not succeed with Trump, but they are still mad.

Queequeg said:

As a final follow up - Dan, I hear what you are saying. I'm afraid the people who are planting their feet and refusing to vaccinate or take any steps to mitigate spread of COVID are too far gone to have a discussion with. Its an ideological stance at this point associated with the reactionary right. This crowd, at least here in the US and apparently in Canada also, is not interested in working these issues out together. They have demonstrated in words and deeds for long enough that there is no good will desire to work out some consensus. They are, as you can see, opting for intimidation and coercion - whether its storming the Capitol Building to disrupt the proceedings of our Congress or choking strategic border crossings, or shouting down local school board members and threatening the safety for doing the jobs they were democratically elected to do.

As you have demonstrated yourself, you yourself are not capable of carrying your empathetic listening to its end.

Sure, it would be great if these people had not taken a turn down a world view that brought them to this place adorned with lies, falsehoods and denial of science. That ship sailed for most of these people years ago. Instead, they've been filling their heads with toxic conservative media for years. I'm not sure you really understand this.

Listening empathetically is a nice platitude that I agree with in principle. In reality, there is no point. These are grown men who if they are sincere in wanting to help us all should find their place at the table and accept that for our democracies to work, there needs to be a commitment to the underlying principle of democratic norms. They're not there.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 14th, 2022 at 12:59 AM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Queequeg said:

I think that about sums up the situation across the West with the reactionary right finding a kindred spirit in Putin and the rest of us still thinking we're all playing by the same civil rules.

I think in the US, we still have a ways to go, but, things are not augering well.

Malcolm wrote:

The thing is, the kindred spirit of the right in western countries in the 1930s was Mussolini, then Hitler.

Everyone thought we were playing by the same rules then too.

Biden understands that this is not the case, and this is why he has tied NATO tightly together to oppose Putin, and rightfully so.

In the 1930's it was the Axis powers. Now it is Russia, China, and Iran. The more things change, the more they stay the same.

If this were Trump and Putin, this is now the conversation would:

Putin: We get Ukraine, you get Florida.

Trump: Sounds like a great deal, my people will love it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 14th, 2022 at 2:26 AM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Queequeg said:

. Is it coincidence that the sabres are rattling again as the living memories of WWII have largely blinked out?

Malcolm wrote:

The sabres are rattling because people forgot the 1930's, the lead up to WWII.

Remember, this is just the followup to Crimea (, equivalent to the militarization of the Rhineland, 1936), now we are at the equivalent of 1938, the Sudetenland Crisis. The German gvt. is behaving like Chamberlain.

If NATO backs down, there will be more Russian incursions into the former Soviet sphere of influence. As it stands, there is also Transnistria in Moldavia, on Ukraine's southwestern border, where Russian troops are stationed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 14th, 2022 at 5:58 AM

Title: Re: Google's quest to control the destiny of humanity, without humanity's consent.

Content:

Jesse said:

CNN is falling on hard times at the moment as well, they have lost a majority of their viewership.

Malcolm wrote:

Let's see:

On the positive side for CNN, there was some month-to-month viewership growth. CNN grew +4% in total primetime viewers—and +9% in the primetime demo from what was a particularly rough Dec. 2021. In total day, however, CNN did fall -1% in total viewers and held steady among adults 25-54.

<https://www.adweek.com/tvnewser/jan-22-ratings-cnn-is-among-cables-top-10-networks-but-struggles-at-9-pm-and-sees-year-over-year-declines/499572/>

You might want to fact check your statements.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 14th, 2022 at 6:35 AM

Title: Re: Google's quest to control the destiny of humanity, without humanity's consent.

Content:

Jesse said:

CNN is falling on hard times at the moment as well, they have lost a majority of their viewership.

Malcolm wrote:

Let's see:

On the positive side for CNN, there was some month-to-month viewership growth. CNN grew +4% in total primetime viewers—and +9% in the primetime demo from what was a particularly rough Dec. 2021. In total day, however, CNN did fall -1% in total viewers and held steady among adults 25-54.

<https://www.adweek.com/tvnewser/jan-22-ratings-cnn-is-among-cables-top-10-networks-but-struggles-at-9-pm-and-sees-year-over-year-declines/499572/>

You might want to fact check your statements.

Jesse said:

The information you are posting are percentages.

Malcolm wrote:

And you are just talking about 9 PM.

Jesse said:

However, CNN is struggling in the key weekday 9 p.m. hour (posting its lowest delivery since July 2015) and has been delivering Nielsen ratings not seen since before Trump took office. CNN posted especially poor ratings relative to Jan. 2021. The network shed -77% in total primetime viewers, -82% in adults 25-54 during primetime, -74% in total day viewers and -81% in adults 25-54 across total day vs. what the network averaged in those measurements in Jan. 2021.

Malcolm wrote:

But this is all to be expected. Less people are watching news because there is less news to watch, thank goodness.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 14th, 2022 at 11:23 AM

Title: Re: Google's quest to control the destiny of humanity, without humanity's consent.

Content:

Jesse said:

They are not, and the moment this alliance is no longer in the interest of democrats, everyone further left than democrat will be facing the exact same de-platforming, and censorship that conservatives currently are.

Malcolm wrote:

Nonsense. Truly complete and utter nonsense.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 14th, 2022 at 8:11 PM

Title: Re: 84000: The Sūtra on Transmigration Through Existences (Bhava-saṅkrānti-sūtra) & Some Questions

Content:

Aemilius said:

"All words are true, because all words are false", says Mañjushri in Edward Conze's Buddhist Texts Through the Ages. I think you know the meaning.

identity

noun

The condition of being a certain person or thing. The set of characteristics by which a person or thing is definitively recognizable or known. The awareness that an individual or group has of being a distinct, persisting entity.

The American Heritage® Dictionary of the English Language, 5th Edition

Malcolm wrote:

All identity is imputed. Things don't possess identity.

Aemilius said:

Experientially speaking, alcohol has the identity of being alcohol and water has the identity of being water.

Malcolm wrote:

Not from their own side.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 15th, 2022 at 3:54 AM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Nemo said:
Every thing he says is a lie.

Malcolm wrote:
Well, of course. It's Tucker Carlson.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, February 15th, 2022 at 5:54 AM
Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
<https://www.reuters.com/world/americas/canada-police-response-protests-spotlight-after-key-bridge-us-cleared-2022-02-14/>

Unknown said:
OTTAWA, Feb 14 (Reuters) - Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau plans to activate emergency powers in an effort to end protests that have shut some border crossings and paralyzed downtown Ottawa, sources said on Monday.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, February 15th, 2022 at 10:59 AM
Title: Re: Origin & Development of Adi-Buddha, Vajradhara, Vajrasattva, and Samantabhadra?
Content:

Nalanda said:
I know these are in the tantric texts but have you come across from the academic perspective how these ideas come about and developed over time?

Javierfv1212 said:
I would look into scholarship which talks about texts like the Tattvasaṃgraha and Mahāvairocana Tantras, these are considered by modern scholars some of the earliest full fledged Buddhist tantras.

Zhen Li said:
I think Ādibuddha might be a Kālacakra development, but I am not sure. I don't recall it being mentioned in those texts...

Malcolm wrote:
The term is probably,y first found in the Namasamgiti.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, February 15th, 2022 at 12:15 PM
Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

Unknown said:

In May 1889, people living in Bukhara, a city that was then part of the Russian Empire, began sickening and dying. The respiratory virus that killed them became known as the Russian flu. It swept the world, overwhelming hospitals and killing the old with special ferocity.

Schools and factories were forced to close because so many students and workers were sick. Some of the infected described an odd symptom: a loss of smell and taste. And some of those who recovered reported a lingering exhaustion.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.nytimes.com/2022/02/14/health/russian-flu-coronavirus.html>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 15th, 2022 at 9:18 PM

Title: Re: Google's quest to control the destiny of humanity, without humanity's consent.

Content:

Jesse said:

They are not, and the moment this alliance is no longer in the interest of democrats, everyone further left than democrat will be facing the exact same de-platforming, and censorship that conservatives currently are.

Malcolm wrote:

Nonsense. Truly complete and utter nonsense.

Jesse said:

it's not as if they'd go so far as to declare martial law to silence the free speech of people or something.. Oh Wait...

It really speaks to just how far they are willing to go to silence people who they disagree with. Martial law for a couple hundred people, after the police already cleared the bridges, and now they are announcing the canadian government has the broad authority to seize cryptocurrency accounts. That should go down well in crypto land.

I'm going to go watch democracies around the world curl up in terror for the day.

Malcolm wrote:

Canada does not have free speech written into their constitution.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 15th, 2022 at 9:27 PM

Title: Re: Sudden Awakening 101

Content:

Astus said:

That looks very much like a duality of a permanent awareness and impermanent objects. Then how is such an awareness not independent?

see that while things (objects of mind) appear to come and go the essence of mind is intrinsically free from change.

An unchanging subject, isn't that what is called a self?

Malcolm wrote:

It's a purusha, and Ted is basically advocating a kind crypto-Samkhya.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 15th, 2022 at 9:45 PM

Title: "Russian" Flu, 1889

Content:

Unknown said:

In May 1889, people living in Bukhara, a city that was then part of the Russian Empire, began sickening and dying. The respiratory virus that killed them became known as the Russian flu. It swept the world, overwhelming hospitals and killing the old with special ferocity.

Schools and factories were forced to close because so many students and workers were sick. Some of the infected described an odd symptom: a loss of smell and taste. And some of those who recovered reported a lingering exhaustion.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.nytimes.com/2022/02/14/health/russian-flu-coronavirus.html>

So, not from a lab...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 15th, 2022 at 10:36 PM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It's just a segment of the petite bourgeoisie trying to usher in another Fascist moment in history, just as they did in Italy, Germany, and Vichy France, etc. They did not succeed with Trump, but they are still mad.

Minobu said:

These morons don't rate bourgeoisie .

Malcolm wrote:

petite bourgeoisie: : the lower middle class including especially small shopkeepers and artisans.

Truckers fit right in here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 15th, 2022 at 10:58 PM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.reuters.com/world/americas/canada-police-response-protests-spotlight-after-key-bridge-us-cleared-2022-02-14/>

OTTAWA, Feb 14 (Reuters) - Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau plans to activate emergency powers in an effort to end protests that have shut some border crossings and paralyzed downtown Ottawa, sources said on Monday.

Nemo said:

55% of donors are from the US and their stated goal is overthrowing the democratically elected government.

Malcolm wrote:

Yup.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 16th, 2022 at 12:26 AM

Title: Re: Google's quest to control the destiny of humanity, without humanity's consent.

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

It's in the Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

Malcolm wrote:

I may have overstated the case.

But in Canada, freedom of speech is not as robust as in the US. One of the chief differences is whether hate speech can be outlawed. Canada, yes; US, no.

A rather long read:

<https://scholarship.law.duke.edu/cgi/viewcontent.cgi?article=4120&context=lcp>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 16th, 2022 at 1:16 AM

Title: Re: Google's quest to control the destiny of humanity, without humanity's consent.

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

"Canadian" is all about being "not American."

For instance, IMO, Canadians are not traditionally loudly "proud to be" Canadian. There are a few like that, but everyone kind of looks at them like idiots because everyone in the room is Canadian and who are they trying to impress? Instead, we're quietly "smug about being" Canadian.

Malcolm wrote:

I thought you were from America originally.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 16th, 2022 at 1:40 AM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Minobu said:

These morons don't rate bourgeoisie .

Malcolm wrote:

petite bourgeoisie: : the lower middle class including especially small shopkeepers and artisans.

Truckers fit right in here.

Minobu said:

I was just pointing out that being Bourgeoisie is all about their attitude. They crave to be part of the upper class and try to emulate themselves as such.

Malcolm wrote:

There are the bourgeoisie, the upper middle class, and the petite bourgeoisie, the lower middle class.

If you own a 100,000K truck, you are not working class.

The working class generally works for wages in businesses they do not own, and have very little discretionary income.

The line between the petite bourgeoisie and the working class is fuzzy, especially in the mind of the petite bourgeoisie, who often self-identify as working class, even though they are actually small business owners, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 16th, 2022 at 2:26 AM

Title: Re: Sudden Awakening 101

Content:

Ted Biringer said:

. To recognize that objects of mind (phenomena, forms, dharmas) arise and cease endlessly, while mind itself neither arises nor ceases is not to deny the reality (Buddha-nature) of such objects – just the opposite in fact. It is, in truth, the very coming and going of all transient forms that allows us to awaken to that which is ever and always free from coming and going. I xabir said:

What you are describing is the Shrenika false view of eternalism which Dogen refuted.

Ted Biringer said:

Dear xabir,

I am very familiar with Dogen's work and with the Shrenika view. If you read my actual posts (and not just the misrepresentations attributed to me) you will see that I am definitely not advocating the Shrenika view - or any other form of dualism.

Please be more circumspect with your claims about what I may or may not be advocating in the future.

Thank you,

Ted

Malcolm wrote:

People only have your words to go on. Astus is quite right to fault your words, which posit a permanent knower. You made two mutually contradictory statements:

Moreover, "the mind" that "is Buddha"...is the normal mind as it is.

And:

Objects of mind come and go in an endless stream, contents of awareness arise and cease – mind or awareness is the unchanging realm in which objects come and go, the immutable dimension wherein the contents of awareness arise and cease.

The "normal mind" is the aggregate of consciousness. It is impermanent and it changes constantly. There is no "awareness" or "mind" that is separate from the aggregate of consciousness.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 16th, 2022 at 2:49 AM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Queequeg said:

Dear Canadians,

Sorry for the infection.

Sincerely,

Your neighbors

Malcolm wrote:

It's their fault, they should have worn a condom.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 16th, 2022 at 3:47 AM

Title: Re: Sudden Awakening 101

Content:

Ted Biringer said:

If you read the actual post rather than misrepresentations attributed to me it should be clear that I did not posit a “permanent knower.”

Malcolm wrote:

Sure you did.

Ted Biringer said:

I, in harmony with the classic Buddhist records, did and do recognize that “mind” (in context of “mind is Buddha”) is beginningless and endless.

Malcolm wrote:

Not as an integral entity (The Srenika Heresy xabir was referring to).

The continuum of mind has no beginning or end, but that continuum is constituted of moments that perish as soon as they arise. Thus the mind is constituted of parts, and apart from this mind, there is no other mind to be found. Not even the Buddha found some other mind outside the impermanent aggregate of consciousness.

Ted Biringer said:

Malcolm wrote: The "normal mind" is the aggregate of consciousness. It is impermanent and it changes constantly. There is no "awareness" or "mind" that is separate from the aggregate of consciousness.

Again, as I have made perfectly clear in my posts, I am using “mind” as it is used by the Zen masters in the sense of “mind is Buddha” – not as the aggregate consciousness, This “mind” is intrinsically free from change, and the aggregates you refer to, along with all other thoughts and things (dharma) are actually manifestations of this essential mind.

Malcolm wrote:

Then your "normal mind" falls into the extreme of permanence, since according to you it is a) not momentary and b) it is unchanging. An unchanging entity cannot produce anything, since an unchanging entity is uncompounded.

You are here claiming that there is an uncompounded agent (awareness, normal mind) that produces compounded things. Moreover, you claim this uncompounded agent is the "buddha." This is exactly why Astus is faulting your words.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 16th, 2022 at 3:53 AM

Title: Re: Sudden Awakening 101

Content:

clyde said:

The basic nature of mind and all phenomena is empty luminosity as taught by Zen (and Tibetan) Buddhist teachers.

Malcolm wrote:

"Luminosity" simple means the mind and phenomena are intrinsically pure.

"Luminosity" is just a synonym for emptiness.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 16th, 2022 at 4:54 AM

Title: Re: Sudden Awakening 101

Content:

clyde said:

And "intrinsically pure" is just a synonym for emptiness.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct. People mistake "luminosity" as if it were something like light. In this context, it isn't. The Sanskrit term is prabhāsvara/ābhāsvara. It is also adjective describing the audibility of bodhisattva's voice, for example.

The most famous line from the PP Sūtras is, "There is no mind in the mind; the original nature (prakṛti) of the mind is luminous."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 16th, 2022 at 5:12 AM

Title: Emptiness vs Clarity using Tibetan terminology (was Sudden Awakening 101)

Content:

clyde said:

It's also said that emptiness is the nature of mind and luminosity is its function.

Malcolm wrote:

Maybe in Chinese texts. I wouldn't know, as I have no skill in Chinese.

There is a bit of slippage in Tibetan texts between luminosity ('od gsal) and clarity (gsal ba), sometimes translated as cognizance. Generally the nature of the mind has three characteristics: it is empty, it is clear, and it is knowing. These characteristics are irreducible. They are also inseparable. "Clarity" in this context means that mind can receive impressions from objects without actually being affected by those impressions, like the surface of a mirror.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 16th, 2022 at 5:36 AM

Title: Re: Sudden Awakening 101

Content:

clyde said:

It's also said that emptiness is the nature of mind and luminosity is its function.

Malcolm wrote:

Maybe in Chinese texts. I wouldn't know, as I have no skill in Chinese.

There is a bit of slippage in Tibetan texts between luminosity ('od gsal) and clarity (gsal ba), sometimes translated as cognizance. Generally the nature of the mind has three characteristics: it is empty, it is clear, and it is knowing. These characteristics are irreducible. They are also inseparable. "Clarity" in this context means that mind can receive impressions from objects without actually being affected by those impressions, like the surface of a mirror.

Nicholas2727 said:

I remember hearing somewhere that the luminosity in "empty luminosity" had to do with what you are describing as clarity. The ability to reflect or "light up" impressions (probably not the best word here) but not be affected by them due to its emptiness. Is this incorrect? Since you previously stated that luminosity is another way of saying empty, just wanting to check

Malcolm wrote:

There is some problematical slippage in these terms in Tibetan across lineages. So it is best to be very specific.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 16th, 2022 at 6:55 AM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Hilarious twitter thread about the collapse of the protests in Canada:

My favorite line so far:

"None of us know how to use that goddamn bitcoin," says one guy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 16th, 2022 at 7:00 AM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Shotenzenjin said:

Don't just post a video. Share your thoughts on it

Shinjin said:

Just trying to keep the conversation balanced. I like to hear from both sides.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 16th, 2022 at 8:57 PM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Minobu said:

Your usage is modern take on it.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it's the original usage from the 19th century.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 16th, 2022 at 9:01 PM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

Toenail said:

There have always been Corona viruses. This does not prove that the Chinese had not experimented on this kind of virus.

Malcolm wrote:

It considerably reduces the probability that it came from a lab in China.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 16th, 2022 at 10:06 PM

Title: Re: Most Important Empowerments in the Sakya Tradition

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Apart from Lamdre, Naropa's Khecari is the most important set of instructions in Sakya. .

yagmort said:

what are the completion stages of both Lamdre and Khecari, respectively?
from what i understand Lamdre is based on Hevajra - do sakyapas practice tummo?

Malcolm wrote:
Yes.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, February 16th, 2022 at 11:11 PM
Title: Re: Origin & Development of Adi-Buddha, Vajradhara, Vajrasattva, and Samantabhadra?
Content:
Aemilius said:
According to Wisdom Library:

"In the Guna Karanda Vyuha it is written:

'When nothing else was, Sambhu was: that is the Self-Existent (svayambhu): and as he was before all, he is also called Adi-Buddha.'

Malcolm wrote:
No, actually, it isn't written there at all. The term does not exist in this sūtra or any other.

The term adhibuddha (dang po'i sangs rgyas) either originates from the Mañjuśrīmūlakalpa or the Namasamgiti, depending on which text one thinks was set down first.

Samantabhadra, to answer the OP's question, first shows up as a name for the dharmakāya in the Sarvatathāgatatattvasaṃgraha Tantra. Vajrasattva also first appears in this tantra.

Vajradhara first appears in the Susiddhikara-mahātantra-sādhanaopāyika-paṭala, the root kriya tantra.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, February 16th, 2022 at 11:15 PM
Title: Re: Most Important Empowerments in the Sakya Tradition
Content:
yagmort said:
so Lamdre completion stage is tummo?
do they only practice tummo or there are other yogas involved akin to 6 dharmasa of Naropa set?

what about Khecari's completion stage?

Malcolm wrote:

Lamdre has a completion stage with signs for each of the three inner empowerments: tummo and other prāṇāyama practices for the secret; karma mudra for the third; vajra waves for the fourth. It also has a dream yoga, luminosity yoga, etc., like the Naro chos drug system.

Yogini's completion stage with signs is also tummo, and some ancillary practices, such as mental recitation, etc. Karma mudra is unnecessary in this system.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 17th, 2022 at 12:14 AM

Title: Re: Origin & Development of Adi-Buddha, Vajradhara, Vajrasattva, and Samantabhadra?

Content:

Aemilius said:

According to Wisdom Library:

"In the Guna Karanda Vyuha it is written:

'When nothing else was, Sambhu was: that is the Self-Existent (svayambhu): and as he was before all, he is also called Adi-Buddha.'

Malcolm wrote:

No, actually, it isn't written there at all. The term does not exist in this sūtra or any other.

The term adhibuddha (dang po'i sangs rgyas) either originates from the Mañjuśrīmūlakalpa or the Namasamgiti, depending on which text one thinks was set down first.

Samantabhadra, to answer the OP's question, first shows up as a name for the dharmakāya in the Sarvatathāgatatattvasaṃgraha Tantra. Vajrasattva also first appears in this tantra.

Vajradhara first appears in the Susiddhikara-mahātantra-sādhanaopāyika-paṭala, the root kriya tantra.

Crazywisdom said:

Do we have dates on these tantras?

Malcolm wrote:

We have the evidence of when they were translated into Tibetan and Chinese, and evidence of their development over time.

Susiddhikara-mahātantra-sādhanaopāyika-paṭala was translated into Chinese in 726. The Sarvatathāgatatattvasaṃgraha in 756. The Mañjuśrīmūlakalpa appeared in

https://www.academia.edu/34621199/_Ma%C3%B1u%C5%9Br%C4%ABn%C4%81m asa%E1%B9%83g%C4%ABti._In_Brills_Encyclopedia_of_Buddhism_Volume_One_Liter ature_and_Languages_edited_by_Jonathan_Silk_Oskar_von_Hin%C3%BCber_and_Vinc ent_Eltschinger_353_59._Leiden_Brill_2015.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, February 17th, 2022 at 12:18 AM
Title: Re: Most Important Empowerments in the Sakya Tradition
Content:
yagmort said:
thank you.

is there an explanation in Khecari root text as to why karmamudra is unnecessary in this system? is it substituted with a visualized consort? or there is simply no consort practice of any kind at all?

There is explanation, but you need to receive the teaching.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, February 17th, 2022 at 12:23 AM
Title: Re: Sudden Awakening 101
Content:
clyde said:
The basic nature of mind and all phenomena is empty luminosity as taught by Zen (and Tibetan) Buddhist teachers.

Malcolm wrote:

"Luminosity" simple means the mind and phenomena are intrinsically pure.

"Luminosity" is just a synonym for emptiness.

Crazywisdom said:

Then why does Buddha say the mind is emptiness AND luminous, bright, soft, shining, etc...?

Malcolm wrote:

He doesn't, but sometimes translators who do not understand the meaning of terms do.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 17th, 2022 at 12:50 AM

Title: Re: Origin & Development of Adi-Buddha, Vajradhara, Vajrasattva, and Samantabhadra?

Content:

Aemilius said:

The widely known name Adam comes from the sumerian word Adapa, meaning "first man". The concepts that have been used in Buddhism in many cases existed before the teaching of Shakyamuni. Thus the word First-buddha or Adibuddha can be, for example, 10 000 or 100 000 years old.

Malcolm wrote:

Fantasy.

"First" here is metaphorical. It does not refer to a period in time.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 17th, 2022 at 9:34 PM

Title: Re: Sudden Awakening 101

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Then why does Buddha say the mind is emptiness AND luminous, bright, soft, shining, etc...?

Malcolm wrote:

He doesn't, but sometimes translators who do not understand the meaning of terms do.

Crazywisdom said:

You'd have to prove that claim, because it seems like he says it a lot.

Malcolm wrote:

Anyone who knows Tibetan can quickly run through the synonyms of 'od gsal in the canon. They will see this is the case. For example, not only are minds "luminous", but all phenomena are luminous, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 17th, 2022 at 10:24 PM

Title: Re: Sudden Awakening 101

Content:

clyde said:

It's also said that emptiness is the nature of mind and luminosity is its function.

Malcolm wrote:

Maybe in Chinese texts. I wouldn't know, as I have no skill in Chinese.

There is a bit of slippage in Tibetan texts between luminosity ('od gsal) and clarity (gsal ba), sometimes translated as cognizance. Generally the nature of the mind has three characteristics: it is empty, it is clear, and it is knowing. These characteristics are irreducible. They are also inseparable. "Clarity" in this context means that mind can receive impressions from objects without actually being affected by those impressions, like the surface of a mirror.

Archie2009 said:

Is your statement that the nature of the mind (sems nyid) has three characteristics the same as saying that the basis (gzhi) is endowed with three aspects?

Malcolm wrote:

No, not exactly. I am here just talking about the more standard new school (Sakya, Kagyu, Gelug) presentation of clarity and emptiness, what the Sakyas and Kagyus term the kun gzhi, the all-basis. The Geluks do not like that terminology. But this is off-topic for the thread...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 17th, 2022 at 10:28 PM

Title: Re: Sudden Awakening 101

Content:

Archie2009 said:

Is your statement that the nature of the mind (sems nyid) has three characteristics the same as saying that the basis (gzhi) is endowed with three aspects?

Malcolm wrote:

No, not exactly. I am here just talking about the more standard new school (Sakya, Kagyu, Gelug) presentation of clarity and emptiness, what they term the kun gzhi, the all-basis.

Archie2009 said:
So sems not sems nyid.

Malcolm wrote:
sems nyid for Sakya, Kagyu, and Geluk. Not Nyingma.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, February 18th, 2022 at 12:05 AM
Title: Re: nol sang
Content:

pemachophel said:
If we have a public teaching or puja at our center, we dribsang everyone at the front door since we don't know everyone who's entering. The sang pot is placed by the front door and people simply walk through the smoke. We don't say anything about this. For most people, it's just "incense."

Malcolm wrote:
According to one of my Tibetan Medicine teachers, Menpa Tingzin, sang, in general, comes from the ancient Tibetan nomadic custom of burning juniper by the tent door when visitors come in order to disinfect them, because juniper is antimicrobial. Splints for broken limbs are made from juniper for this reason also.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, February 18th, 2022 at 12:32 AM
Title: Re: nol sang
Content:

pemachophel said:
If we have a public teaching or puja at our center, we dribsang everyone at the front door since we don't know everyone who's entering. The sang pot is placed by the front door and people simply walk through the smoke. We don't say anything about this. For most people, it's just "incense."

Toenail said:
Based on which text if I may ask?

Malcolm wrote:
sgrib bsang does not necessarily need a text, just bsang substance made according to a specific formula, and consecrated as such.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, February 18th, 2022 at 12:55 AM
Title: Re: nol sang
Content:

Toenail said:
Based on which text if I may ask?

Malcolm wrote:
sgrib bsang does not necessarily need a text, just bsang substance made according to a specific formula, and consecrated as such.

Toenail said:
Thats what I was curious about. How it is empowered. By which method. The Tendrel Mantra?

Malcolm wrote:
Not sure.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, February 18th, 2022 at 1:47 AM
Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
Protestors live feed:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, February 18th, 2022 at 2:42 AM
Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
Your own material aggregate. :HONK!:
[/quote]

I know, scary right?

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, February 18th, 2022 at 5:02 AM
Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada
Content:

Shinjin said:
True patriots of God

Malcolm wrote:
I didn't know God was a country.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, February 18th, 2022 at 5:18 AM
Title: Re: nol sang
Content:
pemachophel said:
There are drib-sang texts.

Malcolm wrote:
Of course. That is not what I was referring to.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, February 18th, 2022 at 5:42 AM
Title: Re: The moral outrage of strong karma...
Content:

wei wu wei said:
How do you, presumably a Buddhist, give an account of such an event in light of karma?
2. "Master Gotama, what is the reason, what is the condition, why inferiority and superiority are met with among human beings, among mankind? For one meets with short-lived and long-lived people, sick and healthy people, ugly and beautiful people, insignificant and influential people, poor and rich people, low-born and high-born people, stupid and wise people. What is the reason, what is the condition, why superiority and inferiority are met with among human beings, among mankind?"

3. "Student, beings are owners of karmas, heirs of karmas, they have karmas as their progenitor, karmas as their kin, karmas as their homing-place. It is karmas that differentiate beings according to inferiority and superiority."

Malcolm wrote:
<https://www.accesstoinight.org/lib/authors/nanamoli/wheel248.html#shorter>

wei wu wei said:
Then the brahmin youth Śuka, the son of Taudeya, asked the Bhagavān the following question: "Sir³⁹ Gautama, there are many types of sentient beings, such as beings who have a short lifespan or a long lifespan, have many illnesses or few illnesses, are ugly or beautiful, have little power or are powerful, are highborn or lowborn, are poor or rich, are ignorant of the Dharma,⁴⁰ or possess knowledge of the Dharma to a lesser or greater degree, have good or bad fortune, and so forth. How does karmic ripening lead to this diversity of beings?"⁴¹

1.-5

The Bhagavān replied, "Young brahmin, listen⁴² and pay careful attention to what I shall explain.⁴³ Young brahmin, sentient beings are the owners of their actions committed in former lives;⁴⁴ sentient beings have actions as their heritage, actions as their origin, actions as their individual causes; sentient beings develop through actions, young brahmin.⁴⁵ [F.299.b]

Malcolm wrote:

<https://read.84000.co/translation/toh339.html>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 18th, 2022 at 8:50 AM

Title: Re: The moral outrage of strong karma...

Content:

wei wu wei said:

It's notable that Malcom's and Genjo's passages lead to entirely different and opposite conclusions--if I'm not mistaken.

Malcolm wrote:

No, they don't actually.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 18th, 2022 at 11:24 AM

Title: Re: Google's quest to control the destiny of humanity, without humanity's consent.

Content:

Jesse said:

Look at how you are treated when attempting to defend one of their beliefs or ideals.

Malcolm wrote:

Really? Defend antisemitism? Anti-immigrant racism? Xenophobia? Christian dominionism?

We are not talking about seeing things from a conservative contra liberal point of view aka William F. Buckley v. Gore Vidal here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 18th, 2022 at 7:29 PM

Title: Re: Origin & Development of Adi-Buddha, Vajradhara, Vajrasattva, and Samantabhadra?

Content:

Aemilius said:

Adibuddha is mentioned in Karandavyuha sutra, chapter 4.

"The Kāraṇḍavyūha Sūtra is a Mantrayāna sutra that was compiled at the end of the 4th century or beginning of the 5th century CE."

It seems to be a lot earlier scriptural reference to Adibuddha than Namasangiti.

Malcolm wrote:

I looked, the term isn't there.

It's been well translated by Roberts over at 84,000 as Basket Display. Go read it. Rather than depending upon inaccurate wiki pages.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 18th, 2022 at 8:15 PM

Title: Re: Google's quest to control the destiny of humanity, without humanity's consent.

Content:

Jesse said:

Look at how you are treated when attempting to defend one of their beliefs or ideals.

Malcolm wrote:

Really? Defend antisemitism? Anti-immigrant racism? Xenophobia? Christian dominionism?

We are not talking about seeing things from a conservative contra liberal point of view aka William F. Buckley v. Gore Vidal here.

Jesse said:

You are painting the entire right wing (Republican and further) as Xenophones, anti-semites, racists?

Malcolm wrote:

No, but I am saying that what passes for Republican these days is pretty much a mix of all those things in various proportions. The Republican Party of today is not the home of Buckley style conservatives like Max Boot, David Frum, Billy Crystal and so on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 18th, 2022 at 8:18 PM

Title: Re: Google's quest to control the destiny of humanity, without humanity's consent.

Content:

Jesse said:

Oh trust me, in general both sides are wrong.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure kid.

Both sides stormed the Capital. Uh huh.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 18th, 2022 at 9:14 PM

Title: Re: Google's quest to control the destiny of humanity, without humanity's consent.

Content:

Jesse said:

Our Future.

Malcolm wrote:

What you seem to fail to understand is that this is all just a continuation of the US civil war.

Archie2009 said:

And BLM's mantra: "White Supremacy!"

Malcolm wrote:

Not a mantra, a legitimate complaint. Trying being black in the US.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 18th, 2022 at 9:33 PM

Title: Re: Google's quest to control the destiny of humanity, without humanity's consent.

Content:

Archie2009 said:

And BLM's mantra: "White Supremacy!"

Malcolm wrote:

Not a mantra, a legitimate complaint. Trying being black in the US.

Archie2009 said:

But in advance, it's posited as a root cause of everything, no investigation necessary or tolerated. Don't agree then your anti-black™.

Malcolm wrote:

BLM's excesses of rhetoric in no way delegitimizes the fact that White Supremacy is a major social and cultural problem in the US, harmful to civil liberties.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 18th, 2022 at 9:42 PM

Title: Re: Google's quest to control the destiny of humanity, without humanity's consent.

Content:

Archie2009 said:

But in advance, it's posited as a root cause of everything, no investigation necessary or tolerated. Don't agree then your anti-black™.

Malcolm wrote:

BLM's excesses of rhetoric in no way delegitimizes the fact that White Supremacy is a major social and cultural problem in the US, harmful to civil liberties.

Archie2009 said:

I agree, though not in the sense of how I understand Critical Race Theory, Whiteness Studies, etc. define White Supremacy.

Malcolm wrote:

White supremacy means black people etc., face systematic disadvantages white people don't

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 18th, 2022 at 10:14 PM

Title: Re: Origin & Development of Adi-Buddha, Vajradhara, Vajrasattva, and Samantabhadra?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

It's kind of obvious (to me at least) why there would be such an odd fudging of the content of this sūtra, namely "People want to believe in God and want the Buddha's realization tied to some sort of communion, communication, or gnosis of God." I see no other reason why we'd see so many falsified or mistaken references in otherwise relatively-well-established compendia. There is a bias at work.

Malcolm wrote:

This is the passage, the misunderstanding of which, has caused such confusion:

Bodhisattva Sarva-nīvaraṇa-viṣkambhin asked the Bhagavat, "What were the qualities of Bodhisattva Mahāsattva Avalokiteśvara that you heard the tathāgata describe?"

The Bhagavat said, "Āditya and Candra came from his eyes, Maheśvara came from his forehead, Brahmā came from his shoulders, Nārāyaṇa came from his heart, Devī Sarasvatī came from his canines, Vāyu came from his mouth, Dharaṇī came from his feet, and Varuṇa came from his stomach.

"When those deities had come from Avalokiteśvara's body, that bhagavat told the deity Maheśvara, 'Maheśvara, in the kaliyuga, when beings have bad natures, you will be declared to be the primal deity who is the creator, the maker. All those beings will be excluded from the path to enlightenment. They will say to ordinary beings:

“ ‘It is said: the sky is his liṅga,
The earth is his seat.
He is the foundation of all beings.
The liṅga is so called because they dissolve into it.

<https://read.84000.co/translation/UT22084-051-004.html#UT22084-051-004-67>

The Sanskrit manuscript provided as an appendix lists the term ādibuddha 8 times, sometimes in the phrase ādibuddhaiḥ pracoditā, Was taught by the buddhas from the earliest times. And sometimes in the plural, ādibuddhair, primordial buddhas. But it is never used in this text in sense of adibuddha in the Namasamgīti, and later texts. So, the Namasamgīti wins.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 18th, 2022 at 10:36 PM

Title: Re: Most Important Empowerments in the Sakya Tradition

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

...each of the three inner empowerments: tummo and other prāṇāyama practices for the secret; karma mudra for the third; vajra waves for the fourth...

yagmort said:

is that a typo? i thought it is a typo initially, but maybe it is not. you talk about three empowerments and indeed have mentioned three only, but enumerate last 2 as "third" and "fourth". so is it three or four? if four what is the missing link between tummo and karmamudra?

Malcolm wrote:

There are four empowerments: one outer; three inner.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 18th, 2022 at 10:40 PM

Title: Re: Origin & Development of Adi-Buddha, Vajradhara, Vajrasattva, and Samantabhadra?

Content:

Aemilius said:

Adibuddha is mentioned in Karandavyuha sutra, chapter 4.

"The Kāraṇḍavyūha Sūtra is a Mantrayāna sutra that was compiled at the end of the 4th century or beginning of the 5th century CE."

It seems to be a lot earlier scriptural reference to Adibuddha than Namasangiti.

Malcolm wrote:

I looked, the term isn't there.

It's been well translated by Roberts over at 84,000 as Basket Display. Go read it. Rather than depending upon inaccurate wiki pages.

Aemilius said:

It is in the Karanda Vyūha Sutra or Supernal Virtues of Avalokiteshvara by Lokesh Chandra, publ P.K. Goel for Aditya Prakashan, Delhi 1999.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, we are talking about the same text. The text where the mantra om manipadme hūṃ comes from.

There is just no doubt that information you have is wrong.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 18th, 2022 at 10:53 PM

Title: Re: Origin & Development of Adi-Buddha, Vajradhara, Vajrasattva, and Samantabhadra?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The Sanskrit manuscript provided as an appendix lists the term ādibuddha 8 times, sometimes in the phrase ādibuddhaiḥ pracoditā, Was taught by the buddhas from the earliest times. And sometimes in the plural, ādibuddhair, primordial buddhas.

Caoimhghín said:

Seemingly, none of these English correspondences you've provided show "ādibuddha" being used in the sūtra to refer to any particular Buddha at all. Mind you, it's just two examples. I'll give the document a read to see if I see anything that changes my mind in it.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, unlike the Namasaṃgīti, in which Mañjuśrī is clearly identified as THE ādibuddha, in this text no specific buddha is identified as the ādibuddha.

There are only eight examples of the term ādibuddha in the Sanskrit text, and its only translated two ways, buddhas from earliest time, and primordial buddhas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 19th, 2022 at 12:45 AM

Title: Re: Origin & Development of Adi-Buddha, Vajradhara, Vajrasattva, and Samantabhadra?

Content:

Aemilius said:

Adibuddha is mentioned in Karandavyūha sutra, chapter 4.

"The Kāraṇḍavyūha Sūtra is a Mantrayāna sutra that was compiled at the end of the 4th century or beginning of the 5th century CE."

It seems to be a lot earlier scriptural reference to Adibuddha than Namasangiti.

haha said:

Indeed, you are correct, it is in forth chapter (Adhibuddhātma sambhuto).

Malcolm wrote:

No. Here is the complete Sanskrit:

There is no "adibuddhātma sambhuto anywhere in the fourth chapter.

candrādyutpattirnāma caturthaṃ prakaraṇam |

atha sarvanīvaraṇaviṣkambhī bhagavantametadavocat–bhagavana, adyāpi nāgacchatyavalokiteśvaro bodhisattvo mahāsattvaḥ ? bhagavānāha – anekāni kulaputra sattvakoṭīniyutaśatasahasrāṇi paripācayati | dine dine sa āgatya paripācayati
| nāsti kulaputra īdṛśaṃ pratibhānaṃ tathāgatānāmapi yādṛśamāryāvalokiteśvarasya bodhisattvasya mahāsattvasya ||

atha sarvanīvaraṇaviṣkambhī āha–kena prakāreṇa bhagavan ? bhagavānāha– bhūtapūrvam kulaputra vipaśyī nāma tathāgato'rhan samyaksambuddho loka udapādi vidyācaraṇasaṃpannaḥ sugato lokavidanuttaraḥ puruṣadamyasārathiḥ śāstā devānām ca manuṣyāṇām ca buddho bhagavān | tena kālena tena samayenāhaṃ
sarvanīvaraṇaṇiṣkambhin sugandhamukho nāma vaṇikputro'bhūvam | tadā me śrutā vipaśyīnastathāgatasya sakāśādāryāvalokiteśvarasya guṇodbhāvanā ||

atha sarvanīvaraṇaviṣkambhī bhagavantametadavocat– kīdṛśī tvayā bhagavan guṇodbhāvanā śrutā ? etāḥ sarvā pravadatām | vijñarāja bhagavan me prabodhaya, yādṛśī tvayā bhagavan guṇodbhāvanā āryāvalokiteśvarasya bodhisattvasya mahāsattvasya śrutā ||

bhagavānāha– cakṣuṣoścandrādityāvutpannau, lalāṭānmaheśvaraḥ, skandhebhyo brahmādayaḥ, hṛdayānnārāyaṇaḥ, daṃṣṭrābhyām sarasvatī, mukhato vāyavo jātāḥ, dharaṇī pādābhyām, varuṇaścodarāt | yadaite devā jātā āryāvalokiteśvarasya kāyāt, athāryāvalokiteśvaro bodhisattvo mahāsattvo maheśvaraṃ devaputrametadavocat– bhaviṣyasi tvaṃ maheśvaraḥ kaliyuge pratipanne | kaṣṭasattvadhātusamutpanna ādideva ākhyāyase sraṣṭāraṃ kartāraṃ, te sarvasattvā bodhimārgaṇa viprahīṇā bhaviṣyanti, ya īdṛśapṛthagjaneṣu sattveṣu sām̐kathyaṃ kurvanti ||

ākāśaṃ liṅgamiyāhuḥ pṛthivī tasya pīṭhikā |

ālayaḥ sarvabhūtānāṃ līlayā liṅgamucyate || 1 ||

īdṛśaṃ mayā kulaputra vipaśyinastathāgatasya sakāśādāryāvalokiteśvarasya
guṇodbhāvanā śrutā ||

tadapyatikramya śikhī nāma tathāgato'rhan samyaksaṃbuddho babhūva vidyācaraṇasaṃpannaḥ sugato lokavidanuttaraḥ puruṣadamyasārathiḥ śāstā devānāṃ ca manuṣyāṇāṃ ca buddho bhagavān | tena kālena tena samayenāhaṃ
sarvaṇīvaraṇaviṣkambhin dānaśūro nāma bodhisattvo mahāsattvo'bhūvam | tasya śikhinastathāgatasya sakāśādavalokiteśvarasya bodhisattvasya mahāsattvasya
guṇodbhāvanā śrutā ||

iti candrādyutpattirnāma caturthaṃ prakaraṇam ||

<http://www.dsbcproject.org/canon-text/content/42/387>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 19th, 2022 at 12:58 AM

Title: Re: the Zen promise is empty

Content:

Nadereme said:

Well, not falsifiable from the perspective of one who isn't awakened.

Malcolm wrote:

Its the only perspective that counts, actually.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 19th, 2022 at 1:13 AM

Title: Re: Origin & Development of Adi-Buddha, Vajradhara, Vajrasattva, and Samantabhadra?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

No. Here is the complete Sanskrit:

There is no "adibuddhātma sambhuto anywhere in the fourth chapter.

haha said:

It is because you are searching it on wrong title.

Malcolm wrote:

I am responding to Amelius. She is the one claiming the term adibuddha comes from section four of the Karandavyūha. It is not found in that text at all. Glad you agree.

This text, the Guṇakāraṇḍavyūha, was written during the Malla era. It is quite late, so it frankly is completely irrelevant to the OP.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 19th, 2022 at 1:28 AM

Title: Re: The moral outrage of strong karma...

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

That's not exactly the "Tibetan view", and there are all kinds of writings on karma across traditions, including Tibetan traditions, not all of which agree....what a surprise.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, no, not really. The Tibetan idea of karma is pretty uniform across all Tibetan traditions. Tibetans generally follow the idea stated in the Kośa that everything that happens to a person is the ripening of karma.

As stated more precisely, all pleasant, unpleasant, and neutral sensations are a result of karma. Not all events, per se.

On the other hand, more broadly the universe is created by the karma of all sentient beings, and all its diversity is a result of those actions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 19th, 2022 at 2:51 AM

Title: Re: Origin & Development of Adi-Buddha, Vajradhara, Vajrasattva, and Samantabhadra?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Is T1050 the "Avalokiteśvaraguṇakāraṇḍavyūha" the Kāraṇḍavyūha or the "Guṇakāraṇḍavyūha?" I've generally seen T1050 and the Kāraṇḍavyūha to be considered "the same text." Is this wrong?

Malcolm wrote:

http://www.acmuller.net/descriptive_catalogue/files/k1088.html

This is the same as the Basket Array posted from above.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 19th, 2022 at 4:17 AM

Title: Re: Can you incarnate before dying?

Content:

Nalanda said:

How is it possible to reincarnate before even dying?

Malcolm wrote:

No.

But if you attain high realization, you can emanate 100 bodies, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 19th, 2022 at 4:36 AM

Title: Re: The moral outrage of strong karma...

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

That's not exactly the "Tibetan view", and there are all kinds of writings on karma across traditions, including Tibetan traditions, not all of which agree....what a surprise.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, no, not really. The Tibetan idea of karma is pretty uniform across all Tibetan traditions. Tibetans generally follow the idea stated in the Kośa that everything that happens to a person is the ripening of karma.

As stated more precisely, all pleasant, unpleasant, and neutral sensations are a result of karma. Not all events, per se.

On the other hand, more broadly the universe is created by the karma of all sentient beings, and all its diversity is a result of those actions.

wei wu wei said:

Malcolm, you've brought up earlier Sutra presentations of karma and are obviously familiar with Tibetan. Where do you land?

Malcolm wrote:

I don't worry about other people's karma. I worry about my own.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 19th, 2022 at 4:44 AM

Title: Re: Can you incarnate before dying?

Content:

Nalanda said:
How is it possible to reincarnate before even dying?

Malcolm wrote:
No.

But if you attain high realization, you can emanate 100 bodies, etc.

Nalanda said:
How do we explain Dudjom Lingpa taking a rebirth before dying?

https://www.rigpawiki.org/index.php?title=Dudjom_Lingpa

"His immediate incarnation, born even before he himself passed away, was Dudjom Rinpoche."

Malcolm wrote:
He emanated. This language is not precise.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, February 19th, 2022 at 5:35 AM
Title: Re: Buddhism as a way of life
Content:
shanyin said:
What is Buddhism if considered from the point of view of a way of life?

Malcolm wrote:
Buddhism is 100% a way of life. It is a path, and there are instructions not just for view and meditation, but also for conduct.

As in life, there are many different Buddhist lifestyles, not just one.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, February 19th, 2022 at 7:30 AM
Title: Re: The moral outrage of strong karma...
Content:

wei wu wei said:
Malcolm, you've brought up earlier Sutra presentations of karma and are obviously familiar with Tibetan. Where do you land?

Malcolm wrote:

I don't worry about other people's karma. I worry about my own.

wei wu wei said:

As do I. Perhaps you'd generate some positive karma for yourself then by helping me clarify my own understanding of a pretty large and central issue in Buddhist thought.

Malcolm wrote:

Just read the karmasiddhiprakarana and chapter 4 of Abhidharmakoshabhasyam, that ought to sort you out.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 19th, 2022 at 8:33 PM

Title: Re: Origin & Development of Adi-Buddha, Vajradhara, Vajrasattva, and Samantabhadra?

Content:

haha said:

It is because you are searching it on wrong title.

Malcolm wrote:

I am responding to Amelius. She is the one claiming the term adibuddha comes from section four of the Karandavyūha. It is not found in that text at all. Glad you agree.

This text, the Guṇakāraṇḍavyūha, was written during the Malla era. It is quite late, so it frankly is completely irrelevant to the OP.

Aemilius said:

By the way I am a male person. The division into chapters is somewhat different in the text used by Lokesh Chandra compared with the text of Mithun Howdalar. The fourth Chapter in Lokesh Chandra is longer. Lokesh Chandra is an established authority in the field, I am sure that the word is in the text used by him. Because he says it is there. Karanda Vyuha Sutra or The Supernal Virtues of Avalokiteshvara has the complete text in sanskrit.

I don't understand why this issue has become so important. It is contrary to the general buddhist view of infinite past, where no beginning is found.

Adi means quite unequivocally "first", so it does give a wrong impression of a beginning in time.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, it isn't. The term is not present in the extant Sanskrit, nor in Tibetan, nor in Chinese translations. It's only in the Malla dynasty Nepalese summary.

Roberts addresses the Lokesh Chandra Manuscript in his intro to his translation of the original version.

Aemilius said:

The sūtra also exists in a later, longer, and more polished form, entirely in verse and incorporating passages from such texts as Śāntideva's Bodhi-sattva-caryāvatāra, which has great importance within Nepalese Buddhism. Dating to the fifteenth century, it is one of the last Sanskrit Buddhist sūtras. It has not been translated into Tibetan.

Malcolm wrote:

You should go read what he says.

The origin of the term is the Namasamgiti.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 19th, 2022 at 8:39 PM

Title: Re: Buddhism as a way of life

Content:

Ayu said:

I believe, ethical conduct is a core item for the way of life of a Buddhist.

Compassion is the base of that base.

There are "10 unwholesome deeds" defined.

https://www.dhammadownload.com/index.php/10_unwholesome_actions

To avoid them is the exercise that is considered as "10 wholesome deeds".

So, if you manage to spare killing an ant, it's a wholesome deed already. The focus is not on guilt and sin. Rather "10 wholesome deeds" are viewed as a practice. Nobody is perfect in this from the beginning. It is a steady exercise.

"Mindfulness, skillfulness, transcendence, awareness" are helpers for this task, I think. They are deepened while practicing 10 wholesome deeds.

Tennyson said:

What exactly does "wrong views" mean in this case?

Malcolm wrote:

Not observing proper relationship cause and effect, for example, believing in a creator god, or rejecting karma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 19th, 2022 at 9:36 PM

Title: Re: Dudjom Sangye Pema Shepa Rinpoche's parinirvana

Content:

Lingpupa said:

Where did this happen? Might there not be a demand for an autopsy when someone young and seemingly healthy suddenly dies? This might not go well.

Malcolm wrote:

In Tibet/China.

Autopsy unlikely.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 20th, 2022 at 12:56 AM

Title: Re: Dudjom Sangye Pema Shepa Rinpoche's parinirvana

Content:

Archie2009 said:

Rinpoche had no history of illness?

Malcolm wrote:

Not that I am aware. But I wouldn't know anyway.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 20th, 2022 at 5:55 AM

Title: Re: Origin & Development of Adi-Buddha, Vajradhara, Vajrasattva, and Samantabhadra?

Content:

Aemilius said:

According to Wisdom Library:

"In the Guna Karanda Vyuha it is written:

'When nothing else was, Sambhu was: that is the Self-Existent (svayambhu): and as he was before all, he is also called Adi-Buddha.'

The first system of Adi-Buddha was set up in Nepal by a theistic school called Aisvarika, but was never generally adopted in Nepal or Tibet, and had practically no followers in China and Japan.

The Nepalese school supposed an Adi-Buddha infinite, omniscient, self-existing, without beginning and without end, the source and originator of all things, who by virtue of five sorts of wisdom (jnana) and by the exercise of five meditations (dhyana) evolved five Dhyani-Buddhas or Celestial Jinas called Anupapadaka, or 'without parents'.

When all was perfect void (maha-Sunyata) the mystic syllable aum became manifest, from which at his own will the Adi-Buddha was produced. At the creation of the world he revealed himself in the form of a flame which issued from a lotusflower, and in Nepal the Adi-Buddha is always represented by this symbol.

Svayambhu, or Adi-Buddha, was called Isvara by the Aisvarika, and Svabhava by the Svabhavika; but he was also given such special names as Vairocana, Vajrapani, Vajradhara, and Vajrasattva. In the Namasangiti (compiled before the tenth century a.d.) Manjusri, god of Transcendent Wisdom, is referred to as Adi-Buddha. "

<https://www.wisdomlib.org/buddhism/book/the-gods-of-northern-buddhism/d/doc4664.html> steveb1 said:

Coming late here, with an ignorant layperson's question.

To the extent any Buddhists "believe in" Adi-Buddha, do they typically align him in any way with the Mahayana Buddha Body of the Dharmakaya...? In my understanding, the Dharmakaya is not personal, is not a Creator-deity, but is an endless expression of Buddha's super-consciousness and ever-operative compassion. If that is correct, can the Dharmakaya and Adi-Buddha be considered to be functionally equivalent at some level...?

Malcolm wrote:

The commentaries on the term, of which there are many. equate adibuddha with the nature of reality.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 20th, 2022 at 8:08 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

ManiThePainter said:

Putin has been a bad hombre for over a decade. There's nothing new about it. He has flexed his muscles in Georgia, Syria and Crimea in the past. The only difference now is that we're talking about a bigger slice of land.

I think that the West, despite its bluster and threats of sanctions, has already more or less accepted that Ukraine will fall to Russia. I know that many Europeans see the cultural relationship between Russia and Ukraine as being close enough to actually make it "acceptable," even though they might not admit it. This is pretty evident in all of the shoulder-shrugging and finger-wagging going on. One only needs to remember how quickly everyone got over the annexation of Crimea.

To call this the start of a new Cold War is to draw a much sharper line between Russia and the West than what exists: Most of Russia's upper class and oligarchs are deeply integrated into the scene in London and New York. The gas pipeline to Germany is so integral that it perfectly explains why the new German PM has been so hesitant to strongly condemn Russia. There's no real talk of kicking Russia out of Swift, which might actually hurt. Many politicians in both North America and Europe adore Putin and will try to impede attempts to punish him. He was even invited to the former Austrian foreign minister's wedding in 2018.

Frankly, Putin is gonna take Ukraine, harsh words will be shared, but ultimately nothing will come of it. Ukraine is neither NATO nor EU. It is absolutely outside the Western sphere.

The question isn't whether it'll happen or not. The question is: will Ukraine be fully annexed or will a pro-Russian puppet government be established?

KristenM said:
Excellent points.

Putin is betting on the fact that the US doesn't have the will to fight and I've heard that Putin chose this time because he believes the US is weakened now in the same way that Russia was in the 1990's. Especially after the retreat of US forces from Afghanistan, Putin has felt emboldened. I'm not blaming any particular administration, but Russia sees the US as vulnerable.

Ukraine has a strategic importance that Crimea may not have and the domino effect of Ukraine falling into Russian hands does not bode well for the EU or the US. This takeover may be more costly than what the Russians or Europe are expecting. A long, drawn-out war and refugee crisis that Europe isn't ready for, just for starters. So, the US and its allies need to put their foot down or else they are doomed to lick the proverbial boot. How they do that, I've no idea.

Malcolm wrote:
IMO, this more to do with Merkle stepping down, following Trump's weakening of NATO.

And yes, NATO has to stand up to Putin. Crippling oligarchs is the first step to dismantling the Russian dystopia.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, February 20th, 2022 at 9:13 PM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
And yes, NATO has to stand up to Putin. Crippling oligarchs is the first step to dismantling the Russian dystopia.

Könchok Thrinley said:
Yup. NATO has to stand up as Russia demands things that would influence not only Ukraine but entire eastern and central Europe. It is not just about one country.

Malcolm wrote:
Indeed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 20th, 2022 at 11:41 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

KristenM said:

I'm sure what Malcolm is saying about Trump weakening NATO etc is correct, but it seems one big issue is gas. A lot of people are depending on that Russian pipeline.

Malcolm wrote:

A long term strategic error of the EU, especially Germany.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 21st, 2022 at 1:05 AM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

I wish we could give them free visas and dump them where they clearly want to live. Literally everyone would be happier.

Malcolm wrote:

We don't want 'em. You keep 'em. We have enough problems of our own.

Caoimhghín said:

I'm personally in favour of giving Calgary to the States.

Malcolm wrote:

They'll just be another red state sucking off the blue states for welfare karens. No thanks.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 21st, 2022 at 1:10 AM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

I'm personally in favour of giving Calgary to the States. Just the city. They can have a thin line of highway connecting it to the rest of America. We really don't need Calgary and they'd rather be gone themselves.

DNS said:

If that happened, then at least Ted Cruz could legally run for POTUS.

He ran for president, but wasn't even born in America, which is required by the Constitution. He was born in Calgary to an American mother and Cuban (not citizen at the time) father. It's unclear if that would count as "birth-US Citizen."

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Ted_Cruz

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Ted_Cruz#Citizenship

McCain was born in Panama, but that's allowed since it was on a military base to a father serving in the US Navy (an admiral at that).

Malcolm wrote:

Unfortunately:

Birthright citizenship in the United States is United States citizenship acquired by a person automatically, by operation of law. This takes place in two situations: by virtue of the person's birth within United States territory or because one or both of their parents is (or was) a US citizen.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Birthright_citizenship_in_the_United_States

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 21st, 2022 at 1:24 AM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

I wish we could give them free visas and dump them where they clearly want to live. Literally everyone would be happier.

Malcolm wrote:

We don't want 'em. You keep 'em. We have enough problems of our own.

Shinjin said:

What if they weren't white?

Malcolm wrote:

Skin tone has nothing to do with it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 21st, 2022 at 3:09 AM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Shinjin said:

What if they weren't white?

Malcolm wrote:

Skin tone has nothing to do with it.

Shinjin said:

What about immigration from Mexico?

Malcolm wrote:

We aren't talking about immigration.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 21st, 2022 at 4:38 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shotenzenjin said:

Well to be fair it's not like the USA has ever invaded another country and all that.....mmmm. *+)

Malcolm wrote:

Well, to be fair, that is quite irrelevant. We never invaded anyone claiming we were rescuing anglophones from "genocide."

This is just the Sudetenland 1939 all over again.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 21st, 2022 at 4:46 AM

Title: Re: Lojong - Offering to the Döns

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This is a post I wrote some time ago, slightly corrected.

The very simplest method is the practice of the Pretamukha-agnijvālayaśarakāra-nāma-dhāraṇī:

Early in the day, but also at any other time: into a pure vessel which is completely clean without any remnants of any food at all, place water, and holding this in one's right hand recite the following dharani seven times:

Namaḥ sarvatathāgata avalokite oṃ saṃbhara saṃbhara hūṃ

Then recite the names of these Buddhas:

Homage to the Tathāgata Many Jewels [imagine all the pretas actions of avarice of many lifetimes are destroyed and they accumulate all merits].

Homage to the Tathāgata Sublime Form [Imagine all the pretas physical sufferings are conquered and they achieve perfect forms and characteristics].

Homage to the Tathāgata Endlessly Abundant Body [Imagine all the pretas thirst is given up and satisfied, and they are satisfied with sufficient food].

Homage to the Tathāgata Free from Fear [Imagine all the pretas are free from all fears].

At the end of reciting these names, snap one's fingers three times, and pour the vessel's contents out onto clean ground.

Having done this, one will have pacified the realms of the pretas, and satisfied them, and so on.

This instruction on how to do the practice is extracted from the root text found in volume Wam of the bstan 'gyur.

This practice is very powerful in removing provocations by non-human beings, is an extremely rapid way of reaching the end of the perfection of generosity, and so on. It requires no initiation of any kind. You can also skip reciting the Buddhas names.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 21st, 2022 at 4:54 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

ManiThePainter said:

Most of Russia's upper class and oligarchs are deeply integrated into the scene in... New York.

Queequeg said:

No they're not.

ManiThePainter said:

Sure they are.

Malcolm wrote:

It's much worse in London.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 21st, 2022 at 5:36 AM

Title: Re: On the Unchanging Nature of the One Mind

Content:

clyde said:

Astus, Do you think that Huang Po meant “the mind that thinks and names everything” when he taught about Mind?

Malcolm wrote:

So you think there is mind and Mind? Is there are also self and Self?

Does the capital letter make mind and self have more than four letters? Or does it somehow metaphysically transform the terms into something ultimate?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 21st, 2022 at 6:34 AM

Title: Re: On the Unchanging Nature of the One Mind

Content:

clyde said:

Malcolm, Regarding capitalization of Mind, I was following the usage of Blofeld

Malcolm wrote:

His translations are pretty outdated.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 21st, 2022 at 8:01 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Just saw on CNN, according to US intelligence, Russian commanders have been given orders to attack Ukraine.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 21st, 2022 at 8:09 AM

Title: Re: On the Unchanging Nature of the One Mind

Content:

clyde said:

Now that we’ve discussed capitalization, terminology, and my motives for raising a question, let me rephrase my question.

Astus linked this,

Astus said:

How unexpected! The self-nature is originally without movement.

How unexpected! The self-nature can produce the ten thousand dharmas.'

(<http://www.cttbusa.org/6patriarch/6patriarch3.asp.html>)

clyde said:

How does the self-nature produce the ten thousand dharmas without movement?

Malcolm wrote:
What is a “self-nature”?

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, February 21st, 2022 at 8:47 AM
Title: Re: On the Unchanging Nature of the One Mind
Content:
clyde said:
Malcolm, You're seem more interested in exploring terminology

Malcolm wrote:
If one isn't clear what a term means, one cannot have a meaningful dialogue about it.
Your examples don't explain what you think the term means.

So, it's nit really clear whether you think there are flags, wind, and movement outside the mind, or if you think that these things only exist in the mind.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, February 21st, 2022 at 10:29 PM
Title: Re: On the Unchanging Nature of the One Mind
Content:

Astus said:
In other words, what makes 'one' in 'one mind' is the essence, that is emptiness.
Another term for it is self-nature (zixing 自性).

Malcolm wrote:
That makes everything more clear. Zixing is svabhāva; and if one defines svabhāva as emptiness, there is no problem. Of course there is only one dharmatā pervading all phenomena, whether conditioned or unconditioned.

As a statement originating Dzogchen teachings has it: gcig shes kun grol. Knowing one thing liberates all things.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, February 21st, 2022 at 10:33 PM
Title: Re: Is there a particular barrier between the Dharma and US society/culture?
Content:
Nadereme said:
So I'm asking this cause there seems (at least from my view) a particular barrier between the USA and Dharma.

Malcolm wrote:

Not really. Dharma is beyond culture. Buddhism, not necessarily.

Nadereme said:

I would say that this can be due to the extreme sort of Protestantism pervading the country. From fanatical Christians and Jews to fanatical secularists/atheists/agnostics/science/rationality folks. As well as all of the political discourse. Not to mention marketing catering and consumerism.

Malcolm wrote:

Fanaticism, politics, marketing, and consumerism have existed in Buddhism from the beginning as well.

Nadereme said:

I see it as extensions of perceived 'righteousness' where those who don't follow along are simply bad, wrong, stupid, or evil. Does this present a unique challenge? And even when the Dharma is in the US, there tends to be a 'Protestantizing' of it seen through the secular and pragmatic movements a la Ingram, or through sectarianism and purism/triumphalism of literature and texts and practice and yantras.

Malcolm wrote:

So you just proved the point, these things have existed in Buddhism from the beginning.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 12:05 AM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Shinjin said:

What if they weren't white?

Minobu said:

They are white. Totally it's like a white supremest heaven in Alberta. This is where the reform party was born, our first ramble into the populace movement. which as far as I can see are 99% white

Shinjin said:

Isn't Quebec the most racist part of the country with the hijab/turban ban and mosque shootings? Alberta hasn't had anything like that as far as I know.

Malcolm wrote:

Islam isn't a race.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 12:13 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Queequeg said:

The Ukrainians voted to be independent and have been muddling along with a democracy since. If they want to join Russia, they can vote on it. If democracies don't stick up for each other, its over. The world will be overrun by strongmen. President Vladimir V. Putin said he would decide by day's end whether to recognize the independence of Luhansk and Donetsk. U.S. officials worry that Russia could use such a recognition to move more forces in.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.nytimes.com/live/2022/02/21/world/ukraine-russia-putin-biden>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 12:19 AM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Shinjin said:

Isn't Quebec the most racist part of the country with the hijab/turban ban and mosque shootings? Alberta hasn't had anything like that as far as I know.

Malcolm wrote:

Islam isn't a race.

Shinjin said:

Majority of those who follow Islam are racial minorities.

Malcolm wrote:

The "hijab/turban ban" isn't about race, it applies equally to all religious symbolism. Since Quebec often follows France in their sentiments, being a Francophone province, the "hijab/turban ban" is just an example of Quebec following the precedent of this law in France:

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/French_law_on_secularity_and_conspicuous_religious_symbols_in_schools

Quebec's legal system is based on the Napoleonic Code, like Louisiana.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 12:24 AM

Title: Re: The moral outrage of strong karma...

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

That's not exactly the "Tibetan view", and there are all kinds of writings on karma across traditions, including Tibetan traditions, not all of which agree....what a surprise.

Shinjin said:

What is the "Tibetan view" and how does it differ accross traditions?

Malcolm wrote:

The "Tibetan" view is rooted in writings of Vasubandhu: the fourth chapter of Abhidharmakośabhaṣya and the Karmasiddhiprakaraṇa.

It does not differ across Tibetan traditions. In other words, all the Tibetan schools pretty much follow the same playbook when it comes to explaining karma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 12:28 AM

Title: Re: Trump encourages populace movement in Canada

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

These Canadians are so dumb:

Dwayne Lich questions legality of Emergencies Act

He also questioned whether the Emergencies Act — which was debated Saturday in the House of Commons — was implemented legally, at times confusing the numbered amendments found in the U.S. Constitution with Canada's Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

"Honestly? I thought it was a peaceful protest and based on my first amendment, I thought that was part of our rights," he told the court.

"What do you mean, first amendment? What's that?" Judge Julie Bourgeois asked him.

"I don't know. I don't know politics. I don't know," he said. "I wasn't supportive of the blockade or the whatever, but I didn't realize that it was criminal to do what they were doing. I thought it was part of our freedoms to be able to do stuff like that."

<https://www.cbc.ca/news/canada/ottawa/tamara-lich-bail-hearing-february-19-1.6358307>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 12:56 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Yeah and they have nukes. Maybe Ukraine will be ok.

Malcolm wrote:

No, actually they do not.

<https://www.politico.eu/article/ukraines-nuclear-lesson-with-russia-written-guarantees-can-be-worth-little/>

Crazywisdom said:

KYIV — Around 30 years ago, Ukraine handed all its nuclear weapons to Russia in exchange for promises of peace from Moscow. Western powers brokered the deal.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 1:22 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

Ever heard of the European Union?

Malcolm wrote:

Now a word from your sponsor:

https://www.nato.int/cps/en/natohq/official_texts_191931.htm

https://www.nato.int/cps/en/natohq/opinions_191847.htm?selectedLocale=en

So, do you want Russia to crush Ukraine or not?

If not, then the EU is going to have to stand up against Russia.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 1:42 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

In fact since the conflict in Crimea started, European neo-nazis have been travelling to Ukraine, to fight against Russian separatists.

Malcolm wrote:

The Azov Battalion has been officially absorbed into the Ukrainian military. And yes, they are completely anti-semitic. So, should this permit Russia, which is also antisemitic, etc. to crush Ukraine?

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 1:51 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Queequeg said:
This approach to independence cannot be recognized.

Malcolm wrote:
Agreed.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 2:22 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Brunelleschi said:
In fact since the conflict in Crimea started, European neo-nazis have been travelling to Ukraine, to fight against Russian separatists.

Malcolm wrote:
The Azov Battalion has been officially absorbed into the Ukrainian military. And yes, they are completely anti-semitic. So, should this permit Russia, which is also antisemitic, etc. to crush Ukraine?

Brunelleschi said:
That's not the point. The point is that it is not a right wing opinion per se. In Europe right wingers save a few populists are pro-NATO, anti-Russia. The political scene is not the same as in the US.

Malcolm wrote:
<https://polishnews.co.uk/marine-le-pen-ukraine-is-under-the-influence-of-russia-interview-in-rzeczpospolita-about-russia-ukraine-the-alliance-with-pis-and-the-vision-of-the-eu/>

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/AfD_pro-Russia_movement

I wouldn't say these are just a few people. These are two sizable far right movements in the EU.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 2:36 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Brunelleschi said:

My opinion is that war is, and should be viewed as a last resort and diplomacy should continue.

Malcolm wrote:

Putin is clearly not interested in diplomacy.

Brunelleschi said:

Perhaps there needs to be concessions. This is not ideal but it would most likely be vastly preferable to a military conflict.

Malcolm wrote:

No. The EU has no right to make "concessions" about another nation's boundaries to a foreign aggressor.

This is no different than Hitler's Sudetenland expansion in 1939.

The EU is looking a lot like Neville Chamberlain these days.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 2:41 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

digging up their definitely not fake stories about Russian energy weapons

Malcolm wrote:

Not energy weapons, sonic weapons.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Sonic_weapon

Both sides have them and they can be made with stuff from Radio Shack.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 2:52 AM

Title: Re: Surangama question

Content:

Constructelf said:

As far as I know, the current academic position is that the Surangama Sutra is of Indian origin

Malcolm wrote:

No, the current consensus is that it is a pastiche of native Chinese ideas and Indian source material.

it was never translated into Tibetan until the 18th century, and is absent from the Imperial period catalogues, ldan dkar ma and 'phang thang ma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 3:02 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

My opinion is that war is, and should be viewed as a last resort and diplomacy should continue.

Malcolm wrote:

Putin is clearly not interested in diplomacy.

Brunelleschi said:

Putin's a crook but we don't yet know what could be achieved through diplomacy.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, pretty clearly giving away Ukrainian territory is not an acceptable option.

Brunelleschi said:

Amping up the rhetoric is not helping. There has been anti-Russian sentiment for years in the US and Europe. Most major news channel in the US has ex CIA and intelligence operatives, FBI officials, Pentagon functionaries and so on acting as political analysts. Undoubtely, this is the case in Russia as well.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, all these people inspired Putin to mass 130k+ troops on the border of Ukraine.

Brunelleschi said:

Sorry, I did not mean concessions as in land concession. I meant concession as in compromise. Russia has a set of goals, the EU and Europe has a set of goals, the US has a set of goals. Deals can be made.

Malcolm wrote:

Most Ukrainians want to join NATO and the EU. Russia's goal is to prevent that at any cost.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 3:45 AM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex:

not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

Dgj said:

And, sorry, but no, if Nagarjuna's logic destroys all being

Malcolm wrote:

His logic doesn't destroy anything other than faulty reasonings of others.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 4:09 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

I mean you claim an invasion is imminent.

Mr. Putin made the case that Ukraine is by history and makeup an integral part of Russia.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.nytimes.com/live/2022/02/21/world/ukraine-russia-putin-biden#russia-will-recognize-two-regions-in-ukraine-a-possible-prelude-to-invasion>

Long and short, Putin waited until Germany had a novice chancellor to make his move. He is now intent on embroiling your continent in a war of aggression based on his imperial ambitions, invoking nationalist nostalgia as a pretext for war. Open your eyes, man.

In other words, Russia's claim on Ukraine is about as valid as China's claim on Tibet, i.e., not at all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 4:22 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

Yup. Unfortunately, there is now potential for an extremely rapid escalation.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.bbc.com/news/live/world-europe-60454795>

Brunelleschi said:

He spoke for nearly an hour, and covered a lot of ground, going as far back as the creation of the Soviet Union in 1922. Here are the main lines:

In the speech he said "Ukraine never had a tradition of genuine statehood" and that modern Ukraine had been "created" by Russia.

He attacked the idea of Ukraine joining the Nato defensive alliance, saying it would serve as "a direct threat to the security of Russia"

Putin repeated his argument that Nato had ignored Russian security concerns

Without providing evidence, he said Ukraine was a "puppet" of the US and accused the Ukrainian authorities of corruption

Confirming the recognition of the breakaway states, he said it was a decision he should have made a long time ago

Malcolm wrote:

Russia is the reason we have never dismantled the Atlantic Consensus. Europe needs it to maintain their democracies.

Brunelleschi said:

I still stand by comments regarding war being a last-ditch effort, opposing unnecessary interventionism, favoring de-escalation as well as being skeptical towards the US intelligence apparatus.

Malcolm wrote:

Your "deescalation" has been tried. But since Ukraine is not part of NATO, there will be no intervention. So, it's going to be a long bloody war, with Russia now on your back porch, not just in your backyard.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 4:55 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

ManiThePainter said:

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Foundations_of_Geopolitics

From the book: Ukraine should be annexed by Russia because "Ukraine as a state has no geopolitical meaning, no particular cultural import or universal significance, no geographic uniqueness, no ethnic exclusiveness, its certain territorial ambitions represents an enormous danger for all of Eurasia and, without resolving the Ukrainian problem, it is in general senseless to speak about continental politics". Ukraine should not be allowed to remain independent, unless it is cordon sanitaire, which would be inadmissible

Malcolm wrote:

Yup. This was all in the air in 2015 because of the illegal annexation of Crimea.

All these idiots on the far left and the far right were repeating Russian talking points taken from this book and this author (including the fantasy that HRC was going start a nuclear war in Syria). It is why I finally abandoned the Green Party in the US. Jill Stein was a total moron who accepted a dinner invitation from Putin.

Trump tried to destroy the Atlantic Consensus.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 5:52 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shinjin said:

weak and soft

Malcolm wrote:

Measured and deliberate.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 6:47 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shinjin said:

weak and soft indeed <https://www.msn.com/en-us/news/world/biden-responds-with-limited-sanctions-after-putin-recognizes-ukraine-regions/ar-AAU8gRF?ocid=msedgntp>

Queequeg said:

what would meet your approval?

Malcolm wrote:

Apparently:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 6:52 AM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

Dgj said:

Just discovered the shentong position and these refutations and critiques of Nagarjuna recently.

Malcolm wrote:

The gzhan stong position is for the most part, merely false aspectarian yogacāra, ala Ratnākaraśanti.

gZhan stong suffers from the same internal contradiction as false aspectarian yogacāra, namely, the assertion of the transformation of a compounded consciousness into an uncompounded gnosis. It also suffers from the defect of splitting the two truths, etc.

I been studying gzhan stong etc. for 30 years, and if you want to understand its defects, they are ably pointed out by Tsongkhapa in his legs bshad snying po and in Gorampa's

Ita ba shan 'byed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 7:01 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shinjin said:

weak and soft indeed <https://www.msn.com/en-us/news/world/biden-responds-with-limited-sanctions-after-putin-recognizes-ukraine-regions/ar-AAU8gRF?ocid=msedgntp>

Queequeg said:

what would meet your approval?

Shinjin said:

Tougher sanctions.

Malcolm wrote:

If Putin continues on this mad course—which is certain it seems—they will happen. But it won't be good for the world economy. Hence the mature thing is to proceed deliberately and respond in a proportional manner. Slapping him with tougher sanctions too soon will have the net effect of giving Putin nothing to lose, the nuclear option I alluded to.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 9:29 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shinjin said:

Tougher sanctions.

Malcolm wrote:

If Putin continues on this mad course—which is certain it seems—they will happen. But it won't be good for the world economy. Hence the mature thing is to proceed deliberately and respond in a proportional manner. Slapping him with tougher sanctions too soon will have the net effect of giving Putin nothing to lose, the nuclear option I alluded to.

PeterC said:

He's going to take some or all of Ukraine, either now or at a later date, largely because the consequences aren't enough to deter him.

Malcolm wrote:

He's deluded. I agree.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 8:44 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Queequeg said:

Seems when Biden slipped a few weeks ago and suggested that the degree of incursion into Ukraine would determine the magnitude of response, he knew more than he was letting on.

Also, PeterC's prediction that the invasion would start after the conclusion of the Olympics was spot on, to the day. Aside, the Russian participation in the Olympics marred by cheating did not do any good for Russia's reputation in the world. Seems the culture is saturated with cheating as the norm. smh

Malcolm wrote:

And tomorrow is defense of the fatherland day in Russia, which is when I predicted they would go in.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 8:59 PM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

Dgj said:

And, sorry, but no, if Nagarjuna's logic destroys all being

Malcolm wrote:

His logic doesn't destroy anything other than faulty reasonings of others.

Dgj said:

Depends on who you ask. Some say he negated literally everything, including himself (See Stafford L Betty, "Nagarjuna's Masterpiece, Logical, Mystical, Both, or Neither?"). Others say he only ostensibly negated his immediate peers in Buddhism and closely related religions, but only by his own terms, not theirs, and that he didn't rely on valid axioms, and didn't give the imaginary representatives of opposing views held by real people a fair shake. See Richard Robinson "Did Nagarjuna Really Refute All Philosophical Views?"

Malcolm wrote:

It doesn't depend at all on which western philosopher one asks.

Every position refuted by Nagarjuna is a historical position held by one of his contemporaries, and no, you are incorrect, he rejected the assertions of others by pointing out the unintended consequences in their theses. There is no law requiring that erroneous assertions and arguments be given a “fair shake.”

Since all assertions depend on assertions of the existence and nonexistence of something, Nagarjuna shows two things: 1) the Buddha spoke intentionally of existence and nonexistence depending on the audience. 2) he reaffirmed the Buddha's own observations that dependent origination was free of the extremes of existence and nonexistence in the face of mounting misunderstanding of the Buddha's intent. That's it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 9:07 PM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

Dgj said:

Just discovered the shentong position and these refutations and critiques of Nagarjuna recently.

Malcolm wrote:

The gzhan stong position is for the most part, merely false aspectarian yogacāra, ala Ratnākaraśanti.

gZhan stong suffers from the same internal contradiction as false aspectarian yogacāra, namely, the assertion of the transformation of a compounded consciousness into an uncompounded gnosis. It also suffers from the defect of splitting the two truths, etc.

I been studying gzhan stong etc. for 30 years, and if you want to understand its defects, they are ably pointed out by Tsongkhapa in his legs bshad snying po and in Gorampa's lta ba shan 'byed.

Dgj said:

And Nagarjuna's defects are pointed out by many as well.

Malcolm wrote:

Not so. One cannot refute a person who has no thesis of their own. Nagarjuna's sole concern is to point out deviations from dependent origination. Thus is why in the beginning of his text, he outlines three main theses of his opponents to take down: arising from self, from other, and without cause, having declared that dependent origination pacifies proliferation about cessation, arising, and so on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 10:14 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Norwegian said:

Will we see anything beyond condemnations and sanctions? And if Russia decides to go into Ukraine as a whole, and not just Donetsk and Luhansk, with the inevitable war that will happen, will we still just see condemnations and sanctions from the world leaders - the same old same old that Russia couldn't give two shits about? Will the West respond with physical action? And if not, when will the West do so?

Malcolm wrote:

You will see the West send weapons and advisors. But not troops. Although there is this:

<https://www.defensenews.com/global/europe/2022/02/16/nato-considering-new-battlegroups-in-eastern-europe-to-deter-russia/>

Norwegian said:

If Russia decides Sweden or Finland is next? If they spread out further somewhere else?

Malcolm wrote:

Probably not.

Norwegian said:

At what point does the world act instead of sit idly by doing nothing? And how should Russia best be stopped or be convinced to stop?

Malcolm wrote:

Basically, Ukraine is screwed unless they put up such a fierce resistance, with western support, that Russia decides it is not worth it. But short of destroying Ukraine to save it...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 10:18 PM

Title: Re: Is Sadhguru enlightened?

Content:

Könchok Thrinley said:

Like the one about the Himalayan yogi that is immortal and he supposedly met.

Malcolm wrote:

Baba Ji Lives!

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Mahavatar_Babaji

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 10:33 PM

Title: Re: Is there a particular barrier between the Dharma and US society/culture?

Content:

Tills ljušet tar oss said:

Generally the west is unfriendly if you are serious about the dharma.

Malcolm wrote:

I have never had this experience where I live in the US. Most people are disinterested and couldn't care less.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 10:45 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Norwegian said:

If Russia decides Sweden or Finland is next?

PeterC said:

Not sure about Sweden, but after the Winter War, Russia is never going to invade Finland again. Those Finns are crazy. They fought a quasi-guerilla war in -40 Celsius temperatures where about five Russians died for every Finn.

Malcolm wrote:

Plus, they keep skiing even when their dicks get frostbit.

<https://www.reuters.com/lifestyle/sports/cross-country-skiing-finn-remi-suffers-frozen-penis-mass-start-race-2022-02-20/>

PeterC said:

Lindholm explained that he used a heat pack to try to thaw out his appendage once the race was over.

"When the body parts started to warm up after the finish, the pain was unbearable," he added.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022 at 11:55 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

ManiThePainter said:

Ukraine is neither EU nor NATO and therefore nobody is "required" to help.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. And any move to admit it to either will certainly result in WWII.

Nevertheless, Ukraine's sovereignty should be protected by all possible means, beginning with seizing all Russian-owned assets in the US and the UK, and the expulsion of all Russian diplomats from all NATO nations, as well as removing Russia from the UN Security Council.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 23rd, 2022 at 2:03 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 23rd, 2022 at 2:32 AM

Title: Re: Is your spouse/partner a dharma person too, and if not...

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

Is your spouse/partner a dharma person too

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, of course. I wouldn't be in a relationship with someone who was not a Dharma practitioner. Done that, it doesn't work for me.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 23rd, 2022 at 4:34 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

And no, he is not going to take over Europe. No one here thinks that. Not even the Ukraine is likely. They've already had presence in the breakaway region, so so far, not much has happened, contrary to the US predictions.

Malcolm wrote:

Nonsense, Dan US Intelligence has been spot on every step of the way.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 23rd, 2022 at 4:39 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

Ukraine is a failed state.

Malcolm wrote:

Ok, so let's just give it the Russians. Then what?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 23rd, 2022 at 5:31 AM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

I am curious how this is understood by Nagarjuna.

Malcolm wrote:

It understood by Nāgārjuna to mean that nirvana is something relative. You should consult chapter 9 of Āryadeva, where he refutes permanent functional phenomena. Namely he says:

In nirvana there are no aggregates and there cannot be a person.

What nirvana is there for one who cannot be seen in nirvana?

Yogic Deeds of Bodhisattvas, pp. 211-212

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 23rd, 2022 at 8:39 AM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

I am curious how this is understood by Nagarjuna.

Malcolm wrote:

It understood by Nāgārjuna to mean that nirvana is something relative. You should consult chapter 9 of Āryadeva, where he refutes permanent functional phenomena. Namely he says:

In nirvana there are no aggregates
and there cannot be a person.

What nirvana is there for one
who cannot be seen in nirvana?

Yogic Deeds of Bodhisattvas, pp. 211-212

Nicholas2727 said:

I am a bit confused, how could the unborn/unconditioned/etc be relative? Is he saying that Nirvana is dependent on someone realizing it therefore it is relative? Or does Madhyamaka negate nirvana completely?

Planning on listening to this here shortly which will probably answer a lot of these questions, but I guess a more basic question I am unsure of is what enlightenment/nirvana is for madhyamaka.

<https://madhyamaka.com/2017-06-07-madhyamakavatara-week-1/>

Malcolm wrote:

The uncompounded is relative since it depends on the compounded. In other words, nirvana is a cessation. The cessation of what? The aggregates. There is nothing left over after a cessation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 23rd, 2022 at 8:01 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

And no, he is not going to take over Europe. No one here thinks that. Not even the Ukraine is likely. They've already had presence in the breakaway region, so so far, not much has happened, contrary to the US predictions.

Malcolm wrote:

Nonsense, Dan US Intelligence has been spot on every step of the way.

Dan74 said:

Yep and black is white.

<https://www.vox.com/2022/2/14/22933850/ukraine-war-february-16-zelensky-prediction-joke>

<https://www.rollingstone.com/politics/politics-news/ukraine-kyiv-life-potential-russian-invasion-1300869/>

Malcolm wrote:

As I said, US intelligence on this matter has been spot on. The media is not the intelligence services.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 23rd, 2022 at 8:07 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

You missed the point. It explains why many Ukrainians would not be so averse to being part of Russia. Especially those with ethnic or culturally Russian roots.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, about 20 percent. But this still does not justify in any way Putins continued invasion of a sovereign nation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 23rd, 2022 at 8:19 PM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

I am a bit confused, how could the unborn/unconditioned/etc be relative? Is he saying that Nirvana is dependent on someone realizing it therefore it is relative? Or does Madhyamaka negate nirvana completely?

Planning on listening to this here shortly which will probably answer a lot of these questions, but I guess a more basic question I am unsure of is what enlightenment/nirvana is for madhyamaka.

<https://madhyamaka.com/2017-06-07-madhyamakavatara-week-1/>

Malcolm wrote:

The uncompounded is relative since it depends on the compounded. In other words, nirvana is a cessation. The cessation of what? The aggregates. There is nothing left over after a cessation.

Aemilius said:

That is just plain nihilism. How would a Buddha know anything without the aggregates? I.e. without sense organs, sensation, concepts/perceptions, volitions (to teach the dharma) and consciousness?

How about the eighteen āveṇikadharmas of the Buddhas or the Eighteen Special Attributes of the Buddha, how would they exist?

<https://www.wisdomlib.org/buddhism/book/maha-prajnaparamita-sastra/d/doc225801.html>

Malcolm wrote:

It is no more nihilism than observing that when a fire has consumed all its fuel it ceases.

In any case, here Aryadeva is refuting assertions of permanently functional phenomena, including nirvana.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 23rd, 2022 at 9:28 PM

Title: Re: Averting Astrological Obstacles (Sok, Wang, Lungta, etc)

Content:

fckw said:

You can practice any yidam that subdues planetary influences.

LolCat said:

Could you please give examples of such Yidams, at least the most popular ones?

Chenda said:

Can we get a bump on this? I'm assuming "subduing" planetary influences entails wrathful deities?

Malcolm wrote:

Vajrapāṇi, generally speaking, is the best for controlling planetary spirits.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 23rd, 2022 at 10:12 PM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

but I guess a more basic question I am unsure of is what enlightenment/nirvana is for madhyamaka.

Malcolm wrote:

In this presentation which refutes permanently functioning phenomena, Gyaltsab's commentary on Aryadeva's 400 indicates that the attainment of the perception of emptiness is nirvana, during which the aggregates do not cease, and this is termed "mere nirvana."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 23rd, 2022 at 10:47 PM

Title: Re: Is Sadhguru enlightened?

Content:

Soma999 said:

He is not buddhist but has insights that can help human beings, whatever their religion.

Wisdom does not belong to any religion. It belongs to life, and clearly he has interesting things to say or teach.

PeterC said:

Given how close he is with the BJP and what his views on Muslims are, I'm guessing that his personal views aren't quite so ecumenical

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed, they are not:

<https://scroll.in/article/948963/how-jaggi-vasudev-has-helped-strengthen-fears-about-muslims>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 23rd, 2022 at 11:48 PM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

If the aggregates cease how are Buddha's able to help sentient beings? I've gotten the impression from teachers that nirvana is the cessation of wrong views and afflicted emotions, not the aggregates themselves but maybe I have misunderstood.

Still a bit confused as well how the unborn, unbecome, etc is relative. I understand Aryadeva's comments, but reading the Nibbana Sutta with that understanding doesn't make sense. If the unborn is what frees us from the born how could they both be relative. A relative insight freeing us from conventional reality?

Malcolm wrote:

The uncompounded is relative because without the compounded there is no such a thing. In other words, nirvana is also empty.

In any case, there are only three uncompounded dharmas: space, analytical cessation and nonanalytical cessation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 24th, 2022 at 1:02 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

Ukraine is a failed state.

Könchok Thrinley said:

I am sorry to moralize here, but how the f dare you? Ukraine sure has corruption and other problems oh so prevalent in poorer countries, however they underwent two major revolutions where people chose freedom and accountability. It is not ideal, however clearly it works there and there is a will for improvements.

For a poor post-soviet republic with almost constant threat of Russian invasion, take over or influence they are doing a pretty good job.

Dan74 said:

I come from there, have relatives there, visited, read and heard enough to reach this conclusion. This isn't a slight on Ukrainians, just how things turned out. I also don't know what you mean by 'a poor post-Soviet republic', it was highly industrialised, had well-educated population, natural resources, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

It still has a well-educated population, natural resources, and so on. If it is a failing state, that is Russia's doing. But it hasn't failed yet. Strictly speaking, a failed state is one whose political or economic system has become so weak that the government is no longer in control. For example, Haiti.

Of course, Putin has openly declared, more than once, that the Ukraine isn't a state at all. In line with his Eurasian hegemonic fever dreams, he has clearly decided that Ukraine is there for the taking.

<https://www.nytimes.com/2022/02/23/world/europe/putin-speech-russia-ukraine.html>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 24th, 2022 at 3:12 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

I come from there, have relatives there, visited, read and heard enough to reach this conclusion. This isn't a slight on Ukrainians, just how things turned out. I also don't know what you mean by 'a poor post-Soviet republic', it was highly industrialised, had well-educated population, natural resources, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

It still has a well-educated population, natural resources, and so on. If it is a failing state, that is Russia's doing. But it hasn't failed yet. Strictly speaking, a failed state is one whose political or economic system has become so weak that the government is no longer in control. For example, Haiti.

Of course, Putin has openly declared, more than once, that the Ukraine isn't a state at all. In line with his Eurasian hegemonic fever dreams, he has clearly decided that Ukraine is there for the taking.

<https://www.nytimes.com/2022/02/23/world/europe/putin-speech-russia-ukraine.html>

Dan74 said:

Yep, everything is Russia's fault, especially Ukraine's endemic corruption. Then the broken infrastructure, the dysfunctional politics, etc etc. An anecdote. When I was in Kyiv in 1999, while the relations with Russia were still good, the street lights no longer worked in many places in the city. At the main railway station I saw a pensioner holding a placard advertising her apartment for an overnight stay. Making our way through the broken asphalt in the dark streets, I heard her voice trembling with fear for letting this stranger (me) into her apartment for the night, explaining that otherwise she would not be able to pay her utility bills. Many were begging in the streets, people who've worked their whole lives.

Malcolm wrote:

Dan. I am not going to argue with you about the material conditions in a country I have never visited.

But I also know other Ukrainians. One, a Russian-speaking Jew from Donetsk, left Ukraine and moved to Israel. In the middle of his rants about Soros, etc., he explained that he was afraid of the neo-nazis in the separatist regions—an entirely valid fear.

There is no doubt Ukraine has endemic corruption, after all, the previous pro-Russian regime hired Paul Manafort as their PR guy until the government fell after the protests. However, yes, it is Russia's fault, after all, Russia was its largest trading partner til 2014 and the annexation of Crimea.

But it isn't a failed state, not yet. For example, their bond rating was moved up from b- to b; it moved up seven positions in the 2020 World Bank report. But of course there are problems, like the Ukrainian supreme court ruling anti-corruption measures unconstitutional, which then lead the IMF not to release loan money, etc.

Russia wants Ukraine for its natural resources. It's just a land grab.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 24th, 2022 at 3:21 AM

Title: Re: Averting Astrological Obstacles (Sok, Wang, Lungta, etc)

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Vajrapāṇi, generally speaking, is the best for controlling planetary spirits.

tony_montana said:

Thanks!! for those of us with difficult charts this is really helpful information. Just asking, please name a few other such deities (is Vajrabhairava, Yamari, Vajrayogini or Chakrasamvara known for such help to practitioners?)

LolCat said:

Please add Vajrakilaya to that list (does VK practice help with this?)

Malcolm wrote:

Mainly, Vajrapāṇi.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 24th, 2022 at 4:06 AM

Title: Re: Lojong - Offering to the Döns

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This is a post I wrote some time ago, slightly corrected.

The very simplest method is the practice of the Pretamukha-agnijvālayaśarakāra-nāma-dhāraṇī:

Early in the day, but also at any other time: into a pure vessel which is completely clean without any remnants of any food at all, place water, and holding this in one's right hand recite the following dharani seven times:

Namaḥ sarvatathāgata avalokite oṃ saṃbhara saṃbhara hūṃ

Then recite the names of these Buddhas:

Homage to the Tathāgata Many Jewels [imagine all the pretas actions of avarice of many lifetimes are destroyed and they accumulate all merits].

Homage to the Tathāgata Sublime Form [Imagine all the pretas physical sufferings are conquered and they achieve perfect forms and characteristics].

Homage to the Tathāgata Endlessly Abundant Body [Imagine all the pretas thirst is given up and satisfied, and they are satisfied with sufficient food].

Homage to the Tathāgata Free from Fear [Imagine all the pretas are free from all fears].

At the end of reciting these names, snap one's fingers three times, and pour the vessel's contents out onto clean ground.

Having done this, one will have pacified the realms of the pretas, and satisfied them, and so on.

This instruction on how to do the practice is extracted from the root text found in volume Wam of the bstan 'gyur.

This practice is very powerful in removing provocations by non-human beings, is an extremely rapid way of reaching the end of the perfection of generosity, and so on. It requires no initiation of any kind. You can also skip reciting the Buddhas names.

Konchog1 said:

Excellent. Do you have the names of the Buddhas in Sanskrit by any chance?

Malcolm wrote:

As far as I know, they exist only as backtranslations. so not reliable.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 24th, 2022 at 4:33 AM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

Pretty different from the Shentong explanations I have received, but trying to research both to stay balanced. I've always been taught the uncompounded is ultimate because it is what remains after the removal of all that is false (relative). Is the uncompounded at a relative level another name for emptiness?

Malcolm wrote:

Emptiness is the fourth thing that is uncompounded, but as it is also empty...

This way of dividing the two truths is inappropriate. If there is nothing to be empty, there also isn't emptiness. There is no ultimate apart from the ultimate nature of things. Gzhan stong suffers from the same realism that yogacāra does. They assert buddhas exist but sentient beings do not. In reality, neither sentient beings nor buddhas can ever be established to exist inherently. That means both buddhas and sentient beings, samsara and nirvana, are relative and not ultimate.

Nicholas2727 said:

Also if Nirvana is empty and everything that is empty is illusory, is Nirvana illusory? I'm assuming not, but not sure how to defend that position.

Malcolm wrote:

How can what is permanent be harmed, or the unharmed be liberated?

Liberation is irrelevant for one whose self is permanent.

--Yogic deeds of Bodhisattvas, pg. 223.

The general view of Madhyamaka is that everything, including buddhahood, is illusory.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, February 24th, 2022 at 10:34 AM
Title: Re: This One Mind is You
Content:

clyde said:
Interesting. Then everyone is in their own personal samsara.

Malcolm wrote:
Of course. It can't be otherwise.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, February 24th, 2022 at 11:25 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, February 24th, 2022 at 11:29 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, February 24th, 2022 at 8:25 PM
Title: Re: This One Mind is You
Content:

Jesse said:
Interconnection very much describes the actual state of reality, suchness.

Malcolm wrote:
In order for there to be a connection, there must be a boundary or delineation between one thing and another thing, otherwise the word "connection" has no meaning. But if, as you say, there are no boundaries or delineations, this means there are also no connections., much less "interconnection."

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, February 24th, 2022 at 8:30 PM
Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

Aemilius said:

That is just plain nihilism. How would a Buddha know anything without the aggregates? I.e. without sense organs, sensation, concepts/perceptions, volitions (to teach the dharma) and consciousness?

How about the eighteen āveṇīkadharma of the Buddhas or the Eighteen Special Attributes of the Buddha, how would they exist?

<https://www.wisdomlib.org/buddhism/book/maha-prajnaparamita-sastra/d/doc225801.html>

Malcolm wrote:

It is no more nihilism than observing that when a fire has consumed all its fuel it ceases.

Aemilius said:

The nihilistic nirvana is refuted in the Mahayana sutras like the White Lotus sutra,

Malcolm wrote:

Where do you suppose afflictions go when they cease?

Mahayana texts do not negate nirvana at all, in fact they observe that all phenomena are in a state of nirvana from the beginning as nothing ever arose anywhere at any time. This is also taught in the Saddharmapundarika.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 24th, 2022 at 9:03 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

KristenM said:

I don't care how poor or corrupt the country is, Ukraine and the Ukrainian people don't deserve this.

Dan74 said:

Of course not. It is not only criminal, it seems like a lose-lose proposition. I really don't understand how Putin could hold the Ukraine. Perhaps he plans to annexe the country, install a puppet regime under an autonomy, and maintain Russian military bases throughout. Doesn't seem realistic though. Western Ukrainians especially hate Russians. I just can't see them accepting it. But maybe I'm I'm wrong.

Malcolm wrote:

Dan, he made his intent quite clear: Ukraine is not a country, it has no right exist, kind of like the PLO etc., declaring Israel has no right to exist. He plans on taking over the country, it's as plain as the nose on your face.

Save a full-scale war with the EU, there is nothing to prevent him from annexing the whole of Ukraine. He's betting the blood cost is too high for Europe and the US.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 24th, 2022 at 9:41 PM

Title: Re: This One Mind is You

Content:

Jesse said:

Interconnection very much describes the actual state of reality, suchness.

Malcolm wrote:

In order for there to be a connection, there must be a boundary or delineation between one thing and another thing, otherwise the word "connection" has no meaning. But if, as you say, there are no boundaries or delineations, this means there are also no connections., much less "interconnection."

Jesse said:

So you are denying interdependence teachings then?

Malcolm wrote:

You are one who made the assertion there are no delineations between one thing and another thing, not me. I am just pointing out the consequences of your assertion.

Interdependence is just a convention for causes and conditions, and they are themselves just conventions. Upon analysis, one cannot find a cause or a condition anywhere, so how could one find an interconnection?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 24th, 2022 at 10:01 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

Here, people are in shock.

Malcolm wrote:

They shouldn't be. Our intelligence agencies have been making Putin's intention clear for weeks.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 24th, 2022 at 10:37 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

PeterC said:

Well, that depends on what his definition of winning is. He doesn't need to control the whole territory. Perhaps he's ok with controlling the Russian-dominated regions in the east...

Malcolm wrote:

His rhetoric does not indicate this at all.

As of right now, the military air base outside of Kyiv has been seized by Russian paratroopers. You don't do that unless you are preparing for a full regime change.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 24th, 2022 at 10:41 PM

Title: Re: This One Mind is You

Content:

Jesse said:

I made the assertion that these delineations are imagined. Not non-existent, or existent.

Malcolm wrote:

So imagined things are existent or nonexistent? You followed up your statement by claiming interconnectedness. I merely pointed out that connections require delineations, and moreover, separation, otherwise it makes no sense to talk of "connections" between things that are not separated.

Jesse said:

Well then, what's there left to discuss then?

Malcolm wrote:

Conventions, of course, which is all anyone ever discusses.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 24th, 2022 at 11:08 PM

Title: Re: This One Mind is You

Content:

Jesse said:

According to this theory, any phenomenon exists only as part of the total nexus of reality, its existence depends on the total network of all other things, which are all equally connected to each other and contained in each other.[24]

Malcolm wrote:

This theory does not go beyond the kāraṇa hetu theory of the Sarvastivādins, that is, all things are the cause of all other things but themselves.

This theory is negated by Nāgārjuna in chapter one of the MMK.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 24th, 2022 at 11:16 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

PeterC said:

I'm sure he wants to decapitate the existing regime, but whether he wants to stand up something coherent in its place? If his objective is to have a territorial buffer, he may not need to

Malcolm wrote:

I think we all can see the writing on the wall.

Protracted insurgencies, which he has an appetite for, etc. Destroy Ukraine to "save it."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 24th, 2022 at 11:44 PM

Title: Re: This One Mind is You

Content:

Jesse said:

According to this theory, any phenomenon exists only as part of the total nexus of reality, its existence depends on the total network of all other things, which are all equally connected to each other and contained in each other.[24]

Malcolm wrote:

This theory does not go beyond the kāraṇa hetu theory of the Sarvastivādins, that is, all things are the cause of all other things but themselves.

This theory is negated by Nāgārjuna in chapter one of the MMK.

Jesse said:

I have serious doubt that that is the case.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, until you subject it to analysis, you won't know, will you? Since all cause and condition is determined by Nāgārjuna to be mere convention, statements like this, "any phenomenon exists only as part of the total nexus of reality" are subject to the analysis of one vs. many. As Śāntirakṣita points out:

Because these entities asserted by ourselves (buddhists) and others (nonbuddhists) are in reality free from a nature of being one or many, they lack inherent existence, like a reflection.

This equally to proposed entities such as as a "total nexus of reality." You can say a car is a nexus of parts, but in reality you will not find a car in its parts, separate from its parts, nor in all of its part together. This claim above is the same: you can call all phenomena together reality, but you will not find reality in any one phenomena, separated from phenomena, or in all phenomena together. You will also be unable to find any phenomena which can support the existence of any other phenomena either alone or in concert. For example, a car cannot be supported on any of the phenomena which we assemble into a car, a car is merely conventional designation for a collection of parts which does not indicate anything real. As Nāgārjuna famously stated, "whatever arises in dependence, that is empty, that is dependently designated, and that is the middle way."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 24th, 2022 at 11:47 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

In other news, Russian troops are fighting to take over Chernobyl at significant risk to the EU.

<https://www.mirror.co.uk/news/world-news/breaking-russian-forces-enter-chernobyl-26320432>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 24th, 2022 at 11:51 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 24th, 2022 at 11:56 PM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

haha said:

Are you suggesting there is no change in Madhyamaka philosophy since Nagarjuna's time? Then, you might not be accurate. That is what I intended to say "gradually evolved".

Malcolm wrote:

There are some differences in pedagogy, but there is no real evolution in Madhyamaka thought. How could there be? Mādhyamikas do not make propositions concerning the ultimate. They did respond to the assertions of others, and where there is disagreement among Mādhyamikas, it is disagreement over pedagogy alone, how to respond to the assertions of other buddhists and nonbuddhists.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 25th, 2022 at 12:00 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

ManiThePainter said:

Either that or it was all orchestrated to show Putin's "iron-will" and "right to rule."

Dan74 said:

No way Naryshkin's performance was orchestrated. No no, this makes no sense within the Kremlin modus operandi. Have you watched the vid?

ManiThePainter said:

I did. I found it odd that it would be released if not to send a message. Putin has a tight grip on the media in Russia. It could also be that it is meant to show discord within higher Russian political circles so as to make it look like Russia is "hesitant" to invade.

Malcolm wrote:

That's all moot now. Just hope that the fighting around Chernobyl doesn't take a turn for the worse, and unleash fallout from its waste facilities.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 25th, 2022 at 1:55 AM

Title: Re: How can one access Dudjom Tersar centers/ngondro in the West?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Can one practice Dudjom Tersar ngondro and another ngondro or would that be redundant?

Malcolm wrote:
Redundant.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, February 25th, 2022 at 3:35 AM
Title: Re: Please recommend Longchen Nyintik ngondro teachers with zoom/livestream
Content:
Nalanda said:
Try it for 10-20 years and then ignore whatever else are out there? Is that what you'd recommend?

Malcolm wrote:
Five, anyway.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, February 25th, 2022 at 3:49 AM
Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?
Content:

Malcolm wrote:
There are some differences in pedagogy, but there is no real evolution in Madhyamaka thought. How could there be? Mādhyamikas do not make propositions concerning the ultimate. They did respond to the assertions of others, and where there is disagreement among Mādhyamikas, it is disagreement over pedagogy alone, how to respond to the assertions of other buddhists and nonbuddhists.

haha said:
There is no disagreement with your statement. But I cannot agree/resolve it is just the same.

Malcolm wrote:
Then you would have to show where there is a significant difference between Indian Mādhyamikas, other than pedagogical approach.

If you cannot, well, then your assertion isn't warranted.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, February 25th, 2022 at 3:58 AM
Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?
Content:

haha said:

He made his first statement in his karika and it took thirteen verses proved his own statement. He also has position.

Malcolm wrote:

And that is?

haha said:

He has started his karika which his position/thesis: eightfold negation.

Malcolm wrote:

Maṅgalaṃ of the MMK is not a thesis, it is praise to the Buddha based on a passage from the PP Sūtras, but it is not a thesis.

haha said:

He has made position by saying “there are only four conditions, not fifth”;

Malcolm wrote:

No, this is his opponent's position. Please examine Buddhapaṇḍita's commentary, pg. 26.

haha said:

other traditions have more conditions; it is trying to imposing his conditions to other. There are more.

Malcolm wrote:

The opponent here is a Sarvāstivādin. The Sarvāstivādins propose a system of six causes and four conditions. See chapter two of the Abidharmakośaśāstra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 25th, 2022 at 4:36 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shinjin said:

I doubt it. If it persists they will most likely get "tiannemen squared".

KristenM said:

Judy trying to keep some hope. “The only thing we have to fear is fear itself,” and all that jazz.

Shinjin said:

There's no hope under authoritarian dictators. Only death and despair.

Malcolm wrote:

Not so, there is considerable room for advancement in the hierarchy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 25th, 2022 at 5:06 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Nalanda said:

Wow. This is the thread. Thanks.

Team USA USA USA.

Hot dogs and burgers.

Malcolm wrote:

Those are not really American.

Now if you had said tacos, tamales, and tequila, those actually do come from America.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 25th, 2022 at 5:32 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shotenzenjin said:

Him and the oligarchs that rule Russia are capitalists through and through.

Malcolm wrote:

Not really. Capitalism requires free markets and competition. Putin doesn't want free markets and he doesn't like liberal democracy. He wants corporations subordinate to the state. He is a classical corporatist.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 25th, 2022 at 5:45 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

On the other tack, here's a thoughtful lecture from John Mearsheimer on the causes of this crisis, which he lays at the feet of the US.

Malcolm wrote:

Principally this is his point:

Q: Now Russia and China are cultivating a friendly relationship premised on the U.S. as their common enemy. Do you think Russia and China will be compatible in their stances toward Asia?

A: The U.S. has foolishly driven the Russians into the arms of the Chinese. I think Russia is the natural ally of the U.S. against China.

In 1969, the Soviet Union and China almost fought a war in Siberia. The Soviet Union and China -- and now we're talking about Russia and China -- have a history of bad relations, in large part because they share a border and each occupies big chunks of real estate in Asia. Russia should be an ally of the U.S. against China, and the U.S. needs all the allies it can get to contain China.

But what we have done by expanding NATO eastward is we have precipitated a huge crisis with Russia that prevents us from fully pivoting to Asia. We can't fully pivot to Asia because we're so concerned about events in Eastern Europe. That's the first consequence. The second is that we have driven the Russians into the arms of the Chinese. This makes no sense at all.

Q: The current tensions along the Ukraine border raise the question of whether the U.S. is capable of dealing with European and Asian issues simultaneously.

A: Let me choose my words carefully. The U.S. has the capability to deal with a conflict in Europe and a conflict in Asia at the same time.

However, it does not have the capability to perform well in both campaigns at the same time. By getting involved in a conflict in Eastern Europe, we, the U.S., are detracting from our ability to contain China and to fight a war against China, should one break out.

<https://asia.nikkei.com/Editor-s-Picks/Interview/U.S.-engagement-with-China-a-strategic-blunder-Mearsheimer>

And there you have it. We will not rescue Ukraine because of Taiwan. And Taiwan is more important to US interests.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 25th, 2022 at 7:27 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

And this is something the US would never allow in reverse as per the Monroe doctrine.

Malcolm wrote:

You are mistating the Monroe Doctrine:

"We should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety. With the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power we have not interfered and shall not interfere. But with the Governments who have declared their independence and maintained it... we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them, or controlling in any other manner their destiny, by any European power in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States.”

So, Russia's attitude is in fact completely different than the Monroe Doctrine. They do not respect the Ukrainian Government's independence, and they have in fact actively sought to undermine it for decades now. What did Putin say Tuesday?

"Ukraine has never had its own authentic statehood. There has never been a sustainable statehood in Ukraine."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 25th, 2022 at 8:20 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

Plus you were around at the time of the Cuban Missiles crisis, no?

Malcolm wrote:

I was an extremely precocious five month old.

In any case, the US response was dictated by the Platt amendment of 1903:

American foreign policy was further aided by the 1903 Platt Amendment, which stated that the “government of Cuba shall never enter into any treaty or other compact with any foreign power or powers which will impair or tend to impair the independence of Cuba, nor... authorize or permit any foreign power... to obtain by... military or naval purposes... lodgment in or control over any portion of said island” and that the “government of Cuba consented that the United States may exercise the right to intervene for the... maintenance of a government adequate for the protection of life, property, and individual liberty”

<https://colinatrixford.wordpress.com/about/to-what-extent-was-the-monroe-doctrine-invoked-during-the-cuban-missile-crisis/>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 25th, 2022 at 8:56 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Nalanda said:

Yes, from his perspective, we are definitely aggressor.

Malcolm wrote:

Paranoid megalomaniacs like Putin always think they are the victim.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 25th, 2022 at 10:25 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Nalanda said:

Yes, from his perspective, we are definitely aggressor.

Malcolm wrote:

Paranoid megalomaniacs like Putin always think they are the victim.

Nalanda said:

Things were never the same for Vlad when he saw NATO aircraft shoots Gaddafi's convoy, then his own people beating, sodomizing, and publicly executing him while Hillary laughs and says "We came, we saw, he died."

Vlad fears he's next.

Malcolm wrote:

That was the British settling a grudge: Lockerbie. Clinton's words were honest. She would have made an excellent president. Putin was genuinely afraid of her.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 25th, 2022 at 10:53 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Nalanda said:

This stopped being true when people ceased being serfs. Today, people and countries are aligned by ideologies, not geography. If you meant Slavic culture, well, I think the Ukrainians have spoken. ("No" because they have other ideologies that are more in line with the West) If you meant the Russians within Ukraine, yeah and they're the minority.

Bundokji said:

I guess the cold war was an attempt to prove that ideology can trump geography, but it failed. The spheres of influence that are emerging in the world seem to be more driven by geography. China's sphere of influence is the south China sea (and that includes the Philippines). Russia is trying to protect its sphere of influence. Iran's sphere of influence is the Persian gulf. Turkey, a major NATO country turned its back to Europe and is trying to join its natural sphere of influence in the south and the East.

On the other hand, western democracies (an ideology) deviate from this more-natural rule and are causing divisions. Europe is becoming more divided especially after Brexit, while anglo-saxons are trying to form alliances based on ethnicity and history such as US, Britain and AUS (they gave the middle finger recently to France over the submarines deal hence France is showing some sympathy to Russia according to Macron).

Malcolm wrote:

Since what Putin wants is irrelevant to Ukrainian aspirations, (they want the obvious benefits of western democracy), Putin has exercised his paranoid megalomania and invaded a bordering Sovereign nation, an invasion that began in 2014 when the Ukrainian people chased out his corrupt puppet regime. In 2019 they held fair elections and voted in the present government.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 25th, 2022 at 11:40 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Bundokji said:

The west has its track record in spreading democracy against the will of the people.

Malcolm wrote:

Nonsense. That's a contradiction in terms. It is not possible.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 25th, 2022 at 9:03 PM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

haha said:

He made his first statement in his karika and it took thirteen verses proved his own statement. He also has position.

Malcolm wrote:

And that is?

haha said:

Karika's first verse.

It is his premise: No existents whatsoever are evident (utpannā jātu vidyante). From themselves, from another, from both, or from a non-cause.

Malcolm wrote:

No, these are not his positions. These are four positions taken by those he intends to negate. For example, the first, origination from self is the position of the Sāṃkhya, and so on. This is quite clear in Buddhapaṇḍita, etc.

haha said:

To validate above premise, he provided four conditions and then refuted them (pratyaya, kriya, utpada, bhanga, alambana, anantara, adhipati, phala) in thirteen verses.

Malcolm wrote:

Nope. The four conditions referred to are not his position.

haha said:

Maṅgalaṃ of the MMK is not a thesis, it is praise to the Buddha based on a passage from the PP Sūtras, but it is not a thesis.

That Maṅgalastūti is the thesis. Intended meaning of these verses is the summary of Mādhyamaka theory. If one understands their meaning, then she/he completely gets Nāgārjuna's intention.

Malcolm wrote:

They are not a thesis per se, they are descriptive, not prescriptive. A negation cannot be defined as a premise. Those are eight negations, not eight premises.

haha said:

That is the Mādhyama reading assuming these verses are said to the such and such opponents. But one can read it very differently.

Malcolm wrote:

One would be incorrect to do so, since there is universal agreement among all commentaries as to which passages belong to the opponent, and which are Nāgārjuna's replies.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 25th, 2022 at 9:45 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.theatlantic.com/ideas/archive/2022/02/ukraine-russia-war-nato-biden-deterrence/622873/>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 25th, 2022 at 10:47 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 25th, 2022 at 11:44 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Nalanda said:

Christian missionary of course can be very good. No? So yes, its like that. Thank God.

Bundokji said:

Not really, unless you hold human well-being hostage to it through propaganda. Spreading democracy seems to be a form of secular Jihad, a pretext to serve narrow interests and a complete disregard of the suffering caused under shiny slogans.

Malcolm wrote:

This is just rhetoric.

Bundokji said:

Nations better focus on fixing their own house first, and there is plenty to be improved if energy and focus are directed towards more wholesome objectives.

Malcolm wrote:

People in the US, even the most poor, even the homeless, are demonstrably better off than people in countries with no democracy.

Bundokji said:

Just contemplate the difference between American pragmatism and the pragmatism taught by the lord Buddha as per the poisoned arrow simile. The former turned into a justification for serving the interests of elites, and the later is the setting aside of ideology and focusing on what is essential for human well-being.

Malcolm wrote:

The Buddha did not institute a social system, or a system of government. He taught a path of liberation. He also recommended social solutions for well being. Not invading your neighbor was included in that.

Bundokji said:

Is it essential for the Ukrainian people at this point of time to join the NATO in order to implement necessary reforms when having a paranoid neighbor?

Malcolm wrote:

Ukrainians think so.

Bundokji said:

When democracy is presented as an ideology, alternatives are presented as false dilemmas.

Malcolm wrote:

This is a non sequitur.

Bundokji said:

In this ideological mindset, the highest value to be preserved is their right of self-determination even if this goes against their own self interest.

Malcolm wrote:

The right to self determination never goes against anyone's interest, other than those who would seek to take that right away.

Bundokji said:

Under this state of affairs, it is Putin to blame, and we should engage into endless ethical and legal debates to determine responsibility while the people of Ukraine are being bombarded. At the end of the day, we are convinced that this is what civilized people do!

Malcolm wrote:

This is how one lady feels about Putin trying to deprive her of her right to self-determination:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 26th, 2022 at 12:07 AM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

No, these are not his positions. These are four positions taken by those he intends to negate. For example, the first, origination from self is the position of the Saṃkhya, and so on. This is quite clear in Buddhapaṇiśa, etc.

haha said:

The Pursha of the Saṃkhya is beggingless. It does not have any cause.

Malcolm wrote:

You clearly have not read a qualified commentary of the MMK. You have not done your homework. Get back to me when you have read Buddhapalita.

haha said:

Nope. The four conditions referred to are not his position.

As long as one makes statement, one has position.

Malcolm wrote:

Nāgārjuna identifies an opinion he does have, namely one: the indestructible (avipranaśa) of the Ārya-sammitiyas is his preferred conventional account of karma and its results. Other than that, he does not present opinions of his own at all in the MMK.

The point that you seem to miss is that when it is said by Nāgārjuna that he has no position, it means he makes no ontological claims with respect to existence and nonexistence, or specifically, svabhāva.

It does not mean he has no opinion with respect to the value of the Mahāyāna, medical care for the indigent, and so on, in other words, he may have positions regarding conventional things, but he neither defends nor advances positions regarding existence and nonexistence.

haha said:

I am not saying they are eight premises, either. I am only saying it is a summery or it is his position (dedicatory verse).

Malcolm wrote:

[/quote]

Nāgārjuna here is merely stating that the Buddha taught dependent origination to pacify proliferation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 26th, 2022 at 12:24 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shinjin said:

Another power hungry sociopath.

Malcolm wrote:

Nah, you give her too much power, and listen to too much right wing agitprop.

But Putin was terrified of her. He apparently obsessively watched the Qadafi video over and over again.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, February 26th, 2022 at 12:27 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, February 26th, 2022 at 12:46 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
This is just rhetoric.

Bundokji said:
This is where we differ. I am arguing that holding human well-being to ideology is just rhetoric. It is no coincident that ideologies are often associated with utopian promises, be it democracy or otherwise.

Malcolm wrote:
Liberal democracy is not a utopian ideal. It is pragmatic.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, February 26th, 2022 at 2:06 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Johnny Dangerous said:
Sometimes there is skepticism around claims of “supporting democratic values” etc. because it seems just a cover for an economic program that isn’t necessarily democratic at all.

Malcolm wrote:
Democracy takes work. The Ukrainians put in the work. We should support that.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, February 26th, 2022 at 3:15 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
Yup:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, February 26th, 2022 at 4:03 AM
Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex:

not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

Aemilius said:

The nihilistic nirvana is refuted in the Mahayana sutras like the White Lotus sutra,

Malcolm wrote:

Where do you suppose afflictions go when they cease?

Mahayana texts do not negate nirvana at all, in fact they observe that all phenomena are in a state of nirvana from the beginning as nothing ever arose anywhere at any time. This is also taught in the Saddharmapundarika.

Aemilius said:

Who or what sees the absence of afflictions?

Nirvana as literal cessation is refuted, see for example MMK ch. 25:

Malcolm wrote:

If something does not arise, it cannot cease. And as N clarifies in this chapter, nirvana is not an entity, compounded or otherwise. Instead just a name for emptiness, as he makes very clear.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 26th, 2022 at 4:10 AM

Title: Re: Please recommend Longchen Nyingtik ngondro teachers with zoom/livestream

Content:

Arnoud said:

I hate to say it but I think the world holder is missing. Like principle lineage holder.

Malcolm wrote:

No, I meant exactly what I said, a principle lineage in which there are many holders of the lineage, not only one.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 26th, 2022 at 4:25 AM

Title: Re: Please recommend Longchen Nyingtik ngondro teachers with zoom/livestream

Content:

Arnoud said:

I hate to say it but I think the world holder is missing. Like principle lineage holder.

Malcolm wrote:

No, I meant exactly what I said, a principle lineage in which there are many holders of the lineage, not only one.

Arnoud said:

Ah, my bad. Since you often recommended connecting to one of the lineage heads I figured that was the case here as well.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, I have said that many times.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 26th, 2022 at 7:26 AM

Title: Re: Best English Translation of Mulamadhyamikakarika

Content:

Nalanda said:

The Siderits and Katsura one won the Khyentse Foundation prize 2014.

Archie2009 said:

And the authors draw on all four Indian commentaries for their own commentary.

Malcolm wrote:

The Coughlin translation is my preference these days, 'cause Buddhapalita.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 26th, 2022 at 9:19 AM

Title: Re: Relating with war

Content:

Nalanda said:

[Mod note: moved as off topic from the subforum Tibetan Buddhism.

For me, causes and effects are quite clear.

If I keep provoking a bear, poking it with a stick for 20 years, I won't be surprised if it suddenly growls and tries to bite.

I wish we can all just be friends.

reiun said:

Yeah, that free election of Zelensky was quite a 'poke'. . .

Sorry, I don't think I want to be friends with Putin

Malcolm wrote:

Yeah, how dare Ukraine have free elections...the nerve of those people...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 26th, 2022 at 9:25 AM

Title: Re: This One Mind is You

Content:

clyde said:

but these practices are Tibetan Buddhist practices, not Zen.

Malcolm wrote:

Actually, sending and receiving comes from Nagarjuna in the second century,

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 26th, 2022 at 11:17 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 26th, 2022 at 12:57 PM

Title: Re: Best English Translation of Mulamadhyamikakarika

Content:

Shaiksha said:

Ornament of Reason by Mabja Jangchub Tsonдру

I have heard good things about the book and is apparently widely respected and studied by Tibetans. Though, I have not read it myself but this is high on my reading list for the Madhyamaka philosophy.

Malcolm wrote:

It's ok, Coughlin's book is better. Buddhapalita is the definitive commentary on MMK.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 26th, 2022 at 8:15 PM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

You clearly have not read a qualified commentary of the MMK. You have not done your homework. Get back to me when you have read Buddhapalita.

haha said:

You are quite dismissive towards me for not reading Buddhapalita.

Malcolm wrote:

It is not possible to understand MMK without reading Buddhapalita, or, Bocking's translation of the Pingala commentary preserved in Chinese.

haha said:

Studying Nagarjuna's other writings should be considered reading the qualified materials for the MMK.

Malcolm wrote:

Not if you are unable to identify who is saying what to whom in the text, for example, Kalupahana's stillbirth of a translation utterly misconstrues nearly all of MMK because he tried to understand the text without relying on Buddhapalita. You have also misconstrued exactly the same points he did. Therefore, read Buddhapalita and get back to me. You will thank me.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 26th, 2022 at 8:43 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

PeterC said:

Membership in NATO is symbolically important, sure, but if you wanted Ukraine to remain independent, you should have given it weapons...

Malcolm wrote:

Vindman blames Trump:

<https://apple.news/AM8pYTAblRzy5o560t0oogQ>

PeterC said:

Vindman told VICE News on Friday that Trump's decision to withhold the badly needed military aid hurt the country's ability to defend itself—and emboldened Russian President Vladimir Putin. And while Vindman doesn't let President Biden off the hook, he puts much of the blame for Putin's invasion squarely on Trump.

"It's because of Trump's corruption that we have a less capable, less prepared Ukraine," Vindman said.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 26th, 2022 at 9:13 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Maybe accurate?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 26th, 2022 at 11:35 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Norwegian said:

For example, Putin can still withdraw, and claim that he "taught the Ukrainian rebels a lesson" or some bullshit nonsense like that, if that's the spin he wants to put on it, to save face. But if he just keeps going and going, it won't end well (for him).

Svalaksana said:

Thanks for the input on the Norwegian assessment, seems rather on-point.

I too think Putin has painted himself into a corner, although I think he can't even pull off the "lesson to Ukrainian rebels" convincingly even in Russia, no matter how much he might try to push that narrative through the media.

Right now if he retreats or concedes in any way on potential negotiations (ones in which Zelensky will not budge now that the rest of the world backs him), it's an embarrassing defeat since everyone knows he wanted to obliterate the concept of Ukraine altogether. If Putin however goes all the way, it will isolate himself and Russia, leading the nation down the drain. Either way he loses, his reputation is now in the mud and I'm pretty sure this will be the beginning of the end of his reign.

Malcolm wrote:

NATO gets involved now, since the Ukrainians have shown their resolve. When Russians hit the NATO ally resupply transports, it all blows up.

I just watched Poroshenko on CNN for 20 minutes. Yes, I know he is a crook, but at least he is a pro-democracy crook who handed power over to Zelensky peacefully.

Either Putin withdraws, or he faces the prospect of a years long war over territory he cannot afford.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 26th, 2022 at 11:48 PM

Title: Re: This One Mind is You

Content:

Way-Fun said:

You cannot understand your way to realization.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure you can.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 12:37 AM
Title: Re: This One Mind is You
Content:
Way-Fun said:
Can you say more?

Malcolm wrote:
Without understanding, realization isn't possible. MMK 24:8-10

The dharma explained by the Buddha properly relies on two truths:
mundane relative truth and ultimate truth.
One who does not understand the distinction between the two truths will not understand the profound principle of the Buddha's doctrine.
Without relying on convention, the ultimate cannot be explained;
without realizing the ultimate, nirvana cannot be attained.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 12:58 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 1:07 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
Ukrainians last night:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 1:12 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
Unarmed Ukrainians facing down Russian tanks:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 1:55 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Dorje Shedrub said:

Maybe some or many will refuse to fight.

Malcolm wrote:

Quite a few are abandoning their uniforms and APC's, so I have heard.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 1:59 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 2:12 AM

Title: Re: Relating with war

Content:

tobes said:

i.e. assuming one sees this as an unjust war, one might feel certain sentiments when Ukrainian forces have defensive victories, therefore subtly rejoicing in killing, harming etc.

Malcolm wrote:

This is all on Putin.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 2:46 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dorje Shedrub said:

On the other hand, I just saw video of a Russian tank or APC turning out of its way to crush an occupied car...

Malcolm wrote:

That may have been a Ukrainian vehicle, and it is clear the driver actually lost control of it. I don't think it was deliberate.

Dorje Shedrub said:

and also Russian ship firing on an island after the Ukrainian border guards told the ship to go F themselves.

Malcolm wrote:

That happened.

Dorje Shedrub said:

Makes me wonder how the majority of the everyday Russian soldier feels.

Malcolm wrote:

Shitting their pants and wishing they were home.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 3:06 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Ayu said:

No need for expensive deadly weapons then.

Malcolm wrote:

So we wish, but unfortunately, Russia has started a war in Europe they can never win (their economy is too small compared to NATO), and the cost will be terrible for everyone in Europe. But NATO really has no choice. They have to stand together against Putin.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 3:18 AM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

Passing By said:

What is the topic of each of the Seventeen Tantras?

sgra thal 'gyur --> Root Tantra rig pa rang shar --> Explanatory Tantra

yi ge med pa --> Trekcho

sgron ma 'bar ba --> Thogal

What about the rest? Especially Dorsem snying gi melong and mu tig rin po che'i phreng ba since they seem to be mentioned a lot in Longchenpa's Choying Dzo and its autocommentary

Malcolm wrote:

They all have complete presentations of Dzogchen. But you can find summaries of their contents in the Treasury of Philosophical Systems.

There are seven that are the most important: The Sound Tantra, Without Syllables, Blazing Lamp, Introduction Tantra, Blazing Relics, Union of Sun and Moon, and the Beautiful Good Fortune.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 4:00 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dorje Shedrub said:

On the other hand, I just saw video of a Russian tank or APC turning out of its way to crush an occupied car...

Malcolm wrote:

That may have been a Ukrainian vehicle, and it is clear the driver actually lost control of it. I don't think it was deliberate.

Confirmed, it was indeed a Russian vehicle.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 5:02 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 6:37 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

It's kinda hard at this point to tell what is true and what is propaganda.

Malcolm wrote:

Not really.

Dan74 said:

Many people familiar with the history explain how Russia has been treated disgracefully by the US over the past 14 years.

Malcolm wrote:

Nonsense.

Dan74 said:

There needs to be a give-and-take on both sides

Malcolm wrote:

There is no reason for Ukraine to give up anything. Zelensky was duly elected in a democratic fashion, soundly defeating Poroshenko in 2019. Russia has violated Ukraine's borders twice now in the past 8 years. The person who needs to stop or be stopped is Putin.

Dan74 said:

Giving some respect to Russia,

Malcolm wrote:

Putin is the problem, not Russia per se. Putin is a thug and deserves no respect whatsoever. As long as he is in power, Europe is not safe. Putin actually threatened to use nuclear weapons against Europe. You are quite insane if you think that Putin can be reasoned with.

Dan74 said:

like that hapless German admiral recently said, is the way forward and it may well encourage more positive development at home. I think it was no coincidence that NATO aggressive expansion

Malcolm wrote:

NATO did not "aggressively expand." Former republics in the USSR, etc., sought to join NATO of their own accord. They were invited to join NATO in 2002 and 2004, etc. Ukraine sought to join NATO as well. They have a right to join NATO if that is what they choose to do. They are a sovereign nation, not kindergarten children whose parents choose who they can play with.

Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, etc., all joined NATO and the EU because of the net benefit of belonging to Europe and NATO as a whole. The notion that Putin is invading Ukraine to create a buffer between him and NATO is facially absurd, since if he succeeds, he will have two problems he did not have before: 1) he will be occupying a country, supplied with arms from NATO, which will fight him tooth and nail 2) he will have no buffer zone since his border will be a border with NATO.

I know you come from the Ukraine, but are you Ukrainian or Russian? Do tell. I understand that there are Ukrainian Russians who sympathize with Russia and that there are Ukrainian Russians who don't. But Ukraine is not Russia, never has been, and never will be. Russia needs to go home before more of their kids are pushing up sunflowers in a foreign country.

Russia ceasing hostilities, removing their troops, and withdrawing their "recognition" of the separatist regions is the only way this goes well for everyone.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 6:47 AM

Title: Re: This One Mind is You

Content:

clyde said:

Yes, all dharmas are empty and Buddha taught emptiness.

But, except for those fully awakened, we are experiencing appearances (delusions). I have my delusions and you have your delusions which are unique. It is the goal of Buddhism to see through our delusions and experience reality, but until then we are each in our private samsara.

Malcolm wrote:

There are two kinds of delusion, clyde. Delusion concerning the nature of things (for example, believing in svabhāva, self, and so on) and delusion concerning the aspect of things (two moons in the sky). Most of us do not suffer from the latter. All of us suffer from the former.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 9:34 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Queequeg said:

I simply do not see any glimmer of good will on Putin's part. At this point, things are too far gone. Russia will need a change of leadership.

Malcolm wrote:

They've tried, but Putin keeps poisoning his opposition.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 10:04 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

PeterC said:

However bad Putin is, there's going to be a large segment of Russian government/business/citizenry who still think that they need him because the alternative is chaos. And they are to some degree correct. Post-Putin Russia will not be a smooth ride.

What should have happened is that post-Medvedev they should have resisted Putin taking back the presidency. That's when things started to go seriously wrong - when he stopped pretending.

Malcolm wrote:

Not different than the tyrants before him.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 10:08 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

SkyFox said:

Although I don't know much, from my limited understanding, Putin is sick with Parkinson and Cancer. With his illness, age, and stress, I wouldn't be surprised if he has mental health issues. Nothing's worse than a madman who can literally end the world on a whim.

Malcolm wrote:

Whatever else may be wrong with him, he is certainly suffering from paranoia and delusion, and clearly is emotionally unstable.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 9:13 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Ayu said:

Another strangely surrealistic question. Have you read Dan's post to his last question?

amanitamusc said:

Of course. Dan is an apologist for Putty's bad behavior.

Dan74 said:

No. If you actually cared to read what I said, I said multiple times that my posts were about the lead up to the crisis, not this criminal invasion. It's hard to separate the two for many, and the usual pundits are falling over each other to declare it as proof and validation of their rotten behaviour to Russia over all these years.

Many people cheered for the Joker, after all the shit he'd been through, when he went ballistic at those privileged c&#^ts on the train. This is how many Russians are seeing this latest event. What the Joker did was not right, nor is the analogy quite right, the last thing Ukrainians need or deserve is Russian missiles raining on them, but just to make it a little easier to understand:

http://kiis.com.ua/?lang=eng&cat=reports&id=1015&page=1&fbclid=IwAR107dbpt4RZyfbnHNuBOavPi_Weh97xi2PjNmPRu0sxRuAOcFSnRUTpA48

The Russians see the US as the culprit in all this, not the Ukrainians.

Malcolm wrote:

Really? I thought it was neo Nazis, drug addicts, and that elderly billionaire, Soros, that had them rattled.

If any Ukrainian questioned the wisdom of joining NATO before Wed, they don't now.

BTW, Dan, the opinions of one political scientist do not render your statements factual. The fact is that Ukraine is in the process of turning itself into a modern liberal democracy. Putin hates democracy. Those two things are facts.

This is just Putin's Sudetenland move. The sad thing is all those Russian kids he us sending out to the slaughter. They don't deserve it any more than the Ukrainians.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 9:26 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

amanitamusc said:

Of course. Dan is an apologist for Putty's bad behavior.

Dan74 said:

. Sorry if this sounds like gobbledygook to you, or to some others, but in this world, things are rarely black-and-white.

amanitamusc said:

No need to be sorry i am used to it in your posts.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, we are all used to Dan's nuanced opinions. Putin invades Ukraine, Dan wants to pin the blame on the US. Somehow, in Dan's mind, it's all our leadership's fault that Putin feels so bad about himself, that he rigged his election that he murdered, poisoned, and jailed his opposition, and then he had to round up 190k soldiers with thermobaric rockets, cluster bombs, tanks, APCs, etc., and send them to decapitate a sovereign nation next door. And it's all the USA's fault. What a fking joke.

Here is another political scientists point of view, instead faulting the US for being too soft:

Why Is Putin at War Again? Because He Keeps Winning.

<https://www.nytimes.com/2022/02/25/opinion/putin-war-russia-military.html?>

Finally, when Trump praises something, one just knows it's wrong.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 10:27 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Nemo said:

For 30 years many of us in the military have been saying extending NATO East against our explicit promise would cause a military crisis. We pushed for years. This was inevitable. If China wanted to put troops and missiles in Canada no one would spare us a moment of pity. This combined with the endless hypocrisy and racism after the wholesale murder in countless countries by America makes them look utterly ridiculous. Malcolm complaining about thermobaric weapons is especially pathetic. Weapons widely used by US forces in it's illegal occupation of Iraq and used extensively in Fallujah on civilians. Anyone who speaks like an adult is a traitor now. The double standard is so odious. If only resistance fighters in the countries you invaded were treated so well. Your opinion is might makes right. You have zero moral authority.

<https://www.aljazeera.com/news/2022/2/27/western-media-coverage-ukraine-russia-invasion-criticism>

Malcolm wrote:

For the record, I opposed both Iraq wars and Afghanistan.

As for NATO expansion, you are incorrect. There was no such promise at all: The main issue highlighted by the crisis on the Ukraine borders over the past few months has predominantly focused on the role of Nato and the friction over the eastward expansion of the alliance. This has been a constant message emerging from the Kremlin: that the Nato membership of many parts of the old Soviet Bloc, and the prospective membership of Ukraine to the alliance, poses a threat to Russian sovereignty.

But the decision to accept former members of the Warsaw Pact, the defensive alliance which included the USSR and several eastern European countries, is being subject to a revisionist history. This is perpetuating a myth that Nato promised not to expand eastwards after the Soviet Union dissolved.

In 2014, the former Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev marked the 25th anniversary of the fall of the Berlin wall by noting in an interview that that Nato's enlargement "was not discussed at all" at the time:

Not a single Eastern European country raised the issue, not even after the Warsaw Pact ceased to exist in 1991. Western leaders didn't bring it up, either.

There was, he said, no promise not to enlarge the alliance, though in the same interview Gorbachev also stated that he thinks that enlargement was a "big mistake" and "a violation of the spirit of the statements and assurances made" in 1990.

Indeed, the only formal agreement signed between Nato countries and the USSR, before its breakup in December 1991, was the Treaty of Final Settlement with Respect to Germany. The promises made specifically relate to Germany, and the territory of the former GDR, which were on the deployment of non-German Nato forces into eastern Germany and the deployment of nuclear weapons – and these promises have been kept.

<https://theconversation.com/ukraine-the-history-behind-russias-claim-that-nato-promised-not-to-expand-to-the-east-177085>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 10:38 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Jesse said:

When the soviet union fell, the UN basically told Russia they wouldn't expand east any further.

Malcolm wrote:

False.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 10:55 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Jesse said:

When the soviet union fell, the UN basically told Russia they wouldn't expand east any further.

Malcolm wrote:

False.

Jesse said:

Considering it was never codified into law, charter, or treaty it becomes a matter of hearsay, so it's kind of irrelevant. But there are many on both sides arguing that it happened, and that it didn't. Just like every single other argument that results from a non-binding verbal agreement..

Malcolm wrote:

Gorbachev says no promises were made. He was there.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 11:00 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

This is some scary rhetoric indeed. I thought Malcolm was referring to the Russian Foreign Ministry spokeswoman's words after the talk of Finland and Sweden entering Nato. But if you mean these above, I guess it could mean a threat of nuclear. I am not sure. He says, Russia's response will be swift and lead to consequences for you [the meddling powers]. the like of which you have never yet experienced in your history.

Rhetoric? Has he really lost the plot? I sincerely hope not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 11:08 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Jesse said:

Considering it was never codified into law, charter, or treaty it becomes a matter of hearsay, so it's kind of irrelevant. But there are many on both sides arguing that it happened, and that it didn't. Just like every single other argument that results from a non-binding verbal agreement..

Malcolm wrote:

Gorbachev says no promises were made. He was there.

Jesse said:

This may be worth looking at, it contains actual documents from freedom of information requests.

https://nsarchive.gwu.edu/briefing-book/russia-programs/2017-12-12/nato-expansion-what-gorbachev-heard-western-leaders-early#.WjAX9r_XxYI.twitter

Malcolm wrote:

As the article I linked to above points out, promises were made only concerning Germany, promises that have been kept.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 11:11 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 11:23 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Jesse said:

This may be worth looking at, it contains actual documents from freedom of information requests.

https://nsarchive.gwu.edu/briefing-book/russia-programs/2017-12-12/nato-expansion-what-gorbachev-heard-western-leaders-early#.WjAX9r_XxYI.twitter

Malcolm wrote:

As the article I linked to above points out, promises were made only concerning Germany, promises that have been kept.

Jesse said:

The article is dense, but it's highly cited, and provides evidence in the form of photos of documents from the events.

The documents reinforce former CIA Director Robert Gates's criticism of "pressing ahead with expansion of NATO eastward [in the 1990s], when Gorbachev and others were led to believe that wouldn't happen." [1] The key phrase, buttressed by the documents, is "led to believe."

President George H.W. Bush had assured Gorbachev during the Malta summit in December 1989 that the U.S. would not take advantage ("I have not jumped up and down on the Berlin Wall") of the revolutions in Eastern Europe to harm Soviet interests; but neither Bush nor Gorbachev at that point (or for that matter, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl) expected so soon the collapse of East Germany or the speed of German unification. [2]

The first concrete assurances by Western leaders on NATO began on January 31, 1990, when West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher opened the bidding with a major public speech at Tutzing, in Bavaria, on German unification. The U.S. Embassy in Bonn (see Document 1) informed Washington that Genscher made clear "that the changes in Eastern Europe and the German unification process must not lead to an 'impairment of Soviet security interests.' Therefore, NATO should rule out an 'expansion of its territory towards the east, i.e. moving it closer to the Soviet borders.'" The Bonn cable also noted Genscher's proposal to leave the East German territory out of NATO military structures even in a unified Germany in NATO. [3]

This latter idea of special status for the GDR territory was codified in the final German unification treaty signed on September 12, 1990, by the Two-Plus-Four foreign ministers (see Document 25). The former idea about “closer to the Soviet borders” is written down not in treaties but in multiple memoranda of conversation between the Soviets and the highest-level Western interlocutors (Genscher, Kohl, Baker, Gates, Bush, Mitterrand, Thatcher, Major, Woerner, and others) offering assurances throughout 1990 and into 1991 about protecting Soviet security interests and including the USSR in new European security structures. The two issues were related but not the same. Subsequent analysis sometimes conflated the two and argued that the discussion did not involve all of Europe. The documents published below show clearly that it did.

Malcolm wrote:

And NATO didn't take advantage of anything. Nations have to apply to enter NATO. They have to meet certain standards:

https://www.nato.int/nato_static_fl2014/assets/pdf/pdf_2016_07/20160627_1607-factsheet-enlargement-eng.pdf

To join the Alliance, nations are expected to respect the values of the North Atlantic Treaty, and to meet certain political, economic and military criteria, set out in the Alliance's 1995 Study on Enlargement.

In any case, what initially ticked Putin off was Ukraine's move to join the EU in 2014, which is what lead to the invasion of crimea and the removal of Yakunovich by the Ukrainian parliament.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 11:28 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Queequeg said:

Is anyone interested in the question why former Soviet republics and Soviet block nations would want to join NATO? Christ. If your neighbors who know you best, hear all the yelling and plotting coming from your house and feel they need to join a rival gang for their safety... who's the bad guy?

Malcolm wrote:

It's typical “whataboutism.” Putin invades x, but what about Iraq, etc. Condemning Putin's invasion of Ukraine does not automatically mean one supports the neocon policies and wars of the Bush era.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 11:32 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Jesse said:

This entire thing is more complicated than is being portrayed in the news, of course it means very little now that they decided to wage war, and kill civilians, and threaten nuclear war.. Any valid geo-political concerns Russia had ended when they began killing people.

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 27th, 2022 at 11:42 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Jesse said:

By the way, Youtube is blocking/deleting livestreams and videos from the Warfront. Except for from major media organizations (CNN,etc)

Other websites are allowing the videos on. BitChute (An alternative youtube) has alot of videos being live streamed from the front lines, It's alot worse than we are seeing in our news cycles.

Be aware Bitchute is full of paranoid Q-Anon people. However, the platform itself doesnt censor or remove media, so there's alot of good stuff there as well. You can find live streams of current events that break the TOS of bigger platforms like youtube/twitter.

Just mentioning in case anyone wants to see in-depth reporting/video of what's going on moment by moment.

Malcolm wrote:

Too much crazy shit to wade through...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 12:41 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 12:44 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 1:20 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

It's only worth looking at if people care about the facts and being informed.

Malcolm wrote:

There were no promises made by NATO not to admit new nations during the two plus four negotiations that led to The Treaty on the Final Settlement with Respect to Germany.

Even Gorbachev, who in 2008 claimed there were such promises, reversed himself in 2014.

This issue has been lobbied back and forth for years and is not something at all new:

<https://www.csis.org/analysis/twq-myth-no-nato-enlargement-pledge-russia-spring-2009>

In response to a criticism of this article, Kramer writes this:

Most of the primary sources about Soviet perceptions and goals are in Russian. But even if Shiffrinson cannot use Russian sources, a few important items are available in English, including an illuminating interview with former Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in October 2014 that appeared in English translation. Shiffrinson has definitely seen the interview (I sent a copy of it to him in November 2014), but he never cites it directly and instead paraphrases it inaccurately. In the interview, Gorbachev was asked whether the topic of NATO enlargement beyond eastern Germany ever came up during the negotiations in 1990 on German reunification. Gorbachev's response was unequivocal: "The topic of 'NATO expansion' was not discussed at all [in 1990], and it wasn't brought up in those years. I say this with full responsibility. Western leaders didn't bring it up, either."⁵ Instead of citing these comments, Shiffrinson briefly and misleadingly paraphrases Gorbachev as having remarked: "NATO expansion may not have been explicitly discussed in 1990" (p. 13). This cursory paraphrase misrepresents what Gorbachev actually said. The former Soviet leader did not use the equivocal formulation "NATO expansion may not have been explicitly discussed." He said very plainly that NATO expansion "was not discussed at all" and "was not brought up."

<https://muse.jhu.edu/article/667395/pdf>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 1:30 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

And that some people have taken their grievances against this to the extreme and committed terrible crimes, whether the 9/11 terrorists

Malcolm wrote:

Umm, the terrible grievance that led to 9/11 was US troops being stationed on Saudi soil, in case you forgot. Do you even know why Bush actually invaded Iraq the first time? Why Iraq invaded Kuwait which resulted in the first Gulf War?

Personally, I have never supported even one war the US has ever been involved in during my lifetime. I was 29 when the Soviet Union fell.

But blaming all the world's ills on the US foreign policy just fking idiotic.

I never gave much thought to NATO until Trump tried to break it up. You should be really glad he didn't succeed, and that Biden pulled it back together.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 1:33 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

To argue that the West was right to fear Putin and expand NATO is the old self-fulfilling prophesy.

Malcolm wrote:

Actually, the West was right about Putin, and allowing former Warsaw pact nations to join NATO if they chose to was the right thing to do.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 1:46 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Queequeg said:

Is anyone interested in the question why former Soviet republics and Soviet block nations would want to join NATO? Christ. If your neighbors who know you best, hear all the yelling and plotting coming from your house and feel they need to join a rival gang for their safety... who's the bad guy?

No one forced these countries to join NATO. They begged to join NATO. Maybe it was a bad idea to let them in. That's up for debate. But there seems to be a consistent theme underlying all of this... Russia's conduct. Russia should have gotten its shit together decades ago. But instead, a small group of corrupt men stole control of all the resources. That is the genesis of Russia's problem right there.

KristenM said:

And I agree with what Blinken said, i.e. that Ukraine has the right to decide for itself who it wants to ally with. It's not Putin's decision. And judging from Putin's actions, it's clear why Ukraine doesn't want to ally with Russia.

Malcolm wrote:

Of course, but Putin does not believe in democracy at all. He has said so. Why some people defend his feelings here is beyond me, but whatever.

KristenM said:

After all, what caused this crisis in the first place? It's very simple: the overwhelming desire of Ukrainians to live in an open, democratic society. Let us not forget what it was that enraged Putin and led him to invade Ukraine for the first time in 2014. It was not a Ukrainian declaration to seek NATO membership; it was the efforts of the Kyiv government (a pro-Russian government at the time) to finalize an "association agreement" with the European Union. When the president of Ukraine ultimately balked at this deal — under pressure from Russia — he was greeted by massive street protests, and the parliament voted him out of office. That is what triggered Putin's first invasion of Ukraine.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.washingtonpost.com/opinions/2022/02/24/putin-invasion-ukraine-shows-why-liberal-democracy-worth-defending/>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 2:04 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

And that some people have taken their grievances against this to the extreme and committed terrible crimes, whether the 9/11 terrorists

Malcolm wrote:

Umm, the terrible grievance that led to 9/11 was US troops being stationed on Saudi soil, in case you forgot. Do you even know why Bush actually invaded Iraq the first time? Why Iraq invaded Kuwait which resulted in the first Gulf War?

Personally, I have never supported even one war the US has ever been involved in during my lifetime. I was 29 when the Soviet Union fell.

But blaming all the world's ills on the US foreign policy just fking idiotic.

I never gave much thought to NATO until Trump tried to break it up. You should be really glad he didn't succeed, and that Biden pulled it back together.

Crazywisdom said:

Iraq invaded Kuwait for the same reasons Putin is doing. Claiming historical ownership, but just wanting to claim natural resources. That would make gas expensive of course the US had to incinerate them.

Malcolm wrote:

The truth is a little more complicated. Iraq and Kuwait has an agreement about raising oil prices in concert. Kuwait broke that agreement, moreover, they were drilling under Iraq's border, according to Iraq. So what did Iraq do? They raided Kuwait, broke into people's houses and shops, and carried away art, gems, furniture, etc.

Naturally of course the Kuwaiti's were pissed, and then Bush got into it, because he saw a good opportunity to get rid of a former client from his CIA days.

Crazywisdom said:

And just because Al Queda said their reason was infidels on holy land does not mean that was the reason. I spent a lot of time talking with some dudes from Jordan.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, my information about Iraq comes from a reserve officer in the US military from Jordan with whom I worked, who has in the Jordanian army when the first Iraq war happened, who was sent to Iraq when the second Iraq war happened.

It was pretty much the reason. Recall, we had been sending Bin Ladin arms for years during the 80's. He turned on us after the first Gulf war when our troops did not leave Saudi Arabia.

Crazywisdom said:

Wait till the missiles get back to Cuba and Venezuela and see if that righteous position means anything. Geopolitics is a Russian concept of realpolitik.

Malcolm wrote:

That will never happen. Everyone has satellites that can see up a fly's ass from 20 miles above the earth.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 2:10 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

antimissiles in Poland

Malcolm wrote:

Seems like a good idea to me. Putin broke every treaty Russia had with us.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 2:48 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shotenzenjin said:

Some people on this thread sure have rose colored glasses on when it comes to NATO.

It's not like NATO hasn't bombed other countries and all that.....

Oh wait a minute

Malcolm wrote:

No, no rose colored glasses here. But undermining NATO is a pretty stupid idea.

For example, the DSA tried on Twitter to float the idea that the US should pull of NATO, much mockery ensued.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 3:40 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.reuters.com/world/europe/launchpad-russias-assault-ukraine-belarus-holds-referendum-renounce-non-nuclear-2022-02-27/>

Unknown said:

Feb 27 (Reuters) - Protesters took to the streets as Belarus held a referendum on Sunday to adopt a new constitution that would ditch its non-nuclear status at a time when the country has become a launchpad for Russian troops invading Ukraine.

Writing by Matthias Williams; Editing by Alison Williams and Richard Chang

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 3:55 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

For those who do not know, this is Josep Borrell, High Representative of the European Union for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy

3:04 PM EST

Borrell just committed the EU to providing modern jets to Ukraine.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 4:23 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It's clear that Russian soldiers don't want this war either:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 4:42 AM

Title: Re: Is Sadhguru enlightened?

Content:

Archie2009 said:

Hard to understand the attraction, frankly.

Malcolm wrote:

Access to other teachers and programs where serious Dzogchen teachings were being taught in a very comprehensive and detailed way by those other teachers. That was the attraction.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 4:54 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It's clear that Russian soldiers don't want this war either:

SkyFox said:

Nobody, except Putin and his buddies, wants this war. Many Russians have friends and family in Ukraine. There are videos of Russian soldiers crying; some got tricked into thinking it was only a military exercise, which is very sad.

Malcolm wrote:

Lets all hope the enlisted kids decided to revolt.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 5:04 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Twitter translation:

"In total, our submarines are capable of launching more than half a thousand nuclear warheads, which is guaranteed to destroy the countries of the United States and NATO in addition. This is according to the principle: why do we need peace if there is no Russia in it"

Fcking unhinged.

Russian responses to state tv:

Unknown said:

Does this motherfker know that the US will kind of retaliate and destroy us all to hell?

Does he think he will sit out in a bunker with his adored leader?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 5:47 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

The guy is a journalist and commentator, btw. An idiot.

Malcolm wrote:

I understood that, and thanks for the nuance in the translation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 6:09 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dorje Shedrub said:

https://news.google.com/articles/CAliElacUyElHDe911LjeEBUkZUqGQgEKhAIACoHCAowjailCzDQsr0DMK_uigc?uo=CAUiANIBAA&hl=en-US&gl=US&ceid=US%3Aen

Times of Israel reports that Ukrainian forces have destroyed convoy of over 50 Chechnyan tanks and killed a general. The Chechnyan national guard convoy was tasked with search and destroy of Ukrainian leaders portrayed on decks of cards.

Shotenzenjin said:

Portrayed on decks of cards. Where have we seen that before? A NATO country perhaps.....

If it works and all that ...

Malcolm wrote:

Quit complaining about what the US did then, we all know it sucked. Focus on what fcking Putin is doing now.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 6:31 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shinjin said:

You can thank Biden for what is going on right now.

Malcolm wrote:

Ummm no, you can thank Trump. You do remember why he was impeached the first time, right?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 6:58 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shinjin said:

You can thank Biden for what is going on right now.

Malcolm wrote:

Ummm no, you can thank Trump. You do remember why he was impeached the first time, right?

Shinjin said:

Jesus Christ we are still talking about Trump. He isn't president anymore. Biden is. The man who has the power to do something right now is Biden.

The right-wing talking point that Biden is weak and inept and therefore emboldened Putin to invade Ukraine is belied by the united front the western world is presenting. After the former president tried to weaken NATO and even discussed withdrawing from the treaty, Biden and Secretary of State Antony Blinken have managed to strengthen the alliance again. They have brought the G7 (the seven wealthiest liberal democracies), the European Union, and other partners and allies behind extraordinary economic sanctions, acting in concert to make those sanctions much stronger than any one country could impose.

They have managed to get Germany behind stopping the certification of Nord Stream 2, the gas pipeline from Russia to Germany that would have tied Europe more closely to Russia, and in what Marcel Dirsus, a German political scientist and fellow at the Institute for Security Policy at Kiel University, told the Washington Post was possibly “one of the biggest shifts in German foreign policy since World War II,” Germany is now sending weapons to Ukraine and has agreed to impose economic sanctions.

Biden has facilitated this extraordinary international cooperation quietly, letting European leaders take credit for the measures his own administration has advocated. It is a major shift from the U.S.’s previous periods of unilateralism and militarism, and appears to be far more effective.

Malcolm wrote:

https://heathercoxrichardson.substack.com/p/february-26-2022?r=62xtc&utm_campaign=post&utm_medium=email

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 7:16 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 7:19 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 7:23 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 9:26 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 11:09 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

It's sad, but I find it hard to disagree with him.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

The US isn't an empire and never has been. Pirates maybe, but not an empire.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 8:21 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

More like robber barons than pirates, applying the Randian might-is-right, winner-takes-all (un)principles to foreign relations?

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

Have you forgotten the Marshall Plan? You know, the one that helped rebuild Germany, Japan, and Italy?

We are certainly not angels, and in our history, like yours, there are terrible crimes of colonialism, and huge blunders like the post 9/11 wars, but at least our nation, like yours, aspires to assist others in setting up democracies. And after all, the democracy you enjoy today really is courtesy of the American revolution.

Ironically, Putin has succeeded in the one thing he feared, a stronger NATO bloc. Even the Germans decided to get strapped. And who can blame them?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 9:03 PM

Title: Re: Ethical impact on defense against the Russian Invasion in Ukraine

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

If someone has a gun and is trying to kill you, it would be reasonable to shoot back with your own gun.

—— HH Dalai Lama, Seattle Times, May 15, 2001.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 9:42 PM

Title: Re: Is Sadhguru enlightened?

Content:

Aemilius said:

Buddha has also pointed out that it is difficult to know another person, whether he is enlightened or not.

Malcolm wrote:

He also excluded the possibility of awakening outside of his dharma and vinaya.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 9:49 PM

Title: Re: Ethical impact on defense against the Russian Invasion in Ukraine

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

If someone has a gun and is trying to kill you, it would be reasonable to shoot back with your own gun.

— HH Dalai Lama, Seattle Times, May 15, 2001.

seeker242 said:

The rest of that quote.

Not at the head, where a fatal wound might result. But at some other body part, such as a leg.

I want to make it clear, however, that although I am deeply opposed to war, I am not advocating appeasement. It is often necessary to take a strong stand to counter unjust aggression. For instance, it is plain to all of us that the Second World War was entirely justified. It "saved civilization" from the tyranny of Nazi Germany, as Winston Churchill so aptly put it. In my view, the Korean War was also just, since it gave South Korea the chance of gradually developing democracy. But we can only judge whether or not a conflict was vindicated on moral grounds with hindsight. For example, we can now see that during the Cold War, the principle of nuclear deterrence had a certain value. Nevertheless, it is very difficult to assess all such matters with any degree of accuracy. War is violence and violence is unpredictable. Therefore, it is better to avoid it if possible, and never to presume that we know beforehand whether the outcome of a particular war will be beneficial or not.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.dalailama.com/messages/world-peace/the-reality-of-war>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 9:58 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

This strident stance by the West may be good to get the war to end,

Malcolm wrote:

Strident? How about "freaked out."

Dan74 said:

but in order to find a lasting peaceful settlement, it needs to show a flexibility to accommodate Russia's concerns, otherwise, I fear, we are heading to a far worse conflict. This isn't 1939.

Malcolm wrote:

Putin has never had a right to dictate to anyone anything outside Russian borders. If he wants security, he should cease his hostile posturing towards Europe.

It's very telling that you are acting as an apologist for another fascist.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 10:10 PM

Title: Re: Ethical impact on defense against the Russian Invasion in Ukraine

Content:

seeker242 said:

The rest of that quote.

I want to make it clear, however, that although I am deeply opposed to war, I am not advocating appeasement. It is often necessary to take a strong stand to counter unjust aggression. For instance, it is plain to all of us that the Second World War was entirely justified. It "saved civilization" from the tyranny of Nazi Germany, as Winston Churchill so aptly put it. In my view, the Korean War was also just, since it gave South Korea the chance of gradually developing democracy. But we can only judge whether or not a conflict was vindicated on moral grounds with hindsight. For example, we can now see that during the Cold War, the principle of nuclear deterrence had a certain value. Nevertheless, it is very difficult to assess all such matters with any degree of accuracy. War is violence and violence is unpredictable. Therefore, it is better to avoid it if possible, and never to presume that we know beforehand whether the outcome of a particular war will be beneficial or not.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.dalailama.com/messages/world-peace/the-reality-of-war>

seeker242 said:

And at the same time, if he had the opportunity himself, I doubt very much he himself would go pick up a gun and go off to kill nazis.

Malcolm wrote:

No, he would have performed an abhicarya rite while sending his soldiers off to defend his country.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 10:30 PM

Title: Re: Ethical impact on defense against the Russian Invasion in Ukraine

Content:

seeker242 said:

And at the same time, if he had the opportunity himself, I doubt very much he himself would go pick up a gun and go off to kill nazis.

Malcolm wrote:

No, he would have performed an abhicarya rite while sending his soldiers off to defend his country.

seeker242 said:

If they met the criteria for such a rite, and one could easily argue nazis did not. Russians invading Ukraine certainly don't.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't think you really understand what the criteria of such rites are.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 10:45 PM

Title: Re: Ethical impact on defense against the Russian Invasion in Ukraine

Content:

seeker242 said:

If they met the criteria for such a rite, and one could easily argue nazis did not. Russians invading Ukraine certainly don't.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't think you really understand what the criteria of such rites are.

seeker242 said:

And I think you know full well that Russians invading Ukraine don't meet the criteria

Malcolm wrote:

Of course they don't, they are innocent kids. Their leader on the other hand, that's a different question.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 28th, 2022 at 10:52 PM

Title: Re: Ethical impact on defense against the Russian Invasion in Ukraine

Content:

seeker242 said:

And I think you know full well that Russians invading Ukraine don't meet the criteria

Malcolm wrote:

Of course they don't, they are innocent kids. Their leader on the other hand, that's a different question.

seeker242 said:

Quite a stretch to say that people killing other people are innocent

Malcolm wrote:

They have no choice. They've been sent into a hostile country as conscripts.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 12:02 AM

Title: Re: Ethical impact on defense against the Russian Invasion in Ukraine

Content:

seeker242 said:

Yes that's true they were taken by surprise some Russian soldiers even said things like "we didn't know we were going to be killing anyone". But if you pull the trigger and someone dies, well that means you're not innocent. The fact that you might be tortured if you don't, doesn't automatically make you innocent.

Malcolm wrote:

A perfect karma requires four things: object, intention, act, and satisfaction.

We cannot know what is going on in anyone's mind. But I doubt highly that any of those kids are happy they have to pull triggers, or that they are satisfied and happy to be pawns in Putin's war.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 12:06 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Nemo said:

Americans have finalized their divorce from reality.

Malcolm wrote:

You lost all credibility when you defended China's treatment of the Uyghurs.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 12:15 AM

Title: Re: Ethical impact on defense against the Russian Invasion in Ukraine

Content:

seeker242 said:

Yes that's true they were taken by surprise some Russian soldiers even said things like "we didn't know we were going to be killing anyone". But if you pull the trigger and someone dies, well that means you're not innocent. The fact that you might be tortured if you don't, doesn't automatically make you innocent.

Malcolm wrote:

A perfect karma requires four things: object, intention, act, and satisfaction.

We cannot know what is going on in anyone's mind. But I doubt highly that any of those kids are happy they have to pull triggers, or that they are satisfied and happy to be pawns in Putin's war.

seeker242 said:

Perfect karma is not required in order to be not innocent.

Malcolm wrote:

Depends on what you mean by "innocent." If you mean that karma is unerring, then no sentient being is innocent, not even staunch vegans, who knows what horrible crimes we have all committed in the past.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 12:22 AM

Title: Re: Ethical impact on defense against the Russian Invasion in Ukraine

Content:

seeker242 said:

To think that the soldiers pulling the trigger are just as innocent as the civilians being killed, that makes no reasonable sense at all

Malcolm wrote:

Clearly we are using the word in a different sense.

You are using the term in this sense:

: free from legal guilt or fault

Here is the sense I am using:

: a naïve, inexperienced, or unsophisticated person

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 1:36 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

As the saying goes, if I had a penny every time your implied or outright said that I was a fascist..

Malcolm wrote:

Dan, you've been apologizing for Putin for weeks now. The only tune we've heard from you is that "Russia's security concerns ought to be respected...", "Putin has been humiliated by the West...", etc.

I don't happen to generally agree with "realists" like Mearsheimer, or their left-wing counterparts like Chomsky, etc. They do not offer realistic solutions.

I generally agree more with https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/John_Ikenberry, those who defend liberal internationalism, and so on. Ikenberry's World Safe For Democracy is a must read, if one cares about things like geopolitics.

And if you like both-sidism:

http://eprints.lse.ac.uk/111899/1/ogab020_1_.pdf

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 2:15 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 2:26 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

This strident stance by the West may be good to get the war to end, but in order to find a lasting peaceful settlement, it needs to show a flexibility to accommodate Russia's concerns, otherwise, I fear, we are heading to a far worse conflict. This isn't 1939.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 2:30 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shinjin said:

These morons couldn't sort it all out and send an invitation to Ukraine to join NATO before all this happened? They had to wait until they were finally attacked?

Malcolm wrote:

Ukraine was stymied in its application for EU membership in 2014 by the Russian "annexation" of Crimea, or didn't you remember that part?

One just doesn't join the EU overnight. It is a process, and there are conditions for entry.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 3:02 AM

Title: Re: Ethical impact on defense against the Russian Invasion in Ukraine

Content:

seeker242 said:

To think that the soldiers pulling the trigger are just as innocent as the civilians being killed, that makes no reasonable sense at all

Malcolm wrote:

Clearly we are using the word in a different sense.

You are using the term in this sense:

: free from legal guilt or fault

Here is the sense I am using:

: a naïve, inexperienced, or unsophisticated person

seeker242 said:

I don't think any of them are naïve when it comes to what's going to kill a person. All of them know full well what's gonna happen when you start dropping bombs on people. Nobody is so unsophisticated to not know the consequences of that, except for perhaps a mentally disabled person. Naïve of politics etc. sure, naïve of what's going to kill people certainly not

Malcolm wrote:

Sigh, all of those kids are conscripts, not volunteers. They are just canon fodder. But I guess you'd rather be all Yama, judge of the dead. Fine. Go for it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 3:37 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

It is worth emphasising that Mearsheimer said that before the invasion. Pretty much everything I've been saying too refers to the crisis before the invasion. You seem to be intent on confounding the two.

For years talking about the allied war crimes in WW2 would subject one to accusations of being a cryptonazi, Hitler apologist etc. We are past that now. People like Kurt Vonnegut help make it acceptable. And you know, he was not a Nazi.

What I say is not about excusing the invasion, but helping understand how the crisis arose in the first place. The facile approach is to just chant the mantra Putin=Bad=Mad and be content with it. It's easy and clear. But it's not the truth. Well, I don't know, maybe now he has gone mad, but up until the invasion, most his foreign policy did make sense.

Malcolm wrote:

Dan, you have stated quite plainly that you feel that Putin's 2014 and 2022 invasions of the Ukraine are clearly just a response to how unfairly Putin has been treated by the West. You have marshaled the opinions of American political scientists in defense of your point of view. There are other American political scientists who disagree with this point of view. You've thrown shade on Ukrainian corruption, and conflated Ukraine's desire to be admitted to the EU with NATO membership. You've argued that NATO "broke" its promises to Russia, when its quite debatable that this is the case.

In short, you've pretty much sided with Russia entirely. That's fine, but Putin is a fascist, like his asset in Florida, and the entire MAGA wing of the GOP.

You may not think the "Liberal Hegemony" led by the US is a good thing. I happen to think it is a very good thing, and find it a preferable world order to the kind of world order envisioned by Putin, Xi, and the rest.

It's the start of the water tiger year tomorrow, and tiger years are always marked by a lot of upheaval.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 3:46 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

A debate in 2/16/2021 between Professor John J. Mearsheimer, Professor Beate Jahn and Professor G. John Ikenberry

<https://www.lse.ac.uk/lse-player?id=168d8077-b7df-4eea-92c3-2767407d02b0>

This event will debate the crisis of the liberal order: is the cause of the crisis liberalism itself, or does it have as much to do with Trump and the rise of populism as anything else?

Explore the clash between liberalism and realism

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 3:49 AM

Title: Re: Ethical impact on defense against the Russian Invasion in Ukraine

Content:

seeker242 said:

conscript or not doesn't change anything...

Malcolm wrote:

Sure it does.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 4:19 AM

Title: Re: Ethical impact on defense against the Russian Invasion in Ukraine

Content:

seeker242 said:

conscript or not doesn't change anything...

Malcolm wrote:

Sure it does.

seeker242 said:

Nope. It's still killing regardless and killing is not innocent the only way it could be is if you accidentally press the button...

Malcolm wrote:

Or if you take no satisfaction in it, are not driven by hatred as a motivation, etc.

You have a very simplistic view of karma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 4:33 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Toenail said:

There is no room for defending Putin at all. Nothing justifies murdering political opponents using poison and starting a war. People want freedom and have had enough of Russia sucking them dry like a big fat leech. Every country around Russia is afraid of Putin. That is because he is a psychopath who is also a dictator and has a huge military and who is not hesitating to kill civilians. I think it was Gampopa saying that sometimes you have to beat women and children so that they listen. I am not saying that but when I read stupid shit like this I want to slap sense into ignorance I am not going to lie. Putin is not only a psychopath who starts a war and then threatens nuclear war when faced with economical sanctions he is also an idiot who has not even managed to achieve what he tried to do. He basically started cold war all over again but Russia is nowhere near as strong or relevant in the whole scale as it was back in soviet times, so he frak up big time. He will get frak badly and Europe will wake up again. Germany just pledged a 100 billion this year alone and Putin will have strapped up NATO on all borders except China. Now tell me that is what he would have wanted to achieve. The situation is very bad and sad. I cried yesterday.

Malcolm wrote:

And this is the guy that is going to beat him:

It must enrage Putin.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 4:38 AM

Title: Re: Ethical impact on defense against the Russian Invasion in Ukraine

Content:

seeker242 said:

Nope. It's still killing regardless and killing is not innocent the only way it could be is if you accidentally press the button...

Malcolm wrote:

Or if you take no satisfaction in it, are not driven by hatred as a motivation, etc.

You have a very simplistic view of karma.

seeker242 said:

You have a very convoluted idea of what innocent means.

Malcolm wrote:

I explained what I meant by "innocent." But I am not hung up on a guilt/innocence trip.

You really ought to study the Kośabhaṣyaṃ, karma chapter. In order for a karma to ripen, it necessarily needs four things. If any of them are missing, it is not a perfect karma.

But we know that everyone killed fighting in a battle goes to hell. So I feel sorry for all them. Especially the naive kids that though no fault of their own were sent without their knowledge into a war not of their making or desire.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 5:03 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

Countries have a right to choose their alliances.

Malcolm wrote:

You either agree with this, or you don't. If you don't, whether you intend to or not, you side authoritarians who view the world through the lens of spheres of influence and power, rather than self-determination and democracy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 5:13 AM

Title: Re: Ethical impact on defense against the Russian Invasion in Ukraine

Content:

seeker242 said:

Of course one feels sorry for them but the idea that people who are dropping bombs on other people are innocent, is quite frankly downright ridiculous.

Malcolm wrote:

FFS, I never said they were innocent in the sense of being innocent of an act of killing. I said they were innocent in the sense that this war is not of their making.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 5:49 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

I guess JFK was "an authoritarian who view[ed] the world through the lens of spheres of influence and power", since he didn't agree with Cuba aligning itself with the USSR and allowing Soviet missiles on its land.

Malcolm wrote:

You brought this up before, yawn.

Your comparison is inept. These days, missiles are intercontinental. The ability for the US and Russia to obliterate each other in a nuclear war does not depend on proximity.

The Ukraine wishing to join the EU is not the same as the Russia parking nukes in Cuba.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 5:54 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

You know, Malcolm, I'd rather Ukraine carve out a good future and a prosperous life for its citizens, rather than being a pawn in the US-Russian games. Finland and Sweden did just fine out of Nato, as have we here in Switzerland, thank you very much. I don't think Ukrainian people dearly want the US bases on their soil, provided they have other security guarantees. It's the curse of their geography, their divided history that led them being the plaything in this tug-o-war between these two cursed empires.

Malcolm wrote:

The US is not a cursed empire. It's not an empire. It is however the leader of a hegemony of liberal, democratic states, a hegemony that Estonia, Poland, Hungary, Bulgaria, Romania, Czech Republic, Latvia, Lithuania, Turkey, Ukraine, etc., have seen the economic and social advantages of being a part, and have, collectively, the largest world economy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 6:09 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I don't really see a huge moral distinction between this, and say when GWB claimed Iraq had weapons of mass destruction.

A huge, much more impactful act of aggression in terms of Geopolitical consequences for sure, but morally? Seems to be pretty equivalent.

Malcolm wrote:

Iraq did have weapons of mass destruction, ie. large stocks of sarin gas, etc, and Hussein most certainly wanted people to believe he had them.

The problem with the second Iraq war was Cheney's total paranoia and persistent delusion (even to this day) that Hussein really had such weapons. When GWB found out that Cheney was deluded about that, GWB iced Cheney completely. GWB is not the sharpest tool in the shed, but he also didn't like being played for a fool by Wolfowitz, Cheney, and Rumsfeld, who had all started their careers under Nixon together.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 6:14 AM

Title: Re: Ethical impact on defense against the Russian Invasion in Ukraine

Content:

seeker242 said:

Of course one feels sorry for them but the idea that people who are dropping bombs on other people are innocent, is quite frankly downright ridiculous.

Malcolm wrote:

FFS, I never said they were innocent in the sense of being innocent of an act of killing. I said they were innocent in the sense that this war is not of their making.

seeker242 said:

It's obvious that it's not a war of their making. Nobody ever claimed it was. Nobody is blaming them for starting a war. They are blamed for carrying it out.

Malcolm wrote:

Go ahead and blame away. Karma just isn't a simple transaction: do a, b happens.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 6:36 AM

Title: Re: Tibetan typing programs

Content:

Archie2009 said:

I would also like to be able to type in uchen script on my iMac. At the moment I type online in wylie into the <https://www.thlib.org/reference/dictionaries/tibetan-dictionary/translate.php> and copy/paste into RTF text files and subsequently between text files.

Malcolm wrote:

There is a wylie keyboard in the Mac software.

Open Keyboard preferences, select wylie.

You will switch back and forth with command + space bar.

Image 2-28-22 at 5.35 PM.jpg (80.25 KiB) Viewed 2213 times

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 6:42 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 6:54 AM

Title: Re: Ethical impact on defense against the Russian Invasion in Ukraine

Content:

seeker242 said:

It's obvious that it's not a war of their making. Nobody ever claimed it was. Nobody is blaming them for starting a war. They are blamed for carrying it out.

Malcolm wrote:

Go ahead and blame away. Karma just isn't a simple transaction: do a, b happens.

seeker242 said:

And who claimed it was? Yea, nobody....again...

Malcolm wrote:

Your notion of "guilt/innocence" is telling. Are lions "guilty" of killing their prey? Anyway, this is off topic.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 8:01 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

I guess what Malcolm and Co refuse to understand is that trying to trace the genesis of the crisis (from different sides) is vitally important

Malcolm wrote:

We have different understandings of the etiology of this crisis. Neither of us has special or privileged knowledge, so in the end, it boils down to fact that we have different values and different perspectives based on those values. Unlike you, I am a fan of the American-led liberal hegemony, and think it is superior to the type of world Putin and Xi would usher in, if they could.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 8:38 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

... One also needs to understand how the other side sees the situation, in order to negotiate. ...

Kim O'Hara said:

I think this is one of the things we're missing on the NATO side, and particularly from the US.

Someone has already mentioned the Cuban crisis as a parallel, and I think it's a good one.

Malcolm wrote:

It is not a good one, it's a facile comparison. 1) no one is parking nuclear weapons in Ukraine. 2) Ukraine initially asked to join the EU, not NATO. 3) It was only after Putin illegally annexed Crimea in 2014 and moved mercenaries into Eastern Ukraine, creating a civil war there, that Ukraine began the democratic process of passing legislation to join NATO in 2017.

Two take aways: Ukraine will wind up in the EU and NATO. It is now a certainty.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 8:42 AM

Title: Re: Tibetan typing programs

Content:

Archie2009 said:

I would also like to be able to type in uchen script on my iMac. At the moment I type online in wylie into the <https://www.thlib.org/reference/dictionaries/tibetan-dictionary/translate.php> and copy/paste into RTF text files and subsequently between text files.

Malcolm wrote:

There is a wylie keyboard in the Mac software.

Open Keyboard preferences, select wylie.

You will switch back and forth with command + space bar.

Image 2-28-22 at 5.35 PM.jpg

Archie2009 said:

Thank you, that worked. Only command + space bar opens Spotlight Search on macOS Monterey. Control + space switches between input sources.

Malcolm wrote:

You have to change the command.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 8:45 AM

Title: Re: Ethical impact on defense against the Russian Invasion in Ukraine

Content:

seeker242 said:

And who claimed it was? Yea, nobody....again...

Malcolm wrote:

Your notion of "guilt/innocence" is telling. Are lions "guilty" of killing their prey? Anyway, this is off topic.

seeker242 said:

No,

Malcolm wrote:

You have no understanding of karma. A lion killing it's prey is no different than one human being shooting another. Karma is karma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 8:52 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

... One also needs to understand how the other side sees the situation, in order to negotiate. ...

Kim O'Hara said:

I think this is one of the things we're missing on the NATO side, and particularly from the US.

Someone has already mentioned the Cuban crisis as a parallel, and I think it's a good one. An updated hypothetical parallel would be a Chinese offer of economic aid to Mexico, accompanied by, say, 10 000 troops, a naval base or two, and an airfield. How would the US react to that?

Kim

PeterC said:

What everyone forgets about Cuba was that stationing the missiles there was a response to the US putting short-range missiles in Turkey. The US instigated that conflict.

We can, with Ukraine, debate endlessly who is “responsible” in a causative sense, and that does matter, but we are where we are, and we need to find the least bad destination for this. Right now that clearly does not involve a broadening of the conflict or a return to the prior status quo, unfortunately

Malcolm wrote:

Correct:

To reinforce Western interests, President Eisenhower secured the unanimous approval of NATO states to position intermediate-range ballistic missiles (IRBMs) in Europe, but only Britain, Italy, and Turkey actually agreed to host the weapons. In October 1959, it was arranged to place fifteen Jupiter IRBMs in Turkey, with the Turkish government agreeing to keep the armaments sovereign to the US and to keep the negotiations and acceptance of the missiles secret from the Turkish nation.⁵

Earlier that year, Eisenhower predicted that positioning warheads near the USSR could cause a backlash and that “If Mexico or Cuba . . . began getting arms and missiles from [the Soviets], we would be bound to look on such developments with the gravest concern and . . . it would be imperative for us to take . . . even offensive military action.”⁶ John F. Kennedy, who took over the operation upon his 1961 inauguration, shared these concerns. He believed the Soviets would use the Turkish IRBMs to justify arming Cuba—if Turkey could attack across the Black Sea for the US, Cuba could attack across the Gulf of Mexico for the USSR—so, three months before the crisis, he urged US officials to see what needed to be done to remove the missiles, telling Undersecretary of State George Ball to progress the issue. However, Ball, after discussing the issue with the Turkish ambassador, allied with other State Department officials and decided to not try to remove the missiles so as to preserve US-Turkish relations.⁷

<https://digitalcommons.northgeorgia.edu/cgi/viewcontent.cgi?article=1218&context=isr>

When whole situation is reviewed, it is shown that Kennedy exercised incredible restraint.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 9:18 AM

Title: Re: Ethical impact on defense against the Russian Invasion in Ukraine

Content:

seeker242 said:

No,

Malcolm wrote:

You have no understanding of karma. A lion killing it's prey is no different than one human being shooting another. Karma is karma.

seeker242 said:

You have no understanding of what common usage of words mean apparently...But go ahead and keep trying to say that people bombing other people aren't guilty...As that is such a reasonable thing to argue...No really, it is.

Malcolm wrote:

Now you are twisting my words. That's dishonest. We're done here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 9:30 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Similarly, if NATO expansion really is part of what is at issue, we have to face that and ask what the right way to proceed is.

Malcolm wrote:

NATO is not a golf club. Ukraine has a right to join it. They've voted on it in their parliament. It would absolutely hypocritical not to admit them. The Ukrainian people have unequivocally made their will clear through their own democratic process. For their trouble, they have had a proxy war waged against them for the past eight years, which has now turned into an actual war. So, it's just not up to Putin. It's only up to the Ukrainian people.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 9:15 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Queequeg said:

US did not invade Cuba. Just saying.

In other news... Seeing the response of the Social Democrats, I'm done considering them a viable caucus in the US. They're in the same wastebasket as the Greens as far as I'm concerned.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, they're idiots, like the Green Party, USA.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 9:31 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

I think this is one of the things we're missing on the NATO side, and particularly from the US.

Someone has already mentioned the Cuban crisis as a parallel, and I think it's a good one.

Malcolm wrote:

It is not a good one, it's a facile comparison. 1) no one is parking nuclear weapons in Ukraine. 2) Ukraine initially asked to join the EU, not NATO. 3) It was only after Putin illegally annexed Crimea in 2014 and moved mercenaries into Eastern Ukraine, creating a civil war there, that Ukraine began the democratic process of passing legislation to join NATO in 2017.

Two take aways: Ukraine will wind up in the EU and NATO. It is now a certainty.

Dan74 said:

Dubya announced that the Ukraine would join Nato in 2008.

<https://www.reuters.com/article/us-nato-ukraine-bush-idUSL0141706220080401>

Who exactly is arguing for Putin and against Western liberal order here? Criticising the US foreign policy does not mean one is a Putin fanboy. Do I even have to say this??

The difference between us is not our values, I think, Malcolm. It's our reading (or ignoring) of the facts.

Malcolm wrote:

Again, Dan, no one just "joins" NATO. GWB declaring that he thinks Ukraine should join NATO if they so choose is not even a formal invitation. So yes, Ukraine began the process of MAP in 2008, but shelved it in 2010 under Yanukovich. After 2014, of course it became clear it was necessary for Ukraine to be a part of NATO, and in 2019, the goal of membership in NATO and EU was written into the preamble of the Ukrainian constitution, in order to remove the capriciousness of individual presidents.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 9:45 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

In any case, when it comes to domestic opinion, Russians are sold on the notion that Nato has been more and more belligerent to Russia and moving into Ukraine would be an existential threat.

Malcolm wrote:

An existential threat to Putin's ambitions, definitely, but not Russia itself.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 10:35 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

KristenM said:

But keep thinking that the US has some grand plan to take over Russia, meanwhile going on and on about how the US is a crumbling empire. Make up your mind.

Malcolm wrote:

But her emails!!!

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 11:12 PM

Title: Re: Tibetan typing programs

Content:

Archie2009 said:

Thank you, that worked. Only command + space bar opens Spotlight Search on macOS Monterey. Control + space switches between input sources.

Malcolm wrote:

You have to change the command.

Archie2009 said:

What is your preferred Tibetan font? Or is that choice dictated by your occupation as translator? I use Kailasa.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't translate sadhanas, so I have little need for a specific font, that said, yes, I tend to use Kailash when I do.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 11:15 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 11:24 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Queequeg said:

Sigh. Well, I guess it was an American's fault, to an extent. But Russians lacked the competent leadership, also, who could have actively steered the country as these distortions emerged.

The human and natural resources the Soviet Union had could have served it well. But then, I suppose we're seeing yet another example of why economies need to evolve gradually.

PeterC said:

That's an interesting observation. I suppose there is moral responsibility implicit in the causality, but ultimately though the causality is very important. it doesn't really matter much who is morally responsible. We have this situation and we have to deal with it, turning that into a moral question tends to make that process harder. The historians will be still picking over who was right and wrong centuries from now.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.politico.com/news/magazine/2022/02/28/world-war-iii-already-there-00012340>

"Sadly, we are treading back through old historical patterns that we said that we would never permit to happen again," Hill told me.

Those old historical patterns include Western businesses who fail to see how they help build a tyrant's war chest, admirers enamored of an autocrat's "strength" and politicians' tendency to point fingers inward for political gain instead of working together for their nation's security.

But at the same time, Hill says it's not too late to turn Putin back, and it's a job not just for the Ukrainians or for NATO — it's a job that ordinary Westerners and companies can assist in important ways once they grasp what's at stake.

"Ukraine has become the front line in a struggle, not just between democracies and autocracies but in a struggle for maintaining a rules-based system in which the things that countries want are not taken by force," Hill said. "Every country in the world should be paying close attention to this."

...

Hill: You totally see it. Unfortunately, we have politicians and public figures in the United States and around Europe who have embraced the idea that Russia was wronged by NATO and that Putin is a strong, powerful man and has the right to do what he's doing: Because Ukraine is somehow not worthy of independence, because it's either Russia's historical lands or Ukrainians are Russians, or the Ukrainian leaders are — this is what Putin says — "drug addled, fascist Nazis" or whatever labels he wants to apply here.

So sadly, we are treading back through old historical patterns that we said that we would never permit to happen again. The other thing to think about in this larger historic context is how much the German business community helped facilitate the rise of Hitler. Right now, everyone who has been doing business in Russia or buying Russian gas and oil has contributed to Putin's war chest. Our investments are not just boosting business profits, or Russia's sovereign wealth funds and its longer-term development. They now are literally the fuel for Russia's invasion of Ukraine.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 11:30 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shinjin said:

Biden is a disgrace. Why doesn't he impose sanctions on russian oil and gas? That will hurt putin big time.

Malcolm wrote:

You don't play all your cards at once in international poker.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 11:46 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shinjin said:

Biden is a disgrace. Why doesn't he impose sanctions on russian oil and gas? That will hurt putin big time.

Malcolm wrote:

You don't play all your cards at once in international poker.

Shinjin said:

By the time he does (if he does) it will be too late for Ukraine.

Malcolm wrote:

He also has US markets to think about. The DOW as of now is down 424 points again to 33,468 as of 10:41 am. Oil finished over $100 a barrel yesterday.

This is not the Gunfight at the OK Corral, but you seem to treat it as if it were just as simple as "Let's crash the world economy to punish Putin."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 11:51 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 1st, 2022 at 11:55 PM

Title: Re: Is Sadhguru enlightened?

Content:

Aemilius said:

It is true and not true. Buddha has also put it in a circular fashion: Only the Noble eight-fold path leads to liberation. If a method leads to liberation it must have the limbs of the Noble eightfold path. We know that a path is the right path, if it produces the genuine result. But who can say that "this is the right result, all other results are wrong"?

Malcolm wrote:

There is only one right result: freedom from the afflictions that cause rebirth. This comes from the only right view: dependent origination.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 2nd, 2022 at 12:18 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shinjin said:

Economy already was starting to go to hell under Biden long before this war started.

Malcolm wrote:

That is simply inaccurate. For example:

<https://www.bloomberg.com/opinion/articles/2021-12-20/president-biden-s-economic-performance-has-proved-unbeatable>

<https://www.usnews.com/news/politics/articles/2022-02-04/bidens-economy-strengthens-upon-further-review>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 2nd, 2022 at 12:29 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dorje Shedrub said:

DW reports that there is a Russian military convoy 60 kilometers long in route to Kyiv. Russia announces that they will bomb Kyiv. They have already used cluster bombs on civilian targets. Let's hope they don't hit a nuclear reactor.

If they start destroying Kyiv and civilians, I don't see how the U.S. and Europe can stay out of the war considering the world wide unity against Russia.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't either.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 2nd, 2022 at 1:33 AM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

haha said:

It is just a misconstrued attribution towards me. I am using his translation does not mean I am using his interpretation. Reading the Candrakīrti's Prasannapada is enough for understanding one model of reasoning, which naturally includes Buddhapaṇita. It is still the 5th-6th centuries CE perspective on Nagarjuna.

Malcolm wrote:

Then read Akutobhyā. It has the same structure, and is much earlier than Buddhapaṇita, attributed to Nāgārjuna. It sets out the purpose for writing MMK, but it does not set out any ontological thesis to defend.

It's the only model of reasoning there is. If you want to interpret the MMK outside these parameters, I have nothing more to say to you other than that you are making a mistake.

haha said:

Lucid Exposition of the Middle Way The Essential chapters from the Prasannapada of Candrakirti Translated from the Sanskrit by Mervyn Sprung

Malcolm wrote:

Unfortunately influenced by T.R.V. Murti's crypto-advaita leanings. A contribution, but a long ago superseded one.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 2nd, 2022 at 2:26 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Context:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 2nd, 2022 at 2:36 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Boris said:

What local beings do the bombings disturb/make angry (beside obviously humans, animals)?

And is there a class of beings which are satisfied that humans have started fighting with each other?

Malcolm wrote:

Gyalpos.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 2nd, 2022 at 4:04 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 2nd, 2022 at 4:37 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

Huh? Can you please stop advocating for a war between the world's two foremost nuclear powers? The US has around 5,400 nuclear warheads and Russia around 6,000 = enough to kill every human being on earth.

Malcolm wrote:

As long as Russia does not use nuclear weapons, there wont be. If they do,

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 2nd, 2022 at 6:05 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

IQ < 70.

SkyFox said:

I don't get this. You first confronted my post. And then when you realized what you said had nothing to do with what I posted, you attack my IQ?

Brunelleschi said:

I'm joking, I apologize.

The point is that squeezing a major nuclear power with sanctions like this is pretty much uncharted territory. There is a reason the US is very clearly saying "No" to a no-fly zone for example. We have to be rational in times like these.

Malcolm wrote:

The reason NATO is saying no to a no-fly zone has somewhat to do with the UAF doing a fair job of protecting their own airspace, and Russia has yet to establish air dominance for some inexplicable reason.

We will see how long that lasts. One twist in the jets for Ukraine scheme is the NATO is not allowing them to be flown through NATO airspace.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 2nd, 2022 at 12:59 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Unknown said:

Europeans have also dropped, abruptly, some of their doubts about Ukraine's membership in their institutions. On Monday, the European Parliament not only asked Zelensky to speak, by video, but gave him a standing ovation. Earlier today the parliamentarians, from all across the continent, voted to accept his application for EU membership for Ukraine. Accession to the EU is a long process, and it won't happen immediately, even if Ukraine emerges intact from this conflict. But the idea has been broached. It is now part of the continent's collective imagination. From being a distant place, badly understood, it is now part of what people mean when they say Europe...In the long run-up to this war, the conversation in Washington and Berlin was always focused on Putin and Joe Biden, Sergei Lavrov and Antony Blinken, NATO and Russia. This was the kind of talk that academics and pundits liked: big topics, big countries. In this conversation Ukraine was, as the political scientist John Mearsheimer put it in 2014, nothing more than “a buffer state of enormous strategic importance to Russia.” But the Ukrainians have now put themselves at the heart of the story, and they know it.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.theatlantic.com/ideas/archive/2022/03/putins-war-dispelled-the-worlds-illusions/623335/>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 2nd, 2022 at 8:01 PM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

haha said:

Even though Bhāviveka and Candrakīrti both are interpreting the Nagarjuna, but they are not using the same structure of logic. So, “there is the only model of reasoning” does not apply. One can add Santaraksita; may be other teachers, too.

Malcolm wrote:

We aren’t talking about the same thing. I am talking about which passages belong to the opponent, which belong to the response.

The use of syllogisms by Bhavaviveka merely unpacks an algorithm implied by Buddhapalita’s consequences, and the whole controversy between Buddhapalita, etc., amounts to little more than a squabble over pedagogy, not substance.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 2nd, 2022 at 9:36 PM

Title: Re: Is Sadhguru enlightened?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

There is only one right result: freedom from the afflictions that cause rebirth. This comes from the only right view: dependent origination.

PadmaVonSamba said:

There is only one right buddhist result: its aim (freedom from the afflictions that cause rebirth), as Malcolm suggests.

If the result one wants is moksha, or higher rebirth, or a perfect lemon cheesecake, other methods exist for achieving those.

In other words, Mr. Sad Guru may offer a path that leads to a blissful something-or-other, but not to full liberation in the buddhist sense.
And from that it may be assumed that he is not “enlightened” in any sense of the word as it would be applied to Buddhism.

Aemilius said:

Making that sort of declarations is not what Shakyamuni recommends that one should do. It may cause one unnecessary (bad) karma saying things like that. You would perhaps do much better without it.

The buddhist goal is not so self-evident, if you would consider what the Mahayana says. Like for example: "there is no ignorance and no end of ignorance...", Heart of Perfection of Wisdom sutra, " ...no old age and death and no end of old age and death". Mahayana sutras unambiguously say that the sravakayana nirvana is not ultimately true and not the final goal.

Malcolm wrote:

The cessation of afflictions that cause rebirth in samsara is part and parcel of Mahayana. It's not the whole of the path of Buddhahood, but it's essential nevertheless.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 2nd, 2022 at 9:40 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Queequeg said:

Great to see European nations stepping up. I'm particularly impressed by Germany's decisiveness at obvious cost to themselves.

Biden mentioned last night in his State of the Union address that US and European countries are going to seize the real and personal property of Russian oligarchs. Putting the vise to these people is critical.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 2nd, 2022 at 10:58 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

But I can't help wondering what effect this will have long-term? Not only will the Russian economy suffer a huge blow, with millions losing work, it will have expelled Russia from practically all Western institutions, economy, etc. This isolation makes an all-out conflict with the West much more possible, I fear.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, maybe Putin will be deposed, and Russians will be able to hold free and fair elections.

The Russian largest lender, Sberbank is beginning to fail, and pulling out of European Markets:

<https://www.theguardian.com/business/2022/mar/02/russia-sberbank-pulls-out-of-europe-after-facing-failure-amid-sanctions>

This war is going to be known Putin's folly. He is destroying Russia, Belorus, and Ukraine.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 2nd, 2022 at 11:50 PM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nagarjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

haha said:

Ok

If you do not mind, I would like to ask one question.

How do you read or view the dedicatory verse and the last verse from MMK?

yaḥ pratīyasamutpādaṃ prapañcopaśamaṃ śivam |
deśayāṃ āsa sambuddhas taṃ vande vadatāṃ varam ||2||

Who taught dependent origination

That is peaceful and fully pacifies all fabrication.

I pay homage to the perfect Buddha

Who is supreme among teachers

27.

sarvadṛṣṭiprahāṇāya yaḥ saddharmam adeśayat |
anukampāṃ upādāya taṃ namasyāmi gautamam ||30||

I pay homage to Gautama,

Who, motivated by compassion,

Taught the holy Dharma

For the abandonment of all [false] views. [Coughlan]

Malcolm wrote:

One, while in general the Coughlin translation is pretty good, it is not without its faults, bracketing [false] before views is misleading.

Two, pacifying proliferation (prapañcopaśamaṃ) and abandonment of all views (sarvadṛṣṭiprahāṇāya) are equivalent.

But there is no thesis here to defend, no affirming negation, if you will. There is here no negation of view to replace it with some other view.

If you want to get into the head of Nāgārjuna regarding the limits of holding a thesis (pratijñā), you should look at Westerhoff's study and translation of the Vaidalyaprakāṣa. It is a detailed refutation of the Nyāya's sixteen categories (padārtha). You should also look at the Vīgrahavyavartanī, also translated by Westerhoff.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 3rd, 2022 at 12:00 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.thesun.co.uk/news/17806693/russia-mutiny-army-ukraine-vladimir-putin/>

Not sure if it's true, but I have seen it reported in several places that yesterday Russian Marines rioted onboard ship and refused to storm Odessa.

Shotenzenjin said:

It's easy to get caught up in the propaganda onslaught. Russia failing. Ukrainians kicking ass. On day.....6

One wonders if Ukraine is doing so well why do they need so much help then?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 3rd, 2022 at 1:07 AM

Title: Re: Can you conceive of a scenario where it turns out Nāgārjuna was wrong (ex: not all things are empty, or otherwise)?

Content:

haha said:

It is old translation. What do you say about Fernando Tola and Carmen Dragonetti's translation?

Malcolm wrote:

Westerhoff's is later than theirs, and offers pointed analysis of their treatment.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 3rd, 2022 at 2:26 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

But I can't help wondering what effect this will have long-term? Not only will the Russian economy suffer a huge blow, with millions losing work, it will have expelled Russia from practically all Western institutions, economy, etc. This isolation makes an all-out conflict with the West much more possible, I fear.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, maybe Putin will be deposed, and Russians will be able to hold free and fair elections.

The Russian largest lender, Sberbank is beginning to fail, and pulling out of European Markets:

<https://www.theguardian.com/business/2022/mar/02/russia-sberbank-pulls-out-of-europe-after-facing-failure-amid-sanctions>

This war is going to be known Putin's folly. He is destroying Russia, Belorus, and Ukraine.

Dan74 said:

When was the last time sanctions brought down an autocratic ruler?

Malcolm wrote:

1958-1959: the U.S.S.R. vs. Finland

During the "Night Frost Crisis" of 1958 and 1959, Finnish-Soviet relations were fraught after the Communists were excluded from government and Karl-August Fagerholm, viewed as unfavorable to the Soviets, was appointed as prime minister. The U.S.S.R. used economic sanctions to force Fagerholm's resignation. The sanctions cost 1.1.% of the Finnish GNP.

1961-1965: the United States vs. Ceylon (Sri Lanka)

Between 1961 and 1965, the United States applied sanctions against the Dominion of Ceylon (what is now Sri Lanka) after the socialist government of Sirimavo Bandaranaike was accused of expropriating the assets of U.S. and British oil companies. The government fell in 1965, largely because of the economic effects of these sanctions, which cost 0.6% of the the country's GNP.

1982-1986: South Africa vs. Lesotho

South Africa applied economic pressure on Lesotho to make it return South African refugees with links to the African National Congress. After a military coup in Lesotho, South Africa lifted a blockade on the landlocked nation, and 60 ANC members were deported back home. The cost was estimated to be 5.1% of Lesotho's GNP.

1992-1993: the United States vs. Malawi

The United States (and other nations) significantly cut aid in 1992 in a bid to improve the democratic standards and human rights situation in Malawi. Malawi was largely reliant on aid (the sanctions were estimated to cost 6.6% of its GNP) and swiftly adopted more open policies. After a referendum, multi-party democracy was introduced in 1993, and aid was soon resumed.

1993: the United States vs. Guatemala

In 1993, after President Jorge Serrano dissolved Congress and said he would rule by decree, the United States and European nations threatened sanctions. Business owners, scared of the economic effects, helped force Serrano out of power and installed a new president, Ramiro de Leon Carpio. The economic cost was said to be 1.3% of Guatemala's GDP.

<https://www.washingtonpost.com/news/worldviews/wp/2014/04/28/13-times-that-economic-sanctions-really-worked/>

Dan74 said:

As for the war, Russia appears to have hoped for a quick surgical operation to achieve their objectives. That failed and now we are in for some truly horrible war. It will be a slaughter and the West arming Ukraine will make it drag on longer. Maybe by upping the cost for Russia it could lead it to settle sooner, or maybe it will just increase the body count, I don't know. Putin may just dig in and he has the resources to win at whatever cost. Intransigence is a pretty natural reaction for a Russian whose back is against the wall.

Malcolm wrote:

Maybe not.

Russia is in for a whole world of hurt because of its leaders actions.

Dan74 said:

I hear people freaking out, storing food, checking bomb shelters.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. Sensible precautions.

Dan74 said:

Yes, Putin started it. But we do we go from here?

Malcolm wrote:

The US and NATO said we are not going into Ukraine. So i guess we are just going to watch Ukraine get ground into dust and resist as best they can, until it becomes too expensive for Putin to continue.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 3rd, 2022 at 2:48 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, March 3rd, 2022 at 3:11 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, March 3rd, 2022 at 3:27 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Dan74 said:
FWIW, Putin has repeated that Russia will not occupy Ukraine and that the Ukrainian people will be free to choose their future.

Malcolm wrote:
Obviously not, since the Ukrainians want to be in the EU and NATO.

Dan74 said:
Put that in the context of the wars the US have waged in the past 50 years and maybe stop collectively foaming at the mouth. Not to single you out, QQ.

Malcolm wrote:
I'd like to remind you that during the first Gulf War we did not occupy Baghdad, mainly due to Colin Powell's fear of what the second Gulf war turned into.

NATO intervened in the Balkans, justifiably so.

Dan74 said:
I don't know if you can imagine how this feels.

Malcolm wrote:
No, I can't imagine it, but I am sure it's an awful feeling.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, March 3rd, 2022 at 4:52 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
This just says it all:

“The Ukrainian authorities . . . are in fact waging war with their own population in cities where there are no Russian troops, first and foremost in Kyiv,” said Artyom Sheinin, host of a political talk show on state TV.

<https://www.ft.com/content/73f87533-749a-4539-aeae-89ce0a9265bd?segmentID=d649553c-7c7e-7cd5-957a-9d059f0e7d27&twclid=11499124780666081280>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 3rd, 2022 at 5:12 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 3rd, 2022 at 6:42 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 3rd, 2022 at 6:49 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 3rd, 2022 at 7:03 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 3rd, 2022 at 8:56 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

BTW, Dan, with all this discussion of whether NATO made a promise not to expand or not, there is a little thing called the Budapest Memorandum, which Russia signed, in return for Ukraine giving up its nukes:

Respect Belarusian, Kazakh and Ukrainian independence and sovereignty in the existing borders.

Refrain from the threat or the use of force against Belarus, Kazakhstan and Ukraine.

Refrain from using economic pressure on Belarus, Kazakhstan and Ukraine to influence their politics.

Seek immediate Security Council action to provide assistance to Belarus, Kazakhstan and Ukraine if they "should become a victim of an act of aggression or an object of a threat of aggression in which nuclear weapons are used".

Refrain from the use of nuclear arms against Belarus, Kazakhstan and Ukraine.

Consult with one another if questions arise regarding those commitments.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 3rd, 2022 at 10:40 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Good article on non-dumb anti-imperialism from The Intercept:

<https://theintercept.com/2022/03/01/ukraine-russia-leftists-tankie/>

KristenM said:

I read it and it is a good article. The forgot to mention Cuba, though. Everyone's favorite dictatorship.

Malcolm wrote:

Cuba could have been Miami, but they fcked up.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 3rd, 2022 at 9:27 PM

Title: Re: Is Sadhguru enlightened?

Content:

Aemilius said:

Buddha never said that he has found his unique path to a specific liberation.

Malcolm wrote:

Of course he did.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 3rd, 2022 at 11:22 PM

Title: Re: Nyingma vs Sarma Yamantaka

Content:

Pema Rigdzin said:

Yamantaka is one the the 8 yidams in the famed central Mahayoga collection of sadhanas, the Kagye. So definitely front and center among the most important yidams in Nyingma. Sounds like in actuality the only difference in the deity is the line of transmission and the approach and any methods and instructions unique to each.

Manjukumaar said:

Would the Nyingma termas contain the equivalents of Mother and Father Tantras?

Malcolm wrote:

Mahayoga is the equivalent.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 3rd, 2022 at 11:36 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Read whole thread:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 4th, 2022 at 12:17 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shotenzenjin said:

It looks like the memorial to Jews killed by the Nazis wasn't bombed it was a tv tower...

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, this was very clearly reported on CNN, etc. And the fact remains that buildings at the Baba Yar memorial were damaged.

<https://www.australianjewishnews.com/israeli-jewish-officials-denounce-russian-strike-that-hit-babi-yar-memorial-complex/>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 4th, 2022 at 12:20 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Queequeg said:

Only people who get their news from nobodies tweeting out farts actually thought the memorial was the target. Reliable commentators noted the irony that the memorial was hit.

Malcolm wrote:

The constant refrain about propaganda is a wearing a bit thin.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 4th, 2022 at 12:23 AM

Title: Re: Ethical impact on defense against the Russian Invasion in Ukraine

Content:

muni said:

Prayers for Ukraine. And may these boys be send home.

Malcolm wrote:

They don't want to go home. They will be punished for failing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 4th, 2022 at 1:14 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dorje Shedrub said:

Why aren't the Ukrainian's putting these captured tanks into military service? Their own army uses Russian tank models.

Malcolm wrote:

The Ukrainians, apparently, have a very wry sense of humor.

Nemo said:

I can't even fully separate fact from fiction in the wars I was a part of and I had real time access to comms and was in the room where decisions were made. There is no truth in war. Throw in language, a lack of historical knowledge and geographic barriers and it's safe to assume most of what you know is wrong.

Malcolm wrote:

Not sure you can tell fact from fiction in the present, what with your denial that the Chinese imprisoned one million Uyghurs in work camps.

Anyway, in Russia today:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 4th, 2022 at 3:41 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 4th, 2022 at 9:01 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:
Malcolm wrote:
Chernobyl II

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, March 4th, 2022 at 9:35 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, March 4th, 2022 at 9:44 AM
Title: Re: Nyingma vs Sarma Yamantaka
Content:

Manjukumaar said:
Would the Nyingma terms contain the equivalents of Mother and Father Tantras?

Malcolm wrote:
Mahayoga is the equivalent.

Manjukumaar said:
And Anuyoga?

Malcolm wrote:
No equivalent. The principles of anuyoga are not found in sarma tantra.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, March 4th, 2022 at 9:56 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, March 4th, 2022 at 9:59 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, March 4th, 2022 at 10:08 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, March 4th, 2022 at 10:36 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, March 4th, 2022 at 7:21 PM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
PeterC said:
Watch to the end

Malcolm wrote:
Fog of war indeed.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, March 4th, 2022 at 9:21 PM
Title: Re: Is Sadhguru enlightened?
Content:

Aemilius said:
Hinduism uses much of the same vocabulary with Buddhism. The common aim of a hindu is to attain liberation from Samsara or the wheel of rebirth.

Malcolm wrote:
The aim of "Hinduism" is the liberation of an atman/purusha from samsara. This is defined in various ways depending on the darshan.

Buddhist negates such a liberation, since there is no atman to be liberated.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, March 4th, 2022 at 9:34 PM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 4th, 2022 at 10:17 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Ayu said:

A kind request

Could everybody please stop posting Twitter links, because my devices are loading endlessly. Could you rather copy and paste or please at least do delete the Twitter links from your quotes?

The Twitter post linked only once into the thread would be sufficient.

Otherwise moderating this topic becomes really a time consuming drag.

Norwegian said:

Honestly, this is unfair.

Malcolm wrote:

She has a point about replies. People should leave the original tweet out of their reply.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 4th, 2022 at 11:01 PM

Title: Re: Is Sadhguru enlightened?

Content:

Shinjin said:

On the other hand a Hindu will negate the Buddhist idea of liberation since we don't beleive in atman. Who's telling the truth?

Malcolm wrote:

You can discover that yourself.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 5th, 2022 at 10:29 AM

Title: Re: Was the monastic tradition/lineage established in Japanese Buddhism??

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Also, this is presupposing that the Yogacarabhumi precepts are being upheld. In fact, Saichō only upheld the Brahmajāla precepts, and the Brahmajāla Sūtra states that only the Brahmajāla bodhisattvas precepts are to be regarded as the pratimokṣa in the age of Dharma Decline.

Malcolm wrote:

Unknown outside China. Tibetan Buddhists don't read this sutra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 5th, 2022 at 7:27 PM

Title: Re: Is Sadhguru enlightened?

Content:

Aemilius said:

Hinduism uses much of the same vocabulary with Buddhism. The common aim of a hindu is to attain liberation from Samsara or the wheel of rebirth.

Malcolm wrote:

The aim of "Hinduism" is the liberation of an atman/purusha from samsara. This is defined in various ways depending on the darshan.

Buddhist negates such a liberation, since there is no atman to be liberated.

Aemilius said:

That is only play with words. No one needs to seek liberation, because there is no atman, namarupa, aggregates or jiva. But why do we then observe precepts, study, meditate, ect...?

Malcolm wrote:

Because we impute such an entity on our series of aggregate.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 5th, 2022 at 8:30 PM

Title: Re: Is Sadhguru enlightened?

Content:

Aemilius said:

That is only play with words. No one needs to seek liberation, because there is no atman, namarupa, aggregates or jiva. But why do we then observe precepts, study, meditate, ect...?

Malcolm wrote:

Because we impute such an entity on our series of aggregate.

Aemilius said:

You still have "we", who impute and attain (freedom from imputation). So there is no difference to "atman" (doing something).

Malcolm wrote:

Of course there is a difference: the atman/soul/person, etc., asserted by nonBuddhists does not exist in the various manners in which they claim it does. It does exist in the manner which we claim it does, that is, as a mere imputation upon the series of aggregates. I think you need to reread Vasubandhu' refutation of the self again.

The conventional use of pronouns does not negate the general Buddhist argument of the self being a convention, an imputation, and a mere designation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 5th, 2022 at 8:36 PM

Title: Re: Was the monastic tradition/lineage established in Japanese Buddhism??

Content:

Zhen Li said:

There is a Tibetan translation (and apparently Mongolian), which I had a look at a few years ago alongside the Chinese, but it is strange. It is probably translated from Chinese but also shows differences. Probably the sūtra was popular in Kucha. If I recall correctly, there's a shorter variant from Dunhuang which shows similarities but is also not identical.

Malcolm wrote:

Link?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 6th, 2022 at 12:21 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 6th, 2022 at 1:08 AM

Title: Re: Why do some scholars deny the existence of Amitabha Buddha?

Content:

Shinjin said:

...

Malcolm wrote:

Why do you care? There are far more people in the world who do not believe in Amitabha Buddha than do.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 6th, 2022 at 6:27 AM

Title: Re: Why do some scholars deny the existence of Amitabha Buddha?

Content:

Shinjin said:

I think the questionnaire is referring to some shin scholars who are trying to reinterpret the tradition to fit their materialistic worldviews. Same as those such as Stephen Bachelard who reject karma/rebirth and present Buddhism as some sort of therapy program only.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, who cares what they think? Only thing that matters is what you think.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 6th, 2022 at 9:37 AM

Title: Re: Why do some scholars deny the existence of Amitabha Buddha?

Content:

Shinjin said:

I think the questionnaire is referring to some shin scholars who are trying to reinterpret the tradition to fit their materialistic worldviews. Same as those such as Stephen Bachelard who reject karma/rebirth and present Buddhism as some sort of therapy program only.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, who cares what they think? Only thing that matters is what you think.

Shinjin said:

I agree but don't you feel some of these secular attitudes are damaging Buddhism? How can someone expect to be liberated by receiving watered down teachings?

Malcolm wrote:

Don't much care about Buddhism. Buddhism is a religion. Buddhadharma, on the other hand, can't be harmed by anything.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 6th, 2022 at 11:07 AM

Title: Re: Was the monastic tradition/lineage established in Japanese Buddhism??

Content:

Zhen Li said:

There is a Tibetan translation (and apparently Mongolian), which I had a look at a few years ago alongside the Chinese, but it is strange. It is probably translated from Chinese but also shows differences. Probably the sūtra was popular in Kucha. If I recall correctly, there's a shorter variant from Dunhuang which shows similarities but is also not identical.

Malcolm wrote:
Link?

Zhen Li said:
It was a few years ago and it was on paper. So, I don't have any info handy. Maybe there's something in Muller's intro to his translation on it.

Edit:
Actually, I found a PDF I have of it. It's translated as Chos-kyi-rgyal-mo and is in Volume 62 of the Tog Palace manuscript of the Kanjur, Leh 1980.

Malcolm wrote:
I stand corrected. I was unaware that the so-called Brahamajala Precept sūtra was this Chos kyi rgya mo. We have the Hinayāna Brahmajala sūtra in translation as well.

The title is Chos kyi rgya mo, which means roughly "Seal of the Dharma" (Chos kyi rgyal mo means Queen of Dharma). The Dege edition lists it as a translation from Chinese, with the legend, "translated from Chinese, edited according to the new dharma terminology." It is found in the Phangthangma catalogue.

It begins a little after the second fascicle of the Chinese text begins.

So, even though a portion of this text was translated into Tibetan, we really don't read this text. For example. the Fourth Shamar notes it is a dubious text specifically because of this passage:

"[H]e himself was named Siddhārtha. He left home at the age of seven; he attained enlightenment at thirty and came to be called Śākyamuni Buddha."

Pg. 40, BDK edition.

So, in general, we don't give it any credit.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, March 6th, 2022 at 8:41 PM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Jesse said:
?

No matter how we view the situation, the fact of the matter is Ukraine is at war. Morality, integrity, and ideals are the first things to go in war. I'm not really buying that Russia just suddenly fired on a nuclear power plant without provocation either. (Who fires unprovoked on a nuclear power plant that would just as likely effect their home country, as it would Europe if it exploded?.)

Malcolm wrote:
They absolutely did.

Jesse said:
The way I see it.. It's in Ukraine's interest to get NATO involved in this war. Without NATO Ukraine will eventually fail.

Malcolm wrote:
We, the US, guaranteed Ukraine's security in 1994. We've done a piss poor job of living up to that promise.

Jesse said:
Many in Ukraine have come out and stated that if NATO doesn't help them we are just as responsible as Russia for their demise -- and I'm sure that sentiment isn't uncommon. That being the case, Ukraine becomes a nightmare scenario for NATO, I imagine them trying to manage this, and failing miserably. It's sort of terrifying actually.

Malcolm wrote:
They are right: Ukraine has been a NATO partner for nearly three decades.

Jesse said:
I know people have taken up Ukraine's cause as Just and morally righteous, that doesn't however mean that Ukraine is now a morally pure agent. They are just as capable of evil as anyone else. Especially when it comes to matters of survival. I should mention the same is true of the United States, NATO, and Russia. We will never genuinely know many of the actual facts about what's happening. If you look at the situation objectively though, regardless of why NATO is involved, Ukraine is definitely looking like a proxy war being fought on behalf of NATO against Russia.

Malcolm wrote:
The only nation that has violated national sovereignty is Putin's Russia, on a pretext that makes Cheney's WMDs look solid by comparison.

Jesse said:
Even if it wasn't intended, it will play out that way. NATO are sending massive amounts of weapons to Ukraine, while sapping Russia of funds via sanctions. The end effect will be NATO waging war on Russia without a single NATO Soldier being deployed.

Malcolm wrote:

Which is totally awesome. Putin is a petty thug. He needs to sit in a Supermax for his crimes. The Russian people need to depose him, and try a do over with democracy. I am sure the world, and NATO will appreciate it, that is, after they voluntarily give up their nuclear weapons and repay Ukraine, Syria, Georgia, etc., for damages. They've lost the privilege of keeping them, since they openly threatened the world with them. The present Russian gvmnt. has proven they are too irresponsible to keep a nuclear arsenal.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 6th, 2022 at 9:06 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

Then act like the Russian people are not capable of critical thinking.

Malcolm wrote:

They are quite clearly capable of critical thinking, once armed with facts, such as the cops in the vudeo.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 6th, 2022 at 9:09 PM

Title: Re: Start preparing for War Escalations

Content:

Jesse said:

And yes, there is a chance it will not happen, but there are many signs that this situation will degrade over time. It's best to be prepared just in case this scenario arises. TBH from what I can observe happening Russia is not simply be sanctioned, they are being cut off from the rest of the world in every imaginable way.

Malcolm wrote:

Russia leaves Ukraine, Putin faces trial in The Hague, and all will be well.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 6th, 2022 at 10:38 PM

Title: Re: Is Sadhguru enlightened?

Content:

Aemilius said:

Cool?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, but it does not mean this “I” is anything more than a convention for the series of aggregates, just as “we” is a convention for an aggregate of people, and so on, without having any more reality than being a designation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 6th, 2022 at 11:02 PM

Title: Re: Start preparing for War Escalations

Content:

Shinjin said:

I would also put an emphasis on learning survivalist skills such as hunting, fishing, and making shelter. Most people will be handicapped in those areas if all hell broke loose.

Malcolm wrote:

If there is a nuclear war, there will be no game to hunt, fish to catch, nor anywhere to find shelter.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 6th, 2022 at 11:21 PM

Title: Re: Start preparing for War Escalations

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Robert Gates' oped in Wapo today:

<https://www.washingtonpost.com/opinions/2022/03/03/why-ukraine-should-force-a-total-overhaul-of-our-national-security-strategy/>

Unknown said:

Vladimir Putin's invasion of Ukraine has ended Americans' 30-year holiday from history. For the first time since World War II, the United States faces powerful, aggressive adversaries in Europe and Asia seeking to recover past glory along with claimed territories and spheres of influence. All in defiance of an international order largely shaped by the United States that has kept the peace among great powers for seven decades. The Russian and Chinese challenge to this peaceful order has been developing for a number of years. Putin's war has provided the cold shower needed to awaken democratic governments to the reality of a new world, a world in which our recent strategy — including the “pivot” to Asia — is woefully insufficient to meet the long-term challenges we face.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 12:17 AM

Title: Re: Start preparing for War Escalations

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

If there is a nuclear war, there will be no game to hunt, fish to catch, nor anywhere to find shelter.

Crazywisdom said:

Depends on the size of the war. Tactical nukes don't wipe out continents. The full War Games scenario is unlikely. A regional nuclear war could be possible, but full scale global nuclear warfare is extremely unlikely precisely because it means extinction.

Shinjin said:

Exactly.

Malcolm wrote:

Wishful thinking.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 12:36 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Norwegian said:

snip

Queequeg said:

Of course I'm skeptical about these videos of captured Russian soldiers, but they looked and sounded sincere. If not, they are superb actors.

I want to believe that they are speaking truthfully and giving us an accurate picture of the POV of ordinary Russians. That gives hope that there are ways to avoid the end game that seems to be coming.

Malcolm wrote:

There is this today:

And here is a translation of said document:

Take aways:

Our conditional deadline is June. Conditional because in June there will be no economy left in Russia – there will be nothing left. By and large, next week there will be a collapse (in Russia) to either of the two sides, simply because the situation cannot remain under current conditions.

...

By and large, Russia does not have an out. There are no options for a possible victory, only of losses – this is it.

100% we've repeated our mistake from last century, when we decided to kick the "weak" Japan in order to achieve a quick victory, and it turned our army was in a state of total calamity.

...

Now we are stuck waiting until some mentally screwed up advisor convinces the top to start a conflict with Europe, with demands to reduce the sanctions – they either loosen the sanctions or war. What if the West refuses? In that instance I won't exclude that we will be pulled into a real international conflict, just like Hitler in 1939. Our "Z" will be equated to the Swastika.

Is there a possibility of a localized nuclear strike? Yes. Not for any military objectives. Such a weapon won't help with the breach of the defenses. But with a goal of scaring everyone else (The West).

...

Our current position is like Germany in 1943-1944 – but that's our STARTING position in Ukraine.

...

Third, and this is the most disgusting and sad, I personally do not believe in Putin's will to sacrifice himself when he does not even allow his closest ministers and advisors to be in his vicinity. Whether it's due to his fear of COVID or a possible assassination is irrelevant. If you are scared for the most trusted people to be near you, then how could you possibly choose to destroy yourself and those dearest to you.

Original source:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 1:30 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

This is all USA's fault.

Malcolm wrote:
Ok Glenn Greenwald.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 2:14 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Crazywisdom said:
The West is wearing rose tinted glasses with Ukrainian ability to defend itself. Putin will flatten the entire country if he has to.

Malcolm wrote:
The Soviet–Afghan War (1979–1989). Ukrainians have allies all around it who will supply weapons to them for as long as it takes. Much better weapons than the Mujahideen were armed with by the USA.

Crazywisdom said:
Just see Syria as the scrimmage game. Now Russia has bet it's entire future. He's not going to be deposed. If I were Europe I would at least try to block his access to the oceans and seas. But honestly, there is no path to defeat Putin here.

Malcolm wrote:
Putin is bankrupting his nation. The economy of Russia (1.6T) 2/3rds that of Italy (2.2T). It will be the same story as Afghanistan. 100% guaranteed.

Crazywisdom said:
Russia and China and survive any siege now. Sometimes it's difficult to admit defeat, especially when it happens in the first minute of the first round.

Malcolm wrote:
Russia lost by invading. They should not have even played the game.

There is no upside for Russia. (1) They don't gain security from NATO, (2) there are no Nazi's to denazify, (3) they were removed from the world banking system, (4) they will suffer a major embargo on oil (it's coming), (5) US makes a deal with Maduro and Iran to replace Russian oil, (6) Ukrainians will never accept Russian rule, and (7) Russia will become China's bitch.

Putin really fcked up this time.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 2:23 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 2:36 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Meanwhile in America #beltway:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 2:47 AM

Title: Re: Start preparing for War Escalations

Content:

Shinjin said:

Exactly.

Malcolm wrote:

Wishful thinking.

Crazywisdom said:

It's realistic, especial when Russia and China may have already achieved tech superiority in their ICBMs. They have the initiative now. Let's say they nuke Kyev.... The West will have no answers.

Malcolm wrote:

Wishful thinking.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 2:51 AM

Title: Re: Start preparing for War Escalations

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Sure, put together bug out bags, never a bad idea. My Jewish in laws recommend jewelry as a portable form of wealth and sometimes currency.

Beyond that the best we can do is practice and use this as a stark reminder of impermanence. Ruminating over the various possibilities is unlikely to be productive. This would be different if a person had inside information, concrete ability to affect outcomes, etc.but most of these discussions are things out of our hands. Problem solving involves concrete decision making, when it is based on wavering anxieties it's not actually problem solving.

Co-rumination is a thing people do sometimes to deal with anxiety. In that respect it can be a helpful outlet at times, but it can also become a source of anxiety itself.

Crazywisdom said:

You're just admitting citizens have no power in democracies. And that is what autocratic elites in democrats have been cultivating for decades.

Johnny Dangerous said:

So what? That's always been the case. There has never been a time in history where foreign policy decisions were actually included in the democratic process.

Malcolm wrote:

We live in a representative democracy, so you are not correct here. Congress is regularly consulted by the Executive Branch on foreign policy issues. It requires an act of Congress to declare war.

If you don't like US foreign policy, vote in new leaders.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 2:57 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dorje Shedrub said:

Reporting that Russian media reports threats to use tactical nukes.

Caoimhghín said:

What does this say in English?

Malcolm wrote:

Twitter translate tool renders:

Рашисти на своїх телепомийках заговорили про застосування тактичної ядерної зброї проти України. Черговий спосіб шантажувати Захід. Останній має нарешті висунути Росії ультиматум про припинення обстрілів. Треба зрозуміти нарешті всю відповідальність за наступні події

The racists talked about the use of tactical nuclear weapons against Ukraine at their TV stations. Another way to blackmail the West. The latter must finally issue an ultimatum to Russia to stop shelling. We must finally understand all the responsibility for the following events

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 3:13 AM

Title: Re: Start preparing for War Escalations

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

So what? That's always been the case. There has never been a time in history where foreign policy decisions were actually included in the democratic process.

Malcolm wrote:

We live in a representative democracy, so you are not correct here. Congress is regularly consulted by the Executive Branch on foreign policy issues. It requires an act of Congress to declare war.

If you don't like US foreign policy, vote in new leaders.

Johnny Dangerous said:

The last formal declaration of war was what, WWII?

Malcolm wrote:

The Authorization for Use of Military Force Against Iraq Resolution of 2002. We don't use the word "war" any more. We have a defense department, now, not a war department. We have not used the terminology of "department of war" since 1947.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Perpetually.

Malcolm wrote:

Perhaps. But to claim these wars and military engagements are not a product of democratic process in our country is an error, passing the buck. We have treaties we have signed, which have drawn us into a number of conflicts. Since we signed them, they are US law, like Article 5 of NATO.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 3:27 AM

Title: Re: Start preparing for War Escalations

Content:

Queequeg said:

Putin really screwed.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. He just sold his whole country to China.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 3:44 AM

Title: Re: Start preparing for War Escalations

Content:

Queequeg said:

Putin really screwed.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. He just sold his whole country to China.

Queequeg said:

It would be comical how stupendously he screwed up, but for the people who are going to get ground into mince meat because of his error.

Malcolm wrote:

But it is a good lesson for us. We need to forgo the idea that building up the economies of authoritarian regimes (whether left or right) is going to turn them into our friends and pave the way for their entry into the liberal democratic order.

Fukuyama is probably regretting that End of History book title now. Anyway, he published this op-ed in FT Friday:

<https://www.ft.com/content/d0331b51-5d0e-4132-9f97-c3f41c7d75b3>

He sums up:

The travails of liberalism will not end even if Putin loses. China will be waiting in the wings, as well as Iran, Venezuela, Cuba and the populists in western countries. But the world will have learnt what the value of a liberal world order is, and that it will not survive unless people struggle for it and show each other mutual support. The Ukrainians, more than any other people, have shown what true bravery is, and that the spirit of 1989 remains alive in their corner of the world. For the rest of us, it has been slumbering and is being reawakened.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 3:51 AM

Title: Re: Start preparing for War Escalations

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

That's really beside the point, or rather it proves my point The machinations of "democracy" as far as war goes really have nothing to do with the will of the populace, but rather the will of PR people, weapons industry, large corporate interests, politicians with empire-forward agendas etc. Of course everything can be a democratic decision somehow on paper.

The Iraq invasion was historically unpopular across the globe, obviously including here in the US.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it is the will of the people, since we elected these people. You want to change policies? Change the leadership.

The power of elections was proven by the Trump Administration. He managed to convince a sizable portion of our population to resume the disastrous isolationism of Hoover, and combined it with the graft and corruption of Mckinley. He undermined NATO, gutted State, etc.

That same power was proven by Biden's election, who has proven to be one of the most competent presidents we have had in years, by every metric you can imagine.

So, I just don't share your cynicism about our government, warts and all.

The lesson of Ukraine is, that when a people say and go to great lengths over decades to demonstrate that they want a liberal democracy, and do everything in their power to institute one, we should support it and defend it. Because frankly, liberal democracies are just better governments, and people are happier under them.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 3:57 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 4:11 AM

Title: Re: Prayers for the People of the Ukraine

Content:

Shinjin said:

Pray that they are born in Sukhavati.

Malcolm wrote:

Unlikely, unless they are Buddhists.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 4:23 AM

Title: Re: Start preparing for War Escalations

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I feel like this barely even needs to be said, but the range of politicians that one can vote for in the US largely share the same foreign policy.

Malcolm wrote:

Then support a different range of politicians if you want a different foreign policy. I think most Americans, frankly, like US Foreign policy for the most part. They complain about this and that, but they keep voting in people who preserve the liberal order as it stands. It is not because we are idiots, it is because it has been to our collective advantage.

Fukuyama's point is very sound:

Liberalism is a doctrine, first enunciated in the 17th century, that seeks to control violence by lowering the sights of politics. It recognises that people will not agree on the most important things — such as which religion to follow — but that they need to tolerate fellow citizens with views different from their own.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 4:59 AM

Title: Re: Start preparing for War Escalations

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I feel like this barely even needs to be said, but the range of politicians that one can vote for in the US largely share the same foreign policy.

Malcolm wrote:

Then support a different range of politicians if you want a different foreign policy. I think most Americans, frankly, like US Foreign policy for the most part. They complain about this and that, but they keep voting in people who preserve the liberal order as it stands. It is not because we are idiots, it is because it has been to our collective advantage.

Johnny Dangerous said:

I do. Those politicians are largely denied access to power, much like what happened with Bernie and the DNC, it's been this way forever.

Malcolm wrote:

No, they have not been "denied access" to power. Progressive candidates do not have enough people to vote them into office beyond the east and west coast.

Bernie lost his lawsuit against the Democrats. Sure, I was pissed about that turn of affairs too. However, its pretty clear that Bernie did not actually have enough support in the American public to win the national Democratic primary at the convention (both times). Clinton took that primary 2,842 to Sanders 1,865. Perhaps had he then run as independent, he might have won. Or he would have ensured a Trump victory anyway.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 5:06 AM

Title: Re: Prayers for the People of the Ukraine

Content:

Shinjin said:

Pray that they are born in Sukhavati.

Malcolm wrote:

Unlikely, unless they are Buddhists.

Shinjin said:

How about phowa? I have read about some Tibetan masters such as Shabkar doing phowa on insects and animals. Why wouldn't it be possible with humans?

Malcolm wrote:

You have to train quite a bit to do this, basically, one has to be a mahāsiddha. Really, the only thing people can do is dedicate merit so that the dead people from this war on both sides might someday meet the Dharma and so on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 5:36 AM

Title: Re: Start preparing for War Escalations

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Political consensus is partially (I'd largely, but trying to be fair) manufactured, not some organic will of the populace.

Malcolm wrote:

In a democracy, anytime any majority comes to agreement about an issue, the dissenting party will always claim their opponent's consensus is manufactured, a result of manipulation, "if only people knew the facts," and so on. It happens on both the right and the left. As a result, very broadly no one in a liberal democracy is 100% happy with much of what happens in their governments. But they are still responsible for what happens in their governments, 100% of the time. Democracy, as you know, is slow, messy, provides uneven results, and is generally inefficient in many ways. However, the general outcome of liberal democracy is that people are, over all, happier than in autocracies. We are more prosperous, and there are more opportunities for everyone. But not everyone's needs are met, nor can they be. That is a socialist fantasy.

The people do not have a unified will. There are too many of us, and too many of us have very different opinions about the world, so liberal democracies tend to represent an averaging out of the will of the people. For example, it was never the "unified will of the people" that the US should preserve slavery after the Revolution. Some people wanted slavery, some people opposed it. Eventually, slavery was ended. The point is that everyone gets a voice. Everyone gets a say. If they choose not to use that voice, that's their fault. If that voice is silenced, as in the voter suppression that plagues every election in our country, that needs to be dealt with. When we vote, we don't always get our way. But at least we get a say, unlike for example, in Putin's Russia, Xi's China, Maduro's Venezuela, or Ortega's Nicaragua, etc. Because we get a say, slavery was ended, the work week was reduced from up to 80 hours a week to 40, civil rights laws were passed, and so on. But it is a slow, and not very attractive process. But it is very beneficial for us in the end, and well, I don't want to think of the alternative...

Johnny Dangerous said:
Chomsky...

Malcolm wrote:
One of the most over-rated public intellectuals of all time.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 5:42 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Caoimhghín said:
Who are "the racists" I wonder? Does he mean Putin or is he calling the West "racists" as a kind of polemic?

ratna said:
It should be "Rashists", meaning "Russian Fascists."
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Russian_fascism_%28ideology%29

Malcolm wrote:
So basically the Russian equivalent of MAGA.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 7:12 AM
Title: Re: Prayers for the People of the Ukraine
Content:
Leo Rivers said:
Somewhere I seem to have read something to the effect "Don't some Buddha fields accept virtuous non-Buddhists?" Or is this just some Heavens?

Malcolm wrote:
Not a question of accept. This is a buddhafield. I have never heard however that pure buddhafields are accessible to nonbuddhists.

In any case, where one takes birth is a result of karma, nothing else.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 8:07 AM
Title: Re: Start preparing for War Escalations
Content:
Johnny Dangerous said:
Politicians and pundits did not achieve the 40 hour work week nor civil rights. You talk about Zinn's People History from time to time, did you actually read it?

Malcolm wrote:

Sure they did. That's why these things are now law. One can agitate all one wants, but until it becomes law, welll...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 10:06 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Interesting that article from The Intercept on "this sounds like this" logic:

<https://theintercept.com/2022/03/06/russia-john-mearsheimer-propaganda/>

Malcolm wrote:

The intercept is so dumb. Characterizing Anne Applebaum as a neocon is about as lazy as you get. Certainly, she was raised a conservative. She is now widely regarded in what passes for "conservative" circles these days as a heretic.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 10:46 AM

Title: Re: Start preparing for War Escalations

Content:

PeterC said:

They aren't the force they were half a century ago.

Malcolm wrote:

That's because most of their ground equipment is poorly maintained hardware made 50 years ago.

BTW, it may be the case that Russia's position on the UN Security Council is in fact illegal.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 10:57 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Interesting that article from The Intercept on "this sounds like this" logic:

<https://theintercept.com/2022/03/06/russia-john-mearsheimer-propaganda/>

Malcolm wrote:

The intercept is so dumb. Characterizing Anne Applebaum as a neocon is about as lazy as you get. Certainly, she was raised a conservative. She is now widely regarded in what passes for “conservative” circles these days as a heretic.

Johnny Dangerous said:

The Intercept is far from the first publication to categorize her as Neoconservative.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, the Progressive press does. And all the conservative publications criticize her too. So, it's just lazy characterizing her as a neocon.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 7th, 2022 at 12:16 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

The Intercept is far from the first publication to categorize her as Neoconservative.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, the Progressive press does. And all the conservative publications criticize her too. So, it's just lazy characterizing her as a neocon.

Johnny Dangerous said:

I see Neocon as a description of foreign policy posture, it doesn't make someone necessarily socially or otherwise politically conservative.

Malcolm wrote:

It is nevertheless a lazy designation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 8th, 2022 at 12:31 AM

Title: Re: Start preparing for War Escalations

Content:

PeterC said:

... In the event of a first strike on an ally (eg Ukraine) there would be a second strike on Russian military assets....

Ayu said:

In which setting is Ukraine an ally of the US?

I suppose, Putin dared to attack Ukraine because it's not member of the NATO.

Malcolm wrote:

Ukraine belongs to Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe. It is a partner in European security. But, unfortunately, not a NATO member.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 8th, 2022 at 1:48 AM

Title: Re: Start preparing for War Escalations

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

US is giving it one heave ho and that will be the end of that.

Malcolm wrote:

Probably not. We supported to Mujahideen for a decade.

Trump is responsible for the chaos of the Afghanistan exit, not Biden, just as he is responsible for what is happening to Ukraine now.

Putin miscalculated, it's pretty clear.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 8th, 2022 at 1:52 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shotenzenjin said:

As for the column I find it equally strange that it hasn't been attacked yet from the air if the Ukrainian air force is up and going as the west states why hasn't it attacked the column? It's been there apparently bogged down or broken down or perhaps there are other reasons

Malcolm wrote:

UAF is saving it planes for other purposes. Ground troops has been systematically attacking parts of that column.

As for bombing Russia if they didn't have nukes well the fact is they do so it's out of the question.

Shotenzenjin said:

Maybe it won't be as easy as you think.

Malcolm wrote:

No one in their right mind would try to invade Russia. It's a country of 140 million people.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 8th, 2022 at 2:44 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 8th, 2022 at 3:11 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

This is not a bad source, just recently blocked in Russia:

<https://meduza.io/en>

Malcolm wrote:

Ukrainian Chess:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 8th, 2022 at 3:26 AM

Title: Re: Proper transliteration of ལྷན་མ་ [dhanma(?)]

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Need more context.

Also, in some older texts dha is used to represent ལྷ, hence "dha" is Sanskrit "dā."

Chenda said:

Good day.

I would like to ask for the proper transliteration of ལྷན་. I've tried the tools from THL to transliterate the word and hopefully get the Sanskrit, but it cannot read it for some reason. It says d+han+ma or dhanma(?). I've tried to check Tibetan dictionaries, but I cannot find it at all. I have a guess that it's ལྷན་ which corresponds to the Sanskrit धन (dhána), but the Sanskrit doesn't decline to dhánMA (which is how I would transliterate the word I'm asking about). The closest I could find is धनम् (dhánam), which is both the nominative and accusative form of धन (dhána).

This is connected to my recent inquiry about a specific mantra of Vasudhara, and my research has led me to this last piece. Any leads or information would help, especially if it's from an actual text.

A question would be a great start, I suppose. Is there any textual evidence of ལྷན་ being used as the Tibetan transcription of धन (dhána) or धनम् (dhánam)?

Thank you in advance.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, March 8th, 2022 at 5:01 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, March 8th, 2022 at 7:09 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Shotenzenjin said:
What do we know of Ukrainian military losses to compare.?

Russia can afford to lose more considering its size

But good for the Ukrainians. May they keep it up

Malcolm wrote:
The Russians are so going to lose:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, March 8th, 2022 at 7:43 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Shotenzenjin said:
It will take time. As they go down they will take ukraine with them sadly. I think Putin is in it for all the marbles.

Malcolm wrote:
The West will help rebuild Ukraine.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, March 8th, 2022 at 8:18 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Unknown said:
Another person granted anonymity said Kremlin officials were "carefully enunciating the word clusterfk" when describing the invasion.

Malcolm wrote:
<https://www.businessinsider.com/putin-close-circle-russian-officials-complaining-> about-ukraine-invasion-rustamova-2022-3

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 8th, 2022 at 9:39 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Ayu said:

crying

Not as a mod, just as fellow deciple, I'd like to remind us: It's Saka Dawa month.

Malcolm wrote:

No, Sagadawa is in late spring.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 8th, 2022 at 10:35 PM

Title: Re: Guru-Disciple relationship

Content:

stucked said:

Hello

I've been confused these days about guru-disciple relationship. Few months ago I attended a teaching by guru. Sometimes I feel like I want to be his disciple on and after the teaching, but by this thought, is this relationship established without I realize it? I'm afraid that when the relationship is established without me knowing it, there's something I'm breaking and I'm falling into the lower realms.

Thank you.

heart said:

If you go to an empowerment you are creating a relationship with that Guru. Don't go to empowerments with Gurus you don't want a relationship. It is easy.

/magnus

Malcolm wrote:

When people are innocent, and they don't know what they are doing, I don't think this really applies if they do not understand that they are taking vows and so on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 2:23 AM

Title: Re: Implied Samaya (Action Tantra)

Content:

Hazel said:

When you receive an action tantra class empowerment, is there any samaya implied that's not stated by the lama? Some lamas say that the samaya they're assigning is to just "become more compassionate" (His Holiness the Dalai Lama has done this as has Garchen Rinpoche as well as others), but I'm wondering if there's typically more to it than that in terms of compulsory behavior.

Malcolm wrote:

Consult Buddhist ethics by Kongtrul on this point.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 3:13 AM

Title: Re: Start preparing for War Escalations

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I think this is more a coping mechanism for folks. I'm guilty too, so I'm including myself here, but let's not pretend there is any relevance whatsoever to people "thinking through" areas like long term Geopolitical strategies which are nowhere near their fields of expertise on a Buddhist forum.

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed. It's not like Biden, Blinken, and so on are consulting Dharmawheel for our stunning insights into Ukraine crisis. I do think the notion of immediate apocalypse is a little overwrought, personally.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 3:20 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This changes the game:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 3:40 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This changes the game:

Dorje Shedrub said:

How will they get the planes to Ukraine?

Malcolm wrote:
Via Germany, apparently.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 3:55 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:
Queequeg said:
Gas in the US is up to $5 a gallon in some places. This is higher than it has ever been and its not clear how high they will go.

Genjo Conan said:
I live in California, $5 a gallon is baby prices, for soft babies

Seriously, it's one of the big reasons EV takeup is so high here.

Malcolm wrote:
It won't last long. We are not very dependent on oil imports. Expect a lot of GOP "drill baby drill" chants.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 4:18 AM
Title: Re: Start preparing for War Escalations

Content:
Crazywisdom said:
People easily forget the basic point of citizenship is to be informed which means discussions.

Malcolm wrote:
Strongly agree.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 4:21 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:
Malcolm wrote:
This changes the game:

Crazywisdom said:
I read in this. Apparently, the US is doing a deal to supply Ukraine with fighter jets, but had promised some jets to Taiwan. So it asked Poland the cancel a similar deal so the jets can go to Ukraine. Not sure if I got that all correct, but there's a Taiwan connection.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.taipeitimes.com/News/taiwan/archives/2022/03/09/2003774463>

Crazywisdom said:

The US Department of Defense on Monday said that it has no plans to send F-16 jets scheduled for delivery to Taiwan to Poland instead, calling speculation raised by a US media report “not accurate.”

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 4:25 AM

Title: Re: Start preparing for War Escalations

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed. It's not like Biden, Blinken, and so on are consulting Dharmawheel for our stunning insights into Ukraine crisis. I do think the notion of immediate apocalypse is a little overwrought, personally.

Crazywisdom said:

People easily forget the basic point of citizenship is to be informed which means discussions. Everyone matters.

KristenM said:

And look at Zelenskyy. The best military leader turns out to be a comedian and former actor.

Malcolm wrote:

And can even dance in fk me pumps. Amazing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 4:46 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Bundokji said:

Tucker Carlson had an interesting reflections about the long-term impact of the current conflict on the US financial system and ordinary citizens. What is happening will indeed accelerate the demise of the US dollar as the world's reserve currency and the linkage between USD and energy markets.

Malcolm wrote:

Unlikely:

<https://fortune.com/2021/10/07/dollar-hegemony-reserve-currency-threats-to-dominance/>

Bundokji said:

First, the idea of a crisis-induced loss of reserve currency status does not square well with history, as the dollar's de facto displacement of sterling happened gradually over the first half of the 20th century. Second, Britain's loss of reserve currency status contradicts assumptions of terminal decline. Of course, sterling's displacement went hand in hand with the decline of the British Empire, but Britain's wealth has ground inexorably higher in the 100 years since this process started -- and the pound remains a leading international currency.

Malcolm wrote:

As for the rest of TC's comments, well, talk is cheap.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 4:49 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Queequeg said:

So, I have a question about this - I get that we, in the US, don't get much oil from Russia. Europe does. I'm not sure who else gets Russian oil. India?

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.statista.com/statistics/1100591/russia-main-crude-oil-export-destinations/>

Queequeg said:

I'm wondering how much the current price of a barrel actually reflects supplies and how much is a combination of hysteria and profit taking. I don't see how prices come down in the next few months. I'm sure we will spike, but that won't last. The time frame I'm thinking is through November.

Malcolm wrote:

My guess? Prices will be down well before elections. Americans are not going to be priced out of July 4th travel.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 4:56 AM

Title: Re: Start preparing for War Escalations

Content:

KristenM said:

And look at Zelenskyy. The best military leader turns out to be a comedian and former actor.

Malcolm wrote:

And can even dance in fk me pumps. Amazing.

Crazywisdom said:

I bet he did a ton of coke and psychedelics.

Malcolm wrote:

Maybe that's what Putin needs, to drop some acid or do some shrooms. He is one uptight MF.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 5:19 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Unlikely:

<https://fortune.com/2021/10/07/dollar-hegemony-reserve-currency-threats-to-dominance/>

First, the idea of a crisis-induced loss of reserve currency status does not square well with history, as the dollar's de facto displacement of sterling happened gradually over the first half of the 20th century. Second, Britain's loss of reserve currency status contradicts assumptions of terminal decline. Of course, sterling's displacement went hand in hand with the decline of the British Empire, but Britain's wealth has ground inexorably higher in the 100 years since this process started -- and the pound remains a leading international currency.

As for the rest of TC's comments, well, talk is cheap.

Bundokji said:

It is unlikely to happen suddenly, but the transition was in the happening before this particular crisis.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it wasn't.

Bundokji said:

The excessive use of economic sanctions that are enabled by having the USD as a reserve currency and its relation to existing financial systems made cryptos a favorite alternative for some terrorist organizations and even states.

Malcolm wrote:

China does not permit crypto, they are deeply invested in US treasuries.

Bundokji said:

I have heard that more countries are seeking alternatives and working on it, including Russia, China, India, Iran and Turkey. Those represent a major share of the world's economy.

Malcolm wrote:

They will have a hard time finding a better guarantee than the largest world economy.

Bundokji said:

What is also interesting is the neutral stance of Saudi in this conflict. Saudi refused Biden's demand to increase oil production.

Malcolm wrote:

The last time an OPEC member went awol, it resulted in the first Gulf war.

Bundokji said:

In a recent interview between MBS and The Atlantic, MBS threatened to withdraw some of Saudi investment in the US and to buy weapons from "eastern countries". Few years ago, Kuwait decided to have a basket of currencies as its reserve ending pegging the value of its currency to the USD. Even Israel is hesitant to take a clear stance.

Malcolm wrote:

All of this is besides the point.

Bundokji said:

The weaker stance of the western bloc in this conflict...

Malcolm wrote:

???

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 5:36 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

No, it wasn't.

Bundokji said:

<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Petroyuan>

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.forbes.com/sites/douglasbulloch/2018/04/26/the-petro-dollar-is-a-myth-the-petro-yuan-mere-fantasy/?sh=364669076a14>

Bundokji said:

Inevitably, stories about the toppling of the "Petro-dollar" and the long yearned for rise of an alternative reserve currency, one not dependent on the whims of a capricious political elite in Washington, have proliferated across the alter-net and on the state-backed media platforms of Russia and China.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 5:40 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Bundokji said:

He is selling "opinions"...

Malcolm wrote:

Anyone who relies on Tucker Carlson is a fool.

Bundokji said:

His utterances would resonate with many of which their intelligence level is beside the point.

Malcolm wrote:

As the saying goes, "There is a sucker born every minute."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 6:03 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Bundokji said:

<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Petroyuan>

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.forbes.com/sites/douglasbulloch/2018/04/26/the-petro-dollar-is-a-myth-the-petro-yuan-mere-fantasy/?sh=364669076a14>

Bundokji said:

Inevitably, stories about the toppling of the "Petro-dollar" and the long yearned for rise of an alternative reserve currency, one not dependent on the whims of a capricious political elite in Washington, have proliferated across the alter-net and on the state-backed media platforms of Russia and China.

I fail to see the connection between what you quoted and that countries are seeking alternatives before the current crisis, something you denied previously.

Malcolm wrote:

You brought up Petroyuans. I did not deny that some countries might seek to get out of the US reserve currency system, I pointed out instead that the idea there is actually a viable alternative at this time is a fantasy, and everyone knows it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 6:08 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Queequeg said:

Just one point... He's complaining that Lindsey Graham was in Ukraine agitating for war in 2017. Carlson failed to mention anything about Crimea which was the real reason for those statements. He took them out of context to argue that people in DC want war with Russia. That is some qanon level paranoia.

Bundokji said:

My main take from what he said is that many American people will be negatively affected by the current policies. Usually, when policies are sold, the negatives are downplayed.

While the effects of the sanctions will be most felt in Russia, the short and long term effects on those who are imposing them are less spoke about. To that extent, i see value in what he says.

Malcolm wrote:

Everyone who pays attention is quite aware of these things. If they need Tucker Carlson to point it out to them...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 6:48 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

You brought up Petroyuans. I did not deny that some countries might seek to get out of the US reserve currency system, I pointed out instead that the idea there is actually a viable alternative at this time is a fantasy, and everyone knows it.

Bundokji said:

Had they known it, they would not have tried.

Malcolm wrote:

Sometimes people fly to close to the sun.

Bundokji said:

Many other nations have expansionist ambitions, or simply they do not want to be held hostage to a financial system that works in favor of their rival. The excessive use of financial sanctions would further fuel the efforts to find alternatives.

Malcolm wrote:

I would say that excess use of force against civilians which result in sanctions is likely to permanently damage ambitions of such expansionist countries, resulting in the opposite of what they want.

Bundokji said:

Many US allies are taking somehow a neutral stance, possibly as a perpetration for a future where the US wont be as dominant.

Malcolm wrote:

??? Neutral stance to what? An oil embargo against Russia? Its not a neutral stance, its a stance of economic dependency. However, the Russians and Germany, etc, are going to discover, sooner rather than later, that under the present conditions, Russia will not be able to meet their obligations to deliver oil that has already been purchased.

Bundokji said:

I thought that the stance of oil rich countries would be particularly relevant in this context. It is not only Saudi who threatened to turn east, but UAE also abstained from voting against Russia at the security council and the UN assembly.

Malcolm wrote:

In the first case, MSB wants something. Not sure what. In the second case, oligarchs.

Bundokji said:

Those countries have been suckers for the US since their independence. Another example is Israel that had a history of strong partnership with the US. Change in interests changes attitude and the formation of alliances.

Malcolm wrote:

Israel has to maintain a pretense of independence for their own sense of self-worth.

Bundokji said:

Media helps shape public opinion (Tucker Carlson or otherwise). For what its worth, circa 2M people, mostly US citizens i assume, watched his video since yesterday.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, there are a lot of people who are not used to critical thinking. That is TC's fan base.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 7:31 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 8:01 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

??? Neutral stance to what? An oil embargo against Russia? Its not a neutral stance, its a stance of economic dependency. However, the Russians and Germany, etc, are going to discover, sooner rather than later, that under the present conditions, Russia will not be able to meet their obligations to deliver oil that has already been purchased.

Bundokji said:

I have heard that Saudi refused to increase their oil production (as they usually do per US demands) to ease the markets. A decrease in Russian oil and gas production is offset by the increase in prices, minimizing the effects of sanctions on their economy.

Malcolm wrote:

As for the Saudis, I learned they want more support in the Yemen civil war and immunity for MSB.

As for your other argument, I don't think so. Right now Russian oil is being sold at a discount.

Bundokji said:

Germany decided to increase its military spending, and while in the short term this is promoted as increasing their contribution to NATO, longer term is a move towards less dependence on US protection. I expect similar moves by Japan. As to energy independence, in this crisis nuclear plants have been targeted. I assume that renewable energy present easier military targets than fossil fuel in the case of military confrontation short of nuclear war. A whole solar farm can be easily destroyed and would take much longer time to repair, than to say, a damage to an oil or gas pipeline.

Malcolm wrote:

No one bothers to hit pipelines. They hit refineries.

Bundokji said:

In the first case, MSB wants something. Not sure what. In the second case, oligarchs. I think those regimes are better aligned with the republicans than the democrats. Also i guess the DNC is more funded by renewable energy companies than the RNC which is funded by oil and gas companies.

Malcolm wrote:

They are the same companies.

Bundokji said:

Israel has to maintain a pretense of independence for their own sense of self-worth. The pretense is two sided in my opinion. Israel's alliance with the US was never for free. They have things to gain by forming new alliances and hopefully being more open to the rest of the region where they exist.

Malcolm wrote:

Only if they actually succeed in allying with the Saudi's against Iran. Muslims of all stripes still think Israel has no right to exist.

Bundokji said:

They still have equal rights to vote.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, they sure do. And the GOP is incapable of winning anymore without cheating.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 9:44 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Bundokji said:

On the other hand, Biden used harsh rhetoric during the elections, but did not act on it.

Malcolm wrote:

You really underestimate Biden.

But frankly, this is all beside the point.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 10:52 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 10:58 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Conclusion:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 11:20 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Nemo said:

Digital Yuan is a stable coin that can be used for trade without banking intermediaries.

Malcolm wrote:

Um, no. It is a so called Central Bank Digital Currency. It's meant for retail and is backed by the Peoples Bank of China.

It is unlike "crypto" currencies which have no backing by a central bank. Like other digital currencies, it's anonymity is limited.

<https://www.db.com/news/detail/20210714-digital-yuan-what-is-it-and-how-does-it-work>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 11:39 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.reuters.com/markets/europe/oil-markets-fret-over-supply-shock-some-buyers-shun-russia-2022-03-08/>

Unknown said:

LONDON, March 8 (Reuters) - The U.S. ban on Russian oil and gas imports is likely to leave more cargoes at sea with no buyers, and the European Union's decision to continue imports was unlikely to make much difference to disarray in Russian oil trade, analysts said on Tuesday.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 9:13 PM

Title: Re: Start preparing for War Escalations

Content:

Boris said:

Now, it is difficult for me to imagine which sick brain at the head of China would worsen all the above-mentioned trade partnerships in order to work only with Russia.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.facebook.com/zz6677/posts/10224903516792419>

[/quote]

Yes. Still, China will benefit from the firesale that Russia has become.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 10:27 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

PeterC said:

That's a first.

Bundokji said:

Seconded by Tulsi Gabbard in an interview earlier today

Queequeg said:

Not impressive company. She has turned out to be a jackass.

Malcolm wrote:

We should welcome Bundokji's trolling, if only to confirm how out of touch with reality the Trump wing of the GOP actually is from their own side.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 10:34 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

PeterC said:

Indeed the reason there is demand for an alternative is because for the past few decades the US has increasingly used the way the payments system is structured to pursue national political goals.

Malcolm wrote:

But you have already explained why it is impractical for such an alternative payment system to function. Basically, either the size of the US economy would have to shrink substantially, or the size of the Chinese economy would have to increase substantially. But the latter is unlikely and the former is too. Recall, the Chinese were issuing warnings to DC in 2008 when they were concerned about the value of treasuries during the melt down.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 10:39 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Bundokji said:

Tucker Carlson had an interesting reflections

PeterC said:

That's a first.

Bundokji said:

Seconded by Tulsi Gabbard in an interview earlier today

Malcolm wrote:

Meanwhile, back in the real world:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 10:42 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Bundokji said:

Seconded by Tulsi Gabbard in an interview earlier today

Queequeg said:

Not impressive company. She has turned out to be a jackass.

Bundokji said:

I think she strikes a balance between being too institutional like a standard politicians, and too individualistic like Trump

Malcolm wrote:

Seconded, she is a jackass. The only reason she has a career is because she is on Faux news.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 10:48 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Nemo said:

They are solving the biggest problem with crypto first.

Malcolm wrote:

It is not "crypto". It is a state-backed, central-bank guaranteed currency in digital form. It is not tied to churning out irrelevant solutions to math problems no one cares about.

Nemo said:

Using it at retailers and for everyday purchases. It would be cheaper and more practical for international transactions. Imagine traveling to a new country and simply paying for everything with your phone with no fees.

Malcolm wrote:

One of the first things that went down in Russia was paying for things with your Iphone. And, Denmark is already largely cashless. I personally rarely carry cash, which is why I owe the town dump 2 bucks.

Nemo said:

The US will have to compete or be left behind. E-CNY could be better than SWIFT.

Malcolm wrote:

Two completely unrelated systems. Better lay off the "Yukon gold" there Nemo.

Hey mods, can we split the financial thing, it is off topic, related but off topic.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 10:56 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.wsj.com/articles/swift-banking-system-sanctions-biden-11645745909?>

Unknown said:

The Society for Worldwide Interbank Financial Telecommunication, or Swift, is the financial-messaging infrastructure that links the world's banks. Swift doesn't handle actual money transfers itself. It is a messaging system, a secure way banks transmit transfer requests to each other. Money moving from one account to another often passes by multiple banks before landing in the final destination, particularly if it involves a foreign currency. Swift routes messages with instructions from one bank to another, allowing them to know where the money should ultimately land. The Belgium-based system is run by its member banks and handles millions of daily payment instructions across more than 200 countries and territories and 11,000 financial institutions. Iran and North Korea are cut off from it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 11:06 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Nemo said:

I don't think you know what crypto is.

Cryptocurrency, sometimes called crypto-currency or crypto, is any form of currency that exists digitally or virtually and uses cryptography to secure transactions.

Apply pay is intermediated by your bank. E-CNY is digital cash that can be sent between parties while offline.

Malcolm wrote:

OED:

A digital currency in which transactions are verified and records maintained by a decentralized system using cryptography, rather than by a centralized authority.

<https://www.cnbc.com/2022/01/11/china-digital-yuan-pboc-to-expand-e-cny-use-but-challenges-remain.html>

Also known as the e-CNY, it's designed to replace the cash and coins already in circulation. It is not a cryptocurrency like bitcoin, in part because it's controlled and issued by the central bank. Bitcoin is a decentralized digital currency that isn't backed by any central banks or a single administrator.

The whole point of crypto is that it is NOT administered and controlled by a central bank, that is, a government.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 9th, 2022 at 11:31 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Nemo said:

Stable coins are still crypto. Your idea is some libertarian nonsense.

Malcolm wrote:

Um, no Nemo.

Nemo said:

Since you can trade e-CNY offline clearly it is cryptographic in nature. So Binance USD is not crypto?

Malcolm wrote:

No, this is not the case. Why don't you read up a bit on the Chinese white paper published last July:

One, it clearly distinguishes digital currency from cryptocurrencies:

Adopting blockchain and encryption technology, cryptocurrencies such as Bitcoin are claimed to be decentralized and entirely anonymous. However, given their lack of intrinsic value, acute price fluctuations, low trading efficiencies and huge energy consumption, they can hardly serve as currencies used in daily economic activities. In addition, cryptocurrencies are mostly speculative instruments, and therefore pose potential risks to financial security and social stability. Moreover, they have been employed as payment instruments for money-laundering and other illegal economic activities. To tackle the relatively big price fluctuation concern of cryptocurrencies, some commercial institutions launched so-called “stablecoins”, and tried to stabilize their values by pegging them to sovereign currencies or related assets. Some commercial institutions even plan to launch global stablecoins, which will bring risks and challenges to the international monetary system, payment and clearing system, monetary policies, cross-border capital flow management and etc.

More importantly, it is fiat currency, like the dollar:

E-CNY is the digital version of fiat currency issued by the PBOC and operated by authorized operators. It is a value-based, quasi-account-based and account-based hybrid payment instrument, with legal tender status and loosely-coupled account linkage. It has the following connotations:

The encryption features are present for storage, not for generating the currency:

E-CNY adopts a variety of technologies, including digital certificate system, digital signature, and encrypted storage to make double-spending, illegal duplication and counterfeit, transaction falsification, and repudiation unfeasible. A multi-layer security system has been initially established to guarantee that e-CNY has a safe life cycle and risks are manageable.

Here is the white paper:

<http://www.pbc.gov.cn/en/3688110/3688172/4157443/4293696/2021071614584691871.pdf>

E-CNY is not what you are representing it to be.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 10th, 2022 at 8:49 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Timothy Snyder, Arne Westad, etc:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 10th, 2022 at 8:53 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

Of course, the fact that he's been weaponised by Russian propaganda makes him automatically untouchable for many here, and I partially understand.

Malcolm wrote:

Mearshiemer is just one opinion out of many in US academia. He belongs to a certain school of geopolitics. Like everyone else, he is an observer with opinions, some of which I disagree with, and find poorly argued, especially in light of Ukraine's long standing wish to join the Western European community, against more than a decade of Putin's open hostility to their nation, and in light of Russian promises to respect Ukrainian territorial integrity, signed by Lavrov in 1994.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 10th, 2022 at 9:35 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

<https://tompepinsky.com/2022/03/03/heres-why-mearsheimers-realist-take-is-so-exasperating/>

I have a different interpretation of what a realist should conclude about the Russian invasion of Ukraine and its antecedents. I start from a different premise: Russia is not a great power. It is obviously a declining power, objectively so. Its only claims to global power status are its petroleum reserves, its nuclear arsenal, and our collective memories of the Cold War. Take those away, and Russia is no more a great power than Turkey was in 1935.

The Soviet Union lost the Cold War decisively. Its empire fell into pieces, its regional alliance disappeared, and most of its former allies joined NATO. Russia lost, and the Western alliance won. Given this, it is not NATO's responsibility to protect Russian state security interests. It is Russia's responsibility to give wide berth to NATO, recognizing—as every realist should—that the strong do what they will, the weak do what they must.

Russian proclamations that it gets to prioritize Putin's individual political survival over the logic of international relations are nothing more than idealist fantasies.

Objectively, no one wants to invade or destroy Russia, there are not and have never been plans for a NATO conquest of Russia. Russia had a good deal: they got to sell their petroleum and defend their territorial integrity with their aging nuclear arsenal. Invading Ukraine was a stupid strategic error made by a declining power that does not understand The Tragedy of Great Power Politics. In the immediate short run, Ukrainians will pay the prices for Russia's strategic errors, but in the long run, Russia will bear the consequences. It has demonstrated clearly the limits of its force projection capabilities, and united NATO and the EU and a bunch of other hard-hearted neutral states at the same time. As I like to say, if you've lost Singapore and Switzerland....

See how this works? One goes quickly from a different premise about what the objective facts of the realist world are, and reasons through the questions of "how should the world work?" and "what should a policymaker do."

Lots of people object to realist analyses because they lack a clear moral position on violence and individual liberty. I share these views. But I also despise this realist way of thinking because it is so indeterminate, and because it leads to statements about what states' security interests which are, I think, either vacuous or hopelessly subjective. And that is why Mearsheimer's take is so exasperating.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 10th, 2022 at 11:56 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 10th, 2022 at 11:59 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Queequeg said:

To be clear - I don't think any of us thinks the US should have a hand in any "regime change" in Russia.

Malcolm wrote:

Let's just be honest here. Sanctions are aimed at regime change. And I disagree completely. We should have a hand in regime change in Russia.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 12:08 AM

Title: Re: Is Sadhguru enlightened?

Content:

Aemilius said:

'The Damar Tantra claims that, "Shivambu (Urine therapy) is capable of abolishing old age and various types of diseases and ailments."

This book is divided into two parts. Part one is organized according to ailment for your particular health concern. Part two is the original shivambu kalpa vidhi taken from the Damar Tantra. Most of the therapies in the Damar Tantra are for reversing aging and treating various ailments.'

"The Shivambu Kalpa Vidhi is part of a 5,000-year-old document called the Damar Tantra. This is linked to the Vedas, the sacred Hindu texts. Urine is the water of Shiva and is antibacterial, antifungal and antiviral. You can put it on wounds for healing. It's already structured to your DNA. You have to have a healthy diet. If you have alcohol, tobacco or meat – what I consider toxic substances – then all your systems will be toxic. Don't start urine therapy until you've looked at everything going into your body. You are making your best preventative medicine. It's like a gift to yourself. Face creams contain urea, and that's cow piss. I'd rather [use] my own piss."

TEIG O'MALLEY , yoga instructor

Malcolm wrote:

This thread gets more bizarre everyday.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 12:53 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

As for the hospital being hit and all the civilian deaths, this is what happens in a war. Not sure if you're old enough to remember the US war in Iraq. They hit hospitals, weddings and many other civilian targets. A 2 second google search yielded this:

<https://www.france24.com/en/20080503-us-air-strike-hits-sadr-city-hospital-iraq>

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, but we don't AIM at hospitals and civilians, unlike the Russian military:

<https://www.nytimes.com/2019/10/13/world/middleeast/russia-bombing-syrian-> hospitals.html

So your attempted whataboutism is just pathetic.

Dan74 said:

And I don't know if the Russian army has been especially brutal in this war or more brutal than the US in Iraq.

Malcolm wrote:

Not since the Vietnam war has the US ever engaged in anything like the desolation of Grozny or Aleppo. etc.

Dan74 said:

And yeah, the Russian Empire appears to be playing catchup in these evil stakes..

Malcolm wrote:

Catch up? The Russians have been ahead of us on that score since the invasion of Chechnya, not to mention Ukrainian Genocide, a.k.a the <https://www.britannica.com/event/Holodomor>.

What is happening now is just a continuation of one hundred years of Russian genocidal policy towards Ukrainians.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 1:32 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Jesse said:

You can't really defend America when it comes to war.. We've been committing genocide since our country was established.. Native americans being the first group.

Malcolm wrote:

Yup. A national stain on our conscience. Our country was founded on the twin pillars of slavery and genocide. I've mentioned it often enough myself on these boards. I didn't forget.

Jesse said:

<https://www.commondreams.org/news/2022/01/21/saudi-bombings-kill-scores-civilians-including-children-yemen>

Malcolm wrote:

That's the Saudis.

Jesse said:

America is heavily involved in Yemen, they provide more than just weapons. America is guilty in an ongoing genocide right now, literally.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, no, we are not.

<https://arabcenterdc.org/resource/a-timeline-of-the-yemen-crisis-from-the-1990s-to-the-present/>

We not only sold the Saudis' arms under the Trump administration, we also supplied 5.5 billion dollars in aid directly to Yemen in 2017.

One of the reasons the Saudi's won't release more oil is due to the fact that we are not supporting them to their satisfaction in their proxy war with Iran.

The Biden administration only agreed to a new weapons sale, 280 air to air missiles, in Oct. 21.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 1:56 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

One is of course welcome to believe that the Russian war machine is more evil than the US one, if it helps one sleep better at night. The USSR surely inflicted more suffering on its people, at least in its first 30 years. But when it comes to the rest of the world, whether due to its reach or a general harmful disposition or both, there is no way the USSR/Russia comes even close to the body count the USA is responsible for.

Malcolm wrote:

Really, so you really think the United States killed more than 6-9 million people, which is the number Stalin by himself dispatched? Then there is the million or so under Nicolas 1, etc.

The total number of casualties in all US wars combined, including civilians, is no more than 3 million, over a 250 year history.

It's difficult to come up with a number for Native Americans who were killed during the 19th century, because the US did not count native people in the census. It's anyone's guess. However, the estimate population of Native people can be gleaned here: <https://nativestudy.wordpress.com>

So, no Dan, your guess is utter bullshit based on no facts. We know quite well how many people Stalin killed under his regime.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 2:03 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Jesse said:

Except we are, our own state department has been calling us out on it.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, people have reservations about things. A responsible state department examines many sides of an issue. The job of an inspector general is to voice concerns.

And those arms sales called into question happened during the Pompeo State department.

<https://www.politico.com/news/2020/08/11/state-department-civilians-middle-east-393584>

We are out of Yemen. But the Houthis keep firing rockets at the Saudis. So we sold the Saudi's 280 air to air missiles for defensive purposes.

You are not presenting a very complete picture of the situation.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 2:10 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Brunelleschi said:

The problem with sanctions is that they do not seem to work. Iran has had terrible sanctions for many years which have resulted in deficits in diabetes medicine and so on - however no regime change in sight.

Malcolm wrote:

They do work. But in order to work, the US has to maintain a consistent foreign policy from one administration to another. Trump savaged NATO, the State Department, alliances, and so on, and interrupted 70 years of diplomacy. The reason why Biden has continued many Trump era policies is that once the ground changes, one is kind of stuck with it. Imagine it as trench warfare. In this case, because Trump was a terrible general, the US nearly lost ground. Biden, being a pretty good general, strengthened our position. Nonetheless, we have to deal with emboldened enemies like Putin.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 2:15 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Queequeg said:

Are you admitting you're one of those complexly nuanced supporters of Putin?

Malcolm wrote:

Of course he is.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 2:32 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Jesse said:

I provided the history of the situation, and the fact we still haven't stopped selling them arms. Considering our present situation with oil, do you fathom that we won't sell them more bombing munitions once the public freaks out and makes gas prices a primary issue in the next election?

Malcolm wrote:

The arms sale happened before the Russian invasion of Ukraine.

Jesse said:

I see very little difference between directly bombing civilians, and knowingly selling bombs to a country that is bombing civilians, the difference is marginal. Saudi is well protected, 99% of the rockets are taken down by their anti missile systems.

Malcolm wrote:

Right, and they needed to replenish them.

Jesse said:

Yes Iran is waging proxy wars on both Saudi, and Israel, both of whom are our allies, which is why we are providing arms to them. We haven't however forced either of them to comply with higher standards in warfare, and which we ourselves still violate frequently enough.

Malcolm wrote:

Basically, you are a left-wing isolationist. This is ok. But I don't think this is very sound foreign policy.

Jesse said:

Nothing really justifies supporting genocide of civilians, even if an armed group is firing rockets at you/allies. You being a larger, more well funded country, spend the extra money, comply with international treaties and standards; go in and remove the armed groups. You don't bomb hospitals, and infrastructure, and blockade food and supplies for civilians harming/killing millions.

The primary reasons they can't stop these groups is because they committed genocide, displacing millions of people, which supplies constant streams of new soldiers/terrorists; however you want to designate them. When you murder civilians, they join militias and armies, go figure.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, its just not as straight-forward as you would like it to be:

Since March 2015, the coalition has conducted numerous indiscriminate and disproportionate airstrikes killing thousands of civilians and hitting civilian structures in violation of the laws of war, using munitions sold by the United States, United Kingdom, and others. Houthi forces have used banned antipersonnel landmines, recruited children, and fired artillery indiscriminately into cities such as Taizz, killing and wounding civilians, and launched indiscriminate ballistic missiles into Saudi Arabia.
<https://www.hrw.org/world-report/2020/country-chapters/yemen>

Jesse said:

Followers of Zayd established themselves in north Yemen's rugged mountains in the ninth century. For the next thousand years, the Zaydis fought for control of Yemen with various degrees of success. A succession of Zaydi Imams ruled the community and Zaydis were the majority of the population in the mountains of the north. They fought against both the Ottomans and the Wahhabis in the 18th and 19th centuries.

With the collapse of the Ottoman Empire in 1918, a Zaydi monarchy took power in North Yemen called the Mutawakkilite Kingdom. The ruler, or imam, was both a secular ruler and a spiritual leader. Their kingdom fought and lost a border war with Saudi Arabia in the 1930s, losing territory to the Saudi state. They also enjoyed international recognition as the legitimate government of North Yemen. Their capital was in Taiz.

Malcolm wrote:

They are anti-American:

The American invasion of Iraq in 2003 deeply radicalized the Houthi movement, like it did many other Arabs. It was a pivotal moment. The Houthis adopted the slogan: "God is great, death to the U.S., death to Israel, curse the Jews, and victory for Islam," in the wake of the U.S.-led invasion of Iraq. The group also officially called itself Ansar Allah, or supporters of God. It was a turning point largely unrecognized outside Yemen, another unanticipated consequence of George Bush's Iraq adventures.

<https://www.brookings.edu/blog/markaz/2017/12/18/who-are-the-houthis-and-why-are-we-at-war-with-them/>

Should we refrain from supporting the Saudi war against the Houthis? Of course, but quite frankly, while the situation in Yemen is terrible, we didn't create it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 2:35 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

It doesn't necessarily tell us what to support or do, that's a much more complicated decision.

Malcolm wrote:

The whataboutism should be considered off topic or another thread created for the Whataboutist party to waffle on and on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 2:58 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Bundokji said:

In my view, whataboutism

Malcolm wrote:

Generally speaking, whataboutism serves to draw false equivalencies.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 3:18 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Jesse said:

I think we should absolutely hold ourselves and others to higher standards.

Malcolm wrote:

That's just not how the concept of state sovereignty functions.

The fact is that the Houthis attacked the legitimate government of Yemen.

Yemen was on track to institute western style liberal democracy, was a US ally against Al Qaida, etc. Ex-president Saleh and the Houthis illegally deposed the elected president of Yemen, Hadi, in 2015.

This is a summary of what State has to say on the issue:

<https://www.state.gov/u-s-relations-with-yemen/>

Characterizing Yemen as a genocide by the Saudis or anyone else is just bollocks, quite frankly. The Houthis are, if anything, more responsible for this mess than the Saudis. They started this war, and it is their people who are suffering the most. If they want to stop the suffering of the northern Yemeni people, they should put down their arms.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 3:22 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Naw, sorry. Just because a bunch of y'all have decided to convert to Neocons doesn't mean people can't mention things.

Queequeg said:

Supporting Ukraine makes one a Neocon?

Malcolm wrote:

The general point of view of people to the left of the center left is always the same.

I was kidding a few years ago when I mentioned a few years ago that Trump's election put me in touch with my inner neocon/neoliberal. Not kidding now. Labels are not really that helpful in these sorts of things, but hey, if it makes happy to call me a neocon, that's fine by me. I've never made any secret of the fact that I prefer US hegemony to that of China. Russia of course does not have enough power to muster a hegemony of anything but mud pits in Siberia. But they can still wreck a lot of damage on their neighbors.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 3:28 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

1) All the sudden legitimizing anything America does as not as bad because Pax Americana is better than Pax Putin.

Malcolm wrote:

There can never be a Pax Putin. Putin is too weak.

Mischaracterizing what evil the US has done in the world however, such as Dan as done, can't be allowed to stand, since it is grounded in zero facts.

Johnny Dangerous said:

2) Continually accusing anyone and everyone who even dares question the narrative of “Supporting Russia”.

Malcolm wrote:

Apologizing for Russia isn't supporting Russia, it's one step removed. It's still atrocious.

Johnny Dangerous said:

3) Equating Democracy itself with maintenance of American imperial goals, assuming that military postures somehow automatically line up with just ideologies.

Malcolm wrote:

America doesn't have imperial goals. Much like Rome, its expansion was largely driven by what it perceived to be external threats: First Britain, then the Mexican empire, later Spain. By 1914, the US was largely concerned with consolidation. WWII and the collapse of the British empire paved the way for our hegemony, with Europe's blessing, by and large.

Spreading democracy used to be considered good for business, since in general the idea was that democracy and capitalism are interrelated. This is actually true, in fact. The capitalist development of Russia was stifled by Putin's authoritarianism, just as it is being reigned in by Xi.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 3:36 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shinjin said:

You would vote for George Bush?

Malcolm wrote:

Of course not. But according to JD's logic, the US involvement in the Balkan war was also a neoconservative action. I also think trashing the TPP was a big mistake. I did not support Bernie in this. I still voted for him. I also permanently ended my affection for the Green Party when I saw Jill Stein repeating RT talking points about Clinton.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 3:52 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

The leftist gang-up on Clinton was mostly misogyny funded by alt-right groups pretending to be on the left anyways.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, it was definitely misogyny, and it was widely supported by people on the left in the USA. I can't tell you how many people I know, who should have known better, who left the top of their ticket blank, because "Hillary."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 4:18 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Talk about out of touch with reality.

On the other hand, finding myself on the same side as Karl Rove is a bit disconcerting.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 4:30 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shinjin said:

You would vote for George Bush?

Malcolm wrote:

Of course not. But according to JD's logic, the US involvement in the Balkan war was also a neoconservative action. I also think trashing the TPP was a big mistake. I did not support Bernie in this. I still voted for him. I also permanently ended my affection for the Green Party when I saw Jill Stein repeating RT talking points about Clinton.

Johnny Dangerous said:

I didn't say anything about the Balkans, I said your theoretical foreign policy posture has basically pivoted to neoconservative, and you pretty much agreed.

One of the premises of Neoconservative thought is that there are only two choices, an American-dominated world where the US must always aggressively pursue its interests (because those are everyone's interests, really), the other alternative is chaos. As far as I can tell, you agree with this.

Malcolm wrote:

I think that an American-dominated world is in everyone's best interest. The alternative is chaos, as the Trump administration proved this admirably, as did the Hoover administration (another isolationist administration that not only destroyed the American economy, but tolerated the rise of Fascism in Europe, along with an England that dropped the ball on this point as well).

Johnny Dangerous said:

I tend not to, and believe there may be more options than these. Further, I think that uncritically supporting US interventions as ideologically sound can lead to bad stuff, like Iraq.

Malcolm wrote:

I do not believe that the second invasion of Iraq was ever in anyone's interest. On the other hand, it was fomented by Dick Cheney almost exclusively, who through sheer force of delusion (he still believes in the WMD theory to this day) forced us into this conflict.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Far as the present situation, I am not sure what the US should do. However, it's important to remember that in any conflict no country has simple motivations.

Malcolm wrote:

I think we should arm the Ukrainians to the teeth. Putin's attempted assault on the liberal democratic order is far from over. Just read Alexander Dugin. These people are enemies of democracy in toto.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Often the strategic and tactical end is pretty well divorced from the moral one. In that sense, I have some sympathy for the realists position.

Malcolm wrote:

The Road to Unfreedom by Snyder really is required reading to understand what is going on. He says:

The fascism of the 1920s and 1930s, Ilyin's era, had three core features: it celebrated will and violence over reason and law; it proposed a leader with a mystical connection to his people; and it characterized globalization as a conspiracy rather than as a set of problems. Revived today in conditions of inequality as a politics of eternity, fascism serves oligarchs as a catalyst for transitions away from public discussion and towards political fiction; away from meaningful voting and towards fake democracy; away from the rule of law and towards personalist regimes.

Snyder, Timothy. The Road to Unfreedom (p. 16). Crown. Kindle Edition.

Basically, it boils down to this for me: if we do not support democratically elected governments abroad, our democracy, imperfect though it may be, will fail here in the United States. We also need to recognize that Putin's attempts to degrade democracy wherever he can are real, are an explicit part of Russian foreign policy, and are driven by ideology as well, an ideology no less authoritarian than Soviet-style communism. In short, Putin is a fascist, and Russia is a fascist country.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 4:53 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Yeah, well, I remember when it was "the end of history" and when America was "the last great superpower". Turns out that was nonsense and we still live in a multipolar world, despite the Neocon/Neolib fantasy to the contrary.

Under those circumstances, desiring An exclusively American-dominated world seems out of touch, and perhaps dangerous and destabilizing in its own way.

Comparing Russia with pre WWII Germany simply seems crazy to me, sorry.

Malcolm wrote:

The comparisons are completely apt. But if you won't see it, well, that's not my problem. But you should understand that Putin revived a Russian fascist author named Ivan Ilyin, whose works are wildly popular in Russia these days.

Johnny Dangerous said:

After a new Russian Federation emerged from the defunct Soviet Union in 1991, Ilyin's short book Our Tasks began to circulate in new Russian editions, his collected works were published, and his ideas gained powerful supporters. He had died forgotten in Switzerland; Putin organized a reburial in Moscow in 2005. Ilyin's personal papers had found their way to Michigan State University; Putin sent an emissary to reclaim them in 2006. By then Putin was citing Ilyin in his annual presidential addresses to the general assembly of the Russian parliament. These were important speeches, composed by Putin himself. In the 2010s, Putin relied upon Ilyin's authority to explain why Russia had to undermine the European Union and invade Ukraine. When asked to name a historian, Putin cited Ilyin as his authority on the past.

Malcolm wrote:

Snyder, Timothy. The Road to Unfreedom (pp. 17-18). Crown. Kindle Edition.

Snyder does not have any patience for what he called the politics of inevitability in the US either:

The capitalist version of the politics of inevitability, the market as a substitute for policy, generates economic inequality that undermines belief in progress. As social mobility halts, inevitability gives way to eternity, and democracy gives way to oligarchy. An oligarch spinning a tale of an innocent past, perhaps with the help of fascist ideas, offers fake protection to people with real pain. Faith that technology serves freedom opens the way to his spectacle. As distraction replaces concentration, the future dissolves in the frustrations of the present, and eternity becomes daily life. The oligarch crosses into real politics from a world of fiction, and governs by invoking myth and manufacturing crisis. crisis. In the 2010s, one such person, Vladimir Putin, escorted another, Donald Trump, from fiction to power.

Snyder, Timothy. The Road to Unfreedom (pp. 15-16). Crown. Kindle Edition.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 5:32 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 5:46 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

I for one welcome our Chinese friends.

Malcolm wrote:

A very poor understanding of Adam Smith.

And she might do well to read Hayek's "The Road to Serfdom." You might too:

It is not difficult to see what must be the consequences when democracy embarks upon a course of planning which in its execution requires more agreement than in fact exists. The people may have agreed on adopting a system of directed economy because they have been convinced that it will produce great prosperity. In the discussions leading to the decision, the goal of planning will have been described by some such term as "common welfare," which only conceals the absence of real agreement on the ends of planning. Agreement will in fact exist only on the mechanism to be used. But it is a mechanism which can be used only for a common end; and the question of the precise goal toward which all activity is to be directed will arise as soon as the executive power has to translate the demand for a single plan into a particular plan. Then it will appear that the agreement on the desirability of planning is not supported by agreement on the ends the plan is to serve. The effect of the people's agreeing that there must be central planning, without agreeing on the ends, will be rather as if a group of people were to commit themselves to take a journey together without agreeing where they want to go: with the result that they may all have to make a journey which most of them do not want at all.

Hayek, F. A.. The Road to Serfdom: Text and Documents--The Definitive Edition: Text and Documents--The Definitive Edition (The Collected Works of F. A. Hayek, Volume 2) (pp. 103-104). University of Chicago Press. Kindle Edition.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 5:59 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

I for one welcome our Chinese friends.

Malcolm wrote:

A very poor understanding of Adam Smith.

Brunelleschi said:

Yeah, I'm just joking man.

Malcolm wrote:
Sometimes it is hard to tell.

I am not a big fan of the Austrian school either; however, this book of Hayek's is very difficult to argue against.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 7:10 AM
Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras
Content:
Toenail said:
Cant listen to the explanation thing tomorrow. Is there a way to listen to a recording of it?

Malcolm wrote:
There will be. I will let you know.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 9:54 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
PeterC said:
I don't understand why we're discussing whether the US or Russia is morally worse.
They both suck.

Malcolm wrote:
The United States birthed democracy. Democracy has benefitted everyone, including Russians. When they see those benefits withdrawn due to the behavior of their leadership, they will either replace it, or frankly, they will suffer in poverty, and will be shunned by the international community, by those at least who have some moral timbre, at any rate.

Once Putin starts using chemical weapons, within the next week or so, then things will go from where they are now—bad—to much, much worse.

There is no way the EU and NATo tolerates this.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 10:13 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
KristenM said:
. I get it, people want to blame the US for this and then also say the US has no right to feign moral outrage.

Malcolm wrote:

Which of course is a bunch of total bullshit.

Not only that, Dan is in no position to be so patronizing toward you.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 8:49 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Bundokji said:

I guess because many politicians, especially in the west, promoting their interference on moral ground, while the other side focuses more on self-interest.

Malcolm wrote:

Clearly, you have not paid attention to anything Putin has said. He regards democracy itself as immoral and he has said so. In the process, he has done everything he can to undermine democracy every way possible, because he thinks it is immoral. It's part and parcel of his Russian fascism.

He is not acting in his self-interest, nor in the interest of Russia. It's preposterous to make the claim he is. He is just a victim of the kind of nationalist romanticism that always leads people like him to the open embraces of fascist ideologues like Ilyin and Dugin.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 8:57 PM

Title: Re: Are we our bodies?

Content:

shanyin said:

Does Buddhist no-self teaching mean that human beings are not their bodies and minds? If we are not those what are we?

Malcolm wrote:

Correct. A "person" is an imputation upon a series of aggregates.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 11th, 2022 at 9:49 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Bundokji said:

Democracy ceases to be moral

Malcolm wrote:

Democracy is a system of transferring power, as Snyder points out:

Functional states produce a sense of continuity for their citizens. If states sustain themselves, citizens can imagine change without fearing catastrophe. The mechanism that ensures that a state outlasts a leader is called the principle of succession. A common one is democracy. The meaning of each election is the promise of the next one. Since each citizen is fallible, democracy transforms cumulative mistakes into a collective belief in the future. History goes on.

Bundokji said:

He did not deny the ambition of restoring Russia as a respectable player in international arena. Existence of both individuals or nations is historical in nature, so having a historical reference to his ambitions is not as disorderly or pathological as his opponents try to make it sound.

Malcolm wrote:

One reason we know that Russia is a dysfunctional state is that they have no viable principle of succession. In Putin's case, he explicitly depends on a fascist for his vision. You might be fine with fascism. The liberal democratic order is not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 12th, 2022 at 2:24 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Democracy is a system of transferring power, as Snyder points out:

Bundokji said:

Some would define democracy as the tyranny of the majority.

Malcolm wrote:

Some people, then, would be wrong.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 12th, 2022 at 2:48 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Bundokji said:

I do not see the bravery of Ukrainian resistance except through the lens of propaganda that convinced people that Russia would emerge victorious in a couple of days. Even the US military might took over a month to invade Iraq which was much weaker than the Ukrainian military.

Malcolm wrote:

They had a longer drive.

Bundokji said:

The same propaganda is not even considering that the Russian army is trying to minimize the impact on civilians which would make the military operation lasts longer. In fact, they are pushing the Russians to use more fatal means, the same game they used before the invasion, keeping on speculating when Russia is going to invade, a tactic that Putin described as both childish and dangerous.

Malcolm wrote:

Pushing Russia? You are nuts.

Bundokji said:

The Russians have history of turning conflicts to their advantage when everyone think they are losing.

Malcolm wrote:

Only when they themselves have been invaded. The record of their wars is not inspiring, they got beat in Crimea, Japan, and Europe in WWI. It was only due to the lendlease program they won in WWII.

Bundokji said:

Biden took a hostile narrative against Russia since the elections.

Malcolm wrote:

For sounds reasons: Chechnya, Georgia/S. Ossetia, Syria, Crimea, and now the rest of Ukraine. Nato is not a threat to Russian security, unless one imagines liberal democracy in itself is such a threat (and it is a threat to Putin's power). If that is the case, Westphalian sovereignty still governs the situation. Russia has violated Ukrainian state sovereignty since 2014.

Bundokji said:

His son was involved with gas companies in Ukraine and Kazakhstan,

Malcolm wrote:

A complete nothing burger.

Bundokji said:

Self interest is more conducive to approaching worldly affairs with a mindset of "damage control".

Malcolm wrote:

It is in the self-interest of liberal democracies to support other liberal democracies. The struggle between authoritarianism (both right and left) and liberal democracy is an existential conflict.

The post-Soviet era was just a pause in the Cold War. It's back now, and naturally, liberal democracy will prevail, just as it did before. The combined economic power of the liberal democracies is the largest in the world. All Putin managed to do was strengthen the resolve of the West to oppose him and other totalitarian regimes like his, if they interfere in our interests.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 12th, 2022 at 3:04 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Jesse said:

That's globalism...

Malcolm wrote:

Thank goodness. Anti-globalism is just anti-modernity in drag.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 12th, 2022 at 3:45 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dan74 said:

It's fascinating what narratives are being build on the basis of scant reliable information. The fire at Enerhodar was never deemed a threat and no one actually confirmed responsibility and how it got started. The electricity cut in Chernobyl is not deemed dangerous by the IAEA: <https://www.theguardian.com/world/2022/mar/09/chernobyl-power-supply-cut-completely-after-russian-seizure-warns-ukaine>

Malcolm wrote:

Correction, oh right, you scampered off before you could read the reply...

The Situation at Chernobyl Is Deteriorating

The defunct site of the infamous 1986 meltdown has lost power two weeks after it was seized by Russian forces. Experts fear another nuclear disaster looms.

...

“To have a long-term loss of power is certainly a concern,” says Ed Lyman, a senior global security scientist at the Union of Concerned Scientists and coauthor of the book Fukushima: The Story of a Nuclear Disaster. Some of Chernobyl’s waste has been transferred into dry casks, but considerable quantities of fuel rods remain in a pool that requires cooling. That’s where the biggest risks currently are. “Without electrical power to the cooling pumps, the spent fuel pool will start heating up,” Lyman says. Water will gradually evaporate or boil away, exposing the fuel rods and releasing radioactive gasses.

Chernobyl’s New Safe Confinement structure also needs electricity. This is the facility built around the concrete “sarcophagus” that surrounds what’s left of the damaged reactor Number Four, which melted down in the 1986 disaster. The confinement structure’s ventilation system must run to prevent the exposed nuclear fuel within it from becoming more hazardous. Without power, the site’s 1.5-billion-euro decommissioning program could be imperiled, Claire Corkhill, an expert on nuclear material degradation at the University of Sheffield in the United Kingdom, wrote on Twitter and in an email to WIRED.

...

“The Russians have been incredibly careless. They not only attacked a nuclear power plant; they also attacked a nuclear laboratory, an accelerator complex that’s designed to produce neutrons,” says Bob Rosner, a physicist at the University of Chicago and former chair of the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists’ Science and Security Board.

And the threat won’t be over as long as Russia continues to bombard Ukraine with missiles and fly warplanes overhead. US Department of Energy researchers have studied whether nuclear reactors could withstand an airplane crash, Dalnoki-Veress says. They cannot. And missiles fly faster and are more penetrating. An impact on a fuel pool could be highly damaging, likely spreading dangerous radioactive material all over. That’s why prohibiting combat near nuclear facilities should be a top priority in Ukraine-Russia negotiations, Dalnoki-Veress argues: “No reactor in the world can withstand a missile strike. It’s important to not have any fighting near these facilities. It’s a no-brainer.”

<https://apple.news/Ay0-fn8cCTKuuqWa8b9CX5A>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 12th, 2022 at 3:49 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It is in the self-interest of liberal democracies to support other liberal democracies. The struggle between authoritarianism (both right and left) and liberal democracy is an existential conflict.

The post-Soviet era was just a pause in the Cold War. It's back now, and naturally, liberal democracy will prevail, just as it did before. The combined economic power of the liberal democracies is the largest in the world. All Putin managed to do was strengthen the resolve of the West to oppose him and other totalitarian regimes like his, if they interfere in our interests.

Bundokji said:

If liberal democracy is a middle path between the extremes of right and left, then it would be a cause for co-existence rather than in existential conflict with them. In my understanding, existential conflict is a result of the extremes, not the middle.

Malcolm wrote:

Liberal internationalism has moralist tendencies and activist impulses, but it is ultimately a reform-oriented and pragmatic endeavor. Modern liberals do not embrace democratic governments, market-based economic systems, and international institutions out of idealism or as tools of empire but as arrangements better suited to realizing human interests than the alternatives. Liberal internationalists hold that world politics requires institutional cooperation and political integration in response to relentlessly rising economic and security interdependence. Liberal internationalists across the past two centuries have considered a global architecture of rules and institutions necessary to protect liberal democracy and realize basic human interests. They have not always kept the best company, and their history is tainted by colonialism, imperialism, slavery, racism, and sexism. Yet liberals have also led the efforts to end these practices.

Ikenberry, G. John. A World Safe for Democracy . Yale University Press. Kindle Edition.

Putin is flouting these rules and concerns. Hence, he has come into the crosshairs of the liberal international order.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 12th, 2022 at 7:34 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Jesse said:

Haven't heard the words False Flag so much in my life, except maybe when I used to watch Alex Jones as a teenager. Now we are to be 'on the lookout' for false flag biological and chemical attacks too.

Sweet.....

Norwegian said:

Yes, because there's a long tradition of Russia saying " X are doing Y! ", and then Russia does Y instead, and accuses X of doing it, in order to instigate something or give themselves the right to do something (i.e., react with violent and deadly force). This isn't particularly new, and so it's important to call them out on it.

Jesse said:

Karl Marx: "Accuse Your Enemy Of What You Are Doing, As You Are Doing It To Create Confusion"

Malcolm wrote:

The basic strategy of Putin, and his understudy, Trump.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 12th, 2022 at 9:53 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Jesse said:

In fact Russia is on par with us technologically

Malcolm wrote:

No. Russia is technologically dependent on the US.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 12th, 2022 at 10:52 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Queequeg said:

Nukes, Oil, Wheat, and Troll Farms.

Malcolm wrote:

Oil, gas, vodka, and caviar.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 12th, 2022 at 8:38 PM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

heart said:

Is Guru yoga with a white A not Dzogchen?

Malcolm wrote:

ChNN characterized it as an Anuyoga level practice, like Mandarava, Gomadevi, and Jnanadakini.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 12th, 2022 at 9:10 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 12th, 2022 at 9:17 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 12th, 2022 at 10:52 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

We've been hearing voices both past and present saying that the reason for what has happened is, as George Kennan put it, the strategic blunder of the eastward expansion of nato. The great-power realist-school historian John Mearsheimer insists that a great deal of the blame for what we're witnessing must go to the United States. I thought we'd begin with your analysis of that argument.

I have only the greatest respect for George Kennan. John Mearsheimer is a giant of a scholar. But I respectfully disagree. The problem with their argument is that it assumes that, had nato not expanded, Russia wouldn't be the same or very likely close to what it is today. What we have today in Russia is not some kind of surprise. It's not some kind of deviation from a historical pattern. Way before nato existed—in the nineteenth century—Russia looked like this: it had an autocrat. It had repression. It had militarism. It had suspicion of foreigners and the West. This is a Russia that we know, and it's not a Russia that arrived yesterday or in the nineteen-nineties. It's not a response to the actions of the West. There are internal processes in Russia that account for where we are today.

I would even go further. I would say that nato expansion has put us in a better place to deal with this historical pattern in Russia that we're seeing again today. Where would we be now if Poland or the Baltic states were not in nato? They would be in the same limbo, in the same world that Ukraine is in. In fact, Poland's membership in nato stiffened nato's spine. Unlike some of the other nato countries, Poland has contested Russia many times over. In fact, you can argue that Russia broke its teeth twice on Poland: first in the nineteenth century, leading up to the twentieth century, and again at the end of the Soviet Union, with Solidarity. So George Kennan was an unbelievably important scholar and practitioner—the greatest Russia expert who ever lived—but I just don't think blaming the West is the right analysis for where we are.

<https://www.newyorker.com/news/q-and-a/stephen-kotkin-putin-russia-ukraine-stalin>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 13th, 2022 at 1:27 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shotenzenjin said:

I've been late coming back to this thread. But the idea the USA hasn't or does not target civilians populations is utter bs

Malcolm wrote:

In the battle Foggia, the targets were German and Italian troops as well as a major rail hub, but not civilians.

A more apt example of US terror bombing would be Dresden, and as you mentioned, Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Frankly, in the case of nuclear weapons, we did not know what we were doing. We had an inkling, but the results were far more terrible than US war planners anticipated.

I did not deny the US has targeted civilians. I stated that it is not now our policy to target civilians. Our policy is the opposite and has been since WWII.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 13th, 2022 at 1:32 AM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

heart said:

Would that make Ati Guru Yoga, as Rinpoche often called it, Anu Guru Yoga?

Malcolm wrote:

Guru Yoga of White A is a practice in the collective practice booklet which includes the invocation, and the shorter version in the Short Thun. That, according to ChNN is a guruyoga at the anuyoga level. The medium and long thun with Guru Padmasambhava is a guruyoga at the mahāyoga level.

Ati guru yoga is ati level because it does not involve visualizing a human form.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 13th, 2022 at 1:38 AM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

Passing By said:

Is the Longsal Barma Gyud that was mentioned during the info session the one that is the root source of the Khandro Nyingthik? And is the Tertön who discovered the Longsal Barma, Nyangral Nyima Ozer?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. The Longsal tantra is like a summary of the topics of the 17 tantras, and reproduces a lot of material, especially from the Rangshar.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 13th, 2022 at 2:43 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 13th, 2022 at 3:36 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

Yes, I understand why the ex-Soviet states want to join NATO. I think it also nevertheless true that expansion increased tensions with Russia.

Malcolm wrote:

Nonsense. This is just a recent excuse Putin has made up to satisfy his fascist dream of restoring Imperial Russia.

Between 2000 and 2008, during Putin's first two terms as president, the Russian economy grew at an average rate of almost 7% per annum. Putin won his war in Chechnya. The government exploited high world market prices of natural gas and oil to distribute some export profits throughout the Russian population. The instability of the Yeltsin order had passed, and many Russians were understandably pleased and grateful. Russia also enjoyed a stable position in foreign affairs. Putin offered NATO Russia's support after the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. In 2002, he spoke favorably of "European culture" and avoided portraying NATO as an adversary. In 2004, Putin spoke in favor of European Union membership for Ukraine, saying that such an outcome would be in Russia's economic interest. He spoke of the enlargement of the European Union as extending a zone of peace and prosperity to Russia's borders. In 2008, he attended a NATO summit.

Snyder, Timothy. The Road to Unfreedom (pp. 47-48). Crown. Kindle Edition.

No Russian leader feared a NATO invasion in 2011 or 2012, or even pretended to. In 2012, American leaders believed that they were pursuing a "reset" of relations with Russia. When Mitt Romney referred to Russia as America's "number one geopolitical foe” in March 2012, he was ridiculed. Almost no one in the American public or media was paying attention to Moscow. Russia did not even figure in American public opinion polls about global threats and challenges. The European Union and the United States were presented as threats because Russian elections were faked. In winter 2011 and spring 2012, Russian television channels and newspapers generated the narrative that all who protested electoral fraud were paid by Western institutions. The effort began on December 8, 2011, with the reporting of Putin’s claim that Clinton had initiated the protests.

Snyder, Timothy. The Road to Unfreedom (p. 55). Crown. Kindle Edition.

Until 2012, Russian leaders spoke favorably of European integration. Yeltsin accepted Europe as a model, at least rhetorically. Putin described the approach of the EU to Russia’s border as an opportunity for cooperation. The eastward enlargement of NATO in 1999 was not presented by Putin as a threat. Instead, he tried to recruit the United States or NATO to cooperate with Russia to address what he saw as common security problems. After the United States was attacked by Islamist terrorists in 2001, Putin offered to cooperate with NATO in territories that bordered Russia. Putin did not present the EU enlargement of 2004 as a threat. On the contrary, he spoke favorably that year of future EU membership for Ukraine. In 2008, Putin attended the NATO summit in Bucharest. In 2009, Medvedev allowed American aircraft to fly over Russia to supply troops in Afghanistan. In 2010, Russia’s ambassador to NATO, the radical nationalist Dmitry Rogozin, expressed his concern that NATO would leave Afghanistan. Rogozin complained of NATO’s lack of fighting spirit, its “mood of capitulation.” He wanted NATO troops at Russia’s border.

Snyder, Timothy. The Road to Unfreedom (p. 79). Crown. Kindle Edition.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 13th, 2022 at 4:49 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

Yes, I understand why the ex-Soviet states want to join NATO. I think it also nevertheless true that expansion increased tensions with Russia.

Malcolm wrote:

Nonsense. This is just a recent excuse Putin has made up to satisfy his fascist dream of restoring Imperial Russia.

Genjo Conan said:

Malcolm, this is demonstrably false. Russian anger at NATO expansion predated Putin. This is well documented. <https://nsarchive.gwu.edu/briefing-book/russia-programs/2021-11-24/nato-expansion-budapest-blow-1994>

One can argue, pace Norwegian, that this anger was overblown, or that it demonstrates some deeper pathology. I think both are likely true. That doesn't mean the sentiment isn't real.

Malcolm wrote:

It is demonstrably true that Putin himself never actually felt threatened by NATO, no matter what Gorbachev may have felt in 1994. Hence, my statement is factual.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 13th, 2022 at 6:57 AM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

heart said:

So most Dzogchen sadhanas would be either Mahayoga or Anuyoga or Atiyoga.

Malcolm wrote:

This nine-fold division is less than useful for understanding sadhanas. In any case ChNN frequently asserted that anything to do with deity yoga was never Dzogchen proper, but was part of path of transformation, hence Anuyoga at best.

Now, some other Lamas might disagree, but I follow ChNN.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 13th, 2022 at 7:11 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

Yeltsin, not Gorbachev. And, ok, you do you.

Malcolm wrote:

It is a fantasy that Putin felt threatened by NATO.

But I am sure he does now, now that he has given himself reason to feel threatened by NATO for attacking Ukraine.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 13th, 2022 at 10:42 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

PeterC said:

They fly sorties with fighters along the border of a lot of countries - Denmark and Finland get that treatment periodically too. It's extremely petty as it doesn't really serve any purpose except to be annoying, because you have to scramble jets in response.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 13th, 2022 at 6:56 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

These policy steps contributed to a renewed "clash of civilizations" narrative within Russia that Putin and his inner circle have both exploited and themselves contributed to, and seem in some respects to believe.

None of this caused Russia to invade or absolves Russia's leadership of their actions.

Malcolm wrote:

The "clash of civilizations" narrative is a key part of the Russian fascist pov since the 20's. It was also part of narrative of Hitler and Mussolini.

It's clear that Putin bought into this, as I have already pointed out. His whole narrative is a pack of lies, an Ajatasatru for the 21st century.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 13th, 2022 at 7:02 PM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

heart said:

So most Dzogchen sadhanas would be either Mahayoga or Anuyoga or Atiyoga.

Malcolm wrote:

This nine-fold division is less than useful for understanding sadhanas. In any case ChNN frequently asserted that anything to do with deity yoga was never Dzogchen proper, but was part of path of transformation, hence Anuyoga at best.

Now, some other Lamas might disagree, but I follow ChNN.

heart said:

I find it very helpful and it actually makes more sense if you look at how Dzogchen was practiced by the masters of the lineage. For example ChNN did a Mandarava retreat every year and I am pretty sure he never lowered his view to Anuyoga. It is the view that matters and if the view is Ati then everything is Ati.

/magnus

Malcolm wrote:

Magnus, sorry bud, he was very clear that Mandarava, etc., was anuyoga. Why did he emphasize anuyoga? Because anuyoga's view of the basis is the same as Dzogchen. Why is anuyoga lower than Dzogchen? Because anuyoga regards ati as a result. So your assertion, "if the view is ati, then everything is ati" is not correct. There is also no creation or completion stage in Dzogchen.

I don't know why you want to argue with me about ChNNs pov, I am a second level SMS student.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 13th, 2022 at 7:08 PM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

heart said:

So most Dzogchen sadhanas would be either Mahayoga or Anuyoga of Atiyoga.

Malcolm wrote:

This is nine-fold division is less than useful for understanding sadhanas. In any case ChNN frequently asserted that anything to do with deity yoga was never Dzogchen proper, but was part of path of transformation, hence Anuyoga at best.

Now, some other Lamas might disagree, but I follow ChNN.

Jangchup Donden said:

Do guru yoga sadhanas count as deity yoga?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, of course. If there transformation of any kind, it is the resultant path, Dzogchen is a path beyond cause and result,

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 13th, 2022 at 10:38 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

2) At the same time, I deny he is a "madman" or a "crazed conquest-bent tyrant" or any of the other cartoon images being brandied about by people who should really know better. Everything he is doing is based in a flawed and overly aggressive but essentially logical Geopolitical worldview. He is protecting his vulnerable Western border from an ever-encroaching NATO that has broken it's 1991 treaty commitments to Russia not to Expand NATO eastward, in ridiculously flamboyant fashion.

Malcolm wrote:

This assertion has already been debunked. No such treaty commitments exist or have ever existed.

And you are undoubtedly aware Putin is a Russian fascist who quotes Ilyin every chance he can.

Putin is most certainly rational actor. Just because he has made a fundamental miscalculation about Ukraine, does not mean he is bereft of reason. He has however gone the way of most dictators, living in an echo chamber of sycophantic (fearful) underlings who merely tell him what he wants to hear.

Also his lies are preposterous. Only fools could take them at face value.

Slander is unbecoming:

western oil giant friendly cokehead in the Ukrainian presidential office

Do you have any proof of this, or are you merely repeating Russian propaganda?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 13th, 2022 at 10:53 PM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

heart said:

Thank you very much Malcolm for requesting these "lungs", it feels like a very auspicious sign in these rather dark times.

Malcolm wrote:

You and everyone else are very welcome. I am glad to be a catalyst for this transmission. But TDR is the one doing all the work. He really deserves the thanks. He is quite happy to be doing so. He is very happy to be able to share these transmissions with everyone who is interested.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 13th, 2022 at 10:57 PM

Title: Re: Tradition for Solitary Practitioner?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

"The Majjhima Nikaya (M III 69–71) enumerates 119 names of a group of five hundred Paccekabuddhas who are said to reside on Mount Isigili. Of these names only a few are mentioned in Pali texts elsewhere: the most important ones are Tagarasikhin, Uparittha, Matanga and Mahapaduma.

Malcolm wrote:

They all attained nirvana with the advent of Śākyamuni.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 13th, 2022 at 11:32 PM

Title: Re: I have received Tokudo after over 30 years as a lay practitioner

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Formally received Tokudo, three sets of vows, and practice commitments from a Shingon-shu temple in Japan run by my Teacher and Master.

The funny thing is I have spent far more time as a Pure Land practitioner at Zojoji Temple in Tokyo and then some years at a Kanagawa Rinzai temple. I would be lying if I said I didn't think often about having a long sit-down with my Shingon teacher about shifting over to Ji-shu Pure Land (my family Danka, for what it's worth) or perhaps taking one of the wonderful 真宗学 academic courses on offer and delving into the arcana of Pure Land theory. I have a feeling given my age and limited memory powers I will never be able to advance to Ajari status in Shingon, not that it matters all that much. There are a few specialized practices I would like to be initiated into. It sure gets pricy collecting Shingon permissions, vestments, implements....ive already spent... well, why grumble? It was worth every yen.

So after all these years in Japan knocking around different temples I've finally taken the plunge. Ami not allowed a little public victory lap in this egotistical thread?

Samsara is a strange place. I've been a farmer, a washing machine factory worker, I spent time semi homeless living on 7 bucks a week. I earned full university degrees in Western Philosophy and Chinese History, been a certified Geopolitical strategist with a aide order of Cyber Warfare accreditation, and finally it seems a Shingon practitioner. Hopefully my story ends there, but not quite yet.

Malcolm wrote:

Congrats

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 14th, 2022 at 2:30 AM

Title: Re: Tradition for Solitary Practitioner?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

So the Pratyekayana as a gate or path is closed during this current Buddha Sasana? I feel strangely let down. I always wanted to encounter one.

Malcolm wrote:

That is the official story. The bodhicitta of a pratyekabuddha is to attain buddhahood when there is no samyaksambuddha in the world.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 14th, 2022 at 2:59 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

A must read analysis.

Tl:dr, US and the West emerge much more powerful from this. China pivots to the West for self-preservation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 14th, 2022 at 5:10 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

A must read analysis.

Tl:dr, US and the West emerge much more powerful from this. China pivots to the West for self-preservation.

A tentative rebuttal to this article:

https://mp-weixin-qq-com.translate.googleusercontent.com/translate/s/WCcXCEGZdsqL30VvZ1MCaA?_x_tr_sl=auto&_x_tr_tl=en&_x_tr_hl=en&_x_tr_pto=wapp

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 14th, 2022 at 10:11 PM

Title: Re: Maintaining one's Peace in a time of conflict

Content:

master of puppets said:

I live in turkey. Ukrania is our neighbour.

I think in the private ukranian war is organized and planned to give loss/damage on turkey, that the NATO or west shouldn't take on themselves. And that's it.

Malcolm wrote:

Turkey is part of NATO. You need to get out more.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 15th, 2022 at 12:30 AM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

Karma_Yeshe said:

Could someone please clarify the schedule?

On the Wisdom page it says that the lung starts on the afternoon on Friday, while the Zoom-Invitation says that all sessions start in morning.

Malcolm wrote:

Morning in the US; afternoon in Europe.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 15th, 2022 at 3:06 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It's getting frizzy in Russia:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 15th, 2022 at 6:25 AM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

Padmist said:

Thank you Archie.

Is there a way to contact the Tulku? I tried to email his center in Finland but no answer yet.

I wish to ask for formal Refuge Vow ceremony before this event. I have only taken personal commitment of the refuge.

Or perhaps Malcolm? I've been trying for 2 weeks to get this sorted out but no luck yet Not even local. Not even the lamas I listen to online virtually are available for this.

My only options are: Lama Zopa in August (too far out), Anam Thubten in April (too far out).

Malcolm wrote:

You don't need this. Your interest in the teachings is refuge. There was no ritual of taking refuge during the time of the Buddha. That ritual came later.

The principle of refuge is that you recognize that the three jewels are your sole refuge. If you have this idea, then you don't need a ritual. Also in Mahayana, you can take refuge by visualizing all Buddhas and bodhisattvas in front of you and reciting the formula of refuge. That is sufficient.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 15th, 2022 at 9:24 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 15th, 2022 at 9:34 PM

Title: Re: Is Shingon lesser because it has less tantras than Tibetan vajrayana?

Content:

tingdzin said:

The whole "kriya, carya, yoga, anuttarayoga (or yogini) " classification is India-based and a development much later than the tantras themselves (the classification system actually originated in Tibet, if I recall correctly),

Malcolm wrote:

The four fold classification system comes from the Vajramāla tantra, so 9th century.

The classification of tantras into kriya, carya, and yoga is earlier than Shingon, and is contemporaneous with Amoghavajra. The mid-eighth century Indian master, Buddhagupta, author of detailed commentaries on the Mahāvairocana Abhisambodhi, was the originator of the three-fold division.

The classification system that seems to have originated in Tibet is the classification of the three inner tantras into mahā, anu, and ati. However, even here, there is evidence that it is an eighth century arrangement, since it is a feature of Padmasambhava's rosary of views.

tingdzin said:

Bringing in the caste system is just creeping Brahmanism, and not at all appropriate.

Malcolm wrote:

It makes sense, actually. Highest tantra is for people outside the caste system, like us.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 16th, 2022 at 12:41 AM

Title: Re: Is Shingon lesser because it has less tantras than Tibetan vajrayana?

Content:

Injrabodi said:

Looking at the extreme sexual practices of various tantras, such as the Kalachakra Tantra...

Malcolm wrote:

The Kalacakra explicitly negates karmamudra practices.

Crazywisdom said:

Ummm there's karmamudra in Kalachakra.

In order to increase the coemergent bliss [ni] of the victorious ones, first the karma mudrā should be bestowed.

-Wisdom Chapter

Malcolm wrote:

The Kālacakra states:

One should abandon karmamudra and the imputed jñānamudra as they are not supreme.

The practitioner should meditate mahāmudrā.

And alternate translation gives:

The mind should give up the tainted karmamudra and the jñānamudra of these imputations.

and meditate the excellent mudra, the progenitor of the supreme victor, the cause of full awakening untainted, unchanging, the one who destroys the darkness, equal with space, all pervasive, traversed by the yogi.

The brilliant gnosis that resides in the body should be known to be the wheel of time that robs the misdeeds of existence.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 16th, 2022 at 3:05 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It's getting frizzy in Russia:

Brave woman. I read she was arrested and faces up to 15 years in prison for this, smh.

KristenM said:

She was fined 30,000 rubles, about $280.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 16th, 2022 at 3:08 AM

Title: Re: Is Shingon lesser because it has less tantras than Tibetan vajrayana?

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Yes. At the stage of Mahamudra, because Kalachakra is a graduated path. The completion stage has many stages. Thus giving up karmamudra means one was practicing it. And the empowerment is happening with a guru and his consort. Kalachakra is very consort oriented and has instructions on finding a consorts, types of human consorts, even paying them. The guru bestowing a consort on a disciple and so on. Then later that us given up in favor of the six vajra yogas, in which the variegated consort is Mahamudra in the form of inner visual signs.

Malcolm wrote:

Not how it is understood by many important Tibetan masters. For example, Dakpo Tashi Namgyal discusses this issue in his Moonbeams of Mahāmudra, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 18th, 2022 at 5:26 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Miorita said:

By doing so, Biden has excluded Putin out of the civilized world.

Malcolm wrote:

Rightly so.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 18th, 2022 at 8:07 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

PeterC said:

No - China gets the opposite treatment - presumption of guilt, while India gets indifference or presumption of innocence

Malcolm wrote:

Well,China just signed an agreement of limitless mutual support with Russia. But I don't think the Chinese understood what the Russians meant by limitless.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 18th, 2022 at 8:53 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

PeterC said:

No - China gets the opposite treatment - presumption of guilt, while India gets indifference or presumption of innocence

Malcolm wrote:

Well, China just signed an agreement of limitless mutual support with Russia. But I don't think the Chinese understood what the Russians meant by limitless.

Queequeg said:

I've been thinking about that. Chinese leadership must be thinking hard about how to walk that statement back and/or hoping it just gets resolved ASAP. They did not realize how gangster Russia is and how much a promise like that would actually mean, and so soon. Its quite possible that they were in complete disbelief that Russia would actually go all out on Ukraine like this. Chinese leadership probably studies a lot of stuff to prepare themselves... maybe they need to study The Godfather and the genre of gangster movies generally. Vito Corleone would never have gone for this.

For the time being, they're basically affirming humanitarian concerns but otherwise pretending nothing is happening in Ukraine and relations with Russia are business as usual.

Malcolm wrote:

Apparently, “boundary-less” is an operational concept in Russian political rhetoric: The mature Ilyin rejected the rule of law in favor of the arbitrariness—proizvol—of fascism. Having given up hope that Russia could be governed by law, he presented lawlessness (proizvol) as a patriotic virtue. Putin followed the same trajectory, citing Ilyin as his authority. When he first ran for president in 2000, he spoke of the need for a “dictatorship of the law.” Those two concepts contradicted each other, and one of them fell away. Running for president in 2012, Putin rejected the idea of a European Russia, which meant ignoring external incentives that favored the rule of law. Instead, proizvol would be presented as redemptive patriotism. The operative concept in the Russian language today is bespredel, boundary-less-ness, the absence of limits, the ability of a leader to do anything. The word itself arose from criminal jargon.

On this logic, Putin was not a failed statesman but a national redeemer. What the EU might describe as failures of governance were to be experienced as the flowering of Russian innocence.

The Road to Unfreedom, Snyder.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 19th, 2022 at 5:29 AM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

Padmist said:

I am so sorry. I mean no disrespect to the Master Tulku. I think I'm a bad student. I log in, listened, and throughout the whole reading, I keep falling asleep. (Because I have been sleeping 4 hours only in the past week) Not deep sleep, just dozing off repeatedly then waking up but his reading was on my earpiece the whole time and I heard it all, or I would hear his reading whenever I wake back up, then doze off again, then heard his last notes as well like coming in 10 minutes early tomorrow.

My question is, did I mess up? Does this reading transmission fail/become invalid, for me?

Malcolm wrote:
Just do your best.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 19th, 2022 at 8:13 AM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

pemachophel said:

Please don't forget to offer Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche dana for these lungs. You can do so through Paypal at the Wisdom Publications page for this event. Tulku Dakpa will be using any monies received as offerings for these lungs to build a stupa for world peace.

It is taught that Jetsun Milarepa experienced terrible poverty during His years of practice at least in part because, when He first became a student of Marpa Lotsawa, He offered His Teacher an empty pot. Marpa Lotsawa filled the pot with chang (Tibetan "beer"). Thus in Je Mila's later years He had abundant provisions. Both of these outcomes are based on the principle of dependent origination. This teaching underscores the karmic importance of always giving offerings for any Dharma one receives.

Padmist said:

How much? And I ask in terms of what's generally accepted/common/reasonable, culturally and normally.

I am sending $25 now and do it per day. Would that be alright?

Malcolm wrote:
$108

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 19th, 2022 at 10:32 AM

Title: Re: Quotes from Śūraṅgama Sutra in "Poison is Medicine - Clarifying the Vajrayana"

Content:

Zhen Li said:

The Buddha's qualities by definition must be limitless.

Malcolm wrote:

Which means they just an abstraction, and cannot actually represent buddhahood, since they are illusory, just as buddhahood is illusory.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 19th, 2022 at 9:27 PM

Title: Re: Quotes from Śūraṅgama Sutra in "Poison is Medicine - Clarifying the Vajrayana"

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Yeah, not Sanskrit. Maybe derived from. You're gonna have to show me something in Sanskrit in there.

na mo sa dan tuo

2. su qie duo ye

3. e la he di

4. san miao san pu tuo xie

5. na mo sa dan tuo

6. fo tuo ju zhi shai ni shan

This is Chinese. Pull out your Sanskrit dictionary and find me one word besides namo.

Malcolm wrote:

It is a phonetic representation of Sanskrit sounds derived from Chinese characters, which looks even stranger when rendered in English phonetics. But it is well attested in other sources, and is in fact the White Umbrella dhāraṇī.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 19th, 2022 at 9:54 PM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

climb-up said:

I made a very small dana

Does anyone know if the PayPal option will be available still in a couple weeks?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 19th, 2022 at 10:00 PM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

Miorita said:
What do you advise?

Malcolm wrote:
There will be a record of everything you received. You will have received most. So you do your best.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, March 20th, 2022 at 12:56 AM
Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras
Content:

Miorita said:
Maybe last hour he'll do Q&A.

Malcolm wrote:
No Q&A.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, March 20th, 2022 at 4:38 AM
Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras
Content:
Wally said:
Malcom (or anyone really) -

Is there a copy of this particular version (adzom par ma) on BDRC (<https://library.bdrc.io/>)? Vimala (<http://www.Vimalatreasures.org>)? Any other suggestions?

Thank you in advance,
Wally

Malcolm wrote:
<http://purl.bdrc.io/resource/MW1KG892>

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, March 20th, 2022 at 7:30 AM
Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras
Content:
Padmist said:
What kind of karma do I have that I am connected to this, totally drawn to this, I even make it to the event on time, every day, donating, but during the event, falling asleep.

Malcolm wrote:

It is the effect of purifying ignorance. Don't worry.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 20th, 2022 at 7:58 AM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

Padmist said:

) if that is what we need to do (hands together) I'll do that tomorrow.

Malcolm wrote:

No. It's not necessary.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 20th, 2022 at 9:26 PM

Title: Re: Antártica and Arctic 70 and 50 degrees above normal

Content:

Aemilius said:

"The end of days" is cheap propaganda. In the geologic time scale Earth has had several periods of warmer and colder weather/climate. Warming up isn't anything unheard of in Earth's history.

Malcolm wrote:

"End of days" refers to human civilization. We are in the days of the five degenerations (pañcakaṣāyā): degeneration of lifespan, view, afflictions, sentient beings, and the age.

It will be increasingly more difficult, especially in the global south, for humans to thrive.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 20th, 2022 at 9:30 PM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

Padmist said:

What kind of karma do I have that I am connected to this, totally drawn to this, I even make it to the event on time, every day, donating, but during the event, falling asleep.

Malcolm wrote:

It is the effect of purifying ignorance. Don't worry.

Crazywisdom said:

So I like these lists of side effects of listening to readings. Are there any more specific to these tantras?

Malcolm wrote:

My observation is that new people listening to any Dharma teaching universally report a sense of dullness while the teaching is happening, which lifts the minute the teaching concludes. I also experienced this in the beginning.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 20th, 2022 at 10:58 PM

Title: Re: Antártica and Arctic 70 and 50 degrees above normal

Content:

Sādhaka said:

I thought that it was kind of the opposite, i.e. that many third-world countries are generally happier...

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, this is why people are killing themselves to get into the EU, USA, and Canada. Obviously they are incredibly happy in corruption and poverty.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 20th, 2022 at 11:25 PM

Title: Re: Is Shingon lesser because it has less tantras than Tibetan vajrayana?

Content:

jmlee369 said:

Tsongkhapa disagreed with the view that different tantra classes were taught for different castes.

Malcolm wrote:

So what? This is clearly explained by Sonam Tsemo and others, including Buton.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 20th, 2022 at 11:41 PM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

Eamon said:

Will Rinpoche include ngak sung tröma or longsal barma?

Malcolm wrote:

Definitely not the longsal barma.

Not sure about ekajati tantra. Depends on time I suspect. Anyway, that tantra has no real Dzogchen content.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 21st, 2022 at 12:25 AM

Title: Re: Regarding Shar Khentrul Rinpoché Jamphel Lodrö (No Debates Please)

Content:

Ikkyu's_Son said:

Something such as this is precisely what I was worried about, because if such claims prove true, I could not in good faith maintain pure perception.

Malcolm wrote:

If you discover you have made a connection with someone you later discover is not a qualified teacher, you just leave. You don't make a fuss. Just move on. It's not your fault if their conduct is a problem. Teachers also have samayas with students, if they cannot maintain them, it is negative for the student. It is a two-way street.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 21st, 2022 at 1:12 AM

Title: Re: Antártica and Arctic 70 and 50 degrees above normal

Content:

Sādhaka said:

My point being that neither poverty or bread & circus-seeking are conducive to liberation. If one doesn't have the Eighteen conditions for Dharma practice (Precious Human Rebirth), it likely doesn't matter much if you live in a first or third world country; or, on the flip-side, if you do have it/them it doesn't matter much either way either....

Malcolm wrote:

There are eight freedoms and ten endowments.

A part of those eight freedoms is not being stuck in a country dominated by barbarians. At this point in time, secular democracies with free markets are the best place to practice the Dharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 21st, 2022 at 2:35 AM

Title: Re: Antártica and Arctic 70 and 50 degrees above normal

Content:

Sādhaka said:

We could pick this apart for sure.

For now however, I don't see any country nowadays that's not dominated by mlecchas (i.e. various variations of eternalists, atheists, theists, nihilists, carvakas, lokayatis, materialists, etc.).

Malcolm wrote:

"Mleccha" comes from "As-Salaa(m-Alaikum)." It generally refers to Arabic speakers, both pre and post Islam.

The secularists who founded American democracy at base guaranteed freedom of religious conscience. Why? They observed the religious wars that tore Europe apart, wanted to avoid that, and when democracy was first established in the US, the establishment clause was included in the first amendment. This was not done to protect religion, but rather to protect the state against religious sentiments.

I'll stick with liberal democracy. You can do as you please.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 21st, 2022 at 3:20 AM

Title: Re: "special transmission"?

Content:

Way-Fun said:

What if the Buddha had farted instead?

Malcolm wrote:

A dog would have been his lineage heir.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 21st, 2022 at 3:44 AM

Title: Re: Antártica and Arctic 70 and 50 degrees above normal

Content:

Queequeg said:

FWIW, I posted that map tongue in cheek. Being happy while the planet becomes uninhabitable for human beings is like have a luxury suite on the Titanic.

Malcolm wrote:

I think it will sink a little slower...not only this, but the temperate zones will offer more climate resilience. But people in the global south are in trouble.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 21st, 2022 at 5:10 AM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It is likely to be extended for an extra day. Rinpoche is concerned he will not be able to finish tomorrow in the allotted time.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 21st, 2022 at 5:17 AM

Title: Re: China Is Already at War With America

Content:

Aemilius said:

While the US calls China things like a "serious competitor" and "strategic competition,"

China sees the US as its #1 enemy and one of the only countries stopping it from global domination.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, of course someone who works for the far-right wing Falung Gong cult is going to see things that way. In fact, the US and EU together are China's major business partner, with the EU being the largest.

After what happened to Russia, China is going to think twice about confronting the West.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 21st, 2022 at 5:40 AM

Title: Re: China Is Already at War With America

Content:

Aemilius said:

While the US calls China things like a "serious competitor" and "strategic competition," China sees the US as its #1 enemy and one of the only countries stopping it from global domination.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, of course someone who works for the far-right wing Falung Gong cult is going to see things that way.

Könchok Thrinley said:

I have seen these claims about this channel and Falun Gong being far right cult in general. Do you have any source for that? I always considered it as mostly fabricated by Chinese propaganda.

Malcolm wrote:

Have you ever read the Epoch Times? I rest my case.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 21st, 2022 at 5:44 AM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

Toenail said:

If there is an extra day Tuesday it will be at the same time? Would be good to know so one can make arrangements

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 21st, 2022 at 10:38 AM

Title: Re: Is China Already at War With America?

Content:

Queequeg said:

The ridiculous difficulty of Chinese written language is the biggest obstacle to world domination.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 21st, 2022 at 11:00 AM

Title: Re: Is China Already at War With America?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Most fentanyl these days is made in Mexico.

Jesse said:

In many ways yes.. one of the most disturbing ones is their chemical weapons attack on American civilians:

<https://www.heritage.org/crime-and-justice/commentary/china-poisoning-america-fentanyl>

The oddest part is that the amount of deaths from this fentanyl have gotten so absurdly high that it's in the news pretty much daily, yet no one ever mentions that it's an intentional chemical attack by china.

<https://www.snopes.com/fact-check/fentanyl-overdose-death/>

Fentanyl overdoses have surged to the leading cause of death for adults between the ages of 18 and 45, according to an analysis of U.S. government data.

Between 2020 and 2021, nearly 79,000 people between 18 and 45 years old — 37,208 in 2020 and 41,587 in 2021 — died of fentanyl overdoses, the data analysis from opioid awareness organization Families Against Fentanyl shows.

They are killing more than 3 times the amount of people in America with fentanyl, than Covid has killed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 21st, 2022 at 8:24 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

PeterC said:

Russia deploying a hypersonic missile is an attempt to pre-empt this - certain types of weapons, including hypersonic missiles, are problematic because they mean you can't have force protection and you can't rely on missile defense systems.

A US defence official was quoted as saying on Friday that Russian forces had fired more than 1,080 missiles since 24 February.

"[That] is an astonishing number and a very significant fraction of Russia's pre-war inventory," Mr Acton told the BBC, pointing to the increasing use of unguided bombs in Russian aerial attacks. "They may very well be running short of accurate munitions."

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.bbc.com/news/world-europe-60806151>

I don't think Russia has very many hypersonic cruise missiles. And given the rest of Russia's technology...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 21st, 2022 at 8:35 PM

Title: Re: Is China Already at War With America?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Most fentanyl these days is made in Mexico.

Jesse said:

It's not, It's made in China,

Malcolm wrote:

No. That stopped in 2019. Now, China ships precursors to Mexican labs.

Jesse said:

Effective May 1, 2019, China officially controlled all forms of fentanyl as a class of drugs. This fulfilled the commitment that President Xi made during the G-20 Summit. The implementation of the new measure includes investigations of known fentanyl manufacturing areas, stricter control of internet sites advertising fentanyl, stricter enforcement of shipping regulations, and the creation of special teams to investigate leads on fentanyl trafficking. These new restrictions have the potential to severely limit fentanyl production and trafficking from China. This could alter China's position as a supplier to both the United States and Mexico.

Malcolm wrote:

https://www.dea.gov/sites/default/files/2020-03/DEA_GOV_DIR-008-20%20Fentanyl%20Flow%20in%20the%20United%20States_0.pdf

Here is recent report (Feb, 2022) assembled by the Rand Corporation. It covers the whole issue up to where we are today. As I indicated, Mexico is the main producer of synthetic opioids today. There is just no argument about that.

Jesse said:

Mexico is the principal source of this illicit fentanyl and its analogues today.* In Mexico, cartels manufacture these poisons in clandestine laboratories with ingredients—precursor chemicals—sourced largely from the People's Republic of China (PRC).

...

Since then, the dominant source of illegally sourced fentanyl has been Mexico. The drug is manufactured in illegal laboratories there using precursors from Asia—mainly the PRC—and is trafficked principally by land into the United States. Fentanyl coming from Mexico is often of very low purity—generally, in powder form around or slightly above 10 percent—but now accounts for almost all the fentanyl that law enforcement has seized since late 2019. Trafficking in synthetic opioids has increased in part because of its low cost: It is cheaper to illegally manufacture fentanyl or a fentanyl analogue than it is to grow poppies, extract the raw materials from them, and produce heroin.

...

Today, Mexico-based TCOs are the main producer of illegally manufactured heroin and synthetic opioids, mostly fentanyl, that are trafficked into the United States. Further, according to several experts, fentanyl production capacity appears to be increasing, illegal producers could be seeking to diversify sources from which to obtain the primary materials.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.rand.org/hsrd/hsoac/commission-combating-synthetic-opioid-trafficking.html>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 21st, 2022 at 8:53 PM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

Passing By said:

The Lion Tantra is pretty long.....Is it the second longest one after the Rangshar?

Malcolm wrote:

We are in volume two of the Adzom Parma published in 1977.

The next longest tantra of the 17 after the Rangshar is the ancillary tantra, called the Self-Originated Perfection, rdzogs pa rang byung, which contains many ritual methods. It is the last in this collection. It has very little direct Dzogchen content. It mostly concerns methods practitioners need, such as rites for dealing with obstacles from nāgas and so on, rites for guiding the dead through the bardo, details of empowerment rites, etc. It is very interesting for these reasons.

The Sound Tantra, which is the root tantra of all Dzogchen teachings, is the next longest after that. Then the Invincible Lion, String of Pearls, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 21st, 2022 at 9:55 PM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

We will finish today, but the session will likely last 8 hours.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 21st, 2022 at 10:09 PM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

We will finish today, but the session will likely last 8 hours.

Archie2009 said:

Then I'd like to request more than one 15 minute break so I can let my elderly dog pee.

Malcolm wrote:

I will pass the request along

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 21st, 2022 at 10:39 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Dorje Shedrub said:

Putin seems to keep escalating. I wish NATO could do more or give Ukraine Patriot Defense System. They can't even get the migs.

Queequeg said:

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Cash_and_carry_%28World_War_II%29 for the Migs and whatever other weapons they need. Full line of credit. We did this before against Germany.

Malcolm wrote:

Only matter of time before Putin tries to sever the Suwalki Gap that divides Kalingrad from the rest of the Russian Federation. It is the lifeline to the Baltic states, Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania from Poland. It's only 60 miles wide.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 21st, 2022 at 10:56 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 22nd, 2022 at 12:23 AM

Title: Re: Antártica and Arctic 70 and 50 degrees above normal

Content:

Aemilius said:

"The geologic temperature record are changes in Earth's environment as determined from geologic evidence on multi-million to billion (10⁹) year time scales. The study of past temperatures provides an important paleoenvironmental insight because it is a component of the climate and oceanography of the time."

Malcolm wrote:

The present rate of warming precisely lines up with the widescale employment of hydrocarbons (coal, oil, gas) since the 1850's.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 22nd, 2022 at 1:37 AM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

We will be reciting the Aspiration of Samantabhadra at the conclusion of the lung after all. People who need to download the prayer may find it here:

<https://www.lotsawahouse.org/tibetan-masters/rigdzin-godem/prayer-of-kuntuzangpo>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 22nd, 2022 at 1:59 AM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

Bhumi108w said:

So is that technically receiving the lung for the prayer as well?

Malcolm wrote:

yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 22nd, 2022 at 6:21 AM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

For those without paypal:

Receiver: Danakosha Ling

Bank account number: FI5940550016672046

Bank name: Aktia Oyj

Bank address: Arkadiankatu 4-6, 00100 Helsinki, Finland

BIC/SWIFT: HELSFIHH

Reference number: 1627

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 22nd, 2022 at 8:28 PM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

Bhumi108w said:

Malcolm is the discount on the text only for March? I don't get paid again until April. Any information would be greatly appreciated.

Thank you

Malcolm wrote:

I don't know.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 22nd, 2022 at 8:39 PM

Title: Re: Is China Already at War With America?

Content:

Jesse said:

Not much difference, they kept the same connections, and they continue the same operations.. they are simply shipping the materials instead of the finished product. It fundamentally remains unchanged except where they do the chemistry that changes the precursors into an illegal drug. Literally they just abused a loophole, a technicality.

Malcolm wrote:

I guess you didn't read the part about the cartels increasingly procuring their raw materials from places other than China.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 22nd, 2022 at 8:42 PM

Title: Re: Antártica and Arctic 70 and 50 degrees above normal

Content:

Aemilius said:

I am happy to provide a link for it, as it contains important scientific knowledge that can help to straighten out common misunderstandings:

Geologic temperature record

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Geologic_temperature_record

"The geologic temperature record are changes in Earth's environment as determined from geologic evidence on multi-million to billion (10⁹) year time scales. The study of past temperatures provides an important paleoenvironmental insight because it is a component of the climate and oceanography of the time."

Kim O'Hara said:

It's not rubbish because it's wrong but misleading because it not at all relevant to our situation now. Talking about the climate of five million or five hundred million years ago as though it means anything for our current situation is either ignorance (which should be remedied) or deliberate deceit through misdirection (which should be called out). Let's assume ignorance and do something about it.

The time frame which concerns us is the time since modern humans first appeared, roughly half a million years ago, and especially since our settled culture of farms and cities first appeared, roughly 10 000 years ago.

If you compare that to Malcolm's first graph you will see that it aligns perfectly with a period of very stable climate which lasted all the way up to about 1900. That is the climate we need. It is the climate we are adapted to, the climate our crops and animals are adapted to, the sea levels our ports are built for, the weather our houses are built for, etc, etc. And when it changes too far, too fast, we can't adapt fast enough and neither can other living creatures.

The results, which we're already seeing, are crop failures, starvation, climate refugees, mass extinctions ... but surely you know all that.

What things were like five million or five hundred million years ago is of scientific interest only, just like the exact size of Saturn's moons or the wavelength of red light.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

The explosion of world population also tracks on the graph above.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 22nd, 2022 at 11:39 PM

Title: Re: Is China Already at War With America?

Content:

Jesse said:

Not much difference, they kept the same connections, and they continue the same operations.. they are simply shipping the materials instead of the finished product. It fundamentally remains unchanged except where they do the chemistry that changes the precursors into an illegal drug. Literally they just abused a loophole, a technicality.

Malcolm wrote:

I guess you didn't read the part about the cartels increasingly procuring their raw materials from places other than China.

Jesse said:

In fact I read it:

CHINA

Currently, China remains the primary source of fentanyl and fentanyl-related substances trafficked through international mail and express consignment operations environment, as well as the main source for all fentanyl-related substances trafficked into the United States. Seizures of fentanyl sourced from China average less than one kilogram in weight, and often test above 90 percent concentration of pure fentanyl.

(U) FIGURE 1. FENTANYL FLOW TO THE UNITED STATES 2019

Source: DEA

UNCLASSIFIED

UNCLASSIFIED3DEA Intelligence Report

As Beijing and the Hong Kong Special Autonomous Region (SAR) place restrictions on more precursor chemicals, Mexican transnational criminal organizations (TCOs) are diversifying their sources of supply.

This is evidenced by fentanyl shipments from India allegedly destined for Mexico.

From your link:

https://www.dea.gov/sites/default/files/2020-03/DEA_GOV_DIR-008-20%20Fentanyl%20Flow%20in%20the%20United%20States_0.pdf

Malcolm wrote:

You apparently failed to read the Rand report.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 22nd, 2022 at 11:43 PM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

Passing By said:

Malcolm, can I ask which of the Seventeen Tantras explains Guru Yoga (Both Ati and Anu style) the most?

Malcolm wrote:

None, actually. However, the method of selecting a guru is discussed extensively in the Self-Arisen Vidyā Tantra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 23rd, 2022 at 8:34 AM

Title: Re: Is China Already at War With America?

Content:

Jesse said:

From the rand report.

Malcolm wrote:

And if you read a little more closely, you will discover these sources are being curtailed, and the cartels are sourcing these chemicals from other sources. Xi understands perfectly well the export of fentanyl and chemicals is a bad image for China.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 23rd, 2022 at 9:04 PM

Title: Re: Is China Already at War With America?

Content:

Jesse said:

When China outlawed Fentanyl, there is simply no way that the scientists and the think tanks involved in writing the laws didn't consider outlawing precursors as well, they would have known exactly what would happen by leaving precursors legal. Unless there was a reason for doing so, either corruption/money, or as an intentional politically motivated ploy, it happened; leaving the illegal fentanyl industry alive.

Malcolm wrote:

You are still behind the news:

<https://apple.news/AzbLqYOFXSWq0Ka8bq4lIRA>

Jesse said:

The U.N. Commission on Narcotic Drugs on Wednesday voted to control three chemicals used to create fentanyl, after a U.S. request to do so – marking a win for the Biden administration in its efforts to control the flow of the deadly drug into the United States.

The commission voted unanimously to control three fentanyl precursors by adding them to the list of chemicals to the 1988 Convention Against Illicit Traffic of Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances – obligating nations signed onto the convention to implement regulations on the manufacture and distribution of the chemicals, which in turn makes it harder for smugglers to gain access.

Malcolm wrote:

China is on this commission. The vote to make these precursors illegal was unanimous.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 23rd, 2022 at 10:58 PM

Title: Re: Is China Already at War With America?

Content:

Jesse said:

That is the nature of speculation.

Malcolm wrote:

That is why it is better not to speculate.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 23rd, 2022 at 11:36 PM

Title: Re: Is China Already at War With America?

Content:

Jesse said:

"China is doing this intentionally"

Malcolm wrote:

Extraordinary proof is required for extraordinary claims.

The opioid crisis was caused largely by Purdue Pharma and the Sackler family.

When the US caught them in addicting millions of people to opioids, the cartels responded by supplying cheap Mexican dope to the US markets. They soon figured out it was cheaper to buy fentanyl from China and repackage it. China started to crack down on fentanyl shipments in 2019. China is clearly aware this is a big optics problem for them and that it makes them look bad. So they have taken measures. China is also a country where corruption is very high, because their markets have not been well regulated up to this point. Markets don't function well where there is excessive corruption, because trust is not there. Functioning markets require a high level of trust, for example, trade between US and Canada. One of Xi's main programs is the elimination of corruption in all sectors of Chinese business. He has been surprisingly effective in this. Nevertheless:

https://www.uscc.gov/sites/default/files/2021-08/Illicit_Fentanyl_from_China-An_Evolving_Global_Operation.pdf

Jesse said:

In his testimony before the Commission in 2019, Ben Westhoff highlighted how “China’s clumsy, understaffed bureaucracy has a difficult time controlling the country’s chemical industry. Different layers of government are sometimes at odds with one another, local officials are corruptible, and industry regulations are confusing and poorly enforced.”

Malcolm wrote:

The issue of drug policy is one fraught with internal contradictions and international difficulties. Claiming that China, as a policy, has been and is intentionally shipping fentanyl to the US is a basically irresponsible and fact free claim.

Here is another piece of information on this issue:

China’s May 2019 fentanyl scheduling announcement has changed the way illicit vendors operate as Chinese authorities have ramped up investigations of known manufacturing sites, cracked down on websites selling illicit fentanyl, begun to enforce shipping rules, and created special investigation teams.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 23rd, 2022 at 11:56 PM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

Passing By said:

Malcolm, can I ask which of the Seventeen Tantras explains Guru Yoga (Both Ati and Anu style) the most?

Malcolm wrote:

None, actually. However, the method of selecting a guru is discussed extensively in the Self-Arisen Vidyā Tantra.

Passing By said:

So when tertons emphasize Guru Yoga for Dzogchen, is it an original pith instruction? Or is it sourced from somewhere.....perhaps Khandro Nyingthik? Quite curious since it is THE method for Dzogchen

Malcolm wrote:

The origin of guru yoga in general is the Guhyasamaja tantra. However, the recommendation to rely on a guru is found in all Dzogchen teachings. The various different forms of guru are primarily oral instructions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 24th, 2022 at 2:05 AM

Title: Re: Is China Already at War With America?

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

To Malcolms point, the opioid demand issue in the US is homegrown. It might be an arbitrary distinction, but the most China can be accused of here is taking advantage of that, the demand was already here. Having worked with a bunch of opioid users myself I've seen this firsthand and heard the stories.

Ayu said:

I watched a documentary on the problem and it was said there that the beginner drugs are given by doctors in the US. The addiction starts with legal tranquilizers and such medicaments.

As soon as those patients get that heroine is much cheaper than the stuff they have to buy in the drugstore the tragedy goes ahead.

Malcolm wrote:

The real story was that as people become more and more addicted to Oxycontin, Purdue began upping the dosages. Purdue originally sold Oxycontin as a nonaddictive opioid under the theory it was time released. But it was bullshit, of course. People became very addicted to it, and finally, in roughly 2006, the feds put an end to it. There was a time in the US, where drugstores started to refuse to carry it because of constant robberies.

When Oxy was not longer easily available, cartels stepped in with cheap Mexican heroin, as I mentioned above (which is incidentally much safer than fentanyl). However, dealers in the US began mixing fentanyl with heroin, my state, Massachusetts was ground zero for this, as the Parts Unknown episode by Bourdain illustrates:

<https://www.imdb.com/title/tt4181346/> One of the towns in this is Greenfield, my country seat.

It is very easy to ship fentanyl in the mail. This is the main way it is smuggled into the US and Europe.

The solution is not a drug war (what are we going to do, invade Sinaloa? Good luck). The solution is breaking the back of the cartels by legalizing or decriminalizing some drugs and levying vice taxes to pay for the treatment programs. We have been doing this for alcohol forever.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 24th, 2022 at 2:09 AM

Title: Re: Is China Already at War With America?

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

That's exactly how it goes. It's surprising the number of people who develop their habit as a result of being given a prescription for Vicodin or Percocet due to a broken arm or something, and eventually it spirals into a full blown addiction. That's especially true when the person is already having a tough time in life in other respects, lack of family support, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

And there is a steady percent of the population who are prone to addictions of all kinds.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 24th, 2022 at 2:44 AM

Title: Re: Is China Already at War With America?

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Yes, our culture with its tacit endorsement of chronic poverty, punitive justice around drug use, lack of resources, endorsement of compulsive behavior etc. guarantees a certain amount of chronic addiction.

Combine that with heavily addictive chemicals and the results aren't that surprising.

Malcolm wrote:

Oh, there is that, and below that, genetics.

Sentient beings enjoy getting high. We see it in humans and animals, even insects.

A certain percentage goes all in.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 24th, 2022 at 3:13 AM

Title: Re: Is China Already at War With America?

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Yeah, this true, generally the way it's viewed in the field is bio-psycho-social, so while there are definitely certain people with a genetic predisposition (epi genetic?) to addictive behavior,

Malcolm wrote:

The Irish.

Johnny Dangerous said:

the actual condition often comes about through environmental, social triggers and those biological predispositions.

Malcolm wrote:
Catholicism, sexual abuse, and bars.

Johnny Dangerous said:
In other words, addiction is less of a social ill in societies that care to do something meaningful about it.

Malcolm wrote:
In some societies, it's a way of life.

Johnny Dangerous said:
Along a similar line there are also tests with animals that seem to provisionally show - they- are less or more likely to “go all in” depending on environmental variables.

Anyway you find both camps, but generally I think that notable people in the addiction field who are not rank ideologues recognize that biology and environment both play substantial roles. There are people on the extremes of both ends, but generally IME they don't have compelling arguments.

Malcolm wrote:
Agreed. No single causation.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, March 24th, 2022 at 3:44 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

KristenM said:
Russian forces have been stalled and its hopes for an easy conquest thwarted. And apparently there is no Russian leadership that can be identified in this war.

<https://www.nytimes.com/live/2022/03/22/world/ukraine-russia-war#russia-ukraine-pentagon>

Malcolm wrote:
Seems like the main general who planned this has gone missing for two weeks...
<https://www.newsweek.com/russian-defense-minister-sergei-shoigu-missing-putin-1690948>

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, March 24th, 2022 at 3:49 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 24th, 2022 at 3:58 AM

Title: Re: Stream of Lapis And ChNN namchö medicine Buddha ...same?

Content:

climb-up said:

Oh wow, fascinating. Well, I keep an eye out if the lung or empowerment is offered in the future.

Do you know how it works that it says it's compiled from the namchö terma, but is completely different?

Are there more namchö cycles than Mingyur Dorje's? Maybe that was an assumption that I made that it always referred to him.

heart said:

There might be more than medicine buddha practice in the namcho.

/magnus

climb-up said:

That would makes sense too.

I think I looked one time for a list of the practices in the namchö and couldn't find it. I wonder if anyone here knows if there are multiple medicine Buddha practices.

Malcolm wrote:

There are something like 600 deities in Namcho.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 24th, 2022 at 4:34 AM

Title: Re: Stream of Lapis And ChNN namchö medicine Buddha ...same?

Content:

climb-up said:

That would makes sense too.

I think I looked one time for a list of the practices in the namchö and couldn't find it. I wonder if anyone here knows if there are multiple medicine Buddha practices.

Malcolm wrote:

There are something like 600 deities in Namcho.

climb-up said:

wow!

So, I assume this is not really a cycle that people work through and accomplish every single practice ...right?

Malcolm wrote:

No, not really. There are a few standard deities: three roots. A Chenrezi practice which is used as a kind of six lokas purification, another Chenrzi which is the basis for trulkor, and so on. The main point of Namcho is the Dzogchen text, Buddhahood in the Palm of the Hand, from which the ngondro is derived.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 24th, 2022 at 5:46 AM

Title: Re: Does reincarnation really exists or is it just in the mind?

Content:

devr said:

Does anything ever exist outside mind? is a useful contemplation.

Malcolm wrote:

Not really, since things do exist outside the mind.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 24th, 2022 at 8:28 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

KristenM said:

Russian forces have been stalled and its hopes for an easy conquest thwarted. And apparently there is no Russian leadership that can be identified in this war.

<https://www.nytimes.com/live/2022/03/22/world/ukraine-russia-war#russia-ukraine-pentagon>

Malcolm wrote:

Seems like the main general who planned this has gone missing for two weeks...

<https://www.newsweek.com/russian-defense-minister-sergei-shoigu-missing-putin-1690948>

PeterC said:

About a quarter of Russia's top 20 generals are reported killed in Ukraine so far. This greatly increases the chances that there might be some consequences for Putin, as the senior military staff are the only people capable of delivering them.

Despite their apparent stalling, they've still taken a lot of territory, including the two eastern provinces that they declared independent and a large part of the south. Any peace deal will probably involve Ukraine losing a lot of land to Russia.

Malcolm wrote:

Zelensky has declared this to be a nonstarter. Have you been following Kamal Galeev's thread on Twitter?

Eye opening.

The best fighters in Ukraine are Chechens...fighting for Ukraine. The Sheik Mansur brigade.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 24th, 2022 at 9:32 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

PeterC said:

About a quarter of Russia's top 20 generals are reported killed in Ukraine so far. This greatly increases the chances that there might be some consequences for Putin, as the senior military staff are the only people capable of delivering them.

Despite their apparent stalling, they've still taken a lot of territory, including the two eastern provinces that they declared independent and a large part of the south. Any peace deal will probably involve Ukraine losing a lot of land to Russia.

Malcolm wrote:

Zelensky has declared this to be a nonstarter. Have you been following Kamal Galeev's thread on Twitter?

Eye opening.

The best fighters in Ukraine are Chechens...fighting for Ukraine. The Sheik Mansur brigade.

PeterC said:

No - do you have a link? Who is he?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 24th, 2022 at 11:48 AM

Title: Re: Does reincarnation really exists or is it just in the mind?

Content:

devr said:

Does anything ever exist outside mind? is a useful contemplation.

Malcolm wrote:

Not really, since things do exist outside the mind.

devr said:

Where is 'outside'?

Malcolm wrote:

Everywhere but inside. If there is no outside, there isn't an inside.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 24th, 2022 at 10:41 PM

Title: Re: Does reincarnation really exists or is it just in the mind?

Content:

devr said:

Where is 'outside'?

Malcolm wrote:

Everywhere but inside. If there is no outside, there isn't an inside.

devr said:

haha, if I ask you where is inside, you will most likely respond "everywhere but outside." I think both 'inside' and 'outside' are arbitrarily defined conceptual designations.

Phenomenon, in my view or lack thereof, can't ultimately be posited as here or there, inside or outside and so forth.

Malcolm wrote:

Where did you say you were positing an ultimate?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 25th, 2022 at 1:23 AM

Title: Re: Buddhahood In This Life

Content:

PRESTONCHRISTIAN23 said:

but does the 17 tantras allow me to be connected to where I can read that?

Malcolm wrote:

If you have received Dzogchen transmission and some teachings already, then I think it is ok. If you have not, then maybe it is better to find a teacher first.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 25th, 2022 at 2:24 AM

Title: Re: Does reincarnation really exists or is it just in the mind?

Content:

devr said:

haha, if I ask you where is inside, you will most likely respond "everywhere but outside." I think both 'inside' and 'outside' are arbitrarily defined conceptual designations. Phenomenon, in my view or lack thereof, can't ultimately be posited as here or there, inside or outside and so forth.

Malcolm wrote:

Where did you say you were positing an ultimate?

devr said:

You didn't say you were positing a relative either when you said things do exist outside the mind. Even if your statement was made for valid relative truth, outside/inside are still quite arbitrary to be considered valid on the same level as phenomena appearing.

Malcolm wrote:

All dualistic referents, such as outside, inside, up, down, large, small, etc., are axiomatically relative.

What makes something conventional is whether or not something is functional. Asserting there is nothing outside the mind renders cognition dysfunctional, unless one then substitutes an elaborate metaphysics to account for the cognition of sense objects, for example, yogacāra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 25th, 2022 at 5:04 AM

Title: Re: Mantra Recitation

Content:

stucked said:

And, is it ok to recite mantra when doing something / distracted/ in public?

Malcolm wrote:

Waste of breath.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 25th, 2022 at 8:55 AM

Title: Re: Proclamations of Attainment

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Among the laity, a member of the Saṃgha is at fault if he proclaims himself to be a person of the path, a saint, an Āryan, to them. Where in the bodhisattvaśīla is the faux-bodhisattva prohibited from falsely claiming to be a Bodhisattva to others?

Malcolm wrote:

It is permitted, actually, if it is beneficial.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 25th, 2022 at 9:18 AM

Title: Re: Proclamations of Attainment

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Among the laity, a member of the Saṃgha is at fault if he proclaims himself to be a person of the path, a saint, an Āryan, to them. Where in the bodhisattvaśīla is the faux-bodhisattva prohibited from falsely claiming to be a Bodhisattva to others?

Malcolm wrote:

It is permitted, actually, if it is beneficial.

Caoimhghín said:

That is not good advice IMO. Such an interpretation is not meant for common folk, IMO. "Is beneficial" is far too significant a caveat, IMO.

Malcolm wrote:

It is meant for bodhisattvas who are not aryas, who nevertheless need to inspire people. Anything for the cause.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 25th, 2022 at 11:54 AM

Title: Re: Proclamations of Attainment

Content:

tobes said:

You could also have a look at the Akashagarbha Sutra, which becomes canonical on the issue, as it is quoted by Shantideva.

Malcolm wrote:

These claims are downfalls only if such exaggerations are intended to benefit yourself. If not, anything for the cause.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 12:07 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

ratna said:

No, the Sheik Mansur Batallion is a different crew, they are enemies of Kadyrov.

Brunelleschi said:

My mistake.

Malcolm wrote:

There is a lot of moving parts here. Mistakes are normal.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 12:20 AM

Title: Re: Proclamations of Attainment

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Back in the day, when the monastic Bodhisattva community was also observing the vinaya, it would be a non-issue.

Malcolm wrote:

A Sutra in the Ratnakūṭa collection, Taisho 310, called the Definitive Vinaya in Chang's translation, will explain this point.

Bodhisattva monks are not prohibited from breaking any of the samvara of śrāvakas providing it is done with bodhicitta.

In the Nāgārjuna tradition of bodhisattva vows, the downfall of claiming realization of emptiness, when you do not have it, applies only to so-called "acute" practitioners, not average practitioners.

In the Yogacāra system, it is a downfall not break engage in a nonvirtue if performed out of compassion. You can read these in Buddhist Ethics by Kongtrul.

In short, the only real downfall in Mahāyāna is abandoning aspirational bodhicitta.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 12:56 AM

Title: Re: Does reincarnation really exists or is it just in the mind?

Content:

Aemilius said:

The outer world is not the same in different cultures and in different epochs.

Malcolm wrote:

There is a liquid substance perceived by those in the six lokas. It may not be perceived the same way by beings in the six lokas, but there is still a liquid substance which is being perceived, which stands apart from the percepts of the beings in those six lokas through its own causes and conditions. Can sentient beings ever hope to know with precise accuracy the exact nature of that liquid substance in all its aspects and its nature? Sure, when one of them attains buddhahood.

In the meantime, functionality is the best measure of conventionality, which is why Meru cosmology could never be functional, not even when it was current. On the other hand, we did not have the tech to fly to the moon even 100 years ago, so it is moot. Nevertheless, Meru cosmology would never have permitted us to fly to the moon, and therefore, it was always a dysfunctional cosmology on a conventional level, but no one needed to question this for millenia.

There are always people who will forever go down the idealist rabbit hold of Bishop Berkley and what not, but at least Dzogchen teachings firmly maintain, conventionally speaking, the objective existence of outer objects, contra the metaphysics of yogacāra, even in its Madhyamaka version.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 1:56 AM

Title: Re: Proclamations of Attainment

Content:

DNS said:

Contrary to some popular views, there is no prohibition on lay people discussing attainments

Malcolm wrote:

Correct.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 2:30 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

American Volunteer in Ukraine, on the ground:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 2:37 AM

Title: Re: Does reincarnation really exists or is it just in the mind?

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

The thing is that even with modern physics (if we go that route) it's hard to argue for the "real existence" (i.e. "outside") of anything beyond just obstruction via...I don't know, probability fields or something.

So, all experience is of the mind, and we can only ever know of “outside” existence via inference.

Malcolm wrote:

No object, no experience. This can be known through direct perception and not inference. If you argue that all experience is inferential, then awakening is impossible, since it is also reduced to an inference.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 4:21 AM

Title: Re: Proclamations of Attainment

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

There's also the issue of impersonating a member of the Āryasaṃgha. This is a big no-no as far as I've been taught the Dharma.

It's interesting how this is so easy to find in the prātimokṣa, but difficult to find outrightly stated in the bodhisattvaśīla. My tentative conclusion is that it was considered "obvious,"

Malcolm wrote:

Anything for the cause, as long as it is really for the benefit of others.

The usual example is the bodhisattva bhikṣu who had sex with a young woman who threatened to kill herself if he did not make love to her. His prātimokṣa defeat is not considered a defeat in the bodhisattvasamvara.

It is the same for the other defeats.

The Buddha of the śrāvaka canon is far less practical than the Buddha of the mahāyāna canon.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 4:39 AM

Title: Re: Any empowerment of the potential of vidyā (rig pa'i rtsal dbang) for 2022?

Content:

Toenail said:

And not sure what Tantra class etc it is but you can research and look it up.

Malcolm wrote:

Unsurpassed Yoga Tantra, Nondual Class, according to the Sakyapas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 4:53 AM

Title: Re: Money for Yumka Tsok?

Content:

pemachophel said:

This is typical of Chinese sanghas.

Padmist said:

It is majority Chinese yes due to area. That could be it.

Malcolm wrote:

The logic of this is that it allows other people to rejoice in the merit of the donor.

Definitely cringy from a western POV, but I have also seen this in large Tibetan teachings as well, such as Lamdre, etc., as well, where the sponsors of tea offerings have their names read off before the tea offering begins.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 5:30 AM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

Toenail said:

It is not really as simple as just saying one does not endorse certain views etc., if you share it you kinda wear it. I don't really get his edgy internet persona. I met him on the Boudhanath stupa and his presence gave me goosebumps even without the groupies and yuppies around him. But I don't really get his social media activity.

Norwegian said:

I feel like there's a particular context here that is missing. Maybe if you shared what you're referring to, it'd be easier to understand where you're coming from.

Malcolm wrote:

The context is that DJKR thinks the US is bombing the Ukraine.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 5:33 AM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

Toenail said:

It is not really as simple as just saying one does not endorse certain views etc., if you share it you kinda wear it. I don't really get his edgy internet persona.

Malcolm wrote:

It is pretty simple: he is a reactionary who neither understands nor supports liberal democracy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 5:37 AM

Title: Re: Proclamations of Attainment

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The usual example is the bodhisattva bhikṣu who had sex with a young women who threatened to kill herself if he did not make love to her. His prātimokṣa defeat is not considered a defeat in the bodhisattvasamvara.

Losal Samten said:

Would he still be disrobed?

Malcolm wrote:

Externally, I am sure. Internally, he never broke his prātimokṣa. The case of Virupa is a little similar, though the context is different.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 5:41 AM

Title: Re: Proclamations of Attainment

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

I think that that "really" is doing a lot of work in that sentence. I think that it's dragging a lot of unsaid material behind it.

Malcolm wrote:

The point is that motivation is the underlying determining factor for whether a bodhisattva has broken their vows, not the action itself.

There is a vast literature in Tibetan Buddhism on the three vows. I personally agree with Sakya Pandita's point of view, where the higher vow contradicts the lower vow, one follows the higher vow.

For example, he points out that bodhisattva bhikṣus can handle gold and silver, own property, engage in trade, etc. This is prohibited for śrāvaka bhikṣus. Likewise, Vajrayāna bhikṣus can eat meat, drink alcohol, which is prohibited for Mahāyāna bhikṣus.

As I said, anything for the cause.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 5:57 AM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

Norwegian said:

What an incredibly dumb take by Dzongsar Khyentse...

Malcolm wrote:

DJKR stays on facebook where he is lauded by sycophants, no matter what he says.

I don't think he could take on the twitter mean girls. For them, he would just be a light snack.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 6:01 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Toenail said:

Putin seems to retreat from Kiev and focus on Donbass region? Maybe they will settle for the east and call it a victory? They been releasing a statement saying their mission is partly completed.,

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 6:10 AM

Title: Re: Any empowerment of the potential of vidyā (rig pa'i rtsal dbang) for 2022?

Content:

Toenail said:

So that would be a good thing for OP

Malcolm wrote:

Not really. The rig pa'i rtsal dbang is deeper than the fourth empowerment. Of course attending a Hevajra empowerment is not negative, but it is not related to Dzogchen teachings directly.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 9:47 AM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

Bhumi108w said:

I sense some folks are not fans of DJKR here.

Malcolm wrote:

DJKR's politics are not interesting or particularly well-informed. His grasp of modern history is atrocious.

Nevertheless, he has used his reputation to benefit many people with the dharma, despite what ever one perceive his personal limitations to be.

I generally make a point of separating people's politics from their commitment to Dharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 9:56 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Queequeg said:

Leadership, Power, and Empowerment...

pass.

Malcolm wrote:

Sounds pretty Holiday Day Inn business conference-style, real estate seminar.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 10:01 AM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

Tilopa said:

Not intending to be critical but afaik she's just an ordinary person

Malcolm wrote:

What makes you DJKR is anything other than an ordinary person?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 10:27 AM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

KristenM said:

I've got a similar feeling about Uma Thurman, whom I have met and wasn't totally blown away by her Bodhisattva qualities either.

Tilopa said:

Not intending to be critical but afaik she's just an ordinary person so expecting her to have the qualities of a bodhisattva may be a bit unrealistic.

Or am I missing something and she's been recognized as the incarnation of a Lama?

Either way maybe you just got her on a bad day.

KristenM said:

For sure. It is an unrealistic expectation to assume a child of a great Buddhist practitioner would have those same qualities.

Malcolm wrote:

Who says Thurman is a “great Buddhist practitioner?” I met him, and while he can be funny, I found him to be rather hysterical and brittle in general.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 10:35 AM

Title: Re: Does reincarnation really exists or is it just in the mind?

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

The thing is that even with modern physics (if we go that route) it's hard to argue for the “real existence” (i.e. “outside”) of anything beyond just obstruction via...I don't know, probability fields or something.

So, all experience is of the mind, and we can only ever know of “outside” existence via inference.

Malcolm wrote:

No object, no experience. This can be known through direct perception and not inference. If you argue that all experience is inferential, then awakening is impossible, since it is also reduced to an inference.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Not saying all experience is inferential, that wouldn't make sense at all. I'm saying things that are labelled "outside" experience - stuff like atoms etc. (not in the abidharma sense, in the modern sense) are only knowable through inferences made about subjective experiences.

Malcolm wrote:

Inference is a form of valid knowledge.

But we don't need to infer that in absence of light our eyes can't see outer objects, and when there is light they can see outer objects.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 11:03 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

clyde said:

I think a discussion between committed practitioners about “tradition and innovation” could be interesting. Ten years ago I saw Jack Kornfield on a panel noting that “Every generation has both ‘conservers’ and ‘adapters’” and that the first argument between them began immediately at the Buddha's passing.

Really, whether this conference will be of any value is mostly dependent on the speakers, not the topic labels.

Malcolm wrote:

People will meet, talk, eat food (the sensible people will also get a drink together), have a nice feeling, go home, and nothing will have happened of any significance other than a Tricycle article about how important it all was.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 11:28 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

clyde said:

I think a discussion between committed practitioners about "tradition and innovation" could be interesting. Ten years ago I saw Jack Kornfield on a panel noting that "Every generation has both 'conservers' and 'adapters'" and that the first argument between them began immediately at the Buddha's passing.

Really, whether this conference will be of any value is mostly dependent on the speakers, not the topic labels.

Malcolm wrote:

People will meet, talk, eat food (the sensible people will also get a drink together), have a nice feeling, go home

KristenM said:

Isn't it a Webinar?

Malcolm wrote:

Even more hollow and self-important, then.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 11:33 AM

Title: Re: Money for Yumka Tsok?

Content:

pemachophel said:

I don't know about other Asian societies, but Chinese culture is very into consensus building, often by peer-pressure. Also very into ranking. I have seen several Tibetan Lamas with large Chinese sanghas, whether in Asia or the West, adopt this technique after seeing its impressive financial results, and, yes, it is very uncomfortable for Westerners.

Malcolm wrote:

They didn't adopt it from the Chinese.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 11:37 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 7:02 PM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

What makes you think DJKR is anything other than an ordinary person?

Tilopa said:

Nothing at all, never met him.

Maybe I'm naive but I do expect incarnate lamas, dharma teachers and gurus to behave a little better than ordinary people who may not necessarily be familiar with mahayana philosophy, practice and ethics. I'm well aware some don't but therein lies the difference between trustworthy teachers and charlatans best avoided.

Malcolm wrote:

DJKR has made it very clear in many of his writings that ethics are for suckers, and that if you expect gurus to be ethical, you should not practice Vajrayana.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 7:08 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

narhwal90 said:

I like the outreach angle, maybe get a bunch of visitors and so on. Even if SFZC was my home center I wouldn't attend as a participant, but I'd make assisting the production a form of work practice.

Big events like this are how the big dharma machines operate; you have to get the butts onto cushions on a larger scale. Happily there are smaller dharma operations also, for those so disposed.

HePo said:

I do not know how much SFZC is involved - only one on the panel is associated with SFZC.

It seems to be part of a series organised by <https://fredericklenzfoundation.org/events/2022-the-future-of-american-buddhism/%5B/url>

Lenz Foundation - Frederick Lenz aka Zen Master Rama

Malcolm wrote:

Part of the reason Shambhala is going off the rails is the influence of the Lenz foundation.

I recall seeing this guy hanging up his own fliers in Harvard square back in the 80's.

He drowned off the end of his dock in Long Island, found wearing a dog collar.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 7:34 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

narhwal90 said:

Big events like this are how the big dharma machines operate; you have to get the butts onto cushions on a larger scale.

Malcolm wrote:

Corporate Buddhism is horrible. All the big scandals come from such entities.

Is it a surprise that the Lenz Foundation is sponsoring this? No. Fredrick Lenz was a huge fraud. The Lenz Foundation has about as much to do with Buddhism as Exxon has to do with combatting climate change.

Lenz's grift was "American Buddhism." His scheme was to get naive people to come to concerts by his Kitaro influenced new age band, Zazen, and call that meditation. He wrote stupid, orientalist adventure novels that make T. Lobsang Rampa look credible by comparison, such memorable titles as Surfing in the Himalayas, featuring, I kid you not, a fellow named Master Fwap, etc. The more intelligent people he sent to school to learn computer science, set them up with Wall Street jobs, and tithed them 10%. In this way he became wealthy very quickly through his software company filled with devotees. But it all had nothing to do with Buddhadharma.

After Lenz's suicide/accidental death (it's not clear which), one of his main students married one of Namkhai Drime Rinpoche's daughters. Her sister married Mukpo and became queen of Shambhala. You can guess the rest.

The advisory board for the Lenz Foundation is telling:

Liz Lewinson, Chairperson
B. A. Smith, Co-Chairperson
Dr. Koshin Paley Ellison, MFA, LMSW, DMin, co-founder, the New York Zen Center for Contemplative Care
Lisa Marshall, CEO, Rama Meditation Society
Acharya Fleet Maull, Prison Dharma Network
Jeffrey Richardson, Sr. Consulting Information Technology Architect, IBM
James Shaheen, Editor and Publisher – Tricycle: The Buddhist Review
Judith Simmer-Brown, Ph.D., Professor of Contemplative and Religious Studies, Naropa University

I wouldn't participate in one of their conferences if you paid me. This isn't about getting butts onto cushions, it's about legitimizing one of the biggest grifters in the short history of Buddhism in the West.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 7:46 PM
Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR
Content:
Bhumi108w said:
I sense some folks are not fans of DJKR here.

climb-up said:
I really like his book "what makes you not Buddhist," and the part of "not for happiness" that I read.

I am not a fan of this nonsense!

Malcolm wrote:
The nonsense is DJKR's continued insinuation that Putin's invasion of the Ukraine is somehow the fault of the US, his frequent attacks on liberal democracy, and his general cheerleading of autocrats.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 7:55 PM
Title: Re: Proclamations of Attainment
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
The tale of the bodhisattva bhikshu who takes on a suicidal lover is recounted in the Muni's intent by Sapan.

But the main point overall is that motivation trumps the deed every time. For example, lying to hunters about the location of game they are pursuing, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 9:47 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

KristenM said:

But this event does look like some corporate pc schlock.

Malcolm wrote:

And the gift goes on...

Set to tune of "And The Beat Goes On" by the Whispers:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 9:55 PM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

KristenM said:

I've got a similar feeling about Uma Thurman, whom I have met and wasn't totally blown away by her Bodhisattva qualities either.

Tilopa said:

Not intending to be critical but afaik she's just an ordinary person so expecting her to have the qualities of a bodhisattva may be a bit unrealistic.

Or am I missing something and she's been recognized as the incarnation of a Lama?

Either way maybe you just got her on a bad day.

KristenM said:

Just for the record, I met her multiple times and she was supposed to be a mentor to me, but she wasn't even famous then. Anyhow, I shouldn't have said anything. I'm sure she is just fine.

Malcolm wrote:

She was awesome in Kill Bill.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 11:28 PM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

But one could easily criticize you for your myopathy and attachment to views.

Malcolm wrote:

It is easy to criticize anyone, even the Buddha. I think you meant myopia.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 11:40 PM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

But one could easily criticize you for your myopathy and attachment to views.

Malcolm wrote:

It is easy to criticize anyone, even the Buddha.

Crazywisdom said:

Deadbeat dad.

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 26th, 2022 at 11:49 PM

Title: Re: Buddhahood In This Life

Content:

PRESTONCHRISTIAN23 said:

but does the 17 tantras allow me to be connected to where I can read that?

Malcolm wrote:

If you have received Dzogchen transmission and some teachings already, then I think it is ok. If you have not, then maybe it is better to find a teacher first.

Archie2009 said:

Let's say you have received Dzogchen transmission and some teachings and perhaps some more. In the information session you mentioned that everything in the Tshig don mdzod, but also basically everything in Lonchenpa's writings is based on the man ngag sde 17 tantras. Wouldn't that then basically also hold for every Heart Essence Dzogchen text composed after him? So you could read almost anything with the intention of getting the lung afterwards as soon as the opportunity presents itself? Let's say Wonderous Dance of Illusion on which the publisher of the English translation has tagged a restriction for possession of the lung. I think this particular restriction came at the request of Chatral Rinpoche, but I personally think it is silly since there is (probably) no such restriction attached to the Tibetan original.

Malcolm wrote:

That's something you must decide for yourself. And yes, you can download that autobio from BDRC with no problem. Other texts of his are restricted, meaning you cannot download them.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 12:04 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 12:13 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

American Buddhism. That's funny. Will there be a representative from Peru? American Buddhism is bigger than US of A.

Malcolm wrote:

The USA is the only country with the word "America" in its name. Hence, "American Buddhism" refers only to Buddhism in the US.

Small point, but worth considering for context.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 12:18 AM

Title: Re: Buddhahood In This Life

Content:

Archie2009 said:

Though Chatral Rinpoche being a transmission holder for Sera Khandro would have resulted in one translation being sold at only 2 stores worldwide, while the Wallace translation can be ordered at your local department store.

Malcolm wrote:

Another rather absurd situation, like the one you describe, is Mipham's short commentary on Guhyagarbha. The LOB translation is restricted, the Dharmacakra translation is not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 12:24 AM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

I tend to agree with him that Westerns filter dharma through biases that seem more important to them than dharma.

Malcolm wrote:

Tibetans and Bhutanese do the same thing. It is no different.

Obedience to autocratic authority in the name of imaginary friends ("wisdom beings") whom one claims to speak for is not actually part of the dharma. But it is what passes for guru devotion in DJKR's writings.

Most people don't realize this, but "rājas" in Buddha's tribe were elected. It was not a hereditary position. The Buddha instituted a form of representative democracy based on seniority in the monastic sangha, which still exists today. For example, the head of the Geluk school is elected, not appointed.

Anyway, DJKR does enough good things for the Dharma that his unfortunate naivety in politics and lack of understanding of modern history is forgivable. I'd definitely never vote for him though. I'd never take teachings from him either (which I am sure he prefers). But that's just me. It's better he remains a vajra brother.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 12:36 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Shinjin said:

The future of American Buddhism is Shin Buddhism according to DT Suzuki.

Malcolm wrote:

The future of Buddhism period is Dzogchen, according to Garab Dorje. YMMV.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 1:43 AM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

Shinjin said:

Ethics are for suckers? We are definitely in Mappo.

Malcolm wrote:

He is referring to people who expect Vajrayāna gurus to conform to conventional Buddhist ethics. Such people, he writes, should stick with common Mahāyāna, because somehow, there is some magical substance in Vajrayāna samayas that make you fall into hell if you disapprove of your guru's conduct or resist their abuse, should they in fact be abusive in a real sense.

Somehow, in some people's minds, the ritual of empowerment creates a magical chain that turns one into a Buddhist serf if one should take empowerment. This idea is perfectly understandable in the context of Tibetan culture, as the Tibetans tend to view the relationship between teacher and student as something resembling a lord and a vassal. Of course in the real world, it does not necessarily play out like this at all. But generally people like to use the fantasy novel about Milarepa written in the 15th century, or the accounts of Naropa's trials under Tilopa as proof that we should allow our gurus to torture us for our own good, excusing the pathological behavior of Trungpa and others on such grounds.

In his writings DJKR devotes thousands of words to criticizing people who are offended when they are treated badly by some Vajrayāna teacher and wish to leave, basically asserting that feeling harmed by some person they participated in a ritual with means they will never achieve liberation, not even considering for one second that the real situation is that student and that teacher do not have the right karmic connection at all and it is better for them to separate. The real problem here is a catechistic and realist interpretation of samaya and a failure to appreciate that teachers can and do break samaya with their students. This point is never actually addressed in any comprehensive way by DJKR in any of his writings. In his writings, the onus is always placed on the student to behave, never the teacher.

As far as DJKR's politics go, well, he likes to stir things up and create controversy. But over the years a very distinct pattern of conservatism has emerged—there is nothing good at all about the West, and basically, I am quite sure that in his mind we should go back to the some time where there was an enlightened dharmarāja to run the world (which is a fantasy). I find in his writings a great deal of nostalgia. He seems to be akin to what Ann Applebaum, a conservative columnist for the Washington Post, describes as a nostalgic conservative:

Radically different from the reflective nostalgics are what Boym calls the restorative nostalgics, not all of whom recognize themselves as nostalgics at all. Restorative nostalgics don't just look at old photographs and piece together family stories. They are mythmakers and architects, builders of monuments and founders of nationalist political projects. They do not merely want to contemplate or learn from the past. They want, as Boym puts it, to "rebuild the lost home and patch up the memory gaps." Many of them don't recognize their own fictions about the past for what they are: "They believe their project is about truth." They are not interested in a nuanced past, in a world in which great leaders were flawed men, in which famous military victories had lethal side effects. They don't acknowledge that the past might have had its drawbacks. They want the cartoon version of history, and more importantly, they want to live in it, right now. They don't want to act out roles from the past because it amuses them: they want to behave as they think their ancestors did, without irony.

It is not by accident that restorative nostalgia often goes hand in hand with conspiracy theories and the medium-sized lies. These needn't be as harsh or crazy as the Smolensk conspiracy theory or the Soros conspiracy theory; they can gently invoke scapegoats rather than a full-fledged alternative reality. At a minimum, they can offer an explanation: The nation is no longer great because someone has attacked us, undermined us, sapped our strength. Someone—the immigrants, the foreigners, the elites, or indeed the EU—has perverted the course of history and reduced the nation to a shadow of its former self. The essential identity that we once had has been taken away and replaced with something cheap and artificial. Eventually, those who seek power on the back of restorative nostalgia will begin to cultivate these conspiracy theories, or alternative histories, or alternative fibs, whether or not they have any basis in fact.

Applebaum, Anne. Twilight of Democracy (p. 74-75). Knopf Doubleday Publishing Group. Kindle Edition.

In DJKR's case, it seems he feels that it westerners and democracy itself are attacking, undermining, and sapping the strength of the Dharma. Take this post on Facebook:

In short, he really dislikes the West and liberal democracy. Not sure what he wants to replace it with...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 1:47 AM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

Shinjin said:

Regardless I think he is a great teacher. People pay too much attention to politics especially Americans. Dharma is more important.

Malcolm wrote:

Sorry, but Europeans definitely have us beat in the "Paying too much attention to politics department."

Politics are important to Dharma, that is why there are so many sūtras and rituals devoted to protecting nations, etc., so that the Dharma can flourish.

The Lamp of Dharma has clearly passed to the West, whether people realize it or not. Liberal democracy is responsible for that. The age of kings is done.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 1:52 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Shinjin said:

The future of American Buddhism is Shin Buddhism according to DT Suzuki.

Malcolm wrote:

The future of Buddhism period is Dzogchen, according to Garab Dorje. YMMV.

Shinjin said:

It very well could be but consider the fact that Pure Land is the most widely practiced form of Buddhism in the world right now.

Malcolm wrote:

That's now, not the future.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 3:00 AM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I find his comments disappointing, but not terribly surprising. It seems like much of his social commentary the past years has narrowed from occasionally insightful to romantic and reactionary.

Crazywisdom said:

Did he ever come out as gay? I feel like he's struggling with it.

Malcolm wrote:

He has a partner, a woman who grew up in the Shambhala community, as I understand things.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 3:03 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Shinjin said:

It very well could be but consider the fact that Pure Land is the most widely practiced form of Buddhism in the world right now.

Malcolm wrote:

That's now, not the future.

Crazywisdom said:

GP also said it will be like a flash in the pan and as suddenly as it becomes the thing it will perish.

Malcolm wrote:

That is not how it is described in the commentary of the Sound Tantra. In the Sound Tantra and its commentary, Dzogchen is the final remaining Dharma after all the others, including Mantrayāna, has vanished.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 3:18 AM

Title: Re: Money for Yumka Tsok?

Content:

treehuggingoctopus said:

Apparently very much a traditional Tibetan thing. One of my teachers (a Tibetan) has told me that Tibetan families will keep detailed notes about who donated how much (or what) to whom and when and in which circumstances, so that gift-giving is actually a very demanding game if it is to be played correctly -- you need to take into account whether the recipient, or someone in their family, has the capacity/opportunity to reciprocate in the future. The aforementioned book-keeping endeavour spans generations. (The teacher sharing the story seemed to find the practice silly, hilarious but not really reprehensible.)

Malcolm wrote:

Thai Buddhists also keep ledgers where they note how much they gave, to whom, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 3:51 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

HePo said:

Malcolm

...

After Lenz's suicide/accidental death (it's not clear which), perhaps taking 150 tabs of Valium might be a clue? the woman he was with only took 50 Valiums.

Malcolm wrote:

A detail that escaped my less-than-engaged attention in the whole thing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 4:05 AM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

The Lamp of Dharma is not going out in the East and the best lamas live there...

Malcolm wrote:
It is and not for long.

You have no idea how degenerate things are in Tibet. All the "best lamas" are passing away. I have a Chinese friend in Tibet, fluent in Tibetan, who can go everywhere, and has spent the past several years living in Golok, Kham, Lhasa, etc., with access to all the best lamas in Tibet—Jonang, Nyingma, Kagyu, and Sakya—collecting as many transmissions as he can before it all goes to pot.

I get reports from him fairly regularly. It is worse in India and the rest of Asia.

English is now the international language of Buddhism. Everyone recognizes this, including DJKR.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 4:51 AM
Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism
Content:
clyde said:
I vaguely remember about Frederick "Zen Master Rama" Lenz and I have no idea what the Lenz Foundation does.

Malcolm wrote:
"We Are Building American Buddhism"

It mostly exists to promote this bullshit:

<https://www.ramameditationsociety.org>

For example, there are two insipid pieces of dreadful, derivative new age dross. Here is one:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 5:31 AM
Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism
Content:
clyde said:
It seems the Naropa University has a relationship with the Lenz Foundation.

Malcolm wrote:
Yes, sadly they do. But it is not surprising at all. I explained the connection above.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 6:14 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Jesse said:

In a few short hours on live television, and in front of the UN he managed to call Putin: A war criminal, a Butcher, and then say that he needs to be removed from power.

Malcolm wrote:

All three things are true. Putin is a war criminal, a butcher, and needs to be removed from power.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 9:14 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

You don't think it's stupid to make a paranoid dictator with access to the worlds largest cache of nuclear weapons, one who is basically obsessed with the notion that he is in a cultural battle with The West more paranoid with your statements? It's dumb as shit to do that, true or not.

Malcolm wrote:

Sorry, but someone has to stand up to,Putin. If not now, when? After he has attacked a NATO country like Estonia? When does the appeasement end?

I am glad Biden said out loud what every sane person in the West thinks.

I think it is bullshit that we have not declared a no fly zone.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 9:29 AM
Title: Re: Buddhahood In This Life
Content:
Crazywisdom said:
What's a "department store"?

Malcolm wrote:
Woolworth's, etc.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 9:35 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 9:39 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 10:06 AM
Title: Re: Stream of Lapis And ChNN namchö medicine Buddha ...same?
Content:
dechenpa said:
There are about 40 deities in the Namcho cycle,

Malcolm wrote:
There are 37 different dakini practices in Namcho alone.

You might want to recount.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 10:12 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Sādhaka said:
Because Biden is the voice of sanity (?)

Malcolm wrote:
Because he is right.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 10:42 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

PeterC said:
A popular revolt against him is a fantasy. The only plausible scenario in which he goes is that a few senior, respected military figures kill him.

Malcolm wrote:

That won't happen. It won't be the military. Russia's military is weak, low man on the totem. It would have to be the secret police, the state security apparatus, they are the elite in Russia these days, at least, according to Kamal Galeev,

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 7:07 PM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

Respectfully disagree about Buddhism being passed to the West. English is and will probably be one of the bigger languages used, but that is about it. Look at the statistics:

A miniscule proportion of the world's buddhists live in the West as we see here. Only ~1% of Americans are Buddhists (Wikipedia). Probably even less in Europe.

Stat_1.jpg

Not a single western country in the top 10.

Stat_2.jpg

Via: <https://www.pewforum.org/2015/04/02/buddhists/>

Malcolm wrote:

99 percent of that 98 percent are nonpractitioners, cultural Buddhists. My remark still stands.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 7:11 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Jesse said:

People don't understand the speed at which nuclear war is actually fought.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes we do. Quite a few of us grew up during the first Cold War.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 9:06 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Jesse said:

People don't understand the speed at which nuclear war is actually fought.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes we do. Quite a few of us grew up during the first Cold War.

Jesse said:

Many do not -- thus the public calls for assassinating Putin, Establishing anti fly zones, sending fleets of aircraft to Ukraine.

Chest thumpers without the slightest understanding of the reality of nuclear war, and just how quickly it can happen.

Malcolm wrote:

So we cave? Let Putin have his way with Europe?

Jesse said:

Nearly anyone when put in this situation would be likely to use the nuclear option; Putin is likely a high functioning sociopath, and potentially a high functioning psychopath. The exact type of personality which would resort to killing everyone in the event he loses everything.

Malcolm wrote:

Generally speaking, no one believes Putin is that irrational. He is not a Bond villain. So it is better to treat him as a rational actor. He won't use strategic nukes, even if NATO or the UN sends troops into Ukraine.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 9:10 PM

Title: Re: Buddhahood In This Life

Content:

PeterC said:

This is a better argument. But it runs into the same problem as my first hypothetical above. There is a translation out there that doesn't even raise the issue of Chatral R's wishes. Now I'm not going to comment on the relative quality of the two translation, but I know people have opinions on that.

stoneinfofocus said:

The text is the text. If your lama says you can read it, you can read it. I get that you're trying to respect every lama's wishes, but what your lama says first is what matters most. If you come across a situation like you describe and you want to ask them, that's fine, but there is no fault in reading a text you have permission for, regardless of some lama putting a restriction on it.

You can either follow the spirit of how transmission and permission works, or you can cling to rules. Personally, I'll not question when my lamas say I can read something. It's not a fault to read something they said I could read.

PeterC said:

So in my hypothetical above, you would feel perfectly happy reading HHDL's heart sutra book, and not think it a better idea to pick up one of the hundreds of others that doesn't have a forward expressing the explicit wishes of the lama publishing it that you do not read it?

The problem with my hypothetical is that not all translations are equal. But let's leave that to one side for now.

Malcolm wrote:

The fact is that Tibetans don't respect these prohibitions and never have. Marpa for example. The only way to keep a text unread is to keep it in a manuscript.

The system of lungs exists solely due to scarcity of paper and the low level of literacy in Tibet.

The value of reading transmissions is in continuing a lineage of a text. That is a valid point. However, the absence of a lung for a text does not mean it does not get read. I can provide many examples of texts that have no lung and continue to be read widely, for example Nubchen's Lamp.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 9:22 PM

Title: Re: Buddhahood In This Life

Content:

PeterC said:

So in my hypothetical above, you would feel perfectly happy reading HHDL's heart sutra book, and not think it a better idea to pick up one of the hundreds of others that doesn't have a forward expressing the explicit wishes of the lama publishing it that you do not read it?

The problem with my hypothetical is that not all translations are equal. But let's leave that to one side for now.

stoneinfofocus said:

Yes. Unless there is some text or commentary in there or addition that is not available elsewhere. The Heart Sutra is the Heart Sutra. Another text like a commentary is a different story.

PeterC said:

I made the cost of choosing the alternative zero in the hypothetical - so clearly you value the possibility of acting against the wishes of a well-respected and important lama at zero. That is a curious choice.

Malcolm wrote:

Counter example. Kunzang Dechen Lingpa taught Khenpo Ngakchung's Thogal Zintri despite not having received the lung. Why? His explanation was it was just thogal, little different than what was in Yeshe Lama.

We forget that Dzogchen is an intimate instruction that does not come from a text. We also forget that these texts are extremely repetitive. If you've read the four Dzogchen treasuries of Longchenpa, you've pretty much read everything one needs to practice, providing one is under the guidance of a qualified teacher. There isn't one single thing in Dudjom Lingpa oeuvre that is more profound than what is contained in Longchenpa's works.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 9:44 PM

Title: Re: Buddhahood In This Life

Content:

PeterC said:

I made the cost of choosing the alternative zero in the hypothetical - so clearly you value the possibility of acting against the wishes of a well-respected and important lama at zero. That is a curious choice.

Malcolm wrote:

Counter example. Kunzang Dechen Lingpa taught Khenpo Ngakchung's Thogal Zintri despite not having received the lung. Why? His explanation was it was just thogal, little different than what was in Yeshe Lama.

We forget that Dzogchen is an intimate instruction that does not come from a text. We also forget that these texts are extremely repetitive. If you've read the four Dzogchen treasuries of Longchenpa, you've pretty much read everything one needs to practice, providing one is under the guidance of a qualified teacher.

PeterC said:

Of course I'd trust KDL's opinion on a Thogal text given his experience. But should I trust my opinion about the same Thogal text when I don't have his experience?

Malcolm wrote:

The point I am making is that Chatral Rinpoche had put a restriction on this text . One cannot download it, etc. I certainly agree that people should not read Dzogchen texts without guidance, but after a certain point we have to be realistic and understand that Tibetans read all kinds of things for which they do not have the lung and that if they are sufficiently interested in something, they go get the lung. Of course, this only applies to educated Tibetans. Prior to 1959, only 15% of the Tibetan population was actually literate.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 9:51 PM

Title: Re: Buddhahood In This Life

Content:

PeterC said:

Of course I'd trust KDL's opinion on a Thogal text given his experience. But should I trust my opinion about the same Thogal text when I don't have his experience?

stoneinfofocus said:

No, which is why you listen to qualified teachers. If KDL is your lama, then as his student, you can utilize the text if he says you can. If he's not your teacher, then you don't. This is very easy.

PeterC said:

So by that logic, if you're thinking of reading that particular translation of the Nang Jang, you would explain Chatral R's foreword and ask your lama if it's ok?

Malcolm wrote:

This is a funny question. Chatral Rinpoche didn't know English, not one word. There is no way he can endorse one English translation against another.

Two of these translations are restricted: the Padma Publishing one and the new Shambhala one. Wallace's is not, but Wallace also received the transmission for these things from Gyatrul R.

It's all really moot, actually. Of course my personal practice is to get the lung for things I want to read, but I am not anyone's boss. All I can say is that having at least the poti wang makes a connection with the texts. I can encourage people to get lungs, but it's really up to them.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 9:54 PM

Title: Re: Buddhahood In This Life

Content:

PeterC said:

So by that logic, if you're thinking of reading that particular translation of the Nang Jang, you would explain Chatral R's foreword and ask your lama if it's ok?

stoneinfofocus said:

Why would I if I have transmission and permission to read Nang Jang already from my lama?

I don't understand your point about KDL. KDL chooses to teach a text to his students. His students can utilize his teachings. End of story. What is there to discuss about this?

PeterC said:

Malcolm's point is that KDL himself didn't have the lung. He was going back to the original argument about the content of the 17 tantras containing everything subsequent in the development of mennagde and therefore being sufficient as a basis for studying anything else in the tradition. My point was that sure, if KDL decided to do that then nobody is going to disagree with him because he's KDL, but should you trust yourself to do the same. Like my earlier hypothetical it's an appeal to intuition.

Malcolm wrote:

For example, ChNN pointed out he did not have the lung for the commentary on the Sound Tantra, but he pointed out that he did have the lung for the Sound Tantra, and therefor he didn't need the lung for the commentary. So, we don't either, as long as we have the lung for the Sound Tantra itself.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 10:46 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Jesse said:

in case you haven't noticed we are doing something, Russia is being isolated from the rest of the world. He, and his country are losing every single benefit wrought from globalism.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and rightly so.

Jesse said:

They have no real end game for Ukraine, any military victory will be hollow, they have fundamentally been defeated, wasted an enormous amount of money, resources, lives, and time gaining exactly nothing. This itself will destabilize Russia over time.

Malcolm wrote:

That's what happens when you try to overthrow a country that is seeking to integrate itself in the Western Bloc, and happens to be located next to NATO.

Jesse said:

This strategy has worked well, but it won't prevent Ukraine from being destroyed.. This is still a superior end than global nuclear Armageddon. The fact is they are walking a fine line even now, providing weapons, materials, intelligence, and other support to Ukraine. They are fundamentally walking the finest line possible to defeat Russia without escalating into direct conflict with them.

Malcolm wrote:

American and Russian pilots faced off in Korea and Vietnam. The fear of escalation to a nuclear war is overstated. You need to examine how Kennedy faced down Krushchev during the Cuban Missile crisis.

Jesse said:

I think fears that Russia will further invade Europe are mostly unfounded...

Malcolm wrote:

That's what they said about Hitler.

It is not unfounded that Putin might compound his errors. People in the Moscow Duma are already calling for an Invasion of Poland.

Jesse said:

to call NATOS response anything less than brilliant would be an understatement. Ukraine will be largely sacrificed to defeat Russia without getting into a nuclear war that would destroy us all. Ukraine included.

Malcolm wrote:

NATO has responded with insufficient support for Ukraine thus far.

Jesse said:

Really all that remains is for them to continue their present strategy while avoiding the pitfalls, and if they pull it off.. it will probably be the single best display of wartime strategy ever pulled off.

Malcolm wrote:

Originally, NATO thought Russia was stronger and more competent. We see more clearly now that Russia's corruption and autocracy has weakened Russia considerably over the past 20 years. I would argue that NATO's response was too ginger. However, we now see that Russia is weak and disorganized. They are entirely dependent on the West for their technology and have been since the 1920's.

Jesse said:

They are beating one of the largest militaries on earth without firing a single shot(themselves), but rather purely through strategy, non-violent warfare (economic war, sanctions, information war, psychological war).

Malcolm wrote:

The Russian Military is weak for a number of reason, not least of which they are potentially the main threat to Putin's power. You need to read all Kamal Galeev's threads on twitter.

Jesse said:

High functioning sociopaths ARE rational. Using nukes isn't inherently an irrational thing to do, it depends on the circumstances. Deciding to kill everyone using nukes in the event your only remaining option is death isn't irrational, it's mind mindbogglingly aggressive, free from any moral, empathetic, or sympathetic concern; but still not irrational.

Malcolm wrote:

Putin isn't a sociopath. He is a cop, a policeman, and behaves like a policeman. He is not military guy. Huge numbers of the "soldiers" sent to Ukraine were police, armed with riot gear. He thought he was going in to make arrests after the Ukrainians put down their arms and let his army in.

He is also not a Bond villain. He is motivated by a Christian fascist ideology (Ivan Ilyin) supported by a fascist movement in Russia. It's unlikely he will use tactical nukes. There are layers of command between him and Russia's strategic nukes. Remember Mark Milley's comments to Pelosi about Trump's access to nukes? It is the same in Russia.

So far, the Russian command structure has been compromised electronically. Their vaunted secure communications system uses 3g. They blew up all the 3g towers in Eastern Ukraine. This is why they switched to using iPhones, enabling everyone to listen in on their communications. If they plan on using tactical nukes, we will know about it right away, before they use them. They will use chemical weapons before they use nukes. They've already used phosphorus. In short, we know what the Russians are planning, and when they are going to move.

You are correct that we have the upper hand. But we need to end this now, for Ukraine, and drive the Russians back into the Russia, and continue to crush them so Russian Federation falls apart. In my opinion, Russia has lost the right to be a federation.

The 300 year era of Russian colonialism is now over, permanently.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 10:53 PM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

heart said:

I can tell you this: DJKR is an awesome Vajrayana teacher. One of the very very best in my opinion.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, but we're just talking about his politics (mainly).

It is quite understandable that many Tibetans have different politics than Westerners.

I just wish that DJKR would actually study modern history, and not just watch random videos on the internet.

For example it is fine that he likes Mearsheimer. But he should also read Inkenberry, etc., in other words, he ought round out his opinions by reading the best scholarship, not just one position.

The funny thing to me is that he advocates for a so-called "realist" position (which is fundamentally amoral). But he seemingly has no understanding at all of the benefits he has received from liberal internationalism. The British Empire produced modern Indian democracy and Bhutanese democracy, where English is the defacto language of government and bureaucracy. When Tibet fell, where did the Tibetan Buddhist establishment move? India. He was born in Bhutan, a protectorate of Britain, originally. The Dalai Lama is strong advocate of liberal democracy. DKJR should listen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 11:08 PM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

heart said:

I can tell you this: DJKR is an awesome Vajrayana teacher. One of the very very best in my opinion.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, but we're just talking about his politics.

heart said:

Maybe you where but there was a lot of other rather unnecessary comments.

Malcolm wrote:

DJKR is polarizing. Many people think his approach to Sogyal's scandal was insincere, and his unconditional admiration for Trungpa really gross. They don't like his support for Aung San Su Kyi, and his take on the present war.

Many people don't agree with his take on guru devotion, etc.

You have to recognize, Magnus, that he has set himself up for criticism by being so vocal in his opinions. There are many Tibetans who really don't like him either, because he has criticized the Dalai Lama by criticizing the Dalai Lama's emphasis on Nalanda masters. So, pick a controversial guru, you get controversy. A lot of Tibetans (like Dzongsar) don't like ChNN, even now. He was also controversial in his day, especially when he was writing in the 1970's. Much of that is because the book that was recently published, Necklace of Jewels where he first began to synthesize his deconstruction of the imperial era myths about the nonexistence of Tibetan culture before the introduction of Buddhism, etc.

Pick a controversial guru, you are going to hear a lot of people voice criticisms of that guru. It's natural. But it is not fatal. And it does not negate that person's positive contributions. For example, the 84000 project, as I mentioned before this, is a very good use of DJKR's title and money.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 27th, 2022 at 11:36 PM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

heart said:

You are welcome to criticise his politics as much as you want. I just wanted you to know that there are actual disciples of him here.

Malcolm wrote:

I am aware. But then, they know who he is. Right?

heart said:

I never heard him say anything about ChNNR so I can't comment on that.

Malcolm wrote:

I have been told he has by people who heard him first hand do so.

heart said:

Last event I was at we actually sang the SoV with his tune during tsog.

Malcolm wrote:

That's interesting. Well CHNN also pointed out that a lot of Lamas also discovered what he had known for decades, that the Ngondro approach isn't really working for many, many westerners.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 28th, 2022 at 12:18 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

There is no scenario where Putin doesn't escalate, unless he's killed first. And then who will take his place? Some Stalin? Russia gets Ruthless fast. This is the same La La land where we thought democracy will blossom if we take out Saddam and Momar.

Malcolm wrote:

Kaddaffi was taken out because of article 5. That was a NATO job. Iraq, everyone understands, was a function of Cheney (who was never a spook, and never acted like one) fabricating intelligence, but it is not that simple.

Crazywisdom said:

Iran revolution was a grassroots deal.

Malcolm wrote:

Under the Shah, Parsees were invited back from India, Bahais, Jews and Christians allowed to freely worship, etc., and the power of Muslim clerics was curtailed. Women did not wear the hijab, they wore dresses, one could buy wine, etc., and after the overthrow of Mossadegh with the help of the CIA and British intelligence, Iran continued to westernize. One of my friends was the late Prince Ali Reza. Most people really do not know the story of the revolution. I still have friends close to the Shah who left for France after the revolution. Despite the Shah's use of secret police to suppress the opposition, the Shah was progressive and pro-Western. The problem with the Shah was the problem all monarchies face. He had no good plan of succession, his kids were too young, and Iran was no longer a constitutional monarchy. The Iranian revolution set back the development of Iran by decades. Iran was the closest US ally in the region before the revolution.

The Iraq war against Iran was eventually backed by the US, but not enthusiastically. The decision was taken by the G7 to support other friendly Arab states, the main concern being that the war might spread throughout the middle east. Both Iraq and Iran were supporting terrorist groups, and Iraq used chemical weapons against Iran and the Kurds (an Iranian speaking people) many times. Shortly after the Iraq/Iran war was over, Iraq invaded Kuwait for "cheating," it was a bedouin raid with tanks, jeeps, and APCs. Naturally, we punished Iraq. The UN levied very harsh sanctions against Iraq (which for some bizarre reason everyone blames Albright for, well because they are idiots who don't know history), and Wolfowitz and crew, managed to convince Bush II that Hussein was linked to Al-Qaeda. The rest you know.

Crazywisdom said:

We don't have good data about Russia. We don't know pro democracy stands a chance there. Now you're saying he has support from Christian fascists and the Duma wants invasion of Poland. So he's not alone and surely there is an ambitious dude ready to keep the fight going if Putin dies. We are one month into a war that will last years. Seems inevitable now that Putin takes on NATO.

Malcolm wrote:

Russia is a weak country. They will grow weaker. Everyone who can is leaving. You want to understand what is going on? Read this guy.

etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 28th, 2022 at 12:29 AM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

heart said:

In my opinion it seems more like the world he knows is not the world you know rather than that he know very little of the world. Very few Tibetans in his position knows so much about Western and Asian culture. He just see things differently.

Malcolm wrote:

That's the thing. I don't think he betrays much knowledge of western culture at all. Culture is in history. If you don't study Tibetan history, you don't know Tibetan culture.

He knows some western people. But they are mostly devotees. That does not mean he knows the west well at all.

heart said:

He is free to have any opinion he likes, just like you.

Malcolm wrote:

Definitely. One of the benefits of the liberal west he loves to criticize.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 28th, 2022 at 1:13 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 28th, 2022 at 1:21 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Meanwhile, the Russian talking heads are saying:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 28th, 2022 at 1:46 AM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

haha said:

However, his book on Candrakirti's writing was quite informative.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. He knows the Sakyapa scholastic curriculum quite well.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 28th, 2022 at 2:12 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

HePo said:

<https://futureofamericanbuddhism.com/livestream/> is an event Streamed Live from the Garrison Institute June 2-5, 2022

Malcolm wrote:

Gross.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 28th, 2022 at 2:17 AM

Title: Re: Tulku Dakpa Rinpoche online reading transmission of the 17 Dzogchen Tantras

Content:

Lingpupa said:

I was going to pm you, but I see that's not available. I started reading the Self-Arisen Vidya this afternoon, and figured it was time to thank you for the astonishing work you've done!!!

Malcolm wrote:

Thanks. I am glad you are enjoying reading it. I enjoyed translating it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 28th, 2022 at 2:34 AM

Title: Re: "special transmission"?

Content:

Aemilius said:

The higher dhyanas (than the first one) are non-conceptual, they are devoid of all concepts or devoid of gross concepts. They are not called higher without a reason. Also, dhyanaloka (realm of one-pointed concentration) is higher than kamaloka (realm of sense desire).

Malcolm wrote:

Incorrect. They are conceptual. That's why they are not liberations. In ordinary people, engaging in them generates traces, latent afflictions, which then have to be purified. They create paths of rebirth. This is very clearly explained in Abhidharma. They are mundane and samsaric.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 28th, 2022 at 2:59 AM

Title: Re: "special transmission"?

Content:

Aemilius said:

The higher dhyanas (than the first one) are non-conceptual, they are devoid of all concepts or devoid of gross concepts. They are not called higher without a reason. Also, dhyanaloka (realm of one-pointed concentration) is higher than kamaloka (realm of sense desire).

Malcolm wrote:

Incorrect. They are conceptual. That's why they are not liberations. In ordinary people, engaging in them generates traces, latent afflictions, which then have to be purified. They create paths of rebirth. This is very clearly explained in Abhidharma. They are mundane and samsaric.

clyde said:

Without entering into which of you is correct, what do dyanas, higher or lower, conceptual or not conceptual, have to do with this topic, “special transmission”, the Buddha holding up a flower, or Mahakasyapa’s smile?

Malcolm wrote:

Nope.

The dhyāna to which Chan refers is based on the realization of reality, not supported by mental factors nor supported on a conceptual object.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 28th, 2022 at 3:37 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

HePo said:

Perhaps this makes it a bit clearer <https://fredericklenzfoundation.org/events/2022-the-future-of-american-buddhism/> series.

Malcolm wrote:

I am surprised that Ann Gleig is participating. Sad that Alejandro is, someone ought to tell him.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 28th, 2022 at 4:09 AM

Title: Re: “special transmission”?

Content:

clyde said:

Sorry, but I don’t understand your point. How is a discussion of dhyana related to this topic?

Malcolm wrote:

It isn't, other than the fact that Chan means dhyāna.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 28th, 2022 at 11:27 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

The French and the Brits have both said that Biden's "Putin must go" comment was unhelpful, and even Biden himself has now denied that he was calling for regime change. Whether or not you agree with the sentiment, it seems clear that it was not a wise piece of diplomacy.

Malcolm wrote:

It's wasn't diplomacy, it was honest sentiment, one I agree with. Let's not pretend Biden is wrong.

You have to admire Bidem's version of "Russian warship, go fk yourself."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 28th, 2022 at 11:37 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

I dunno, I think the President should probably be held to a higher standard than the drunk guy at the end of the bar. "Don't frak up international diplomacy" being a pretty big part of the job and all.

Malcolm wrote:

Right, we are all supposed to be polite and pretend that normal diplomatic protocols apply...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 28th, 2022 at 12:01 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

I dunno, I think the President should probably be held to a higher standard than the drunk guy at the end of the bar. "Don't frak up international diplomacy" being a pretty big part of the job and all.

Malcolm wrote:

Right, we are all supposed to be polite and pretend that normal diplomatic protocols apply...

Genjo Conan said:

Ok. Put out more flags.

Malcolm wrote:

The fact is that Biden sees things as they are. No one imagines the Russian people are going to toss Putin out. That's not happening. No one imagines we are going take him out with a drone strike, least of all Putin himself. But Putin has no legitimate claim in the region, none. Moreover, he has done harm to his own nation that will set Russian development back 30 years. By the time Russia recovers from Putin's folly, Ukraine will have much developed quite beyond where Russia is, with aid from the US and EU, etc. Putin's rule is no longer viable, but that does not mean he won't retain power. But he will be overseeing a country he himself hollowed out. He threatened NATO. That was dumb as shit. He threatened to use nukes, and people worry about Biden's honest assessment, sheesh.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 28th, 2022 at 8:31 PM

Title: Re: Oscars shocker!

Content:

Queequeg said:

Oscars are done. Does anyone pay attention to this beyond scandalous emcees? The producers are thrilled that they had a click worthy event for an event no one cares about anymore. "Movies" are done. Just more content churned out of the entertainment industrial complex to fill out those streaming catalogs.

Will Smith has always been a douche. Him and his weirdo family. Chris Rock hasn't been funny for 20 years.

Malcolm wrote:

What you talking about? JPS was awesome as Fish Mooney on Gotham.i

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 28th, 2022 at 10:14 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

his epic screw up in Afghanistan.

Malcolm wrote:

Biden didn't screw up in Afghanistan, that was all Trump. Trump made the mess (for example, from drawing down US troops to level below where they could maintain operational security to excluding the Afghan gvt. from talks, and dealing only with the Taliban), Biden got blamed because he held the mop.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 28th, 2022 at 10:18 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Jesse said:

Biden's Putin remark pushes U.S.-Russia relations closer to collapse

<https://www.washingtonpost.com/national-security/2022/03/27/biden-putin-regime-change/>

French President Emmanuel Macron suggested that Biden's comment did not sit well with all leaders in Europe. "If we want to do that, we can't escalate either in words or actions," he said of the odds for diplomatic success.

Malcolm wrote:

The new Neville Chamberlain.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 28th, 2022 at 10:59 PM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

PeterC said:

"Asian" is a Western idea in the first place. It's a massive simplification of huge cultural differences. Nobody would think a Dane culturally similar to an American, but the differences between countries in Asia are far greater than that. Does he think, for instance, that a South Korean has moral authority to have opinions on, say, Bangladesh, in a way that a Norwegian doesn't? His statements on these issues are extremely simplistic and haven't really progressed past Lee Kuan Yew circa 1990. His letter to Aung Sang Suu Kyi was terrible - he was (a) trying to assert himself as an authority on "Asianness", and (b) presuming to advise someone who runs a country (albeit badly) on how to handle cultural diplomacy. Totally out of his depth. He should leave commentary on this to people who actually know what they're talking about, and focus on the Dharma, on which by all accounts he really does know what he's talking out.

Malcolm wrote:

DJKR's has made a number of fallacious historical claims, but perhaps the most telling historical gaffe was the one where he attributed the decline of Buddhism in Japan to Americans after WWII. I pointed out to him that the decline of Buddhism in Japan was a function of the Meiji restoration, where 45k Buddhist temples were destroyed by the Japanese govt. in the late 19th century, etc.

LKY's problem (among others) is that he thought the US was trying to foist democracy off on everyone. The actual fact is that during the Cold War, that US was saying to countries: "If you want to do business with us, and have access to our markets, you can't do business with the Communists governments. If you decide to implement liberal democracy, so much the better, but at minimum you can't do business with Communists. If your country already has significant access to Western capital investment, and you try to align with the Communists and nationalize our investments in your country, we are going to take your government down and replace it with someone who better aligns with our interests and will protect our capital investments."

The failures in US foreign policy after the Cold War mainly come from this line of reasoning: "Communism will inevitably fail. It failed in Russia and it will fail in China. We should do business with Russia and China based on this assumption. The only thing we have to worry about now are the recalcitrant Muslim countries, who are state sponsors for terrorism. Liberal democracy driven capitalist development is inevitable. Resistance is futile."

The difference is pragmatism. Our Cold War foreign policy was pragmatic, occasionally dressed up in ideology. Our Post-Cold War foreign policy has been ideological, and abandoned pragmatism for slogans.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 28th, 2022 at 11:09 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

his epic screw up in Afghanistan.

Malcolm wrote:

Biden didn't screw up in Afghanistan, that was all Trump. Trump made the mess (for example, from drawing down US troops to level below where they could maintain operational security to excluding the Afghan gvt. from talks, and dealing only with the Taliban), Biden got blamed because he held the mop.

Crazywisdom said:

His hasty exit was a damn shame. No way around that.

Malcolm wrote:

It wasn't Biden's hasty exit, the time table was set by the previous administration. In fact, Biden wanted to Obama to limit our involvement in Afghanistan in 2009:

In 2009, the new Obama administration debated whether to "surge" troop levels in Afghanistan after nearly eight years of war had failed to quell the insurgency from the overthrown Taliban forces. Top generals asked early that year for 17,000 more US troops and then, having gotten those, asked for an additional 40,000 to try to weaken the Taliban and strengthen the Afghan government.

Then-Vice President Biden was consistently one of the biggest skeptics of the military's recommendations. Throughout months of debate, he repeatedly raised the inconvenient point that the generals' preferred strategy seemed extremely unlikely to lead to actual victory. "We have not thought through our strategic goals!" he shouted during the Obama administration's first meeting on the war in Afghanistan.

All this was documented at the time in Bob Woodward's deeply reported 2010 book Obama's Wars. Biden did not actually support withdrawal at the time — he pushed for a more limited mission focused on counterterrorism, accompanied by a smaller troop surge than the military wanted.

...

Building a functioning nation-state in Afghanistan was impossible. Woodward writes that during one October meeting, Biden asked the generals, "If the government's a criminal syndicate a year from now, how will troops make a difference?" He followed up with, "If a year from now there is no demonstrable progress in governance, what do we do?" He didn't receive a convincing answer to either question.

Later on, he wrote memos to Obama arguing for "no full counterinsurgency" and "no nation-building." He thought the military's goals of strengthening Afghanistan's military and police force were doomed. And he said the following at a meeting with National Security Council leaders, per Woodward:

"Historically, [Biden] said, it's been very difficult—impossible—for foreign interventions to prevail in Afghanistan. With tens of thousands of troops on the ground already, if we can't do it with this number and we don't have a reliable partner in the Afghanistan government, then it seems irresponsible to inject additional troops on top of that. We're just prolonging failure at that point, he said."

In order to make the exit "softer," Biden would have had to recommit troops, prolonging our involvement by a year. Face it, no exit would have been pretty after Trump cut the Afghan gvt. off below the knees. Afghan troops literally dropped their weapons in the streets.

Biden is not a dummy, nor is he demented, nor is he addled. As the VP, he observed our failure after failure in Afghanistan for eight years, and consistently argued for policies that Obama and the Pentagon would not follow. Had they taken Biden's recommendations, it would have all ended considerably differently, but probably no less messier. The mistake was Bush's for going in in the first place.

Biden's comment might have alarmed the Neville Chamberlains of the world, but he was right to make it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 28th, 2022 at 11:28 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Jesse said:

The only innovation Buddhism needs is a Dharma entirely stripped from it's Buddhist/Religious packaging.

Keeping the essence of the teachings but without any cultural ideas added in would be pretty difficult, but I think it can be done.

Fundamentally it would be a modern philosophy, psychology with instructions on compassion, mind training, wisdom, etc.

Malcolm wrote:
Agree with the second statement.

Disagree with one and three. The first results in Sam Harris' bullshit. The latter, Stephen Batchelor's bullshit.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, March 28th, 2022 at 11:57 PM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
ratna said:
They just can't help themselves.

Malcolm wrote:
WSJ article:

<https://www.wsj.com/articles/roman-abramovich-and-ukrainian-peace-negotiators-suffer-symptoms-of-suspected-poisoning-11648480493?mod=e2tw>

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 12:00 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Crazywisdom said:
Boys dropping out of the sky. There's no defending that. Inept management. Period.

Malcolm wrote:
That's not on Biden. Sorry, you are blaming the wrong people for that. You should blame the Taliban who so terrorized people that they would make such suicidal choices.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 12:11 AM
Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR
Content:

PeterC said:
"Asian" is a Western idea in the first place. It's a massive simplification of huge cultural differences. Nobody would think a Dane culturally similar to an American, but the differences between countries in Asia are far greater than that. Does he think, for instance, that a South Korean has moral authority to have opinions on, say, Bangladesh, in a way that a Norwegian doesn't? His statements on these issues are extremely simplistic and haven't really progressed past Lee Kuan Yew circa 1990. His letter to Aung Sang Suu Kyi was terrible - he was (a) trying to assert himself as an authority on "Asianness", and (b) presuming to advise someone who runs a country (albeit badly) on how to handle cultural diplomacy. Totally out of his depth. He should leave commentary on this to people who actually know what they're talking about, and focus on the Dharma, on which by all accounts he really does know what he's talking out.

Malcolm wrote:

DJKR's has made a number of fallacious historical claims, but perhaps the most telling historical gaffe was the one where he attributed the decline of Buddhism in Japan to Americans after WWII. I pointed out to him that the decline of Buddhism in Japan was a function of the Meiji restoration, where 45k Buddhist temples were destroyed by the Japanese govt. in the late 19th century, etc.

PeterC said:

I guess he also wasn't aware that the US took Kyoto off the list of target candidates for the nuclear attack because of the damage it would do to Japanese cultural and religious heritage?

He really knows a lot less than he thinks he doesn't. In his letter to AYSK he said, confidently, that the Rohingya were foreign laborers brought in by the British. They weren't: they had been living there for a century before the British arrived. Not that he should know that, though. Why should butanese semi-royalty know anything about the demographics and history of a minor country two thousand miles away?

This is why I don't give much credence to the hypothesis that he's being deliberately provocative to make people think. There are obvious explanations that better fit the facts.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, I also corrected him on the presence of the Arakanese.

He could have just educated himself on this point:

<https://www.soas.ac.uk/sbbr/editions/file64388.pdf>

The Burmese have been ruthless in their persecution of the Arakanese since 1784, when they conquered that Arakan Kingdom.

Oh well.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 12:14 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

his epic screw up in Afghanistan.

Malcolm wrote:

Biden didn't screw up in Afghanistan, that was all Trump. Trump made the mess (for example, from drawing down US troops to level below where they could maintain operational security to excluding the Afghan gvt. from talks, and dealing only with the Taliban), Biden got blamed because he held the mop.

Shinjin said:

It's always easier for Democrats to blame Trump for all the errors of this administration rather than take responsibility.

Malcolm wrote:

Trump left a mess. It is still being cleaned up. He was the most incompetent president in US History, the carnage is immense. I get it if you are a Trump fan boy, but if you are not, stop making pathetic excuses for the man.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 12:35 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shinjin said:

It's always easier for Democrats to blame Trump for all the errors of this administration rather than take responsibility.

Malcolm wrote:

Trump left a mess. It is still being cleaned up. He was the most incompetent president in US History, the carnage is immense. I get it if you are a Trump fan boy, but if you are not, stop making pathetic excuses for the man.

Shinjin said:

No excuses, just calling it the way I see it. He was a terrible leader like your man Joe. The US hasn't had a competent leader since Ronald Reagan.

Malcolm wrote:

You're living in the past. Ronny wasn't the worst president, but he was hardly the best. And he actually did have Alzheimer's, unlike Biden.

Bush 1 had more impact on destabilizing the USSR than Reagan.

Biden has decades of foreign policy experience. As far as I am concerned, he is doing a good job with the mess the GOP always leaves the economy in, every damn time, from Hoover to the present. It never changes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 12:57 AM

Title: Re: "special transmission"?

Content:

clyde said:

Really, the "special transmission" and Flower Sermon are not about dhyana or an awakening experience. Simply, investigate "dharma transmission" to understand this koan.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, that story is about one person recognizing the awakening of another. It assumes that Kashyapa was already awake, which of course he was, since he was an arhat.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 1:06 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shinjin said:

No excuses, just calling it the way I see it. He was a terrible leader like your man Joe. The US hasn't had a competent leader since Ronald Reagan.

Malcolm wrote:

You're living in the past. Ronny wasn't the worst president, but he was hardly the best. And he actually did have Alzheimer's, unlike Biden.

Bush 1 had more impact on destabilizing the USSR than Reagan.

Crazywisdom said:

That's false. Reagan boosted defense spending into the stratosphere to bankrupt the Soviets in the arms race.

Malcolm wrote:

Elections brought down the USSR. Then there was a coup.

<https://millercenter.org/statecraftmovie/gorbachev-and-ussr>

Of course, we can't really discuss this in soundbites, but it is a conservative myth that we bankrupted the USSR into nonexistence. Reagan walked back his aggressive tone and chose to be chummy with Gorbachev. That set the stage for Bush's administration relationship with the USSR:

Indeed, many conservative commentators would prefer to sweep these historical nuances under the rug. These realities also directly contradict a deeply ideological (and ahistorical) narrative that – short of war – massive defense buildups, bellicosity and tough talk bring authoritarian regimes to their knees.

With access to thousands of pages of Soviet records, oral histories and memoirs, we now know that the confrontational approach that defined Reagan's first few years in office had very little, if any, impact on Soviet strategic decisionmaking. In fact, the antagonism of Reagan's early presidency likely prolonged the Cold War by elevating hardline, anti-American voices over those of moderate reformers like Gorbachev.

Reagan's true Cold War legacy is rooted in his deeply personal diplomatic engagement with Gorbachev. Reagan's embrace of Gorbachev and praise for his reforms gave the Soviet leader the latitude to enact the political and social changes – perestroika, glasnost, demokratizatsiya – that ultimately caused the collapse of the Soviet Union. <https://thehill.com/opinion/international/478941-lets-stop-revising-history-reagan-didnt-win-the-cold-war>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 1:13 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

I think everyone defending Biden's comments should maybe try to explain why his White House aides, the Secretary of State, the British, the French, and Biden himself walked those comments back.

I know that nuance is the first casualty of wartime, but it is entirely possible to think that Putin is a horrible person who is prosecuting an illegal and immoral war, and that it was careless of Biden to call for regime change.

Malcolm wrote:

He didn't call for regime change. He said: "“For God's sake, this man cannot remain in power.”"

He did not say, “For God's sake, remove this man from power.”

Why? Because Biden knows that there is no one who can remove Putin from power. They've already gamed it out, multiple times.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 1:27 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:
The general wears Prada:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 1:33 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Genjo Conan said:
You're not answering the question. Why did all of those people walk Biden's comments back?

Malcolm wrote:
They are not walking anything back at all. Biden's comment is not indicative of a US policy to remove Putin. So, nothing to walk back.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 1:36 AM
Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR
Content:
Crazywisdom said:
And what did he say in response to you, Malcolm?

Malcolm wrote:
Crickets...of course.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 1:42 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Norwegian said:
If Kadyrov has the balls to enter Ukraine, anybody with a decently functioning rifle and scope will end him.

Malcolm wrote:
Generals have a short battlefield life in Ukraine. One was killed three days ago. Five Russian Major Generals (one star, equivalent to a US Brigadier General) and two Lieutenant Generals (two stars, equivalent to a US Major General) have been killed so far.

In the past five decades, only one US general has been killed in battle. The Russians have lost five in one month.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 3:21 AM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

And what did he say in response to you, Malcolm?

Malcolm wrote:

Crickets...of course.

Crazywisdom said:

Of.course.

Malcolm wrote:

However, he did stop making historical claims that could easily be refuted so...now he just posts other people's bad history, with the old Glen Beck/Tucker Carlson, "Just asking the question..."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 3:25 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 3:32 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

You're not answering the question. Why did all of those people walk Biden's comments back?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 3:44 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 3:47 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

You go, Joe:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 4:07 AM

Title: Re: Oscars shocker!

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 4:11 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

More Joe:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 4:16 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

On Joe's walkback, no walkback:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 4:43 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Queequeg said:

I figured, Sleepy Joe would be the breath of calm we needed after 4 years of domestic abuse.

Caoimhghín said:

I'm surprised surprised boomer crowd isn't going wild with Gran Torino memes.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, Clint lost his sheen with the empty chair stunt.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 5:27 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 5:48 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-10655501/Ukraine-claims-Russian-tank-commander-killed-reserve-tanks-unserivcable.html>

Unknown said:

The sixth Russian commander killed since the invasion began was said to have been Colonel Yuri Medvedev, who was brutally taken out by mutinous soldiers after their 37th Motor Rifle Brigade suffered huge losses. The[sic] ran him down with a tank.

...

A senior NATO military officer said the alliance estimates that Russia has suffered between 30,000 and 40,000 battlefield casualties in Ukraine through the first month of the war, including between 7,000 and 15,000 killed.

Malcolm wrote:

Truly shocking.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 6:11 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

KeithA said:

But, prefer these guys:

Queequeg said:

Back when music could be subversive and dangerous. Listened to some Bad Brains recently. Chills.

KeithA said:

Saw Reagan Youth live, back in the day. You would be surprised what lives in my phone, musically speaking. It definitely includes the the Bad Brains! There is still plenty of subversive stuff out there. Sleaford Mods leap to mind.

Malcolm wrote:

My subversive music days are over. These days...Sly and Robbie, The Orb, System 7, etc. Dub and electronica.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 7:50 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Does no one take in a good old string quartet anymore?

Zemlinsky has some very subversive-for-the-time offerings. Of course, "subversive-for-the-time" = "conservative today."

I listen to drum and bass too. Can I be a cool kid?

Malcolm wrote:

I am not sure you were born when Little Fluffy Clouds was first released (not drum and bass).

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 7:57 AM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

Bhumi108w said:

This has gone a little too far. How about just not following him? Praise him for the good he has done and just not follow him.

Malcolm wrote:

It's constructive criticism. I'd prefer it if major Dharma influencers actually knew what they were talking about when writing letters in support of people like Aung San Su Kyi. It doesn't mean I don't recognize his use of his title to benefit the Dharma. But his politics don't, they detract from his overall message.

As for it not being "Buddhist-like", you clearly have had very little exposure to Tibetan polemics. Some Tibetans are still pissed at Sakya Pandita for what they perceive as appeasing the Mongols. Get some perspective.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 8:28 AM

Title: Re: Oscars shocker!

Content:

Shinjin said:

. A masculine man is always in full control of his emotions and would have dealt with it in a better way.

Malcolm wrote:

I guess real men only piss once a day too.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 8:31 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Does no one take in a good old string quartet anymore?

Zemlinsky has some very subversive-for-the-time offerings. Of course, "subversive-for-the-time" = "conservative today."

Svalaksana said:

How about some atonal subversion à la Arnold Schoenberg? Now that really makes the hair in the back of my neck tingle.

Malcolm wrote:

Let's see....Schonberg or Cage's Harvard Sq. Concert...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 8:46 AM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

"O Atula! Indeed, this is an ancient practice, not one only of today: they blame those who remain silent, they blame those speak much, they blame those who speak in moderation. There is none in the world who is not blamed. "

Is just kinda how a thing like this is.

Malcolm wrote:

Exactly. Damned if you do, damned if you don't.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 9:11 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Jesse said:

The only innovation Buddhism needs is a Dharma entirely stripped from it's Buddhist/Religious packaging.

Keeping the essence of the teachings but without any cultural ideas added in would be pretty difficult, but I think it can be done.

Fundamentally it would be a modern philosophy, psychology with instructions on compassion, mind training, wisdom, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

Agree with the second statement.

Disagree with one and three. The first results in Sam Harris' bullshit. The latter, Stephen Batchelor's bullshit.

Jesse said:

I haven't read Sam Harris, or Stephen Batchelor but if what they created was shit -- then they simply didn't understand the dharma well enough to do what they attempted.

Malcolm wrote:

The two premises are bullshit. We can't abandon rebirth and karma and we don't need modern philosophy, psychology, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 10:14 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Jesse said:

Having those cultural/religious ideas limits the audience that's willing to read, engage, and practice. Stripping those out and working it all into something made for modern western minds would vastly increase the audience for it, and simultaneously increase the amount of people who even reach stage 1 of liberation.

Malcolm wrote:

Rebirth and karma are not cultural ideas. Without them Buddhism makes no sense. Sure you aren't a secular humanist?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 10:23 AM

Title: Re: Oscars shocker!

Content:

KristenM said:

. Like thinking that getting into a fistfight is the way to handle being "disrespected."

Malcolm wrote:

Male childhood is a little like prison. So yes, sometimes that's exactly what you have to do. It depends on whether or not you dealing with a real bully or a loudmouth.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 10:26 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Jesse said:

Having those cultural/religious ideas limits the audience that's willing to read, engage, and practice. Stripping those out and working it all into something made for modern western minds would vastly increase the audience for it, and simultaneously increase the amount of people who even reach stage 1 of liberation.

Malcolm wrote:

Rebirth and karma are not cultural ideas. Without them Buddhism makes no sense. Sure you aren't a secular humanist?

Jesse said:

They are perceived as cultural religious ideas. Even by many Buddhists.

Malcolm wrote:

So what? Without them Buddhism makes no sense. In that case, Buddhism itself is just a cultural religious idea.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 6:47 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Jesse said:

They are perceived as cultural religious ideas. Even by many Buddhists.

Malcolm wrote:

So what? Without them Buddhism makes no sense. In that case, Buddhism itself is just a cultural religious idea.

Jesse said:

How specifically does Buddhism fail without Karma and Rebirth?

Malcolm wrote:

Specifically, they are the existential problem Buddhism proposes to solve. The solution makes no sense if the problem is actually not a problem one needs to solve.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 6:57 PM

Title: Re: Is Shingon lesser because it has less tantras than Tibetan vajrayana?

Content:

tingdzin said:

It is also a mistake to think that Sonam Tsemo and Buton had a good grasp of what the varna system was like on the ground. Again, the triumph of theory over observation.

Malcolm wrote:

Sonam Tsomo had regular contact with Indians due to Sakya's position on trade routes. It was a major stopping point for Indian masters who were on teaching tours in Western Tibet, as well as Tibetan translators, and like his father and brother, his Sanskrit was good. The second throne holder of Sakya was Bari Lotsawa, who spend some years in India, etc.

The point about the four castes and four divisions of tantra is behavior— each division offers behavior amenable to the mores of a certain type of person. For example, vegans can't practice HYT, due to meat being a required sacrament, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 7:06 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Queequeg said:

But Buddhism is cool. Except for all the religious stuff.

Malcolm wrote:

Yeah, like Buddhism, but it's still cool.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 7:25 PM

Title: Gangster Monks

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

https://apple.news/AwM4O4u9MQGaKZgRU_-xTJg

Unknown said:

In Thailand, where Buddhism is the official religion and followed by about 93 percent of the population, the country's 300,000-plus monks are historically revered for leading lives of moderation and being models of virtuousness. But the monkhood's pious image has been increasingly eroded in recent years with a series of high-profile arrests and scandals.

Barely a week goes by without reports of monks charged with money laundering, drunk driving, drug trafficking and even murder—rocking the clergy's reputation in Thailand with each new headline. With these scandals shining a light on the underbelly of monkhood, experts say that the sacred institution of Thai Buddhism is confronted with whittling public trust and legitimacy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 7:31 PM

Title: Re: Is Shingon lesser because it has less tantras than Tibetan vajrayana?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Sonam Tsomo had regular contact with Indians due to Sakya's position on trade routes.

tingdzin said:

This just means he was getting Indian theory from Indian theoreticians, probably themselves heavily Brahmanized.

Malcolm wrote:

The point about the four castes and four divisions of tantra is behavior— each division offers behavior amenable to the mores of a certain type of person. For example, vegans can't practice HYT.

tingdzin said:

OK, of course, but one's disposition and behavior are not set according to the caste one is born into. I really fail to see why Western Buddhists are willing to swallow whole the most un-Buddhist aspects of Indian culture.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, because Tibetans did, including Bonpos. For example, in klu 'bum texts, the nagas are categorized according to caste: bram ze, rgyal, rje, mamgs, gdol pa, etc.

Also Plato divide society into four castes, and so on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 9:21 PM

Title: Re: Is Shingon lesser because it has less tantras than Tibetan vajrayana?

Content:

tingdzin said:

It is also a mistake to think that Sonam Tsemo and Buton had a good grasp of what the varna system was like on the ground. Again, the triumph of theory over observation.

Malcolm wrote:

For example, vegans can't practice HYT, due to meat being a required sacrament, etc.

Nicholas2727 said:

It seems there are differing opinions on this from my limited understanding. I haven't taken HYT empowerment, but as a vegan myself when I came across some of this information I thought Tibetan Buddhism might not be for me and I should look else where instead of having the tradition change for me. I talked with a few teachers and practitioners and most of them said that meat substitutes can be used. The Karmapa I believe has stopped using meat in ceremonies as well, but I may be wrong.

Malcolm wrote:

This is a result of undue influence of Chinese Buddhist clients.

Lower tantra practice, however, is vegetarian oriented, and plenty of people in Tibetan Buddhism don't practice HYT. Arguably Mahamudra practice in the Kagyu and Ganden traditions can be practiced by vegans. But HYT and Nyingma inner tantra cannot be practiced by people with ideological food preferences, no matter how noble their intentions may be.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 9:30 PM

Title: Re: Teachers

Content:

tingdzin said:

He is also one of the last of the generation who was trained in Tibet.

Malcolm wrote:

No he wasn't. He went to Varanasi. He was there at the same time my Sakya mentor, Khenpo Migmar Tseten, was there.

His late brother, Khenpo Palden Sherab, was able to complete his training in Tibet, at Riwoche.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 11:13 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 29th, 2022 at 11:34 PM

Title: Re: Is Shingon lesser because it has less tantras than Tibetan vajrayana?

Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

How should this be understood then if a Lama says that one does not have to use real meat in tsok offering?

Malcolm wrote:

He is wrong. Entitled to his opinion, but mistaken.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 30th, 2022 at 2:16 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

clyde said:

How does reincarnation solve the problem of dissatisfaction in the present moment?

Malcolm wrote:

Specifically, rebirth and karma are the existential problem Buddhism proposes to solve.

The solution makes no sense if the problem is actually not a problem one needs to solve.

Why? They are the cause of suffering.

As far as the present moment goes, if one is free of affliction, one will be free of dissatisfaction, then one will not engage in actions which result in further suffering.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 30th, 2022 at 4:46 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

If suffering is momentary and ends on the breakup of the body, then Samsara is just kind of a bummer.

Jesse said:

That's exactly the sort of view that arises from self. Suffering is infinite, only because beings are infinite. There is no transmigration of a soul, there is no rebirth that happens in such a way that the precise elements and conditions creating any single individual are continued into a 'new life'.

Delusion is present in every sentient being, sentient beings arise because of delusion. Rebirth is the process of continuing confusion/bondage.

Delusion/bondage/suffering isn't a soul.

Malcolm wrote:

No, and it isn't a person either, but it is a continuum and that continuum has its own causes and conditions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 30th, 2022 at 4:56 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Jesse said:

I'm not arguing for a lack of rebirth, or karma -- merely that they are unnecessary from a practical standpoint to achieve liberation.

Malcolm wrote:

Without karma and rebirth, what is there to be liberated from?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 30th, 2022 at 5:21 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Jesse said:

I'm not arguing for a lack of rebirth, or karma -- merely that they are unnecessary from a practical standpoint to achieve liberation.

Malcolm wrote:

Without karma and rebirth, what is there to be liberated from?

clyde said:

Dukkha.

Malcolm wrote:

Dukkha is the result of karma and rebirth. No karma, no dukkha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 30th, 2022 at 8:22 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

clyde said:

I have no doubt of the Dharma of anicca, anatta (& sunnatta), and dukkha, also dependent origination in its simplest form, "from the arising of this, that arises" and "when this ceases, that ceases"; and the benefit of meditation. That is enough for me.

Malcolm wrote:

This formula was uttered by the Buddha in response to the question of some monks past lives. Buddhas response here should be taken to mean, when there is affliction, there is karma, etc.

There is no doubt the Buddha's central teaching was oriented towards the ending of birth, as witnessed by many arhats exclaiming wonder that they were in their last birth in samsara.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 30th, 2022 at 9:24 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Queequeg said:

Rebirth is a central pillar of Buddhism. If one rejects it, then the Buddhist path is closed to them. So long as its possibility is accepted, then progress on the path is possible.

Malcolm wrote:

Just so long as it is understood Buddhism does not defend rebirth, it seeks to end rebirth.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 30th, 2022 at 9:31 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Jesse said:

Tourist, Not a Buddhist, The path is closed to us.

Malcolm wrote:

It is precisely correct. There are a lot of spiritual tourists in the West, who get the tee shirt, and then post about their wonderful experience on Instagram.

However, tourists can go native, but there are some things they need to absorb, like the actual cause of suffering: affliction and karma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 30th, 2022 at 10:02 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Jesse said:

Tourist, Not a Buddhist, The path is closed to us.

Malcolm wrote:

It is precisely correct. There are a lot of spiritual tourists in the West, who get the tee shirt, and then post about their wonderful experience on Instagram.

However, tourists can go native, but there are some things they need to absorb, like the actual cause of suffering: affliction and karma.

Jesse said:

Sorry to say Malcom, but you are in no position to make these claims either.

Malcolm wrote:

It is disingenuous for you to say you are sorry to say something you are not at all sorry to say.

Exactly what are your qualifications for making any of the claims you have made in this thread?

What's your background?

Who have you studied under?

What texts have you studied?

What's the longest retreat you have ever done?

Have you gained expertise in any primary Buddhist languages?

Which ones?

Jesse said:

Neither you, nor Malcolm have any exclusive claim over what is, or isn't BuddhaDharma. Who is, or isn't a practitioner, or whom the path is open or closed to.

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhadharma is pretty clearly stated by the Buddha. Maybe you should read him sometime and see how well your claims stack up against his teachings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 31st, 2022 at 12:09 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Jesse said:

I was specifically targeted and called out as "Not a Buddhist", a "Tourist", and as "not on the path"

So, as I was saying -- what are your qualifications for making such claims?

Malcolm wrote:

If one does not accept rebirth and karma, one is not a Buddhist, whatever else one may like to call oneself. This is so obvious that those people who like to call themselves "Secular Buddhists" have to make it obvious that they are not actually followers of Buddhadharma by adding "secular" to their designation. These people are secular humanists who like to sit on cushions and practice samatha, and that is all they are or ever will be, as long as they do not address the fundamental question the Buddha solved. There is no liberation apart from eradication of the afflictions that cause rebirth in the three realms. Any other kind of liberation is not the liberation the Buddha taught.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 31st, 2022 at 1:51 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

Here's what Dogen had to say:

Malcolm wrote:

Sorry, but was Dogen omniscient? What are his qualifications for making this claim?

How dare he say someone is not a buddhist.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 31st, 2022 at 3:01 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Jesse said:

I was specifically targeted and called out as "Not a Buddhist", a "Tourist", and as "not on the path"

So, as I was saying -- what are your qualifications for making such claims?

Malcolm wrote:

If one does not accept rebirth and karma, one is not a Buddhist, whatever else one may like to call oneself.

PadmaVonSamba said:

One needs to define what it is one thinks that karma and rebirth are. If one rejects the idea that when you die, your soul takes on another body, well the Buddha also rejected that idea.

If one rejects the idea that the universe dishes out rewards and punishments based on peoples moral behavior, fine. That's also what Buddhism doesn't teach.

Malcolm wrote:

Anyone who has hung around here long enough knows what Buddha meant by karma and rebirth.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 31st, 2022 at 4:36 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Anyone who has hung around here long enough knows what Buddha meant by karma and rebirth.

PadmaVonSamba said:

But do they?

Malcolm wrote:

If they don't, they have not been paying attention.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 31st, 2022 at 5:27 AM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Every conversation begins with, Show me your Instagram. I'm like oh here's a picture of my cocktail.

Malcolm wrote:

Pretty true. I don't do IG or Tiktok, or Telegram. Facebook barely, anymore.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 31st, 2022 at 6:30 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

If I thought (as I once did early on) that Buddhist rebirth was based on some essential characteristics or personhood going from life to life I would still be skeptical.

Malcolm wrote:

The issue isn't really a matter for personal beliefs Regardless of what people actually believe, the existential problem the Buddha set out to solve was very simple. How do we end the process of birth, aging, illness, and death?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 31st, 2022 at 9:12 PM

Title: Re: Is it better to get empowerments/vow ceremonies in-person vs online?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Bodhisattva Vow Ceremony

Longchen Nyingtik

17 Tantras

etc

Malcolm wrote:

In terms of direct introductions, don wangs, and lungs, whether you are there in the room or not doesn't matter. However, if you can go to your teacher's retreats in person, there is a dimension to hearing teachings and practicing that is otherwise missing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 31st, 2022 at 9:43 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 31st, 2022 at 9:59 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Jesse said:

Those claiming the banner of rebirth/karma sound just like Christians lovingly telling others how they will be going to hell for not believing in Christ.

Malcolm wrote:

The Buddha defined liberation in terms of rebirth (stream entrants, seven rebirths in desire realm, once-returners, one, etc.). You don't accept that? Ok, but don't call whatever trip you're on "Buddhadharma."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 31st, 2022 at 10:10 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Queequeg said:

He decided what the essence of Buddhism is. People here have been pointing out that he is wrong.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, he decided that Buddhadharma was pushing people away from Buddhism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 31st, 2022 at 10:16 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Jesse said:

You can call your Trip BuddhaDharma -- it doesn't make it so. All ancient doctrines of unsophisticated people's that has been replaced by verified facts, and hard science.

Malcolm wrote:

So, just be honest, Jesse, you don't accept what the Buddha taught. That's perfectly fine. But what you are suggesting is just secular humanism in Buddhist drag. You don't need the Buddhist drag. I think you are in the wrong place, frankly. Here, we are follow Buddhadharma.

If you think the Buddha's model of liberation has been made obsolete by hard facts and science because it is an ancient doctrine of unsophisticated people like the Buddha, that is perfectly ok. Just don't call your take on hard science and facts "Buddhadharma," since by your own admission, Buddhadharma is just an ancient doctrine of unsophisticated people like the Buddha, which has been made obsolete by hard science and facts.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 31st, 2022 at 10:19 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Queequeg said:

He decided what the essence of Buddhism is. People here have been pointing out that he is wrong.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, he decided that Buddhadharma was pushing people away from Buddhism.

Jesse said:

No I claimed your rampant arrogance - claiming to possess the authority to decide who is, and who is not a buddhist - drives people away from the Dharma.

Malcolm wrote:

I can certainly decide who I will consider a follower of Buddhadharma, and feel completely free to share that opinion. You are free to disagree. However, you have now come out and admitted that you think Buddhadharma is just an ancient doctrine of unsophisticated people like the Buddha, unlike the modern doctrines of sophisticated people like yourself. Frankly, the presumption of arrogance falls upon you.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 31st, 2022 at 10:36 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Jesse said:

When was the last time Buddha-dharma produced a Buddha? I'd say things are going rather poorly.

Malcolm wrote:
I've met several. YMMV.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, March 31st, 2022 at 11:37 PM
Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism
Content:
Jesse said:
watching people fall prey to delusion is very satisfying.

Malcolm wrote:
Only the deluded find delusion satisfying.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, April 1st, 2022 at 12:56 AM
Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism
Content:
clyde said:
Yes, I did that refuge in the Buddha, the Dharma, and the Sangha and without reservations.

Malcolm wrote:
So that means you accept the Buddha's teaching on karma as true? For example:
6. "Ananda, there are four kinds of persons existing in the world. What four?

(i) "Here some person kills living beings, takes what is not given, misconducts himself in sexual desires, speaks falsehood, speaks maliciously, speaks harshly, gossips, is covetous, is ill-willed, and has wrong view.[4] On the dissolution of the body, after death, he reappears in the states of deprivation, in an unhappy destination, in perdition, in hell.

(ii) "But here some person kills living beings... and has wrong view. On the dissolution of the body, after death, he reappears in a happy destination, in the heavenly world.

(iii) "Here some person abstains from killing living beings, from taking what is not given, from misconduct in sexual desires, from false speech, from malicious speech, from harsh speech, from gossip, he is not covetous, is not ill-willed, and has right view.[5] On the dissolution of the body, after death, he reappears in a happy destination, in the heavenly world.

(iv) "But here some person abstains from killing living beings... and has right view. On the dissolution of the body, after death, he reappears in the states of deprivation, in an unhappy destination, in perdition, in hell.

<https://www.accesstoinight.org/tipitaka/mn/mn.136.nymo.html>

clyde said:

2. "Master Gotama, what is the reason, what is the condition, why inferiority and superiority are met with among human beings, among mankind? For one meets with short-lived and long-lived people, sick and healthy people, ugly and beautiful people, insignificant and influential people, poor and rich people, low-born and high-born people, stupid and wise people. What is the reason, what is the condition, why superiority and inferiority are met with among human beings, among mankind?"

3. "Student, beings are owners of kammās, heirs of kammās, they have kammās as their progenitor, kammās as their kin, kammās as their homing-place. It is kammās that differentiate beings according to inferiority and superiority."

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.accesstoinight.org/tipitaka/mn/mn.135.nymo.html>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 1st, 2022 at 2:07 AM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

PeterC said:

That said - suppose you woke up one morning and found yourself in a rural community a thousand years ago. You're told to go milk the cow, catch a couple of rabbits to make a stew, and get a fire started.

Crazywisdom said:

There's a lot of flat affect going on. In person conversations with this generation are a lot less interesting than their texting. They basically dead to the analog world.

climb-up said:

I've had some pretty awesome conversations with young folks in real life (I'm not counting my kids, that would be too easy, but definitely them too) and there is some pretty awesome stuff going on nowadays, I think.

Malcolm wrote:

It's all just variations on a theme. The only thing I notice is that younger people seem a lot more neurotic than before, as an aggregate.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 1st, 2022 at 2:23 AM

Title: Re: Oscars shocker!

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 1st, 2022 at 3:00 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

clyde said:

As I wrote earlier, I know that “from the arising of this, that arises” and “when this ceases, that ceases” is true. I’ll add this for further clarification,

Malcolm wrote:

And you know this formula was uttered in response to people asking the Buddha about their past lives? This is not a formula about water arising from two atoms of hydrogen and one of oxygen.

This formula was uttered to point out that human beings arise from affliction and action, which is the cause of suffering.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 1st, 2022 at 3:23 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

clyde said:

It applies to all dharmas.

Malcolm wrote:

The dependent origination taught by the Buddha applies strictly to living beings. You can discover this point easily by looking in the Abhidharmakośabhaṣya, verse 3:25cd.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 1st, 2022 at 3:46 AM

Title: Re: Who?

Content:

clyde said:

The Buddha taught contemplation on the Five Remembrances, I am sure to become old; I cannot avoid ageing.

I am sure to become ill; I cannot avoid illness.

I am sure to die; I cannot avoid death.

I must be separated and parted from all that is dear and beloved to me.

I am the owner of my actions, heir to my actions, born of my actions, related through my actions, and have my actions as my arbitrator. Whatever I do, for good or for evil, to that will I fall heir.

<https://www.accesstoinight.org/tipitaka/an/an05/an05.057.than.html>

What did the Buddha mean when he taught this? Who is sure to become old, ill and die? Who will be separated and parted? Who is the owner and heir? Who is it that does good or evil?

Malcolm wrote:

It's pretty straightforward. He was referring to the person designated on the basis of the five aggregates.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 1st, 2022 at 5:19 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

Media not doing their job properly unfortunately.

Malcolm wrote:

Depends on which media. There are more responsible reports which suggest that the Russian troops split because soldiers were reporting symptoms of illness.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 1st, 2022 at 5:44 AM

Title: Re: Who?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It's pretty straightforward. He was referring to the person designated on the basis of the five aggregates.

clyde said:

What do you mean by "the person designated"? (I know what the five aggregates are, so no need to explain that.) Is there an entity separate from the five aggregates?

Malcolm wrote:

A person is designated on the five aggregates in just the same way a car is designated on its parts. There is nothing particularly stunning or questionable about this. No person exists apart from that designation for the five aggregates, but there is no person in the five aggregates or separate from them.

This is all very, very elementary, Buddhism 101:

Then the wanderer Vacchagotta went to the Blessed One and, on arrival, exchanged courteous greetings with him. After an exchange of friendly greetings & courtesies, he sat to one side. As he was sitting there he asked the Blessed One: "Now then, Venerable Gotama, is there a self?"

When this was said, the Blessed One was silent.

"Then is there no self?"

A second time, the Blessed One was silent.

Then Vacchagotta the wanderer got up from his seat and left.

Then, not long after Vacchagotta the wanderer had left, Ven. Ananda said to the Blessed One, "Why, lord, did the Blessed One not answer when asked a question by Vacchagotta the wanderer?"

"Ananda, if I — being asked by Vacchagotta the wanderer if there is a self — were to answer that there is a self, that would be conforming with those brahmans & contemplatives who are exponents of eternalism [the view that there is an eternal, unchanging soul]. If I — being asked by Vacchagotta the wanderer if there is no self — were to answer that there is no self, that would be conforming with those brahmans & contemplatives who are exponents of annihilationism [the view that death is the annihilation of consciousness]. If I — being asked by Vacchagotta the wanderer if there is a self — were to answer that there is a self, would that be in keeping with the arising of knowledge that all phenomena are not-self?"

"No, lord."

"And if I — being asked by Vacchagotta the wanderer if there is no self — were to answer that there is no self, the bewildered Vacchagotta would become even more bewildered: 'Does the self I used to have now not exist?'"

<https://www.accesstoinsight.org/tipitaka/sn/sn44/sn44.010.than.html>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 1st, 2022 at 5:56 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

clayde said:

So Malcolm and other Tibetan Buddhist practitioners, I have come to realize how important the belief in post-mortem rebirth is to you and will refrain from debating or questioning your belief (except on the Zen forum).

Malcolm wrote:

Are you going to debate with Dogen about it on the Zen forum, or did you miss Genjo Conan's post, where in the late Shobogenzo, Dogen excoriates those who reject rebirth?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 1st, 2022 at 7:58 AM

Title: Re: Who?

Content:

clyde said:

What do you mean by “the person designated”? (I know what the five aggregates are, so no need to explain that.) Is there an entity separate from the five aggregates?

Malcolm wrote:

A person is designated on the five aggregates in just the same way a car is designated on its parts. There is nothing particularly stunning or questionable about this. No person exists apart from that designation for the five aggregates, but there is no person in the five aggregates or separate from them.

clyde said:

Yes. But as the five aggregates are empty what does it mean to be an apparent, conventional, designated, but ultimately empty, person? How is such an illusory person an “owner”, an “heir”?

Malcolm wrote:

“Owner” is a designation, and so is “heir.” Upon what are they designated? Parts.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 1st, 2022 at 9:10 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Jesse said:

You can call your Trip BuddhaDharma -- it doesn't make it so. All ancient doctrines of unsophisticated people's that has been replaced by verified facts, and hard science.

PadmaVonSamba said:

Except, perhaps, doctrines (theories) regarding the nature of awareness itself, which were being developed by people at Nalanda University in India From the 5th through the 12th centuries, when they weren't busy developing theories about particle physics... you know, just before Europe entered the dark ages.

More to the point however, is that if one can remove karma and rebirth from Buddhism, and still call it Buddhism simply because that's how one chooses to define Buddhism, then it should be equally valid to add karma and rebirth to the sciences, and regard them as science, for the same reason. Might as well throw in astrology too.

Perhaps this thread should be about the future of science, and whether it will expand to include pseudoscience.

tobes said:

Great point. The question is: who gets to define a. science and b. Buddhadharma?

There is a degree of contestation in both, but it is a matter of degrees. No one thinks that theologians or advertising executives have a legitimate stake in the business of defining what science is or isn't.

Likewise the notion that so called 'hard science' has any stake in the business of defining Buddhadharma is as absurd as thinking they have a stake in defining economics or history or any other area of human knowledge and culture.

Malcolm wrote:

“Science” exists as empirical knowledge. That’s it. Nothing more, nothing less. Most Western Buddhists accept it without question. Science, being empirical, also has limitations, because not all knowledge is empirical, such as belief systems, including belief systems about science.

Buddhists accept certain kinds of nonempirical knowledge. The most important of these are the causes of suffering, suffering itself being birth in the three realms. Anyone who properly understands Buddhadharma understands that affliction-driven action is the cause of suffering. And suffering only ceases if affliction-driven action ceases because affliction-driven action causes birth in samsara. All that liberation is, is freedom from birth in samsara due to affliction-driven action. There is no liberation taught by the Buddha other than that.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 1st, 2022 at 9:31 AM

Title: Re: Is selling electronics wrong livelihood, since many contain animal products?

Content:

Boomerang said:

I've read that it's common for electronics like iPhones and TV's to be made with animal products like gelatin or cholesterol.

Is it wrong livelihood to sell electronics then? Like, what if you were a marketer working at Apple. Does that count as engaging in a meat business?

Malcolm wrote:

A monk came to the Buddha and complained he could perceive tiny creatures in his water that slipped through mesh of his water strainer. As a result, he could find no water to drink. The Buddha advised him to not look so deeply.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 1st, 2022 at 8:58 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Könchok Thrinley said:

I am starting to doubt that sanctions have the desired effect on Russia. Rubl is almost back where it was and Russia is still able to pay its debts and feels strong enough to threaten Europe with closing the gas.

Malcolm wrote:

It is having the desired effect.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 1st, 2022 at 9:02 PM

Title: Re: Who?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

“Owner” is a designation, and so is “heir.” Upon what are they designated? Parts.

absoluneant said:

Are "parts" designation as well ?

Or is it some kind of mereological nihilism ?

Malcolm wrote:

Parts are also designated on parts, it's parts all the way down.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 1st, 2022 at 9:15 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Könchok Thrinley said:

I am starting to doubt that sanctions have the desired effect on Russia. Rubl is almost back where it was and Russia is still able to pay its debts and feels strong enough to threaten Europe with closing the gas.

Malcolm wrote:

It is having the desired effect.

Könchok Thrinley said:

Does it? If starving out Russian population is one of the effects then maybe... But I am not quite so sure. But hey might be just what they want us to think.

Malcolm wrote:

The ruble is not very convertible right now. Even if it has regained its value against the dollar temporarily, it will fall again. It takes a long time for the full effects of economic sanctions to have their impact.

Russian manufacturing is entirely dependent on the EU. Pretty soon they are also going to default on weapons contracts , etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 2nd, 2022 at 12:05 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Könchok Thrinley said:

Does it? If starving out Russian population is one of the effects then maybe... But I am not quite so sure. But hey might be just what they want us to think.

Malcolm wrote:

The ruble is not very convertible right now. Even if it has regained its value against the dollar temporarily, it will fall again. It takes a long time for the full effects of economic sanctions to have their impact.

Könchok Thrinley said:

Possibly. I just hope that EU will not budge when it comes to paying for gas in ruble.

Malcolm wrote:

It is a nonstarter.

Könchok Thrinley said:

Our (European) representatives were idiots for not lessing our dependance on Russia and its gas/oil long time ago. I mean it was clear for years that they think of us as enemies.

Malcolm wrote:

It's not only the EU's fault. The Oil lobby in the US started pushing for pipelines from Russia in the early 80's. Reagan was initially 100% opposed, but they wore him down, and he relented.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 2nd, 2022 at 12:10 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Miorita said:

1 hr ago: <https://www.msn.com/en-us/news/world/syrian-mercenaries-deploy-to-russia-en-route-to-ukrainian-battlefields/ar-AAVJmvK> - NYTimes.

Such evil!

Malcolm wrote:

Employing foreign mercenaries is the first sign of declining nation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 2nd, 2022 at 12:34 AM

Title: Re: Is it better to get empowerments/vow ceremonies in-person vs online?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Bodhisattva Vow Ceremony

Longchen Nyingtik

17 Tantras

etc

Malcolm wrote:

In terms of direct introductions, don wangs, and lungs, whether you are there in the room or not doesn't matter. However, if you can go to your teacher's retreats in person, there is a dimension to hearing teachings and practicing that is otherwise missing.

Terma said:

I don't remember which thread this was discussed but Malcolm, didn't you say that certain empowerment's must be received in person, due to samaya substances and so-forth?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, empowerments that have substances, like the vase empowerment.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 2nd, 2022 at 12:38 AM

Title: Re: Carl Jung's "Synchronicity: An Acausal Connecting Principle"

Content:

Zhen Li said:

His system of the structure of the unconscious is an attempt to systematise it.

Malcolm wrote:

His collective unconscious was a ontological argument, predicated on a transpersonal consciousness.

This is entirely incompatible with Buddhadharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 2nd, 2022 at 1:12 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

The weight of evidence goes with rebirth being true, rather than annihilation at death.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no evidence at all, either way.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 2nd, 2022 at 2:50 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

ratna said:

Now that Russians are pulling back from around Kyiv, stories about their behavior in Ukrainian towns and villages are starting to emerge: people are returning to their houses to find that pigs have been slaughtered in the living room, piles of shit in every room (a recurring theme), everything of value looted.

Malcolm wrote:

Makes Hussein's invasion of Kuwait look polite by comparison.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 2nd, 2022 at 3:03 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

The weight of evidence goes with rebirth being true, rather than annihilation at death.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no evidence at all, either way.

PadmaVonSamba said:

Evidence exactly, precisely, of what?
(Please be as detailed as you can)

When an elephant leaves tracks,
you never have to actually see the animal to know it was there.

Malcolm wrote:

Does the mind leave any tracks?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 2nd, 2022 at 3:17 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 2nd, 2022 at 3:44 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Toenail said:

Germany is still buying gas from Russia. I am reading articles about Russia's gas money is higher than ever etc., yet in our news there is little about Germany financing Russias war. What do the news in other countries say? Is germany frowned upon? I would not mind having a cold winter. I will just use an extra blanket.

Malcolm wrote:

In the US there is recognition of Germany's difficult position.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 2nd, 2022 at 4:21 AM

Title: Re: no-soul?

Content:

clyde said:

I was wondering if it would be more clarifying than confusing, if when referencing human beings (or more generally, sentient beings) Buddhists used the term "soul" rather than the standard "self"? So we would talk about "no-soul" rather than "no-self"?

Malcolm wrote:

The word in Sanskrit is atman. It is at once a personal pronoun, and a noun. It means "self" in normal conversation, and also refers to an immutable entity that transmigrates from one body to another.

The Buddha accepted its usage in normal conversation and rejected it as an immutable entity.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 2nd, 2022 at 4:55 AM

Title: Re: Reading restricted texts

Content:

namtose said:

The only translation and commentary of Virupa's Vajra Verses that I know of in English is "Treasury of Esoteric Instructions" by Lama Dampa Sonam Gyaltzen, translated by Cyrus Stearns. It is also known as the 'Black Book' because the original text was wrapped in a black cover and to distinguish it from two other Lam Dre commentaries call the 'red book' and 'yellow book'

Malcolm wrote:

No, there is also the Taking the Result as the Path, also commissioned by HHST and translated by Stearns, and published without restrictions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 2nd, 2022 at 5:31 AM

Title: Re: So Many Mahayana Sutras - Do They All Agree - Why So Many?

Content:

Aemilius said:

Thank you. For example Lankavatara sutra With the Verses doesn't mention books or writing.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes it does, it mentions writing three times.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 2nd, 2022 at 5:54 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

Evidence exactly, precisely, of what?

(Please be as detailed as you can)

When an elephant leaves tracks,
you never have to actually see the animal to know it was there.

Malcolm wrote:

Does the mind leave any tracks?

PadmaVonSamba said:

haven't you ever heard of someone having a one track mind?

Malcolm wrote:

That is following a track, not leaving tracks.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 2nd, 2022 at 8:47 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

Forgive me, I just need to decompress here.

Thanks for listening

Malcolm wrote:

The whole thing is awful for everyone.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 2nd, 2022 at 8:49 PM

Title: Re: 100 peaceful and wrathful deities

Content:

Nalanda said:

Do I have to participate in this practice, and attend the service, if I don't have anyone in and around my life who passed away? Is this practice mostly for people who lost someone?

Malcolm wrote:

Zhitro, like any system, has a number of uses. Primarily, it is a method for attaining realization in this life. There are also number of zhitro cycles, the most famous of which in the west includes the misnamed Tibetan Book of the Dead.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 2nd, 2022 at 9:03 PM

Title: Re: So Many Mahayana Sutras - Do They All Agree - Why So Many?

Content:

Aemilius said:

Yes, coming to think of it, merely mentioning the 30 000 slokas (that is lines) implies writing.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it actually refers to writing three times. It references syllables over 40 times. But referencing syllables does not imply writing because the development of Sanskrit grammar precedes writing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 2nd, 2022 at 9:16 PM

Title: Re: Is it better to get empowerments/vow ceremonies in-person vs online?

Content:

Lingpupa said:

Otherwise, what's the empowerment for? What's the guru for? What's the point of the guru having a proper lineage? In what sense has the initiate received the blessing of the deity?

Malcolm wrote:

Speaking strictly from the point of view of Dzogchen, empowerment is for inducing the experience of the example/actual wisdom. The guru is the guide who assists the student induce that experience. The lineage means that guru has also been lead through the process in a precise way by someone else before them. Not all empowerments involve deities. In fact, the actual Dzogchen empowerments never do. Dzogchen empowerment can be combined with deity empowerments, but it is not necessary.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 2nd, 2022 at 9:22 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

The weight of evidence goes with rebirth being true, rather than annihilation at death.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no evidence at all, either way.

Crazywisdom said:

There is evidence of rebirth. There's a lot of anecdotal evidence. There's no experimental data.

Malcolm wrote:

You can call that evidence if you like. I don't think it is evidence. The best book on the issue is by Bhikkhu Analayo. It is all purely anecdotal, but his main case is interesting. But I don't take it as proof. Rebirth is not a falsifiable phenomena, empirically speaking.

In order to prove it, you would have to be able to trace the continuum of a mind from one deceased body to the conception of another.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 2nd, 2022 at 10:31 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

A mirror creates a new reflection of what is put in front of it, because of the causes created by the subject. But there's no continuum connecting the subject and the reflection.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes there is, the person who placed the subject before the mirror.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 2nd, 2022 at 11:10 PM

Title: Re: no-soul?

Content:

Archie2009 said:

...Given the pervasive Abrahamic context no-soul is obviously a bad choice. It will only stimulate westerners into patterns of thought about their imaginary Friend in the Sky they were brought up on. ...

Kim O'Hara said:
I think that's right.

It's also misleading in that, to most westerners, the 'soul' is one part of the 'self', very like the 'ego' or the 'conscience' and somewhat like the nose or foot.

For both those reasons, I prefer 'not-self' to 'no-self'. It's a bit awkward-looking but any questions it raises are more easily answered in the right framework: this is not self, that is not self, the self does not exist in the way we assume it does, etc.

'No-self', on the other hand, needs a complicated work-around on the lines of, "Well, yes, I have to admit that you do exist but..."

'No-soul', similarly, looks like a straight materialist-atheist stance, which then has to be denied before any progress can be made.

And all of those points apply (for most of us, to some extent) when we are talking to ourselves as well as when we're talking to another person.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

The Buddha rejected all of these thing, self (atman), soul (jiva), person, (pudgala), etc., as being ultimate entities. He did not reject them as conventional designations which do not point to anything ultimately real.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 3rd, 2022 at 1:00 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

Oh, a plant could grow in front of the mirror.

Or, You're just interjecting a creator-god.

Malcolm wrote:

You used to the verb "put," not me:

A mirror creates a new reflection of what is put in front of it...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 3rd, 2022 at 1:59 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

I prefer the proof to come from the overall self authentication of the dharma.

Malcolm wrote:

I personally accept rebirth, etc., and think that people who try to practice Buddhism without this understanding do not understand the Buddha's real point.

But I don't think there is any way to prove rebirth. Even in ancient India, many people did not believe in rebirth.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 3rd, 2022 at 5:42 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

They also don't understand how DNA arose. Nothing really explains life. But isn't the Buddha saying rebirth is true because he observed it?

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed. Testimony ain't proof though.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 3rd, 2022 at 8:52 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

reiun said:

Of course, this means Buddha lives were not all human since, anatomically, modern humans appeared in Africa only approximately 300,000 years ago. So: maybe Buddha might have at one time, been a Neanderthal? If so, I'll bet he dug up a dinosaur bone and wielded it like a kyosaku stick to try to "wake up" his fellow sleepyheads? It would have been the compassionate thing to do. Can't picture a Martian zombie demon image, too far out, but there must have been a whole lot of ET lives to go through.

Malcolm wrote:

There are all kinds of world systems where one can find humans. We ought not assume they all look like us.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, April 3rd, 2022 at 9:13 AM
Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism
Content:
rejun said:
Not in my science.

Malcolm wrote:
Whose talking about science? A “human” is any being who can in their own lifetime attain buddhahood. It is not only possible there are such beings in other world systems but probable. But if you are defining “human” strictly as a kind of being that we call Homo sapiens, you do you. We are talking about two different things.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, April 3rd, 2022 at 8:04 PM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Malcolm wrote:
Employing foreign mercenaries is the first sign of declining nation.

Schrödinger’s Yidam said:
True. That’s why it is better to call them “contractors”.

Malcolm wrote:
Well, the contractors in Iraq and Afghanistan were primarily American, and were not allowed combat roles, mainly performing security and other police functions (including torture, etc.).

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, April 3rd, 2022 at 9:05 PM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Schrödinger’s Yidam said:
True. That’s why it is better to call them “contractors”.

Malcolm wrote:
Well, the contractors in Iraq and Afghanistan were primarily American, and were not allowed combat roles, mainly performing security and other police functions (including torture, etc.).

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Originally that's right. But then Blackwater ran out of Americans, so they started recruiting from other countries—and paying them a fraction of what the Americans got.

Malcolm wrote:

Still, they did not perform combat roles. Therein lies the difference.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 3rd, 2022 at 9:14 PM

Title: Re: So Many Mahayana Sutras - Do They All Agree - Why So Many?

Content:

Aemilius said:

Yes, coming to think of it, merely mentioning the 30 000 slokas (that is lines) implies writing.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it actually refers to writing three times. It references syllables over 40 times. But referencing syllables does not imply writing because the development of Sanskrit grammar precedes writing.

Aemilius said:

Syllables are naturally sounds or written symbols, but letters are letters, and letters are mentioned in this sutra.

Malcolm wrote:

No, they are not, just akSara mfn. imperishable ; unalterable ; m. a sword L. ; S3iva L. ; Vishn2u L. ; (%{A}) f. see %{a4kSarA} below ; (%{am}) n. a syllable ; the syllable %{om} Mn. ; a letter [m. Ra1matUp.] ; a vowel ; a sound ; a word ; N. of Brahma ; final beatitude religious austerity , sacrifice L. ; water RV. i , 34 , 4 and i , 164 , 42 [3,3] ; Achyranthes Aspera.

“Letter” is a western idea. The Indian idea is pre-writing. Of course, later, this word applies to what we call letters, but not originally.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 4th, 2022 at 12:47 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 4th, 2022 at 1:21 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

They also don't understand how DNA arose. Nothing really explains life. But isn't the Buddha saying rebirth is true because he observed it?

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed. Testimony ain't proof though.

Crazywisdom said:

Depends on the judge.

Malcolm wrote:

It's a poor judge who relies solely on testimony.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 4th, 2022 at 1:28 AM

Title: Re: Oscars shocker!

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

How it became such a big thing I will never know.

Malcolm wrote:

Obviously, it's because of the decadence of late stage capitalism and Western colonialism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 4th, 2022 at 1:53 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

What does that even mean, literally?

Crazywisdom said:

He observed his past lives. Are you being coy? You know about Jataka tales.

PadmaVonSamba said:

I mean, what exactly is being observed

Malcolm wrote:

His mind.

PadmaVonSamba said:
, and what exactly is the process of observation

Malcolm wrote:
The developing the abhijñā of past lives through samadhi, and specifically, through memory.

PadmaVonSamba said:
, and does that mean observing a stream of consciousness or chain of karmic links migrating from a corpse to an embryo.

Malcolm wrote:
A buddha is aware of their entire continuum, through ——>conception, birth, life, aging death, the bardo, conception——> from beginningless time.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, April 4th, 2022 at 2:14 AM
Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism
Content:
Shinjin said:
Anyone here who has remembered a past life experience?

Malcolm wrote:
well, I remember yesterday pretty well.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, April 4th, 2022 at 2:18 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
An aside:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, April 4th, 2022 at 4:54 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
Russian hardware losses:

<https://www.oryxspioenkop.com/2022/02/attack-on-europe-documenting-equipment.html>

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, April 4th, 2022 at 5:55 AM
Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism
Content:

Crazywisdom said:
Depends on the judge.

Malcolm wrote:
It's a poor judge who relies solely on testimony.

Crazywisdom said:
What did Buddha say to rely on?

Malcolm wrote:
He said one should not take his word for anything, but to test his teachings the same way a goldsmith tests gold to make sure it is not pyrite, etc.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, April 4th, 2022 at 7:29 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, April 4th, 2022 at 8:40 PM
Title: Re: Is Shingon lesser because it has less tantras than Tibetan vajrayana?
Content:
tingdzin said:
Well, because Tibetans did, including Bonpos. For example, in klu 'bum texts, the nagas are categorized according to caste: bram ze, rgyal, rje, mamgs, gdol pa, etc.

Also Plato divide society into four castes, and so on.

Malcolm wrote:
This is a bit disingenuous. I'm quite sure there are things in the Indian tradition that you feel free to disregard. A four-continent world system around a central mountain, for example.
[/quote]

We are not talking about what one believes, we are talking about the textual tradition.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, April 4th, 2022 at 10:08 PM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, April 4th, 2022 at 11:01 PM
Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism
Content:

Crazywisdom said:
What did Buddha say to rely on?

Malcolm wrote:
He said one should not take his word for anything, but to test his teachings the same way a goldsmith tests gold to make sure it is not pyrite, etc.

Crazywisdom said:
Then rebirth for you is a faith.

So the reliable witnesses bit comes from whom? Vasubandhu?

Malcolm wrote:
Dignaga, Dharmakīrti.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, April 4th, 2022 at 11:18 PM
Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism
Content:

Norwegian said:
The Buddha recollected all of his past lives in detail, and according to the Majjhima Nikaya i. 483, he could remember as far back as ninety-one eons. This is not metaphorical. It refers to past lives and post-mortem rebirth.

reiun said:
Hmm, I wonder how long such detailed recollecting would take? Would he then also remember his remembrances, etc.?

Malcolm wrote:
No so long, since it happened in during the course of the night the Buddha attained awakening. It is how he rediscovered the view of dependent origination.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 4th, 2022 at 11:22 PM

Title: Re: How to reconcile meat eating with buddhism?

Content:

RiFF said:

Not trying to make any judgments, trying to gain an understanding. I've been vegan for several years and recently I have become a student of the dharma. Initially my veganism had nothing to do with Buddhism aside from thinking I was fortunate to already be on this diet rather than have to make any major change as a result of what I was reading.

However, more recently I've gotten deeper into Tibetan Buddhism, and to my surprise vegetarianism is not nearly as prominent and in fact it might not even be possible to follow certain Tibetan Buddhist traditions? I understand HHDL is not vegetarian, nor are many Tibetan masters. I've also found out that for certain holidays, meat eating is expected.

How does one reconcile a true belief in compassion for all beings with the meat industry? When it is fully possible for HHDL to have vegan food for every meal, how does he justify choosing to consume an animal?

I understand that in agriculture, there is still cruelty as field mice can get killed, as can bugs and other small critters. However there is a significant difference in the amount of suffering in something like factory farming vs. inadvertent death caused by farming. I'm not trying to get into a debate of vegan vs. not vegan, I just want to understand is there something that Tibetan Buddhists are able to point to in order to explain why their purchase of meat products does not cause suffering on their fellow sentient beings.

Malcolm wrote:

Meat, wool, and leather do not suffer, since there is no mind in these products.

As long as one did not kill an animal oneself, see it killed, nor was the animal killed expressly for oneself personally, that meat is considered suitable for consumption.

There is a huge thread on the ethics of meat-eating here on the board.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 4th, 2022 at 11:42 PM

Title: Re: So Many Mahayana Sutras - Do They All Agree - Why So Many?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Panini's knowledge of writing is highly disputed in Indology. My opinion is that he knew of writing. I think Bronkhorst makes the case for this quite well. The issue is that people create a dichotomy between writing and orality that didn't exist.

Malcolm wrote:
Panini systematized an earlier oral tradition.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, April 5th, 2022 at 12:48 AM
Title: Re: about clouds
Content:
clyde said:
A Dharma talk by Thay about clouds:

Malcolm wrote:
The term the Buddha used was punarbhāva, which means re-existence or existing again, literally, hence "rebirth."

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, April 5th, 2022 at 12:54 AM
Title: Re: Bhikkhu Analayo on Respecting the Different Buddhist Traditions
Content:
clyde said:
Bhikkhu Analayo

Malcolm wrote:
He wrote a book recently The Superiority Conceit in Buddhist Traditions.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, April 5th, 2022 at 3:16 AM
Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism
Content:

Crazywisdom said:
Then rebirth for you is a faith.

So the reliable witnesses bit comes from whom? Vasubandhu?

Malcolm wrote:
Dignaga, Dharmakīrti.

Crazywisdom said:
If there's a world of blind people and one guy who sees says there's a moon at night, they have to take it on faith.

Malcolm wrote:

More likely, the sighted guy will poke out his eyes to go along with the blind.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 5th, 2022 at 4:10 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 5th, 2022 at 4:42 AM

Title: Re: Bhikkhu Analayo on Respecting the Different Buddhist Traditions

Content:

Nalanda said:

And apparently, according to him, Secularists are part of Buddhist traditions.

Malcolm wrote:

He is allowed his opinion. I disagree, however.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 5th, 2022 at 4:53 AM

Title: Re: the great vegetarian debate

Content:

climb-up said:

For me at least, the threefold purity of meat gets called into question in a consumer situation where your dollars are (IMO, many people who I respect disagree) requesting that meat be slaughtered for you.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, no actually, it doesn't. If it did, so would buying leather shoes, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 5th, 2022 at 4:59 AM

Title: Re: the great vegetarian debate

Content:

KathyLauren said:

But I am always puzzled at the vehemence of the hostility some Buddhists have towards vegetarians and vegans.

Malcolm wrote:

Not against vegetarians and vegans per se, just against poor arguments, such as excusing the wholesale slaughter of insects, rodents, birds, and so on to grow crops for humans, etc., as if vegetarianism and veganism are ethically disengaged in such taking of life.

There are cogent arguments to be made for changing industrial agriculture, and so on, but the simple fact of the matter is that the relationship between animals and crops is essential. We cannot keep poisoning the planet with chemical fertilizers made from oil. If we study the history of food security we will discover two key features in solving food security around the world also led to the rise of industrial agriculture. During the Colombian exchange, potatoes and yams, one key spread to Europe and Asia, and effectively ended food insecurity in these place, with the other key, guano mines in Peru, which were replaced by the invention of chemical fertilizers in the late 19th century. The inputs of oil into our food system, globally, also caused a massive rise in population. Unless people think that continuing to use chemical fertilizers is a good idea (it isn't, since it contributing to dead zones in coastal areas), continued reliance on animals for fertilizer etc., is not going to change.

But our global food economy is basically hooked on the meth of petroleum.

The simple fact of the matter is that in our world life feeds on death. This also needs to be taken into account. Everything we do is harmful to something else.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 5th, 2022 at 5:15 AM

Title: Re: the great vegetarian debate

Content:

climb-up said:

For me at least, the threefold purity of meat gets called into question in a consumer situation where your dollars are (IMO, many people who I respect disagree) requesting that meat be slaughtered for you.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, no actually, it doesn't. If it did, so would buying leather shoes, etc.

climb-up said:

Well, yeah.

If the idea is that animals shouldn't be killed for you, and then you become a supporting customer of a company that kills animals for customers then the animal was killed for you and for all the other customers.

I'm sure there is more to it, and there are many sutra to be quoted to show me that I'm wrong (and I'm not dismissing those), but I think the argument of "well, they're already dead," if it doesn't even acknowledge the direct support of companies slaughtering, is at the very least lacking.

Malcolm wrote:

In fact, they are already dead, these animals whose skins are used for leather goods, etc. They are not killed for their leather, unless they are game animals, etc. But honestly, how is using plastic shoes and coats made from petroleum products better? You are just bargaining this harm against that harm. Our world is literally drowning in plastic. It's lodged deep in the tissues of every living being on the planet, and the use of plastic is barely 100 years old. You want cotton? Very pesticide intensive. Wool? Also a problem. There is literally plastic in all of our rainwater.

Frankly, I will choose leather over plastic any day.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 5th, 2022 at 10:50 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 5th, 2022 at 11:02 AM

Title: Re: the great vegetarian debate

Content:

KathyLauren said:

So, you have done nothing but increase my puzzlement at the vehemence of the opposition to vegetarianism/veganism among Buddhists who should know better.

Om mani padme hum

Kathy

Malcolm wrote:

I am not opposed to diets, just poor arguments for ideology posing as diets.

Realistically speaking, human beings are not going to stop raising animals for food.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 5th, 2022 at 8:11 PM

Title: Re: Is Shingon lesser because it has less tantras than Tibetan vajrayana?

Content:

tingdzin said:

As I said, theory instead of practice.

Malcolm wrote:

Theory is important. Without it, practice is blind.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 5th, 2022 at 10:24 PM

Title: Re: the great vegetarian debate

Content:

KathyLauren said:

For us, it is Dharma practice.

Malcolm wrote:

And for us, it has nothing to do with the Dharma.

As I have said, there are certainly sound, pragmatic reasons searching for alternatives to industrial agriculture as it stands at present because of its negative impacts on the environment. But the notion that human beings are going to cease raising animals for food is, at best, a fantasy. 8 billion people+ are not going to become vegetarians.

Sustainable agriculture requires animal inputs, from manure, various kinds of bone, blood, and feather meal, if we going to feed the entire planet without chemical fertilizers, etc.

There is no scenario where the world going vegan is sustainable or possible.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 5th, 2022 at 10:38 PM

Title: Re: the great vegetarian debate

Content:

seeker242 said:

Interesting to notice that people never take that position when it's people being harmed, instead of animals. Of course they don't because doing so would show just how poor of an argument is it.

Malcolm wrote:

The Buddhist reason for this is that while the Buddha defined killing humans a complete monastic downfall, killing an animal is a fault at the same level as drinking alcohol, picking leaves off plants, etc.

It was Devadatta, of course, who insisted on absolute vegetarianism. But we know what happened to him.

And quite frankly, when someone eats meat they are not harming any creature at all. There is no consciousness in a piece of meat to be harmed, whether it is the meat of a human, cow, etc. But we have taboos against eating humans, as well as predators. The Buddha forbids the consuming of such kinds of meat in Vinaya.

If someone is a strict common Mahāyāna practitioner, they should avoid eating meat. But if they are a Theravadin or a Vajrayāna practitioner, there is no need to avoid eating meat, because the consumption of meat is permitted in Hinayāna and Vajrayāna.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 5th, 2022 at 11:10 PM

Title: Re: the great vegetarian debate

Content:

seeker242 said:

Interesting to see that many comments completely ignore the interests of the animals.

Malcolm wrote:

Animals regularly ignore each other's interests. I've seen many spiders ignore the interests of the flies they catch, many birds ignore the interests of the bugs they eat, etc., etc.

Humans ignore the "interests" of animals because most humans view animals as food sources, etc.

On the other hand, domestic animals survive where wild animals do not, and in fact, enjoy protection from predation by wild animals because they are domesticated. This why there are so few big cats, wolves, and other large predators in the world. They've been hunted down to protect domestic animals (and for fur, and so on).

For example, supposing we stopped relying on cows, pigs, chickens, sheep, and goats for meat and dairy. How long to do you think these animals would survive as species? Are we just going to allow them to roam free on the earth, multiplying and living wherever they like? Not very likely. No, they will be culled to keep down their populations. Already, deer populations are a problem because there are no natural predators for deer and we don't hunt deer so much anymore. Even the culling programs are not effective. So, will it be in the interest of these former domestic animals to simply let them run free? You can talk all you like about the interest of animals, but I don't see any serious discussion of what is to happen to all these billions of domesticated animals once they have been freed to live their best lives as wild animals.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 6th, 2022 at 12:08 AM

Title: Re: the great vegetarian debate

Content:

seeker242 said:

Arguing against veganism, because a fully vegan world is not possible or realistic

Malcolm wrote:

So you admit that a fully vegan world is not possible or realistic. Case closed. Veganism is just another first world lifestyle choice, and has nothing to do with Dharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 6th, 2022 at 12:17 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

If there's a world of blind people and one guy who sees says there's a moon at night, they have to take it on faith.

Malcolm wrote:

More likely, the sighted guy will poke out his eyes to go along with the blind.

Crazywisdom said:

I know I wouldn't. Jeez man... Dim view.

Malcolm wrote:

It's along the lines of the royal family living in a country where all the water was contaminated but their water source. Eventually, however, all the people who were poisoned began to think the king, etc., were acting very strangely. Of course, the king knew the people were deluded. But since it was impossible to purify the water, the royal family chose to drink the same water as the populace.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 6th, 2022 at 12:47 AM

Title: Re: the great vegetarian debate

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Veganism is just another first world lifestyle choice, and has nothing to do with Dharma.

KathyLauren said:

That is a remarkably silly thing to say. Just because you are not motivated to understand the reasoning does not mean that you can just dismiss it.

Malcolm wrote:

I understand the reasoning perfectly well, that's why I dismiss it. Of course, your lifestyle is your choice. You have the luxury of following that lifestyle. It's totally fine with me. If you came to my house, I would make sure you had a delicious vegan meal, no problem. If you were a meat eater, some thing.

Diet has nothing to do with the Dharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 6th, 2022 at 12:57 AM

Title: Re: the great vegetarian debate

Content:

seeker242 said:

Can't be perfect right? Therefore any effort is useless and not worth anything. Of course that makes absolutely no sense whatsoever. Talk about a poor argument...as well as illogical and unreasonable.

DNS said:

Aptly named the https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Nirvana_fallacy; that if the perfect idealized situation can't occur, you just give up.

Malcolm wrote:

That supposes you think the Vegan endeavor is sound to begin with. I don't.

DNS said:

Regarding the domestic animals being set free; that is another poor argument. The reality is that everyone is not going to become vegetarian/vegan overnight. If it did occur, it would be a gradual process and the farmers would stop breeding their livestock. No demand, then they create less supply. The demand would slowly go down and the breeding would also slow down, resulting in less killing.

Malcolm wrote:

Speculative. It seems like you think we live somewhere other than samsara.

As Dharma practitioners, we do our best to avoid harming sentient beings. Some people are very self-righteous about that and adopt extreme principles the Buddha rejected. But that's their problem, not mine.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 6th, 2022 at 2:53 AM

Title: Re: Fifth precept

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

For someone that doesn't have either a problem or a vow, a casual approach is appropriate. However if some has either a problem or a vow, a casual approach is not appropriate.

Don't take a vow unless you intend on keeping it. By so doing you are taking a stand against your own rationalizations and justifications. Don't think it okay to make excuses.

But like I said, if you don't have either a problem or a vow, then do as you please.

Malcolm wrote:

Its better to take a vow, even if you break it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 6th, 2022 at 3:32 AM

Title: Re: Fitfh precept

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Its better to take a vow, even if you break it.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

If you do something such as have a drink without a vow, there's no karmic repercussions. However if you have a vow to abstain, and you break it, there is significant negative karma created.

Malcolm wrote:

I am just telling you what Sakya Pandita says. The merit of taking the vow outweighs the negative karma of breaking it. It creates a trace for taking the vow later.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 6th, 2022 at 3:38 AM

Title: Re: the great vegetarian debate

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Diet has nothing to do with the Dharma

KathyLauren said:

And there, you are wrong. When judging what is or is not Dharma, we are told to judge whether or not it is wholesome. Veganism is wholesome. You are saying that veganism cannot be motivated by the Dharma because ... well you don't actually have a good reason why not.

Malcolm wrote:

I didn't say it could not be motivated by a desire to practice Dharma. Clearly, in your case, you are motivated by what you understand the Dharma to entail.

KathyLauren said:

Your logic says that, because the lesser degree of harm is not prohibited, it is not harm at all.

Malcolm wrote:

No, my logic, based on the writings of Bhavaveka, says that meat pure in three ways is not harmful at all to anything since there is no mind in a piece of meat which can suffer.

You can disagree with him if you like.

And:

Those with compassion eat meat.

-- Hevajra Tantra

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 6th, 2022 at 4:03 AM

Title: Re: the great vegetarian debate

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

No, my logic, based on the writings of Bhavaveka, says that meat pure in three ways is not harmful at all to anything since there is no mind in a piece of meat which can suffer.

You can disagree with him if you like.

KathyLauren said:

Yes, I do. I call BS on that line of reasoning.

Buying a mindless piece of meat today obviously doesn't harm the animal that died yesterday. If you stop your reasoning there, as you do, you are wilfully ignoring reality. Buying that mindless piece of meat today is the cause of tomorrow's slaughter of sentient beings that are anything but mindless.

Malcolm wrote:

Sorry, but this is just a post-hoc fallacy. Someone eating the dead flesh of an already slain animal does not determine that another animal will necessarily be slain in its place. Also, if you make this argument, by necessity, saving the life of one animal merely moves another into position in the line, negating the value of life ransoms altogether.

If you make this argument, then by definition, buying anything from a supermarket is necessarily implicated in the slaughter of animals. Supporting a CSA that raises animals implicates one in their exploitation even if one never purchases milk or meat from that CSA, etc., etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 7th, 2022 at 10:40 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

And refusing (whether for good reasons or bad) to fight, while "we continue to arm the Ukrainians with all the weapons they can handle" looks like a proxy war, i.e. that "we" are encouraging Ukraine to fight on "our" behalf. As I said, that isn't what it was in the beginning, when Russia invaded and Ukraine fought back in self defence. I agree that escalation to direct war between NATO and Russia, or leaving the Ukrainians without support, are both very poor options. But then, there aren't any good options in a war, especially when a mad dictator is involved.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:
There is only one option.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, April 8th, 2022 at 8:07 PM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, April 8th, 2022 at 8:22 PM
Title: Re: So Many Mahayana Sutras - Do They All Agree - Why So Many?
Content:
Aemilius said:
I support the view of Lalitavistara sutra that Gautama himself knew writing.

Malcolm wrote:
There is no evidence of writing in India prior to Ashoka. It might be the case that writing was used principally for business, but there is no evidence. It is anachronistic to use texts set down in writing after Ashoka as proof of anything.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, April 9th, 2022 at 12:43 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, April 9th, 2022 at 1:03 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, April 9th, 2022 at 7:31 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, April 9th, 2022 at 7:51 PM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, April 9th, 2022 at 10:01 PM
Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism
Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:
The three important life events, birth, marriage, and death, in countries where Buddhism has really taken root, these three are included as part of the function of the sangha.

Malcolm wrote:
There are no birth or marriage rites in Tibetan Buddhism. There are Tibetan cultural rituals for these two life events, but no identifiably Buddhist rites for them. It should remain that way.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, April 9th, 2022 at 10:50 PM
Title: Re: Revised Bardo Thodol
Content:

The_Unholy_Peasant said:
After having spent quite some time studying the Bardo Thodol, I have noticed that the associations of the deities appear quite hodge-podge.

Have there been any 'modern' attempts of re-organizing the Zhitro into something more homogenous that parallels Tantric doctrine a bit clearer?

Malcolm wrote:
Which tantric doctrine are you referring to?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 10th, 2022 at 5:15 AM

Title: Re: Innate sense of self and gender identity

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

There is the famous story in the Lotus Sutra of the Naga Princess flipping from female to male (and back again?); there are other sutras suggesting the general fluidity and mutability of gender.

Make of that what you will.

Malcolm wrote:

In her case, its one way.

In the story of the house goddess of Vimalakirti, it's back and forth.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 10th, 2022 at 8:51 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 10th, 2022 at 10:44 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

The three important life events, birth, marriage, and death, in countries where Buddhism has really taken root, these three are included as part of the function of the sangha.

Malcolm wrote:

There are no birth or marriage rites in Tibetan Buddhism. There are Tibetan cultural rituals for these two life events, but no identifiably Buddhist rites for them. It should remain that way.

conebeckham said:

Kongtrul wrote a marriage ceremony text; in Sikkim, at least, it is quite common to have some sort of Yangkuk done for a marriage blessing. Konchok Chidu is quite commonly used for this purpose: but it is not a "marriage rite" in the Western sense.

Malcolm wrote:

Yang gug (summing prosperity) is a pre Buddhist rite. I mentioned that There were Tibetan cultural rituals for these kinds of life events.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 10th, 2022 at 10:47 AM

Title: Re: Oscars shocker!

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Honest question. Why are we still discussing this?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 10th, 2022 at 8:25 PM

Title: Re: "Radical" Ekayāna and the liberation of non-Buddhists?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Can we then conclude, for example, that a virtuous practitioner of Christianity, Islam, Judaism, or Hinduism could in fact achieve Buddhist liberation through their faith? And based on the Ksitigarbha-related Sutra, could we conceive of, say, Shakyamuni Buddha taking on the form of Christ and saving (or at least "helping") a Christian worshipping what he believes to be Christ?

Understand, I am not a perennialist by nature. I don't generally harbor the view that "all religions lead to the same place." However, the above quotes are thought-provoking.

What does Dharma Wheel think?

Malcolm wrote:

I don't know what others think, but the "vehicles of samsara" are called that for a reason. There is no possibility that someone with wrong view can achieve liberation in this life without abandoning that wrong view, and pratyekabuddha liberation is not possible while the Buddha's doctrine is in the world.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 10th, 2022 at 8:34 PM

Title: Re: "Radical" Ekayāna and the liberation of non-Buddhists?

Content:

seeker242 said:

Even if these non-Buddhists, sons of good families and so forth practice various aspects of non-Buddhist paths, all are the same buddha-dharma. Yes, compassion, loving kindness, good will, generosity, etc etc all lead toward bodhi, regardless of what religion a person is. None of these are "non-Buddhist practices". Compassion, loving kindness, good will are all always Buddha-dharma. Compassion is present in many other paths, but is still never not Buddha-dharma. It does not mean Islam causes liberation, it means compassion, loving kindness, good will, generosity does, as that is Buddha-dharma regardless. It means Buddha-dharma leads towards liberation. It's means various practices, of these other paths, are themselves Buddha-dharma.

Malcolm wrote:

Dharmakirti writes that compassion does not have the power to remove afflictions. Liberation is freedom from afflictions. Compassion can only lead to birth in higher realms. This is why the Buddha described the four brahmaviharas as the vehicle of devas and humans. So, still a vehicle of samsara.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 10th, 2022 at 9:41 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 10th, 2022 at 10:34 PM

Title: Re: "Radical" Ekayāna and the liberation of non-Buddhists?

Content:

Queequeg said:

Zhili, one of the later Tiantai patriarchs went some radical places with this Ekayana idea. Ziporyn wrote a study on this. Basically, all paths, even ones that appear as evil, lead to Buddhahood. Not necessarily because evil leads to awakening, but my sense is that there is a self-correcting tendency in Buddhanature that tends to Buddhahood.

Malcolm wrote:

Tathāgatagarbha is not an agent. If it were, it would just be another incorrect view of a permanent self.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 10th, 2022 at 10:43 PM

Title: Re: The Lotus Sutra in Tibetan traditions?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Given all this, how has the text been received in the Vajrayana strongholds? Dismissed as just another Mahayana lower teaching to be skimmed through on the way to higher things...or, conversely, admired and diligently studied with proverbial Tibetan rigor, despite its relatively lowly status?

Did it ever arouse anywhere near the same sense of enthusiasm in Tibet or Bhutan as it seems to have generated from Kyoto to Concord MA? Is there any significant commentarial tradition in Tibet on the Lotus?

Malcolm wrote:

It is regarded as an Ekayāna sūtra, meaning that it is a source for the idea that there is really only one Buddhist path.

There is no detailed commentarial tradition on the Lotus. It is frequently cited mainly with respect to its assertion that the Buddha will manifest in the future as gurus.

The only detailed treatment of the Lotus I have ever seen in Tibetan is a review of the parable of the Nāga princess by Chogyal Phakpa, who clarifies that she was already a bodhisattva abiding on the tenth stage, which is why her transformation into a male and subsequent buddhahood could be so rapid. He probably wrote this in response to Chinese Buddhists pointing out this example as proof of sudden awakening.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 10th, 2022 at 11:22 PM

Title: Re: The Lotus Sutra in Tibetan traditions?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

If I may pick your brain further, how is the concept of "one path" itself treated by the Higher Tantric thinkers, if generalization is even possible?

Malcolm wrote:

Meaning, that the goal of all buddhist paths is the same. It does not mean that all buddhists paths will get one to that goal.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 10th, 2022 at 11:47 PM

Title: Re: The Lotus Sutra in Tibetan traditions?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

If I may pick your brain further, how is the concept of "one path" itself treated by the Higher Tantric thinkers, if generalization is even possible?

Malcolm wrote:

Meaning, that the goal of all buddhist paths is the same. It does not mean that all buddhists paths will get one to that goal.

Sādhaka said:

About taking rebirth as an 'ordinary' being again in the next kalpa or mahakalpa; even though by the end of this kalpa or mahakalpa, all sentient beings end up in the two upper deva form realms and attain a species of Buddhahood?

(Here we square Abhidharma cosmogony with the esoteric Dzogchen cosmogony, as you're well aware)

Malcolm wrote:

And in this cosmogony, some buddhas err and return to sentient being hood in the next eon. This is explicitly stated in the commentary on the sound tantra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 10th, 2022 at 11:50 PM

Title: Re: The Lotus Sutra in Tibetan traditions?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

If I may pick your brain further, how is the concept of "one path" itself treated by the Higher Tantric thinkers, if generalization is even possible?

Malcolm wrote:

Meaning, that the goal of all buddhist paths is the same. It does not mean that all buddhists paths will get one to that goal.

FiveSkandhas said:

Aha!

So is it considered impossible to reach the highest levels of achievement through East Asian Mahayana in general?

Malcolm wrote:

Generally speaking, there are buddhas, and then there are samyaksambuddhas. Tenth stage bodhisattvas are buddhas, but they are not samyaksambuddhas. So, in late Indian Mahāyāna thinking, there are levels of buddhahood.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 11th, 2022 at 12:00 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Queequeg said:

Boris Johnson did an awesome cameo.

Malcolm wrote:

BJ: "How are you?"

VZ: "You know how I am."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 11th, 2022 at 12:07 AM

Title: Re: "Radical" Ekayāna and the liberation of non-Buddhists?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Can we then conclude, for example, that a virtuous practitioner of Christianity, Islam, Judaism, or Hinduism could in fact achieve Buddhist liberation through their faith? And based on the Ksitigarbha-related Sutra, could we conceive of, say, Shakyamuni Buddha taking on the form of Christ and saving (or at least "helping") a Christian worshipping what he believes to be Christ?

Understand, I am not a perennialist by nature. I don't generally harbor the view that "all religions lead to the same place." However, the above quotes are thought-provoking.

What does Dharma Wheel think?

Malcolm wrote:

I don't know what others think, but the "vehicles of samsara" are called that for a reason. There is no possibility that someone with wrong view can achieve liberation in this life without abandoning that wrong view, and pratyekabuddha liberation is not possible while the Buddha's doctrine is in the world.

FiveSkandhas said:

Out of curiosity, how do you feel about Zen claims of liberation arising from someone hearing a chestnut drop on the courtyard stones, awakening suddenly after months of sweaty zazen or koan work? Do you consider "real" liberation in a non retrogressive sense is possible at all in such scenarios, as frequently claimed by Zen?

Malcolm wrote:

People use terms like "liberation," "enlightenment," and so on, very promiscuously. If hearing the sound of a chestnut dropping causes such a person to realize emptiness and thus, authentic bodhi, no problem. Of course, then we open a different can of worms of semantic interpretation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 11th, 2022 at 12:11 AM

Title: Re: "Radical" Ekayāna and the liberation of non-Buddhists?

Content:

Queequeg said:

Zhili, one of the later Tiantai patriarchs went some radical places with this Ekayana idea. Ziporyn wrote a study on this. Basically, all paths, even ones that appear as evil, lead to Buddhahood. Not necessarily because evil leads to awakening, but my sense is that there is a self-correcting tendency in Buddhanature that tends to Buddhahood.

Malcolm wrote:

Tathāgatagarbha is not an agent. If it were, it would just be another incorrect view of a permanent self.

Queequeg said:

Yes. There is no sense of agency in this notion of Buddhanature, just as a pool of water becomes placid when the wind stops blowing; just as a wall hits a thrown ball with the same force. Buddhanature, in one aspect, is the liberative tendency/capacity in all activity that irrepressibly 'expresses' in due course if one is turned on to the Buddha nature and stops agitating. Hence the need for shamatha practice. Vipashyana follows with the practice of clarity. Like the sky and light.

These are Zhiyi views.

Malcolm wrote:

As you know, I generally take the sutra-based tathāgatagarbha teachings as a palliative for people who have no confidence in emptiness.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 11th, 2022 at 1:41 AM

Title: Re: "Radical" Ekayāna and the liberation of non-Buddhists?

Content:

Queequeg said:

What do you have in mind as to Tathagatagarbha? My understanding of tathagatagarbha is that it does not deviate from teachings on emptiness, or perhaps more comprehensively, madhyamaka.

Malcolm wrote:

Tathāgatagarbha is just a name for the innate purity of consciousness, which when realized is called "dharmakāya." It's synonyms are luminosity (prabhāśvara) and so on. Some people cannot relate to emptiness, it scares them, so we teach them about the innate purity of consciousness until they can deal with the ultimate view.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 11th, 2022 at 7:48 PM

Title: Re: "Radical" Ekayāna and the liberation of non-Buddhists?

Content:

muni said:

compassion does not have the power to remove afflictions. Liberation is freedom from afflictions. Compassion can only lead to birth in higher realms.

Compassion without Wisdom, that you probably mean. /

Malcolm wrote:
I mean what I said.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, April 11th, 2022 at 9:53 PM
Title: Re: "Radical" Ekayāna and the liberation of non-Buddhists?
Content:
Malcolm wrote:

As you know, I generally take the sutra-based tathāgatagarbha teachings as a palliative for people who have no confidence in emptiness.

Anders said:
For the sake of contrast, how does tantra-based tathāgatagarbha differ?

Malcolm wrote:
It's related to one's plumbing.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, April 11th, 2022 at 11:14 PM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Shinjin said:
They should just concede eastern ukraine to the commies/fascists. Put an end to this bloodshed.

Malcolm wrote:
Absolutely not. Ukraine should settle for nothing short of a complete withdrawal from Eastern Ukraine and Crimea. They cannot concede anything. If they do, Putin will be back in two years.

Look, the reason why the US is better at war than anyone else is that we have been at war continuously from the end of WWII until now. Our soldiers are the best in the world because they have the most combat experience, and they are professionals. The Russians on the other hand suck at war, because they have not actually fought a ground war since the 1980's (the same is true of China, BTW, they have no combat experience). The Russians are only good at terror bombing and intimidating civilians with with "security forces."

The reason the Ukraine is doing so well is that we trained them, from 2014 onward. But the Russians are not stupid, and they will adapt their strategy and tactics the next time around. So we can't give them a next time around.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 11th, 2022 at 11:19 PM

Title: Re: Agamas in Mahayana

Content:

DNS said:

So are the Agamas considered Mahayana texts?

Malcolm wrote:

They are śrāvakayāna texts, the Sarvāstivādin equivalent of the Nikayas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 11th, 2022 at 11:33 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Shinjin said:

Maybe western ukraine can be given nato membership? Putin will not touch them if they do.

Malcolm wrote:

That is not what Ukrainians want. Ukraine is a sovereign state. Their borders were defined by treaty, and recognized internationally during the split-up of the USSR. They are a member of the UN. They want full Russian withdrawal, and everyday the Russians rain brutality upon their heads, everyday it becomes more difficult for the Ukrainians make any concession to Russian demands. And they should not make any concessions anyway, IMO.

Don't believe the nonsense the far-left press is printing. People like Glenn Greenwald are actually backing a far-right candidate in France, Le Pen, because her social policies are "to the left" of Macron's.

Secular, liberal democracy is a rare and good thing. Don't given in to the illiberal autocrats who would undermine it. By the fall, Ukraine may be in the EU. Sweden and Finland are joining NATO. If Ukraine wins their war, and by all rights, it looks like they will as long as the West keeps supplying training and weapons, then they can join NATO too, as they should.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 11th, 2022 at 11:36 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Norwegian said:

Ukraine needs all the help they can get. And I wish that help included a no-fly zone and NATO into Ukraine right now. Ukraine needs EU and NATO membership as soon as possible. Putin must lose this war. Sweden and Finland are on their way to NATO membership. Then there's Moldova and Georgia, who should also join.

Malcolm wrote:

Ukraine cannot join NATO while they are in a war. Putin has lost the first part of this war. His total defeat must happen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 11th, 2022 at 11:41 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Norwegian said:

Ukraine needs all the help they can get. And I wish that help included a no-fly zone and NATO into Ukraine right now. Ukraine needs EU and NATO membership as soon as possible. Putin must lose this war. Sweden and Finland are on their way to NATO membership. Then there's Moldova and Georgia, who should also join.

Malcolm wrote:

Ukraine cannot join NATO while they are in a war. Putin has lost of first part of this war. His total defeat must happen.

Norwegian said:

Yes, and that is why we must help them with weapons, intelligence, food, resources, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

Of course. Liberal democracies must support one another, and also support those nations who aspire to become liberal democracies. A retreat from liberal internationalism is a grave error.

People like Putin, etc., regard secular, global liberalization to be a bad thing. Ergo, it must be a very good thing indeed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 12th, 2022 at 12:25 AM

Title: Re: Agamas in Mahayana

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

They are śrāvakayāna texts, the Sarvāstivādin equivalent of the Nikayas.

DNS said:

Okay, then perhaps could be considered pre-cursors to the Mahayana texts.

Malcolm wrote:

More like raw material some Mahāyāna authors reworked into Mahāyāna sutras.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 12th, 2022 at 2:59 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Look, the reason why the US is better at war than anyone else is that we have been at war continuously from the end of WWII until now. Our soldiers are the best in the world because they have the most combat experience, and they are professionals.

Queequeg said:

This is a dubious distinction. Having the Gates of Janus open so long for some shitty wars troubles me as a citizen. That said, it has kept our military sharp.

Malcolm wrote:

The US needs to stop apologizing. Compared to Russia and China, in the post WWII period, we have been Boy Scouts.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 12th, 2022 at 3:32 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 12th, 2022 at 3:50 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 12th, 2022 at 4:48 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 12th, 2022 at 5:37 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Queequeg said:

Dick Cheney! What did you do to Malcolm?!!!

Malcolm wrote:

Frankly, I got tired of the douches on Facebook who, every time one says "Russia invaded Ukraine," they say, "What about the US..."

There is no comparison. Even Fallujah, which was the worst fighting of the Iraq war, was a walk in the park compared to Mariupol, etc., which lasted six weeks, there were 107 allied troops killed, 613 wounded. 1200-2000 Al Qaeda, etc., killed, 1500 captured. Civilian casualties were 600-800.

The Russians by contrast have lost 25k soldiers in six weeks, upwards of 60,000 wounded, and killed tens of thousands of Ukrainians.

So frankly, I am just tired of apologizing for the US.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 12th, 2022 at 9:08 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Norwegian said:

The way they are describing the soldiers in terms of things said and their reactions, is telling of just what kind of soldiers Putin are using. Completely uneducated, terribly poor, and with next to no training, and with zero respect for civilians.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, which is sad commentary on Russia's priorities.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 12th, 2022 at 8:24 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

conebeckham said:

Kongtrul wrote a marriage ceremony text; in Sikkim, at least, it is quite common to have some sort of Yangkuk done for a marriage blessing. Konchok Chidu is quite commonly used for this purpose: but it is not a "marriage rite" in the Western sense.

Malcolm wrote:

Yang gug (summing prosperity) is a pre Buddhist rite. I mentioned that There were Tibetan cultural rituals for these kinds of life events.

conebeckham said:

Sure, all those rituals come from pre-Buddhist Himalayan traditions I think. But the fact is that they are incorporated into “Buddhist ritual” and have been for centuries. Heck, the Rinchen Terdzo is full of all sorts of “mundane siddhi” and various “worldly aim” practices. Interestingly you won’t find them in most Sarma sadhanas—we have to look to the Nyingmapas, householder lineages, etc. For that stuff. But saying these things are not a part of “Dharma practice” at this time is not really accurate.

Malcolm wrote:

There is not a single marriage ritual in the whole of the RT.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 12th, 2022 at 10:08 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

conebeckham said:

But it’s a fact that in traditional Vajrayana cultures there are pujas done in relation to weddings. Not the way we think of a marriage ceremony, of course.....

Malcolm wrote:

Only for aristocrats. The common people just move in with each other. Maybe a party is thrown.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 12th, 2022 at 10:15 PM

Title: Re: "Radical" Ekayāna and the liberation of non-Buddhists?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Remember, 84000 Dharma Doors. I don't recall anything about some of them taking you to allegedly more exalted places than others.

Malcolm wrote:

84,000 dharma doors refers to 21,000 dharmas of vinaya, 21,000 dharmas of sūtra, 21,000 dharmas of abhidharma, and 21,000 mixed dharmas as antidotes for desire, anger, and ignorance, as well as mixed afflictions.

From a Mahāyāna point of view, vinaya and abhidharma are provisional. According to Nāgārjuna, śrāvaka sūtras do not teach the bodhisattva path and the means to attain buddhahood.

From the point of view of secret mantra, common Mahāyāna does not teach the path of attaining buddhahood in a single lifetime, soup to nuts.

Etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 12th, 2022 at 10:51 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

conebeckham said:

But it's a fact that in traditional Vajrayana cultures there are pujas done in relation to weddings. Not the way we think of a marriage ceremony, of course.....

Malcolm wrote:

Only for aristocrats. The common people just move in with each other. Maybe a party is thrown.

conebeckham said:

Malcolm, in my experience this is not the case. At least in Bhutan and Sikkim, puja happens. It may not be a "wedding ceremony," but I have attended a few here where I am at present (Sikkim) over the years. And my own marriage was "consecrated," sort of, via Konchok Chidu.

Malcolm wrote:

Ok.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 13th, 2022 at 12:10 AM

Title: Re: Innate sense of self and gender identity

Content:

droogiefret said:

I am not a gender identity ideology fan. I did, however, want people's opinions on the gender identity aspect. Were people's sense of self gendered and was this true for everyone? I am now fairly confident that the sense of self is not necessarily gendered - it could be and clearly is for some.

Malcolm wrote:

Gender is an illusion, albeit, a powerful one:

Śāriputra: Goddess, what prevents you from transforming yourself out of your female state?

Goddess: Although I have sought my "female state" for these twelve years, I have not yet found it. Reverend Śāriputra, if a magician were to incarnate a woman by magic, would you ask her, "What prevents you from transforming yourself out of your female state?"

Śāriputra: No! Such a woman would not really exist, so what would there be to transform?

Goddess: Just so, reverend Śāriputra, all things do not really exist. Now, would you think, “What prevents one whose nature is that of a magical incarnation from transforming herself out of her female state?”

Thereupon, the goddess employed her magical power to cause the elder Śāriputra to appear in her form and to cause herself to appear in his form. Then the goddess, transformed into Śāriputra, said to Śāriputra, transformed into a goddess, “Reverend Śāriputra, what prevents you from transforming yourself out of your female state?”

And Śāriputra, transformed into the goddess, replied, “I no longer appear in the form of a male! My body has changed into the body of a woman! I do not know what to transform!”

The goddess continued, “If the elder could again change out of the female state, then all women could also change out of their female states. All women appear in the form of women in just the same way as the elder appears in the form of a woman. While they are not women in reality, they appear in the form of women. With this in mind, the Buddha said, ‘In all things, there is neither male nor female.’ ”

Then, the goddess released her magical power and each returned to his ordinary form. She then said to him, “Reverend Śāriputra, what have you done with your female form?”

https://84000.co/doc/vimalakirti/Vimalakirti%20Book_E_screen-170724.pdf

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 13th, 2022 at 12:45 AM

Title: Re: Innate sense of self and gender identity

Content:

droogiefret said:

I recently read the personal account of a cross dresser who found that their sexual orientation changed as they changed their appearance.

Malcolm wrote:

I have heard of gay men who became transwomen suddenly finding themselves attracted to cisgendered women, and vice versa.

Human beings are strange.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 13th, 2022 at 1:09 AM

Title: Re: Innate sense of self and gender identity

Content:

droogiefret said:

On your other point, I had no idea that 'Gender Identity Ideology' was a loaded term.

Malcolm wrote:

We live in the age of weapons, all terms are loaded and loaded.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 13th, 2022 at 1:15 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

“What is happening in Ukraine is a tragedy,” Mr. Putin said in a news conference after a meeting at the spaceport with President Aleksandr Lukashenko of Belarus, his closest international ally. “They just didn’t leave us a choice. There was no choice.”

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 13th, 2022 at 2:05 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 13th, 2022 at 2:39 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 13th, 2022 at 4:24 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Hey Matthias:

This is in your town.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 13th, 2022 at 4:32 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 13th, 2022 at 6:03 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Queequeg said:

No doubt pieces are moving into position and have been for a while now.

Malcolm wrote:

And still moving:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 13th, 2022 at 6:24 AM

Title: Re: Innate sense of self and gender identity

Content:

KathyLauren said:

At least the claim for a biological basis is on solid evidence-based scientific footing.

Malcolm wrote:

Right down to the nadis in our bodies. But that is just a karmic thing, a fact of embodiment. The mind has no gender.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 13th, 2022 at 6:38 AM

Title: Re: "Radical" Ekayāna and the liberation of non-Buddhists?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Thought provoking posts as usual, Malcolm-sensei.

However, I just can't quite bring myself to cavalierly and universally dismiss nearly 2000 years of profound East Asian doctrine and practice as somehow universally "inferior" to what goes on in the Himalayas. Perhaps you are fine with such decisive conclusions about it all, but for good or ill I personally am not.

Malcolm wrote:

You've misrepresented what I have said.

People land in the school for which they have karmic predispositions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 13th, 2022 at 8:43 PM

Title: Re: "Radical" Ekayāna and the liberation of non-Buddhists?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

You noted above that according to your path, Mahayana is not sufficient to reach the state of a Samyuksambuddha "level".

Malcolm wrote:

"In a single lifetime..." This is standard Mahayana doxology itself. This is why it takes so much courage to traverse the common Mahayana path.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 13th, 2022 at 8:50 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

conebeckham said:

Whether or not American Buddhism will permeate culture, I am not sure—and frankly it will take a century. I just hope this “academic discussion panel” Buddhism is an outlier. I think nothing kills the true essence of a faith—I mean, there is a place for this sort of thing, but if it becomes dominant expression, we will all be wishing for “empty rituals.”

Malcolm wrote:

America is the best thing that ever happened to Buddhism. It won't have to go through the process of state-adoption, like every Buddhist movement before it in history, and it will thrive in our open society.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 13th, 2022 at 10:35 PM

Title: Re: New History of Religions special issue on Mahāyāna sūtras

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Sounds interesting.

I think we should read the articles and address each individually.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't know. I like Wedermyer as a person, having met him and shared drinks. He is smart. Drews (whom I never met) on the other hand is a bore, and comes up with stunning conclusions like this one:

Rather than being the product of a preexisting bodhisattva tradition, it thus seems most likely that Mahāyāna sūtras were responsible for bringing a bodhisattva tradition into existence for the first time.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 13th, 2022 at 10:39 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

So Russia in general tends not to have happy memories of the early 90s and the clammy embrace of global capitalism.

Malcolm wrote:

It's more complicated than the "Blame the West for Russia's Troubles" narrative.

For example:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 13th, 2022 at 10:49 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Meanwhile, American Progressives lose the plot completely:

<https://www.young4ky.com>

This guy should never be allowed anywhere near Congress.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 13th, 2022 at 10:53 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Queequeg said:

I grok. I don't know how we get there.

Malcolm wrote:

One person at a time whose karma for a precious human birth ripens.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 13th, 2022 at 11:27 PM

Title: Re: New History of Religions special issue on Mahāyāna sūtras

Content:

Leo Rivers said:

About Drew's statement.... wow.

Maybe he defined the later Jatakas as proto- Māhayāna Suttas.

Hmmnnnn...

Malcolm wrote:

You have to read the article. Basically, he argues, correctly, that the bar was set so high in the nikaya and agama tradition that no one could have thought of themselves as bodhisattva until the advent of sutras like the Aṣṭasāhasrikā. However, this is obvious from traditional Mahāyāna accounts as well, where it is fully acknowledged that Mahāyāna sūtras only began to circulate hundreds of years after the Buddha's passing, having been gathered and arranged in S. India by Mañjuśrī, etc., and then "published."

For example, he points out that the reason one knows one is an irreversible bodhisattva is that one when one hears a text like Aṣṭasāhasrikā, one is not afraid, one sheds tears upon the mention of emptiness, and so on. All these things occurred for me personally, when I first read the Aṣṭasāhasrikā. It moved me in a way that Nāgārjuna did not, though Nāgārjuna blew me away at 24 years of age and set me firmly on this path. Also Nāgārjuna points out in the Ratnavali that the agamas do not teach the bodhisattva path, well, because they do not. If one wants to follow the bodhisattva path, one must follow the Mahāyāna.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 14th, 2022 at 1:33 AM

Title: Back in the USA...

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 14th, 2022 at 1:41 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

reiun said:

Halfway through as of today . . . "Free, live": Anyone attend?

Malcolm wrote:

Definitely not. Why would I participate in a web conference from a "university" established by a Tibetan man who wanted to establish a monarchy? That could not be a more un-American if one tried.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 14th, 2022 at 2:23 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Shinjin said:

Democrats would be just as desperate and would stoop down to any level to gain power.

Malcolm wrote:

Not really. This is just a narrative right wing people like spin to salve their own consciences. (cue white water, Benghazi, and a whole host of supposed Democratic "crimes"). Meanwhile:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 14th, 2022 at 2:36 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 14th, 2022 at 2:51 AM

Title: Re: Bodhisattva's austerities in the Agamas; going naked, letting his grow etc.

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Well there is a lot I could say, including expanding on my previous post; however for the moment we can at least say that Buddhist & Bönpo monks (in all traditions as far as I'm aware) are usually doing intermittent-fasting for about 17-20 hours a day on average, and not usually eating anything after solar noon.

Malcolm wrote:

Umm, as far as Tibetan Buddhist monks go, that is pretty much a fantasy. I have no idea about Bonpos.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 14th, 2022 at 3:09 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

The Democrats have their sleaze, but the GOP has always been way better at being gangster.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, the GOP has, from the beginning, been the business party.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 14th, 2022 at 5:16 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

An ICBM salvo in the magickal war for Ukraine. Mara, the Ukrainian goddess of harvests, winter, death, nightmares, and the underworld:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 14th, 2022 at 5:23 AM

Title: Re: Bodhisattva's austerities in the Agamas; going naked, letting his grow etc.

Content:

Sādhaka said:

for the moment we can at least say that Buddhist & Bönpo monks (in all traditions as far as I'm aware) are usually doing intermittent-fasting for about 17-20 hours a day on average, and not usually eating anything after solar noon.

Astus said:

It is not called fasting but it is one of the precepts for monastics.

“Mendicants, I eat my food in one sitting per day. Doing so, I find that I’m healthy and well, nimble, strong, and living comfortably. You too should eat your food in one sitting per day. Doing so, you’ll find that you’re healthy and well, nimble, strong, and living comfortably.”

(<https://suttacentral.net/mn65/en/sujato>)

It's a precept also observed by lay people during uposatha/sabbath:

‘As long as they live, the perfected ones eat in one part of the day, abstaining from eating at night and from food at the wrong time. I, too, for this day and night will eat in one part of the day, abstaining from eating at night and food at the wrong time. I will observe the sabbath by doing as the perfected ones do in this respect.’

(<https://suttacentral.net/an3.70/en/sujato>, <https://suttacentral.net/an8.41/en/sujato>)

Malcolm wrote:

Much prefer the witches sabbath, getting naked in the moonlight, dancing around fires, broomsticks...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 14th, 2022 at 7:49 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

The Democrats have their sleaze, but the GOP has always been way better at being gangster.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, the GOP has, from the beginning, been the business party.

Shinjin said:

Democrats are a business party too.

Malcolm wrote:

Not even close.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 14th, 2022 at 9:42 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Norwegian said:

This is the Russian cruiser "Moskva":

It was the ship that the Ukrainian soldiers on Snake Island told to go F itself.

It is now sinking, after Ukraine attacked it.

<https://www.reuters.com/world/europe/russia-says-flagship-black-sea-fleet-badly-damaged-by-blast-2022-04-14/>

Malcolm wrote:

Yup.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 14th, 2022 at 9:50 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Shinjin said:

Democrats are a business party too.

Malcolm wrote:

Not even close.

Shinjin said:

Check out the link I posted above. It's your choice if you want to deny the facts.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, all democrats are billionaires...

If it were true as you say, there would be no reason for GOP bitching about taxes, regulation, etc.

But I suppose you can say the GOP is the dumb business party and the Dems are the smart business party, seeing as how the Dems clean GOP messes over and over again, and right the economy (and yes the present state of affairs is a GOP mess).

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 14th, 2022 at 10:56 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 14th, 2022 at 10:59 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

KristenM said:

Serious question, why doesn't Russia want to join the West, EU, NATO, etc and just get along with everybody? It seems better for their own economic interests to have peace and stability. I don't get it.

Queequeg said:

To join the West, they couldn't be so thuggish and lazy. They'd have to actually raise a population of knowledge workers, compensate them and give them power. Could you imagine Putin being able to hold power with armies of lawyers, accountants, MBAs, engineers, researchers, and investors with the freedom to try and bring complex products to market? No way. And where would they start? They'd have to try and make cars to compete with Toyota and mobile phones to compete with Apple. They're sooooooooooooooooooooooooooooo far behind in developing the human capital for that. They want the prestige of a world power without actually doing what needs to be done to be a modern super power. They won't do the drudgery it takes for decades to build up design and manufacturing capacity and knowhow. That stuff is a culture and needs to be incubated and cultivated.

KristenM said:

Sounds harsh, but rings true. Google was created in the US by a Russian exile's child. Hard to imagine that situation being reversed. They have a lot of smart people in Russia, but they tend to want to go work where they will be allowed to innovate without excessive government control.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 14th, 2022 at 11:04 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

The Democrats have their sleaze, but the GOP has always been way better at being gangster.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, the GOP has, from the beginning, been the business party.

KristenM said:

What about Abe Lincoln? I thought they were the anti-slavery party in the beginning.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, because northern businesses wanted free labor over slave labor. It wasn't a moral thing as much as a business thing. Heather Cox Richardson writes about this extensively.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 14th, 2022 at 7:57 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

KristenM said:

A quick search came up with this. Maybe it's be misleading but it seems to say Richardson had some positive remarks on the Republican party of Lincoln, initially.

Malcolm wrote:

Oh, indeed she does, but not with rose-colored glasses. She points out that the pre-civil war debate of free vs. slave labor was not entirely altruistic.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 14th, 2022 at 8:01 PM

Title: Re: Bodhisattva's austerities in the Agamas; going naked, letting his grow etc.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Much prefer the witches sabbath, getting naked in the moonlight, dancing around fires, broomsticks...

Astus said:

Upasatha and ganacakra are not exclusive, are they? (reminds me of <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=rYJQGSapz-A>)

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 14th, 2022 at 11:03 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Shinjin said:

Democrats, party of working class. What a joke.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't see the GOP passing laws to defend unions, provide daycare, provide universal healthcare, infrastructure, etc. Instead, the GOP just passes laws to suck wealth up to the one percent, dismantle unions, deny healthcare, defund social security, etc. etc.

Your view of American politics is pretty skewed, friend.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 14th, 2022 at 11:06 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

For 100 years the South, though conservative, was D. because Lincoln had been R. They were called "Dixiecrats".

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, and they voted with the northern Republicans most of the time. Meanwhile, southern Republicans voted with the Northern Democrats most of the time.

The Northern Democrats were, for the longest time, the party of farmers and mill workers, as opposed to the GOP, the party of merchants and businessmen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 14th, 2022 at 11:38 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 14th, 2022 at 11:44 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Shinjin said:

Democrats, party of working class. What a joke.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't see the GOP passing laws to defend unions, provide daycare, provide universal healthcare, infrastructure, etc. Instead, the GOP just passes laws to suck wealth up to the one percent, dismantle unions, deny healthcare, defund social security, etc. etc.

Your view of American politics is pretty skewed, friend.

Shinjin said:

I'm not defending the GOP but the Dems are a mess. I think Bernie would of fixed a lot of the issues.

Malcolm wrote:

You do realize that Bernie votes with the Democrats 95% of the time?

I am a Berniecrat.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 15th, 2022 at 12:24 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Good thread of naval implications of losing the Moscow for Russia:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 15th, 2022 at 2:12 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

I am a Berniecrat.

Svalaksana said:

Given your overt fondness for HRC, I thought you were a bit of a Berniesceptic.

Malcolm wrote:

Clinton would have made a fine president. As the meme goes, it turns out she was right about everything. I also voted for her when Bernie asked us to.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 15th, 2022 at 2:38 AM

Title: Re: Bhikkhu Analayo on Respecting the Different Buddhist Traditions

Content:

Arnoud said:

Those same crazies continue to tear up Analayo on different fora.

Malcolm wrote:

Imagine how they find Dzogchen?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 15th, 2022 at 2:47 AM

Title: Re: Bhikkhu Analayo on Respecting the Different Buddhist Traditions

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

When I was a Theravadan Monk in my early twenties the Monastery was fundamentalist Theravadan with a strong superiority conceit I think it was because in order to practice it you needed to believe in it absolutely.

The one way conceit.

Malcolm wrote:

"Alice laughed. 'There's no use trying,' she said. 'One can't believe impossible things.'

I daresay you haven't had much practice,' said the Queen. 'When I was your age, I always did it for half-an-hour a day. Why, sometimes I've believed as many as six impossible things before breakfast. There goes the shawl again!'"

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 15th, 2022 at 4:25 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Yankee Doodle Dharma. Come on. The US is not the only open society or the only democracy. There are almost 3 billion people living in democracies. I do not sympathize with this patriotism. It's silly.

Malcolm wrote:

Our country, like it or not, is the founding nation of modern, liberal democracy. The international language of Buddhism is now English, not the English of the Crown, but American English.

Only 6.4 percent of the world population live in full democracies; that's only 21 countries and just over 500 million people. 66% of those people live in the USA, with the other 24 percent spread around the other 20 countries. The best chance Buddhism has is in these 21 countries, which have adopted the principles of liberal democracy, courtesy of the American Revolution. The vast majority of those democracies are less than 150 years old.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 15th, 2022 at 6:38 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Yankee Doodle Dharma. Come on. The US is not the only open society or the only democracy. There are almost 3 billion people living in democracies. I do not sympathize with this patriotism. It's silly.

Malcolm wrote:

Our country, like it or not, is the founding nation of modern, liberal democracy. The international language of Buddhism is now English, not the English of the Crown, but American English.

Only 6.4 percent of the world population live in full democracies; that's only 21 countries and just over 500 million people. 66% of those people live in the USA, with the other 24 percent spread around the other 20 countries. The best chance Buddhism has is in these 21 countries, which have adopted the principles of liberal democracy, courtesy of the American Revolution. The vast majority of those democracies are less than 150 years old.

Könchok Thrinley said:

Sure let's ignore the huge amount of work that was done for transmitting buddhadharma to the west in Germany, Austria, France, Great Britain, Italy, Australia...

Malcolm wrote:

The most credit here goes to the English, then the French, etc. However, my point still stands.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 15th, 2022 at 10:32 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Svalaksana said:

Given your overt fondness for HRC, I thought you were a bit of a Berniesceptic.

Malcolm wrote:

Clinton would have made a fine president. As the meme goes, it turns out she was right about everything. I also voted for her when Bernie asked us to.

Miorita said:

Nice!

When she was First Lady, she wouldn't even see us. We were invisible.
She stopped in Oak Park and then clicked her heels and was back at the White House.

Malcolm wrote:
Who is "we"?

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, April 15th, 2022 at 7:17 PM
Title: Re: Back in the USA...
Content:

Miorita said:
Nice!

When she was First Lady, she wouldn't even see us. We were invisible.
She stopped in Oak Park and then clicked her heels and was back at the White House.

Malcolm wrote:
Who is "we"?

Miorita said:
"We" were at the time approx. 2.8 mil. city dwellers, without counting the suburbs.
The F4, fresh out of the scandal, raised her nose and went her way.

Malcolm wrote:
You mean in New York?

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, April 15th, 2022 at 7:22 PM
Title: Re: another question about rebirth
Content:

clyde said:
A question arose for me about how others understand those terms. Do you understand "a process of being conscious" (or any other such term) as without parts or compound with parts?

Malcolm wrote:
The mind stream is a rosary of moments, empty and unceasing. It doesn't cease even in buddhahood, but rebirth ceases because of liberation from afflictions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 15th, 2022 at 7:44 PM

Title: Re: another question about rebirth

Content:

clyde said:

P.S: I agree with Bhikkhu Analayo when he states that while he is “sympathetic to the idea of rebirth,” he doesn’t view rebirth as a crucial issue and if rebirth wasn’t true (or for me, if my current understanding wasn’t true), it “would not result in a major change in my personal lifestyle and practice.”

Malcolm wrote:

As already pointed out, and as Analayo points out, rebirth is the central issue the Buddha sought to address.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 15th, 2022 at 11:24 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Yankee Doodle Dharma. Come on. The US is not the only open society or the only democracy. There are almost 3 billion people living in democracies. I do not sympathize with this patriotism. It's silly.

Malcolm wrote:

Our country, like it or not, is the founding nation of modern, liberal democracy. The international language of Buddhism is now English, not the English of the Crown, but American English.

Only 6.4 percent of the world population live in full democracies; that's only 21 countries and just over 500 million people. 66% of those people live in the USA, with the other 24 percent spread around the other 20 countries. The best chance Buddhism has is in these 21 countries, which have adopted the principles of liberal democracy, courtesy of the American Revolution. The vast majority of those democracies are less than 150 years old.

Crazywisdom said:

The French Revolution was instrumental. We have England to thank for spreading English over the world.

Malcolm wrote:

France didn't manage to become a full democracy for a hundred years after the revolution. Napoleon put the wrench in that. Nevertheless, the French Revolution was responsible for gelling some of the ideas we equate with liberal democracy today, that is a historical fact.

Crazywisdom said:

India is a full democracy and it's the largest one with 1,3 billion, thanks to Gandhi.

Malcolm wrote:

India is not a full democracy. It is considered a flawed democracy.

So you're Yankee Doodle Dharma fetish is just odd. But if you think this will be the best thing for Dharma in the history of dharma great. Folks are doing fine in Spanish and Portuguese as well.

There is a deficit of books translated into Portuguese and Spanish.

Crazywisdom said:

If India is not a democracy to you then I am sorry but you're biased.

Malcolm wrote:

India, as mentioned above, is a flawed democracy. It is dominated by a political party (BJP) that espouses Hindu nationalism (Hindutva), and regularly institutes discriminatory policies towards Muslims and other religious minorities.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Democracy_Index

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 15th, 2022 at 11:31 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

I agree. This is true. But that's economic. I'm not sure why we have to join this with the idea America invented democracy.

Malcolm wrote:

What we understand today as "democracy" was forged in the fire of the American revolution. Essentially, all states have systems of transferring power. Democracy, like Monarchy, etc., is just one of those systems. It also happens to be the rarest form of government in history. One thing you will notice is that liberal democracies never invade or fight wars with other liberal democracies. Liberal democratic countries tend to stick together.

My argument is simple-- liberal democracy in general is the ideal government under which Dharma can flourish. That does not mean that we have to have elections in sanghas, etc. It just means that liberal democracies are places where Buddhists enjoy the most freedom. This is very clear when you examine the state of Buddhism in the world today.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 16th, 2022 at 1:00 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

The US is also considered a flawed democracy.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it isn't, though it's true that our institutions have taken some hits recently. That just makes it all the more important to give a voice in support of it.

Elections don't make a democracy. It's how power is transferred that defines a democratic state.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 16th, 2022 at 1:03 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Queequeg said:

Well. All I can say is we have the Freedoms and Advantages here. Hope you all, wherever you are, do, too. I look forward to a robust flowering of Dharma around the world, to see the variety of blossoms from the different soils.

Crazywisdom said:

In a lot of ways there's a lot more freedom in Brazil.

Malcolm wrote:

Lawlessness, or weak law enforcement is often equated with "freedom." Mexico is also more "free." But these are countries where men rule, rather than laws.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 16th, 2022 at 7:30 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Whatever his flaws, one thing Bernie understood is that the left cannot win a meaningful victory just with the culture war stuff in this country as it is now, it is simply too conservative. However, moderate Dems climb on board with that stuff, but not so much on the economic inequality thing.

The bizarro-world effect of this is that it is usually now the Trumpian right who utilize and distort anger about "elites" to their own ends, make false promises about infrastructure and prosperity, etc. Then the Dems mostly just run on "we are not this guy, btw black and lgbt people are cool".

The whole deal is just sad.

Malcolm wrote:

The culture wars in the US, JD, have always been launched by white supremacists.

Also, the far left is plenty pissed off by “elites.” What we are witnessing now is a convergence of right wing and left wing illiberalism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 16th, 2022 at 9:03 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I think you are possibly just becoming more conservative.

Malcolm wrote:

Not really. I am an American liberal, always have been.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 16th, 2022 at 9:06 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Whatever his flaws, one thing Bernie understood is that the left cannot win a meaningful victory just with the culture war stuff in this country as it is now, it is simply too conservative. However, moderate Dems climb on board with that stuff, but not so much on the economic inequality thing.

The bizarro-world effect of this is that it is usually now the Trumpian right who utilize and distort anger about “elites” to their own ends, make false promises about infrastructure and prosperity, etc. Then the Dems mostly just run on “we are not this guy, btw black and lgbt people are cool”.

The whole deal is just sad.

Shinjin said:

And the best they could do was pick a leader who half the time doesn't know where he is or what he is saying. Democrats are toast.

Malcolm wrote:

Biden knows exactly what he is saying, when he says it.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, April 16th, 2022 at 7:26 PM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, April 16th, 2022 at 8:01 PM
Title: Re: another question about rebirth
Content:
clyde said:
"The mind stream is a rosary of moments" is poetic, but what are those empty and unceasing moments composed of?

Malcolm wrote:
Partless moments of consciousness.

Consciousness is compounded.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, April 16th, 2022 at 9:37 PM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, April 16th, 2022 at 10:32 PM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Norwegian said:
Yeah that's a groan and a half seeing Chomsky's take.

PeterC said:
It's a very disappointing comment from someone who really should know better. The obvious response is: so who, then, guarantees Ukraine's safety from future invasions?

Malcolm wrote:
Chomsky has always been disappointing. All he has ever done is contribute talking points to people who really should know better.

The infection of "realism" into international diplomacy has never gone well. It has always been a tacit admission that "might makes right."

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, April 16th, 2022 at 10:39 PM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:

Queequeg said:
Its unbelievable the catastrophe that is unfolding here.

Obviously, this is dangerous for the world because somewhere in that collapsing house they have nukes.

Unf*cking believable.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, April 16th, 2022 at 11:12 PM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
The infection of "realism" into international diplomacy has never gone well. It has always been a tacit admission that "might makes right."

PeterC said:
This generation of "realists" probably never read Hobbes.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, April 16th, 2022 at 11:48 PM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis
Content:
Queequeg said:
I'm concerned about getting sucked into another war which will be much heavier than anything we've been involved in since Viet Nam.

As I wrote, IMHO, Russia is already on the way to collapse. The question is how that collapse plays out over the next few months and years.

What are Ukrainian lives worth to us right now?

Malcolm wrote:
We are an inflection point. If we don't support Ukraine, liberal democracy collapses.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, April 17th, 2022 at 12:00 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Queequeg said:

I'm concerned about getting sucked into another war which will be much heavier than anything we've been involved in since Viet Nam.

As I wrote, IMHO, Russia is already on the way to collapse. The question is how that collapse plays out over the next few months and years.

What are Ukrainian lives worth to us right now?

Malcolm wrote:

We are an inflection point. If we don't support Ukraine, liberal democracy collapses.

Queequeg said:

No. If it collapses, its because of internal factors.

Malcolm wrote:

Not supporting other liberal democracies points to corruption in our own. Trump demonstrated this quite clearly. The Post WWII consensus until the end of the Cold War was based around this idea of liberal democracies sticking together. The way we fended off communist regimes was by supporting other liberal democracies, as well as securing security arrangements with right wing governments, often brutal, who were also allied with us against the communists.

The past 16 years have shown that the West, as a whole, erred in believing that the either of the (major) former communist countries (UUSR, PRC) had any interest in liberalism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 17th, 2022 at 12:05 AM

Title: Re: another question about rebirth

Content:

clyde said:

"The mind stream is a rosary of moments" is poetic, but what are those empty and unceasing moments composed of?

Malcolm wrote:

Partless moments of consciousness.

Consciousness is compounded.

windoverwater said:

Are the "partless moments" considered to be compounded or uncompounded?

Malcolm wrote:

Compounded.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 17th, 2022 at 12:41 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Queequeg said:

We will follow their lead.

Malcolm wrote:

It is quite the opposite, actually. The EU, as a whole, would just sit there and do nothing without considerable pressure from us. We have provided that pressure and leadership, and so now they are doing something.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 17th, 2022 at 3:51 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Queequeg said:

This is not a 9-11 situation where the American public went blind with rage and had an appetite for revenge. This is also how a democracy functions. This is the slow, dumb, lazy part.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, and Biden has shown remarkable leadership throughout this whole thing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 17th, 2022 at 4:17 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 17th, 2022 at 11:10 PM

Title: Re: The Tibetan vs. Theravada view on emptiness

Content:

dpcalder said:

Most of my research into Buddhism is on Theravada Buddhism but I'm very interested in the Tibetan views. My understanding of Theravada's notion of emptiness is simply that dependent origination entails that all phenomena result from antecedent causes and conditions and lack an indivisible essence

However, a friend of mine understands emptiness either on a different way or approaches it from a different angle. It is influenced by Nagarjuna's Madhyamaka view but it's kind of hard for me to wrap my mind around what he's saying. Any recommended reading for how to understand Tibetan views? Feel free to contribute your own thoughts as well

Malcolm wrote:

I think your understanding of Theravada emptiness has been influenced by Nāgārjuna.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 17th, 2022 at 11:38 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 18th, 2022 at 6:58 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Queequeg said:

Not judging. Calling it as I see it. Plenty of Americans would sell out Ukraine for a cheaper fill up.

Just how we are.

KristenM said:

By most accounts the US is one of the most philanthropic and generous countries in the world, by far. The US has already given almost 1 billion dollars in aid to Ukraine or more and has no hesitation to keep giving. So I disagree on your take on American people and their priorities.

Scratch that, it's about 2 billion dollars we've given to Ukraine.

<https://www.whitehouse.gov/briefing-room/statements-releases/2022/03/16/fact-sheet-on-u-s-security-assistance-for-ukraine/>

Brunelleschi said:

The US is giving Ukraine money to create another Afghanistan and drain Russia of resources - whether this is good or not can be discussed. It is due to US national interests.

On the other hand, the country will only accept about 100,000 Ukrainian refugees.

Malcolm wrote:

No. The Afghans had no interest in keeping their fledgling democracy alive. The Ukrainians, on the other hand, have been fighting with the Russians for independence for a century.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 18th, 2022 at 8:43 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

It is due to US national interests.

Malcolm wrote:

It is due to the interest of defending liberal democracy, which is indeed a US interest, since liberal democracy must be defended. Whether you realize it or not, this is an existential issue for the US and the EU.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 18th, 2022 at 9:01 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Someone in Russia is saying "It just keeps getting better and better..."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 18th, 2022 at 9:28 PM

Title: The End of Men (I wish it were a parody)

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

And Bromeopathic therapy:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 18th, 2022 at 10:05 PM

Title: Re: The End of Men (I wish it were a parody)

Content:

Sādhaka said:

To be fair, even the perceived-by-many-as-cucky gym chain Planet Fitness has a red light therapy booth:

<https://luxeluminous.com/planet-fitness-total-body-enhancement/>

It can even shake you around while you're in it if you want (for the purpose of moving lymph).

Malcolm wrote:

Right, and the science is that tanning your balls reduces your sperm count. You gotta keep those babies cool and in the shade.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 18th, 2022 at 10:58 PM

Title: Re: The End of Men (I wish it were a parody)

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Hm, I would imagine that both could be true.

In other words, keep them in the cool shade most of the time (and maybe even cold showers or Wim Hoff style ice baths), however that also exposing them to sun and/or infrared for so many minutes a day could also increase T and sperm count.

Malcolm wrote:

Not according to medical science. But you do you. Personally, if guys want to tan their balls its ok with me, less babies, less population, especially of MAGA offspring.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 18th, 2022 at 11:43 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

Can they actually defeat Russia?

Malcolm wrote:

Ukraine has already have defeated Russia in significant battles. I imagine they will continue to do so, given the proper arms, and given the demonstrated Russian incompetence at fighting a war on the ground. If Russians stated goal is to take territory in Ukraine and hold it, they have proven themselves utter failures. If the Russian goal is to pound Ukraine into the ground to create a vassal state like Chechnya, I am certain they will fail at this. Ukraine is country of 44 million (minus refugees). They are clear in their aspirations and goals. They will continue to fight for their freedom as long as they can. Pretty soon, the only option for Putin will be to use tactical nukes or go home. The Russian economy is in a state of free fall. Oil traders are cancelling contracts as of may 15th:

<https://www.businessinsider.in/stock-market/news/worlds-biggest-oil-traders-are-set-> to-cut-out-russian-oil-purchases-from-the-middle-of-may-report-says-/articleshow/90844049.cms

<https://markets.businessinsider.com/news/stocks/worlds-largest-oil-trader-to-completely-phase-out-russian-crude-1031353981>

The main problem right now in the EU is Germany's vacillation and lack of foresight. They should know better. The German population certainly knows better than the German gvt.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 18th, 2022 at 11:56 PM

Title: Re: The End of Men (I wish it were a parody)

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Big talk; but when push comes to shove, leftists are afraid of open debate without censorship, which is more telling than anything.

Malcolm wrote:

People seem to forget the language of the first amendment:

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

So, you don't like the moderation policies of Twitter, then go to Truth Social, where you are forbidden to say anything negative about TFG. The government should not be involved in the policies of these private platforms where they do not break laws, such as laws against kiddie porn, etc.

Complaining about leftists being afraid of open debate is absurd nonsense. The fact is that all the serious conservatives abandoned MAGA world's obsession with bathrooms, testosterone, Qanon conspiracy theories, and so on, and still engage in serious debate with those on the left, as they should.

Many of the debates that people on the far right want to have are basically a waste of time and energy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 19th, 2022 at 12:30 AM

Title: Re: The End of Men (I wish it were a parody)

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Big talk; but when push comes to shove, leftists are afraid of open debate without censorship, which is more telling than anything.

Genjo Conan said:

lol. "Ron DeSantis signs the so-called 'Don't Say Gay' bill : NPR"

<https://www.npr.org/2022/03/28/1089221657/dont-say-gay-florida-desantis>

I've got news about who's actually doing the censoring in the US, my dude

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 19th, 2022 at 2:21 AM

Title: Re: The End of Men (I wish it were a parody)

Content:

Queequeg said:

Oh. Its real.

<https://tuckercarlson.com/tco-season-2-preview-2/>

There is a reason to be concerned about all the chemicals we release into the environment, but the way Carlson is going about this... footage of a silhouetted meat head drinking egg yolks? I mean... come on.

Malcolm wrote:

And it premieres tonight. Too f*cking funny.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 19th, 2022 at 2:24 AM

Title: Re: another question about rebirth

Content:

clyde said:

and the third is the "Primordial Consciousness" or the "nondual from the ground of being".

Malcolm wrote:

Crypto advaita silliness. There is no such thing. This theory is a result of his misunderstanding of Dzogchen teachings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 19th, 2022 at 3:17 AM

Title: Re: The End of Men (I wish it were a parody)

Content:

Archie2009 said:

Just browse the attached 83 page pdf and tell me again there is no CRT in US eduction. I wish this was parody too.

Malcolm wrote:

Frankly, the pamphlet is silly as shit, and I have a hard time believing that any math teacher in their right state of mind would take any of it seriously and allow D'shawn to answer $2+2 = 5$, while Billy Bob is required to answer $2 + 2 = 4$.

The CA standards are listed here:

<https://www.cde.ca.gov/ci/ma/cf/index.asp>

Also, Rufo is a conservative activist whose mission is life is to misrepresent CRT deliberately as anti-American, since he thinks it is a better meme than "cancel culture" or "PC." <https://www.newyorker.com/news/annals-of-inquiry/how-a-conservative-activist-invented-the-conflict-over-critical-race-theory>

"As Rufo eventually came to see it, conservatives engaged in the culture war had been fighting against the same progressive racial ideology since late in the Obama years, without ever being able to describe it effectively. "We've needed new language for these issues," Rufo told me, when I first wrote to him, late in May. " 'Political correctness' is a dated term and, more importantly, doesn't apply anymore. It's not that elites are enforcing a set of manners and cultural limits, they're seeking to reengineer the foundation of human psychology and social institutions through the new politics of race, It's much more invasive than mere 'correctness,' which is a mechanism of social control, but not the heart of what's happening. The other frames are wrong, too: 'cancel culture' is a vacuous term and doesn't translate into a political program; 'woke' is a good epithet, but it's too broad, too terminal, too easily brushed aside. 'Critical race theory' is the perfect villain," Rufo wrote.

He thought that the phrase was a better description of what conservatives were opposing, but it also seemed like a promising political weapon. "Its connotations are all negative to most middle-class Americans, including racial minorities, who see the world as 'creative' rather than 'critical,' 'individual' rather than 'racial,' 'practical' rather than 'theoretical.' Strung together, the phrase 'critical race theory' connotes hostile, academic, divisive, race-obsessed, poisonous, elitist, anti-American." Most perfect of all, Rufo continued, critical race theory is not "an externally applied pejorative." Instead, "it's the label the critical race theorists chose themselves."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 19th, 2022 at 3:22 AM

Title: Re: The End of Men (I wish it were a parody)

Content:

Archie2009 said:

You didn't read the pdf.

Queequeg said:

Asking you that question doesn't mean that Norwegian supports anyone. You realize, you're not among conservative dittoheads where just dropping a talking point proves whatever argument you think you're making, right?

Archie2009 said:

And you do realize I have voted for the left in my country all my life? What I seem to be among here is the knee-jerk US liberal herd.

Malcolm wrote:

No, not knee jerk, we liberals in the US are just not as alarmed by stupidity from the left as we are by stupidity from the right, since the latter has nearly compromised our democracy, and the former has never been in any danger of doing so, ever.

Anyway, the topic is the end of men, not CRT.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 19th, 2022 at 3:33 AM

Title: Re: The End of Men (I wish it were a parody)

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Ugh lemme try again:

Malcolm wrote:

Not according to medical science. But you do you.

Sādhaka said:

I wonder if you even read my entire post....

I'd said that maybe a few minutes a day is beneficial...

Malcolm wrote:

For your tan, maybe....

The fact is that all the serious conservatives abandoned MAGA world's obsession with bathrooms, testosterone, Qanon conspiracy theories, and so on, and still engage in serious debate with those on the left, as they should.

Sure.

I'm not an Q'er at all, yet I do see transgenderism as an mental illness (not to spark that debate here, just giving my opinion; take it or leave it).

Well, that is not how it is seen in Ayurveda and Tibetan medicine. It is seen as a result of development of the fetus in the womb, based on the the conduct of the mother, as well as the circumstances around conception itself. In other words, it is biological, not pathological.

Many of the debates that people on the far right want to have are basically a waste of time and energy.

You're not wrong. However same with the left in most cases.
Many debates are pointless waste of time.

They can censor all day if they're truly private companies; that's not contested. It simply has nothing to do with my point that they censor because they're afraid of open debate. Twitter, Youtube, etc., moderate content because some discussions are entirely disruptive and interfere with normal discourse. And, do we really need to debate whether Nazis are bad? No.

Frankly, you cannot prove that "the left" is censoring content. The left screams as loudly as the right does about "censorship" on these platforms. Maybe people in the middle are just tired of listening to the bullshit that comes from both extremes. I sure am.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 19th, 2022 at 3:46 AM

Title: Re: The End of Men (I wish it were a parody)

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

Ffs try to exercise even a smidge of critical thinking before asserting that a state of 40 million people is teaching kids about the coming multiplication race war

Malcolm wrote:

It's Helter Skelter in first grade!!!

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 19th, 2022 at 4:01 AM

Title: Re: The End of Men (I wish it were a parody)

Content:

climb-up said:

Wow!

I feel like if you hear the word "bromethoxytherapy," and your like, "oh, that's a great description of what I do and I should absolutely use that to promote my ideas."

...well, it might be time to reassess some things Brosef.

Sounds a little sus, as the youngsters (allegedly) say.

EDIT: Oh, looking through the thread we seem to have moved on to a different conversation and I may have missed out on the fun of people promoting microwaving their balls on the manosphere.

Malcolm wrote:

It's all related CRT is a plot to prevent the bros from microwaving their balls to increase their testosterone, so they can have more white babies and fix the demographic inevitability of the browning of America. But the thing I don't understand, if someone is into tanning their balls, why are they upset by people who are tan naturally? Is it jealousy? Or is it a bit of sympathetic magic?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 19th, 2022 at 4:08 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Sherab Rigdrol said:

Be that as it may, it's going to happen unfortunately.

Queequeg said:

For anyone who wants a swing at an answer... what would be the point of dropping nukes?

Malcolm wrote:

They've run out of conventional missiles, very likely, since they cannot manufacture new arms due to the sanctions.

Queequeg said:

But as far as anyone can tell, Putin's goal is to reform the Russian empire, not to end the world.

Malcolm wrote:

The Russian use of a tactical nuke in Ukraine does not require a nuclear response in turn. This is a mistake in everyone's thinking. If he does this, certainly the world will turn against him.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 19th, 2022 at 4:11 AM

Title: Re: another question about rebirth

Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

Is it possible for you to clarify what he's saying and why this is Advaita silliness?

Malcolm wrote:
There is no ground of being.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, April 19th, 2022 at 4:17 AM
Title: Re: another question about rebirth
Content:
Seeker12 said:
Namkhai Norbu apparently has used the phrase "the fundamental ground of existence" for instance.

Malcolm wrote:
He used the term 'primordial state' for the term 'thog ma gzhi', or 'original basis.' But the term "basis" just refers to one's own unfabricated consciousness. I've studied and practiced ChNN's teachings for 30 years now, since 1992. So I am pretty certain of his intentions and use of language.

It is a little unclear to me where you are pulling this term from, "the fundamental ground of existence." Care to name a source?

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, April 19th, 2022 at 4:53 AM
Title: Re: another question about rebirth
Content:
Seeker12 said:
Per Wikipedia this comes from The Crystal and the Way of Light.

Malcolm wrote:
Ok, well, you have to understand that everything in Crystal came from an early period in ChNN's career, when he was not teaching in English. At this time, he used various English translators such as John Shane, Barry Simmons, and so on, before ChNN switched over to teaching in English directly around 1988, the same year Crystal came out. So we cannot regard it as a definitive representation of ChNN's intent, since it is an edited transcript of translation from his original Italian. It broadly served as a introduction to his teachings, but was never intended to be a definitive statement of them. But more importantly, there is no such term in Dzogchen as "the fundamental ground of existence." The term "gzhi" refers to your own nature which you have failed to recognize. That's it. It is not a "ground of being" as in Paul Tillich's theology, where the term originates:

For Tillich, God is being-itself, not a being among other beings. To describe the relationship between being-itself and finite beings, Tillich takes the word, "ground." For Tillich, God is the ground of being, the ground of the structure of being. God as being itself is the ground of the ontological structure of being. In other words, every ontological being has its power to be in being itself, participate in the ground of being. All accounts of God are expressed through what we comprehend. Can we know God? For Tilich, the answer is clear: we can. Adopting the theory of analogia entis (analogy of being), that is, "that which is infinite is being itself and because everything participates in being itself" (239), The theory of analogia entis explains the possibility of knowing and saying anything about God. However, for Tillich, the analogia entis justifies our ways of saying about God only under a fact that "God must be understood as being itself" (240). Thus, existential approach to God through the category of finitude must be described symbolically. God is the ground of being, being-itself; who concerns us ultimately. Thus, God is our ultimate concern.

<https://people.bu.edu/wwildman/bce/tillich.htm>

There is no such ground of being in the whole length and breadth of buddhadharma, including Dzogchen teachings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 19th, 2022 at 4:58 AM

Title: Re: The End of Men (I wish it were a parody)

Content:

Sādhaka said:

I've seen your other posts on that topic over the years in relation to gestation etc., although it's too nuanced than I have time to get into at the moment; for now, in any case, I agree that it is partially environmental and partially genetic (ya know the whole karma-vipaka thing).

Malcolm wrote:

As I said, from the point of view of Tibetan medicine all gender orientation and sexual attraction is fundamentally biological in nature, fixed after the third week of gestation, the desire to change gender is included here. Calling this a pathology, from a Tibetan medical point of view is erroneous. It's like saying blond hair is a pathology.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 19th, 2022 at 5:54 AM

Title: Re: The End of Men (I wish it were a parody)

Content:

Sādhaka said:

You just have to ask yourself why google (their search results reflect this) & co. are so invested in pushing race-mixing as an agenda.

Malcolm wrote:

Is google invested in this? And what does this have to do with the end of men. Maybe Tucker is worried about the end of white men, since all the dudes in it seem to be white bros.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 19th, 2022 at 6:01 AM

Title: Re: another question about rebirth

Content:

Seeker12 said:

Anyway, lots of words. I, personally, would have to basically ideally talk with Wallace to assess his thought, or at the very least get to know it well. And maybe I shouldn't be talking at all here since I do not know his thought well, and maybe he is mistaken. But again, I have appreciated his translations of Dudjom Lingpa, which I find valuable.

Malcolm wrote:

The difference here is that as you point out, the Dudjom Nyingma philosophy book was translated, and it was translated many years ago. I respect the translators who did it, but we are so far beyond these early attempts (and yes, it is a translation that is 40+ years old), and we know a lot more about what is in the earlier strata of Dzogchen texts, such as the lengthy pre-Longchenpa commentaries on Dzogchen tantras in which I specialize. There has been a lot of contamination by western philosophical concepts in these earlier attempts, and much of that contamination has yet to be weeded out. Wallace's understanding of Dzogchen is crypto-theistic, in that he has fairly openly states that he thinks that the mythos of Samantabhadra's awakening is an ex nihilo cosmogony:

While Buddhism is deemed nontheistic, the Vedas are regarded as polytheistic, and the Bible is monotheistic, we have seen that the cosmogonies of Vajrayana Buddhism, Vedanta, and Neoplatonic Christianity have so much in common that they could almost be regarded as varying interpretations of a single theory. Moreover, the commonality does not end there, for in the Near East, the writings of Plotinus (205-270) also influenced Islamic and Jewish theories of creation. This apparent unity could be attributed to mere coincidence, or to the historical propagation of a single, speculative, metaphysical theory throughout south Asia and the Near East. For example, the Upanishads may well have influenced the writings of early Mahayana thinkers in India, and they could also have made their way to the Near East, where they might have inspired the writings of Plotinus. On the other hand, Plotinus declared that his theories were based on his own experiential insights, and similar claims have been made by many Buddhist and Vedantin contemplatives. If these cosmogonies are indeed based upon valid introspective knowledge, then there may some plausibility to the claims of many contemplatives throughout the world that introspective inquiry can lead to knowledge, not only of the ultimate ground of being, but of the fundamental laws of nature as well.

Wallace is so completely wrong here, it is cannot be explained by anything other than the fact that he has not properly studied Dzogchen teachings in depth. There is absolutely nothing in common with the Dzogchen account of cosmogony and those of Hinduism and neoplatonism. Nothing at all. Dzogchen cosmogony is simply a variation on the the cyclical cosmogony of the Abdharmakoṣabhaśya, and I can prove it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 19th, 2022 at 8:54 AM

Title: Re: The End of Men (I wish it were a parody)

Content:

Sādhaka said:

You just have to ask yourself why google (their search results reflect this) & co. are so invested in pushing race-mixing as an agenda.

Malcolm wrote:

Is google invested in this? And what does this have to do with the end of men. Maybe Tucker is worried about the end of white men, since all the dudes in it seem to be white bros.

Kim O'Hara said:

Unless you have done something sensible like adjusting the default settings, Google's search results reflect your own browsing history, and the more you use it, the more it knows about you.

Google says it is to help you quickly find the pages you're looking for. What it does, though, is create your own personal echo-chamber, media world or whatever you call it. So if you like Q-anon or Kabbala or Kropotkin, just for random examples, those will be your top results. So you click on them first, and Google knows you like pages like that, and serves up even more next time. Yep, vicious circle.

What does Google get out of it? $$$$$, since the process incidentally creates beautifully targeted marketing niches which Google can then offer to advertisers at a premium.

What does it do to society? See above ... just about the whole thread, in fact.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

So in other words Sadhaka gets what Sadhaka clicks on. Google's only role is feeding him his own choices.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 19th, 2022 at 8:58 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine Crisis

Content:

Miorita said:

Democracy is a specific product cultured and grown in America. Don't export it! People in other parts of the world don't need the drugs, the LGBTQ, the homelessness, the abortions, AA, etc. There are other ways to grow on this planet.

Malcolm wrote:

Apparently you've never been to India, China, etc. if you think these things are problems created only by democracy you haven't travelled much.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 19th, 2022 at 9:01 AM

Title: Re: another question about rebirth

Content:

clyde said:

So, what/where is the mindstream that continues after the death and dissolution of the body? This is what I'm trying to determine and understand.

Virgo said:

Mental consciousness has its basis in the heart.

clyde said:

If mental consciousness has its basis in the heart, then when death and dissolution of the body occurs, each sense organ ceases to function and the consciousness associated with the sense organ ceases; i.e., all consciousness associated with the body ceases.

Is there something that continues, that is reborn?

Malcolm wrote:

The senses shut down in a regular and predictable order in a normal death, in a sudden or traumatic death, the process is not as predictable.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 19th, 2022 at 12:01 PM

Title: Re: another question about rebirth

Content:

clyde said:

If mental consciousness has its basis in the heart, then when death and dissolution of the body occurs, each sense organ ceases to function and the consciousness associated with the sense organ ceases; i.e., all consciousness associated with the body ceases.

Is there something that continues, that is reborn?

Virgo said:

Consciousness appropriates another form.

Virgo

clyde said:

What does that mean? The Buddha taught that when the sense organ ceases the sense-consciousness ceases, including intellect-consciousness. So what consciousness “appropriates another form”?

Malcolm wrote:

Buddha also taught, “When consciousness descends into the womb...” from where does that consciousness come?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 19th, 2022 at 12:05 PM

Title: Re: The End of Men (I wish it were a parody)

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Try searching white couple or white family, and black couple or black family; and you’ll see what I mean. Same with corporate commercials, always a black husband and white wife; and they often make males, especially white males, look dumb & incompetent, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

These generalizations you are making are absurd and unprovable.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 19th, 2022 at 11:34 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Dorje Shedrub said:

The second group is undocumented Latinos from Mexico and Central America who usually align with Democrats because of the Democrat's immigration policies...

Malcolm wrote:

They also cannot vote.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 20th, 2022 at 12:37 AM

Title: Re: <https://awakentheworld.com>

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Nonbuddhist hippies. Ignore.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 20th, 2022 at 1:05 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

If you don't vote for him, but you don't want another four years of Trump, well, you deserve Trump.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 20th, 2022 at 1:26 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Lawlessness, or weak law enforcement is often equated with “freedom.” Mexico is also more “free.” But these are countries where men rule, rather than laws.

Daniel Arraes said:

I'm Brazilian born and raised and, no matter how painful it is for me to admit, I have agree with Malcolm. Brazil is a huge mess right now.

Crazywisdom said:

Everybody in Brazil says that and imagines the USA is a paradise. Brazil is not as bad as you think. The US is not nearly as awesome as you think.

Malcolm wrote:

The US is not a paradise. No democracy is. But the level of lawfulness and trust in the US is quite high, and is one of the main reasons why our markets and businesses flourish better than countries in which there are flawed democracies and autocracies. To put it in a nutshell, there is much less corruption in the EU, the US, Canada, etc., than in other countries. Why? Because these are countries of laws and not men.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 20th, 2022 at 1:44 AM

Title: Re: New History of Religions special issue on Mahāyāna sūtras

Content:

Zhen Li said:

I think that Nāgārjuna is a popular enough name that there were may have been more than one (or more than two).

tingdzin said:

Even more than this, I think his name was just invoked and set into unhistorical contexts as a legitimating device, as in the Zen patriarchs' lists.

Malcolm wrote:

All Mahayāna comes through Nāgārjuna. Nāgārjuna is the defining intellectual of Mahāyāna, hence his justly deserved title, "the second Buddha."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 20th, 2022 at 1:52 AM

Title: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 20th, 2022 at 2:03 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Queequeg said:

He needs to sub Klobuchar. Harris needs to have a health condition that forces her to step away from politics for a little while.

Malcolm wrote:

Disagree. There is no certainty that Minn will elect a Democratic senator. She up for re-election in 2024.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 20th, 2022 at 2:11 AM

Title: Re: <https://awakentheworld.com>

Content:

JieshiShan said:

It is long, sometimes tedious, but it goes through concepts common to several traditions and as it obviously does not go into every aspect in depth, it just passes by and the one who knows something recognises it... and moves on to another related topic.

My learning has been vast and is far from over, and what I cannot do is to imprison it in categories.

What is suffocating today is the popular Buddhism vs. the Buddhadharma.

Malcolm wrote:

They are not buddhist, they discuss Shiva and Shakti, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 20th, 2022 at 9:23 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Daniel Arraes said:

Unfortunately my countrymen are learning that the hard way. It will take 20 years to rebuild our economy... if we are lucky enough to get rid of those alt-right white supremacist jerks who follow "Tropical Trump".

Queequeg said:

It takes a long time for people with power to come around and fear the power they wield. The Enlightenment out of which the ideas underlying the establishment of the United States emerged were forged over centuries under the despotic rule of kings. Those people had visceral living memories of arbitrary rulers where life and property could be taken at whim of select individuals and developed a philosophical framework, alongside an ancient form of the Rule of Law, the Common Law (arguably a vestige of rule from a time that was more egalitarian and organic, before the development of despotic monarchies), that was and continues to be a living tradition in the Anglophile world. A class that wields real power must come to fear the power they wield and agree to a system where power can be checked.

Based on my study of history, human beings will tolerate a lot of injustice and cruelty as long as they are personally comfortable, and people are willing to compromise their expectations of comfort to a pathetic degree to avoid conflict. Rarely do you see people stick their necks out for others. And so, psychopaths and other assorted people with deformed characters take advantage to seize for themselves when there are no systems of checks or people become so apathetic that they don't bother using systems of checks that have been established.

Good luck. We're trying to hold it together here ourselves.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.vanityfair.com/news/2022/04/inside-the-new-right-where-peter-thiel-is-placing-his-biggest-bets>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 20th, 2022 at 10:08 PM

Title: Re: another question about rebirth

Content:

clyde said:

Clearly karma is central to rebirth. How do you understand karma? It's often called the principle of cause-and-effect. That's not a thing and it's not a scorecard; it's a description of an ongoing process.

But how do you see it? Is there “personal karma” and if so, how is that? Does karma accumulate? And is karma-and-the-fruits-of-karma based on our notions of justice?

Malcolm wrote:

Karma (action) is intention/volition (cetana) and what proceeds from intention/volition. That is how the Buddha described it, as well as Nāgārjuna and Vasubandhu.

That is why it is "personal," as the ripening of these intentions will only take place on the same mind stream that generated them, and in the same realm as they were generated. In other words, actions in the desire realm will only ripen in the desire realm, and so on.

Karma is not a law of cause and effect. Causes and effects are treated separately and before we get to karma. Actually, in Abhidharma it is presented very logically. Cause and effect are presented first, then dependent origination, then karma, and then afflictions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 20th, 2022 at 10:28 PM

Title: Re: The Tibetan vs. Theravada view on emptiness

Content:

Shaiksha said:

The Kaccayanagotta Sutta quoted above does not talk about emptiness as understood in the Madhyamaka, I believe. It is about the right view - where one who has developed the right view no longer clings to attachments, or fixated (conditioned) thinking, or self-obsession. My understanding is the reference to exist or no-exist refers to 'self', eternalism v annihilation. Of course, it is always open to debate and I am no expert.

Malcolm wrote:

The Kaccayanagotta Sutta's Agamic analogue is cited directly by Nāgārjuna in chapter 15 of the MMK. It's the only Agamic text he cites.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 21st, 2022 at 1:08 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Background:

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Igor_Girkin

<https://www.theguardian.com/world/2019/jun/19/mh17-criminal-charges-ukraine-> russia

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 21st, 2022 at 1:39 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

You do not have this in the USA. The police and the public contain insane racists. This enjoyment of constitutional freedom is enjoyed by blonde haired blue-eyes whites like Malcolm. Minorities have targets on their backs. Blacks in the US have actual panic attacks when the police are close. Racism in the US is far more violent and pronounced than in Brazil.

Malcolm wrote:

That depends on where you are and who you are. But sure, black people in the US suffer from systemic racism, doubt. But that is a cultural issue in the US, not a problem with our systems of laws per se.

Crazywisdom said:

In Brazil there is far more discretionary enforcement of laws. That does not make it lawless. Malcom says this as if he knows something. He's relaying on rumors.

Malcolm wrote:

I did not use Brazil as an example. I've never been to Brazil. But I have been to Mexico, several times, all over the country, and have friends in high places there. Daniel was the one who used Brazil as an example.

Crazywisdom said:

The US judicial system is capitalistic. Everyone is looking to score. Prosecutors and police are promoted based on number of convictions. Is there a law that says they can do that? No. There isn't, but it's the reason that the US has the largest prison population per Capita in the history of man.

Malcolm wrote:

I agree that the privatization of prisons combined with unfair drug laws are a social justice issue in the United States which needs to be addressed. However, compared to prisons in other countries...

Crazywisdom said:

All over crowded. Why? They are incentivized to lie. Corruption in law enforcement in the USA is epic. Judges are selected from prosecutors and they keep the faith. The legal system is constitutional in name only.

Malcolm wrote:

That's simply not the case. You can try to argue this, based on your experience as a defense attorney in the US, but my late father was also a defense attorney, with whom I discussed many cases.

Crazywisdom said:

There is no such thing as a country of laws and not men.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure there is, you're just cynical.

Crazywisdom said:

In the US they just print more money with the global reserve currency. Those chickens are coming home to roost. We are already seeing global inflation as a result of this lawlessness. Monetary policy in the US is governed by men not ruled, who in the Fed have a loose mandate to lower unemployment and keep inflation around 2%. But if they fail the only counter is politics. So no one can sue the Fed for making stupid policies..

Malcolm wrote:

The current levels of Inflation are worldwide and have nothing to do with US monetary policy. Its cause is pandemic supply chain disruption and energy panic due to the war in Ukraine and the burgeoning process isolating Russia economically.

Also, the idea that the dollar's days as a reserve currency are limited has been forecast for years. Someday maybe it will happen, but that would require another country's economy to match ours in size. Even the euro is not as flexible as the dollar, because the EU does not have the same flexibility as the US. The main issue is convertability. The dollar is still the most convertible financial instrument in the world, especially the Benjamin.

Crazywisdom said:

The constitution of the US is like a religion that believers espouse at the Supreme Court level until it does serve their team. The erosion of the 4th Amendment that began with Nixon and accelerated during Reagan decimated two generations of minorities.

Malcolm wrote:

Historically inaccurate. The problem with the fourth amendment was that it was written to forestall search and seizure by conscription and press gangs, not police. Police did not exist in this country when the 4th amendment was written. But you know, the Constitution is not a perfect document, and it requires updating.

Crazywisdom said:

If you read the opinions it's very easy to understand interpretations were arbitrary and racist, all the dissents said exactly that.

Malcolm wrote:

"Originalism" in constitutional law is problematical. But the point is "a more perfect union." Democracy in the United States, and other place is not perfect. But what you describe are principally cultural problems and biases, not inherent flaws in the US system itself.

Crazywisdom said:

The situation now is even graver. The fantasy of the US is over. There will be 50 years of total bullshit coming out of the Supreme Court. Unless you're a in a conservative Christian community, don't expect anything to go well.

Malcolm wrote:

Maybe, we will see, maybe Thomas and Alito will drop dead of heart attacks this summer. Hope so.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 21st, 2022 at 1:43 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Endless myopathy. You're just spouting axioms like they have actual force in the world Canada and Europe are some of the racist places there are. Have you ever been refused service because of the color of your skin? Never happens in Brazil. Happened to me in the US. Happened in Canada. In Brazil you can call the police for this and action will be taken.

Malcolm wrote:

I've experienced racism in China, India, etc. It's not fun. Frankly, China is much more openly racist than the US. Tibetans can be pretty racist too. I have run into racist Tibetans in Nepal, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 21st, 2022 at 2:04 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

I've experienced racism in China, India, etc. It's not fun. Frankly, China is much more openly racist than the US. Tibetans can be pretty racist too. I have run into racist Tibetans in Nepal, etc.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

One friend of mine commented on how in America Tibetan Buddhism is one of the only venues where white people are routinely treated like second class citizens.

So depending on what your definition of "racism" is, yeah.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure. Anyway, Tibetans do not own Buddhism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 21st, 2022 at 3:08 AM

Title: Re: another question about rebirth

Content:

clyde said:

Thank you for helping me better understand how you understand rebirth. And if I understand you correctly, you hold that karma is the continuity between lifetimes.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

As was mentioned earlier, in Mahayana doctrine that which goes from one life to another is the alaya vijnana, the "all-base consciousness", also known as the 8th consciousness. It is called all-base because it holds the metaphorical "seeds" of karma which ripen later as experience. This consciousness is not found in the Suttas, which is why the subject is complicated in the Hinayana.

clyde said:

I'm not well studied on the ālāyavijñāna, but if it continues from life to life, is it a subtle self?

Malcolm wrote:

No. Asanga cites the Theravada bhavanga consciousness or linking consciousness in defense of this notion. It is not accepted in Madhyamaka, generally speaking.

Basically, nothing transfers per se. The last moment of consciousness of this life is the cause of the first moment of consciousness of the next.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 21st, 2022 at 3:29 AM

Title: Re: another question about rebirth

Content:

clyde said:

Clearly karma is central to rebirth. How do you understand karma? It's often called the principle of cause-and-effect. That's not a thing and it's not a scorecard; it's a description of an ongoing process.

But how do you see it? Is there "personal karma" and if so, how is that? Does karma accumulate? And is karma-and-the-fruits-of-karma based on our notions of justice?

Malcolm wrote:

Karma (action) is intention/volition (cetana) and what proceeds from intention/volition.

That is how the Buddha described it, as well as Nāgārjuna and Vasubandhu.

That is why it is "personal," as the ripening of these intentions will only take place on the same mind stream that generated them, and in the same realm as they were generated. In other words, actions in the desire realm will only ripen in the desire realm, and so on.

Karma is not a law of cause and effect. Causes and effects are treated separately and before we get to karma. Actually, in Abhidharma it is presented very logically. Cause and effect are presented first, then dependent origination, then karma, and then afflictions.

clyde said:

I've not studied the Abhidharma. When you say that it presents cause-and-effect, DO, and karma in that order, does that mean that DO is dependent on cause-and-effect, and that karma is dependent on DO?

Malcolm wrote:

It means that general causes and effects, both animate and inanimate, are covered under the six causes and four conditions, or alternately, the 24 conditions of Abhidhamma. Dependent origination concerns the causation of sentient beings specifically. Karma concerns the causation of higher and lower status in samsara based on virtuous and nonvirtuous actions.

clyde said:

I understand karma-and-the-fruits-of-karma as the natural workings of the unfolding world to which my actions contribute like a ripple emanating out.

Malcolm wrote:

This not the Buddha's teaching on karma, not even remotely.

The way it is put in Abhidharma is this:

The variety of the world is due to action.
Action is volition and what proceeds from volition.

Because we act, we cause changes in and on the world. They are not natural unfoldings, if you will. All change in the world is due to the action of sentient beings. Even the formation of the universe is caused by the actions of all the sentient beings, ripening from the last universe to cause this on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 21st, 2022 at 3:43 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

I'm not wrong about the 4th Amendment. Due respect to your late father, but the erosion of the 4th Amend was designed to allow police to arbitrarily stop and search people of color the street. It was all about cat and mouse, has nothing to do with the press.

Malcolm wrote:

My point was that 4th amendment never intended to deal with police to begin with. It was a response to British troops billeting in houses, etc.

Crazywisdom said:

The issue about inflation happened when Obama turned on the spigot in '09 and they have yet to turn it off. The crises of late are just the trigger that turn hope into fear.

Malcolm wrote:

Nonense.

Crazywisdom said:

You didn't from your father about the overcrowding problem in prisons? Must be nice to be from Massachusetts.

Malcolm wrote:

He discussed it. He, like everyone else, thought the main problem was from drug busts, minor offenses.

Crazywisdom said:

For a more perfect union I'd rather be somewhere one side doesn't hate and want the extinction of the other.

Malcolm wrote:

The only real point you have made is that you have mixed background, and I am from OG Mayflower invader stock. Is it an advantage being white in the USA. Of course it is. I never denied it. But the system put into place by those old white guys back in the 1780's started something good that will never stop, unless of course people abandon the project. Right now, that project is very much damaged in many countries. But it is not damaged in the West. I get it, btw, if you prefer to live elsewhere than the US. The US is not everyone's cup of tea. But I don't think the Christian Right will take over the whole country. They certainly won't succeed in New England.

I still maintain the future of Buddhism is right here in the US.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 21st, 2022 at 3:47 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Don't wanna move to Mexico, but I have to say that sometimes hanging out with Mexicans was a lot less exasperating than hanging out with Americans.

Malcolm wrote:

For sure. If I were going to move anywhere it would be New Mexico. Too many white people in Colorado, AZ, etc. I have all that back here. Why would I want to move to place with just as many white people as where I come from? Also, my partner was born in Mexico City and speaks fluent Spanish. Miami is ok too, but too GOP.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 21st, 2022 at 4:26 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 21st, 2022 at 4:33 AM

Title: Toxic Masculinity: The New Standard

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 21st, 2022 at 7:58 AM

Title: Re: Toxic Masculinity: The New Standard

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

An ad like that would win Kadyrov about 65% of the vote in some US House races.

Malcolm wrote:

I know, right? In the same constituencies that think Putin should invade Ukraine.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 21st, 2022 at 8:03 AM

Title: Re: another question about rebirth

Content:

clyde said:

I don't think he taught that a volitional act has one and only one 'fruit'.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, actually he did. Each action has exactly one vipaka, ripening. Otherwise, there is the problem of a cause existing at the same time as it's result.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 21st, 2022 at 8:20 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Don't wanna move to Mexico, but I have to say that sometimes hanging out with Mexicans was a lot less exasperating than hanging out with Americans.

Malcolm wrote:

For sure. If I were going to move anywhere it would be New Mexico. Too many white people in Colorado, AZ, etc. I have all that back here. Why would I want to move to place with just as many white people as where I come from? Also, my partner was born in Mexico City and speaks fluent Spanish. Miami is ok too, but too GOP.

Johnny Dangerous said:

I will probably move back to New Mexico once I approach retirement age. It has some real downsides when you are younger, but if you are financially stable land is cheap, and the mix of cultures and people is one of the coolest things. Lots of the US just seems super uptight if you grow up in New Mexico, in my experience. The West Coast especially has some things that really clash in terms of communication, social expectations, etc. Everyone is very concerned with propriety in a way that New Mexicans just don't give a shit about.

Malcolm wrote:

Vermont is chill.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 21st, 2022 at 11:07 AM

Title: Re: Opinions on Roger Jackson's "Rebirth"?

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

It seems that peoples rejection of rebirth always boils down to their still holding onto the idea of a "self" (atma) that is either "coming back, or not "coming back" in some form or another.

When one fully understands 'no-self' and all of it's implications, and accepts anatma (not a self) as the basis, then discuss rebirth in the buddhist context.

Zhen Li said:

Indeed. People ask whether you can be a Buddhist if you don't believe in rebirth. The actual question is whether you can be a Buddhist if you believe in a self and inherent existence.

Malcolm wrote:

It's not a question of belief in rebirth, but an acknowledgement that the existential question the Buddha sought to remedy was the question of rebirth. If the existential question of rebirth is discarded as irrelevant, Buddha's solutions to that question are immediately irrelevant and moot. There is no point in calling oneself a Buddhist if one fails to acknowledge the central question the Buddha posed, "How does one end being reborn in samsara over and over again?"

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 21st, 2022 at 8:48 PM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I will probably move back to New Mexico once I approach retirement age. It has some real downsides when you are younger, but if you are financially stable land is cheap, and the mix of cultures and people is one of the coolest things. Lots of the US just seems super uptight if you grow up in New Mexico, in my experience. The West Coast especially has some things that really clash in terms of communication, social expectations, etc. Everyone is very concerned with propriety in a way that New Mexicans just don't give a shit about.

Malcolm wrote:

Vermont is chill.

Queequeg said:

What are these places you speak of?

Malcolm wrote:

Far away from NYC, which I loath.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 21st, 2022 at 8:52 PM

Title: Re: Opinions on Roger Jackson's "Rebirth"?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Indeed. People ask whether you can be a Buddhist if you don't believe in rebirth. The actual question is whether you can be a Buddhist if you believe in a self and inherent existence.

Malcolm wrote:

It's not a question of belief in rebirth, but an acknowledgement that the existential question the Buddha sought to remedy was the question of rebirth. If the existential question of rebirth is discarded as irrelevant, Buddha's solutions to that question are immediately irrelevant and moot. There is no point in calling oneself a Buddhist if one fails to acknowledge the central question the Buddha posed, “How does one end being reborn in samsara over and over again?”

Anders said:

I don't quite agree. The end of rebirth is not the actual question, but rather the solution to the actual question: How to achieve liberation from dukkha?

Malcolm wrote:

What do you think dukkha is? And what is the cause of dukkha? Suffering is rebirth. The cause of rebirth is karma. The cause of karma is affliction. Remove affliction, karma has no cause, and suffering ceases.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 21st, 2022 at 8:58 PM

Title: Re: Opinions on Roger Jackson's "Rebirth"?

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

But he also gave lots of teachings which aren't related to rebirth, about living properly in samsara.

Malcolm wrote:

These are generally no more profound than what can be found in Marcus Aurelius.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 21st, 2022 at 9:05 PM

Title: Re: another question about rebirth

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Buddha also taught, “When consciousness descends into the womb...” from where does that consciousness come?

clyde said:

In reading Thanissaro Bhikku's polemic, The Truth of Rebirth, I came across the reference to “a descent of an embryo”. Here is the passage:

“Monks, the descent of the embryo occurs with the union of three things. There is the case where there is no union of the mother & father, the mother is not in her season, and a gandhabba [the being-to-be-born] is not present, nor is there a descent of an embryo. There is the case where there is a union of the mother & father, and the mother is in her season, but a gandhabba is not present, nor is there a descent of an embryo. But when there is a union of the mother & father, the mother is in her season, and a gandhabba is present, then with this union of three things the descent of the embryo occurs.” — MN 38

Is this passage what you were referring to or was it another?

What is a “gandhabba”, “the being-to-be-born”? And where is it?

Malcolm wrote:

I was actually referring to the Mahānidanasutta, but this will serve. The gandharva (lit. smell eater) is a technical term for a being in the intermediate period between this life and the next life. The Theravadins don't accept the Buddha's teachings on the gandharva. They assert that the moment one's stream of consciousness separates from the body of this life, it immediately appropriates the body of the next life. Other schools accept the Buddha's teaching of the gandharva and maintain that the gandharva goes through seven successive births in the intermediate state over a period of forty-nine days until it appropriates the body of the next life. The point is that in order for conception to occur, there must be three things present: sperm, ovum, and a consciousness craving birth.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 21st, 2022 at 9:10 PM

Title: Re: another question about rebirth

Content:

clyde said:

I don't think he taught that a volitional act has one and only one 'fruit'.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, actually he did. Each action has exactly one vipaka, ripening. Otherwise, there is the problem of a cause existing at the same time as its result.

clyde said:

Where is this is taught?

And I'm unclear why/how a volitional act having more than one 'fruit' creates the problem of cause and effect happening simultaneously. Can you explain that?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, it means that a cause will persist beyond its result, produce a second result, ad infinitum. If a cause were to produce more than one result, those results would all have to happen simultaneously, for example a seed would have to produce more than one plant. You might argue, well, plants produce many seeds and that's an example of one cause producing many results. However, this is not the case. Plants are complex sets of causes and conditions, and any complex set of multiple causes and conditions can produce multiple results. But when you carefully examine you will see that the causes for each individual seed are exhausted when that seed is produced, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 21st, 2022 at 9:40 PM

Title: Re: Opinions on Roger Jackson's "Rebirth"?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

and having a notion of the existential question that is deeply at variance with the actual words of the Buddha in his sūtras.

Malcolm wrote:

In other words, they are barking up the wrong tree.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 22nd, 2022 at 12:28 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Queequeg said:

You fundamentally don't get this place.

Malcolm wrote:

What's there to get? I've lived in cities, been to NYC many times.

I don't like the constant traffic, the noise, and the crowds. At least LA has beaches, and SF, wine country.

The benefits of NYC do not outweigh the negatives, YMMV.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 22nd, 2022 at 12:34 AM

Title: Re: another question about rebirth

Content:

Anders said:

Nevertheless, that identification is no different than any other self-identification the Buddha used: Purely conventional.

clyde said:

So, when the Buddha said that during the first watch he saw all his past lives - was this literal or was he speaking conventionally?

And who/how is it determined what is to be taken literally and what is to be taken conventionally?

Malcolm wrote:

It was both literal and conventional. He literally remembered 90+ eons of his past lives, conventionally speaking.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 22nd, 2022 at 12:43 AM

Title: Re: the great vegetarian debate

Content:

KathyLauren said:

All the arguments against veganism/vegetarianism proposed here are hung on a single rationalization: that two degrees of separation are sufficient to isolate the eater from any karmic consequences of their choice. As long as the butcher did not know my identity, I am isolated from my role in his act of killing a sentient being.

You all would put it that I have no role in his action, but that is nonsense. My role is "customer". The fact that he did not know my identity does not change that. He is not going to carry on slaughtering animals if he has no customers, so the role of the customer is crucial: it is the reason for the killing. It is only my anonymity that allegedly isolates me from his actions. He does the slaughtering for his customers.

I know that rule is based on scripture, but I would submit that the whole "It's okay if the animal wasn't slaughtered specifically for you" thing was a rule for monks obtaining food on their alms rounds, not a rule intended for lay people. It is to make the life of begging monks and the householders who support them a bit easier.

If you take it as a general rule, you could use the same logic to justify all kinds of abuse of the Precepts. If I wanted to obtain a rare and valuable jewel, I could ask a friend to hire a thief to steal it. As long as the friend didn't tell the thief who it was for, I wouldn't be guilty of stealing. Same logic.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it is not the same logic.

Your thought experiment requires you to ask someone to ask someone to steal a book.

In this case, no one is asking anyone to do anything. The grocer is not my friend, etc. If I asked the grocer to ask the butcher to slaughter an animal so I could lay up a side of beef, then it would be the same. But since that is not the case, it is not the same.

Instead, the whole industry is so impersonal as to make the idea that someone buying meat in a modern market is karmically responsible for the death of the piece of flesh of a slaughtered animal ludicrous. If this is the case then all vegans and vegetarians are karmically responsible for all the animals who died in the cultivation of grain and so on for their meals. One cannot exercise a double standard here, and claim one bears more karmic weight than the other. Either all bear karmic weight or none do, when it comes to deaths cause by agriculture.

Instead, a more proper evaluation is climate based or health based. These are criteria removed from the Buddhist questions around meat-eating and have more clear outcomes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 22nd, 2022 at 1:10 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Queequeg said:

Spoken like a bumpkin tourist. cities (lower case "c") are not comparable to the City. NY is only comparable to other international Cities.

Malcolm wrote:

I'd take London over NYC any day.

Queequeg said:

NYC has beaches.

Malcolm wrote:

Atlantic beaches generally suck.

Queequeg said:

Wine country? A place where alcoholics can cover their habits with a veneer of earthy sophistication? Sure.

Malcolm wrote:

The food in Napa, and in Cali in general, beats the food anywhere else in the US. And I am not talking about restaurants. Who cares about sophistication?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 23rd, 2022 at 1:20 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Queequeg said:

I can understand not wanting to live here, but to actually loathe it? Well. Haters gonna hate.

Malcolm wrote:

It was a different town when my Van Dyke ancestors settled it and the Hudson Valley.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 23rd, 2022 at 1:38 AM

Title: Re: Though the view should be as vast as the sky, keep your conduct as fine as barley flour.

Content:

Lingpupa said:

Yes, I knew it's attributed to Guru Rinpoche, I should have said. But indeed my question is "where"?

Malcolm wrote:
In several terms.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, April 23rd, 2022 at 3:36 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine News
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, April 23rd, 2022 at 5:46 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine News
Content:
Bundokji said:

.

After two months since the beginning of the war, you get the feeling that the two sides have some kind of love-hate relationship between them.

Malcolm wrote:
More like an abused spouse (Ukraine) trying get out of a forced marriage with a sadist (Russia).

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, April 23rd, 2022 at 9:38 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine News
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
More like an abused spouse (Ukraine) trying get out of a forced marriage with a sadist (Russia).

Bundokji said:
When Russia claimed Ukrainian helicopters raid setting fuel tanks ablaze in Belgorod, they emphasized that it was for civilian use. A Russian spokesman said something in the line of "this does not help negotiations"!

The war does not seem to be ending soon, but both parties are determined to keep it contained. Few European leaders, including the British prime minister, visited Ukraine, while others, including Biden, contemplated visiting it in a show of public support. Western weapons supply to Ukraine has been equally contained and made public without a single Russian attack. The death toll among civilians are relatively small considering that fighting is undergoing inside populated cities. Exchange of captives have been frequent. Safe passages have been regularly arranged.

I have seen much worse than this.

Malcolm wrote:

Dude, you're tripping.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 23rd, 2022 at 8:36 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Anders said:

You are either ignorant of the reality of the situation or deliberately disingenuous.

Bundokji said:

You either explain how the online exchange rate does not correspond to reality in this particular context, or you are relying on assertions and ambiguity.

Malcolm wrote:

The value of the ruble does not correspond to reality:

Russia's currency, the ruble, has bounced back to where it was before President Vladimir Putin ordered his troops into Ukraine.

Analysts have said it's not a reflection of the strength of the economy, but rather more of the strict controls the government has put on the financial system and tough rules on exporters.

<https://www.businessinsider.com/russias-ruble-rebound-explained-capital-controls-sanctions-economy-currency-ukraine-2022-4>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 23rd, 2022 at 8:41 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Anders said:

You are either ignorant of the reality of the situation or deliberately disingenuous.

Bundokji said:

You either explain how the online exchange rate does not correspond to reality in this particular context, or you are relying on assertions and ambiguity.

Malcolm wrote:

The value of the ruble does not correspond to reality:

Russia's currency, the ruble, has bounced back to where it was before President Vladimir Putin ordered his troops into Ukraine.

Analysts have said it's not a reflection of the strength of the economy, but rather more of the strict controls the government has put on the financial system and tough rules on exporters.

<https://www.businessinsider.com/russias-ruble-rebound-explained-capital-controls-sanctions-economy-currency-ukraine-2022-4>

Bundokji said:

Some of the recovery is artificial, made possible by strict limits that the central bank, the Bank of Russia, has placed on currency exchange, withdrawals and hard-currency transfers overseas. But it is also due to a very real factor still working in Russia's favor: strong oil and gas exports that bring a flood of hard currency into the country.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.washingtonpost.com/business/2022/03/31/ruble-recovery-sanctions-russia/>

Bundokji said:

Experts say the rest of the rebound is a result of the ruble being artificially propped up by the Russian central bank through capital controls.

"The currency moves don't represent the fundamentals of Russia. More often than not, you see the fundamentals reflected in the currency. But as soon as capital controls are put in place, then that obscures the picture," said Craig Erlam, senior markets analyst at OANDA.

"There's no way you can say the Russian economy now has the same outlook as it did in the middle of February before the invasion started, even if the currency would suggest that," he told DW.

The Russian economy, which the IMF in January forecast would grow 2.8% this year, is now predicted to shrink 10%-15%.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.dw.com/en/putin-tactics-drive-rebound-in-russian-ruble/a-61363334>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 23rd, 2022 at 8:46 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

PeterC said:

You seem to have completely overlooked whose tanks rolled into whose country without provocation here.

When moral justification is on one side, trying to "both sides" or "counter polarization" is just wrong. Not everything is morally ambiguous. Some things are pretty simple. Russias second invasion of Ukraine is one of those.

Bundokji said:

In my understanding, the moral justification is wrong to the extent its being overly reliant on the misdeeds of the western bloc. Two wrongs do not make it right.

Malcolm wrote:

The perceived misdeeds of NATO are a fantasy concocted by Putin.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 23rd, 2022 at 8:58 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The value of the ruble does not correspond to reality:

Russia's currency, the ruble, has bounced back to where it was before President Vladimir Putin ordered his troops into Ukraine.

Analysts have said it's not a reflection of the strength of the economy, but rather more of the strict controls the government has put on the financial system and tough rules on exporters.

<https://www.businessinsider.com/russias-ruble-rebound-explained-capital-controls-sanctions-economy-currency-ukraine-2022-4>

Bundokji said:

The quoted seems to explain correspondence through absence of artificial means (government control) to determine value. Similar objections were used by the US to criticize the CCP control of the Yuan exchange rate, giving advantage to Chinese exports. The reality is that US dollar is still exchanged with the Yuan or the Ruble through the official exchange rate to buy Chinese goods or Russian gas.

Malcolm wrote:

And neither the yuan nor the ruble represent the actual value of their currency on the open market. How do I know? While I haven't travelled in Russia, I have travelled in China, and the best deal for the yuan is always purchased on the black market with Benjamins. The same is of India, etc. As one article points, when capital controls are instituted, the actual market value of the currency in question is obscured. Factually speaking, the ruble is no where near as convertible as it was two months ago.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 23rd, 2022 at 9:01 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The perceived misdeeds of NATO are a fantasy concocted by Putin.

Bundokji said:

The US invasion of Iraq in 2003 has been criticized by Putin, but should not justify his action of invading Ukraine. That illegality and immorality of the US invasion of Iraq is not a fantasy by virtue of the misdeeds of Putin.

Malcolm wrote:

The US invasion of Iraq in 2003 was not illegal, in fact, it was carried out under the aegis of UN resolution 678. Whether it was wise is a different issue.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 23rd, 2022 at 9:23 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The US invasion of Iraq in 2003 was not illegal, in fact, it was carried out under the aegis of UN resolution 678. Whether it was wise is a different issue.

Bundokji said:

Had the UN resolution 678 sufficed for legal justification, the US administration at that time would not have tried to come up with a new resolution, which was vetoed by Russia, France and China.

Malcolm wrote:

It sufficed, as it was never lifted. Russia and China have no credibility, and Hussein needed to be overthrown.

In any case, the Iraq war, 2003 is off topic.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 23rd, 2022 at 11:22 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

PeterC said:

We are talking about the Russian invasion of Ukraine. How is another war in 2003 in another part of the world even relevant?

Bundokji said:

The relevance is that Russian narrative refers to western expansionism through the NATO.

Malcolm wrote:

We just don't care about the Russian narrative, apart from the fact that it is total bullshit and should be pointedly ignored as a vain fabrication and false pretext for Rashist imperial ambition.

Bundokji said:

I indicated that the recovery of the exchange rate enables the Russian central bank to provide hard currency to fund Russian imports.

Malcolm wrote:

Russia is finding it quite difficult to pay for anything in rubles.

Unless you are willing to provide facts, rather than opinions and whataboutisms, we ought to ignore you.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 23rd, 2022 at 11:31 PM

Title: Re: Though the view should be as vast as the sky, keep your conduct as fine as barley flour.

Content:

heart said:

But if you have strong feelings about how a guru should behave, you may not be fit for tantra."

/magnus

Malcolm wrote:

I guess the Buddha should not have taught Vajrayana, since in the tantras he expresses quite strong opinions about how gurus should behave. To put it mildly, Trungpa was not the model.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 23rd, 2022 at 11:54 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

We just don't care about the Russian narrative, apart from the fact that it is total bullshit and should be pointedly ignored as a vain fabrication and false pretext for Rashist imperial ambition.

Bundokji said:

Ignoring the narrative of one side and taking for granted the narrative of the other side seems biased to me. The Iraq war is one example of imperialism and expansionism.

Malcolm wrote:

As for point one. When someone is lying, one need know nothing other than the fact they are lying. The accusation of Imperialism is a conspiracy theory, unless one can actually point to actual imperialist statements. The Iraq war, which is off topic, was not a war of expansion nor was it imperialist. The US left, because the Iraq gvt. refused to provide immunity to US troops, which were propping up the Iraq gvt. They then came under attack from Al Qaeda in Iraq, etc.

Bundokji said:

Where did i say that Russia will have to pay for imports in Ruble? What i said is that Ruble recovery would provide more hard currency for the Russian central bank to pay for Russian imports without using the Ruble.

Malcolm wrote:

No one wants their currency. People still want 1) dollars, 2) euros, or 3) yuan, in that order.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 24th, 2022 at 1:03 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

No one wants their currency. People still want 1) dollars, 2) euros, or 3) yuan, in that order.

Bundokji said:

Its no longer a matter of "wanting". If Germany for example wants to purchase Russian gas, they have to pay for it using Ruble through the Russian central bank. Where will they get the Ruble from? From the same Russian central bank in exchange for Euros. Then, the Russian central bank would use the Euros from Germany to purchase European goods. This is one example. The Ruble recovery provides stability to the value of Ruble inside Russia. This is my understanding and happy to be corrected.

Malcolm wrote:

You are so misinformed: <https://www.theguardian.com/world/2022/mar/31/germany-braces-for-an-end-to-reliance-on-russian-gas>

Bundokji said:

Energy contracts between Germany and Russia stipulated payments in euros, sometimes in dollars, Scholz said at a press conference in Berlin on Thursday, shortly after the Kremlin announced Putin had signed the decree. "In a conversation with the Russian president I have stated clearly that this will stay that way."

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.reuters.com/business/energy/eu-says-gas-payments-may-be-possible-under-russian-roubles-proposal-without-2022-04-22/>

Bundokji said:

BRUSSELS, April 22 (Reuters) - EU companies may be able to work around Russia's demand to receive gas payments in roubles without breaching sanctions if they pay in euros or dollars which are then converted into the Russian currency, the European Commission said on Friday.

The companies would also need to seek additional conditions on the transactions, such as a statement that they consider their contractual obligations complete once they have deposited the non-Russian currencies.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.spglobal.com/commodityinsights/en/market-insights/latest-news/natural-gas/042222-ec-says-appears-possible-to-make-russian-gas-payments-under-new-decree>

Bundokji said:

An EC spokesperson told S&P Global Commodity Insights on April 22, however, that the EU's position remained that existing supply contracts should be honored.

"With our G7 partners, we have clearly expressed our position: agreed contracts must be respected," the EC spokesperson said.

"97% of the relevant contracts explicitly stipulate payment in euros or dollars. Companies with such contracts should not accede to Russian demands," the spokesperson said.

"The EU will continue to respond in a united manner to this latest attempt by Russia to circumvent our sanctions."

Malcolm wrote:

Etc.

Your speculations continue to be off topic. They resemble this:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 24th, 2022 at 1:10 AM

Title: Re: another question about rebirth

Content:

clyde said:

In any case, I'm not a materialist and I don't believe consciousness is an epiphenomena. I know there is no self, that impermanence and emptiness are the mark (true) of all dharmas.

So I don't understand how one can remember (meaning to recall an event you experienced) events in their past life. Where are those memories held? And if its the ālāyavijñāna, do we each get a separate, personal one?

Malcolm wrote:
[/quote]

Yup.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, April 24th, 2022 at 8:50 AM
Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism
Content:

Queequeg said:
I can understand not wanting to live here, but to actually loathe it? Well. Haters gonna hate.

Malcolm wrote:
It was a different town when my Van Dyke ancestors settled it and the Hudson Valley.

KristenM said:
So do you know Dick?

Malcolm wrote:
He's from the Arizona Van Dykes, the son of my great grandfather's brother.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, April 24th, 2022 at 8:54 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine News
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, April 24th, 2022 at 9:09 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine News
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, April 24th, 2022 at 7:52 PM
Title: Re: Ukraine News
Content:

PeterC said:
I saw Johnson's press conference - which he did alone, not with modi. The only questions anyone asked him were “why are you still prime minister after everything you’ve done” and “why do you say that India stands with you on Ukraine when they’re helping Russia diplomatically and economically?”. As usual, he had no answers. He is a clown. Worse, actually, because clowns are funny. Apart from possibly pennywise, Kristy and sideshow bob.

Malcolm wrote:

The real point was Hertling’s reasons why Putin will lose.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 24th, 2022 at 7:55 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

PeterC said:

Uh - heard of sanctions?

Bundokji said:

The success of the sanctions is disputed especially when its effects are measured against its declared objectives.

Malcolm wrote:

That’s because you are not paying attention. Russia is largely dependent on imports. They manufacture nothing. Their defense industry has been severely hampered since 2014 in assembling their latest tanks, etc. sanctions work.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 24th, 2022 at 8:02 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 24th, 2022 at 9:22 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

That’s because you are not paying attention. Russia is largely dependent on imports. They manufacture nothing. Their defense industry has been severely hampered since 2014 in assembling their latest tanks, etc. sanctions work.

Bundokji said:

Most nations on earth largely depend on imports, but some goods are considered more strategic than others. Wheat and gas are more essential to survival than electronics. It is also not evident to what extent the sanctions would hamper their ability to import what they need either from China or from India. In a previous post, you mentioned black markets in relation to the real value of the Ruble. When there is a law, there is a shadow. When there are sanctions, there are numerous ways of going around them. Had the law been one sided, all nations that have been subjected to sanctions would have bearished.

Since Putin became the president of Russia, Russia invested more in qualitative weaponry to maintain the balance of deterrence with the west. They invested much less in modernizing conventional weapons except through demonstrating their technological know-how. Add to their latest tanks the SU 57, which is a fifth generation fighter with very limited numbers produced. This would allow them to keep pace with the technological advancement of rival armies until conditions turn into their favor. Previous sanctions did not prevent their military misadventure in Ukraine, even with the less advanced conventional weapons at their disposal, knowing that the west would think twice before interfering directly. The nature of the regime and the collective mindset seems to make them much more tolerant to short term losses than their western counterparts. Same thing can be said about the impact of economic sanctions in my opinion.

Malcolm wrote:

You missed the point. Development and production of new weapons systems in Russia hit a wall in 2014 because of sanctions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 24th, 2022 at 10:42 PM

Title: Re: "Radical" Ekayāna and the liberation of non-Buddhists?

Content:

Chinnamasta said:

Since compassion comes due to equal nature of all phenomena, I think this is a possible gateway for "non-buddhist" to come to same realization.

Malcolm wrote:

Compassion is incapable of uprooting afflictions. It is therefore, not a gateway to realization.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 24th, 2022 at 10:47 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Ayu said:

IDK, if it's true, but a German source (t-online) says, Putin is holding the table in this strange manner (see below), because he is trying to hide a tremor which he showed before.

Anyhow, it seems to me somehow those old politicians should not interfere in such exhausting tasks like war. He really looks weak and broken.

Malcolm wrote:

There are several pictures of recent vintage which show him clutching the corner of a table with his right hand.

Unfortunately, Russia is not a democracy, so we can expect more of the same type of absolutist leadership with the next FSB dictator when Putin passes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 24th, 2022 at 10:53 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

PeterC said:

You continue to disrupt a discussion on a serious topic with bad misinformation.

Malcolm wrote:

Agreed. This user has no facts to offer. I suggest we stop responding to this bullshit, sanction it in other words.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 24th, 2022 at 10:57 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

PeterC said:

Their military capability at this point is pathetic.

Malcolm wrote:

This is what Russian modernization looks like:

Russia is entering the Mythical Man-Month stage of operations:

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/The_Mythical_Man-Month

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 24th, 2022 at 11:01 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Ayu said:

IDK, if it's true, but a German source (t-online) says, Putin is holding the table in this strange manner (see below), because he is trying to hide a tremor which he showed before.

Anyhow, it seems to me somehow those old politicians should not interfere in such exhausting tasks like war. He really looks weak and broken.

Malcolm wrote:

There are several pictures of recent vintage which show him clutching the corner of a table with his right hand.

Unfortunately, Russia is not a democracy, so we can expect more of the same type of absolutist leadership with the next FSB dictator when Putin passes.

Ayu said:

Well, I was not speculating on his end. It just seems interesting to me. He looked like being full of energy when he started that war. Like an age-denier. Two months later he looks as old as he is.

This brings me to two conclusions:

- even for hateful leaders war is not refreshing,
- Putin not a demon but a human being, trembling upon his terrible deeds.

Malcolm wrote:

The rumor is he has Parkinson's. It's not a good way to go. Putin, like almost all leaders, is not going to a better rebirth.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 24th, 2022 at 11:48 PM

Title: Re: Though the view should be as vast as the sky, keep your conduct as fine as barley flour.

Content:

heart said:

He gave Patrul Rinpoche a direct introduction by beating him up and spitting in his face and calling him an old dog. Was it bad behaviour or was it fortunate for the whole lineage of Longchen Nyingtik?

Malcolm wrote:

The immediate problem here is assuming that every Vajrayāna practitioner is sufficiently ripened to benefit from such treatment and has sufficient faith in their teacher not to flee in terror.

Some western students hear rumors of such antics by Tibetan teachers. They then develop a kind of machismo around tolerating such displays. All I can say is that all of my gurus have been unfailingly kind to all of their students, and never hit, abused, spat upon, yelled at, or beat up anyone. Tibetans have a culture where they tend to give the benefit of the doubt to the teacher. We do not have such a culture, and to the majority of westerners tolerating such behavior looks rather cultish on the face of it. Wise teachers adapt to circumstances.

The adoption of unconventional behavior in India has a lengthy history, even by the 10th century. The Buddha recorded the behavior of ascetics during his day. Such unconventional behavior was well tolerated in the Indian context by the time of the Buddha. At first, the Tibetans were quite shocked by Indian siddhas and their behavior. Everyone forgets that Padmasambhava was not welcomed warmly by all Tibetans. There was considerable pushback to Padmasambhava by Tibetans as the more reliable early histories in which Padmasambhava is mentioned show. At this point, the person of Padmasambhava is lost in myth and legend, and the few contemporary historical glimpses we see of him the Old Tibetan Annals do not portray anything very remarkable.

By 1000 CE, the Tibetans had largely abandoned their old religion, of which only traces remain, and adopted Indian Tantric Buddhism completely, along with the magical wars siddhas were fighting with Hindus. We tend to view all of this anachronistically. But my point is, the notion of who a guru was and how he or she could treat students evolved in Tibetan society over a long period of time based on Indian antecedents. Indian Siddhas were the Marvel superheroes of Tibetan culture. We forget this, and we ought not.

Even so, was also much suspicion of Indian "atsaras" in later times as well. We have examples of Indian impersonating other more famous Indian teachers, for example, and the general suspicion of Nyingmapas of the time that many of the tantras being brought to Tibet from India were just composed by Indian pandits to rob naive Tibetan translations of gold, etc. But eventually, when the treasure tradition emerged to compete with the new Indian revelations, we see Padmasambhava's myth cycle absorbing the deeds and personas of such famed Indians as Brahmin Vararuci (aka Loden Choksre), etc., and so on.

Thus, when we see teachers bringing up examples of Tilopa and Naropa, Marpa and Milarepa, Do Khyentse and Patrul, we have to remember we are talking about events in cultures not our own, with signifiers which are almost completely alien to the West.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 25th, 2022 at 12:18 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 25th, 2022 at 1:19 AM

Title: Re: Though the view should be as vast as the sky, keep your conduct as fine as barley flour.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

eventually, [...] the treasure tradition emerged to compete with the new Indian revelations

ManiThePainter said:

Are there any good books or academic papers on this subject? It's fascinating.

Malcolm wrote:

Many.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 25th, 2022 at 1:43 AM

Title: Re: The Future of American Buddhism

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

I have a strong inclination Vajrayana is at its global peak.

Malcolm wrote:

Dzogchen will survive until the average lifespan of human beings is 10 years. It is the first Dharma to appear in this eon, when lifespans were limitless, and will be the last Dharma left. So it is written.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 25th, 2022 at 3:51 AM

Title: Re: "Radical" Ekayāna and the liberation of non-Buddhists?

Content:

Chinnamasta said:

Since compassion comes due to equal nature of all phenomena, I think this is a possible gateway for "non-buddhist" to come to same realization.

Malcolm wrote:

Compassion is incapable of uprooting afflictions. It is therefore, not a gateway to realization.

Chinnamasta said:

Realizing the nature of mind is what uproots afflictions. You won't get there without compassion

Malcolm wrote:

Sure you can, for example, arhats.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 25th, 2022 at 10:36 AM

Title: Re: Is Shingon lesser because it has less tantras than Tibetan vajrayana?

Content:

ddorje said:

With all due respect to this idea Malcolm, how do we account for Tulku Pema Wangyal Rinpoche (who directly encouraged a group teaching I was in to be vegan), or Chatral Rinpoche who encouraged vegetarianism?

Malcolm wrote:

I've heard of such opinions. My teachers all reject this point of view as appropriate advice for Vajrayana practitioners.

“Those who eat meat have compassion.”

— Hevajra Tantra

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 25th, 2022 at 10:40 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 25th, 2022 at 11:18 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 25th, 2022 at 11:29 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 25th, 2022 at 7:10 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Missile strike, so it seems.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 25th, 2022 at 8:20 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Malcolm wrote:
Missile strike, so it seems.

Queequeg said:
Taking the fight to the jugular.

It can't be this easy to disrupt Russia's oil trade, can it?

Malcolm wrote:
Yes. Though there is a possibility this is a Russian false flag.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, April 25th, 2022 at 8:31 PM
Title: Re: Toxic Masculinity: The New Standard
Content:

TsultimNamdak said:
Well, the American society is pretty violent by Western standards. However, I don't think it has anything to do with circumcision.

Malcolm wrote:
That's a gross exaggeration. Violent crime in the US is quite low, compared with thirty years ago, even with a recent uptick in urban murders in our larger cities.

Frankly, America is not the violent dystopia imagined by some.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, April 25th, 2022 at 8:34 PM
Title: Re: "Radical" Ekayāna and the liberation of non-Buddhists?
Content:

Chinnamasta said:
just trying to find loopholes for non-buddhists to get there

Malcolm wrote:
There aren't any. Realization arises from right view, that is, insight into emptiness.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, April 25th, 2022 at 8:44 PM
Title: Re: Climate Activist Dies by Self-Immolation
Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:
Honestly, you never know what it even means here when the news calls a Westerner "A Buddhist”, it could mean all kinds of nonsense.

Malcolm wrote:

He was a Shambhalian.

Sad, meaningless, performative stunt.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 25th, 2022 at 8:54 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 25th, 2022 at 10:27 PM

Title: Re: Climate Activist Dies by Self-Immolation

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

I don't know what was in this guy's head, but I agree with Kim that to declare his actions beyond the Buddhist pale ignores a lot of history.

Malcolm wrote:

It's quite unacceptable for a Vajrayāna Buddhist to engage in this kind of act. I am not sure if this person was in fact a Vajrayānī—many people in Shambhala are not—but if he was, it was a root downfall. Vajrayāna Buddhists are not permitted to harm their bodies.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 25th, 2022 at 10:32 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 25th, 2022 at 10:39 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 25th, 2022 at 10:52 PM

Title: Re: Climate Activist Dies by Self-Immolation

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

IIRC quite a few Tibetan monks have self-immolated to protest Chinese occupation.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, this is true. This is one of the reasons such acts are so disturbing to the Tibetan community. There is no historical precedent for this act in Tibetan history.

Most of the Tibetans who self-immolated were not monastics. Many of the monastics all come from the same monastery in Tibet:

<https://savetibet.org/tibetan-self-immolations/>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 25th, 2022 at 10:58 PM

Title: Re: Are all Green Tara sadhanas across lineage, uniform? the same? similar?

Content:

MiphamFan said:

E.g. if you have the transmission of the Adzom Drugpa Green Tara, which is Nyingma, you still need the transmission of the Chokling Tersar Green Tara if you want to practise the Chokling Tersar one

Malcolm wrote:

No, not really. For example, if you have one Vajrakīlāya empowerment, you can practice pretty much any Vajrakīlāya sadhana. Westerners make up all kinds of rules out of thin air.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 25th, 2022 at 11:31 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 25th, 2022 at 11:35 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 26th, 2022 at 12:00 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 26th, 2022 at 1:07 AM

Title: Re: "Radical" Ekayāna and the liberation of non-Buddhists?

Content:

Chinnamasta said:

Yes, but emptiness and compassion is inseparable.

Malcolm wrote:

They are separable. That's why we have arhats.

Chinnamasta said:

Are buddhists the only one that can have deep and profound compassion?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, actually. You are just suffering from not having learned the difference between mundane compassion and great compassion.

Chinnamasta said:

if compassion is the seed of emptiness realization,

Malcolm wrote:

It isn't. It is the seed of bodhicitta, the aspiration to become a buddha in order to benefit sentient beings. One can realize emptiness without that aspiration.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 26th, 2022 at 1:18 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 26th, 2022 at 4:24 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 26th, 2022 at 5:26 AM

Title: Re: "Radical" Ekayāna and the liberation of non-Buddhists?

Content:

Chinnamasta said:

- No. Dharmakaya emptiness, or emptiness of all phenomena, isn't the same emptiness that arhats realize.

Malcolm wrote:

Candrakīrti asserts that it is. You can take it up with him. You are confusing what arhats and pratyekabuddhas realize with śrāvaka philosophical systems. Both arhats and pratyekabuddhas also realize the absence of inherent existence. There is no other emptiness apart from that, other than a bunch of designations: outer emptiness, inner emptiness, etc., etc.

For example, can you show me a single place in the Madhyamakakārika of Nāgārjuna where he discusses compassion? No, you cannot.

If one wishes for full buddhahood, one must have Mahāyāna bodhicitta; but that is not required for arhatship. This is why people are warned that even if their meditation of emptiness is perfect according to Mahāyāna philosophy, if they lack bodhicitta, they will not achieve anything other than the cessation realized by arhats. Nevertheless, such people are liberated, free of affliction, and so on. Not only this, but there is such a thing as nonafflictive ignorance, even some buddhas suffer from it, such as tenth stage bodhisattvas. The only beings who are completely free of nonafflictive ignorance are samyaksambuddhas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 26th, 2022 at 5:41 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 26th, 2022 at 8:41 AM

Title: Re: Are all Green Tara sadhanas across lineage, uniform? the same? similar?

Content:

Nalanda said:

I got a "reading" for Green Tara practice from my Nyingma lama. Is that lung or empowerment?

Malcolm wrote:

Lung.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 26th, 2022 at 9:51 AM

Title: Re: Climate Activist Dies by Self-Immolation

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It's way simpler to understand that we generally live in samsara, and there is nothing we can do to fix it. At best, we can offer some palliatives and that's about it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 26th, 2022 at 10:03 AM

Title: Re: Are all Green Tara sadhanas across lineage, uniform? the same? similar?

Content:

MiphamFan said:

E.g. if you have the transmission of the Adzom Drugpa Green Tara, which is Nyingma, you still need the transmission of the Chokling Tersar Green Tara if you want to practise the Chokling Tersar one

Malcolm wrote:

No, not really. For example, if you have one Vajrakīlāya empowerment, you can practice pretty much any Vajrakīlāya sadhana. Westerners make up all kinds of rules out of thin air.

stoneinfofocus said:

Malcolm la, would you be able to say a bit more about this? I understand that in Dzogchen, if one has rigpa'i tsal wang, one theoretically only really needs the transmission of a practice to do it rather than a separate empowerment. Is there a similar concept behind just needing one empowerment of a deity to do other sadhanas from other lineages?

Malcolm wrote:

That depends on the capacity of the teacher. If they understand things correctly and are operating from the point of authentic knowledge of the teachings and the students have confidence, then everything can be done in a very simple way. But if the teacher has some doubts, or the student has doubts, then doing things in a more complicated way may be desirable. There is no fixed rule.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 26th, 2022 at 10:07 AM

Title: Re: Climate Activist Dies by Self-Immolation

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It's way simpler to understand that we generally live in samsara, and there is nothing we can do to fix it. At best, we can offer some palliatives and that's about it.

Kim O'Hara said:

Defeatism is not a solution to either climate change or its effects on our mental health.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

This is not defeatism, this is Dharma. There isn't a pinprick of happiness in samsara. That does not mean one cannot enjoy oneself or that offering palliative care for the suffering of others is a waste of time. It's just what we do.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 26th, 2022 at 10:26 AM

Title: Re: Is Shingon lesser because it has less tantras than Tibetan vajrayana?

Content:

ddorje said:

It seems to be talked about in many different ways.

I can understand if it's in the context tshog sha

Malcolm wrote:

All meals are supposed to be ganapujas. When the tantras talk pure and impure food, they are not talking about feces vs. filet mignon. They are talking about meat (outcast) versus vegetarian (twiceborn), etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 26th, 2022 at 8:13 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 26th, 2022 at 8:43 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 26th, 2022 at 9:55 PM

Title: Re: Twitter

Content:

Queequeg said:

Elon Musk will own Twitter. Seems like wanting herpes. He'll find out modding a social media site is a thankless job.

PeterC said:

Did you see the terms of the financing he's getting? This is a very, very expensive toy, and he's probably going to wreck it anyway

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, the interest alone is more than Twitter earns in a year.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 26th, 2022 at 10:57 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 26th, 2022 at 11:31 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 26th, 2022 at 11:41 PM

Title: Re: Climate Activist Dies by Self-Immolation

Content:

JieshiShan said:

let's make a big mental salad with our progressive agenda preferences...and then we can cover it all up with a veneer of "sensei" and "Zen Master-"

Malcolm wrote:

I guess she sure triggered you.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 26th, 2022 at 11:45 PM

Title: Re: Toxic Masculinity: The New Standard

Content:

Ayu said:

Just resume who is circumcised in the US. Those men are more aggressive than usual Christians in the US?

This sounds so narrow and biased - it's not only not worth to discuss, it's also telling what alright people would like to hear.

KristenM said:

Hi Ayu, apparently my misunderstanding is due to in the US most Americans like myself think circumcision is the norm for white males. In the US, only about 1.1% of the population is Muslim, not sure how many are Jewish but it's likely a relatively small proportion. As far as uncircumcised men in the US, that's more common from Hispanic backgrounds. The European who espoused the view may very well have known a different reality like you say, and in that context it surely is a racist statement. Apologies for the confusion.

Ayu said:

My apologies as well for heated speech. I had no idea that this is different in USA.

Malcolm wrote:

Can we please get back to toxic masculinity?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 27th, 2022 at 12:16 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 27th, 2022 at 1:37 AM

Title: Re: Twitter

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 27th, 2022 at 2:07 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 27th, 2022 at 2:16 AM

Title: Re: Climate Activist Dies by Self-Immolation

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 27th, 2022 at 2:24 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, April 27th, 2022 at 3:54 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine News
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
Yes, I saw this. Wankers.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, April 27th, 2022 at 4:45 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine News
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, April 27th, 2022 at 6:40 AM
Title: Re: "Radical" Ekayāna and the liberation of non-Buddhists?
Content:
Chinnamasta said:
“To bodhicitta, I pay no homage”—
Saying such is evil speech.
Where there are no bodhisattvas,
There will be no dharmakāya. [69]

....

With bodhicitta, it is just the same:
When it's guarded, fostered, and refined,
Arhats, conditioned realizers, Buddhas too
Will then arise and spring from it. [72]

....

The nonbeing of all beings—
This nature is its sphere.
The mighty bodhicitta seeing it
Is fully stainless dharmakāya. [100]

- Few verses from Nagarjuna's In Praise of Dharmadatu.

Malcolm wrote:
This text is very late and cannot be accepted as original Nag. In any case, I was referring to the Madhyamakakarikas, the most important text on the meaning of emptiness in Mahayana, other than the Perfection of Wisdom Sutras.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 27th, 2022 at 7:35 AM

Title: Re: Climate Activist Dies by Self-Immolation

Content:

seeker242 said:

Unfortunate that the man felt he needed to do this. May he be reborn in favorable circumstances.

That said, doesn't sound very loony if you ask me.

Malcolm wrote:

Complete waste of a precious human birth. A bodhisattva's responsibility is to preserve themselves to aid others. Can't do that if you off yourself.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 27th, 2022 at 9:33 AM

Title: Re: Opinions on Roger Jackson's "Rebirth"?

Content:

tobes said:

I suspect that if we did a straw poll here, long term practitioners have assented to rebirth etc precisely because they have encountered great practitioners and seen directly that such beings see more to reality than they do. Shabda pramana follows from this.

Malcolm wrote:

Can't speak for others, but that is not why I came to accept rebirth. I came to accept rebirth because I had first inferred that emptiness and dependent origination were the correct view.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 27th, 2022 at 9:37 AM

Title: Re: Climate Activist Dies by Self-Immolation

Content:

KristenM said:

planning to kill themselves

seeker242 said:

Seems nobody knew he was planning this. And I would bet any amount that if he had told any teachers about this, they most certainly would have tried to stop him.

KristenM said:

I would hope so. I'm not going to keep going on about it. I thought it was an interesting story related to Buddhism in a way, but no need to belabor the point when essentially we all agree and should spend our energy on more helpful activities.

Malcolm wrote:

I personally think the man likely suffered from severe mental illness,

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 27th, 2022 at 10:19 AM

Title: Re: Climate Activist Dies by Self-Immolation

Content:

Queequeg said:

Reference has been made to Tibetans who have set themselves on fire.

Malcolm wrote:

As I pointed out, there is no Tibetan Buddhist context for these acts. This man was not politically oppressed. Self-immolations in Vietnam and Tibet are political protests rooted in cultural survival.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 27th, 2022 at 10:06 PM

Title: Re: Climate Activist Dies by Self-Immolation

Content:

Queequeg said:

Suicide as a means of survival?

Malcolm wrote:

Martyrs offer powerful symbolism which create cultural unity.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 27th, 2022 at 10:31 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 27th, 2022 at 10:52 PM

Title: Re: What are the 4 noble truths?

Content:

shanyin said:

What are the 4 noble truths? I realize I can look it up (on the internet), but I am suspicious of certain information that says "there is suffering" or "Life is dukkha". I am not a secular Buddhist at the time, nor am I a religious person.

Malcolm wrote:

- 1) Suffering
- 2) The cause of suffering
- 3) The cessation of suffering
- 4) The eightfold path

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 27th, 2022 at 11:04 PM

Title: Re: the great vegetarian debate

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Instead, the whole industry is so impersonal as to make the idea that someone buying meat in a modern market is karmically responsible for the death of the piece of flesh of a slaughtered animal ludicrous. If this is the case then all vegans and vegetarians are karmically responsible for all the animals who died in the cultivation of grain and so on for their meals.

KathyLauren said:

You are certainly entitled to your opinion. I find your assertion that the customer is not karmically responsible equally ludicrous, for the reasons I stated.

As for the animals that died in the production of vegetarian food, there are two arguments that make it ridiculous to bring it up. First, that killing is mostly accidental (acknowledging that the use of pesticides is intentional - a good reason to go organic),

Malcolm wrote:

Organic agriculture uses the same amount of pesticides as conventional agriculture, they are just "organic."

<https://news.agropages.com/News/NewsDetail---8680.htm>

KathyLauren said:

and karma involves intention.

Malcolm wrote:

Right, so when an organic farmer uses pesticides, he is killing sentient beings and you are supporting that, so according to your own argument, you are accumulating negative karma.

KathyLauren said:

Secondly, raising animals for slaughter requires ten times the resources per calorie that vegetarian food does, so the accidental and/or intentional killing of rodents and insects is ten times what it is for vegetarian food. So, for meat eaters to hold that over the heads of vegetarians as an example of how hypocritical we are is, well, ludicrous.

Malcolm wrote:

Making religious arguments about meat vs. veg is stupid. I have already pointed out to you multiple times that health and environmental reasons against eating meat are more sound than tenuous arguments involving karma, harm-reduction, etc. For example, I don't see vegans eschewing the use of plastic in their garments. Yet, arguably the penetration of plastic into the whole food chain, from plankton on up is a serious crisis no one wants to address, largely caused by microfibers in clothing and the breakdown of plastic garbage in the oceans, etc. There is literally plastic in our rain water now.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 28th, 2022 at 12:01 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 28th, 2022 at 12:21 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 28th, 2022 at 5:07 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Bundokji said:

Does the cutting of Russian gas supplies on Poland and Bulgaria mean that other European nations are paying for the gas in Ruble? According to the news, these two nations refused to pay in Ruble, how about the rest?

Malcolm wrote:

Hungary for sure, probably Austria, and two other unspecified countries—probably Italy is one of them.

However, the EU has stated that paying directly in rubles violates sanctions.

<https://www.politico.eu/article/youre-next-kremlin-warns-anyone-not-paying-in-rubles-also-faces-gas-shutoff/>

Bundokji said:

Both Poland and Bulgaria said they had made payments on time for their gas — but not in Russian currency — but were still cut off.

Malcolm wrote:

So the EU workaround is not likely to work in the long term, even though Ten EU countries have opened accounts at Gazprombank:

In guidance issued earlier this month, the Commission said companies could open an account with Gazprombank (as requested by Moscow) to make payments for gas in euros or dollars (as specified in their contracts) and then issue a declaration that their payment obligation ends with the deposit of funds. That leaves any later conversion into rubles in Russian hands.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 28th, 2022 at 5:28 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Bundokji said:

I interpret this as poor coordination between European allies. If major EU nations declared or agreed that opening accounts in Ruble

Malcolm wrote:

You continue to misunderstand. These countries do not open accounts in rubles. They open accounts into which they deposit dollars or euros, per their contracts. Russia converts these payments into rubles, just as the article states.

Bundokji said:

then this should have not been an issue for Poland and Hungary.

Malcolm wrote:

Poland and Bulgaria, as you can see, was cut off for not paying directly in the ruble. They paid in the agreed upon currency of exchange: dollars or euros.

Hungary and three other unnamed countries have decided to pay directly in rubles.

They will be punished for violating the sanctions. The EU sanctions are clear: contracts written to be paid in dollars or euros cannot be paid in rubles.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 28th, 2022 at 6:02 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Bundokji said:

I interpret this as poor coordination between European allies. If major EU nations declared or agreed that opening accounts in Ruble

Malcolm wrote:

You continue to misunderstand. These countries do not open accounts in rubles. They open accounts into which they deposit dollars or euros, per their contracts. Russia converts these payments into rubles, just as the article states.

Bundokji said:

then this should have not been an issue for Poland and Hungary.

Malcolm wrote:

Poland and Bulgaria, as you can see, was cut off for not paying directly in the ruble. They paid in the agreed upon currency of exchange: dollars or euros.

Hungary and three other unnamed countries have decided to pay directly in rubles. They will be punished for violating the sanctions. The EU sanctions are clear: contracts written to be paid in dollars or euros cannot be paid in rubles.

Bundokji said:

Correct me if i am wrong, but what you are presenting is half of the story (as i know it). Major EU nations continue to deposit dollars or euros as you said, but they signed or agreed to open Ruble accounts with Gazprombank after the Russian decree.

Malcolm wrote:

No, you are quite mistaken.

From TASS:

MOSCOW, April 27. /TASS/. At least ten European companies buying Russian natural gas have already opened accounts at Gazprombank needed to meet Russia's demand to pay in rubles, Bloomberg reported on Wednesday.

According to a source close to Gazprom, 4 have already made payments.

The source added that next settlements for gas will be made after May 15.

On March 31, Russian President Vladimir Putin signed a decree that lays out a new procedure for paying for gas supplies by buyers from unfriendly countries. Now such states must transfer funds in foreign currencies to Gazprombank, which will buy rubles on exchanges and transfer them to special ruble accounts of importers. It is from these accounts payment for deliveries will be made.

https://tass.com/economy/1443937?utm_source=google.com&utm_medium=organic&utm_campaign=google.com&utm_referrer=google.com

The whole thing is handled from the RUSSIAN side. The so-called special accounts (holding accounts) are not opened by the importers, but by Gazprombank. The deposited euros or dollars are converted by Gazprombank into rubles, moved into these holding accounts for Gazprombanks book keeping.

The whole purpose of this is not jack up the ruble. The whole purpose of this is collect dollars and euros, because the assets in dollars and euros of Russia have largely been frozen. 282 billion dollars of Russias foreign reserves, slightly more than half, have been frozen. Why? Because Russia stores most of the foreign reserves in foreign banks.

<https://www.nbcnews.com/data-graphics/russian-bank-foreign-reserve-billions-frozen-sanctions-n1292153>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 28th, 2022 at 10:03 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The whole thing is handled from the RUSSIAN side. The so-called special accounts (holding accounts) are not opened by the importers, but by Gazprombank. The deposited euros or dollars are converted by Gazprombank into rubles, moved into these holding accounts for Gazprombanks book keeping.

Bundokji said:

Which is essentially what i said! They knowingly continued to purchase Russian gas after the Ruble accounts been opened. Their justification is what you described. Why similar arrangements were not followed with Poland and Hungary? Gazprombank could have opened similar accounts for these two countries, and they could have claimed (as per the lead of the major European counterparts) that its all the exporter internal affairs that have little to do with the legitimacy of what they do in the context of breaking the sanctions! What does their refusal to pay in Ruble exactly mean? does it mean that Russia showed more leniency with major European countries and decided to have different policy/approach with others?

The whole purpose of this is not jack up the ruble. The whole purpose of this is collect dollars and euros, because the assets in dollars and euros of Russia have largely been frozen. 282 billion dollars of Russias foreign reserves, slightly more than half, have been frozen. Why? Because Russia stores most of the foreign reserves in foreign banks.

It coincided with the Ruble recovery nonetheless. From the Russian perspective as i imagine it, Ruble recovery accompanied by having a flow of USD and Euro to fund their imports is not a bad thing.

Malcolm wrote:

Both Poland and Bulgaria's gas contracts were up at the end of this year, so it appears they have much less incentive to continue buying gas from Russia, and also, Poland has apparently been agitating for alternatives to Russian gas for some years. Hungary is in Putin's pocket at the moment.

The "recovery" of the ruble is a manipulation, its price does not represent its true market value. No one wants to buy the ruble right now at any price. Russia's energy minister announced today they would pump 18% less oil in 2022.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 28th, 2022 at 10:30 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

So much for the Gazprombank gambit:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 28th, 2022 at 7:47 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 28th, 2022 at 8:48 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Bundokji said:

. I would not be surprised if Poland's and Hungary's refusal of using the Ruble was instigated by the US to embarrass these two countries. Beyond the facade of unity, there can be many divisions.

Malcolm wrote:

You really don't pay attention very well. Hungary is paying in rubles directly. Ok, back into the kill file.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 28th, 2022 at 9:32 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

You really don't pay attention very well. Hungary is paying in rubles directly. Ok, back into the kill file.

Bundokji said:

If they are paying in Ruble directly, then why Russia cut their gas supplies?

Könchok Thrinley said:

There is a difference between Hungary and Bulgaria.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, Russia did not cut off Hungary.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 28th, 2022 at 9:38 PM

Title: Re: karma and its fruit or fruits

Content:

clyde said:

I don't think he taught that a volitional act has one and only one 'fruit'.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, actually he did. Each action has exactly one vipaka, ripening. Otherwise, there is the problem of a cause existing at the same time as it's result.

clyde said:

Malcolm, The Buddhist teachers I've heard or read who have addressed or mentioned this issue have all presented it as "fruits", a multitude of effects.

Can you point to where the Buddha said that each karmic event caused one and only one effect?

Malcolm wrote:

Vasubandhu, Abhidharmakośabhaṣyā 4:95a:

One action projects one arising.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 29th, 2022 at 1:14 AM

Title: Re: karma and its fruit or fruits

Content:

clyde said:

Malcolm, The Buddhist teachers I've heard or read who have addressed or mentioned this issue have all presented it as "fruits", a multitude of effects.

Can you point to where the Buddha said that each karmic event caused one and only one effect?

Malcolm wrote:

Vasubandhu, Abhidharmakośabhaṣyā 4:95a:

One action projects one arising.

clyde said:

Thank you. I'll take a look at it.

To be clear, this is the work of a Buddhist scholar/monk, not a direct teaching of the Buddha, yes?

Malcolm wrote:

It's Abhidharma, i.e., advanced Dharma analysis by arhats.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 29th, 2022 at 1:19 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Queequeg said:

The nominal value of the ruble is not reliable because it is not freely floating as other currencies are.

PeterC said:

That's a bit of an understatement. It's not that long ago that when Russian banks had large nondeliverable forwards on the ruble expiring, they would shift the value of the currency for a couple of days to stiff their counterparties.

But at some level the means by which Russian gas is paid for is not really the issue. The issue for Western Europe is how dependant they are on Russian supply, and for Russia, what options they have to sell the production elsewhere. I'm sure the customers will develop alternative supply options much faster than Russia will develop alternative offtake routes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 29th, 2022 at 1:23 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 29th, 2022 at 1:47 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Queequeg said:

The Ukrainians refused to play along with Russia's narrative and changed the narrative for the world. The West reluctantly came to Ukraine's aid because it is demanded by our ideals but also our real security - so long as Russia was just poaching little countries here and there, so what, really. But once they moved on Ukraine and incidentally tried to move their effective border up against the EU, things got serious.

Malcolm wrote:

What we are dealing with here is an autocratic reaction to modernity and liberalism internationalism:

Illiberal states—autocratic and authoritarian regimes—might want to participate in the open, rules-based system but worry about its long-term effects on their ruling class and other entrenched interests.

Ikenberry, G. John. A World Safe for Democracy . Yale University Press. Kindle Edition.

Because Trump weakened this order, this conflict has become existential due to Biden's rebuilding the liberal consensus, and China and Russia view the liberal international order as a threat. Why? Because liberal democracy must promote other liberal democracies for mutual security. The more of us, the better.

Queequeg said:

Liberal internationalism has moralist tendencies and activist impulses, but it is ultimately a reform-oriented and pragmatic endeavor. Modern liberals do not embrace democratic governments, market-based economic systems, and international institutions out of idealism or as tools of empire but as arrangements better suited to realizing human interests than the alternatives. Liberal internationalists hold that world politics requires institutional cooperation and political integration in response to relentlessly rising economic and security interdependence...Liberal democracies are understood to have distinctive goals for international order as well as distinctive capacities to cooperate with other liberal states. Interdependence, a fundamental condition of modern society, calls forth liberal internationalist agendas for cooperation and prompts nations to create international institutions as tools for managing and reconciling sovereignty and interdependence. Liberal democracies cannot be secure or prosperous alone; they must create a larger world so as to survive and advance.

Malcolm wrote:

Ikenberry, G. John. A World Safe for Democracy . Yale University Press. Kindle Edition.

The US's initial reluctance arose from reflecting on our error in pursuing liberal agendas in countries that did not have native liberal-democracy movements. But since we have seen that the Ukrainians indeed wish to participate in the rules-based liberal international order, we steeled our resolve and now we are really helping them to win this war that Russia forced on the world. It's that simple. It represents the continuation of post-WWII US foreign policy. Basically, it's jump on or get out of the way.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 29th, 2022 at 2:35 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The US's initial reluctance arose from reflecting on our error in pursuing liberal agendas in countries that did not have native liberal-democracy movements. But since we have seen that the Ukrainians indeed wish to participate in the rules-based liberal international order, we steeled our resolve and now we are really helping them to win this war that Russia forced on the world. It's that simple. It represents the continuation of post-WWII US foreign policy. Basically, it's jump on or get out of the way.

Queequeg said:

I hope. And I hope this impacts us at home against the illiberalism rising here.

Malcolm wrote:

The problem at home are the MARs, identified in the 1980's by a far-right conservative, Samuel Todd Francis:

How could a political movement rise up to challenge ruling elites? Francis believed it required capturing the anger and resentment of a class of Americans whose interests the managerial revolution had not benefited. He called them "Middle American Radicals" and suggested they would soon form a revolutionary class...MARs were neither a distinct economic class nor a political movement committed to abstract principles. He claimed that MARs were united by a common "attitude" or "temperament" about their place in American society. Their grasp of American political history, to say nothing of their knowledge of Western culture, reflected the appalling state of general literacy. Francis frequently referred to them as a cultural "proletariat," and noted that many rely on government help in the form of benefits or loans. As Francis began to imagine a movement built around MAR interests, he cautioned that it might appear ideologically eclectic or even incoherent. MARs tend not to think about politics primarily in terms of the size of government, and they defend neither the minimal state nor the welfare state as a matter of strict principle. What made them "radical," Francis maintained, was their instinctive defense of communal roots and their visceral opposition to cosmopolitan values. MARs are motivated by a particular view of political life, if not a systematic ideology. Francis called it a "domestic ethic," and claimed it as the basis of a viable future conservatism.¹⁷ It reflects a traditional impulse, suppressed by liberal individualism, that sees political life in terms of interlocking loyalties that link the family to the nation. It assesses policies not by an impersonal standard of justice, but by whether they protect and enhance group well-being. Francis believed he had found his vanguard, who lacked only an awareness of its shared interests. It was a social movement, about to be born, that would unapologetically place citizens over foreigners; majorities over minorities; the native-born over recent immigrants; the ordinary over the transgressive; and fidelity to a homeland over cosmopolitan ideals. Rose, Matthew. A World after Liberalism. Yale University Press. Kindle Edition.

This is Trumpism. In the 19th century, they were the Know Nothing Party.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 29th, 2022 at 2:42 AM

Title: Re: Do you need lung to read the book Precious Treasury by Longchenpa

Content:

ManiThePainter said:

Does this treasury have an auto-commentary? Or is it only some of the Seven Treasuries which have auto-commentaries?

Malcolm wrote:

it does.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 29th, 2022 at 3:45 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Queequeg said:

Yeah. B, that's a terrible comeback.

Bundokji said:

Liberalism is another term to describe generosity.

Malcolm wrote:

"Liberalism" means different things to different peoples in different epochs, and these meanings are often quite at odds with each other. Liberal internationalism, of the Wilsonian variety, is definitely hegemonic, deliberately so, but it is not imperialist.

Bundokji said:

Within this mindset, encouraging Ukraine to challenge Russia is not a bad advise,

Malcolm wrote:

Ukraine did not challenge Russia, Russia invaded Ukraine.

Bundokji said:

even if this causes destruction and unnecessary suffering. This usually comes along with promises of better future, to rationalize short term self-inflicted misery.

Malcolm wrote:

The people causing unnecessary suffering is the Russian army. They can stop anytime. But they won't because Russia is imperialist and always has been, since its beginning.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 29th, 2022 at 4:12 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Queequeg said:

Yeah. B, that's a terrible comeback.

Bundokji said:

Liberalism is another term to describe generosity. If it does not lead to non-violence, then how it can be generous?

Norwegian mentioned political philosophy, but in the context of the Buddha's teachings, the word "sabba" is known through negation. The three marks of existence are preceded by sabba, which shows an inherent limitation in worldly ways. This limitation expresses itself in what Malcolm shared, the urge to convert, even if violence is what it takes. This very urge translates into encouraging others to act against their own interest as long as they pretend to follow one's own ideology and become a member of the group. Within this mindset, encouraging Ukraine to challenge Russia is not a bad advice, even if this causes destruction and unnecessary suffering. This usually comes along with promises of better future, to rationalize short term self-inflicted misery.

Coming back as a cheap debating trick is not my intention. Asking direct questions to more knowledgeable members might improve my understanding.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 29th, 2022 at 4:16 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 29th, 2022 at 5:03 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 29th, 2022 at 5:23 AM

Title: Re: Conditioned vs Unconditioned

Content:

TAG said:

Conditioned phenomena have entanglements and inverted structures of opposing inward and outward pressures that produce the formations that appear in the world: including physical and mental formations.

Unconditioned phenomena lack the entanglements and inverted structures of opposing inward and outward pressures that are capable of producing formations or appearances: including physical and mental formations.

Since no formations and no appearances happened in the "unconditioned world," there are no formations or appearances of suffering as well.

An extremely brief synopsis.

Malcolm wrote:

Unconditioned phenomena are just nonexistent. There are only four kinds of unconditioned phenomena in Buddhism: space, the two cessations, and emptiness, and they are all negations. Nirvana, for example, is simply the absence of afflictions which lead to rebirth.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 29th, 2022 at 6:34 AM

Title: Re: Conditioned vs Unconditioned

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Unconditioned phenomena are just nonexistent. There are only four kinds of unconditioned phenomena in Buddhism: space, the two cessations, and emptiness, and they are all negations. Nirvana, for example, is simply the absence of afflictions which lead to rebirth.

PadmaVonSamba said:

In saying that space, the two cessations, and emptiness are non-existent, what do you mean by not “existing”? Do you mean they are not regarded as ‘things’ (phenomena)?

One could say that emptiness “exists” as a characteristic of phenomena just as heat exists as a characteristic of fire.

This is why I think the term “occur” is often better.

Malcolm wrote:

They are dharmas because they bear characteristics. Space is the absence of obstruction, cessation (both kinds) is the absence of a cause, emptiness is the absence of inherent existence.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 29th, 2022 at 7:38 AM

Title: Re: karma and its fruit or fruits

Content:

clyde said:

Nothing arises from a single cause.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct. But a given cause can only produce a single result. A cause expires upon the production of its result. This does not mean a seed is a sufficient cause of a sprout, but it is the necessary cause. Sunlight, warmth, and moisture are also needed as conditions. But in absence of a seed, they won't produce a sprout.

This also applies to a karma— a karma is exhausted when it produces its vipaka. But in order to produce its result, conditions necessarily come into play.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 29th, 2022 at 8:38 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 29th, 2022 at 11:06 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 29th, 2022 at 11:40 AM

Title: Re: karma and its fruit or fruits

Content:

haha said:

Here is an example for one karma but five hundred vipaka.

Malcolm wrote:

An actual deed of killing, etc., is not confined to a single moment of intention. It is rather a series of moments of intention—from anticipating it, executing the deed, and then relishing in the satisfaction of having carried it out. Each of these moments of intention is a discrete karma, each with separate force and vipaka. Thus one deed of killing, made up of many actions, can have in many results. But each result is the ripening of an individual karma, and the case above, 500 individual throwing karmas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 29th, 2022 at 7:20 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 29th, 2022 at 9:47 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Out of curiosity, do you think that both Trump and Putin have been unjustly "demonized?"

Bundokji said:

Yes.

Malcolm wrote:

That's one point of view—foolish and short sighted—but one point of view.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 29th, 2022 at 10:56 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 29th, 2022 at 11:17 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

That's one point of view—foolish and short sighted—but one point of view.

Bundokji said:

Acknowledged

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 29th, 2022 at 11:21 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 29th, 2022 at 11:46 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Bundokji said:
Acknowledged

Archie2009 said:
"Commander, the woke Rebels demand all surrendering Stormtroopers list their various intersecting identities and assign a privilege to each of them."

Malcolm wrote:
Somehow, I think CRT is not going to be an issue in Ukraine.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, April 30th, 2022 at 12:27 AM
Title: Re: karma and its fruit or fruits
Content:

Malcolm wrote:
An actual deed of killing, etc., is not confined to a single moment of intention. It is rather a series of moments of intention—from anticipating it, executing the deed, and then relishing in the satisfaction of having carried it out. Each of these moments of intention is a discrete karma, each with separate force and vipaka. Thus one deed of killing, made up of many actions, can have in many results. But each result is the ripening of an individual karma, and the case above, 500 individual throwing karmas.

haha said:
Now, it is clear, it is rather a series of moments of intention. It seems that his five hundred intentions with one act of killing produced five hundred vipaka. Thanks.

Malcolm wrote:
500 is one of those group numbers that really just means "many."

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, April 30th, 2022 at 12:35 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine News
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, April 30th, 2022 at 1:30 AM
Title: Re: karma and its fruit or fruits
Content:
Shinjin said:
What would be the karma of a guilty individual like oj simpson who gets acquitted of murder? Does aquital mean that his good karma overrided his bad karma and so he did not have to face any prison time?

Malcolm wrote:

Karma does not care about the justice system.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 30th, 2022 at 2:48 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 30th, 2022 at 2:58 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 30th, 2022 at 8:44 AM

Title: Re: karma and its fruit or fruits

Content:

clyde said:

I thought I was done with this issue. Malcolm and Sadhaka both explained the momentariness of intentions, actions and their effects. And since my sense-organs, including my mental consciousness, don't appear to operate at 'karmic speeds' (1/60th of a finger snap), I can't directly corroborate this, but there's nothing that seems illogical about their understanding.

But Queequeg opens another issue.

Queequeg said:

Karma is a function of the mind. Vipaka is a function of the mind. As functions of the mind, they can't transcend the mind. These are technical terms and if you understand what these terms designate, then things are clear.

clyde said:

If karma and vipaka are functions of the mind, I understand how intentions influence one's mental state, but how does karma influence form (rupa)?

Malcolm wrote:

It influences how our minds experience sensations. Actions ripen only as pleasurable, painful, or neutral sensations.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 30th, 2022 at 8:35 PM

Title: Re: karma and its fruit or fruits

Content:

clyde said:

If karma and vipaka are functions of the mind, I understand how intentions influence one's mental state, but how does karma influence form (rupa)?

Malcolm wrote:

It influences how our minds experience sensations. Actions ripen only as pleasurable, painful, or neutral sensations.

clyde said:

If I understand you correctly, your understanding is that karma effects how we experience sensations - but that karma does not effect which sensations arise, yes?

Malcolm wrote:

Karma vipaka are only sensations, fundamentally. However, the Buddha taught there are a variety of effects of action, long vs short life, Hugh vs low status, health vs illness, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 30th, 2022 at 11:08 PM

Title: Re: karma and its fruit or fruits

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

We may assert that matter exists independently of the mind, but that asserting itself is still based completely on our perceptions.

Malcolm wrote:

It's a reasonable, evidence-based assertion.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 1st, 2022 at 12:39 AM

Title: Re: karma and its fruit or fruits

Content:

Queequeg said:

Most of us, this materialist conditioning casts a mist over Dharma Teachings preventing us from understanding them.

clyde said:

I disagree. It's not materialism that prevents us from understanding the Dharma; it's the belief in a self, an enduring essence (soul).

I understand the meaning of “effulgence” and that the mind is luminous. My question is about what you meant by:

Queequeg said:

Matter is an effulgence of consciousness

Malcolm wrote:

He means that matter comes from mind. This is consistent with Abhidharma as well.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 1st, 2022 at 2:59 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 1st, 2022 at 8:53 AM

Title: Re: karma and its fruit or fruits

Content:

clyde said:

I disagree. It's not materialism that prevents us from understanding the Dharma; it's the belief in a self, an enduring essence (soul).

I understand the meaning of “effulgence” and that the mind is luminous. My question is about what you meant by:

Malcolm wrote:

He means that matter comes from mind. This is consistent with Abhidharma as well.

Queequeg said:

Yes, with the caveat that matter is not what we ordinary beings are conditioned to think it is. ie: water for animals and humans is molten metal to a hell beings, puss to a preta, and amrita to asuras and devas, dharmakaya to tathagata. Correct or no?

Malcolm wrote:

Water for example, is a liquid state of matter, no matter how it is perceived.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 1st, 2022 at 11:44 PM

Title: Re: karma and its fruit or fruits

Content:

muni said:

There is no point in contemplating it.

Non-conceptual contemplation.

Without any duality of perceiver and per-ceived, there is no way a normal thought can survive; it vanishes.

Malcolm wrote:

But they (concepts) still arise, so not a state of blankness.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 2nd, 2022 at 1:03 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Brown is the new red:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 2nd, 2022 at 1:17 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 2nd, 2022 at 3:47 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Brown is the new red:

<https://twitter.com/ggreenwald/status/1520751923355398144?s=20&t=O8aenamIpfXbaKXdKMXDcQ>

Brunelleschi said:

Give me a break, Chomsky is on record calling Trump a criminal, a fascist, comparing him to Hitler, urging everyone to vote first for Hillary then for Biden.

To imply that Chomsky is pro Trump is just deeply, deeply dishonest.

Malcolm wrote:

Chomsky is a useful idiot, always has been.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 2nd, 2022 at 8:32 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 2nd, 2022 at 9:31 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

rai said:

video

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, Ukrainian villages get caught in the cross fire as the UA has completely halted the advance of the RFA, and begun to wear them down through superior training, tactics, and morale.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 2nd, 2022 at 9:36 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 2nd, 2022 at 9:44 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The difference between Ukrainian shelling and Russian shelling:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 2nd, 2022 at 10:36 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 2nd, 2022 at 10:49 PM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.nytimes.com/2022/05/02/nyregion/nyc-coronavirus-yellow-risk-level.html?smid=fb-nytimes&smtyp=cur&fbclid=IwAR3pmtxqja4bGXHxEOPQuKTgdOhIUISowMCBtp4-eytcZ0fO5ww4VHFfIKw>

Unknown said:

The city moved into the medium risk level, known as yellow, as it sees a troubling increase in cases and the mayor weighs bringing back some restrictions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 2nd, 2022 at 10:54 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Könchok Thrinley said:

I really wonder what is up with those fires and attacks on Russian soil. I mean is UA army that good, or do they get help from some underground movement within Russia? If anything it fills me with hope that there is a possibility of change of regime in Russia, although who knows if it would be better...

However if it is UA army action I have to applaud because that is how you do modern warfare. Minimal casualties, targets hit and destroyed, very precise and clean. The same would go for the underground movement.

Malcolm wrote:

There are Ukrainians all over Russia...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 3rd, 2022 at 1:36 AM

Title: Re: Coronavirus

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

But I don't think we're there yet.

Malcolm wrote:

As warming continues, there will be more severe pandemics.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 3rd, 2022 at 9:31 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Why not use air power for this? This would be evidence of a greatly diminished air force. It would be a lot easier to drop bombs.

Malcolm wrote:

The Russians have failed achieve anything resembling air superiority. So they are using tanks and artillery instead.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 4th, 2022 at 10:55 PM

Title: Re: Is it better to gain enlightenment first versus trying to do as many charitable deeds as possible?

Content:

Sādhaka said:

And I think that the First Bhumi is implied above.

Malcolm wrote:

No. The five abhijñās can be accomplished by everyone.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 4th, 2022 at 11:54 PM

Title: Re: the great vegetarian debate

Content:

seeker242 said:

Fruit and vegetables are plentiful plant food sources.

My species evolved to eat these food sources.

My species is still around, it is not extinct.

My species is here today because it evolved to eat these plentiful plant food sources.

Meateater: we're here because we ate meat.

Makes total sense.

Sādhaka said:

Well most of the fruits and vegetables we now eat didn't exist until recent centuries. Just about any of them you can find at a grocery store are grafted, selectively bred, hybridized etc. Almost every contemporary common vegetable (broccoli, cabbage, etc.) was bred from a simple mustard green or something like that.

<https://i.insider.com/5638f775dd08957b788b463e?width=1000&format=jpeg&auto=webp>

You won't find broccoli just growing in the wild, and most natural fruits in the wild are mostly tough rind and seeds with very little edible fleshy parts.

And with how much fruit and vegetable matter you have to consume to get all your nutrients, you'd be very hard-pressed to live on berries, the few edible roots you could find, and like maybe wild nettles, mustard greens, and dandelions. Of course some regions are more plentiful than others, but most environments aren't so much.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, most crops eaten today were developed by humans in the last 10,000 years. Prior to that there was little or no cultivation, just gathering berries, tubers, etc. The notion of rich natural orchards of fruit and natural grain where humans just ate of them free of competition is a fantasy. .

This kind of diet is more consistent with what ancient humans in temperate zones likely ate:

<https://royalsocietypublishing.org/doi/abs/10.1098/rstb.1991.0112>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 5th, 2022 at 2:02 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Well, some fellow Scandinavians, presumably far-right death metal fans by the looks of their facial tattoos, are laughing about the bounty placed on their head by Russia, "See you in Valhalla, guys."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 5th, 2022 at 3:05 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Found him. Danish Reality TV dude. Not a Nazi.

The Tats are pretty new, there is this from 2019:

<https://www.dr.dk/mitliv/storm-med-218-sexpartnere-skal-giftes-jeg-tror-stadig-ikke-paa-den-eneste-ene>

Claim to fame? Had sex with 218 partners.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 5th, 2022 at 3:46 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Könchok Thrinley said:

Apparently he has decided it is time to start a new body count.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, orcs.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 5th, 2022 at 3:57 AM

Title: Re: the cause of intention

Content:

clyde said:

From a discussion about “karma and its fruit or fruits” a question arose for me: Since all dharmas arise based on causes and conditions, what is the cause of an intention?

Malcolm wrote:

All positive, negative, and neutral intentions (karmas) are caused by positive minds, afflicted minds, and neutral minds. This is why it is important to understand operation of mental factors.

For example, for neutral karmas, I see food, then I decide to eat it. For negative karmas, I see an object I dislike, which arouses my affliction of hatred, then I try to eliminate it. I see something I desire, then I decide to steal it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 5th, 2022 at 4:01 AM

Title: Re: the cause of intention

Content:

clyde said:

This may be a bit technical (or semantic), but according to dependent origination (pratitysamutpada), desire (tanha) gives rise to clinging (upadana), not intention (cetana).

Malcolm wrote:

Clinging (tanha) and addiction (upadana) are both affliction. Becoming is karma. Birth, aging and death, are the result of karma.

When the twelve links are reduced to their essential components: --> affliction --> karma --> suffering --> rinse, repeat.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 5th, 2022 at 4:48 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

rai said:

...

Malcolm wrote:

FFS, we prosecuted those guys and Calley went to jail)(but not for long enough). You think Russia is going to prosecute even one orc? Even a show trial? Nope. They give them f*cking medals.

This is whataboutism at its finest. What happened in My Lai on March 16, 1968 is just not relevant to the Russian invasion of Ukraine.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 5th, 2022 at 9:17 PM

Title: Re: karma and its fruit or fruits

Content:

Aemilius said:

The old question about merit is: Does it matter if the recipient of one's generosity does not actually get one's gift? Due to some circumstance that is, or seems to be, beyond one's control. Like for example a sudden earthquake or a traffic accident, that destroys the actual gift or its giving. I.e. is the intention really enough to create the positive karmic consequence or not ?

Etienne Lamotte has in his History of Indian Buddhism answered this question: According to tradition the merit of a gift is twofold, 1. there is the actual intention, the disposition it creates in one's mental continuum, and its future karmic reward. And 2. there is the aspect of the enjoyment of the gift by its recipient. This event creates happiness also in the giver. If the gift is not received nor enjoyed this happiness is not created. Thus it does matter whether the gift is received or not.

Malcolm wrote:

He is mistaken. The intention alone is sufficient, as pointed out by Shantideva.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 5th, 2022 at 11:31 PM

Title: Re: the cause of intention

Content:

Tao said:

--> affliction --> karma --> suffering --> rinse, repeat.

Very nice but it lacks ignorance, as it's the only way out from the links... and one noble truth is "there's an exit"

Ignorance --> attachment -> affliction --> karma --> suffering --> rinse, repeat.

Malcolm wrote:

No, ignorance is an affliction, it also has a cause.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 5th, 2022 at 11:36 PM

Title: Re: karma and its fruit or fruits

Content:

Aemilius said:

On the contrary, it seems evident that Shantideva has got it wrong.

Malcolm wrote:

No, since Śāntideva is an awakened person and Lamotte is not even a Buddhist.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 6th, 2022 at 12:22 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Anne Applebaum's hubby.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 6th, 2022 at 3:42 AM

Title: Re: the cause of intention

Content:

clyde said:

1. Desire (tanha) and clinging (upadana) are afflictions, but that doesn't answer the question: What is the cause of (what gives rise to) intention (cetana)? And are you saying that intention is an affliction, even 'good intentions'?

Malcolm wrote:

Cetana (volition/intention) is a caitta (mental factor). It accompanies every citta, being neutral in character. Cetana is colored by whether that citta is governed by other positive, afflicted, and negative caittas. So, when you find the cause of citta (a mind) you will also answer the question of what causes cetana, which is one of the mental factors that accompanies all minds in the desire realm. (Not all caittas accompany all minds. For example, a negative mental factor can never accompany a positive mind.)

clyde said:

3. And your “essential components” imply that all karma leads to suffering, even so-called ‘good karma’ (merit). Is that your meaning?

Malcolm wrote:

Good question. The truth is that positive actions are also afflicted when they are not connected with path phenomena. Basically, all compounded phenomena are afflicted or conducive to affliction, with the exception of path phenomena.

So it still applies that --> affliction --> karma --> suffering -->, since afflicted positive actions only lead to birth in higher realms, and not to liberation.

For example, when one perceives an enemy, the caitta of anger is produced, this colors cetana negatively, and one then engages in verbal and physical actions which aim to harm that enemy. Cetana is simply that mental factor that puts the mind's negative and positive qualities into action. That's why the Buddha defined cetana, intention, as karma, action, in the Anguttara Nikaya, iii.415:

"Mental volition, O Bhikkhus, is what I call action (Kamma). Having volition, one acts by body, speech and thought."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 6th, 2022 at 4:15 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

These threads are 90% twitter, it sometimes seems like.

I've resisted, successfully, getting twitter and being a twit for 16 years. I was 15 when twitter first came out and I instinctively knew it was garbage then as I still do now. Once Musk owns twitter, I wonder what these threads will look like.

Malcolm wrote:

Twitter is ahead of the news orgs by about 48 hours when it comes to Ukraine. Prior to the war, I never used it much.

Then there are the twitter mean girls...brutal but funny. I would mostly check in to see who they were ripping to shreds.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 6th, 2022 at 4:29 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 6th, 2022 at 8:41 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 6th, 2022 at 9:27 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 6th, 2022 at 10:05 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Archie2009 said:

I'm sorry you have to live in one country with creatures like that. The footage was even worse than I expected.

Malcolm wrote:

They're in every country, I mean after all, you have this guy:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 6th, 2022 at 10:09 PM

Title: Re: Daily Laugh Thread

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 6th, 2022 at 10:18 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Archie2009 said:

We have even worse/more dangerous fascist scum in parliament now in <https://twitter.com/thierrybaudet>.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Thierry_Baudet

Malcolm wrote:
Indeed, but not as cartoonish.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, May 7th, 2022 at 9:09 AM
Title: Re: karma and its fruit or fruits
Content:

Queequeg said:
Its like the stock market - your good deeds are like stock bets that can vary in merit depending on the beneficiaries of your actions. Past results do not guarantee future performance.

Malcolm wrote:
Nagarjuna prefers to think of karma as something like a debt which must repaid.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, May 7th, 2022 at 9:38 PM
Title: Re: Vajrayana parallels to the Aggañña Sutta of the Pali Canon
Content:
Sādhaka said:
Dzogchen cosmogony says things similar to the Aggañña Sutra, yet provides more detail.

For said details though, likely better to receive them from a Lineage Holder.

Malcolm wrote:
These myths are not some privy information. And, frankly, most westerners do not seem to understand that Dzogchen cosmogony is a minor variation on the cosmogony in the third chapter of the Abidharmakośabhṣya.

Specifically the mythology of the Aggañña sutra in Tibetan sources is to be found in Asanga's Yogacārabhūmi.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, May 7th, 2022 at 11:01 PM
Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")
Content:
Kim O'Hara said:
But also, we need to get money out of fossil fuel production as fast as possible.

Malcolm wrote:

It is not happening. In fact, it is getting worse.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 7th, 2022 at 11:46 PM

Title: Re: Vajrayana parallels to the Aggañña Sutta of the Pali Canon

Content:

heart said:

Maybe this can help

Malcolm wrote:

Should be read with care, it is not a complete account.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 8th, 2022 at 2:10 AM

Title: Re: After taking HYT initiation

Content:

Vajradhara said:

ould I stop and wait to find another guru that can grant me a more official HYT initiation (if ready for it) ?

Malcolm wrote:

Find a qualified teacher. Since you seem to be attracted to Geluk, try to make a connection with Jado Rinpoche.

<https://tibet.net/the-envoy-of-his-holiness-the-dalai-lama-jado-rinpoche-awarded-the-medal-for-merit-to-republic-of-buryatiya/>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 8th, 2022 at 5:30 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 8th, 2022 at 10:07 PM

Title: Re: karma and its fruit or fruits

Content:

Queequeg said:

No, the metaphysical substrate I was referring to is the idea that there is some sort of karma bank in the sky where everyone's deposits are tracked and appreciate and depreciate depending on the outcomes of actions.

Malcolm wrote:

You mean the Akashic Record... https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Akashic_records

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 9th, 2022 at 12:46 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 9th, 2022 at 2:03 AM

Title: Re: karma and its fruit or fruits

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Karma and interdependence are general not specific, unless you want to go with Vasubandhu, which some here rely on. I don't, because it's one guy's opinion.

Malcolm wrote:

The Abhidharmakośabhaṣya is not just one guy's opinion. It is a compilation of many different opinions by one guy—mainly those of the Kashmiri Sarvāstivādins and the Sautrantikas. In many, many, places the opinion Vasubandhu actually supports is ambiguous at best.

For example, in chapter 4, karma, Vasubandhu frequently cites the Buddha directly, and then discusses how these citations are understood in different schools. It is not as simplistic as you make out.

Dzogchen teachings offer no novel reinterpretation of karma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 9th, 2022 at 3:38 AM

Title: Re: Vajrayana parallels to the Aggañña Sutta of the Pali Canon

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Vajrayana itself is Abhidharma.

Malcolm wrote:

It is true that Vajrayāna is included in Abhidharma, according to one way of categorizing things.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, May 9th, 2022 at 8:15 PM
Title: Re: karma and its fruit or fruits
Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:
Merit and karma are two different things, although they are related. Merit accumulates but it doesn't "ripen".

Malcolm wrote:
Yes, actually it does. It ripens as birth in higher realms, longevity, absence of illness, and so on.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, May 9th, 2022 at 9:50 PM
Title: Re: Ukraine News
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
Chechen TikTok soldier:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, May 9th, 2022 at 11:55 PM
Title: Re: Daily Laugh Thread
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, May 10th, 2022 at 1:40 AM
Title: Re: karma and its fruit or fruits
Content:
Crazywisdom said:
It doesn't say anywhere in Mahayana sutras that all six perfections, Bodhicitta, three roots, three wisdoms, etc., are one in the nature of mind.

Malcolm wrote:
Sure it does.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, May 10th, 2022 at 4:16 AM
Title: Re: Ukraine News
Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 10th, 2022 at 9:11 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Miorita said:

The data don't add up.

Putin is born in '52. He didn't fight in WW2. I don't know what he celebrates.

You have to have earned the merit to celebrate that is to have fought in it yourself or at least having been around at the time.

I think it's called nepotism. The merit is not transferable.

Malcolm wrote:

Means he was born in a dragon year. Dragons are the weakest member of their group.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 10th, 2022 at 9:17 AM

Title: Re: karma and its fruit or fruits

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 10th, 2022 at 8:43 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Queequeg said:

We...have a Christian Taliban among us who would like to bring back witch trials. We still have robust, free elections and in the big picture, robust regimen of civil rights.

Malcolm wrote:

The fight at home.

Queequeg said:

If you're going down the road of drawing moral equivalency between the US and Russia, then I'll let you walk down that path on your own. I don't know many Americans who want this fight. Maybe some hawks at the Pentagon and State Department. We're mobilizing for a long standoff with Russia - this is true. Sometimes you just have to deal with shit. That's life. Even if we chose to ignore Ukraine, its not like we'd be putting those resources toward a progressive agenda.

Malcolm wrote:

The fight abroad.

The USSR was a different sort of country that the RF is today. The only reason Russia is a power is because of they have the old Soviet nuclear arsenal. Advancing the interests of the Western bloc through soft and hard power is something to which we need to return, or cede the space to China, primarily. Russia is toast.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 10th, 2022 at 10:52 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

PeterC said:

As a hypothetical: suppose Putin nukes Kyiv. What do we do? We aren't going to retaliate proportionately by attacking Moscow. So - what do we do?

Malcolm wrote:

If they use a low-yield nuke on Ukraine, there will be immediate mobilization by NATO. The only way they can prevent that is to nuke Berlin, Paris, and London. But that is suicide.

PeterC said:

We need, somehow, to take the initiative away from him.

Malcolm wrote:

They are wasting hypersonic missiles on malls and hotels to the tune of $100 million per pop. Putin is running out of options. When you are out of options, you have lost the initiative. I would say that Putin lost the initiative after he lost the Battle of Kyiv. It is he who is on his back foot now.

For example, the Ukrainians have a new and very novel software package which runs their artillery. In the US Army, call to strike is generally 1 hour, and never gets better than 15 minutes. What is the main delay? JAG officers, apparently, who have to sign off on that that strike is a legitimate military target. The Ukrainians have a five minute window from call to strike. Also, their artillery strikes are designed to confuse Russian counter-artillery radar. Now they are also being gifted with advanced counter artillery radar from the US, etc. At the present moment, the conflict in Donbas, etc., is mainly an artillery war, and the Russians are wasting huge amounts of ammunition on empty farmland. The Ukrainians on the other hand are able to accurately target tanks, etc., with artillery directly. This is unheard of before this war. UAV's have really changed the nature of air war permanently. All bets are on Ukraine pushing Russian troops out of all occupied territory with NATO backing.

Russia is toast. They will be Germany after WWI, since not many people are going to be willing to help them rebuild after this war. Also, it is quite likely that the RF will split up as a result of all of this. Who wants to be part of a country lead by crazy, old white people? (Oh wait, I live in the US...). Anyway, back to the main point: ethnic division in the RF is going to be exacerbated by this conflict. The RF, IMO, is only held together at this point by inertia and nostalgia. All the youngest and smartest Russians have already left (3.4 million).

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 10th, 2022 at 10:59 PM

Title: Re: Drikung Yangzab Structure

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

Is there a website anywhere that lays out all of the terms, texts and practices within the Drikung Yangzab? So the overall map and structure.

Looked online but can't find anything complete.

heart said:

I received from Lamchen Gyalpo Rinpoche the ngondro and the main yidam practice that is a hayagriva/varahi practice along with several other empowerments and teachings (one which was a trechö teaching). But he never told us about the further structure.

/magnus

Malcolm wrote:

Yangzab is like most Nyingma systems: preliminaries, combined three roots, and then move on to Nyingthig practices, rushan, all under the guidance of one's teacher.

Dzogchen is Dzogchen. People make a big deal out of this lineage and that lineage, but it all comes from the Dzogchen tantras. As the Yangzab is an appendix of the Kandro Nyingthig, the systematic way of practicing it is no different than what Longchenpa explains in his long commentary on the Khandro Nyintig, which is preserved in the Khandro Yantig.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 10th, 2022 at 11:13 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 10th, 2022 at 11:52 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

PeterC said:

As a hypothetical: suppose Putin nukes Kyiv. What do we do? We aren't going to retaliate proportionately by attacking Moscow. So - what do we do?

Malcolm wrote:

If they use a low-yield nuke on Ukraine, there will be immediate mobilization by NATO. The only way they can prevent that is to nuke Berlin, Paris, and London. But that is suicide.

PeterC said:

I'm not so sure. How would NATO respond? I'm sure they've thought through the military options, but it's a political decision. They would not bomb a Russian city.

Malcolm wrote:

I think NATO would strike a Russian city with conventional weapons in response.

PeterC said:

I agree with all of that but it could remain as the status quo for some time yet. Even if the rumors on Putin are correct - he's got Parkinson's, he has more Botox than blood in his veins, he's chronically paranoid, etc - and he doesn't have long to go, what comes next? Why wouldn't someone a lot like him just take over the apparatus he created?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, more cops. But cops are not good at war. They are only good at terrorizing unarmed civilians. In the long run, with no economy, that won't get you very far unless you go for extreme isolation, like N. Korea.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 11th, 2022 at 12:34 AM

Title: Re: Daily Laugh Thread

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 11th, 2022 at 10:52 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 12th, 2022 at 1:10 AM

Title: Re: Jamyang Khyentse Chökyi Lodrö on Dolpopa

Content:

Seeker12 said:

What do you think of Dudjom Rinpoche saying that for one whose intelligence is authoritative, one does not differentiate between rangtong and shentong?

Malcolm wrote:

It is because they are both views of intellectual analysis. But there can be no doubt that Longchenpa proclaims that the view of Prasanga is the highest Mahāyāna view, and the one most compatible with Dzogchen teachings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 12th, 2022 at 2:53 AM

Title: Re: What are some of the most recent termas?

Content:

Nalanda said:

So how does this work, they discover a text somewhere in a cave in between rocks? Are the texts buried?

Malcolm wrote:

These days most termas are so-called mind termas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 12th, 2022 at 3:03 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 12th, 2022 at 4:03 AM

Title: Re: What are some of the most recent termas?

Content:

Nalanda said:

So how does this work, they discover a text somewhere in a cave in between rocks? Are the texts buried?

Archie2009 said:

Here are two photos of the place called Zha'i lha khang (c. 90 km east of Lhasa) where Vimalamitra hid the 17 Dzogchen tantras. They were rediscovered centuries later. Photos by Hugh Richardson (1948) taken from Michael Henss' The Cultural Monuments of Tibet.

Malcolm wrote:

Richardson is slightly in error. It was Nyang Tingzin Zangpo who hid the texts, sometime after Vimala's death/departure to Wu Tai Shan, depending on who one believes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 12th, 2022 at 4:44 AM

Title: Re: What are some of the most recent termas?

Content:

Nalanda said:

If I may wear my Donald 'skeptical scholar' Lopez hat for a second, if the terma is coming from the so-called "mind termas", is it not possible that that the terma is a sincere and skillful creative production of the Tertön themselves? To put it kindly.

Malcolm wrote:

That is the general skeptics point of view, yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 12th, 2022 at 4:52 AM

Title: Re: Jamyang Khyentse Chökyi Lodrö on Dolpopa

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It is because they are both views of intellectual analysis. But there can be no doubt that Longchenpa proclaims that the view of Prasanga is the highest Mahāyāna view, and the one most compatible with Dzogchen teachings.

Seeker12 said:

Correct me if I'm wrong, but I believe that what Longchenpa specifically says is that Prasangika is the highest view of all of the cause-based dialectical approaches.

Malcolm wrote:

Gzhan stong also a causal vehicle view.

But that is besides the point. Longchenpa makes it very clear in the Treasury of Dharmadhātu Commentary that Prasangika is the view most compatible with Dzogchen, as does Jigme Lingpa, etc.

As for dbu ma chen po, Great Madhyamaka, everyone in Tibet called their view "dbu ma chen po." It's a meaningless term.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 12th, 2022 at 5:54 AM

Title: Re: What are some of the most recent termas?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Yeah, hat's off.

So to avoid losing the confidence of the Gelugpas and the Ngorites, how does the Nyingma school validate new termas?

Malcolm wrote:

They really don't care what the Ngorpas and the Gelukpas think, nor should they.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 12th, 2022 at 6:12 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

Also, you whole "Russians are orcs and crush them like bugs" schtick is not exactly contributing to a flattering picture of yourself.

Malcolm wrote:

Not all Russians are orcs. Just the ones invading Ukraine. We wouldn't call them orcs, generally, because it is dehumanizing and that is generally a negative place to go. But the Russian troops in Ukraine have been behaving dreadfully, behaving just like orcs.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 12th, 2022 at 10:08 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

KristenM said:

I think one big reason why just offing Putin won't bring a revolution in Russia is that they have created an authoritarian culture which breeds deference to authority figures despite all rational evidence.

Malcolm wrote:

Russia is what happens when so-called "people's democracies" decide to liberalize without proper regulation around how and by whom state assets are privatized. After the USSR euthanized itself, there was no real plan. Russia swallowed the neoliberal myth, straight, no chaser. Milton Friedman is indirectly responsible for the present state of affairs. Russia is a perfect example of the wet dream the libertarian side of the GOP has been advocating for the last century. What they fail to understand is that Autocracy is the certain outcome of poorly regulated markets. The US has fallen into the same trap. However, our liberal institutions have been more resilient, but, they are wearing thin. Unfortunately, there is serious political apathy in the US, and in 20 years, the US could be in much the same condition if we make poor National choices.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 12th, 2022 at 10:58 AM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Queequeg said:

20 years? I don't know if the US survives. It truly feels like we're coming to the end of an age. Maybe the only reliable thing will soon be Prime Delivery.

Malcolm wrote:

The edges, like Florida, Texas, and so on will continue to fray.

The East Coast Metro Corridor will be fine, as will the West Coast, but strange things will happen in the interior and in the South, as is already the case.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 13th, 2022 at 3:36 AM

Title: Re: Dharanis that don't require initiation

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

Any great Dharanis Sutra Level that don't require initiation can anyone recommend any?

Malcolm wrote:

Medicine Buddha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 13th, 2022 at 10:23 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Unfortunately, the Green Party US, both of them, are incompetent and incapable of governing. Our problem right now is keeping the damn GOP out of power.

Norwegian said:

...

Let me add, that I do try my best in what I can do, to contribute to the cause. But it's absolutely nothing compared to what the powers that be can do. And when I see them sit there and tell us to recycle or whatever, when they don't give a single shit, and when they have so much more capacity to enact change than what we could ever dream of achieving on our own... It's rather infuriating to say the least.

Kim O'Hara said:

We in Australia do have a chance to make a change in the next week or so, with a federal election. I'm putting my time into supporting a climate action candidate because it leverages my own vote. If enough of us do that, we can make a difference.

house-on-fire-c.jpg

Kim

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 13th, 2022 at 9:37 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Queequeg said:

I will make a (not so) bold prediction and say Ron DeSantis will be the next president and it will be a stomping. He will have both houses of Congress and cruise to a landslide reelection. He is going to have Reaganesque stature by the end of his second term and the Republican party will be in his mold for a generation.

Malcolm wrote:

The man who tried to killed Disney will not go on to be president.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 13th, 2022 at 11:14 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Queequeg said:

I will make a (not so) bold prediction and say Ron DeSantis will be the next president and it will be a stomping. He will have both houses of Congress and cruise to a landslide reelection. He is going to have Reaganesque stature by the end of his second term and the Republican party will be in his mold for a generation.

Malcolm wrote:

The man who tried to killed Disney will not go on to be president.

Queequeg said:

Between promoting brown skinned princesses and speaking out to protect teachers who want kindergarteners to change their gender, Disney is no one's darling anymore. Mickey is a creepy as we thought.

Malcolm wrote:

Desantis will never be president. He is just not that likable, and he is pro-Gilead. It is one thing to appeal to Florida Man, quite another to appeal to a country which has a firm, liberal majority.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 13th, 2022 at 11:23 PM

Title: Re: White Tara Empowerment

Content:

Arnoud said:

HH Sakya Trizin is giving a Tara Wang in MN next month. Don't know if it will be streamed. Most are though.

discoskwalla said:

Hi! Do you have a date and time? I know HH is doing a chime phakme empowerment, but I didn't hear abt White Tara!

Thanks

Rich

heart said:

chime phakme nyingtik empowerment is a white tara empowerment.

/magnus

Malcolm wrote:

More specifically, it is a terma version of what is known as the Three Long Life deities: White Tāra, White Amitayus, and Uṣṇīṣavijaya.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 13th, 2022 at 11:55 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Queequeg said:

Republicans are going to love Desantis.

Malcolm wrote:

Biden is going to run, and Biden is going to win. Why? TFG has hollowed out the GOP. DeSantis lacks the panache and gift for grift of TFG.

And Roe v. Wade. This will create much more of an impact than anyone realizes if SCOTUS really goes through with overturning it.

And, the Dems keep the senate, as well as knocking out Ron Johnson. The Dems also keep the house.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 14th, 2022 at 1:25 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Biden is going to run, and Biden is going to win. Why? TFG has hollowed out the GOP. DeSantis lacks the panache and gift for gift of TFG.

And Roe v. Wade. This will create much more of an impact than anyone realizes if SCOTUS really goes through with overturning it.

And, the Dems keep the senate, as well as knocking out Ron Johnson. The Dems also keep the house.

Queequeg said:

You have much more faith in our fellow Americans than I do.

Malcolm wrote:

I have faith in the self-interest of women.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 14th, 2022 at 1:31 AM

Title: Re: Upasaka vows - strengthening / retaking

Content:

Könchok Thrinley said:

Hi,

going through some talks on the five upasaka vows and for example Thubten Chödrön mentioned retaking the upasaka vows as a way to strengthen them. How does one go about it?

Malcolm wrote:

Everytime one recites the refuge formula one is renewing one's pratimokṣa vows.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 14th, 2022 at 1:35 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Queequeg said:

I don't get the impression young women as a whole understand what is happening or care all that much. Maybe they don't quite understand what they're about to lose. Maybe I'm around too many Catholics.

Malcolm wrote:

You must be living in some kind of bubble. All the women I know, everywhere, are completely freaked out.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 14th, 2022 at 4:48 AM

Title: Re: Upasaka vows - strengthening / retaking

Content:

zerwe said:

Yes, but there is not a way to "retake" the vows you received during your initial refuge ceremony.

Malcolm wrote:

Renewing, retaking, more or less the same thing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 14th, 2022 at 4:59 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Queequeg said:

I sincerely hope I'm wrong.

Malcolm wrote:

Considering that almost every pollster cited in the article is a right wing poll, I think the data is skewed in the article. However, there is this tidbit:

This dynamic could be shifting. As FiveThirtyEight reported, "After the Supreme Court allowed a highly restrictive abortion law to go into effect in Texas last fall, the share of Biden voters who said abortion is a 'very important' issue for them jumped, while the share of Trump voters who said the same thing fell."

FiveThirtyEight, which is cited in the article, asserts that 69% of Americans do not want Roe overturned. How anyone can think this is not a game changer in the upcoming elections is beyond me.

<https://fivethirtyeight.com/features/where-americans-stand-on-abortion-in-5-charts/>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 14th, 2022 at 5:26 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Bitecoffer's favorite pollster:

Unknown said:

The poll does give Democrats some hope, however. In a generic matchup, respondents indicate they would be more likely to vote for a Democratic candidate over a Republican candidate, 44-38, to represent their congressional district, while generic Democratic candidates carry a 13-point lead (46-33) among respondents in states facing a Senate battle this fall. Support for Democratic Senate candidates has actually increased since UMass Polls conducted in April 2021 (+2) and December 2021 (+4), while support for Republican Senate candidates in the new poll is five points lower than both of last year's UMass Polls. About one in five respondents indicated that they don't know which party's candidate they would vote for in either their House (19%) or Senate (21%) races.

"If the past is any indication, then President Biden and the Democratic Party will likely lose seats in the U.S. Congress if not total control of both the House and the Senate," says Nteta. "However, our results suggest that all is not lost, with Democratic candidates in both the House and Senate holding on to slim leads over their Republican opponents. With six months until Election Day, it looks like the fight for control of Congress may not comport with our historical expectations."

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.umass.edu/news/article/over-two-thirds-republicans-think-president-biden-should-be-impeached-if-gop-retakes>

This poll reflects my gut instinct. And if the Dems hold the house and the senate, then Biden will win in 2024, no ifs, ands or buts.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 14th, 2022 at 11:07 PM

Title: Re: White Tara Empowerment

Content:

heart said:

There are Dzogchen teachings connected with this cycle but I think they are mainly connected with the Vimalamitra Guru Sadhana.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, correct.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 14th, 2022 at 11:48 PM

Title: Re: Dharanis that don't require initiation

Content:

Aemilius said:

"Initiation" or "abhisheka" can take place formally or informally.

Malcolm wrote:

You don't know what you are talking about.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 15th, 2022 at 2:49 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

KristenM said:

I'm with Q. on this. I think the perception of the economy will be more important than abortion rights at election time to voters.

Malcolm wrote:

Not if SCOTUS upends Roe.

In other news:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 15th, 2022 at 4:56 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen Meditation Retreat with Chakung Jigme Wangdrak Rinpoche and Anam Thubten May 13-15 2022

Content:

Nalanda said:

Meditation on the sound of 4 elements? There was really no clear instruction on that.

Malcolm wrote:

This is called "guidance of the three kāyas (sku gsum sna khrid). It is not practiced extensively because the complete instructions for it have been lost for centuries. We only have partial, incomplete instructions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 15th, 2022 at 5:10 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Queequeg said:

I suggest that the major spiritual paths in the West hold this position so it wasn't much work to get people to frame the abortion issue in this light.

Malcolm wrote:

But they don't. Genesis for example holds that life begins at birth, with the first breath. Jews maintain the following:

<https://rac.org/blog/abortion-and-reproductive-justice-jewish-perspective>

Overturing Roe necessitates violating the Establishment clause, causing the state to favor one religious tradition over others.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 15th, 2022 at 6:00 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

justsit said:

And there will undoubtedly be covert runs to the blue states, just like there were runs all over the East coast to NYC in the 70's. Women will still get abortions.

Malcolm wrote:

My mother used to do this. She is absolutely livid. Never in her life did she think Roe would be overturned.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 15th, 2022 at 9:59 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Queequeg said:

As for whether overturning Roe violates the establishment clause, I don't see it. Conception itself is a biological event with no dependence on any religious views. They made corporations people, they can make a zygote a person.

Malcolm wrote:

But there is no special reason to privilege the biological event of conception over any other kind of biological event. Medical privacy laws are absolutely at risk here. Women will be losing the right to medical privacy. Now we are going to allow the state to have control over women's reproductive choices? Based on what precedent?

The question that hinges on when "life" starts is less important. That question has no scientific definition. There is no agreement when a fetus becomes a person. Any claim will be purely arbitrary, and necessarily posited upon a religious opinion.

But medical privacy is another issue entirely.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 15th, 2022 at 9:13 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Queequeg said:

As for whether overturning Roe violates the establishment clause, I don't see it. Conception itself is a biological event with no dependence on any religious views. They made corporations people, they can make a zygote a person.

Malcolm wrote:

But there is no special reason to privilege the biological event of conception over any other kind of biological event. Medical privacy laws are absolutely at risk here. Women will be losing the right to medical privacy. Now we are going to allow the state to have control over women's reproductive choices? Based on what precedent?

The question that hinges on when "life" starts is less important. That question has no scientific definition. There is no agreement when a fetus becomes a person. Any claim will be purely arbitrary, and necessarily posited upon a religious opinion.

But medical privacy is another issue entirely.

Queequeg said:

Roe set up a biological condition, "viability", as the cut off point for having an abortion. That line is totally arbitrary but makes some sense where the balance of interests are weighed between the right to privacy and the right to life of a person. The courts are going to be reluctant to question a legislature's decision that life starts at conception. If that's the popular will, then the courts will have a hard time questioning that without wading into the intersection of theology and biology.

Malcolm wrote:

At the end of the day, these legislatures will have a difficult time proving they are not violating the establishment clause.

Queequeg said:

The establishment clause does not prevent people from bringing their religious views to inform their political choices, just as it does not bar people from bringing their ideas about the civil person defined by a particular bundle of rights. It only bars the official sanction of a particular religion to the exclusion of others.

Malcolm wrote:

It bars them from legislating their religious views into law. Thus is why we do not have prayers before class in public schools.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 15th, 2022 at 10:08 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

At the end of the day, these legislatures will have a difficult time proving they are not violating the establishment clause.

Queequeg said:

No they won't. Fertilization is a discrete biological event which sets off a chain reaction that sometimes results in a live birth. There is no need to refer to anything else to identify that moment as the point at which rights attach to the zygote.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, they will. They have to prove a zygote is a person with rights. That's impossible.

Queequeg said:

Again, they've made corporations "people" with constitutional rights. They can make a zygote a "person" with constitutional rights.

Malcolm wrote:

They will have a hard time proving a zygote is person. For example, how can a zygote enter into a contract? Own property? Be sued?

Queequeg said:

It bars them from legislating their religious views into law. Thus is why we do not have prayers before class in public schools.

The prayer per se was not what was barred. Its because the nominal neutrality actually sanctioned a particular religious practice.

Malcolm wrote:

"The Supreme Court's decisions set forth principles that distinguish impermissible governmental religious speech from constitutionally protected private religious speech. For example, teachers and other public school officials, acting in their official capacities, may not lead their classes in prayer, devotional readings from the Bible, or other religious activities, [4] nor may school officials use their authority to attempt to persuade or compel students to participate in prayer or other religious activities. [5] The Supreme Court has held, for example, that public school officials violated the Establishment Clause by inviting a rabbi to deliver a prayer at a graduation ceremony because such conduct was "attributable to the State" and applied "subtle coercive pressures," "where the student had no real alternative which would have allowed her to avoid the fact or appearance of participation." [6] Accordingly, school officials may not select public speakers on a basis that favors religious speech. [7]"

https://www2.ed.gov/policy/gen/guid/religionandschools/prayer_guidance.html

Queequeg said:

As you've admitted yourself, science has not defined when life starts. As such, that question is open to determination.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no evidence-based criteria for defining human personhood before a fetus is viable and can survive on its own, which is why viability has been the standard in US law since Roe. If one defines personhood for a multi-celled organism and one then assumes it has rights, this raises a huge thicket of issues: does a pregnant woman have the right to work in a job which may cause a miscarriage, resulting in manslaughter, etc. The law on this point is schizophrenic, on the one hand, as of now, a women has a right to terminate pregnancies even in the late term, under certain medical conditions. On the other hand, if a pregnant woman is killed, one can prosecute the murderer for two counts of murder.

Queequeg said:

Maybe if we ever have a Supreme Court where secular views prevail, we'll get that decision you want. But, let's be clear - that's also an arbitrary line.

Malcolm wrote:

The point is that secular views must prevail in US Courts. If not, we are doomed to fight a bitter civil war over religion, which the founders sought to avoid by implementing in the establishment clause in the first place. If that happens, the world for your children is finished.

Queequeg said:

The real takeaway here is that we can't rely on the courts to create protections that we want. We need to win these in the legislature. Which brings us back to the reason this issue was brought up - there is no popular groundswell that will deliver democrats come election time over this issue. Dems are dead in the water at our current trajectory. Republicans just need to pound the economy.

Malcolm wrote:

Not really. The right is far more fractured than you think, and much less competent than they were, as a whole, six years ago. People think infighting among Dems is bad. Look at the crazy shit going on in the GOP. You really think the GOP can win a general election by going full racist? I mean a real general election win, not an electoral college slide into home base.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 15th, 2022 at 10:11 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Queequeg said:

Actually, since there's no right to privacy, we don't even need to talk about rights of either the woman or the zygote. Abortion can simply be regulated with criminal law, prohibit the act, without violating anyone's non-existent rights or having to justify it by granting rights to the zygote.

Malcolm wrote:

The fourteenth amendment gives us our right to privacy, rather than the penumbra theory you advocated above.

<https://www.law.cornell.edu/wex/privacy>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 15th, 2022 at 10:21 PM

Title: Re: 'Dakas and dakinis' in Seven-Line Prayer

Content:

LhakpaT said:

Recently saw a translation being used that had the fifth line as "surrounded by many dakas and dakinis". I can only assume this was an attempt at gender-inclusive language? Doesn't seem right to me though to change the translation that far from what the Tibetan literally says especially when it's being encountered for the first time by English-speakers who don't know that liberties are being taken with translation. Anyone have thoughts?

Malcolm wrote:

Mkha' 'gro is actually male gendered in Tibetan, translating the word "ḍāka." "Ḍākinī" is "mkha' 'gro ma."

Guru Rinpoche is surrounded by both ḍākas and ḍākinīs, in fact.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 15th, 2022 at 10:47 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Queequeg said:

Can a third trimester fetus do any of those things? Roe said personhood was triggered by viability.

Malcolm wrote:

Children have limited rights. But first they have to survive outside the womb.

Queequeg said:

I didn't follow the link to draw the context, but where the policy is facially neutral, the issue is whether students feel compelled to participate. Consistent with what I wrote earlier.

Malcolm wrote:

The point is that public schools are not allowed to advocate for one religion over another. Appointing a rabbi to speak at a graduation is facially biased, and hence not permitted since it violates the establishment clause. Selecting any version of when life begins, other than viability, will also bring up the same problem. Viability is the only objective, evidence-based criteria which works.

Queequeg said:

They don't need a general election win. They just need Pennsylvtucky and Ohio to break their way. The New Yorkers moving to Florida these days are not the liberal ones. They're the ones fed up with NY taxes and want to go enjoy their hard hat pensions in the nice weather.

Malcolm wrote:

Good thing their days are numbered.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 15th, 2022 at 10:52 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Queequeg said:

Actually, since there's no right to privacy, we don't even need to talk about rights of either the woman or the zygote. Abortion can simply be regulated with criminal law, prohibit the act, without violating anyone's non-existent rights or having to justify it by granting rights to the zygote.

Malcolm wrote:

The fourteenth amendment gives us our right to privacy, rather than the penumbra theory you advocated above.

<https://www.law.cornell.edu/wex/privacy>

Queequeg said:

14th amendment proscribes states from making laws that violate federal civil rights without due process.

The due process clause still requires some precedent for identifying the right to be protected by due process. The Penumbra of Rights was devised to identify rights that are not specifically enumerated in the constitution. This is the point that the literalists insist on as the basis for identifying and protecting rights.

No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

Malcolm wrote:

BTW, we do not disagree about codifying ROE. And we might as well pass the ERA again, while we are at it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 15th, 2022 at 11:24 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Queequeg said:

Can a third trimester fetus do any of those things? Roe said personhood was triggered by viability.

Malcolm wrote:

Children have limited rights. But first they have to survive outside the womb.

Queequeg said:

We're reasonably rational about this. Unfortunately, a lot of the country is not very rational about this at all. And their votes count, too.

Malcolm wrote:

Given that 70 percent of the country supports Roe, let's hope so.

Queequeg said:

Its gaming the minor league system of the judiciary.

Malcolm wrote:

Time to change the game. Hating the players is irrelevant.

The reason there are nine Supreme Court judges is that back in the day there were only nine district courts. Now there are 13. Hmmmm....

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 15th, 2022 at 11:57 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Queequeg said:

We're reasonably rational about this. Unfortunately, a lot of the country is not very rational about this at all. And their votes count, too.

Malcolm wrote:

Given that 70 percent of the country supports Roe, let's hope so.

Queequeg said:

Its gaming the minor league system of the judiciary.

Malcolm wrote:

Time to change the game. Hating the players is irrelevant.

The reason there are nine Supreme Court judges is that back in the day there were only nine district courts. Now there are 13. Hmmmm....

Queequeg said:

I have to revise my comment about passing an abortion rights law not being open to constitutional challenge. The issue would pit the law against the fetus's right to life. We'd then have to address your point about when a person comes into being.

As for packing the court with 13 justices... that might fix things for a while but we could end up with a gamed court again. I like the idea of having a term limited (10 years? 15 years? 20?) panel of up to 20 judges who could sit on smaller benches to decide minor cases and then a full bench for more significant cases. Packing the court with 4 more justices would be the easier thing to do. Just be careful we don't get around to doing that under a Republican president.

Malcolm wrote:

Expand the court and mandatory retirement by 70, irrespective of length service.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 16th, 2022 at 12:34 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Queequeg said:

In this, Dems are currently failing, and so the election will be about the economy.

Malcolm wrote:

If people are stupid enough to think the people who created this mess will get us out of it...SMH.

Formulagate is a direct result of the revised NAFTA rules.

Fortunately, there is some indication that the midterms will not be the GOP red tsunami everyone fears/hopes for.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 16th, 2022 at 12:37 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen Meditation Retreat with Chakung Jigme Wangdrak Rinpoche and Anam Thubten May 13-15 2022

Content:

Nalanda said:

Meditation on the sound of 4 elements? There was really no clear instruction on that.

Malcolm wrote:

This is called "guidance of the three kāyas (sku gsum sna khrid). It is not practiced extensively because the complete instructions for it have been lost for centuries. We only have partial, incomplete instructions.

YesheDronmar said:

Thank you for this information, Malcolm.

Is the Guidance of the Three Kayas from Dudjom Lingpa?

Malcolm wrote:

No, it is an ancient category of preliminaries found in the Sound tantra and its attendant commentary. Unfortunately, one of the key manuals that explains how to actually practice this is missing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 16th, 2022 at 2:10 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen Meditation Retreat with Chakung Jigme Wangdrak Rinpoche and Anam Thubten May 13-15 2022

Content:

Arnoud said:

Would it be possible for a Terton to recover or renew the tradition?

Malcolm wrote:

No, I don't think so.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 16th, 2022 at 2:14 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 16th, 2022 at 3:00 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen Meditation Retreat with Chakung Jigme Wangdrak Rinpoche and Anam Thubten May 13-15 2022

Content:

Arnoud said:

Would it be possible for a Terton to recover or renew the tradition?

Malcolm wrote:

No, I don't think so.

Arnoud said:

Maybe the manual will show up in some long lost library one day. Of course, there are still plenty of practices left so...

Malcolm wrote:

We can only hope. Sometimes, when knowledge is lost, it is lost for good.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 16th, 2022 at 6:57 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Fortunately, there is some indication that the midterms will not be the GOP red tsunami everyone fears/hopes for.

Queequeg said:

We can only hope the Republican primaries give us lunatics like Herschel Walker and Dr. Oz.

Malcolm wrote:

Seems to be the case.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 16th, 2022 at 9:19 PM

Title: Re: Dharanis that don't require initiation

Content:

Aemilius said:

"Initiation" or "abhisheka" can take place formally or informally.

Malcolm wrote:

You don't know what you are talking about.

Aemilius said:

Many instances in teachings of Shakyamuni can be described as initiations. "

Malcolm wrote:

You still don't know what you are talking about.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 16th, 2022 at 11:19 PM

Title: Re: Dharanis that don't require initiation

Content:

Soma999 said:

My experience is that with a true master, even casual words can be a transmission. Some transmission can introduce - initiate - you to certain mysteries.

Malcolm wrote:

You also have demonstrated repeatedly that you have no idea what you are talking about.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 16th, 2022 at 11:26 PM

Title: Re: Gelug responses to these critiques of Tsongkhapa?

Content:

wei wu wei said:

From my little corner of the dharma social media universe, Tsongkhapa is taking a beating at the hands of people armed to the teeth with Mipham, Gendun Chopel, and other non-Gelug thinkers.

Malcolm wrote:

The people who arm themselves with such polemics, imagining that there is some transcendental emptiness, have missed both Tsongkhapa's point, as well as the point of Classical Madhyamaka thinkers in Tibet prior to Tsongkhapa.

wei wu wei said:

Well, I'm not sure how the average social media user engages a "renowned Buddhist scholar-monk" at one of the great monasteries, but they are skillfully and directly taking on Tsongkhapa's presentation of emptiness. Yes, internet debate is easy, but I'm not talking about low-level sectarian mud slinging: I'm talking about serious points of criticism raised by non-Gelugpas regarding important issues of interpretation.

Malcolm wrote:

First one has to make sure they actually understand the point of view they think they are defending. It is not clear at all that this is case.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 16th, 2022 at 11:36 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Svalaksana said:

Let's just hope Erdogan does not come up with another of his classic brainfarts and vetoes their joining.

Malcolm wrote:

It won't impact Finland much, I don't think there are many Kurds in Finland, and Finland has pretty strict laws about immigrating, learning Finnish, for example, being a primary requirement.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 17th, 2022 at 12:22 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 17th, 2022 at 1:49 AM

Title: Re: White Tara Empowerment

Content:

Silent Bob said:

Not to put too fine a point on it, but Chime Pakme Nyinthik is a terma and not really equivalent to the White Tara of Atisha's tradition.

Chris

Malcolm wrote:

There are two traditions of Tshe lha rnam gsum, and they are connected. There is the tradition from Bari, Marpa, and Maitriyogi, and then there is the tradition of Shri Singha, Padmasambhava, and Vimalamitra.

The former is the outer practice of the latter.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 17th, 2022 at 2:48 AM

Title: Re: Chakravartin, Indian myth of a Flying Saucer King

Content:

Kai lord said:

Not to worry though according to the time wheel tantra, in the darkest hours, the 25th king of shambala, the next iron wheel chakravartin, will arrive with his army of enlightened warriors to cleanse the world and free everyone from their suffering by encouraging them to do the ten virtuous deeds.

Malcolm wrote:

Bad idea to interpret this literally.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 17th, 2022 at 4:34 AM

Title: Re: Vajrayana parallels to the Aggañña Sutta of the Pali Canon

Content:

Kai lord said:

On the fun side, some prominent Tibetan noble families like the Khon have their own famous creation myth that their ancestors were descended from beings of light from a second dhyana plane of existence called Heavenly Clear Light.

Influences from agganna or similar theme found in the sutras? Well, its up to one to decide for themselves.

Malcolm wrote:

'Od gsal lha are pre-buddhist. They cannot be Ābhāsvara devas since they belong to the desire realm. Indeed, the Khon clan identify a very specific mountain peak to the north of the Tsangpo river as the site where the sky gods (gram aha) as they are also called descended in Tibet. The middle brother was called gYu ring, or Long Turquoise. His sons were the famous seven Ma sang brothers, which include the dharmapāla Vajrasadhu. The Ma sang are also credited with inventing divination and gambling with dice. The ancient Tibetan game of Pagchen is credited to them as well. In any case, it is impossible for form realm gods to descend to the desire realm, much less the human realm, and even if they were to do so, humans could not interact with them. There is a similar myth from the lCe clan, only in this case, the 'od gsal lha descend in Tajik, and conquered the humans there, before moving into Mang yul, Tibet via Zhang Zhung.

Thus, these so-called gods from which these Tibetan clans claim descent are pre-buddhist classes of deities, and have nothing to with Indian cosmology at all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 17th, 2022 at 8:22 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen Meditation Retreat with Chakung Jigme Wangdrak Rinpoche and Anam Thubten May 13-15 2022

Content:

cjb said:

Awareness is timeless and unobstructed. It is never separate from your being and it cannot be created anew, lost, or destroyed and is not something that is cultivated.

Malcolm wrote:

Spoken like a true crypto-advaitan.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 17th, 2022 at 8:25 AM

Title: Re: Gelug responses to these critiques of Tsongkhapa?

Content:

wei wu wei said:

The people who arm themselves with such polemics, imagining that there is some transcendental emptiness, have missed both Tsongkhapa's point, as well as the point of Classical Madhyamaka thinkers in Tibet prior to Tsongkhapa.

Setting aside pure polemicists, there are obviously substantially different views in how to characterize emptiness (as shown in the Duckworth quote above). I regularly see non-Gelug refutations of Tsongkhapa's formulation of emptiness as a non-implicative negative...

Malcolm wrote:

All classical Madhyamaka scholars in Tibet accept emptiness as a non-affirming negation.

wei wu wei said:

First one has to make sure they actually understand the point of view they think they are defending. It is not clear at all that this is case.

Hmmm. What can I say? I've done my homework the best I can for several years, even with a mentor. Have spent my time in all volumes of the Lamrim Chenmo, Hopkins, Newland, Napper, HHDL, Garfield, Westerhoff, Thakchoe, the primary early Madhyamaka texts. I won't claim direct insight into emptiness but if I'm not qualified to begin understanding the broader dialogues of the path I'm taking, then I don't know exactly when I would be.

Malcolm wrote:

My point is that it is really not clear whether these western scholars you refer to actually understand Madhyamaka at all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 17th, 2022 at 9:22 AM

Title: Re: Dharanis that don't require initiation

Content:

Aemilius said:

"Initiation" or "abhisheka" can take place formally or informally.

Malcolm wrote:

You don't know what you are talking about.

Montoya said:

In a recent thread (quoted below), you make a clear distinction between formal and informal forms of initiation. Can you clarify what you don't agree with in the above statement?

Malcolm wrote:

Abhisheka is a very precise term for a specific rite. It was the incorrect use of that word that prompted my initial comment. There are many kinds of transmission in Buddhadharma. But these two gentlemen regularly speak of such things in a very haphazard, irresponsible manner that is misleading.

When speaking of how Dzogchen is transmitted, for example, as in sutra, the kind of transmission depends on the capacity of the practitioner. These issues are detailed precisely in various authoritative commentaries. It's true that Dzogchen transmission does not need to be wrapped up in a complicated mandala ritual, but it still has identifiable principles of transmission that have been written about extensively, the most important of which are the teacher's intent and the student's receptivity. The teacher must be able to and intend to give transmission and the student has to be receptive and proactive in receiving transmissions. The details depend on a variety of factors. For example Manjushrimitra was a highly trained pandita as well as a Vajrayana practitioner already when he met Garab Dorje. Garab Dorje was a Indian child prodigy, a nirmanakaya.

Especially when discussing the other Vajrayana systems, a formal set of ritual empowerments is essential. There are many reasons for this, not least of which is the assertion that the result, buddhahood depends on gathering the two accumulations.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 17th, 2022 at 11:53 AM

Title: Re: Gelug responses to these critiques of Tsongkhapa?

Content:

wei wu wei said:

All classical Madhyamaka scholars in Tibet accept emptiness as a non-affirming negation.

What I mean is the distinction that Duckworth is setting up above: "For these thinkers, emptiness is not the negation of a putative object of negation, for emptiness is beyond any description and hence transcends both affirmation and negation."

Malcolm wrote:

All Classical Madhyamakas agree that emptiness is the emptiness of something, and that without something, there cannot be nothing. What is that something? Dependent Origination. No classical Madhyamaka accepts a self-established ineffable emptiness. The ultimate is the ultimate of something, no classical Madhyamaka rejects this, including Mipham. Otherwise one cannot have the Union of the two truths and so on which became codified with the translation of the MAV of Candrakirti.

wei wu wei said:

Thanks for that clarification. Perhaps some of them don't. Are there some you question?

Malcolm wrote:

Most, not some.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 17th, 2022 at 11:36 PM

Title: Re: Ukraine News

Content:

Sādhaka said:

By the way, I don't endorse whoever posted the tweet. I'm not concerned about the messenger; just the message there.

Malcolm wrote:

Maccaffery deleted it when he realized it was an error. That is more than I can say for the person who posted the tweet, who has nothing but errors filling his entire timeline.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 18th, 2022 at 5:33 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen Meditation Retreat with Chakung Jigme Wangdrak Rinpoche and Anam Thubten May 13-15 2022

Content:

cjb said:

Awareness is timeless and unobstructed. It is never separate from your being and it cannot be created anew, lost, or destroyed and is not something that is cultivated.

Malcolm wrote:

Spoken like a true crypto-advaitan.

cjb said:

Hi Malcom,

I appreciate your translation work, thank you very much for your efforts.

I'm not familiar with this term at all.

Malcolm wrote:

Your assertion that "awareness," by which I assume you mean the term "rig pa," is not something to be cultivated is completely mistaken. I am not sure where you learned this, but it is not a correct understanding. Rig pa is just a special kind of knowledge, that's all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 18th, 2022 at 7:56 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen Meditation Retreat with Chakung Jigme Wangdrak Rinpoche and

Anam Thubten May 13-15 2022

Content:

cjb said:

Hi Malcom,

I appreciate your translation work, thank you very much for your efforts.

I'm not familiar with this term at all.

Malcolm wrote:

Your assertion that "awareness," by which I assume you mean the term "rig pa," is not something to be cultivated is completely mistaken. I am not sure where you learned this, but it is not a correct understanding. Rig pa is just a special kind of knowledge, that's all.

cjb said:

Malcom,

Thank you for clarifying.

I am not suggesting that familiarization with rig pa is not required, if that is what is meant here by cultivation. Only that rig pa is not created/modified/etc upon recognition of it,

Malcolm wrote:

Rig pa is the recognition. When there is no recognition, there is no rig pa. There is instead ma rig pa, ignorance.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 19th, 2022 at 6:32 PM

Title: Re: Most Important Empowerments in the Sakya Tradition

Content:

Kai lord said:

Most Sakypas practice the four unbreakables, so they practice both hevajra and yogini at the same time daily.

Malcolm wrote:

Theoretically. The reality is different.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 19th, 2022 at 11:26 PM

Title: Re: Most Important Empowerments in the Sakya Tradition

Content:

Kai lord said:

Most Sakypas practice the four unbreakables, so they practice both hevajra and yogini at the same time daily.

Malcolm wrote:

Theoretically. The reality is different.

Kai lord said:

Let me guess, many just do kilaya and yogini similar to what some Gelugpas did, except with solitary hero and Yogini

Malcolm wrote:

Many only practice Yogini.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 20th, 2022 at 2:22 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen Meditation Retreat with Chakung Jigme Wangdrak Rinpoche and Anam Thubten May 13-15 2022

Content:

Passing By said:

Is it correct to say that the Basis (gzhi in Nyingma /Kun gzhi in Bon) and its characteristics of ngowo, rang zhin and thukje or the dang, rolpa, tsal, need no cultivation, and so is always ready to be recognized or ("observed" for want of better word) by using the method used to give you pointing out for yourself?

Malcolm wrote:

The basis is your real nature. So, it is like picking the fruit of the a tree. As it says in the Tantra Without Syllables, the dharmakāya is encountered in the intimate instructions. So, one does need a qualified teacher.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 20th, 2022 at 2:26 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen Meditation Retreat with Chakung Jigme Wangdrak Rinpoche and Anam Thubten May 13-15 2022

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I have really come around to this view. It's not that I don't see the importance of establishing right view, I just think most contemporary polemicism is primarily a way of wasting ones time. I mean I participate myself, in no way am I above it, I'm just not gonna justify it as something productive when it's not. It's so easy to become enamored with our own thoughts! Damn!

Malcolm wrote:

The purpose of studying of tenets is not to become expert in arguments, rather, the purpose is to identify erroneous concepts one may be holding and abandon them.

There are two basic erroneous concepts: "This is" and "This isn't." All tenets spring from these two assertions. The only view free from these two assertions of the view of dependent origination, i.e. the Buddha's view.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 20th, 2022 at 2:34 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 20th, 2022 at 3:09 AM

Title: Re: Different conceptions of the bodhisattva path

Content:

retrofuturist said:

Sometimes I hear about bodhisattvas, "sticking around" to assist all sentient beings (or even every single blade of grass!) to liberation.

Sometimes I hear about bodhisattvas striving to become Buddhas ASAP as a means to help enlighten sentient beings.

Are these different paths? Are there other paths that can be followed by the bodhisattva other than the two mentioned above?

Kai lord said:

Basically those bodhisattvas speed run to the Tenth bhumi which is super close to Buddhahood and then stick around to help sentient beings.

Vajrapani, Manjusri, Chenrezig and other eight major bodhisattvas or Mahasattvas like Maitreya, are all at Tenth bhumi.

Malcolm wrote:

Tenth stage bodhisattvas are buddhas, just not samyaksambuddhas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 20th, 2022 at 3:22 AM

Title: Re: Chakravartin, Indian myth of a Flying Saucer King

Content:
Caoimhghín said:
I'm looking at it this way:

Physical objects cannot actually travel at light-speed, at faster-than-light-speed, or even substantially near light-speed. Objects become energy. Matter dematerializes.

If they can re-materialize a spaceship, they might as well just re-materialize their bodies, which they would have to do anyways.

PeterC said:
We're into the realm of speculative theoretical physics here, but: the basic idea that to cross a very long distance you would find a way to accelerate to beyond the speed of light is not the most plausible. A more plausible way would be to construct a stable wormhole large enough to go through - ie to distort spacetime rather than to travel through it faster.

But just because we can speculate that a means might exist to do this - eg using exotic matter to stabilize and expand a wormhole occurring naturally on the event horizon of a supermassive object - the far, far more likely outcome is that this simply isn't possible. That our simplistic view of physics is actually correct and that there's no means of crossing interstellar space, and we are therefore de facto alone and always will be.

Malcolm wrote:
There is always rebirth...

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, May 20th, 2022 at 9:57 AM
Title: Re: Back in the USA...
Content:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, May 21st, 2022 at 12:09 AM
Title: Re: Gelug responses to these critiques of Tsongkhapa?
Content:

wei wu wei said:
All classical Madhyamaka scholars in Tibet accept emptiness as a non-affirming negation.
Does Mipham qualify as a "classical Madhyamaka scholar"?

Malcolm wrote:
He accepts emptiness as explained by Madhyamaks as a non-affirming negation.

Freedom from the four extremes is a series of negations which do not affirm anything. If there is nothing in the relative that can be found by an examination of the four extremes, there is also nothing ultimate which can be found by any of the four extremes. Mipham's final view is prasangika, just as it is the view of Longchenpa, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 21st, 2022 at 1:56 AM

Title: Re: White Tara Empowerment

Content:

Aloke said:

How can Chimé Pakme Nyingtik be conferred, as a Wang, Jenang?

Malcolm wrote:

It has three kinds of empowerments: two day major empowerment; one day blessing, as well as a Jenang.

It is HYT in general so no dietary restrictions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 21st, 2022 at 3:46 AM

Title: Re: White Tara Empowerment

Content:

heart said:

It is considered Mahayoga,

Malcolm wrote:

It can be practiced in Anuyoga style as well. It may not be evident from the sadhana, but it is pretty clear in the root text, which specifies two ways of arising: instantly or according to the five abhisambodhis. You don't need much of sadhana to practice in the Anuyoga style.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 21st, 2022 at 6:16 AM

Title: Re: Tilopa 6 words of advice

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

Question

Do Tilopa's Six Words of Advice apply the same to Dzogchen practice even though they were written and intended for Mahamudra?

Malcolm wrote:

Sure.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 21st, 2022 at 9:39 PM

Title: Re: Most Important Empowerments in the Sakya Tradition

Content:

Kai lord said:

As for why some Sakyapas still practice Hevajra... well, just think of lamdre and vajra verses.

Malcolm wrote:

Lamdre is a heterogeneous system (see my two volume forthcoming translation of Lamdre material published by Shambala under the auspice of Tsadra). The Vajra Verses are primarily focused on completion stage practice. Lamdre also incorporates eight other upadesas brought to Tibet by Drokmi. Lamdre is in fact the distilled essence of nine upadesas, based on Hevajra, Cakrasamvara, and Guhyasamaja.

One can use these completion stage practices for any mother tantra deity. Indeed, Sachen's Nyakma commentary shows up in the terma revelations of Longsal Nyingpo.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 22nd, 2022 at 9:26 PM

Title: Re: Most Important Empowerments in the Sakya Tradition

Content:

Kai lord said:

As for why some Sakyapas still practice Hevajra... well, just think of lamdre and vajra verses.

Malcolm wrote:

Lamdre is a heterogeneous system (see my two volume forthcoming translation of Lamdre material published by Shambala under the auspice of Tsadra).

Kai lord said:

Will do

One can use these completion stage practices for any mother tantra deity. Indeed, Sachen's Nyakma commentary shows up in the terma revelations of Longsal Nyingpo. Is it because the older brother of the founder for kathok was a student of Sachen?

Malcolm wrote:

I don't know.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 23rd, 2022 at 9:42 AM

Title: Re: Is the alaya vijnana outside of spacetime?

Content:

dpcalder said:

It's my understanding that the Yogacara concept of the alaya vijnana is transpersonal and contains the sum total of all impressions of all sentient beings. How is this compatible with the Buddhist view of impermanence? Can anyone link me to any good discussions on this issue (or provide their own answers)?

Malcolm wrote:

Your understanding is incorrect. The all basis is personal. Read Mahayana Samgraha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 24th, 2022 at 5:52 PM

Title: Re: Rajasic and Tamasic Foods

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Are there any authoritative texts with extensive examples of both of these?

I've found online what appeared to be a translation of the Caraka Samhita, and in doing a search within the said PDF, didn't find anything about foods; only on the Gunas in relation to types of people.

The reason I ask, is because most websites provide contradictory information. One website says that eggs are rajasic and another says that they are tamasic. One website says that avocados are rajasic and another says that they are tamasic. One website says that red meat is rajasic and another says that it is tamasic. Etc., etc., etc.

Malcolm wrote:

It's based on tastes, In the Bhagavid Gita, sweet is defined as sattvic. Sweet is composed of earth and water.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 24th, 2022 at 11:11 PM

Title: Re: Rajasic and Tamasic Foods

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Then as I mentioned a post or so back, perhaps it is better to not take the Gunas into so much consideration, and instead go by the Three Humours (Vata/Lung, Pitta/Tripa, Kapha/Badkan). Now the Three Humours don't seem to be exactly parallel to the Three Gunas, although maybe there's some overlap; at least with pitta/tripa & rajas and the fire or heat element (?) In other words maybe I'll want to look into adding more pitta or tripa foods, instead of trying to look up what foods are rajasic....

And I wouldn't say that I eat rotten, stale, reheated, or (overly) processed foods (all tamasic); yet I'm all about fermented foods with bacteria, which if the latter are considered tamasic, would still be worth the trade-off due to the nutritional content.

Also if pasture-raised egg yolks are tamasic, they're still also packed with naturally occurring vitamins like Vitamin K2 and just about every other essential vitamin you can think of....

Malcolm wrote:

All food is tamasic, actually. Why? All food is made of the four elements, which are the in tamasic portion of the 25 tattvas.

It's better evaluate food based on the six tastes and in particular, their post-digestive tastes, sweet, sour, and bitter.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 25th, 2022 at 2:10 AM

Title: Re: Rajasic and Tamasic Foods

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Are the 25 Tattvas mentioned mostly by, say, Caraka; or are they also taught within Tibetan Medicine as well?

Malcolm wrote:

They are not taught in Tibetan Medicine, nor are they taught in the Ayurvedic treatises of Vagbhata, which directly influence Tibetan Medicine.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 26th, 2022 at 9:34 AM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

PeterC said:

The Chinese grandmother happened.

If you were working age, they basically made it necessary to get vaccinated if you wanted to leave your home. But nobody tells their Chinese grandmother what to do. And granny is very nervous about these new medicines. So the elderly didn't get quite so much pressure, and many of them didn't get vaccinated.

Queequeg said:

Oh. That changes the story. The shut down is not a narrative about control, vaccine inefficacy, but filial piety.

Now it makes sense.

PeterC said:

Not quite. The government decided it couldn't/wouldn't/whatever require the elderly to vaccinate in the same way it required the working age people. So now it is stuck with a large unvaccinated elderly population. Etc etc.

If they were not in the middle of an outbreak they would have more options available. As it is they had authorized use of paxlovid and molnupravir at the end of 2021. But once you're actually engaged in trying to suppress an outbreak, your options are limited. It's hard to run a second mass vaccination campaign while you're trying to suppress an outbreak - you have to either let the suppression go and deal with a few million deaths, or continue the suppression until cases come down. Neither are great options.

Malcolm wrote:

According to Soros, the Chinese never developed a vaccine for variants. Not sure if he is right.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 26th, 2022 at 8:22 PM

Title: Re: Namkhai Norbu's SMS teacher give transmission in China and IDC did almost nothing

Content:

Queequeg said:

I find it interesting that ChNNR didn't name a successor or leave any specific guidance despite having time to prepare for his passing.

treehuggingoctopus said:

Actually, we do not know that. When the IDG were asked in 2020 if there is a will that deals with the future of the DC, they said: "We do not know."

Malcolm wrote:

He did say the DC would split into different groups. This is already happening.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 27th, 2022 at 8:56 PM

Title: Re: Looking for the origin of Naro-khechari's Yakshini

Content:

AmidaB said:

The location is:

gsung 'bum/ tA ra nA tha/ (rtag brtan phun tshogs gling gi par ma/)

"rje btsun tā ra nā tha'i gsung 'bum". "rtag brtan phun tshogs gling" edition, reprinted in Ladakh. BDRC reference: MW22277.

nā ro mkha' spyod kyi rdzogs rim thun mong ma yin pa, Tāranātha, 4 (nga): 663-673.

On p. 664 among a couple of side practices (mirror of predictions, sman grub) a Yakshini practice was mentioned by Taranatha.

I would like to ask for your help to identify the possible source, lineage and any more or less publicly available details of this Naro Khechari related side/branch(?) practice.

Any of your help would be greatly appreciated.

Malcolm wrote:

Drakpa Gyaltsen'collected works in Sa skya bka' 'bum

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 28th, 2022 at 7:30 PM

Title: Re: Namkhai Norbu's SMS teacher give transmission in China and IDC did almost nothing

Content:

Queequeg said:

I find it interesting that ChNNR didn't name a successor or leave any specific guidance despite having time to prepare for his passing.

xjh2021 said:

ChNN taught many students. Why He didn't choose a lineage holder from them?

Malcolm wrote:

He said many times that everyone who receives a lineage is a holder of that lineage. You are treating "lineage" as if it were intellectual property. That is an incorrect point of view.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 28th, 2022 at 8:05 PM

Title: Re: Namkhai Norbu's SMS teacher give transmission in China and IDC did almost nothing

Content:

PeterC said:

In any case, ChNNr had plenty of time to decide this, and chose not to appoint someone as his successor.

It's important to remember that there isn't some "ChNNr Transmission". He taught Buddhadharma, and within that, primarily Dzogchen. If we get hung up on the "ChNNr Lineage" then I think we misunderstood what he taught.

xjh2021 said:

Then how Can new Students practice ChNNr's special teaching such as long sa ? or They can't.

Malcolm wrote:

They need to receive it from someone who has received it and practiced it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 29th, 2022 at 12:32 AM

Title: Re: Namkhai Norbu's SMS teacher give transmission in China and IDC did almost nothing

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

They need to receive it from someone who has received it and practiced it.

xjh2021 said:

such as Fabio, SMS instructor or common student ?

Malcolm wrote:

From whoever feels confident to transmit it, based on their experience, and is willing to be a responsible teacher for that person, and understands what that means.

The qualifications for who can give teachings is clearly described in the Self-Arisen Vidyā Tantra. People should check those out and see if they think the person they wish to receive teachings from is qualified.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 31st, 2022 at 2:36 AM

Title: Re: Is dzogchen independent from Vajrayana?

Content:

xjh2021 said:

Is dzogchen independent from Vajrayana?

Malcolm wrote:

Depends what you mean by "Dzogchen."

Depending on that, the answer is yes and no.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 31st, 2022 at 9:42 PM

Title: Re: Namkhai Norbu's SMS teacher give transmission in China and IDC did almost nothing

Content:

heart said:

I think Adriano Clemente clarified this point in December 2021. It is good enough for me at least.

<https://melong.com/adriano-clemente-closing-talk-vajrasattva-longsal-retreat/?fbclid=IwAR0pf8KFoPNo-YNnUJXXjR6ez8332BoRXOGvQOJ9mgkLfG6O5rhdUp4Q1q0>

/magnus

xjh2021 said:

I believe more in ChNN than Adriano Clemente.

Malcolm wrote:

Adriano is Rinpoche's oldest active student (circa 1974), and the sole translator of Rinpoche's Longsal cycle. If you don't trust him, who would you trust?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 3rd, 2022 at 5:43 AM

Title: Re: Is dzogchen independent from Vajrayana?

Content:

florin said:

Dzogchen rejects the ten natures. They are obstacles to understanding the dzogchen state. Lots of practitioners develop limiting attitudes as a result of these characteristics.

Malcolm wrote:

A lot of other practitioners develop limiting attitudes because they do not understand the absence of the ten principles refers to the basis, in which these ten principles are indeed absent. No one needs an empowerment, samaya, etc., to possess the primordial state. These ten principles refer to the path. And indeed, the path of Dzogchen requires empowerment, samaya, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 3rd, 2022 at 7:36 PM

Title: Re: Tibetan/Western qualification "equivalents"

Content:

Lingpupa said:

SO - from what I know (and this is particularly where I'm hoping for more knowledgeable input), it seems that the following, necessarily vague, equivalences might make sense:

kyorpon: beyond secondary education, perhaps equivalent to some sort of tertiary diploma focussed on relevant textual knowledge and expertise khenpo: Master (whether of Arts or Studies is not important), being higher than a normal first-degree Bachelor's.

But I could be wrong...

Malcolm wrote:

The first problem is that the equivalent for kyorpon would be TA, teaching assistant, it's an appointment, not a degree. So grad student.

The degrees are bka' bzhi pa (four treatises), bka' bcu pa (ten texts), and mkhan po. Slob dpon is not a degree, but a title, usually for nonmonastics with an advanced education. Technically, a Khenpo can lead an ordination of monks and nuns.

The Geshe degree system is different.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 3rd, 2022 at 8:43 PM

Title: Re: Reading restricted texts

Content:

namtose said:

With humble and great respects to my dharma brother and fellow Lamdre-pa (we took the LamDre together in 1990 in Nepal with the Late Dagchen Rinpoche) I quote From Sakya Trichen's introduction To Taking the Result as the path:

"A very important aspect of these secret pith instructions is that, from their beginning until now, they have been held in the greatest respect and have only been available to those whose mental continuum has been ripened through the relevant preliminary practices and initiations. Without such a base, esoteric teachings such as these cannot actually be comprehended. It is vitally important, both for the ripening of disciples and for the maintenance of the authenticity of the teachings, that this respect and guardianship of these teachings continues in their transport into the west. (xv-xvi)

Malcolm wrote:

The disclaimer notwithstanding, you can purchase this book on Amazon. But as any mature student knows, it won't mean much to someone who has not received Lamdre.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 3rd, 2022 at 10:38 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Queequeg said:

That's racist.

Archie2009 said:

You can't be racist against white people according to the good guys/gals/they/thems in the culture wars.

Or as Whoopi Goldberg would say : "The Holocaust was not about race."

Malcolm wrote:

The comments on twitter about this are pretty funny, especially this one:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 3rd, 2022 at 11:13 PM

Title: Re: Vajradhara, Pantheism, Advaita Vedanta Brahman

Content:

heart said:

Emptiness is not "one entity with many isolates", where did you find that?

/magnus

Konchog1 said:

David Gonzalez.

We can understand this by thinking about the Prasangika's presentation of "same entity different isolates." In the case of emptiness, all phenomena have the same nature or entity but have different conventional bases or imputation or "isolates." Therefore they have the same entity emptiness-but different isolates their bases of their bases of designation.

heart said:

Entity = "a thing with distinct and independent existence". So using "entity" for "nature" as he does in your quote is just plain wrong. Emptiness is not a thing, it means that there is nothing that have an "distinct and independent existence" all phenomena are free of distinctions and they only appear to have distinctions because of the interdependence on other phenomena.

/magnus

Malcolm wrote:

He is translating ngo bo as "entity." So does Thubten Jinpa. So do I when it is warranted. For example we have the entity (ngo bo), then its definition, divisions, and so.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 4th, 2022 at 12:33 AM

Title: Re: Vajradhara, Pantheism, Advaita Vedanta Brahman

Content:

heart said:

Ok, but as the OP got the impression that Vajrayana is the same as Advaita Vedanta I would say something went seriously wrong.

Malcolm wrote:

This is quite a common error. Doubt it is a result of DG's translation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 4th, 2022 at 12:41 AM

Title: Re: Confusion about Avalokiteshvara

Content:

khemindas said:

According to Heart Sutra Bodhisattva avalokiteshvara realized that all five skhandas are empty and attained liberation from dukkha, so why he is still called bodhisattva and not Buddha?

Malcolm wrote:

He is a buddha, he is just not a samyaksambuddha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 4th, 2022 at 5:15 AM

Title: Appropriateness of sexual relationship Dharmateacher/Student

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

[Mod note: This topic was split from here:

<https://www.dharmawheel.net/viewtopic.php?p=631010#p631010>

tummo18 said:

Hi everyone,

My community just had a complaint raised to the community of a student who became a consort of the teacher but then afterwards regretted the relationship and feel it shouldn't have happened.

Malcolm wrote:

If it was consensual, we all have had relationships we have regretted.

tummo18 said:

I don't personally feel it was inappropriate from what I've heard so far, but we are looking at how we can handle this in a way that seeks truth and takes care of the community as best as possible without ignoring and blaming the person making the complaint or just having the teacher resign when they might not have done anything inappropriate and leaving everyone else without their teacher.

Malcolm wrote:

- 1) How long was the complainant in the community?
- 2) What is the age difference between the two parties?
- 3) Who initiated the relationship?
- 4) If the teacher, did he apply pressure on the women to have a relationship?\
- 5) What sort of damage, if any, is the complainant specifying?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 4th, 2022 at 6:51 AM

Title: Re: Appropriateness of sexual relationship Dharmateacher/Student

Content:

reipun said:

A secret sexual relationship involving a power differential such as that between a student and teacher obviously violates trust, doesn't it? Is "consort" what the victim calls herself? A teacher resignation (or expulsion) would be "leaving everyone else without their teacher"? Aw, poor you.

Malcolm wrote:

Lot of assumptions here. Who said it was secret? Are teachers obligated to check with all their students before they have sex with one of them? Is it anyone's business who one sleeps with? No. She had regrets. So what? Is there a claim of harm or merely regret?

And, in Vajrayāna, assuming the person received empowerment from this teacher, it is a little hard to expel one with whom one has samaya. Sleeping with students may not be a good idea, but there are a whole host of issues here which are not going to be resolved through simplistic, judgmental comments.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 4th, 2022 at 7:06 AM

Title: Re: talk: Vedantic Self and Buddhist Non-Self

Content:

anjali said:

Here is an engaging and informative philosophical talk by Swami Sarvapriyananda, a scholar monk in the Ramakrishna lineage on an exposition of Buddhist emptiness, with an Advaita response: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=vAZPWu084m4&t>

Normally, I wouldn't post something like this on DW, but I think the Swami does a good job of presenting almost 2,000 years of Buddhist thought on emptiness from the Buddha, through Nagarjuna, Chandrakirti, and on into Tibetan Buddhism with mentions of Prasangika Madhyamika and Shentong. The majority of the talk discusses https://www.rigpawiki.org/index.php?title=Sevenfold_reasoning_of_the_chariot. Near the end of the talk, he covers the fivefold emptiness as discussed in Khenpo Tsultrim Gyamtso Rinpoche's https://www.amazon.com/Progressive-Meditation-Emptiness-Tsultrim-Rinpoche/dp/153740900X/ref=tmm_pap_swatch_0?_encoding=UTF8&qid=1654290897&sr=8-8. Although he doesn't mention Khenpo by name, he mentions the book and covers each of the five emptinesses.

Most of the talk is a fair exegesis of Buddhist thought. The Advaita response actually only covers about 20 minutes of the talk at the end. Swami Sarvapriyananda took a class on Tibetan Buddhism under Jay Garfield at Harvard Divinity School a couple of years ago. This talk seems to be based primarily on a paper he wrote for that class.

The occasion of the talk was Vesak.

Personally, I'm not interested in discussing/debating this topic. I'm merely offering this talk to those who are interested in such things.

Malcolm wrote:

His reasoning is quite poor actually. Trying to prove there is one substance, consciousness, out of which everything is made is ridiculous and easily refuted.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 4th, 2022 at 8:10 AM

Title: Re: Appropriateness of sexual relationship Dharmateacher/Student

Content:

rejun said:

The power differential/trust betrayal is an issue here.

What do you think is the object of regret, if not the harm felt?

Malcolm wrote:

The power differential is consideration, however, we should not pretend that it robs students of responsibility for their own choices.

I see no evidence of a betrayal of trust. That's your projection, not present in the OP.

People regret relationships for all kinds of reasons. In this case, we do not have enough information to form any kind of reasoned judgement about the situation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 4th, 2022 at 9:01 AM

Title: Re: Appropriateness of sexual relationship Dharmateacher/Student

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The power differential is consideration, however, we should not pretend that it robs students of responsibility for their own choices.

reiun said:

It does, because it puts a student at an inherent disadvantage.

Malcolm wrote:

This is an opinion. It is not an evidence-based fact. Students are just as capable of manipulating teachers as teachers are capable of manipulating students.

People regret relationships for all kinds of reasons. In this case, we do not have enough information to form any kind of reasoned judgement about the situation.

It would be good to hear from the victim.

Not every relationship that sours has a “victim,” even when it involves a Buddhist teacher and one of their students.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 4th, 2022 at 10:15 AM

Title: Re: Appropriateness of sexual relationship Dharmateacher/Student

Content:

reiun said:

It does, because it puts a student at an inherent disadvantage.

Malcolm wrote:

This is an opinion. It is not an evidence-based fact. Students are just as capable of manipulating teachers as teachers are capable of manipulating students.

reiun said:

That would be true only if there was no inherent power differential.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no objective evidence for an inherent anything.

reiun said:

Scandals involving predatory Buddhist teachers are well- documented and recent. But, as a Buddhist teacher yourself, I understand your discomfort with the topic.

Malcolm wrote:

I have no discomfort with the topic at all, and have seen examples of abusive teachers up close and personal, where the dynamics you describe are present. However, I have also seen other examples where relationships between teachers and students have hit the rocks, where there was nothing other than the “maybe this wasn’t such a fantastic idea” and everyone brushed themselves off, and got on with their life and practice. I have seen teacher groupies who hop from the bed of one teacher after another, etc., as well as sane, long-term commitments between teachers and their students, which are examples of mutual respect and love. That’s why I think automatically assigning students to an inferior position necessarily infantilizes women in particular. As for myself, I am in a long term committed relationship with my partner, who I met in the Dharma. So, no discomfort. People on the other hand experience some discomfort with the fact that I am not axiomatically opposed to romantic relationships between teachers and students. It is quite common in Tibetan Buddhism. Most Tibetan lamas, for example, with western wives have married one of their students. Most Tibetan wives of Tibetan lamas are absolutely their students. It’s just not as cut and dried as some western Buddhists would like it to be.

“Predatory” male Buddhist teachers are no different than any other womanizer. We don’t say that all women who get involved with womanizers are suffering from a power differential. Women make bad choices sometimes, and sometimes those bad choices happen to be Buddhist men. The opposite is also true. I’ve known some “predatory” female Buddhist teachers.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 4th, 2022 at 11:09 AM

Title: Re: Appropriateness of sexual relationship Dharmateacher/Student

Content:

zerwe said:

IDK, an attempt to address what I think the OP had in mind, FPMT's handling of Dagri Rinpoche and subsequent establishment of policy/education?

Shaun

Malcolm wrote:

Dagri is a monastic. We don’t know that this is case here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 4th, 2022 at 9:37 PM

Title: Re: Is this year obstacle for sheep?

Content:

Toenail said:

Is tiger year bad for sheep? Is it the seventh year from the birth sign? I don't know how to count correctly.

Malcolm wrote:

Monkey. This is the offside seven.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 4th, 2022 at 9:41 PM

Title: Re: Appropriateness of sexual relationship Dharmateacher/Student

Content:

Ayu said:

I read this as : if the consort does not feel to be benefited by this sexual consensus...

Malcolm wrote:

Consensual sex is consensual sex. It doesn't always work out as planned.

Unless a clear and evident pattern of abuse can be shown, it's no one's business. "It was a mistake" is not a valid reason to pillory someone.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 4th, 2022 at 11:31 PM

Title: Re: Appropriateness of sexual relationship Dharmateacher/Student

Content:

Ayu said:

I read this as : if the consort does not feel to be benefited by this sexual consensus...

Malcolm wrote:

Consensual sex is consensual sex. It doesn't always work out as planned.

Unless a clear and evident pattern of abuse can be shown, it's no one's business. "It was a mistake" is not a valid reason to pillory someone.

Ayu said:

I think, I didn't suggest to pillory anybody. Please note, that this whole thread is not about pillorying anybody. That is important for staying on topic.

Mingyur Rinpoches advice (my post above) is really helpful and wise. To me it shows that a teacher-student-relationship (in a hopefully aware environment) cannot be equaled to any usual relationship between common ignorant people.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure it can. Most teachers are common ignorant people (95+%) with varying levels of Buddhist education.

Ayu said:

It cannot be reduced to "consent in first place and therefore everything is fine". This kind of argument ignores the psychic damage that can possibly follow after such a confusing incident. The psychic condition of the woman after this incident has to be respected.

Malcolm wrote:

Only if the woman in question is suffering from the delusion that her teacher is an enlightened being, or if the teacher encourages such an idea.

Ayu said:

There's nothing wrong with showing some empathy even after the consensual act turned out to be a misunderstanding. Yes, this can happen, and it happens all the time.

This is no crime.

But I think, as well it's no crime to talk about it openly, if one feels hurt.

Malcolm wrote:

Of course there is no harm talking these things through.

What would signs of abuse of a sangha look like? The teacher has serial or multiple relationships with students. The teacher claims spiritual benefit for the student in such a relationship. The student is required to keep the relationship secret under threat of "samaya." There is a significant age disparity between the two parties (25/60, for example). The student is very new, young, and inexperienced. In these circumstances, of course, the teacher needs to be confronted, the sangha broken up, and so on. I also want to add that such abuse generally involves financial impropriety as well.

Americans in general are very hysterical about such things. I find Europeans to be a bit more level-headed with regard to such issues.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 4th, 2022 at 11:35 PM

Title: Re: Is this year obstacle for sheep?

Content:

Toenail said:

Is tiger year bad for sheep? Is it the seventh year from the birth sign? I don't know how to count correctly.

Malcolm wrote:

Monkey. This is the offside seven.

Toenail said:

Thank you. I still don't understand the system. I thought offside seven meant the seventh year from the birth sign. Which would be tiger, no? Monkey comes right after sheep year?

Malcolm wrote:

Correct. (1) tiger (2) rabbit (3) dragon (4) snake (5) horse (6) sheep (7) monkey. Monkey is the enemy of tiger, since the life element of tiger is male wood, and the life element of money is male metal.

For sheep is it ox: (1) sheep (2) monkey (3) bird (4) dog (5) pig (6) mouse (7) ox.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 5th, 2022 at 12:51 AM

Title: Re: Appropriateness of sexual relationship Dharmateacher/Student

Content:

Ayu said:

Wherever on this globe, there is always much space for marginalizing the issue and shaming the person who has been hurt in first place.

Malcolm wrote:

It is always assumed that the (male) teacher is never hurt in these circumstances. This is quite a narrow-minded view. Human relationships are complicated.

Ayu said:

But what's your advice for the OP - how should a center / a community deal with it in general?

Malcolm wrote:

Ascertain whether the relationship meets the threshold to be considered abusive.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 5th, 2022 at 3:16 AM

Title: Re: Appropriateness of sexual relationship Dharmateacher/Student

Content:

reiun said:

A sexual relationship is never appropriate between teachers and current students.

Malcolm wrote:

That is IMS's trip. It is not universally applicable. If that is how they want to run their community, I have no issue with it, as long as they aren't running around making up rules for Tibetan Buddhists.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 5th, 2022 at 3:21 AM

Title: Re: Drubthab Kuntue teachings from Dzongsar Khyentse?

Content:

zerwe said:

The link for a list of the works contained doesn't work.
Does anyone else know or have further details?

Shaun

Malcolm wrote:

It is 14 volumes of Jenangs and blessings (so it requires an HYT initiation to start with, usually Hevajra) from Sakya, Kagyu, Kadampa and Nyingma, collected by Khyentse Wangpo.

mKhyen brtse'i dbang po, and Ngor pa dpon slob blo gter dbang po, editors. sGrub thabs kun btus (glog klad par ma). Sachen International, Guru Lama, 2002. Buddhist Digital Resource Center (BDRC), purl.bdrc.io/resource/MW1KG17189. [BDRC bdr:MW1KG17189]

You can scan the outline.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 5th, 2022 at 5:09 AM

Title: Re: Appropriateness of sexual relationship Dharmateacher/Student

Content:

reiun said:

That would be true only if there was no inherent power differential.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no objective evidence for an inherent anything.

reiun said:

That would be the patriarchal opinion.

Malcolm wrote:

No, that would be Buddhist opinion, which rejects inherency. There is no doubt Buddhism like every other religion in the world emerged from a patriarchal matrix. But that is completely besides the point. If you go down that road, you will then wind up with the conclusion that all sexual relationships involve a power differential, and in that case, all women are victims when they decide they are unhappy with this or that man. This might square with Andrea Dworkin-style feminism (all sex is rape), but it is facially absurd.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 5th, 2022 at 6:04 AM

Title: Re: Appropriateness of sexual relationship Dharmateacher/Student

Content:

reiun said:

Buddhist teacher patriarchy has been an obvious contemporary problem.

Malcolm wrote:

One cannot draw an inference from a generality to a particular. One cannot state that every romantic relationship between a Buddhist teacher and his or her student is predicated on patriarchy and exploitation.

reiun said:

The sex part is not appropriate in the opinion of many Buddhist groups, in part because it violates that trust.

Malcolm wrote:

Sex is messy, and many people are not mature about it, both teachers and students.

As for your claim it violates "trust," this is again not a quantifiable absolute. In Tibetan Buddhism, sexual pleasure is not something to be avoided. Many people, women as well as men, are attracted to Tibetan Buddhism precisely because this is so.

Tangentially are many women attending so-called "tantric retreats" because they have romantic ideas about sacred sexuality and so on. Many of them wind up sleeping with the so-called instructors, and quite intentionally.

However, in Tibetan Buddhism, while sexual pleasure is not something to avoid, so-called sexual yogas are not fun, they are laborious, systematic, time-consuming, and frankly, not very erotic. In any case, they are only for young people between 16-26. So, it's a bunch of baloney that this violates "trust." It might very well do so in Vipassana and Zen, etc. Tibetan Buddhism is a different animal. If you had not noticed, this is where this OP is found.

The real issue in Buddhism is that many people think somehow their teacher is enlightened, when this is obviously not the case 99 percent of the time in every school. The real problem is Buddhist puffery about "enlightened masters" and naive romantics who believe in such things.

If a Buddhist teacher wants to have a romantic relationship with a student, this axiomatic proof that person is very unlikely to be a liberated person, no matter how eloquent they may sound or how still or long they may be able to sit.

The real problem is the naivety that people carry when they begin to study and practice. All the problematic situations I have seen is where the teacher allows students to think they are enlightened. If there is a problem, it is Buddhist marketing that preys on the naive. The problem is not sex. The problem is expectations. If someone pretends to be enlightened and then goes out and seduces a student based on that premise, this is abusive. But if two people happen to fall in love, one a teacher and the other a student, or even if they just want to use each other for sex (mutually), I have zero problem with this and I think everyone should mind their own business. Of course, if they are a monastic, they should know better, period.

Frankly, I think the way some buddhists react to this phenomena of teachers having romantic relations with students as if it is always bad is as immature as it is infantilizing. People really need to grow up and take responsibility for their own actions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 5th, 2022 at 11:36 AM

Title: Re: What are you watching? Any good?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The Boys season three. Gross, but hilarious.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 5th, 2022 at 11:52 AM

Title: Re: What are you watching? Any good?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The Boys season three. Gross, but hilarious.

Arnoud said:

Good to know it's out. First season was great. Second one less so. Hopefully the third one won't disappoint too much.

Malcolm wrote:

It won't.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 5th, 2022 at 8:57 PM

Title: Re: Appropriateness of sexual relationship Dharmateacher/Student

Content:

dharmafirststeps said:

I'm not sure we can apply Western cultural values for professional settings to a sangha.

Correct me if I'm wrong, but doesn't the Tibetan tradition say that Vajrayana practitioners should only have relationships with those they share samaya with?

Malcolm wrote:

Generally, yes. It's rather discouraged to date "outside of the fold." Even where this is the case (partner outside the Vajrayāna Dharma), that partner must be supportive of one's practice, or minimum, indifferent to it.

dharmafirststeps said:

So if their tradition says they should limit their relationships to those who share samaya, and culturally we say they can't date people who share samaya unless the person is of an equivalent level of respect/authority/power, well... it seems lay teachers may as well all just become monks and nuns at that point.

Malcolm wrote:

Culturally, we say lots of things. This whole thread started in the Tibetan Buddhist forum. Culturally, we are different than IMS, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 5th, 2022 at 9:21 PM

Title: Re: Appropriateness of sexual relationship Dharmateacher/Student

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

It seems to me that some Buddhist groups do fit the 'community education' model very well...

Malcolm wrote:

Some, but not all. Many are informal gatherings, not nonprofits, not registered churches, etc.

Codes of ethics are often false blankets, but in the woke world, they are clung to like clumps of grass on a river bank. The Buddha's own recommendations for sexual misconduct with respect to partners is sufficient in most cases: don't sleep with minors, don't sleep with other people's spouses, etc.

For example, I met a Bhutanese man once, who could not understand why he could not have two female partners at the same time in the USA. Why? His father had two wives and he had two moms.

In the end, people just need to be adults, and take responsibility for their own choices. That is the best solution. If someone sleeps with Lama so and so and finds out that it is not working out, then move on. Your spiritual life does not depend on someone else, it depends on you.

Tibetan Buddhist teachers are not therapists, counsellors, social workers, doctors, etc. They principally act as instructors in liturgy and Buddhist praxis in various lineages.

Most people will never have an opportunity to spend any facetime with their guru, from whom they receive empowerments and so on. They will mostly interact with center heads and senior students. How such places work things out with respect to this issue is up to them.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 6th, 2022 at 2:18 AM

Title: Re: Mewa and mantra

Content:

Könchok Thrinley said:

Hi,

I have been just very lightly looking at tibetan astrology and I am interested in what the connection between the birth mewa and its associated mantra is. How should one use the information? If has birth mewa 1 does it mean mani mantra would help overcome obstacles or is best for achieving realization? What is the logic behind it?

Thank you in advance Malcolm if you answer.

Malcolm wrote:

Not sure where you are pulling this info from. Source?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 6th, 2022 at 5:03 AM

Title: Re: Mewa and mantra

Content:

Könchok Thrinley said:

Hi,

I have been just very lightly looking at tibetan astrology and I am interested in what the connection between the birth mewa and its associated mantra is. How should one use the information? If has birth mewa 1 does it mean mani mantra would help overcome obstacles or is best for achieving realization? What is the logic behind it?

Thank you in advance Malcolm if you answer.

Malcolm wrote:

Not sure where you are pulling this info from. Source?

Könchok Thrinley said:

Sites like this <https://www.tibastro.eu/Mewa/BirthMewa/0>

Then also Phub Dorji Wang who is usually quite reliable:

<https://phubdorjiwang.blogspot.com/2021/09/individual-characteristics-based-on.html>

And then in general it makes rounds in some groups I follow every now and then.

Malcolm wrote:

OK. These indications do not included mantras in the Tibetan texts, it is just an elaboration on changeable mewas which are calculated for the deceased to ascertain the kind of statue one should have sponsored for them.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 6th, 2022 at 7:30 AM

Title: Re: 5th School of Tibetan Buddhism

Content:

Freddie B. said:

Greetings,

The Jonang lineage is alive and well in Tibet and with a monastery in India as well. This lineage survived the cultural revolution.

I am curious as to why they normally speak of only 4 schools of Tibetan Buddhism. Is it because the Jonangpa's were a little more remote, is it due to the view the Jonangpa's hold on Zhentong Madyamika, or is it political? Perhaps maybe a combination of the three?

Sometimes it is odd to think about it, when you hear "the four schools of Tibetan Buddhism."

Any thoughts?

Malcolm wrote:

Jonang is considered a sub school of Sakya, though the Jonangoas don't see it that way. But they are an offshoot, historically speaking.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 6th, 2022 at 9:40 PM

Title: Re: 5th School of Tibetan Buddhism

Content:

Freddie B. said:

Greetings,

The Jonang lineage is alive and well in Tibet and with a monastery in India as well. This lineage survived the cultural revolution.

I am curious as to why they normally speak of only 4 schools of Tibetan Buddhism. Is it because the Jonangpa's were a little more remote, is it due to the view the Jonangpa's hold on Zhentong Madyamika, or is it political? Perhaps maybe a combination of the three?

Sometimes it is odd to think about it, when you hear "the four schools of Tibetan Buddhism."

Any thoughts?

Malcolm wrote:

Jonang is considered a sub school of Sakya, though the Jonangoas don't see it that way.

But they are an offshoot, historically speaking.

PeterC said:

And...the Gelugpas?

On a more serious note - the odd thing about saying there are four schools is the omission of the Bonpos.

Malcolm wrote:

Also the Gelugpas are an offshoot of Sakya, most definitely.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 6th, 2022 at 10:17 PM

Title: Re: Appropriateness of sexual relationship Dharmateacher/Student

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

We therefore can't condone or cover up any sexual misbehaviour which falls too far outside community expectations, even if it falls within the norms of our religious tradition.

We could, in fact, see the string of abuse scandals as a long-running series of skirmishes or negotiations between the two sets of standards.

And it seems to me that discussions like this one could help us work out where the borders of acceptable behaviours, and acceptable responses to unacceptable behaviours, might lie.

Malcolm wrote:

I already pointed out a number of red flags for whether a teacher was behaving inappropriately. Unfortunately, the assumption is that this is all one way, and it isn't. Patrons, who by all measure are students, for example, exert enormous influence in Tibetan Buddhist centers, and elsewhere. The possibility for misconduct among them is enormous, including making advances on men and women in centers, financial leverage, and so on.

These discussions are endless because they are not evidence-based. They are values-based, and therefore political issues, rather than ethical issues, 90% of the time.

For example, for years the faculty at Smith College was not to have any kind of relationship with anyone in the student body. The student body objected, feeling infantilized, and the policy was revised so that one was only forbidden to have a relationship with a student currently studying in one's course.

Pedophilia is so far outside of this discussion as to be absurd. The Buddha himself prohibited it, though at the time, the definition of "child" was considerably more limited. But even 150 years ago in our own culture, 13 year old minors were basically adults, now children by all definitions. Our concept of minors as "children" dates from the early 20th century, with adoption of child labor laws.

In the United States, there is no consistent law about ordained ministers pursuing romantic partners among their constituents. In some states there is no law about it, in some states it is illegal. But the key word here is "ordained." To be ordained means to be recognized by a professional body. But separation of church and state in this country, the USA, precludes forcing any religion to only have "professional" ministers. One cannot force a Dharma center's teacher or an itinerant teacher to be "qualified." All the state can do is refuse to give such people license to officiate at weddings and funerals, which are recognized civil procedures.

Therefore, Dharma centers are on their own in this regard, and can only agree to codes of ethics that, frankly, are barely enforceable. We see examples of people violating these codes, moving on, and then doing it again elsewhere. This indicates to me that the problem is not power differentials, but womanizing. And if one is to argue that womanizing is only possible because of some imputed power differential in a dharma center, I have news for you. Unless that dharma organization is set up as an educational institution, and therefore subject to civil codes, it has nothing that can be withheld from a student. No degree, no honors, etc. A power differential is predicated on a carrot and a stick. The carrot is a reward such as raise, promotion, grade and and so on. The stick is the sexual favor.

Now, I can certainly imagine some young, naive person imagining that their liberation (the carrot) might depend on granting some sexual favor (the stick) to the lama, which is why I identify relationships with new students as a possible issue. But really, people need to grow up. Liberation, in Buddhism, never comes from someone else. It cannot be given to you even by the Buddha. The worse someone can do is say, "If you won't screw me, I won't teach you." I imagine that this could be devastating to someone, but most of the women I know who were propositioned by lamas when they were new in the Dharma were grossed out.

Actually, the worst offenders in the Dharma scene are not teachers, but rather Senior Students, who trade on their affiliation with Lama so and so, etc., and their position in a given Dharma center (chant leader, etc.) etc., proposition new women who show up. But no one ever discusses this at all, crickets.

Anyway, more fuel on the fire.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 6th, 2022 at 10:20 PM

Title: Re: What are you watching? Any good?

Content:

PeterC said:
And, they succeeded.

Malcolm wrote:
Admirably so, and inventive too. Who thinks this stuff up?

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, June 6th, 2022 at 10:33 PM
Title: Re: 5th School of Tibetan Buddhism
Content:

Freddie B. said:
Well, the Gelugpa's are a different case, with Tsongkhapa having important teachers from all lineages (even Jonangpa I believe- most likely teachings on Kalachakra and the Six Vajra Yogas), plus a great deal of influence directly from the Kadampas.

On the second point, I think it is still a mystery whether or not to consider Bon a "Buddhist" school per say. So I would say there are five schools of Tibetan Buddhism plus the Bon tradition.

PeterC said:
The question of whether Bon is "Buddhist" reflects I think a general lack of understanding of the Bon canon. If you spend a little time looking at it, it's obvious that it's the same Dharma.

Freddie B. said:
Might have to agree to disagree on this one. Might be "the same Dharma" as you put it, but by definition I think to be considered Buddhist, one's teaching should come from the Buddha, which was Shakyamuni from India, no?

Malcolm wrote:
"A rose by any other name would smell as sweet."
--Shakespeare

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, June 6th, 2022 at 11:05 PM
Title: Re: What are you watching? Any good?
Content:

PeterC said:
And, they succeeded.

Malcolm wrote:
Admirably so, and inventive too. Who thinks this stuff up?

PeterC said:

That series really does know how to walk the line between funny and sick. The whale episode was my favorite, but almost every major character they kill dies in an interesting and usually disgusting way.

Malcolm wrote:

And Hugh always gets covered in something foul.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 7th, 2022 at 12:33 AM

Title: Re: Drubthab Kuntue teachings from Dzongsar Khyentse?

Content:

gelukman said:

Thanks. Are these lengthy sadhanas? Two months is pretty long time for this?

Rinchen Terdzo that have like 700 sadhanas can be given 2-3 months time.

Malcolm wrote:

Not so much. The time factor is the lung. Not the wangs.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 7th, 2022 at 3:50 AM

Title: Re: Is ordering a bonpo puja breakage of refuge?

Content:

Toenail said:

Is ordering a bonpo puja in one of the Bon monasteries breakage of buddhist refuge?

Malcolm wrote:

Nope, neither is ordering a Hindu Puja. But Bonpos are Buddhists (sang rgyas pa rnam), so there is even less of an issue.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 7th, 2022 at 3:53 AM

Title: Re: What qualifies as a [complete] path?

Content:

Chenda said:

I have been reading old threads in the forum and I noticed that there were instances of certain deities being said to be "not a path", which I'm assuming means not a complete path to liberation. One such mentioned is Mahāmāyūrī because her practice is for temporary benefits.

The HYT practices are a given, such as Chakrasamvara, Hevajra, etc., and I'm more interested in deities that one might consider "of the lower tantras" instead.

In line with that, how do we determine if the practice of a deity is a [complete] path? What of Māricī or Vasudhārā, for example, both of whom, at least on the surface, practiced for temporary benefits as well?

Thank you in advance.

Malcolm wrote:

Mañjuśrī, Avalokitśvara, Vajrapaṇī all have complete paths. Generally, kriya tantra is not a completely path because in general it is practiced for siddhis and it is really just a ritual aspect of common Mahāyāna. It is held by some that it allows one to live an incredibly long life enabling one to complete path of the perfections in a single lifetime. Complete paths in Vajrayāna really begin with Carya Tantra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 7th, 2022 at 4:21 AM

Title: Re: Is ordering a bonpo puja breakage of refuge?

Content:

Konchog1 said:

It depends on who you ask.

Whatever activity you engage in, and whatever your purpose, rely on and do that which accords with the three jewels, such as making offerings to them. But never do that which does not accord with the three jewels, such as relying on the Bon religion. Always entrust yourself to the three jewels.

-Great Treatise of the Stages of the Path eng. v1 pg. 202 tib. pg. 153

Malcolm wrote:

Tsongkhapa, despite his many positive qualities, like many Tibetans, was quite ignorant of Bon.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 7th, 2022 at 4:39 AM

Title: Re: Is ordering a bonpo puja breakage of refuge?

Content:

Konchog1 said:

It depends on who you ask.

-Great Treatise of the Stages of the Path eng. v1 pg. 202 tib. pg. 153

Malcolm wrote:

Tsongkhapa, despite his many positive qualities, like many Tibetans, was quite ignorant of Bon.

Toenail said:

Can you say in like two sentences why Bonpos of for example Menri are buddhists? And why is it ok to order Hindu pujas?

Malcolm wrote:

They accept Śākyamuni Buddha as a valid refuge.

According to Ngorchen, who is even more conservative than Tsongkhapa, it is acceptable to practice Hindu Tantras for worldly benefits.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 7th, 2022 at 5:29 AM

Title: Re: 5th School of Tibetan Buddhism

Content:

Freddie B. said:

But again, Buddhism is the teachings of the historical Buddha Shakyamuni, so I think if the teachings and texts in a lineage are not coming down firm this lineage, can we still say it is Buddhist?

Malcolm wrote:

This is just Indophilia.

Amitabha is not from India. Is Amitabha devotion Buddhist?

Most Bon practices have absolute corollaries in Buddhism, to the point that it is absurd to claim Bonpos are not Buddhist.

You have not studied Bon Prajñāpāramita, Logic, Abhidharma, etc. I have. Bon is just as Buddhist as Gelug.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 7th, 2022 at 5:33 AM

Title: Re: Is ordering a bonpo puja breakage of refuge?

Content:

Toenail said:

Can you say in like two sentences why Bonpos of for example Menri are buddhists? And why is it ok to order Hindu pujas?

Malcolm wrote:

They accept Śākyamuni Buddha as a valid refuge.

Freddie B. said:

I really didn't know this. I thought they attributed their teachings to shenrab Miwoche? Then I may stand corrected.

Malcolm wrote:

They do attribute the origin of their teachings to Shenrab. They also accept Śākyamuni Buddha as a valid refuge. The word for Buddha in Bon is sangs rgyas. The word for Buddha in Gelug is sangs rgyas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 7th, 2022 at 6:49 AM

Title: Re: 5th School of Tibetan Buddhism

Content:

Freddie B. said:

But again, Buddhism is the teachings of the historical Buddha Shakyamuni, so I think if the teachings and texts in a lineage are not coming down from this lineage, can we still say it is Buddhist?

Malcolm wrote:

This is just Indophilia.

Amitabha is not from India. Is Amitabha devotion Buddhist?

Most Bon practices have absolute corollaries in Buddhism, to the point that it is absurd to claim Bonpos are not Buddhist.

You have not studied Bon Prajñāpāramita, Logic, Abhidharma, etc. I have. Bon is just as Buddhist as Gelug.

Freddie B. said:

I see. I certainly do not question your scholarly knowledge, and yes I have not studied all these topics in depth, especially from the Bon standpoint.

Is lineage not an important thing anymore? I thought that the four (or five) schools of Tibetan Buddhism trace their lineage back to the historical Buddha, but the Bonpo's do not, but maybe I am mistaken.

Anyways, way off topic.

Malcolm wrote:

If it walks like a duck...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 7th, 2022 at 9:02 AM

Title: Re: Hevajra or Chakrasamvara Empowerments in 2022

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

HH Dalai Lama will be giving it beginning tomorrow night, 10:30 EDT.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 7th, 2022 at 10:04 AM

Title: Re: What qualifies as a [complete] path?

Content:

Chenda said:

I have been reading old threads in the forum and I noticed that there were instances of certain deities being said to be "not a path", which I'm assuming means not a complete path to liberation. One such mentioned is Mahāmāyūrī because her practice is for temporary benefits.

The HYT practices are a given, such as Chakrasamvara, Hevajra, etc., and I'm more interested in deities that one might consider "of the lower tantras" instead.

In line with that, how do we determine if the practice of a deity is a [complete] path? What of Māricī or Vasudhārā, for example, both of whom, at least on the surface, practiced for temporary benefits as well?

Thank you in advance.

Malcolm wrote:

Mañjuśrī, Avalokiteśvara, Vajrapaṇī all have complete paths. Generally, kriya tantra is not a completely path because in general it is practiced for siddhis and it is really just a ritual aspect of common Mahāyāna. It is held by some that it allows one to live an incredibly long life enabling one to complete path of the perfections in a single lifetime. Complete paths in Vajrayāna really begin with Carya Tantra.

Chenda said:

Thank you! A follow up:

Does this mean that all carya level practices and up qualify as such or should distinctions still be made even at that level?

Malcolm wrote:

Distinctions must be made even in HYT. Some deities are just activity deities.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 7th, 2022 at 10:44 AM

Title: Re: 5th School of Tibetan Buddhism

Content:

Freddie B. said:

I think among most Buddhists and most Vajrayana practitioners, it is accepted that these tantras were expounded by emanations of the Buddha (ie. Vajradhara),

Malcolm wrote:

You have it exactly backward. Shakyamuni Buddha is the emanation, not Vajradhara.

Cakrasamvara, for example, was never taught by Shakyamuni. Nor were the Dzogchen tantras. Nor was Guhyasamaja.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 7th, 2022 at 6:53 PM

Title: Re: Is ordering a bonpo puja breakage of refuge?

Content:

Toenail said:

That means bön deities count as buddhas?

Malcolm wrote:

Not even all Buddhist deities count as Buddhist for all Buddhists.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 7th, 2022 at 7:25 PM

Title: Re: What qualifies as a [complete] path?

Content:

Chenda said:

Thank you! A follow up:

Does this mean that all carya level practices and up qualify as such or should distinctions still be made even at that level?

Malcolm wrote:

Distinctions must be made even in HYT. Some deities are just activity deities.

Chenda said:

What of Māricī, specifically the one usually given out by Sakya lamas? I remember hearing that the one the 41ST gave was of the carya class, so I'm assuming the one given by the 43ST (from the Ocean of Sadhanas; three faces: gold, red, and a boar) is of the same classification.

Malcolm wrote:
It's an activity deity.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, June 7th, 2022 at 8:48 PM
Title: Re: Music time
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
Thought you were woke, I can't believe you are posting this racist bastard's music (Clapton).

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, June 7th, 2022 at 9:24 PM
Title: Re: talk: Vedantic Self and Buddhist Non-Self
Content:
PadmaVonSamba said:
A.V. is all about resolving that difference, and his claim seems to be that ultimately, Buddhism is too.

Malcolm wrote:
We don't care about that difference, and we Madhyamakas accept it.

PadmaVonSamba said:
While it may be that A.V. regards this awareness, experienced by each individual being, as inseparable from one all-encompassing consciousness (as individual drops of water are inseparable from the ocean once combined) I don't think that was his point in this video.

Malcolm wrote:
Of course it was, he spend a lot of time explaining why the seven-fold deconstruction of a chariot was inapplicable to Advaita, because everything is made of one monadic substance that he labels "consciousness," thereby proving he missed the point utterly.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, June 7th, 2022 at 9:29 PM
Title: Re: Only pure knowing is true, isn't it?
Content:
PeterC said:
Define "pure", "knowing" and "true" and perhaps we can offer an opinion.

xjh2021 said:
pure ~ without object

knowing~ awarebess

true not false

Malcolm wrote:

No, even this is not "true" since it is not established in any form at all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 8th, 2022 at 1:07 AM

Title: Re: What qualifies as a [complete] path?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Generally, kriya tantra is not a completely path because in general it is practiced for siddhis and it is really just a ritual aspect of common Mahāyāna. It is held by some that it allows one to live an incredibly long life....

Sādhaka said:

Is this partly attributed to its incorporation of regular fasting, and also the Sattvic diet and Brahmacharya aspects?

Malcolm wrote:

Not really. It is because there is not even a hint of completion stage in kriya.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 8th, 2022 at 1:10 AM

Title: Re: The own basic sense about masturbation as misconduct

Content:

Sādhaka said:

And, if anyone wants to say that the two are the same, well then they don't have direct experience of the difference between the energetic exchange that happens with sex vs masturbation

Malcolm wrote:

The only thing specified in the texts is ejaculation, not the manner of ejaculation.

Energetic exchange is a bunch of new age woo woo invented by Western fantasists who've confused Taoist concepts with Buddhist yoga.

I have translated literally dozens of texts on karmamudra, not one of them mentions anything like "energy exchange."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 8th, 2022 at 1:15 AM

Title: Re: Music time

Content:

reiun said:

Too bad if Baker and Bruce get guilted by association.

Malcolm wrote:

Hypocrite.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 8th, 2022 at 3:27 AM

Title: Re: What qualifies as a [complete] path?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It is because there is not even a hint of completion stage in kriya.

cyril said:

Wouldn't the three abidings in fire, sound and end of the sound be the equivalent of the dzogrim? I mean not in terms of praxis but in terms of end result?

Malcolm wrote:

No.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 8th, 2022 at 4:22 AM

Title: Re: What qualifies as a [complete] path?

Content:

cyril said:

Wouldn't the three abidings in fire, sound and end of the sound be the equivalent of the dzogrim? I mean not in terms of praxis but in terms of end result?

Malcolm wrote:

No.

cyril said:

"Buddhaguhya's commentary says: [...] Therefore, it is said that if one has meditated on the end of sound - the nature of which is the element of superior qualities (dharmadhatu) - liberation is bestowed".

- Deity Yoga in Action and performance tantra by HH the Dalai Lama, chapter 8

What kind of liberation was Buddhaguhya referring to?

Malcolm wrote:

If you examine that book carefully, you will discover that in the opinion of Tsongkhapa, kriya can extend one's life for a very long time, enabling one to attain buddhahood, but not directly through the practice itself.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 8th, 2022 at 8:08 AM

Title: Re: The Meaning of the Word "Kulaya" in the Indian Title of the Kunbyed Gyalpo Tantra

Content:

Shabda said:

Dear Sirs

The word "kulaya" in the Indian title of the Kunbyed rGyalpo Sutra/Tantra is very mysterious it seems to me. It isn't a real Sanskrit word nor it appears is it a word from any other language. There is the Sanskrit word "kulāya" which mainly means "nest", but that doesn't seem to fit the context. Besides, they are different words with different spellings. The Tibetan translation offers no clues since "kulaya" is translated "kunbyed" or "all-creating" which is nothing related to "kulaya" but would instead in Sanskrit be "sarvakṛti" or "sarvakara" or something like that. Could it be that the underlying word is actually "kula", "[Buddha]-family", and that it has been extrapolated in "kulaya" in the same way that "kīla" becomes "kīlaya" for no obvious reason? Kula/kulaya....kīla/kīlaya. This way, the Indian/Sanskrit name of the deity would be:

bodhicittakularāja

rather than:

bodhicittakulayarāja

This way, the name could be understood to mean "the King of the Family of Bodhicitta" which would be another way of saying the king of the 5 Buddha families or kulas; since the Bodhicittavajra family is sometimes called the 6th Buddha family that rules the main 5 ones.

Malcolm wrote:

Simple answer, the title is not Sanskrit.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 8th, 2022 at 8:31 AM

Title: Re: Names of Kunjey Gyalpo in Chapter 84 of the All-Creating King Tantra

Content:

Shabda said:

Dear Sirs

Does anyone happen to know the Tibetan names of the 8 epithets of Samantabhadra/Kunbyed rGyalpo listed near the end of Chapter 84, the final chapter of the Sutra of the All-Creating King ? The reason is I'm curious to reconstruct these names into Sanskrit. So far based on the two English translations, the names would be something like

1. kulayarāja
2. bodhicitta
3. svayambhūjñāna
4. śrutiśāstradharmādarśa
5. prakṛtārthayāna
6. darśanādarśa
7. jīnamāṭṛ
8. tantrarāja

But I'm not very happy with 4, 5 and 6. I know the Tibetan text can be read online and in print but lacking the skill in reading Tibetan especially in Tibetan font it would likely take days to decipher.

So if anyone happens to know then I'd be so grateful.

Malcolm wrote:

Since the text wasn't composed in Sanskrit, your attempt is quixotic.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 8th, 2022 at 9:49 AM

Title: Re: 5th School of Tibetan Buddhism

Content:

stong gzugs said:

The Jonang were actually recognized as an independent fifth school of Tibetan Buddhism <https://www.phayul.com/2011/09/28/30077/>, presided over by HHDL. This recognition on paper has not necessarily come with equal representation in practice and led to some https://webcache.googleusercontent.com/search?q=cache:mUpwtA9Pi7YJ:tibetanbuddhistencyclopedia.com/en/index.php%3Ftitle%3DJonang_Buddhist_tradition+%&cd=1&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us.

The notion that the Jonang are an offshoot of the Sakya is a notion held by some Sakyapas, but no Jonangpas. It is worth noting that the Jonang were founded by Kunpang Tukje Tsondu who brought together 17 distinct lineages of Kālacakra ṣaḍaṅgayoga, creating a new practice tradition, and that subsequent developments by Dölpopa Shérab Gyeltsen created a completely new dharma language (chos skad) and doxography. In this way, it is hard to describe either the practice or the theory of the Jonang as anything except independent and original.

Malcolm wrote:

The bulk of the lineages in Jonang are from Sakya. The relationship between Kunpang and Sakya was is well known. Dolpopa largely received his training at Sakya. There is no doubt that like Geluk, Jonang owes a great debt to Sakya. To state that in its earliest days Jonang was a Sakya subschool is accurate.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 8th, 2022 at 10:19 AM

Title: Re: Hevajra or Chakrasamvara Empowerments in 2022

Content:

Konchog1 said:

I don't believe HHDL's empowerment is going to be online.

<https://www.dalailama.com/schedule>

Lobsang Chojor said:

They don't update the livestream until the next event has passed. Given in the past Tandin Yangsang was given online and Gyalwa Gyatso will be, it's likely Chakrasamvara will be too.

zerwe said:

Yes, if my memory serves me correctly he gave Vajrabhairava in Jan. 2018? It was streamed. So, I don't see why Chakrasamvara would not be.

Shaun

Malcolm wrote:

Doesn't seem to be.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 8th, 2022 at 8:01 PM

Title: Re: The Meaning of the Word "Kulaya" in the Indian Title of the Kunbyed Gyalpo Tantra

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Simple answer, the title is not Sanskrit.

Shabda said:

Although reductionist explanations can be useful at times, I fear in truth, with due respect, it's not that simple, nor is that an accurate statement. In fact, the title as reported by Tarthang Tulku in his edition of the Derge Catalog (Dharma, 1980) reads:

Sarvadharmamahāśāntibodhicittakulārāja

Which is, contrary to some claims, a Sanskrit title, the exact same language as every other Indian title of all texts of the Derge (and similar) Tibetan canon(s), including those of the Ancient Tantra section. If that title is not Sanskrit, then you'll agree there is no such thing as a Sanskrit title anywhere! So it's interesting that Tarthang Tulku chose to report the title with that exact spelling, which reads "The King of the Family of Bodhicitta that is the Great Peace or Pacification of All Phenomena".

So the question remains, is the word "kulaya" extrapolated from "kula" in the same way as "kilaya" was from "kila"? Did Tarthang Tulku restore it to its original form? And, why did the Tibetan translation (kunbyed) differ so much from the Indian for that term (kulaya), the two having nothing in common at all?

Malcolm wrote:

The title is a backtranslation. If you compare the titles in various versions of rnying ma rgyud “bum, you find wide discrepancies. The Derge version has replaced many of the earlier “Indic” titles found in the Tshams brag reskin with back translations. The problem is that the often unintelligible Indic language version found in the latter collection is the one commented upon syllable by syllable. So, you really cannot trust the “Sanskrit” of these titles when examining them from the Derge version of the Nyingma canon.

In any case, Dzogchen tantras are held to have been given in Oddiyana language, not Sanskrit. As Longchenpa points out, the ᳵ syllable does not exist in Sanskrit, but according to him, does exist in the language of Oddiyana.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 8th, 2022 at 8:13 PM

Title: Re: Names of Kunjey Gyalpo in Chapter 84 of the All-Creating King Tantra

Content:

Shabda said:

Sir (above), thank you for your helpful thoughts.

You know, that's probably why I'm not very happy with 4, 5 and 6. I know the Tibetan text can be read online and in print but lacking the skill in reading Tibetan especially in Tibetan font it would likely take days to decipher.

So if anyone happens to know what the Tibetan text reads, then I'd be so grateful.

By the way, is it really in the style of Don Quixote to want to know the Tibetan of these names? Which is, after all, what I'm interested in. If someone then wants to make Sanskrit-windmills out of them, why, what harm could really come? At worst, one gets more familiar with the Tibetan language.

Malcolm wrote:

I can provide those for you. I assume you are using the horrendously bad Dargye translation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 8th, 2022 at 10:00 PM

Title: Re: Names of Kunjey Gyalpo in Chapter 84 of the All-Creating King Tantra

Content:

Shabda said:

1. kulayarāja

Malcolm wrote:

Your first clue that this is not Sanskrit is mahāsanti. There is no word "santi" in Sanskrit. And in the Bairo rgyud 'bum, we find santimahā. Some hold this is evidence of Oḍḍiyanese syntax, where, like Tibetan, the adjective is placed after the noun it modifies. Raja (cognate of rex) is likely a loan word from Sanskrit.

Kulaya is translating kun byed, but there is no way to derive any Sanskrit word that resembles this. Hence, not Sanskrit. The Sanskrit would be something like sarvakāraṇa.

Shabda said:

2. bodhicitta

3. svayambhūjñāna

Malcolm wrote:

These are ok, since they are attested in Mahāvyutpatti

Shabda said:

4. śrutiśāstradharmadarśa

Malcolm wrote:

Unlikely, this is bka' yi 'grel. Bka' is vacana and 'grel is vivarana/vṛtti.

Shabda said:

5. prakṛtārthayāna

Malcolm wrote:

Unlikely, snying po is most like sāra, hence arthasāra for snying po don.

Shabda said:

6. darśanādarśa

Malcolm wrote:

Maybe, though dṛṣṭi is more likely, lta ba'i me long.

Shabda said:

7. jīnamātr

Malcolm wrote:

Ok, attested.

Shabda said:

8. tantrarāja

Malcolm wrote:

Attested.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 9th, 2022 at 1:06 AM

Title: Re: 5th School of Tibetan Buddhism

Content:

stong gzugs said:

The Jonang were actually recognized as an independent fifth school of Tibetan Buddhism <https://www.phayul.com/2011/09/28/30077/>, presided over by HHDL. This recognition on paper has not necessarily come with equal representation in practice and led to some https://webcache.googleusercontent.com/search?q=cache:mUpwtA9Pi7YJ:tibetanbuddhistencyclopedia.com/en/index.php%3Ftitle%3DJonang_Buddhist_tradition+%amp;cd=1&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us.

The notion that the Jonang are an offshoot of the Sakya is a notion held by some Sakyapas, but no Jonangpas. It is worth noting that the Jonang were founded by Kunpang Tukje Tsondu who brought together 17 distinct lineages of Kālacakra ṣaḍaṅgayoga, creating a new practice tradition, and that subsequent developments by Dölpopa Shérab Gyeltsen created a completely new dharma language (chos skad) and doxography. In this way, it is hard to describe either the practice or the theory of the Jonang as anything except independent and original.

Freddie B. said:

Thanks for weighing in here. Whereas it is true that Dolpopa Sherab Gyeltsen came from Sakya (wasn't he Abbott?), And when he went to the Jomanang valley, the Jonang Lineage had already existed I believe. So the lineage was not created by Dolpopa.

In fact, some of the main figures of the Sakya lineage at that time were at odds with Dolpopa including Butön Rinchen Drup. So at the very least the thought of being a Sakya sub-school probably ended at that point.

Malcolm wrote:

The fact of the matter is that many Sakya Lamas were abbots of Jonang, like Dagchen

Dorje Chang's uncle and so on. The relationship with the Khon and Jonang was actually extremely close and continued with Ngorpas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 9th, 2022 at 4:44 AM

Title: Re: 5th School of Tibetan Buddhism

Content:

stong gzugs said:

the diversity of practices in the 108 Quintessential Instructions of the Jonang

Malcolm wrote:

The very first of these instructions, is, not surprisingly, Parting From the Four Attachments.

The status of Jonang as divorced from Sakya is a post-Taranatha situation. Prior to Gorampa, gzhan stong was quite popular in Sakya. Gelug largely got its start because of rejection of gzhan stong in Sakya with Rendawa, but this really rather late. Even well into the 16th century there was a great deal of interaction between Sakya, Zhalu, and Jonang.

Things became stratified under the Ganden Phodrang.

Institutions and lineages are actually distinct.

stong gzugs said:

As far as I know, only 2 of the 17 lineages are clearly Sakya: the lineage from Ga Lotsāwa to Sachen Kunga Nyingpo and the lineage from Śākyaśrībhadrā to Sakya Paṇḍita. Do you know otherwise?

Malcolm wrote:

Kilaya, Hevajra, the three lineages of Cakrasamvara, etc., in Jonang are all from Sakya. Most of the tantric lineages in Jonang are from Sakya, other than the Shangpa Kagyu stuff.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 9th, 2022 at 8:19 AM

Title: Re: Names of Kunjey Gyalpo in Chapter 84 of the All-Creating King Tantra

Content:

Shabda said:

Perhaps it means both simultaneously; great perfection and great peace at the same time.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't think. There is no commentarial evidence to support such a reading.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 9th, 2022 at 9:24 AM

Title: Re: The Meaning of the Word "Kulaya" in the Indian Title of the Kunbyed Gyalpo Tantra

Content:

Shabda said:

Namkhai Norbu offered meanings of the terms in the Song of the Vajra, so no doubt he could, but he is no longer with us, but I wonder if there's anyone else like him today.

Malcolm wrote:

Actually that was Longchenpa who presented a translation, which ChNN promulgated. But it's not a 1:1 translation. And ChNN is the one who insists that Oddiyaneese has grammar distinct from Sanskrit.

And there is inconvenient presence of syllable α , which has no correlate in Sanskrit, as I mentioned above. If anything, Oddiyana language would have been a Central Asian language at the border of Iranian and Indian language spheres. Several Dzogchen tantras and texts claim they are translated from multiple languages. How much credibility we can lend such assertions is a debate for text critical scholars. Other than texts like song of the vajra, we have almost no evidence of Oddiyana language, other than mentions of it as a language distinct from Sanskrit.

And no, there is no one alive who can offer much more than Longchenpa did. Having translated major portions of Dzogchen linguistic theory, it has no relationship to Pannini's grammar. It's quite unique.

Finally, it's entirely certain that "Indic" title of the Kun byed rgyal po is fairly modern, since the KG bears considerable evidence of being a Tibetan compilation of earlier sources, and there is no mention of it before the 11th century, though it's five core chapters are cited by Nubcheb, but it never is.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 9th, 2022 at 9:19 PM

Title: Re: The Meaning of the Word "Kulaya" in the Indian Title of the Kunbyed Gyalpo Tantra

Content:

Shabda said:

How old are the Indian titles given in the Nyingma Gyubum?

Malcolm wrote:

We are talking about Dzogchen tantras titles here specifically.

Shabda said:

Were they not part of the canonical information when it was first collected and organised by Ratna Lingpa (if that's right) or added later in the age of Jigme Lingpa? Or could they go back to the time of Vimalamitra?

Malcolm wrote:

The Brahmin cycle as well as the Man ngag sde tantras are all treasure texts. So, we have no evidence for them that is earlier than the late 10th century.

As I said, the the Kujn byed rgyal po is likely a Tibetan compilation which grew around the five early Dzogchen lungs translated by Vairocana.

Shabda said:

And I'm still no clearer on where the word "kulaya" ever came into it,

Malcolm wrote:

You never will be clearer about it. There is no early commentary on the Kun byed rgyal po that goes into a phonemic explanation of the individual syllables and diacritics of the its title. That is something we only find for the 17 tantras. The earliest complete commentary of the Kun byed rgyal po was composed in the 19th century. Longchenpa's commentary is quite short and only covers the key concepts in the text.

Shabda said:

འཕྲིན་ལྷན་པའི་པོ།

Malcolm wrote:

The source of this is the Mind Mirror of Vajrasattva (rDo rje sems dpa' snying gi me long). It cannot be ha, since ha is already present. Longchenpa, as I mentioned above, states in the Treasury of the Supreme Vehicle that the syllable འ is from Oḍḍiyāna language, and so not Sanskrit. This is the same text where we find the translation of the Song of the Vajra. It is unlikely this is actually Longchenpa's own translation, considering the large swaths of material he cribs from the extant commentaries on the 17 tantras. It is likely from the now lost commentaries on the Union of the Sun and Moon Tantra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 10th, 2022 at 12:49 AM

Title: Re: The Meaning of the Word "Kulaya" in the Indian Title of the Kunbyed Gyalpo Tantra

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

What is Dzogchen linguistic theory? I've never heard of it.

Malcolm wrote:

It's rather complicated and has not really been studied by anyone other than perhaps JLA.

The concepts of how language is formed and so on, is major part of the first chapter of the commentary on the Sound Tantra, which was not in general circulation for hundreds of years.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 10th, 2022 at 9:14 AM

Title: Re: The Meaning of the Word "Kulaya" in the Indian Title of the Kunbyed Gyalpo Tantra

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

And I'm still no clearer on where the word "kulaya" ever came into it, You never will be clearer about it. There is no early commentary on the Kun byed rgyal po that goes into a phonemic explanation of the individual syllables and diacritics of the its title. That is something we only find for the 17 tantras. The earliest complete commentary of the Kun byed rgyal po was composed in the 19th century. Longchenpa's commentary is quite short and only covers the key concepts in the text.

Shabda said:

Okay. Then all I'm wondering about now, is regarding this

"Non-Tibetan Titles

sar+b d+har+m mahA san d+hi bo d+hi tsat+t ku la ya rA dza/ (Tb) sar+b d+har+mA mahA san ti bod+hi tsit+t ku la ya rAdza/ (Tk)

sarba d+harmā ma hA san+ti bo d+hi tsit+ta ku la ya rA dza/ (Dg)"

<https://www.thlib.org/encyclopedias/lit...at=ng/0010>

By whom and when were these Non-Tibetan titles created? Is it that they were added to manuscripts by very modern compilers maybe in the last 200 years or do they go back to the first compilations of the canon? Are they found in original manuscripts or are they clearly recent modern additions only cited in catalog information? If the latter, for what purpose? Can we know or is it impossible to say.

Malcolm wrote:

Hard to say, but the earliest version of the kun byed rgyal po we have, the 14th century Bai ro rgyud “bum recension, lacks a Sanskrit title. Many other texts in this collection, however, have “Indic” titles.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 10th, 2022 at 11:47 PM

Title: Re: 5th School of Tibetan Buddhism

Content:

stong gzugs said:

I tend to agree more with your prior views in the other thread than your vie

Yes, a beautiful Sakya instruction.

Malcolm wrote:

It shows patrimony. Also, if you read his bio, Kunga Drolchok was a Sakyapa.

https://treasuryoflives.org/biographies/view/Jetsun-Kunga-Drolchok/TBRC_p2387

When two children have the same father, we consider them to be in the same family. No?

Even Thukje Tsondu received most of his education at Sakya affiliated monasteries at the height the Sakya Hegemony.

It's fine for the Jonangpas to consider themselves an independent lineage, but the fact is that they remained closely connected with the Sakya school for much of their existence. For example, Dakchen Dorjechang realized mahamudra by practicing the six limb yoga, but no one would call him a Jonangpa. The longest, most detailed commentary on Kalacakra was written by Lama Dampa Sonam Gyaltsen who received the Jonang tradition. He wrote more on Kalacakra than any other single subject, but no one could consider him a Jonangpa.

In those days, there were a number of smaller institutions that flourished, like Zhalu, Jonang, and so on. We can say that they are this or that institution, but when we examine things more clearly, their institutional identity as independent lineages is a function of the rising power of the Gelugpas more than anything else. They were either absorbed, like Nalendra, made a deal, like Sakya, Drikung, and so on, or were suppressed like Karma Kagyu and Jonang.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 11th, 2022 at 1:21 AM

Title: Re: 5th School of Tibetan Buddhism

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The longest, most detailed commentary on Kalacakra was written by Lama Dampa Sonam Gyaltsen who received the Jonang tradition. He wrote more on Kalacakra than any other single subject, but no one could consider him a Jonangpa.

stong gzugs said:

The longest, most detailed commentary on Kālacakra including the Vimalaprabhā? I haven't seen this text, is it translated into English? In terms of translated verse-by-verse commentaries, the Vimalaprabhā is unfortunately quite scant in its coverage of the final, and perhaps most arcane, chapter. Mipham's Illumination of the Vajra Sun delves more deeply into it. But it would certainly be valuable to study additional commentaries.

Malcolm wrote:

It has not been translated, is in seven volumes, one volume per chapter with related material in other two volumes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 11th, 2022 at 9:28 AM

Title: Re: Coronavirus

Content:

PeterC said:

They should also be excluded from treatment for COVID with public or private medical insurance, unless an independent doctor verifies that they have a medical condition contraindicating vaccination.

They don't want the vaccine - that's fine, but then they pay for any costs they incur.

Archie2009 said:

What's your take on the herd of morbidly obese Americans who aren't obese because of a condition but simply became elephantine by putting too much food in their mouths?

Malcolm wrote:

This is mostly a function of food deserts in low income areas. It's not because they put too much food in their mouths, it's a function of being unable to access real food.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 11th, 2022 at 8:56 PM

Title: Re: HYT Wangs

Content:

Soma999 said:

Commitments should be presented beforehand so you can choose them in conscience if you can and want to take them. Otherwise it is like signing a contract without even knowing what's written in it.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, that is how Vajrayāna is. The samayas are themselves part of samaya, so, classically speaking, students are selected on the basis of their ability to keep secrets and the secrets are not disclosed, as well as the commitments, before hand.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 12th, 2022 at 1:16 AM

Title: Re: HYT Wangs

Content:

Terma said:

Here is an update from the site of OHHDL:

"Please note that people attending the initiation are required to do the daily practice of the Luipa Chakrasamvara Sadhana (luipa dechok dakye) or at least the Triple Purification Practice (dakpa sum kyi nyeljor) of Chakrasamvara."

<https://www.dalailama.com/schedule>

No indication of this will be streamed yet, but I think it will.

Malcolm wrote:

This already happened and it was not streamed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 12th, 2022 at 6:46 AM

Title: Re: HYT Wangs

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This already happened and it was not streamed.

Lobsang Chojor said:

The Chakrasamvara wang is in July not June, it's still on the schedule as upcoming July 8-10

Malcolm wrote:

Ok my bad

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 12th, 2022 at 6:51 PM

Title: Re: Hevajra or Chakrasamvara Empowerments in 2022

Content:

Soma999 said:

If commitments are too « rigid » in their forms, instead of helping you they can be felt as a burden.

Malcolm wrote:

Practice commitments are one thing, samaya another.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 12th, 2022 at 9:03 PM

Title: Re: "Lost" and "Broken" lineages and traditions

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

As most if not all of us are well aware, it is forbidden to learn and practice Vajrayana from texts alone (as far as I am aware) without the personal instructions of a Guru / Teacher.

Well and good.

That said, two questions I probably should know the answer to, but plead exoteric Mahayana ignorance

1) I seem to recall once reading about certain “lost lineages” or “broken lineages” in Tibetan history. Are there indeed lineages or even entire sects that have vanished?

Malcolm wrote:

Many institutional lineages have vanished, as well as many transmission lineages.

FiveSkandhas said:

2) I am aware that Jamyang Khyentse Wangpo and Jamgön Kongtrül, among others, are responsible for preserving the texts of numerous lineages that were on the brink of extinction through the Rime approach. Are there schools and traditions that have disappeared in practice and exist only in the form of texts salvaged by Rime preservation?

Malcolm wrote:

Only Transmission lineages, not institutional lineages.

FiveSkandhas said:

3) What is the general Tibetan policy, if any, to “reviving” traditions that may exist only in textual form? Is this considered acceptable?

Malcolm wrote:

There are ways to revive broken transmissions. There is not much point in reviving extinct institutions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 12th, 2022 at 10:19 PM

Title: Re: The Bendowa and Teachers in Zen

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

So tell me, Zen scholars, how should we understand the Bendowa? Can it serve as a substitute for a master, as suggested by the first quote? Or is practice useless without a realized master, as later suggested in the same work?

Malcolm wrote:

Not a Zen scholar, but the first quote suggests to me that Dogen was recording how Chan was practiced as an institutional practice in China. I do not perceive a contradiction here with his later assertion in the same text generally speaking one needs a teacher.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 14th, 2022 at 8:27 PM

Title: Re: HYT Wangs

Content:

jmlee369 said:

That particular line is part of the recitation for transmitting the tantric vows and one of the reasons six sessions is required. Hence the interpreters' assumptions that six session guru yoga is mandatory.

Malcolm wrote:

This idea isn't universal. Only the Geluk school maintains this idea.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 15th, 2022 at 8:09 PM

Title: Re: Non-Buddhist attending a tsok

Content:

Hazel said:

Hello all!

Is there anything unwise about a non-Buddhist attending an (online) tsok? I was going to ask a friend to join me as I've been having trouble motivating myself to do anything on my own.

Malcolm wrote:

Not permitted.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 16th, 2022 at 12:35 AM

Title: Re: Non-Buddhist attending a tsok

Content:

jamesrigzin said:

He listened to the Tibetan chanting and maybe perused the English in the text... Afterwards, he commented, "man, they waste so much food!" - referring to the tsok remainder - and suggested that, according to his logic, it is hypocritical to behave in such a way i.e. environmental concerns, moral concerns.

Malcolm wrote:

Apparently, during the imperial period, the Bonpos also used to make similar complaints about the Buddhists, in addition to the fact that the Buddhist were dependent on texts!

M

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 16th, 2022 at 10:33 PM

Title: Re: Bad look for the Sangha

Content:

Könchok Thrinley said:

What about monks protesting killing? Be it slaughterhouses or massacres? After all Buddha did try to protect the Shakyas by blocking the way for the army if I remember correctly. Is that not a form of a protest?

Malcolm wrote:

He didn't block them. He met them on the road and convinced them it was a bad idea and they went away. But the second time, he watched the army murder and carry off his relative into slavery.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 17th, 2022 at 10:16 AM

Title: Re: Bad look for the Sangha

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Well security let just them in, instead of even trying to stop them.

Malcolm wrote:

Ummmm, no.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 17th, 2022 at 10:25 PM

Title: Re: What exactly is a deva??

Content:

ToddGibbsop said:

I know devas were once humans and I've heard that the word deva means god. The thing is that I thought the definition of a god was supposed to be infinite and all powerful, but devas aren't all powerful and they don't live for ever. Is one not supposed to take the name translation literally and devas are actually just very powerful spirits. Please tell me your knowledge of this?

Malcolm wrote:

A sentient being who inhabits the highest part of the three realms, the upper part of the desire realm, the form realm, and the formless realm.

They are not "spirits" per se.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 18th, 2022 at 12:26 AM

Title: Re: Obesity epidemic

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

eating a diet high in animal fats is directly linked to all sorts of problems in humans.

Malcolm wrote:

Eating a diet high in anything is likely to cause problems.

Not only this, but there is no single diet which is good for every person.

People should eat seasonally, according to their constitutional type as described in both Ayurveda and Tibetan Medicine.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 18th, 2022 at 9:08 AM

Title: Re: Bad look for the Sangha

Content:

Queequeg said:

Buddhist

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhists are one thing, followers of Buddhadharma another. You can't discern the latter from the former based on costumes. And it really doesn't matter what anyone thinks of Buddhists.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 18th, 2022 at 9:16 AM

Title: Re: eye organ versus eyeball

Content:

Hazel said:

I had assumed that by eye organ texts meant the eyeball, but recently read that it's actually something more subtle than that.

What am I missing here?

I can dig up the quote, if that is helpful.

Malcolm wrote:

It's a patch of atoms on the back of the eyeball.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 18th, 2022 at 9:48 AM

Title: Re: Obesity epidemic

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

eating a diet high in animal fats is directly linked to all sorts of problems in humans.

Malcolm wrote:

Eating a diet high in anything is likely to cause problems.

Not only this, but there is no single diet which is good for every person.

People should eat seasonally, according to their constitutional type as described in both Ayurveda and Tibetan Medicine.

KristenM said:

I would like to follow an Ayurvedic diet but somewhere I read that tomatoes should be avoided. That's a deal breaker for me, personally.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no one Ayurvedic diet, and tomatoes are an integral part of Indian cooking.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 18th, 2022 at 10:19 AM

Title: Re: Obesity epidemic

Content:

KristenM said:

I would like to follow an Ayurvedic diet but somewhere I read that tomatoes should be avoided. That's a deal breaker for me, personally.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no one Ayurvedic diet, and tomatoes are an integral part of Indian cooking.

KristenM said:

That's what I thought was always so weird about the tomato thing, they are so prevalent in Indian food.

Malcolm wrote:

Tomatoes are a bit acidic, hence pitta aggravating.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 18th, 2022 at 8:18 PM

Title: Re: HYT Wangs

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

All this chat of commitments and recitations makes me glad to be a Dzogchen practitioner. It's exhausting even to think about.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 18th, 2022 at 9:52 PM

Title: Re: Bad look for the Sangha

Content:

Queequeg said:

Buddhist

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhists are one thing, followers of Buddhadharma another. You can't discern the latter from the former based on costumes. And it really doesn't matter what anyone thinks of Buddhists.

Queequeg said:

The old True Scotsmen thing...

It does.

Malcolm wrote:

Nah. We should never be worried about what other people do unless it is directly harmful to sentient beings. The only issue here is the superglue. The rest of it is just theater for the bored.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 18th, 2022 at 9:58 PM

Title: Re: Bad look for the Sangha

Content:

Queequeg said:

At this point preserving the integrity of the triratna may well be futile. Doesn't mean we shouldn't try to keep it alive. imo.

Malcolm wrote:

The Three Jewels are not a church or an institution to defend. Those who wish to "preserve the integrity of the Three Jewels" only need to worry about their own physical, verbal, and mental actions. We can't really condition others to behave as we would wish, no?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 18th, 2022 at 10:18 PM

Title: Re: eye organ versus eyeball

Content:

Hazel said:

I can dig up the quote, if that is helpful.

jimmi said:

I would appreciate that. I'm very interested in Buddhist teachings that might elaborate on the functions of the body's eye and the mind's eye.

Malcolm wrote:

You can find this information in the first chapter of Vasubandhu's Abhidharmakośbhaṣya.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 18th, 2022 at 11:54 PM

Title: Re: Bad look for the Sangha

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Nah. We should never be worried about what other people do unless it is directly harmful to sentient beings.

Queequeg said:

Karma is harmful to sentient beings.

Malcolm wrote:

You cannot protect people from their own karma.

The Three Jewels are not a church or an institution to defend. Those who wish to "preserve the integrity of the Three Jewels" only need to worry about their own physical, verbal, and mental actions. We can't really condition others to behave as we would wish, no?

Well actually, the sangha is certainly an institution that the Buddha established. The rules came later, but there certainly was a going for refuge that brought people into a certain community. One of his last instructions was on what to do when people act in a manner not in harmony with the community - excommunication. [/quote]

???

No. Where did the Buddha recommend excommunication? How could a buddha, an embodiment of compassion, excommunicate anyone?

There would need to be something to be excommunicated from - and that is the fellowship of refuge.

Losing one's status as bhikṣu does not constitute loss of refuge. The Sangha is made up of four types of persons (eight when multiplied by gender). And frankly since you are not a bhikṣu, the only thing you can do is complain to his Sangha. And likely, he is not even a bhikṣu. Even if he were, since there is no rule in Vinaya, as far as I know, stating that bhikṣus (if the guy is even a bhikṣu) are forbidden from attending PETA protests or glueing their hands to counters. I agree with you it is dumb, but, so what? Buddhists do all kinds of dumb shit I don't agree with. So your complaint would amount to nothing.

Beyond that, this person probably thinks they are doing a bodhisattva action. They likely have generated bodhicitta.

Of course we can choose to efface everything with "its empty, man", but I don't think it needs to be explained to you the fault in that. We sentient beings inescapably live in a matrix of conventions. We can deny them on the basis of emptiness, but for most of us that's nothing more than an intellectual position. An authentic insight into emptiness is something wholly different. We're not talking about that, so its not relevant here.

My point has to do with contrasting "Buddhists" who don't agree on much, with Buddhadharma, which does not depend on such conventions. There are people, Buddhists, who think that protesting at Starbucks over soy milk is entirely in line with Buddhism. You disagree. You want to excommunicate them, since this is accords with your idea of "Buddhism." But in the end, it is just a bunch of accepting and rejecting. We go for refuge in certain conventions as an antidote to the suffering due to our entanglement in conventions. In the end, we are still left with the triratna and our responsibility to keep it alive for the future.

We cannot keep the Buddha alive, he went into parinirvana 2500 years ago. The relative renunciate Sangha is in a rapid state of decline, merely a reflection of what it once was—people try to preserve it, but the Buddha predicted it would perish. The Dharma is there to be realized even when there is no Buddha present in the world, such as now. So, the only way to keep the Three Jewels alive is in our own practice, and not by looking at the faults we perceive in other's "Buddhism."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 19th, 2022 at 9:25 AM

Title: Re: Bad look for the Sangha

Content:

Queequeg said:

By excommunication I mean only what the Buddha instructed as above - cease intercourse with the person.

Malcolm wrote:

This is not excommunication, and it only applied to how bhikshus relate to deviant bhikshus who gave committed one of the fourteen breaches requiring expiation. It has nothing to do with lay people. We have no authority to punish bhikshus. Not only that, but protesting at Starbucks doesn't rate.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 19th, 2022 at 9:31 AM

Title: Re: Bad look for the Sangha

Content:

Queequeg said:

I do disagree with this whole putting Buddhism in quotation marks to insinuate that there is some difference between Dharma and the ways it is practiced. That said, the terms Buddhist/Buddhism are clumsy and conventions that I probably ought to avoid using.

Malcolm wrote:

There is an old Karmapa saw that runs to the tune of some student does this and that "Dharma" practice, goes to his teacher, who responds, that's great, but it is better to practice Dharma, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 19th, 2022 at 9:46 AM

Title: Re: Bad look for the Sangha

Content:

Queequeg said:

Whether the Buddha actually attained parinirvana is something Buddhists cannot agree on.

Malcolm wrote:

Conventionally speaking, upon which you base your case, everyone accepts he did. The fact is not in dispute. The interpretation of that fact is a different matter.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 19th, 2022 at 10:39 PM

Title: Re: Ekajati yidam practice

Content:

Riku19 said:

Not exactly what I am looking for but thank you for the info nonetheless!

Malcolm wrote:

Drikung Yangzab.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 20th, 2022 at 5:00 AM

Title: Re: Ekajati yidam practice

Content:

Riku19 said:

Thanks Malcom! You never fail to deliver

Malcolm wrote:

It is not so easy to receive this instruction.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 20th, 2022 at 7:41 AM

Title: Re: Gelug responses to these critiques of Tsongkhapa?

Content:

wei wu wei said:

All Classical Madhyamakas agree that emptiness is the emptiness of something, and that without something, there cannot be nothing. What is that something? Dependent Origination. No classical Madhyamaka accepts a self-established ineffable emptiness. The ultimate is the ultimate of something, no classical Madhyamaka rejects this, including Mipham. Otherwise one cannot have the Union of the two truths and so on which became codified with the translation of the MAV of Candrakirti.

Malcolm, would you mind if I share this in a FB conversation?

Malcolm wrote:

Not at all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 20th, 2022 at 8:34 PM

Title: Re: Ekajati yidam practice

Content:

lelopa said:

In Drikung Yangzab is an empowerment needed for Ekadzati self-transformation.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, of course.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 21st, 2022 at 3:36 AM

Title: Treasury of Precious Instructions, vol. 5 Sakya

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Hi All,

Just received my advance copies of my first translation with Tsadra:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 21st, 2022 at 3:43 AM

Title: Re: Treasury of Precious Instructions, vol. 5 Sakya

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Preorder link:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 21st, 2022 at 8:10 PM

Title: Re: Prophecies of Dolpopa

Content:

Tenma said:

Over in the sectarian spirit cult, I've seen their deceased teacher

Malcolm wrote:

Not deceased. Alive and living in Spain.

Tenma said:

The one that used to live in Malaysia is still alive? That's the dude I'm talking about.

Malcolm wrote:

Oh, that guy. Quite deceased.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 21st, 2022 at 10:31 PM

Title: Re: Hevajra or Chakrsamvara Empowerments in 2022

Content:

Konchog1 said:

How does this work for people who switch traditions? I know a few zen teachers who talk about how they were formerly Vajrayana practitioners and I would guess they have some practice commitments? Maybe they haven't abandoned them and do it in private, but I feel it could be hard balancing the two practices.

Malcolm wrote:

Practice commitments are voluntary. And if you find you don't really gel with a practice, there is no reason to continue with it. Of course, when teachers give important cycles, they want people to take them seriously. But there is actually no _samaya_ to do this or that practice. These commitments are given to discourage the idly curious.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 21st, 2022 at 11:59 PM

Title: Re: 5th School of Tibetan Buddhism

Content:

stong gzugs said:

One might wonder how the development of Tibetan Buddhism would have been different had this debate taken place.

Kai lord said:

Sakya was under the patronage of the Yuan empire of Mongols and was at their height of power during that time, Many Sakya masters even served as the state preceptor of the Mongol Khans. So due to political reasons, the result of that debate wouldn't be fair even if it had taken place and might even be bad for Dölpopa (recall how Chan was driven out in the 8th century),

Malcolm wrote:

At this time in history, gzhan stong was quite popular, and had not yet been subject to the critiques it would receive from Rendawa, Tsongkhapa, Rongton, Gorampa, and others.

However, my point was really that the argument for Jonang institutional independence is backwards looking and somewhat anachronistic.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 22nd, 2022 at 10:38 PM

Title: Re: Tradition-specific Altar Accoutrement

Content:

nyonchung said:

but OMG "three jewels, Buddha, Dharma, and Sangha. Sangha is often represented by a picture of one's teacher." Certainly not.

Malcolm wrote:

Certainly. Otherwise, what is the point of saying the guru is the embodiment of the Three Jewels? So below, you contradict yourself

nyonchung said:

One's own teacher is... the union of all refuges / jewels

Malcolm wrote:

Hence a sufficient representation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 23rd, 2022 at 12:10 AM

Title: Re: Tradition-specific Altar Accoutrement

Content:

nyonchung said:

Not really, in a formal shrine...

Malcolm wrote:

These are just Tibetan lineage customs. There is no real rule book for these things. Indian bali was chapatis, not elaborate tormas sculptures with butter ornaments, etc. Eight offerings are just articles used by Indians to welcome guests, etc. It is unlikely they were arranged the way Tibetans now do. Just look at how they arrange these things in a Shingon altar. No stupa, no text.

For example, ChNN specified the only thing one really needs for a shrine is a picture of A in thigle of five colors, a candle for offering, and incense for dharmapālas, and this is enough for a formal shrine. If one like to do more, of course, one can.

There is no one right way. So, it is sufficient for one's home shrine to simply have a picture of one's guru.

So we agree.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 23rd, 2022 at 1:19 AM

Title: Re: Tradition-specific Altar Accoutrement

Content:

nyonchung said:

What about Godzilla?

Malcolm wrote:

I don't know, little dated. Transformers (sentient robot/vehicles) are a more in keeping with the times.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 23rd, 2022 at 5:49 AM

Title: Re: Everybody speaks about samaya, but nobody knows what it

Content:

nyonchung said:

The most remarkable early example of careful reconstruction I know of is that of Gyelwa

Tenné (1127-1217), who compiled biographies of masters of the zhijé tradition since Pha Dampa Sanggyé, the teachings they transmitted, the part of commentaries and additions that belong to successive masters down to the few root instructions given by the Indian master. 5 volumes .

Tenné's own autobiography is a marvel.

Malcolm wrote:

Dzeng Dharmabodhi, a contemporary and student of Phadampa, expressed doubt at the huge number of volumes of Shije teachings present in the mid 12th century, since Phadampa didn't actually speak much and communicated mainly in symbols.

Khyungpo Naljor, aka Lama Shang, shows up as a student of Khonchog Gyalpo in one lineage list.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 23rd, 2022 at 8:11 AM

Title: Re: Everybody speaks about samaya, but nobody knows what it

Content:

nyonchung said:

The most remarkable early example of careful reconstruction I know of is that of Gyelwa Tenné (1127-1217), who compiled biographies of masters of the zhijé tradition since Pha Dampa Sanggyé, the teachings they transmitted, the part of commentaries and additions that belong to successive masters down to the few root instructions given by the Indian master. 5 volumes .

Tenné's own autobiography is a marvel.

Malcolm wrote:

Dzeng Dharmabodhi, a contemporary and student of Phadampa, expressed doubt at the huge number of volumes of Shije teachings present in the mid 12th century, since Phadampa didn't actually speak much and communicated mainly in symbols.

nyonchung said:

This is what Tenné did, Dzeng spent a short time with Dampa, but well before Dampa's final stay in Dingri (both Dzeng's and Dampa's biographies lack of a precise chronology - and if you find a precise chronology in a 12th or 13th century, well , somebody probably added it later)

Malcolm wrote:

I was referring to Kunzang Dorje's 12th century account of klong sde where this episode is recounted. The point is that there was considerable contemporary doubt about the extent of Dampa's work.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 23rd, 2022 at 9:06 AM

Title: Re: Everybody speaks about samaya, but nobody knows what it

Content:

nyonchung said:

This is what Tenné did, Dzeng spent a short time with Dampa, but well before Dampa's final stay in Dingri (both Dzeng's and Dampa's biographies lack of a precise chronology - and if you find a precise chronology in a 12th or 13th century, well , somebody probably added it later)

Malcolm wrote:

I was referring to Kunzang Dorje's 12th century account of klong sde where this episode is recounted. The point is that there was considerable contemporary doubt about the extent of Dampa's work.

nyonchung said:

Probably the source for Gö Lotsawa =

" sLob dpon kun bzang gis mdzad pa'i rnam bshad che ba" according to Deb ther sngon po (vol. 1), p. 237

I have doubts on Dzeng's dates and Dampa's dates; following Gö Lotsawa, Dzeng is possibly (1052-1168?), but maybe b. 1064 -

Mel Kawachen (1126-1211) - dates safer - is the master of Künzang Dorjé in the zhi byed bar ma so lugs (don brgyud and the disciple of Shami Mönlam Bar (1085-1171), a key master of Tenné (so Künzang Dorjé and Tenné received the same lineage)

Künzang Dorjé is possibly just a little younger than Mel and Tenné (b. 1127) but not much more

So Tenné did this remarkable clarification work, highlighting the original cycles of instructions ; otherwise, he was quite an exceptionnal character, his rang rnam is pretty atypic and comparable to some of the best French medieval literature. Freshness. Nothing of the conventions of later rnam thar.

Could you please locate Künzang Dorjé's account?, it can be interesting to compare with Gö Lotsawa's version.

- Martin D. (1997), p. 33 mentions this account

Regards

Malcolm wrote:

That makes it even more remarkable that Kunzang Dorje related Dzeng's skepticism.

Kunzang Dorje's account can be found in the 'bka ma, under the title rdo rje zam pa, Vajra bridge.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 23rd, 2022 at 9:20 PM

Title: Re: Everybody speaks about samaya, but nobody knows what it is.

Content:

nyonchung said:

Later rnam thar of Machig are of no practical (historiographical) use.

Malcolm wrote:

Agreed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 23rd, 2022 at 9:26 PM

Title: Re: Best deities-practices for eliminating or transforming heavy negative karma.

Root Guru

Content:

Loto-Trueno said:

First; what deity or practice each of you consider would be better to clean, revert, transform very dirty, thick and dense karma

Malcolm wrote:

Guru Yoga, followed by samadhi.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 23rd, 2022 at 9:41 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

<https://www.theguardian.com/world/2022/jun/18/burning-planet-why-are-the-worlds-heatwaves-getting-more-intense>

Malcolm wrote:

Meanwhile, it is 57 F (13.8 C) in Western New England today and for the past week, somewhat colder than average, while the rest of the country swelters.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 23rd, 2022 at 9:47 PM

Title: Re: Mahayana vs Theravada

Content:

Giovanni said:

Some senior Dzogchen teachers known to me have been studying with a Theravadin

Abbot who is teaching Dzogchen.

The Bodhisattva and Arhat models are seen as upaya rather than ontological realities.
This may be a way that Buddhadharma develops in the West.

Malcolm wrote:

Of course they are methods, and the methods of arhats and bodhisattvas could not be more different since their motivation is utterly different.

Without Mahāyāna motivation, there is no Dzogchen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 23rd, 2022 at 10:25 PM

Title: Re: Semde and longde are base of Mennagde?

Content:

Tata1 said:

Yes semde is very useful. But each series is a complete path in itself as chnn said manytimes

Malcolm wrote:

No, this is not correct. He state that klong sde and man ngag sde are complete paths, but not sems sde.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 23rd, 2022 at 10:33 PM

Title: Re: Mahayana vs Theravada

Content:

nyonchung said:

As for the great Dzogchen master Shri-singha, he was born to the South of China, possibly in Champa

Malcolm wrote:

Unlikely. The only source for this idea is the 12th century snying thig account, the lo rgyus chen mo. This finds no confirmation in the sems sde or klong sde histories.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 23rd, 2022 at 10:57 PM

Title: Re: Mahayana vs Theravada

Content:

nyonchung said:

This is the source, sounds anyway possible,

Malcolm wrote:

Its highly unlikely. Shri Singha's existence can be confirmed through a text by Manjuśrīkīrit, where one dPal gyi seng ge is mentioned as part of group of partisans who argue the creation stage is unnecessary, along with one dge slong ma dga' mo, etc.

Both the sems sde and klong sde chronicles locate him in Vajrāsana where he meets Vairocana.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 24th, 2022 at 12:02 AM

Title: Re: Semde and longde are base of Mennagde?

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Aren't there complete practice manuals for Semde level though?

Malcolm wrote:

sems sde is the completion stage of maha and anu. ChNN clearly explained this.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 24th, 2022 at 12:17 AM

Title: Re: Mahayana vs Theravada

Content:

nyonchung said:

This is the source, sounds anyway possible,

Malcolm wrote:

Both the sems sde and klong sde chronicles locate him in Vajrāsana where he meets Vairocana.

Kai lord said:

So he was an Indian or Nepalis? Seem more likely since His name does not even sound remotely Chinese.

Malcolm wrote:

We don't know. We know for sure he was a contemporary of Trisrong Detsen. We know for sure that some of his associates are associated also with Padmasambhava. One can guess that those two ran in the same circles. We can be fairly confident that Vimalamitra was also his student, who arrived in Tibet around 800.

For example, there are three completely different accounts of the origin of Garab Dorje, with the sems sde and klong sde accounts being the closest, but also distinct.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 24th, 2022 at 2:19 AM

Title: Re: Everybody speaks about samaya, but nobody knows what it

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Khyungpo Naljor, aka Lama Shang, shows up as a student of Khonchog Gyalpo in one lineage list.

conebeckham said:

The usual person referred to as "Lama Shang" (or Zhang) is actually the founder of the now-extinct Tselpa Kagyu. Some controversy about his Mahamudra tradition, if I recall..... I've not heard Khyungpo Naljor equated with the title "Lama Shang" before.

Which Khonchog Gyalpo are you referring to?

Malcolm wrote:

Khon Konchog Gyalpo, far too early to be Lama Shang of white panacea fame.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 24th, 2022 at 3:31 AM

Title: Re: Semde and longde are base of Mennagde?

Content:

Tata1 said:

Yes semde is very useful. But each series is a complete path in itself as chnn said manytimes

Malcolm wrote:

No, this is not correct. He state that klong sde and man ngag sde are complete paths, but not sems sde.

florin said:

Actually in some of the books translated under his direction by some of his most trusted translators there is plenty of evidence for quite the opposite.

Malcolm wrote:

I am basing myself off of direct statements he made in English in various retreats, for example, his pointing out that one could not attain rainbow body through sems sde, and his direct assertion it was not. So, regardless of whatever other people may have said, I know what ChNN himself said in SMS teachings, etc. YMMV

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 24th, 2022 at 3:49 AM

Title: Re: Semde and longde are base of Mennagde?

Content:

florin said:

Actually in some of the books translated under his direction by some of his most trusted translators there is plenty of evidence for quite the opposite.

Malcolm wrote:

I am basing myself off of direct statements he made in English in various retreats, for example, his pointing out that one could not attain rainbow body through sems sde, and his direct assertion it was not. So, regardless of whatever other people may have said, I know what ChNN himself said in SMS teachings, etc. YMMV

florin said:

Well that much is clear. But then why the statements that each class is a complete path in itself. Complete means complete aka one can benefit from the ultimate fruit.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, we would need to see a citation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 24th, 2022 at 4:05 AM

Title: Re: Semde and longde are base of Mennagde?

Content:

florin said:

Well that much is clear. But then why the statements that each class is a complete path in itself. Complete means complete aka one can benefit from the ultimate fruit.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, we would need to see a citation.

florin said:

“ In substance, these three phases correspond to three aspects of the Dzogchen teaching: "understanding" (rtogs pa), "stabilizing" (brtan pa), and "integrating" (bsre ba). One should not think, however, that the practice of Dzogchen must necessarily start with Semde and end with Mennagde; total realization can also be achieved by practicing only one of the three series, inasmuch as each of them is a path complete in itself. It is simply a matter of understanding which aspect receives greater emphasis in one series rather than another and knowing how to embark on the path that will be most beneficial in terms of one's capacity.”

Supreme Source “DZOGCHEN SEMDE AND THE KUNJED GYALPO TANTRA”

There is a similar quote in Mejung Tantra.

Malcolm wrote:

All I can say is he said different things at different times.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 24th, 2022 at 7:28 AM

Title: Re: Semde and longde are base of Mennagde?

Content:

florin said:

“ In substance, these three phases correspond to three aspects of the Dzogchen teaching: "understanding" (rtogs pa), "stabilizing" (brtan pa), and "integrating" (bsre ba). One should not think, however, that the practice of Dzogchen must necessarily start with Semde and end with Mennagde; total realization can also be achieved by practicing only one of the three series, inasmuch as each of them is a path complete in itself. It is simply a matter of understanding which aspect receives greater emphasis in one series rather than another and knowing how to embark on the path that will be most beneficial in terms of one's capacity.”

Supreme Source “DZOGCHEN SEMDE AND THE KUNJED GYALPO TANTRA”

There is a similar quote in Mejung Tantra.

Malcolm wrote:

All I can say is he said different things at different times.

florin said:

But Somewhat in support of your original statement rinpoche, referencing longde said that it is not a practice you would do for the rest of your life. The implication is that one after confidence has been established would move one to upadesha and so on.

Malcolm wrote:

I personally regard the three series as sets of views about Dzogchen, rather than hard textual divisions, because as we know, our teacher taught the unity of the three series in meaning.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 24th, 2022 at 8:40 AM

Title: Re: Mahayana vs Theravada

Content:

tobes said:

I celebrate this, and I agree that there are some big similarities even in method.

Malcolm wrote:

There are no similarities at all, not in view, meditation, conduct, not to mention result.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 24th, 2022 at 6:06 PM

Title: Re: Mahayana vs Theravada

Content:

tobes said:

I celebrate this, and I agree that there are some big similarities even in method.

Malcolm wrote:

There are no similarities at all, not in view, meditation, conduct, not to mention result.

tobes said:

"No similarities at all" is more than a bit extreme. Giovanni is saying they are commensurable and you are saying 0%. A bit of middle way is warranted.

Malcolm wrote:

The basis is different, the path is different, the result is different.

There is no similarity between Dzogchen and Theravada at all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 24th, 2022 at 10:19 PM

Title: Re: Mahayana vs Theravada

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The basis is different, the path is different, the result is different.

Astus said:

Is dzogchen outside the framework of the four noble truths?

Malcolm wrote:

The four truths are diagnostic, not ontological. There is a problem. There is a cause of that problem. When the cause of a problem is known, it can be remedied. There is a method to remedy the cause of the problem. Thus, the four truths apply to everything from car repair to samsara.

Astus said:

There is no similarity between Dzogchen and Theravada at all.

Maybe you know this one: <https://www.abhayagiri.org/books/423-small-boat-great-mountain>.

Malcolm wrote:

I appreciate his book. But there are some pretty large errors of misunderstanding of Dzogchen terminology, at minimum. Compare this:

Rigpa, nondual awareness, is the direct knowing of this. It's the quality of mind that knows, while abiding nowhere.

With Jigme Lingpa:

There are three kinds of vidyā in the sutras of Mahāyāna: the knowledge (rig pa, vidyā) of the divine eye, knowledge of past lives, and immaculate knowledge, that is, knowledge is a so-called cognition. Apart from this explanation in three categories, the dharmatā of vidyā—transcending the eight consciousnesses that include thoughts, reflections, causes, and results of a final goal—exists as the gnosis (ye shes) of the natural great perfection...The essence of that view is the truth of āryas, the personally-intuited gnosis (so so rang rig pa'i ye shes, pratyatmyavedanajñāna) that is free from subject and object. So here, Amaro, draws an understandable, but erroneous conclusion, assuming that rigpa/vidyā referred to in Dzogchen is the mental factor of cognizance. Elsewhere, he refers to rig pa as intrinsic awareness (rang rig), understandably ignorant of the fact that rig pa, rang rig, and so on, in Dzogchen are contractions of so so rang rig pa'i ye shes, which is a very common term in Buddhist literature. If one claims that svasamvedana is what "rang rig" refers to, one's view does not transcend Yogacāra. This is an extremely common error, with consequences for one's practice.

The difference between the nine yānas and the great perfection is that the former take mind as the basis; where as the great perfection takes gnosis as the basis. This has consequences for the path: the nine yānas are paths based on causes and results; path of Dzogchen is not based on causes and results. This also has consequences for the result. In the the nine yānas the three kāyas are a result that arise from the two accumulations; in Dzogchen, the three kāyas are path experiences and do not exist in the result.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 24th, 2022 at 10:23 PM

Title: Re: Mahayana vs Theravada

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The basis is different, the path is different, the result is different.

Astus said:

Is dzogchen outside the framework of the four noble truths? If so, then how is it not just perpetuating samsara?

There is no similarity between Dzogchen and Theravada at all.

Maybe you know this one: <https://www.abhayagiri.org/books/423-small-boat-great-mountain>.

Giovanni said:

Ajahn Amaros interest is not merely academic. He receives instruction from Tsoknyi Rinpoche according to that Rinpoche's students.

He remains the Abbott of Amaravati Monastery.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and this is a good thing. Nevertheless, there are some errors in this person's understanding, at least at the time of publication.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 24th, 2022 at 10:49 PM

Title: Re: U.S. big news: Roe v. Wade overturned

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Say goodbye to the First Amendment, Fourth Amendment, Fifth Amendment, Sixth Amendment, Seventh Amendment, Ninth Amendment, Fourteenth Amendment, and Nineteenth Amendment. Hello Gilead.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 24th, 2022 at 11:20 PM

Title: Re: U.S. big news: Roe v. Wade overturned

Content:

DNS said:

<https://www.cbsnews.com/live-updates/supreme-court-roe-v-wade-abortion-rights/>

It's a huge historical day in U.S. history, overturning an almost 50 year precedent in Roe v. Wade, which allowed abortion. However, it's not going to really change that much in practical terms, as all it does is give the states the power to enact their own restrictions, if they so choose. Most states will not place any restrictions. There are maybe about 10 states that might place severe restrictions or outright bans, but then all a woman has to do, it to travel to a state that allows it.

Malcolm wrote:

Totally, utterly, wrong.

PastedGraphic-1.png (277.78 KiB) Viewed 202 times

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 24th, 2022 at 11:25 PM

Title: Re: U.S. big news: Roe v. Wade overturned

Content:

Queequeg said:

For those of you who had some asinine "principled" excuse for not voting for Hillary, F*ck you, f*ck you, f*ck you.

Malcolm wrote:

Seconded.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 24th, 2022 at 11:31 PM

Title: Re: U.S. big news: Roe v. Wade overturned

Content:

DNS said:

Regarding the number of states that will ban abortions; we'll see. The media has a tendency to exaggerate for hyperbole and ratings. We'll see how many actually ban it completely.

Malcolm wrote:

You really haven't been paying attention.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 25th, 2022 at 12:14 AM

Title: Re: Mahayana vs Theravada

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The difference between the nine yānas and the great perfection is that the former take mind as the basis; where as the great perfection takes gnosis as the basis. This has consequences for the path: the nine yānas are paths based on causes and results; path of Dzogchen is not based on causes and results. This also has consequences for the result. In the the nine yānas the three kāyas are a result that arise from the two accumulations; in Dzogchen, the three kāyas are path experiences and do not exist in the result.

Queequeg said:

Can you explain this difference a little more?

I can understand in preliminary stages where we train the mind that the mind is the basis, but what I don't grok is the distinction between mind and gnosis at subtler levels. As far as the theory goes, I think there are non Dzogchen paths that are based on something "beyond" subject/object constructs. I'll refer to some zen teachings here for the sake of convenience and general familiarity. Sudden, as I understand, is something wholly unrelated to subject/object ideation and is passed down through vital lineage.

Malcolm wrote:

When there is mind, gnosis cannot be observed. When there is gnosis, mind is not evident. Mind is adventitious; gnosis is not adventitious, etc.

If people want to really understand this, they need to seek out a proper teacher. No matter how many words I write online, it will just be an intellectual description of sugar.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 25th, 2022 at 12:26 AM

Title: Re: U.S. big news: Roe v. Wade overturned

Content:

Queequeg said:

Anti abortion crowd...will force something catastrophic.

Malcolm wrote:

There, fixed it for you.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 25th, 2022 at 12:30 AM

Title: Re: U.S. big news: Roe v. Wade overturned

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Pretty much. I mean we really can't talk about this without recognizing that we have a nascent fascist movement tied in with these folks.

Malcolm wrote:

It's not that f*cking nascent. Next time around, they will be more effective. Think Italy in 1925; Germany in 1936.

They have set up the courts to lend their putsch a veneer of legitimacy; they have an active paramilitary; they largely control the police; etc., etc.

Oh, and once they get into power, they will ban gun ownership for blacks, non-Christians, etc., they will enlarge libel laws to control the press, etc., etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 25th, 2022 at 2:06 AM

Title: Re: U.S. big news: Roe v. Wade overturned

Content:

justsit said:

So it's back to 1950? Women barefoot and pregnant, blacks back to the ghetto, gays back in the closet, white men have all the guns they want and rule everything.

Not gonna happen - we worked too hard, it's back to the barricades. I really hope the young people are ready for a long, hard slog.

Malcolm wrote:

I think this breaks the country. Republic of New England, here we come.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 25th, 2022 at 2:28 AM

Title: Re: U.S. big news: Roe v. Wade overturned

Content:

PeterC said:

and that police face no liability for failing to mirandize suspects.

Malcolm wrote:

I missed that. F*ck. Worst Court Ever.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 25th, 2022 at 2:38 AM

Title: Re: U.S. big news: Roe v. Wade overturned

Content:

PeterC said:

In case anyone missed them, in other cases this week the court decided that the second amendment has special priority over all other enumerated rights - specifically, that any restriction on gun ownership that the founders didn't historically support are presumptively unconstitutional - and that police face no liability for failing to mirandize suspects.

Genjo Conan said:

They also https://www.supremecourt.gov/opinions/21pdf/20-1088_dbfi.pdf the Establishment Clause subordinate to the Free Exercise Clause.

Malcolm wrote:

Missed that also, that is super-f*cked. They just eviscerated the first amendment.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 25th, 2022 at 5:33 AM

Title: Re: Mahayana vs Theravada

Content:

Astus said:

Dzogchen still has view, meditation, conduct, and result, doesn't it?

Malcolm wrote:

From the perspective of the vehicles of the cause and result, yes. From its perspective, only nominally.

Astus said:

Its gnosis is not something other than prajnaparamita, is it?

Malcolm wrote:

It's not the perfection of wisdom as imagined by the vehicles of cause and result.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 25th, 2022 at 9:46 AM

Title: Re: Mahayana vs Theravada

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

The Thai Forest Tradition is the path of personal liberation to get somewhere with it it's recommended to do full time practice. To remove all the kleshas from the mind is the goal. This requires intensive effort as you're on your own.

I'm sure Ajahn Brahm teaching to relax is to help uptight westerners and he is well known to have skill with Jhanas which would help a lot.

tobes said:

No, it is the quintessence of the technique. The effort one makes is non-effort. Sound familiar?

Yes, he teaches that to westerners and easterners. But you're making the implicit and unjustified inference here is that this is somehow contrary to the tradition itself. Sorry, but it ain't.

Malcolm wrote:

You do realize you are responding to someone who ordained in that tradition and has personal experience of it?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 25th, 2022 at 7:28 PM

Title: Re: HH Sakya Trizin will be giving the Online Empowerment of Chime Phakme Nyingtik on 24th of June

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Where might one obtain the sadhana?

tony_montana said:

A variety of sadhanas and other translations related to this cycle is available in Lotsawa House : <https://www.lotsawahouse.org/topics/chime-pakme-nyingtik/>

I'm wondering if an oral transmission is needed for the sadhanas.

Malcolm wrote:

Comes with the Jenang.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 25th, 2022 at 8:35 PM

Title: Re: HH Sakya Trizin will be giving the Online Empowerment of Chime Phakme Nyingtik on 24th of June

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Where might one obtain the sadhana?

Malcolm wrote:

You can find my translation on Amazon under Lama Migmar's name

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 26th, 2022 at 2:19 AM

Title: Re: HH Sakya Trizin will be giving the Online Empowerment of Chime Phakme Nyingtik on 24th of June

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Where might one obtain the sadhana?

Malcolm wrote:

You can find my translation on Amazon under Lama Migmar's name

Johnny Dangerous said:
Awesome, thanks!

Malcolm wrote:
You can also find it at Lotsawa house.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, June 26th, 2022 at 3:44 AM
Title: Re: Drubthab Kuntue teachings from Dzongsar Khyentse?
Content:
Nilasarasvati said:
So --

what is an HYT empowerment?

Also I heard that in the Sakya tradition you are expected to recite the sadhanas of any deity you have recieved the Wang for (on a daily basis)--how is that possible for a set of committments this large??

Malcolm wrote:
You heard wrong.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, June 26th, 2022 at 4:58 AM
Title: Re: Crisis of a Faith, returning to dharma, and new directions.
Content:
Nilasarasvati said:
Or genuinely believe the royal family "had no idea" and "weren't consulted."

Malcolm wrote:
It is unlikely the present King of Bhutan had any idea or any say in the ethnic cleansing of the Lhotsampas. He was five when the Bhutan Citizenship Act was passed.

His father passed a policy which amounted to "Get Buddhist or get out" in 1988.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, June 26th, 2022 at 5:05 AM
Title: Re: Mahayana vs Theravada
Content:
Kai lord said:
That is the biggest issue I faced when previously tried to identify Virupa.

Malcolm wrote:

There are two main ones: Lamdre Virupa, and Brahmze Virupa. They are frequently confused. The latter was the disciple of Lakṣminkara, the sister of Indrabhuti III.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 26th, 2022 at 7:39 AM

Title: Re: Missing 1st day of Wangchen

Content:

nyonchung said:

such a great wisdom is rare to find nowadays! and so practical, I have second doubts, and why not barging in the middle of the second day, being late due to (tick) - the bus blew a tyre

- had an urgent call from my ex-wife regarding pension dues
- met yesterday evening old acquaintances
- thought it was starting 8PM not AM and claim that, anyway, you received another HYT initiation, ot leave before the end (urgent call from your banker),no problem since you received the 3rd and 4th initiation of another deity by another teacher? this is where such thinking leads my take is no, you're simply not part of the batch, by your own reasoning, having received Kye rdor in the Ngog tradition, I can come only on the second day of of a Kye dor rgyu dbang of the Sakyapas and say hello you guys?

If not possible to be there for the tagön: karmic obstacles, unsufficient connection, or the guru's will ...

Should this happen to (it actually happened once - railway and bus problem) that's what I would think, accept my fate, and certainly not do anything reckless

jmlee369 said:

With all due respect for your years of experience, this is how my Gelug vajra masters have taught explicitly and they themselves have given wangchen in a single session without doing the tagon rituals...

Malcolm wrote:

This would never fly in Sakya.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 26th, 2022 at 7:00 PM

Title: Re: Someone go tell DJKR

Content:

Nilasarasvati said:

In my mind, that's a very big deal for a dharma teacher to be a between-the-lines Fascist.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't think this is correct. If anything, he is a monarchist, while at the same time he imagines himself to be an anti-imperialist. So, for example, he tried to blame the situation in Burma on the British. And, factually speaking, he grew tired people correcting his historical blunders and shitposting, and now mostly posts “puppies and kittens” on his Facebook feed. But he is not a crypto-fascist, he is someone who derives his opinions from mainstream Indian media. This makes sense, because he lives in India, is grateful to India, and sees in India the past glories of the Buddhist hegemony, which ended in 495 CE.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 26th, 2022 at 7:03 PM

Title: Re: Mahayana vs Theravada

Content:

tobes said:

Nonetheless, I have heard this instruction from Ajahm Brahm in different forms, numerous times - it's hard to not to take it as the real pith. It is perhaps, as you suggested before, a less structured approach to entering the jhanas. I think there is a definite resonance with Dozgchen/Mahamudra approaches, but this does not imply they are the same.

All the best with your practice as well.

Malcolm wrote:

Dzogchen teachings regard cultivating the dhyanas to be deviations.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 26th, 2022 at 7:23 PM

Title: Re: Missing 1st day of Wangchen

Content:

jmlee369 said:

With all due respect for your years of experience, this is how my Gelug vajra masters have taught explicitly and they themselves have given wangchen in a single session without doing the tagon rituals...

Malcolm wrote:

This would never fly in Sakya.

zerwe said:

Have not had this experience (wangchen in a single day) personally, but during my very first HYT initiation did see a batch of folks show up the next day after the tagon and it has been a question/curiosity for me ever since.

Shaun

Malcolm wrote:

There are some empowerments in Sakya, like Kings tradition Avalokiteshvara, where it can all be done in a single day. But it usually takes two.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 26th, 2022 at 11:00 PM

Title: Re: Crisis of a Faith, returning to dharma, and new directions.

Content:

nyonchung said:

Vajrayana still belongs largely to Tibetan/Bhutanese/Nepalese masters

Malcolm wrote:

Strongly disagree.

The Vajrayāna belongs to the Dharmapālas, not any human being.

Tibetans, and so on, may continue to be the principle custodians of Vajrayāna for a while, but they don't own it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 27th, 2022 at 12:58 AM

Title: Re: Crisis of a Faith, returning to dharma, and new directions.

Content:

nyonchung said:

"The Vajrayāna belongs to the Dharmapālas, not any human being."

Well, it's under their care and of dakinis, but where does stand the root-lama, supposed to be Vajradhara?

Malcolm wrote:

That person is only Vajradhara for you, not for everyone.

nyonchung said:

"Tibetans, and so on, may continue to be the principle custodians of Vajrayāna for a while, but they don't own it."

Stricto sensu, of course, but they're still a great majority of lineage holders, and, as such, certainly have their say about how to handle it and transmit it - this is what I mean

Malcolm wrote:

"Lineage holders" are anyone who has received the transmission, does the retreats, etc. The main reason why these things remain in the hands of Tibetans is due to the lack of translation of empowerment manuals and so on into English. I don't imagine Tibetans will be out of the picture for a long while, but they do not own Vajrayāna Dharma. There was no Kagyu, Sakya, Nyingma, etc. in India or Central Asia.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 27th, 2022 at 3:30 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen Lungs this July 2022 (Precious Reading Transmissions From Khen Namdrol Rinpoche)

Content:

Nalanda said:

Can I attend with my 17 tantra and Longchen Nyingtik lungs?

Malcolm wrote:

No. You need to have received a necessary empowerment.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 27th, 2022 at 3:52 AM

Title: Re: Crisis of a Faith, returning to dharma, and new directions.

Content:

nyonchung said:

WE can appropriate the thing that indigenous people owe, for the good reason that they cannot be the real owners, since is somehow of interest to US

Malcolm wrote:

The Dharma is not "indigenous" to Tibet, not even after 1400 years. Tibetans are an indigenous people with an intrinsically valuable culture, language, art, and music. By the same token, being at the crossroads of Central Asia, they have absorbed cultural influences from Persia, Byzantium, India, China, and so on. Tibetans have done such a good job of forgetting their own indigenous, pre-Buddhist history, their indigenous civilization can only be caught in glimpses.

The Buddha himself enjoined that the Dharma be taught in the vernacular language of people interested in the Dharma: this is why we have Dharma texts in Tocharian, Sassanian, Chinese, Tibetan, Pali, Drusha, Ghandaran, etc.

The international character of Dharma is evident from it earliest days.

nyonchung said:

There is long and consistent historical trend of thinking in the West, based on the same sense of inborn moral superiority, taht inform colonialism, that this is a beautiful thing that should not be left in the hands of" natives", who, anyway, never even understood it properly.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't think anyone is making such an argument in this thread.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 27th, 2022 at 6:44 PM

Title: Re: Dzogchen Lungs this July 2022 (Precious Reading Transmissions From Khen Namdrol Rinpoche)

Content:

ninespokes said:

For the tsik don dzod, it just asks for a general nyingthig class empowerment, not necessarily those listed (which are just popular and common nyingthig empowerments).

They are all empowerments from the yang gsang bla na med pa'i skor, the innermost secret unsurpassed cycle of Dzogchen menngagde.

Does the Chime Pakme Nyingtik empowerment given by HH Sakya Trizin recently count?

Malcolm wrote:

No.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 27th, 2022 at 9:24 PM

Title: Re: Treasury of Precious Instructions, vol. 5 Sakya

Content:

thanhdq said:

Congratulation Acarya Malcom, This is wonderful!!! can't wait to get a copy of it. BTW, How many parts for this volume 5 ? When will they all available?

Malcolm wrote:

The text is divided in the three parts: core texts, empowerments and sadhanas, and instructional manuals.

Vol 6, the second volume of Sakya materials consisting of the eight ancillary path cycles , will be out next year sometime.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 27th, 2022 at 11:04 PM

Title: Re: H.E. Dzogchen Khenpo Choga Rinpoche

Content:

heart said:

He debated the origin of Dzogchen with ChNNR

Malcolm wrote:

Khenpo Choga lost.

ChNN used to joke about this debate fairly often. At the time, he was in Katmandhu privately receiving the Desum teachings from Tulku Urgyen.

Once, in 2002, I was hanging out with ChNN in his cabin at Tsegyalgar, and he pulled out this flag on the right, which Khenpo Choga had sent him:

ChNN remarked (and I paraphrase), "This "Dzogchen" flag is a modern style, politics, like the so-called Buddhist flag (on the left, created by Olcott). The real Buddhist flag is the Gyaltsen":

Disclaimer, I have no idea about Khenpo Choga's teachings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 27th, 2022 at 11:16 PM

Title: Re: H.E. Dzogchen Khenpo Choga Rinpoche

Content:

gelukman said:

So as he is Khenpo, he should have geshe degree?

How come he is rinpoche? Is he genuine lineage holder?

Or just some one who have received the transmission for specific lineage?

(just like me who have received transmission, but I am not a lineage holder who has realisation)

Malcolm wrote:

He is a rinpoche because his students call him that. He is not a tulku, so far as I know.

Khenpo is equivalent to basic Geshe degree. He did graduate from Shri Simha college at Dzogchen monastery. Generally, people with title "khenpo" are considered qualified teachers. YMMV. Not all lineage holders are awakened bodhisattvas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 28th, 2022 at 12:21 AM

Title: Re: Crisis of a Faith, returning to dharma, and new directions.

Content:

Nilasarasvati said:

3. Are there any lineage holders of the Rime schools who are well-educated in Western philosophy as well as the monastic curriculum? The dearth of such overlap is really sad--especially after having studied Deleuze/Guattari, Hegel, Spinoza, and even classical thinkers like Zeno, the more convinced I am that basically our Tibetan teachers have NO idea that there really are some ideas OUTSIDE of Medieval India that converse incredibly well with the Dharma.

Malcolm wrote:

This is not important. That said, Hume's Inquiry and Adorno's Negative Dialectics stand out as anti-foundationalist trends in Western Phil. F*ck Hegel. Spinoza is an eternalist. Nomadology is fun, but irrelevant to Dharma, as is 1000 Plateaus, etc., in general.

Nāgārjuna had no idea about Zeno, Plato, or Aristotle, and had no need to. Madhyamaka rulez ok.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 28th, 2022 at 12:42 AM

Title: Re: H.E. Dzogchen Khenpo Choga Rinpoche

Content:

heart said:

Yes, ChNNR often mentioned it in his teachings as well.

Sādhaka said:

Although he never mentioned him by name, as far as I'm aware anyway; and I have heard the story a few times.

He just referred to him and his entourage as elegant Nyingma Khenpos or something like that.

Malcolm wrote:

It's well known who the participants were. Erik PK was there.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 28th, 2022 at 1:10 AM

Title: Re: H.E. Dzogchen Khenpo Choga Rinpoche

Content:

heart said:

I am not sure, in the story I heard it was only Tulku Urgyens german translator Andreas who was there.

Malcolm wrote:

Ah, yes, I knew one of the translators was there. That combined with the fact that Andreas worked with Kheno Choga...

Anyway, ChNN stumped them on the question of which buddha came before Śākyamuni who taught Dzogchen, and chided them for not knowing their own history. They had come to confront ChNN over their misconception that ChNN claimed Dzogchen originally came from Bon.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 28th, 2022 at 2:16 AM

Title: Re: Crisis of a Faith, returning to dharma, and new directions.

Content:

Nilasarasvati said:

also, in general, I think it's against the tantric view to believe that:

Bodhisattvas only appeared in Dharmic countries. That the enlightened activities of the conquerors did not manifest in the poetry of heathen Persians or the films of Fellini or the rituals of the Mayans. That no flicker of liberation ever occurred outside of the scope of certain orthodox locations and times. That there is a monopoly on enlightenment.

Malcolm wrote:

Take it up with the Buddha:

"In whatsoever Dhamma and Discipline, Subhadda, there is not found the Noble Eightfold Path, neither is there found a true ascetic of the first, second, third, or fourth degree of saintliness. But in whatsoever Dhamma and Discipline there is found the Noble Eightfold Path, there is found a true ascetic of the first, second, third, and fourth degrees of saintliness.[54] Now in this Dhamma and Discipline, Subhadda, is found the Noble Eightfold Path; and in it alone are also found true ascetics of the first, second, third, and fourth degrees of saintliness. Devoid of true ascetics are the systems of other teachers. But if, Subhadda, the bhikkhus live righteously, the world will not be destitute of arahats."

<https://www.accesstoinight.org/tipitaka/dn/dn.16.1-6.vaji.html>

The eightfold path begins, necessarily, with right view.

And, no, there is no other means to overcome and destroy afflictions outside of Buddhadharma. It seems you could work a bit more on contemplating the eight freedoms and ten endowments that make up a precious human birth.

There is no "tantric" view of this. Some people interpret the samaya admonition not to criticize the Hinayāna as a blanket prohibition against critiquing any religion at all. Slagging off someone's religion out of spite is wrong, but offering criticisms of idiots like Hegel and so on, no problem.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 28th, 2022 at 8:30 AM

Title: Re: Crisis of a Faith, returning to dharma, and new directions.

Content:

Nilasarasvati said:

There's an anecdote where H.H. Dalai Lama (which I've never seen in print but heard and sounds credible) went to the main shrine to the Virgin De Guadalupe early in the morning before leaving Mexico city one year. He prayed there, mentioned something obliquely about her being a form of Tara.

Malcolm wrote:

Here is another HHDL anecdote for you, 2005 Tucson, AZ, "When my Christian friends ask me about emptiness, I tell them it is none of their business."

In general, the Trad Buddhist view is that anything good in other religions is a result of bodhisattva activity, and of course, given rebirth, there is no doubt that bodhisattvas exist everywhere, even if they are, in that incarnation, not aware of their status as bodhisattvas.

Nevertheless, we are talking about liberation from the kleshas that cause the actions which result in birth in samsara. Don't know about you, but I don't spend much time reading things which don't bear directly on this issue, much less speculate about them. YMMV.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 28th, 2022 at 8:40 AM

Title: Re: Crisis of a Faith, returning to dharma, and new directions.

Content:

Nilasarasvati said:

This is exactly what bothers me. This general notion that nothing worthwhile or relevant to dharma has happened since Nalanda in the entire rest of the planet's intellectual life, and that in general we are declining and not improving our ability to successfully describe and predict the reality we live in. That we can broad strokes label everything besides Madhyamika as Nihilistic or Eternalist. And this general idea that Pramana as it was conceived in classical India is the height of human reasoning. It's absurd. All I wish was that there was more conversation between, and actual debate and discourse, and that our buddhist traditions weren't essentially frozen in the 9th century or something.

Malcolm wrote:

It really depends on where your interests lie. Pramana is not liberative. It concerns discerning veridical cognitions from false cognitions, conventionally speaking. One can analyze conventional phenomena endlessly, and still never ever come close to the taste of liberation. There is no doubt that modern logic is much more sophisticated than Dharmakirti's seven treatises. So what? We don't need pramana to attain liberation (hence Nagarjuna's dismissal of pramana). It's all a question of domain: transcendent or mundane. Buddhadharma concerns the former, and to the extent it is worthwhile and beneficial, can employ the latter, for example, pramana, medicine, grammar, and so on. But we should not confuse these two domains.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 29th, 2022 at 1:02 AM

Title: Re: Crisis of a Faith, returning to dharma, and new directions.

Content:

Nilasarasvati said:

For one example;

I am trying to communicate a broad and general qualm with chavinism and exclusionary/fundamentalist attitudes in our traditions.

Malcolm wrote:

The ripening of karma excludes people from our traditions. One either has the gathered the roots of virtue to even hear the name "Buddha" or one has not. It is not question of fundamentalist attitudes. All sentient beings have the potential to awaken. Very few sentient beings meet the proper set of conditions, the eight freedoms and ten endowments, so that becomes a real possibility for them in this lifetime. This is the difference between natural gotra, which all sentient beings possess, and developed gotra, which exists only in those who have undertaken to follow the bodhisattva path in some lifetime or another. Since below the 7th bhumi, bodhisattvas lose their awakening entirely in every birth, it is very possible there are many beings in many dimensions who pursue this or that religious career, notable primarily for their compassion. But, in absence of the Buddhadharma, they certainly cannot directly lead people to liberation, the best they can do is encourage people to behave virtuously. The Jataka tales exemplify this.

Nilasarasvati said:

I am trying to articulate that there is worth and merit of all kinds across cultures.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. Of course.

Nilasarasvati said:

And instead of any acknowledgment that or engaging with my meaning, people have seized on very minute particular about my statement that Pramana, for example, could be improved upon. Worthwhile points! Very valid! Missing the forest, though.

Malcolm wrote:

Why bother, unless it is of interest to you. You have not really examined why epistemology was taken up in Buddhism, where it was rejected by Nāgārjuna. The answer is pretty simple: epistemology was taken up with a view to convince tīrthikas that the Buddha was omniscient with respect to liberation without recourse to any of our own scriptures. I am not sure that is a worthwhile goal to pursue with Post-Quine logic.

There really isn't anything Western philosophy can add to Buddhadharma, other than perhaps a more clearly articulated theory of social justice, ala Rawls, etc. But these are mundane considerations, as I mentioned above, more in line with what we call Nitiśāstras, treatises on governance. Why would Buddhādharma need such a theory articulated? Because for most of its history, Buddhism has flourished in the context of absolute monarchies. Therefore, deeply considered ethical treatises which considered things from the point of view of multiple stakeholders other than kings and aristocrats became more important. And also, there were in India manuals on statecraft like Kautilya's Arthśāstra. Buddhism has never confronted democracy, so Buddhists are still working out how democracy and Buddhism will interact, etc. Therefore, if there is philosophical work to be done, it is in this area, but definitely not when it comes to the path or liberation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 29th, 2022 at 4:06 AM

Title: Re: U.S. big news: Roe v. Wade overturned

Content:

justsit said:

So if the shit hits the fan, where's the smart money going?

As a trans person I'm sitting in the crosshairs and need to make a plan. Take the cash and run?

Malcolm wrote:

Just go to Canada.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 30th, 2022 at 12:02 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen Lungs this July 2022 (Precious Reading Transmissions From Khen Namdrol Rinpoche)

Content:

pemachophel said:

Ngo-tro, pointing out, is not wang-kur, empowerment.

Passing By said:

Thank you, then what about the Pudri Rekphung empowerment? Does that count as a Nyingthik empowerment?

Malcolm wrote:

You need to ask Lerab Ling.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 30th, 2022 at 10:30 PM

Title: Re: U.S. big news: Roe v. Wade overturned

Content:

Nemo said:

Perhaps liberal democracy itself is the problem. It has never produced the outcomes it promises in over 200 years.

Malcolm wrote:

Neither have any of the other systems we humans have tried in the past 200 years: absolute monarchy, fascism, and communism.

But liberal democracy has a better track record on delivering net gains than the other three systems.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 30th, 2022 at 11:32 PM

Title: Re: Dzogchen Lungs this July 2022 (Precious Reading Transmissions From Khen Namdrol Rinpoche)

Content:

ninespokes said:

For Lama Pema Chophel and any one else who might know, when you say you will know when you've received a Dzogchen empowerment, do you mean know experientially on the spot, or know because you will be informed that that is what you will receive?

Malcolm wrote:

Direct introduction is a rig pa'i rtsal dbang, but there are many kinds, not only one.

However, not all teachers will accept this as sufficient, this is why you must ask the organizers if it is sufficient. Some teachers consider a direct introduction to only apply to trekchod, not thogal. I am quite certain (since he is my teacher) that Khenpo Namdrol only wants people who have received empowerments like any of the four Nyinthig empowerments, the empowerments of the Gongpa Zangthal, Thigle Gyacan, Chetsun Nyinthig, the Rig pa'i rtsal dbang from Ye she Bla ma, and so on. Basically, empowerments that are based on the man ngag sde tantras.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 1st, 2022 at 2:38 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen Lungs this July 2022 (Precious Reading Transmissions From Khen Namdrol Rinpoche)

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

However, not all teachers will accept this as sufficient, this is why you must ask the organizers if it is sufficient. Some teachers consider a direct introduction to only apply to trekchod, not thogal. I am quite certain (since he is my teacher) that Khenpo Namdrol only wants people who have received empowerments like any of the four Nyinthig empowerments, the empowerments of the Gongpa Zangthal, Thigle Gyacan, Chetsun Nyinthig, the Rig pa'i rtsal dbang from Ye she Bla ma, and so on. Basically, empowerments that are based on the man ngag sde tantras.

czd said:

Thank you for clarifying what will be required for this lung. We appreciate your expertise, as a newcomer this is can be confusing.

Sorry if this is a bit off topic, but I think this would help a number of us here. In a recent retreat others have mentioned in this thread, poti wang + ngo trod was given (confirmed by the organization). I clearly remember the translator using the words "extremely unelaborate empowerment" during the wang. Is it that a variation of the poti wang?

Malcolm wrote:

I wasn't there, so cannot comment.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 1st, 2022 at 2:53 AM

Title: Re: When we say "enlightenment in one lifetime"...

Content:

Nalanda said:

Is that doctrinally referring to the same complete enlightenment of a samyaksambuddha?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Nalanda said:

And if it is, what makes it so powerful/fast that the perfection/paramitas in the Greater Vehicle seem to take a long time?

Malcolm wrote:

Special methods.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 1st, 2022 at 10:59 PM

Title: Re: Hope

Content:

KristenM said:

I'm curious about the concept of "hope" in Buddhism. I recall hearing a negative-sounding person ask Khenpo Tsultrim Gyatso about some pessimistic view on life and KTG replied, "We must always have hope."

Is there a word for "Hope" in Buddhism or Tibetan or Buddhadharma?

Malcolm wrote:

Re ba in Tibetan, āśā in Sanskrit.

The point of the dharma is to go beyond hope and fear.

Aspirations, smon lam, pranidhana, on the other hand, are not about hope. They are an altruistic wish for the betterment of everyone. There is also of course the sentiment that everyone's hopes are fulfilled, because that is simply kindhearted.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 1st, 2022 at 11:04 PM

Title: Re: Dzogchen Lungs this July 2022 (Precious Reading Transmissions From Khen Namdrol Rinpoche)

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The question everyone must ask themselves, is this: "I am interested mainly in the book or the person?" If the answer is the former, then even if one has the requisite transmissions, one should not attend. If the answer is the former, than one should attend by all means possible. So if you are not sure, contact the organizers and ask them.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 1st, 2022 at 11:08 PM

Title: Re: U.S. big news: Roe v. Wade overturned

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

We are so f*cked:

<https://www.scotusblog.com/case-files/cases/moore-v-harper-2/>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 2nd, 2022 at 6:17 AM

Title: Evolution

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

[Mod note:] Because the quoted person didn't respond to this initial question by Malcolm, but others couldn't resist discussing the topic of evolution, therefore a brand-new thread is being granted here just for this matter. The topic was split from here: <https://www.dharmawheel.net/viewtopic.php?p=633749#p633749>

Lavender-Thief said:

Buddhism is said quite often to be non-dogmatic.

But when reading about the 'ten fetters', I discovered the second one, which is 'vicikitsa':

<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Vicikitsa>

Translated as 'doubt' or 'indecision' about the 4 noble truths & dependent origination.

But shouldn't buddhist teachings be able to put in doubt, in order to be considered non-dogmatic?

Malcolm wrote:

Do you doubt evolution?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 2nd, 2022 at 6:21 AM

Title: Re: Did Sam Harris recognize the nature of the mind?

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I was briefly on some forum years ago where there were a bunch of Sam Harris follower lamenting that they couldn't find a "secular" Dzogchen or Mahamudra teacher.

Virgo said:

This is why I don't think he has realized the nature of mind. If he had, he wouldn't be ambiguous about whether consciousness is simply an emergent principle of the brain or not.

Vajrasambhava said:

Exactly, that's right the point i don't understand.

I really don't know how can the view of a materialist Dzogchen practitioner be like.

Malcolm wrote:

They can relax a little bit in this life, even if they will not attain liberation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 2nd, 2022 at 8:23 AM

Title: Re: Did Sam Harris recognize the nature of the mind?

Content:

Sādhaka said:

What about avici though?

Malcolm wrote:

Avici is Akanistha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 2nd, 2022 at 9:06 AM

Title: Re: Evolution

Content:

Sādhaka said:

I don't doubt evolution; I just doubt how it is usually presented to us

Malcolm wrote:

It's mathematical.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 2nd, 2022 at 9:57 PM

Title: Re: Nyingma Herukas and their depiction

Content:

videodhara said:

Have a question about it actually: Does this proliferation have more to do with the diversity of tantras in India that a Padmasambhava brought to Tibet, or with the prevalence of mind-to-mind, visionary transmissions in the Nyingma terms tradition?

Kai lord said:

Looking at Nyingma Gyubum which said to contain only texts from kama lineages and very little from the termas (don't know how true that is). They are said to be around like "The Hundred Thousand Tantras" Some divide Nyingma Gyubum into the following categories:

10 volumes of Ati Yoga

3 volumes of Anu Yoga

6 volumes of the tantra Section of Mahayoga

13 volumes of the sadhana Section of Mahayoga

1 volume of protector tantras

3 volumes of catalogues and historical background

Don't know about you but it looks to me that Kama's volumes is already a vast ocean of Dharma.

Malcolm wrote:

'bum here just means "volumes."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 4th, 2022 at 6:16 AM

Title: Re: Sudden Awakening

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Sudden awakening means that you suddenly realize you were never not a Buddha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 4th, 2022 at 11:03 AM

Title: Re: What Does Jim Valby Mean by "Pure Perfect Presence"

Content:

Leaves of Light said:

Compounding the matter further, isn't it the case that Adriano Clemente used the term "pure presence" to translate "rigpa"?

Malcolm wrote:

He uses the term "instant presence" when the term rigpa is referring to a moment of unfabricated consciousness, and rigpa when term is referring to one's knowledge of the basis.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 4th, 2022 at 11:07 AM

Title: Re: No Translation of Any Chapters of the Treasure of the Supreme Vehicle by Longchenpa

Content:

Leaves of Light said:

With Longchenpa's Seven Treasuries, some or all of all of them have been translated into English with the glaring and sole exception of arguably the key text of the set, namely the Treasure of the Supreme Vehicle (Tib. རེག་མཚོག་མཛོད་, Tekchok Dzö, Wyl. theg mchog mdzod). Given that all of the "17 Tantras" have been translated into English at least once, and Longchenpa's exegesis on them in his Treasure/Treasury of the Supreme Vehicle is indispensable for comprehending them, it's a great shame that the latter hasn't been translated, not even the first chapter or chapters. Does anyone know how this situation transpired and if there is any prospect of it being remedied?

Malcolm wrote:

There is little point in translating it, until all the available commentariat sources he relied upon have been translated first, since he cribs large sections of these materials without attribution.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 4th, 2022 at 8:51 PM

Title: Re: No Translation of Any Chapters of the Treasure of the Supreme Vehicle by Longchenpa

Content:

Leaves of Light said:

Which commentaries are they, by whom?

Malcolm wrote:

There are six such commentaries that survive, plus some ancillary texts, two of which I have translated and published through wisdom.

Leaves of Light said:

And wouldn't it still be feasible to get some value out of the next notwithstanding that? For example, even the names of the first three chapters/sections quoted by Rigpawiki surely suggest that therein are contained precious and invaluable Dharma teachings helpful for general understanding of the Dharma and Dzogchen pith instruction transmission tradition in particular:

1. How the teacher (does this refer to Garab Dorje or Shakyamuni Buddha?) came into this world system.
2. An explanation of world environments and the beings therein.
3. The spread of the Dharma.

Even the first chapter alone must contain a wealth of invaluable doctrinal treasures, even if there are unattributed secondary sources included by the author Longchenpa which might make it harder to understand.

Malcolm wrote:

All of this information comes from the Vima Nyinthig. And can be found in many places in English already, such as Dudjom big red book. Of course the Thegchok Dzod is important, but it requires knowledge and expertise that is quite rare for the reason I mentioned above.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 4th, 2022 at 8:54 PM

Title: Re: What Does Jim Valby Mean by "Pure Perfect Presence"

Content:

Leaves of Light said:

Compounding the matter further, isn't it the case that Adriano Clemente used the term "pure presence" to translate "rigpa"?

Malcolm wrote:

He uses the term "instant presence" when the term rigpa is referring to a moment of unfabricated consciousness, and rigpa when term is referring to one's knowledge of the basis.

Leaves of Light said:

Then could it be that Jim Valby has seized on this use of the word "presence" in a general Dzogchen context and shoehorned it onto "byang chub sems"? Which Adriano Clemente I think translated as "pure and total consciousness". It makes it seem like for a certain interpretation of things, "sems" and "rigpa" are assumed to more or less refer to the same thing, which can't be true, even in terms of ultimate "byang chub sems". Or is the implication from this translation convention where both have ended up by being translated as "presence", that "sems" and "rigpa" are in Dzogchen to be thought of as the same thing?

Malcolm wrote:

Not exactly, but you need to have been a student of ChNN to really understand the difference: the first term refers to the basis. The second, one's knowledge of the former.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 4th, 2022 at 9:31 PM

Title: Re: Are trees sentient?

Content:

Leaves of Light said:

This is of course only one viewpoint.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. And the fact remains that plant life, like all life, refines the five elements, demonstrates community, communication, interaction, altruistic behavior across species, as well as hostility, etc. One can claim it is all mechanistic, and insentient, but one can make the same argument about two and four-legged beings, i.e. that everything we do and are is merely a function of chemical interactions.

The rebirth argument is not particularly convincing. So, in the end, Buddhists who insist on plantlife insentience are really just resting their arguments on passages from texts. That's fine, but then, how does one pick and choose? Meru is false, but plant insentience is true?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 4th, 2022 at 9:54 PM

Title: Re: Are trees sentient?

Content:

Vajrasambhava said:

I understood your points. Thank you.

I think the problem is not to establish if this or that animal or cell is sentient or not. The problem is, if plants are sentient, it means that a continuum can be reborn as a plant,

Malcolm wrote:

Unless plant intelligence operates according to principles which are alien to what we observe in animal intelligence. In other words, plants may be intelligent, but in a fashion distinct from the way we are intelligent, with different senses, different modes of communication, reproduction, memory, and so on. And, should this be the case, karma and so on would be irrelevant to plant intelligence, because of its utter difference.

Read Paul Stamets.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 5th, 2022 at 1:45 AM

Title: Re: Are trees sentient?

Content:

DNS said:

Also, logistically, how would that work? With an animal (or human), it's easy to see the being and where the continuum 'went' to. But with a plant, what part 'receives' this continuum? If you cut off a branch of a shrub or some other plant, the rest of the plant is still alive, in fact you can make another plant from the part you cut off.

Malcolm wrote:

The same is true of humans (cloning), etc. The term "continuum" is a convention for a series of moments that observe morphological regularity, that's all. But they too have no absolute identity.

It is one thing to say a rock, which has no observable respiratory or metabolic functions, is insentient. It's a little more difficult to say thus of plants and so on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 5th, 2022 at 9:42 AM

Title: Re: No Translation of Any Chapters of the Treasure of the Supreme Vehicle by Longchenpa

Content:

Leaves of Light said:

Which commentaries are they, by whom?

Malcolm wrote:

There are six such commentaries that survive, plus some ancillary texts, two of which I have translated and published through wisdom.

Leaves of Light said:

Would you be willing to share the names of the translated texts? Is it "Buddhahood in This Life"?

And wouldn't it still be feasible to get some value out of the next notwithstanding that? For example, even the names of the first three chapters/sections quoted by Rigpawiki surely suggest that therein are contained precious and invaluable Dharma teachings helpful for general understanding of the Dharma and Dzogchen pith instruction transmission tradition in particular:

1. How the teacher (does this refer to Garab Dorje or Shakyamuni Buddha?) came into this world system.
2. An explanation of world environments and the beings therein.
3. The spread of the Dharma.

Even the first chapter alone must contain a wealth of invaluable doctrinal treasures, even if there are unattributed secondary sources included by the author Longchenpa which might make it harder to understand.

Malcolm wrote:

All of this information comes from the Vima Nyingthig. And can be found in many places in English already, such as Dudjom big red book. Of course the Thegchok Dzod is important, but it requires knowledge and expertise that is quite rare for the reason I mentioned above.

Leaves of Light said:

It would be still be good to read the account of it in Longchenpa's own words. Also, isn't the rare knowledge and expertise required to study the Thegchok Dzod, very much the same as that required to make use of the 17 Tantras themselves? Since the 17 Tantras have all been translated into English, some of them by multiple hands, and the Thegchok Dzod is apparently the premier compiled commentary on them, then it seems logical that it would also be available to the same students as those of the 17 Tantras. Especially since all the other six treasuries of Longchenpa have by and large, with the exception of the Wish-Fulfilling Treasury or Yishyin Dzod, been translated and published.

Malcolm wrote:

In my opinion, translating these Longchenpa texts, as well as the other translations of the seventeen tantras, including my own translations of the rang shar and rang grol have been done backwards. But now, with the translations of the commentaries of the Tantra Without Syllables and the Blazing Lamp we are headed in the right direction.

The translations of the seventeen tantras absent their available commentaries are of limited value.

For example, nearly every line of the first chapter of the six dimensions tantra refers to specific practice, which is not apparent from the root text. Without the commentary one simply cannot understand the real meaning of the text. The same applies to the rest of the seventeen tantras

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 5th, 2022 at 10:42 PM

Title: Re: No Translation of Any Chapters of the Treasure of the Supreme Vehicle by Longchenpa

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The translations of the seventeen tantras absent their available commentaries are of limited value.

For example, nearly every line of the first chapter of the six dimensions tantra refers to specific practice, which is not apparent from the root text. Without the commentary one simply cannot understand the real meaning of the text. The same applies to the rest of the seventeen tantras

Leaves of Light said:

Couldn't that be an argument in favor of a text like the Thekchok Dzöd being made available, since it presumably offers some practical and scholastic guidance to that class of literature? Especially since for better or for worse, the 17 Tantras are available in English.

Malcolm wrote:

There is merit to a systematic project of translating the basic commentaries before the theg mchog mdzod. The TCD is invaluable for Longchenpa's insights into the 17 tantras, but without Vimalamitra's commentaries, much of what is alluded to in Longchenpa's corpus remains obscure, and this is obvious in all the 7 treasures that have thus far been translated. For example, in order to elucidate points in the Tshig don mdzod, Khenpo Namdrol frequently refers to these commentaries. So as a matter of principle, I think my approach is more sound.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 5th, 2022 at 10:49 PM

Title: Re: Dzogchen Lungs this July 2022 (Precious Reading Transmissions From Khen Namdrol Rinpoche)

Content:

Passing By said:

Thanks for the clarification. Do you know who teaches Yangzab as their main teaching?

Malcolm wrote:

The Yangzab is a branch of the Khandro Nyingthig.

Most of the Yangzab is maha and anuyoga practices. Some people assert that Taking the Five Poisons as the Path is trekcho, but it is not, it is a completion stage practice of anuyoga. There is another text in Yangzab, which in a brief way covers the main path of trekcho and thogal.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 7th, 2022 at 1:14 AM

Title: Re: Current state of the Democratic party

Content:

Queequeg said:

its going to have to include working class whites, too.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, but they have to stop with being racists as f*ck, which your post illustrates is the main problem with working class whites these days—they are racist as f*ck, and always have been, since the beginning of the labor movement in this country.

Queequeg said:

For this and other reasons, Negroes, who have been shut out, or believed they had been shut out, of employment by the unions, have been in the past very willing strike-breakers. It is another illustration of the way in which prejudice works, also, that the strikers seemed to consider it a much greater crime for a Negro, who had been denied an opportunity to work at his trade, to take the place of a striking employee than it was for a white man to do the same thing. Not only have Negro strike-breakers been savagely beaten and even murdered by strikers or their sympathizers, but in some instances every Negro, no matter what his occupation, who lived in the vicinity of the strike has found himself in danger.

Another reason why Negroes are prejudiced against the unions is that, during the past few years, several attempts have been made by the members of labor unions which do not admit Negroes to membership, to secure the discharge of Negroes employed in their trades. For example, in March, 1911, the white firemen on the Queen and Crescent Railway struck as the result of a controversy over the Negro firemen employed by the road. The white firemen, according to the press reports, wanted the Negro firemen assigned to the poorest runs. Another report stated that an effort was made to compel the railway company to get rid of the Negro firemen altogether.

Malcolm wrote:

Booker T. Washington, 1913

<https://www.theatlantic.com/magazine/archive/1913/06/the-negro-and-the-labor-unions/529524/>

Let's not get started on the Chinese and the Japanese and the Mexicans and last, but not least, the Native Americans, who largely built NYC skyscrapers since they had no fear of heights.

The fact is that that white "working class" are mostly a bunch of petite bourgeois MFrs these days and have always been racists.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 7th, 2022 at 2:56 AM

Title: Re: Crisis of a Faith, returning to dharma, and new directions.

Content:

tobes said:

Traleg was one of my main teachers; he encouraged me to study western philosophy alongside doing ngondro etc. He was quite a beautiful, understated scholar, and his work on Asanga has little droplets of Husserl in it. Being able to converse across cultures, in a genuine and open way - whilst not diluting one's own standpoint, is extremely powerful and enriching.

Malcolm wrote:

My father was a professor of philosophy. He worked in the same department as Jay Garfield. We discussed these issues frequently. At base, we can discover that modes of argument might be the similar. However, there is a disconnect between what western philosophers do, and the aims of Madhyamaka or Abhidharma, and this is where conversations between me and my dad consistently broke down.

Johnny Dangerous said:

I think the point here is that some people might benefit from the clarification that conversations like these provide. One doesn't need to be in full agreement with other people to gain something in trying to understand them.

Malcolm wrote:

In Buddhadharma, we study tenets to reduce concepts, not to enjoy their beauty of expression.

Modern Western Philosophy, now largely divorced from soteriological concerns, is a beautiful edifice to the conceptual mind, but its meaning is coarse and shallow.

As I mentioned above, the one place Western Phil might be able to add something to Buddhadharma is a more finely articulated theory of social justice, given that no such theory was ever enunciated in the days when all rulers were absolute rulers. Buddhists are discovering there are deficits in Buddhist discourse around social justice and so on, because the migration of Buddhism to democracies is still less than a hundred years old.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 7th, 2022 at 3:02 AM

Title: Re: Mahayana vs Theravada

Content:

Aemilius said:

The discussion so far largely refuses to address the main question, i.e. is Dzogchen or Tantra aiming at individual liberation (from the wheel of becoming), or are they prepared and willing take rebirth in samsara 1 000 000 000 times or more, if it is necessary for the liberation other beings?

Malcolm wrote:

The idea is to become a Buddha as fast as possible in order to reside in nonabiding nirvana in order to assist all sentient beings achieve buddhahood until samsara has been emptied from the bottom.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 7th, 2022 at 3:40 AM

Title: Re: Crisis of a Faith, returning to dharma, and new directions.

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Similarly, it's good to know the worldview and ideas of someone like Daniel Dennett. While I think he is wrong, his view lays out a lot of assumptions underneath materialism that a good portion of modern societies share. So, knowing the basic tenets of modern day nihilists and/or eternalists has a functional value, at least to me, especially as regards their views on consciousness, theories of mind, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

That was covered in eliminating concepts. We don't need to read Dennet, however, since the materialists have been with us for a long time, known in Ancient India as carvakas/lokyatis.

But of course, if one like to read Dennet, why not?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 7th, 2022 at 4:09 AM

Title: Re: What Does Jim Valby Mean by "Pure Perfect Presence"

Content:

stoneinfofocus said:

The dang rolpa tsal schema is a unique feature of Namkhai Norbu's system, so youre not going to find it in the tantra or commentaries. The more typical schema is tsal, rolpa, bodhicitta as explained by Longchenpa is his Treasuries.

Malcolm wrote:

It is important to understand that Longchenpa's byang chub sems, rtsal, and rol pa scheme is explained in order clarify that Dzogchen does not reject outer objects (rol pa). Some people in Tibet took the "sems" part to be something resembling Yogacāra idealism.

ChNN's scheme is related to the three kāyas, so completely different in meaning.

To this we can add the explanation of byang chub sems found in Kunzang Dorje's 12th century text, the Vajra Bridge (klong sde). Byang refers to purity, that's obvious. But he states very clearly:

Comprehension means (chub pa) means [6/b] 1) the comprehensions imbued with the five poisons when there is ignorance or delusion about the reality of the mind essence and 2) it means the comprehension imbued with the five pristine consciousnesses when there is knowledge and realization of that reality.

One point that the gloss "perfect" does not reach as a translation is the the definition of chub pa as understanding or realization (rtogs pa).

sems is explained as follows:

Next, because so-called “mind” (sems) is not the mind, it is the mind essence (sems nyid). The temporary concepts of mental processing arise from conditions and perish because of conditions. Being conditioned and relative, since [the mind] cannot endure and are transformed by conditions, [mind] is not ultimate.

The mind essence (sems nyid) has always been unconditioned. The meaning of not being destroyed by conditions and never changing in the three times is the reality that is luminous and nonconceptual.

Dorje Gyaltsen's 13th century commentary on the Cuckoo of Vidyā gives the following definitions:

The meaning: “Purity [byang]” means all phenomena that are the primal nature (rang bzhin, prakṛti) of delusion have never been established in the core of the true state, bodhicitta [byang chub sems]. Also there is no purifying antidote, its intrinsic essence beyond thought and expression is pure.

However all the phenomena of samsara and nirvana or the universe and beings appear, they are one in bodhicitta through the principle of being free from departing and gathering, and are inseparable. Since those are free from partiality, they are comprehended (chub) to be pure.

That “Mind of” [kyi sems] is the unmixed totally complete essence, the primal nature of the eight consciousnesses endowed with a luminous (‘od gsal) identity which inherently never wavers into any extreme at all, free from all extremes, naturally pure and unwavering in the three times.

Now then, if it is asked “Is it not impossible for such a pure primal nature to appear to the mind of a person?” It is possible, it is called “vidyā” (rig pa). The vidyā of migrating beings itself appears as the mental consciousness in terms of apprehending subjects and apprehended objects. When vidyā manifests its own primal nature, the mental consciousness manifests as self-originated wisdom, and then the pure basis of the mental consciousness (free from the root of apprehending subject and apprehended objects) bring samsara to an end. The pristine consciousness (ye shes, jñāna) of one’s vidyā (without root or leaf) — naturally perfected as it totally encompasses and subsumes everything — is the true state [de kho na nyid, tattva].

Thus, another way to translate byang chub sems is "The mind essence of the comprehension of purity."

This also why we distinguish byang chub sems and rig pa. The former is the object of the latter.

This should clear up some questions and cause more.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 7th, 2022 at 5:08 AM

Title: Re: Sakya Ghantapada Tradition?

Content:

KonchogUrgyenNyima said:

Hello all,

Is my understanding correct that Ghantapa's Chakrasamvara made it into the Sakya tradition?

If this is indeed the case, I'm looking for general information on how exactly this tradition was transmitted into the Sakya lineages.

Bonus points for anyone who can mention any Rime Sakya connections.

Was empowered for the tradition by kagyu, but my first teachers were Rime Sakyapas and I'm just looking for any non-Samaya breaking info that will help me deepen my understanding.

Dm me personally with anything that might be samaya sensitive.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, from Mal Lotsawa to Sachen Kunga Nyingpo. My teacher, Khenpo Migmar, is a specialist in this system.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 7th, 2022 at 6:26 AM

Title: Re: Sakya Ghantapada Tradition?

Content:

KonchogUrgyenNyima said:

Hello all,

Is my understanding correct that Ghantapa's Chakrasamvara made it into the Sakya tradition?

If this is indeed the case, I'm looking for general information on how exactly this tradition was transmitted into the Sakya lineages.

Bonus points for anyone who can mention any Rime Sakya connections.

Was empowered for the tradition by kagyu, but my first teachers were Rime Sakyapas and I'm just looking for any non-Samaya breaking info that will help me deepen my understanding.

Dm me personally with anything that might be samaya sensitive.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, from Mal Lotsawa to Sachen Kunga Nyingpo. My teacher, Khenpo Migmar, is a specialist in this system.

KonchogUrgyenNyima said:

Thanks Malcolm. Is this the five deity system?

Malcolm wrote:

Both five deity and body mandala sadhanas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 7th, 2022 at 6:29 AM

Title: Re: Sakya Ghantapada Tradition?

Content:

KonchogUrgyenNyima said:

Hello all,

Is my understanding correct that Ghantapa's Chakrasamvara made it into the Sakya tradition?

If this is indeed the case, I'm looking for general information on how exactly this tradition was transmitted into the Sakya lineages.

Kai lord said:

Tilopa ==> Naropa ==> Two Pamtingpa brothers ==> Sherab Tseg ==> Mal Lotsawa ==> Five lords of Sakyapa

Malcolm wrote:

And a few before Tilopa, starting with Ghantapada.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 7th, 2022 at 7:37 AM

Title: Re: Sakya Ghantapada Tradition?

Content:

Konchog1 said:

Might be the wrong thread but what's the difference between Luipa and Ghantapa anyway? They seem almost identical. Is it just the separate body mandala empowerment?

Malcolm wrote:

Luipa system emphasizes creation stage. Ghantapada system emphasizes completion stage. Creation in the former is gradual, instant in the latter.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 7th, 2022 at 10:13 AM

Title: Re: Crisis of a Faith, returning to dharma, and new directions.

Content:

tobes said:

Traleg was one of my main teachers; he encouraged me to study western philosophy alongside doing ngondro etc. He was quite a beautiful, understated scholar, and his work on Asanga has little droplets of Husserl in it. Being able to converse across cultures, in a genuine and open way - whilst not diluting one's own standpoint, is extremely powerful and enriching.

Malcolm wrote:

My father was a professor of philosophy. He worked in the same department as Jay Garfield. We discussed these issues frequently. At base, we can discover that modes of argument might be the similar. However, there is a disconnect between what western philosophers do, and the aims of Madhyamaka or Abhidharma, and this is where conversations between me and my dad consistently broke down.

tobes said:

I think you're universalizing what kind of philosopher your dad was, and maybe what kind of department he was in, with the incredibly diverse range of traditions we tend to call western (even this point is questionable, if you consider the relation between the Bactrian Kingdom India and some ancient Greek schools).

Malcolm wrote:

I am referring to modern academy as it exists in most Anglo-American schools. The point of mentioning Garfield was that Smith's program is actually incredibly diverse. But I have had similar breakdowns with Jay, Hubbard, etc., because they are not interested in liberation per se, but rather arguments and ideas. That's what they are paid for, and they are quite expert in their fields.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 7th, 2022 at 10:24 AM

Title: Re: Crisis of a Faith, returning to dharma, and new directions.

Content:

tobes said:

I don't like the idea being propounded on this thread that western philosophy is always aimed at mere 'speculation' or 'mere intellectualizing'.

It can of course fall into such things. But so can Buddhism. In both cases, this says something about the agent doing Buddhism or philosophy, but not necessarily very much about what Buddhism or philosophy actually are.

Philosophy generally aims at truth (most contemporary philosophers I have met have this as an innate motivation, and it is a noble one). It tries to resolve intractable problems that other disciplines can't or won't try to resolve - so it is indeed pragmatic too. It has given birth to just about every other major discipline of knowledge - most of which we rely upon to fly our planes and structure our societies - so there is plenty of proof in the pudding that philosophy has not remained mere abstract theory.

So, you know, a bit of credit where it's due.

Malcolm wrote:

The aim of Buddhadharma is liberation, it presupposes a number of things foreign to what we call modern philosophy in the West. Indeed, "philosophy" as a program does not even exist in Buddhadharma. Buddhadharma does not aim for "truth for truths sake," as conceived by westerners, an abstract principle or ideal, since it is not attainable conceptually, from a Buddhist pov.

You are conflating so called "natural philosophy," which eventually became "science" with what we today understand as philosophy., which has largely abandoned the search for first principles.

It does not serve our purposes here to make anachronistic claims.

But all of this is really outside the scope of Buddhadharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 7th, 2022 at 10:29 AM

Title: Re: Are trees sentient?

Content:

Leaves of Light said:

Animal experimentation for human edification or profit has always been highly problematic.

Malcolm wrote:

Especially when it contradicts our deeply held scriptural bias. Then we want to do Catholic Church tries Galileo 2.0

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 7th, 2022 at 7:32 PM

Title: Re: Are trees sentient?

Content:

Vajrasambhava said:

I didn't mean rebirth is caused by chance, i meant the worm has the ability to choose to create a brain or not by chance. Moreover, this process can be influenced chimically by scientists

Leaves of Light said:

I'm afraid you've lost me...I don't know what you're getting at by saying "the worm has the ability to choose to create a brain or not by chance". Isn't it, apparently, the case that the regrowth of the body part is the natural process of the animal?

Malcolm wrote:

Flatworms reproduce both sexually and asexually: through budding, and through segmentation, They are also fully hermaphroditic.

One can't really explain their reproduction through recourse to the old four birthplaces model, which is not fully functional as a grand theory of every type of reproduction. For example, heat and moisture birth actually describes the egg birth of insects, etc., some animals and birds are capable of parthenogenesis. We don't need to fit modern biology into ancient biology anymore than we need to fit modern cosmology into ancient cosmology.

Also, gandharvas possess all five aggregates, and the descent of consciousness "into the womb" is intentional, not unconscious or mechanical. Please examine chapter three of the Abhidharmakoshaśāstra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 7th, 2022 at 7:39 PM

Title: Re: Crisis of a Faith, returning to dharma, and new directions.

Content:

tobes said:

I think you're universalizing what kind of philosopher your dad was, and maybe what kind of department he was in, with the incredibly diverse range of traditions we tend to call western (even this point is questionable, if you consider the relation between the Bactrian Kingdom India and some ancient Greek schools).

Malcolm wrote:

I am referring to modern academy as it exists in most Anglo-American schools. The point of mentioning Garfield was that Smith's program is actually incredibly diverse. But I have had similar breakdowns with Jay, Hubbard, etc., because they are not interested in liberation per se, but rather arguments and ideas. That's what they are paid for, and they are quite expert in their fields.

tobes said:

In a sense I'm saying the same thing; the problem here is the narrow focus on argumentation which is the hallmark of Analytic philosophy.

Existential, phenomenological and soteriological concerns can definitely be found in other (western) traditions.

Malcolm wrote:

Again, the conversation breaks down as soon as the goals of Buddhadharma are made clear—just look at the vain attempt to interpret Dzogchen through western phenomenology aka Guenther. He has done more than any other scholar to set Dzogchen studies back decades. Now one has to pile through reams of bullshit he has inspired in his followers, likewise with Thurman and Wittgenstein, etc. it's all basically hermeneutical malpractice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 7th, 2022 at 7:44 PM

Title: Re: Crisis of a Faith, returning to dharma, and new directions.

Content:

tobes said:

I think you're seriously underestimating the drive to discover truth, insight, knowledge, wisdom etc in philosophers past and present.

Nonetheless, I agree that Buddhadharma operates in a different way.

Malcolm wrote:

People like to climb all kinds of mountains, high and low. I am only interested in one of them, the highest.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 7th, 2022 at 8:59 PM

Title: Re: Are trees sentient?

Content:

Leaves of Light said:

As for your description of the Buddha's teaching as "ancient biology", then I cant agree with this description. The Buddha's teaching is neither ancient nor contemporary, but it is the eternal true Dharma. This is the orthodox Buddhist view of it, even if this is displeasing to certain modern Western Buddhists. The principle I'd adhere to is as stated previously:

Malcolm wrote:

Spoken like a true fundamentalist. Apparently you didn't get the memo on the distinction between provisional and definitive teachings. Things like cosmology, biology, etc., are provisional.

Your example is misplaced. Kongtrul was certainly quite knowledgeable, but he never left Tibet, he never knew the world was round, that the earth revolved around the sun, and so on. These things are not necessary to know in order to attain liberation. This conversation is boring. People like you show up on Dharmawheel, all full of piss and vinegar, eager to defend ancient, outdated models as if their conventional validity is intact because they showed up in some sūtra somewhere, none of which were in fact spoken directly by the Buddha, all of which are later revelations, composed for this and that reason. To the extent that any of them are consistent with an identifiable model of liberation taught by the Buddha, we then accept them as Buddhadharma. But we do not have to accept flat earths, Sumerus, and so on. The present Dalai Lama, within my own hearing, rejects the ancient cosmology taught by the Buddha and which is present in Kongtrul's encyclopedia. Why? Because it is contradicted by empirical observation. Modern Tibetan attempts to defend this ancient cosmology, of which there are a few, are just exercises in romantic, wishful thinking. Next you will be insisting that the hell realms are located so many yojanas beneath the ground, that a ring of iron mountains surrounds the four continents in order to prevent the stink of the river surrounding hell from killing us all, and so on. Please.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 7th, 2022 at 9:19 PM

Title: Re: Sakya Ghantapada Tradition?

Content:

KonchogUrgyenNyima said:

Okay since we're comparing and contrasting, how would the kagyü presentation of the ghantapada tradition be different from the Sakya? Is it just a matter of a subtle difference in view? Are there greater differences?

Malcolm wrote:

There is a great deal of difference. The Sakya system is based in an uncommon hermeneutical tradition called the "ultimate secret" (guhyānta), which is a special tradition of Naropa's not taught to Marpa.

As far as I know, the Ghantapada tradition in Drikung comes through Shridhara, rather than Marpa. It has the same source as the five deity tradition in Sakya, but a different lineage, and hence the explanations are different, mode of empowerments is different, and so on. It does not mean one is better than the other, they are just very different expressions of the same mandala.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 7th, 2022 at 9:48 PM

Title: Re: Did Sam Harris recognize the nature of the mind?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Avici is Akanistha.

Leaves of Light said:

Do you have a source for that statement?

Malcolm wrote:

Of course. Jetsun Drakpa Gyaltzen sang:

Even the deepest hell of sentient beings, is the dharma palace of Akaniṣṭha.
Even the suffering of both hot and cold,
is the dharmakāya free from proliferation.
Even philosophical conclusions of tīrthikas are the essential meaning of Madhyamaka.
Even the oral instructions of the sublime Gurus are illusions deceived by illusions.
Even the experience of one's realization is drawing pictures on the water.
Even the arising of the five paths and ten stages are similar to counting the number of horns on a rabbit.
Even the accomplished Buddha is just a name without ultimate existence.
Even dharmata established by vidyā is a banana tree without a heartwood.

Leaves of Light said:

It sounds suspiciously heterodox.

Malcolm wrote:

Ok, Torquemada Rinpoche.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 7th, 2022 at 10:09 PM

Title: Re: Mahayana vs Theravada

Content:

Aemilius said:

I can understand why we (the modern Dharma) are developing into the direction of disregarding and rejecting the dhyana states.

Malcolm wrote:
This is not correct.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, July 7th, 2022 at 10:18 PM
Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")
Content:

Malcolm wrote:
Your twitter feed is very revealing.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, July 7th, 2022 at 10:22 PM
Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")
Content:
The Guardian said:
"All indicators suggest the effects of the climate crisis are accelerating faster than the worst predictions of a few years ago..."

Malcolm wrote:
Yes, because it is not linear, it is exponential.

The global north is going to have to deal with climate refugees from the global south for the next millennia. I am sure we will get our climate shit together, but it won't be in the next ten years or even twenty. It will take a hundred, and we will be looking at a 1000 years to cool it all off.

The world will look a lot different than it does now.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, July 7th, 2022 at 10:37 PM
Title: Re: Sakya Ghantapada Tradition?
Content:

Kai lord said:
Is that tradition somehow related to Vajrayogini?

Malcolm wrote:

Yogini is a part of it, and some would argue, the ultimate expression of it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 8th, 2022 at 1:14 AM

Title: Re: Shamatha and Vipasyana in Ngondro

Content:

Sangyed Dorje said:

So, how do I actually practise ngondro from a technical standpoint? Do I just do it?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, you just do it.

Rongzom Pandita said:

In general, secret mantra is proclaimed to be the four doors:
the door of reciting words is the recollection of the ultimate;
the door of secret mantra is invoking the key point of samaya;
the door of samādhi is one-pointed focus;
and the door of the mudra is designated in indicative symbols.

One-pointed focus on the recitation, doing the visualizations as they come, reciting the stanzas to repeat, etc. is śamatha. Resting in the nature of the mind after each section is vipaśyanā.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 8th, 2022 at 2:40 AM

Title: Re: U.S. big news: Roe v. Wade overturned

Content:

Queequeg said:

A lot of people on the left side of the spectrum scream at Biden, "DO SOMETHING!"

Malcolm wrote:

He gets a lot of flack because of the obstructionism of Sinema and Manchin.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 8th, 2022 at 2:56 AM

Title: Re: Shamatha and Vipasyana in Ngondro

Content:

Sangyed Dorje said:

So, how do I actually practise ngondro from a technical standpoint? Do I just do it?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, you just do it.

Rongzom Pandita said:

In general, secret mantra is proclaimed to be the four doors:
the door of reciting words is the recollection of the ultimate;
the door of secret mantra is invoking the key point of samaya;
the door of samādhi is one-pointed focus;
and the door of the mudra is designated in indicative symbols.

One-pointed focus on the recitation, doing the visualizations as they come, reciting the stanzas to repeat, etc. is śamatha. Resting in the nature of the mind after each section is vipaśyanā.

Sangyedorje said:

Wow thanks Malcom! Ok, that makes more sense to me now. It's sort of like setting the whole thing and gaining clarity of the concept before tearing the whole thing down and really getting into it. My final thing is how does this work with prayers? For example, when I recite the tashi gyepa, I don't really know what I'm doing besides calling out a bunch of names.

Malcolm wrote:

Yup, that's it. The Aṣṭamaṅgalaṃ prayer by Mipham is a condensation of a sūtra. So all you are doing is calling out a bunch of names.

Sangyedorje said:

In that case, do the meaning of the words even matter? I know they don't really matter for most deity mantras (at least for beginners like me) because they often don't even mean anything (a ra pa ca na dhih is just the beginning of the alphabet plus dhih), but how does this apply to certain other prayers?

Malcolm wrote:

Depends on the supplication. But in general, we recite supplications while focusing the meaning. In this case, it is likely more useful for you to recite such things in English in your personal practice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 8th, 2022 at 4:03 AM

Title: Re: Are trees sentient?

Content:

Leaves of Light said:

Being an orthodox Buddhist

Malcolm wrote:

Doesn't exist, apart from in the febrile imagination of some western converts.

Leaves of Light said:
little bit shocking in this kind of forum

Malcolm wrote:
If you are shocked, then good.

Leaves of Light said:
As for the conversation being boring, recall that you brought it up. The topic here is "Are Trees Sentient", so I'm not sure why you're complaining about a topic that is not related to that that you brought up.

Malcolm wrote:
I didn't start this topic.

Leaves of Light said:
There is nothing at all I can find in your statement that actually accords with a reasonable definition of what Buddhism and the entire Buddhist tradition explains and stands for, so really very little needs to be said about it.

Malcolm wrote:
Buddhadharma is śīla, samadhi, and prajñā; and prajñā is hearing, reflection, and cultivating. What it is not is blindly accepting a bunch of stuff in books written down by bhikṣus with limited access to knowledge if anything further than 500 miles from where they resided, if that.

Leaves of Light said:
To attack the greatest omniscient teachers in Tibetan tradition, claim that the Dharma was not taught by the Buddha, dismiss the Buddha's teaching as "ancient" - even though its the same Dharma that was taught by Dipamkara and will be taught by Maitreya in the future and is currently being taught by Buddhas in all directions of space - is heterodox and has nothing to do with a reasonable understanding of BUddhism.

Malcolm wrote:
The real teaching of the Buddha will never be found in any book. Books are something relative, faulty, subject to emendation, and so on, as the any person who has studied even a smidgeon of the textual history of Buddhist texts knows. The Mahāyāna tradition is self-conscious of its revelatory status, as opposed to the oral tradition represented by the Nikāyas and Agamas. You are making a category error in assuming that provenance determines doctrinal validity. The definitive sūtras of the Mahāyāna are true because they are rational, concern emptiness, selflessness, absence of persons, living beings, and so on, which are the hallmarks of definitive sūtras. Sūtras concerning living beings, cosmologies, and so on, are provisional. There are four criteria we follow in Mahāyāna:

Follow the dharma, not the person.
Follow the meaning, not the words.

Follow the definitive sūtras, the provisional sūtras.
Follow gnosis, not mind.

Leaves of Light said:

The Dalai Lama said as an expedient means that he doesn't include Buddhist cosmology within his set of beliefs because otherwise he would alienate all the Western world.

Malcolm wrote:

Bullshit, and you just outed yourself as Ode to Joy, someone who has been banned once already. Bye!

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 8th, 2022 at 4:59 AM

Title: Re: Shamatha and Vipasyana in Ngondro

Content:

Kai lord said:

The guru yoga in Ngondro...

Malcolm wrote:

So is the refuge section, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 8th, 2022 at 11:12 AM

Title: Re: Shamatha and Vipasyana in Ngondro

Content:

Kai lord said:

The guru-yoga in Ngondro, when done correctly, is the union of calm abiding and special insight. The fiercer your devotion for your guru, the more likely you will achieve that state with the help of the blessing from your lineage. Maybe you can ask your lama for more details on how to do guru yoga perfectly and reach that union.

Sangyedorje said:

I don't want to sound like a faithless heathen, but this has never made any sense to me.

Malcolm wrote:

It just means you have the devotion and faith that your mind essence and the the guru's mind essence are the same state, and then you rest in that state.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, July 8th, 2022 at 9:55 PM
Title: Re: Is Buddhism Atheist?
Content:

Javierfv1212 said:
I don't think there's an equivalent Indic term for something like this,

Malcolm wrote:
Sure there is, "nastika," applied to anyone who rejected the authority of the vedas, such as Buddhists, Carvakas, etc.

<https://www.merriam-webster.com/dictionary/theism>

Functionally speaking, Buddhists are atheists. We hold that dependent origination and the karma of sentient beings generates the universe.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, July 8th, 2022 at 10:06 PM
Title: Re: The Karmapa fathered a child - DNA test reveals
Content:
treehuggingoctopus said:
This dream is over.

Malcolm wrote:
That was always a pipe dream. Was never gonna happen.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, July 8th, 2022 at 10:09 PM
Title: Re: The Karmapa fathered a child - DNA test reveals
Content:
Kai lord said:
Fortunately for the Karma Kagyupas, there is an alternate Karmapa that they can look up to so actual situation is not that abyssal.

Malcolm wrote:
Also a pipe dream. Also never gonna happen.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, July 8th, 2022 at 11:01 PM
Title: Re: What Does Jim Valby Mean by "Pure Perfect Presence"
Content:
Passing By said:

It is not just Dzogchen. Maha/Anuyoga and Sarma Anuttarayoga as well

Kai lord said:

Kalachakra's unique view of Bodhicitta, deserves a mention as well.

Malcolm wrote:

Completely different meaning, but since you brought up:

There is Mahāyāna bodhicitta, the altruistic intent to awaken.

There is Secret Mantra jasmine bodhicitta, the basis of experiencing bliss.

There is Dzogchen's bodhicitta, the sole, unique bindu, which encompasses all phenomena of samsara and nirvana.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 8th, 2022 at 11:17 PM

Title: Re: The Karmapa fathered a child - DNA test reveals

Content:

Vasana said:

I find it disappointing how quickly some come to conclusions about what this means for all involved and how easily assumptions surrounding any details are shared as facts.

Malcolm wrote:

It has not been confirmed independently. The only source for this is Tenpel's blog. It's a bit irresponsible for him to post this news without secondary confirmation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 12:01 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Sādhaka said:

“Rightfully” huh?

Malcolm wrote:

TFG is a traitor.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 12:13 AM

Title: Re: Sakya Ghantapada Tradition?

Content:

Kai lord said:

Anyway since we are on the topic, Drikung Kagyu published a short history on their Vajrayogini/vajravarahi teachings recently, so I thought I would share here.

Malcolm wrote:

However, the Yogini practiced in Drikung comes from Lakṣminkara, not Naropa. I've received it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 12:57 AM

Title: Re: Is Buddhism Atheist?

Content:

Javierfv1212 said:

This is more similar to the english "atheism" but, still, its not truly equivalent. Because atheism encompasses belief in God or any lower case 'gods' (which would include devas, olympian gods, etc). But in Buddhism, we believe in devas and so, under some definitions of atheism, Buddhism would not fit. This is why said it depends on how you define atheism and how you define "god". If devas don't qualify as gods, then Buddhism could be atheist, but if the word "god" can include devas, then Buddhism is not atheist. But, the term god is already pretty broad and ambiguous in English anyways. Therein lies the problem.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't agree. There are no gods in Buddhism, as conceived by Greeks, etc., where they viewed the gods as immortal. Devas are mortal, just sentient beings like the rest of us. Hence, we are atheist.

As for the vicissitudes and complexities of darshans in India, Mimamsas certainly held that atmans were permanent, etc., even if they rejected a creator god, just as Samkhya holds that atmans are permanent, etc.

We deny all of this in Buddhism. So while I agree that nastika is not a precise equivalent, it is functionally equivalent, meaning, "We reject your beliefs."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 1:00 AM

Title: Re: The Karmapa fathered a child - DNA test reveals

Content:

Konchog1 said:

He's seduced a nun...

Malcolm wrote:

It was not a seduction, according to her, it was a rape. Rape \neq seduction.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 1:20 AM

Title: Re: Is Buddhism Atheist?

Content:

Shinjin said:

I wouldn't call it atheist. For example in Pure Land Buddhism one relies on Amitabha Buddha for one's salvation. In this way it is similar to theistic religions since we are relying on a power that is outside of ourselves.

Malcolm wrote:

Amitabha is not a god. Still atheist.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 1:42 AM

Title: Re: Is Buddhism Atheist?

Content:

Shinjin said:

I wouldn't call it atheist. For example in Pure Land Buddhism one relies on Amitabha Buddha for one's salvation. In this way it is similar to theistic religions since we are relying on a power that is outside of ourselves.

Malcolm wrote:

Amitabha is not a god. Still atheist.

Shinjin said:

Not a god but still a higher power. True atheists would not believe in such things, imo.

Malcolm wrote:

Not a higher power. Amitabha cannot rescue you from samsara. No buddha can. This why the Buddha taught:

Water cannot wash away misdeeds,
nor can suffering be removed with the hand,
I cannot give you liberation,
but I can show you the path.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 2:08 AM

Title: Re: Is Buddhism Atheist?

Content:

Shinjin said:

I see but the whole premise of pure land sutras is that one can be rescued by Amitabha if one has faith and recites his name.

Malcolm wrote:

Still atheist.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 3:26 AM

Title: Re: Is Buddhism Atheist?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Ok, you can be an anīśvaravādin, which no one will understand. I will continue to insist that Buddhism is an atheist religion, and be mistaken as well. I am an atheist. YMMV.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 3:30 AM

Title: Re: Is Buddhism Atheist?

Content:

Knotty Veneer said:

I prefer the term 'non-theistic' to 'atheist'.

Malcolm wrote:

This is silly. Non and A are both negations. There is no difference between nontheism and atheism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 3:47 AM

Title: Re: Sakya Ghantapada Tradition?

Content:

KonchogUrgyenNyima said:

I'm assuming that since you say the mode of empowerment is different, this means that I would have to receive the empowerment from a Sakya lama in order to study literature on the Sakya presentation of the ghantapada system?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 3:51 AM

Title: Re: Is Buddhism Atheist?

Content:

Javierfv1212 said:

If I were to answer the question is Buddhism atheist or theist I would have to take the fourth koti and say "neither".

Malcolm wrote:

And leaving the person in a state of confusion. Most people, in the West, consider you an atheist if you explicitly do not believe in a creator god. We cannot take agnostic position, since we know that the universe was not created by an omnipotent deity or any deity at all.

Which leaves at my first point: functionally speaking, Buddhism is atheist.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 4:04 AM

Title: Re: Is Buddhism Atheist?

Content:

Shinjin said:

I see but the whole premise of pure land sutras is that one can be rescued by Amitabha if one has faith and recites his name.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Amitabha is not an omnipotent being. His power results from vows combined with the faith of followers.

Similarly, one is not simply relying on the agency of Amitabha for salvation, and importantly, Amitabha does not hold power over natural and karmic forces. So, he does not compare well to the idea of deities in theistic religion.

Shinjin said:

Amitabha isn't omnipotent but reciting his name has the power to erase eons worth of negative karma and bringing about birth in his pure land hence why evil individuals can go there too. Similarly in Christianity: "Or do you not know that the unrighteous will not inherit the kingdom of God? Do not be deceived: neither the sexually immoral, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor men who practice homosexuality, nor thieves, nor the greedy, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor swindlers will inherit the kingdom of God. And such were some of you. But you were washed, you were sanctified, you were justified in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ and by the Spirit of our God." 1 Corinthians 6:9-11

Malcolm wrote:

Amitabha does not wash away your misdeeds for you, you still have to remove your own negative traces of affliction and karma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 4:25 AM

Title: Re: Is Buddhism Atheist?

Content:

Nalanda said:

Atheism

Malcolm wrote:

I didn't say Buddhism was atheism. I said it was atheist.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 4:30 AM

Title: Re: The Karmapa fathered a child - DNA test reveals

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

For those into legal porn (paywall):

<https://trellis.law/case/36025/EF2022-182/Vikki-Hui-Xin-Han-v-Karma-Triyana-Dharmachakra-Monastery-Inc-Karma-Kagyü-Institute-Inc>

<https://unicourt.com/case/ny-sue1-vikki-hui-xin-han-v-karma-triyana-dharmachakra-monastery-inc-et-al-1658274>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 4:42 AM

Title: Re: Is Buddhism Atheist?

Content:

Shinjin said:

Amitabha isn't omnipotent but reciting his name has the power to erase eons worth of negative karma and bringing about birth in his pure land hence why evil individuals can go there too. Similarly in Christianity: "Or do you not know that the unrighteous will not inherit the kingdom of God? Do not be deceived: neither the sexually immoral, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor men who practice homosexuality, nor thieves, nor the greedy, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor swindlers will inherit the kingdom of God. And such were some of you. But you were washed, you were sanctified, you were justified in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ and by the Spirit of our God." 1 Corinthians 6:9-11

Malcolm wrote:

Amitabha does not wash away your misdeeds for you, you still have to remove your own negative traces of affliction and karma.

Shinjin said:

Depends on who you ask. Shinran says buddhahood is automatic upon birth in the pure land for those who are firmly established in shinjin. And this shinjin isn't something that can be created ourselves but can only be received from Amitabha.

Malcolm wrote:

Then this means that Amitabha plays favorites, since not everyone is into Sukhavati.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 5:21 AM

Title: Re: Is Buddhism Atheist?

Content:

Javierfv1212 said:

Do they really? I don't know if that's really the case, but then again, I haven't really looked at surveys for what the public think "atheist" means. Would be interesting to look into.

Malcolm wrote:

Pretty much the case in my experience.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 6:09 AM

Title: Re: Is Buddhism Atheist?

Content:

Javierfv1212 said:

So I don't know, I think religion is important in my life, I think there is a spiritual force or higher power...

Malcolm wrote:

There is no "higher" power in Buddhism. The only difference between a Buddha and a sentient being is presence or absence of traces.

Javierfv1212 said:

So, I think adopting this label might make people less inclined towards the Buddhadharma. At least in America.

Malcolm wrote:

People are inclined to dharma or not based on whether they have a precious human birth or not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 6:12 AM

Title: Re: Is Buddhism Atheist?

Content:

Knotty Veneer said:

Atheism seems to get the same unthinking dismissal as socialism in the US.

Malcolm wrote:

Godless atheists are always commies...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 9:47 AM

Title: Re: Is Buddhism Atheist?

Content:

Shinjin said:

To be an atheist is to not just reject the existence of a creator deity, but all deities. Including other beliefs such as karma and rebirth that can't be scientifically proven. Buddhism doesn't fit that description at all unless we are talking about secular Buddhism.

Malcolm wrote:

This is simply not the case. I am an atheist. I also accept karma, rebirth etc. it has never been the case that rejecting supernatural explanations of the origin of things, etc., requires one to reject karma, dependent origination, and so on. Buddhism itself is based on cause and result. Buddhism does not propose any supernatural explanation of causation, unless one wants argue that the Buddhist explanation of mind is supernatural, and that is plain silly,

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 9:51 AM

Title: Re: Is Buddhism Atheist?

Content:

Knotty Veneer said:

I prefer the term 'non-theistic' to 'atheist'.

Malcolm wrote:

This is silly. Non and A are both negations. There is no difference between nontheism and atheism.

Knotty Veneer said:

I would beg to differ. Atheism states that Gods do not exist. Non-theism makes no such decision on the ontological status of Gods and holds that Gods are irrelevant whether they exist or not.

Malcolm wrote:

You've confused agnosticism with atheism.

In Buddhadharma we absolutely deny the existence of god. Just read what the ancient Indian masters such as Nagarjuna, Vasubandhu, Dharmakirti, etc., have to say in the issue of creator gods, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 10:02 AM

Title: Re: The Karmapa fathered a child - DNA test reveals

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Free legal porn:

https://iapps.courts.state.ny.us/webcivil/FCASeFiledDocsDetail?county_code=4ALHeAj_PLUS_EMwAmO6p8KZdQQ%3D%3D&txtIndexNo=MJzHw2nOtQEeQtP%2FBktpMw%3D%3D&showMenu=no&isPreRji=N&civilCase=ay8MhLigb_PLUS_NTtwoVsmJk%2FA%3D%3D

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 8:42 PM

Title: Re: The Karmapa fathered a child - DNA test reveals

Content:

treehuggingoctopus said:

How easy would it be to seduce or manipulate him into a seduction or rape attempt? Would he know the difference between the two the way "we" know it? What would be his motivation to get involved in anything of the sort? Unfortunately, these questions have a very different tone and urgency if we are thinking about a realised being rather than a mere man from another culture thrown into a globalised world.

Malcolm wrote:

Manipulated into a rape attempt? You've really lost the plot here. You are usually more sensible than this.

An awakened person would never find themselves lurching from scandal to scandal, IMO, especially not a rape scandal.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 9th, 2022 at 8:47 PM

Title: Re: Is Buddhism Atheist?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This is simply not the case. I am an atheist. I also accept karma, rebirth etc. it has never been the case that rejecting supernatural explanations of the origin of things, etc., requires one to reject karma, dependent origination, and so on. Buddhism itself is based on cause and result. Buddhism does not propose any supernatural explanation of causation, unless one wants argue that the Buddhist explanation of mind is supernatural, and that is plain silly,

Shinjin said:

Tell Richard Dawkins you are an atheist who beleives in karma and reincarnation. He would probably find it strange.

Kai lord said:

Well, he is also a biologist who believes that human body is a organic machine complex enough to derive a consciousness and he plans to illustrate that point further through a future breakthrough in AI technology on a non organic machine

Malcolm wrote:

In other words, Atheists like Dawkins have non-falsifiable beliefs too.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 10th, 2022 at 8:42 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, because it is not linear, it is exponential.

The global north is going to have to deal with climate refugees from the global south for the next millennia. I am sure we will get our climate shit together, but it won't be in the next ten years or even twenty. It will take a hundred, and we will be looking at a 1000 years to cool it all off.

The world will look a lot different than it does now.

Mirror said:

Stop taking 'hopium'.

Our planet has boundaries, scientists call them Tipping points. If these are crossed, then we don't really know, what might happen next. Some scientists suggest it might lead to extreme movements in jet streams, collapse of The Gulf Stream, triggering methan feedback loop in Siberia, acidification of oceans, etc. etc.

In short, we have only a small time to act before it's everything lost.

Malcolm wrote:

Ummm, it seems to me you're the one with hopium pipe in your mouth. We are already past the tipping point and have been for a long time. Buckle up.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 10th, 2022 at 9:02 PM

Title: Re: Suella Braverman

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Cue Sadhaka's reply in 10, 9, 8...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 10th, 2022 at 9:25 PM

Title: Re: talk: Vedantic Self and Buddhist Non-Self

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

A.V. is all about resolving that difference, and his claim seems to be that ultimately, Buddhism is too.

Malcolm wrote:

We don't care about that difference, and we Madhyamakas accept it.

Passing By said:

Madhyamakas claim that awareness and its objects are separate from each other?

(or are you saying that Madhyamakas do NOT claim that objects of awareness ARE awareness ITSELF rather than simply being a display of its cognitive properties?)

Malcolm wrote:

Most accept that objects and cognitions of objects are conventionally distinct entities, much in the same way that a face reflected in the mirror is a different entity than its reflection in the mirror.

See my signature.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 10th, 2022 at 9:28 PM

Title: Re: Is Buddhism Atheist?

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

Also, what is your argument that Buddhism is theistic, or that what the Buddha taught was theistic?

Malcolm wrote:

This person was banned for sock puppetry.

PadmaVonSamba said:
God is a sock puppet

Malcolm wrote:
He should be banned too.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, July 11th, 2022 at 12:44 AM
Title: Re: The Karmapa fathered a child - DNA test reveals
Content:

Giovanni said:
The Tulku system has been an even more effective means of a particular clan keeping control than the European Aristocracy was.
Which is not to say that it did not result in some notable teachers, but as Malcom implies it was always open to abuse and political power struggles.

.

Malcolm wrote:
Arguably, it was a means of keeping the aristocracy under control, a form of spiritual hostage taking.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, July 11th, 2022 at 2:41 AM
Title: Re: The Karmapa fathered a child - DNA test reveals
Content:

Sangyedorje said:
Aside from this, look into Lonchenpa and his experience at the first monastery he went to in Kham. He wrote an entire poem about how bad they were as practitioners.

Malcolm wrote:
Sangphu, where Longchenpa attended college is in Tsang, not Kham. Longchenpa was complaining about how the Khampas were disruptive and vulgar at Sangphu.

Sangyedorje said:
The real practitioners keep very lowkey and don't get all the fame or prowess.
Remember that Tulku Urgyen and Chatrel Rinpoche never became famous until after their deaths.

Malcolm wrote:
They were both quite famous among Tibetans during their lifetime, the former because he was the guru of the 16th Karmapa, the latter because he was the guru of Reting Rinpoche. Also, the latter was quite famous among Chinese practitioners.

Sangyed Dorje said:

More importantly, they never got involved in writing big important books, international tours, or any of that.

Malcolm wrote:

Chatral Rinpoche wrote several works anonymously. I am pretty sure they have been collected in his collected works.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 11th, 2022 at 6:23 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Mirror said:

In that case, I don't understand your previous comment, because crossing tipping points can lead to global collapse of ecosystems,

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Mirror said:

which will lead to our extinction.

Malcolm wrote:

The human race has gone through extinction events before (70,000 years ago), I am sure we will manage, but it won't be pretty.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 11th, 2022 at 9:01 AM

Title: Re: The Karmapa fathered a child - DNA test reveals

Content:

conebeckham said:

First, as far as I know, the results of that DNA paternity test have not been independently verified. Right now, as far as I can tell, all of you are taking as true what an anonymous person, a "vetted source" on a blog about various controversial issues, has posted.

Malcolm wrote:

Nope, I made that clear early on. Tenzin Paljor erred in posting his blog post, IMO.

conebeckham said:

The "host" or author of the blog points out that the Paternity test can be easily proved. I would agree. I'd like to see the results, as I think would we all. If they are truly positive, I would be disappointed and disturbed by the lack of transparency, but I think it's still not proof of rape or lack of consent.

Malcolm wrote:

At the minimum, the Karmapa and KTD bear a fiduciary responsibility to the plaintiff. Even if the civil rape case is never brought, it appears the plaintiff is going after KTD on this basis.

conebeckham said:

And be careful ascribing truth to any legal pleading or allegation--believe me, I have seen some doozies related to Dharma Centers.

Malcolm wrote:

The judge ruled there was sufficient cause for a trial. These cases always favor the plaintiff in the beginning, should there be sufficient evidence. It's a bit of a stretch, IMO, to say there is no evidence of a breach of fiduciary responsibilities, at minimum, on the part of the defendants, but hey, I am not a lawyer.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 11th, 2022 at 9:03 PM

Title: Re: talk: Vedantic Self and Buddhist Non-Self

Content:

Passing By said:

Madhyamakas claim that awareness and its objects are separate from each other?

(or are you saying that Madhyamakas do NOT claim that objects of awareness ARE awareness ITSELF rather than simply being a display of its cognitive properties?)

Malcolm wrote:

Most accept that objects and cognitions of objects are conventionally distinct entities, much in the same way that a face reflected in the mirror is a different entity than its reflection in the mirror.

See my signature.

Passing By said:

So.....In short, you are talking here about the "physical things out there" rather than "what we experience" ? Meaning that Madhyamaka/Vajrayana is not idealist, which we know since everyone has their own consciousness which gives them their distinct, individual-specific experiences.....But are Hindus (specifically Advaitins here) idealists then?

Also, with regards to the mirror example, how do you reconcile this notion of conventional distinctiveness with the example of the reflection in the mirror being not separate from the mirror when talking about Mind and its objects in Dzogchen/Vajrayana? That the former applies only when talking about different people but for each individual person, practically speaking, the latter applies?

Malcolm wrote:

Longchenpa rejects idealism in Dzogchen, asserting that conventionally, there are external objects.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 11th, 2022 at 10:57 PM

Title: Re: Evolution

Content:

Kai lord said:

However I speculate that their "physical forms" are invisible energy field of subtle particles enclosed in a spherical dimensional realm limited by the extent or reach of their consciousness.

Malcolm wrote:

According to Dzogchen teachings, they have subtle bodies made of five elements. "Formless" meaning virtually no matter.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 11th, 2022 at 11:08 PM

Title: Re: Suella Braverman

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

It's easier than that, Sādhaka: most Western Buddhists are converts, not born to it, and most converts are more serious about their religion than most who were simply born to it.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't consider myself a convert.

We were all born into Buddhism based on our past merit accumulation. That's the meaning of a precious human birth. The pity is that most Buddhists just waste it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 12th, 2022 at 3:27 AM

Title: Re: Evolution

Content:

Aemilius said:

Now the question is: given that there are million times more animals, fishes, crustaceans, reptiles, birds, ants other insects, than there are humans, are these all reborn at the end of the kalpa when this world is destroyed, in the higher Brahma heavens? Do they(we) all attain a body or form of a Deva or Brahma (or a state of formlessness in Arupyadhatu) ?

Kai lord said:

There are a few existing explanations to that, if the single world system (planetary system) is destroyed by fire up to the first Dhyana or Mahabrahma heaven, then the sentinel beings within that world system and below the second dhyana heaven will either be reborn in the second dhyana heaven that will be immune to the destruction by fire or reborn in other planetary systems or single world systems that have not yet undergone the fiery destruction.

After the eons of destruction and dissolution are over, when the single world system is starting to form again. Those beings from second dhyana heavens will descend onto the lower realms and start to repopulate those realms. The first of them to do so will become Brahma, followed by his ministers and so on.

Aemilius said:

In Abhidharmakosha bhashyam a small world system is one thousand four continent worlds (i.e. one thousand solar systems with planets). Then there are also the middle and great world systems. The AKB Vyakhya says that the thousand four continent worlds in a world system are created and destroyed at the same time. I.e. one thousand solar systems are created and destroyed at the same time. It is not quite clear if this applies to the middle and great world systems also, based on the short quotation from the Vyakhya.

AKB does not support your view that individual four continent worlds are created and destroyed independently (of other four continent worlds in a thousandfold or larger world system.)

(AKB p. 469)

Malcolm wrote:

It and Chim only discuss the destruction (56 times) of a given world system in chapter three. The world is destroyed up to the level of the fourth dhyāna plane, excluding it because the pure abodes are located there. I have never seen this other description of Kai's. The other three form realms are destroyed by fire, air, and water respectively.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 12th, 2022 at 4:01 AM

Title: Re: What did Nichiren think of Confucianism and Shintoism?

Content:

bcol01 said:

Thank you for that insight! Would there be anything wrong with practicing Confucian ideals or incorporating Confucian advice into daily life, as a Nichiren Buddhist?

Queequeg said:

Not at all. Jen and Li are wonderful ideals, IMHO. There is a lot of great advice in the Analects.

There's nothing wrong with incorporating any practices or ideals unless they conflict with the practice of NMRK.

Malcolm wrote:

Just a point here—it was the Neoconfucian thought of the Cheng Zhi and Wang Yang Ming schools that formed the basis of secular society in Japan, especially the latter's thought. The Tokugawa Shogunate adopted the bureaucratic model developed by Zhu Xi and instituted it as the system of examination for the civil service.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 12th, 2022 at 9:56 AM

Title: Re: Current state of the Democratic party

Content:

KristenM said:

It's not really simply religion, it's the whole package of "American values" i.e. getting rewarded for your hard work, not depending on the state or government. Democrats are about to have their "Come to Jesus" moment. I'm a Democrat, btw.

Malcolm wrote:

Democrats, since Clinton, have tried their best to be "better" Republicans. The only thing that has succeeded in is driving the country further right, in my opinion.

Bernie still has the best policies...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 12th, 2022 at 8:30 PM

Title: Re: Current state of the Democratic party

Content:

KristenM said:

. Democrats need to convey their message more effectively. Inflation, crime, homelessness etc are problems people see every day.

Malcolm wrote:

Apart from inflation, these are largely urban problems. We don't see the level homelessness in New England there is on the west coast. But Fox News keep spinning the narrative that crime is out of control, when in reality it's been dropping for years, outside Walmarts in SF.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 12th, 2022 at 9:22 PM

Title: Re: Current state of the Democratic party

Content:

KristenM said:

Have you seen the latest Hunter Biden escapades? If he was a Trump Jr., he'd be pilloried, but instead on CNN there's nada. It's like a tulku system.

Malcolm wrote:

It's not news. Anyway, the Post, Fox, and so on, have it all covered.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 12th, 2022 at 10:48 PM

Title: Re: Current state of the Democratic party

Content:

justsit said:

Biden missed his golden opportunity in 2016, too distraught to run after his son Beau's death. By 2020 it was really too late for him. I really can't see him as a viable candidate in '24.

So who else can the Dems run? Usually the VP is next to run, but Kamala isn't electable in the current climate, and she hasn't shown much promise IMO.

Who's on deck? Which Democrat has the best chance of winning?

Malcolm wrote:

Good question.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, July 13th, 2022 at 11:05 AM

Title: Re: Current state of the Democratic party

Content:

Queequeg said:

I like Amy Klobuchar. There are some politicians in NY who aren't quite ripe - Katherine Garcia, for one.

There are a lot of very competent women in the Democratic Party.

Then there are the celebrities -

The Rock? Howard Stern?

How about Michelle Obama?

Absolutely no to Harris. She has a problem that she tries to speak in so many dialects that she ends up just voicing word salads in fake southern black accents.

KristenM said:

Currently, I'm digging Jay Inslee the governor of Washington. He's not as slick as Newsome, perhaps more relatable to folks in other areas of the country. And he's strong on the environment. I told you I'm listening to a lot of C-Span these days.

<https://www.c-span.org/video/?521489-1/washington-governor-jay-inslee-supreme-court-rulings>

Malcolm wrote:

Personally, I like Sheldon Whitehouse.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 14th, 2022 at 12:10 AM

Title: Re: Current state of the Democratic party

Content:

Queequeg said:

Inslee, Hickenlooper, Whitehouse - all seem solid. I'd be fine with any of them. I don't see any charisma there.

Malcolm wrote:

The problem is "charisma," it's paralyzing our democracy and turning it into a prom king tournament.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 14th, 2022 at 12:55 AM

Title: Re: Current state of the Democratic party

Content:

Queequeg said:

Inslee, Hickenlooper, Whitehouse - all seem solid. I'd be fine with any of them. I don't see any charisma there.

Malcolm wrote:

The problem is "charisma," it's paralyzing our democracy and turning it into a prom king tournament.

Queequeg said:

I invite you to convince our fellow Americans that elections should not be popularity contests.

To paraphrase a recent warrior philosopher, you go into the campaign with the country you have, not the country you wish you had.

Malcolm wrote:

well, I will be dead within 40 years or so, so it won't matter to me. Wishing future generations the best of luck.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 14th, 2022 at 10:06 PM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 15th, 2022 at 1:25 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen without deity yoga/two stages?

Content:

yagmort said:

just to answer my own question from 2 years back, the Dzogchen cycle without deity yoga

Malcolm wrote:

There are others, such as the Kadag Rangshar, and so on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 15th, 2022 at 1:31 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It is quite one thing to say we need to support Israel, or "invent one," to guarantee US security in the Middle East (whether we agree with Biden or not, I don't, personally). It's quite another assert that Israel should have "power over Congress" and "rightfully so." TFG is still a goddamn traitor and should be doing hard time.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 15th, 2022 at 2:20 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen without deity yoga/two stages?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

... Kadag Rangshar, and so on.

yagmort said:

nice to know, but the question remains - how feasible they are to actually practice these days? i would like you to elucidate on this "and so on" though?

Malcolm wrote:

They are very feasible.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 15th, 2022 at 2:33 AM

Title: Re: Corporate Buddhism

Content:

Queequeg said:

Its not new, though... the history of Buddhism in Japan has some shameful, violent episodes. Sohei happened. Foot soldiers marching under Nembutsu or Daimoku standards to hold back the fear of death happened. The integration of martial arts and zen practice continues to this day.

Genjo Conan said:

Oh, for sure. But I also think we've largely come around to seeing that as a perversion of the dharma. (And I do distinguish the practice of martial arts from militarization and violence--though maybe that's because I practiced judo and BJJ for a long time and need to excuse my own behavior.) I think if the best we can say for the current practice is that we're repeating old mistakes, well...not great!

Malcolm wrote:

1 Onward, Buddhist soldiers,
marching as to war,
With the wheel of Buddha
going on before!
The King of the Śākyas leads against the foe;
Forward into battle,
see his banner go!

Refrain:

Onward, Buddhist soldiers,
marching as to war,
With the wheel of Buddha
going on before!

2 At the sign of triumph
Māra's host doth flee;

On, then, Buddhist soldiers, on to victory!
Hell's foundations quiver
at the shout of praise;
Sanghas, lift your voices, loud your anthems raise! [Refrain]

3 Like a mighty army moves the Sangha true ; Brothers, we are treading
where arhats have trod;
We are not divided;
all one body we,
One in hope and doctrine,
one in charity. [Refrain]

4 Onward, then, ye people,
join our happy throng,
Blend with ours your voices in the triumph song;
Glory, laud, and honor,
unto the Śākya King;
This thro' countless ages men and devas sing. [Refrain]

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 15th, 2022 at 2:37 AM

Title: Re: Does having an intention to commit a bad action but not doing it produce bad karma? Am I going to hell?

Content:

good said:

So, does me having an intention to commit an evil deed, but after a few months of time, realizing that it's bad, and not doing it generate any bad karma? If yes, am I hellbound or is there anything I can do?

Malcolm wrote:

Since you applied the antidote, it cancelled out. But in any case, you have to be a fully ordained bhikṣu in order to cause a schism in the Sangha, and there have been fully ordained bhikṣus in the Japanese Zen tradition for a very, very long time. Chan, however, is a different matter.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 15th, 2022 at 9:27 AM

Title: Re: Back in the USA...

Content:

Sādhaka said:

The above video said something along the lines that Biden once wanted to block weapon sales to Saudis, because they posed an potential threat to Israel;

Malcolm wrote:

Correct. In the 90's, Saudi Arabia and Israel were enemies.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 15th, 2022 at 7:55 PM

Title: Re: Dzogchen without deity yoga/two stages?

Content:

yagmort said:

its not that i have the intention to doubt your words - but how they are?

one need to have an empowerment first, a guidance of a teacher, and translation of a root text. if empowerments are hard to come by, root texts are not translated, and cycles are interspersed with deity yogas nonetheless because a teacher decide one needs them.. then?

i am not a fan of those people who think they know better than a teacher what to do and (hopefully) i am not the one..

Kai lord said:

In my opinion, if you are serious about going down this path. You should consider start taking up Tibetan language and become well versed in it due to a large amounts of dzogchen tantras, commentaries and texts not available in other languages. You might have to wait decades for a work that you desire to read, to be available with reliable and accurate translations.

Furthermore most dzogchen masters can't speak English that well. So if you don't want any meanings in the words lost through translation. Its best if you can converse with them directly.

Malcolm wrote:

That's a bit pessimistic.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 15th, 2022 at 8:00 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

I'm not sure about this one ...

generation-gap.jpg

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

Considering that the cartoonist is a major trumpster, me either.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 16th, 2022 at 12:14 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen without deity yoga/two stages?

Content:

Kai lord said:

In my opinion, if you are serious about going down this path. You should consider start taking up Tibetan language and become well versed in it due to a large amounts of dzogchen tantras, commentaries and texts not available in other languages. You might have to wait decades for a work that you desire to read, to be available with reliable and accurate translations.

Furthermore most dzogchen masters can't speak English that well. So if you don't want any meanings in the words lost through translation. Its best if you can converse with them directly.

Malcolm wrote:

That's a bit pessimistic.

treehuggingoctopus said:

And by the time one knows enough Tibetan to really understand these texts, there is no possibility to travel anymore. Assuming there is anything like a pocket of livable planet available, that is. I mean, come on. There is no future to look forward to. Not a day to waste.

Malcolm wrote:

That's even more pessimistic, but optimistic at the same time.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 16th, 2022 at 1:34 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen without deity yoga/two stages?

Content:

treehuggingoctopus said:

And by the time one knows enough Tibetan to really understand these texts, there is no possibility to travel anymore. Assuming there is anything like a pocket of livable planet available, that is. I mean, come on. There is no future to look forward to. Not a day to waste.

Malcolm wrote:

That's even more pessimistic, but optimistic at the same time.

treehuggingoctopus said:

Well, the optimistic bit is hiding in the bushes, as far as I can tell. But I can concede that at this stage there is precious little to take refuge in but the Dharma, and it is bloody difficult to pretend otherwise. Climate collapse is progressing faster than even I thought it would, and institutions are either dead in the water (as a solution to the incoming energy crisis, which means thousands of people literally freezing to death, German cities have been told to prepare... heated shelters! Polish ministers are suggesting that those who struggle to make ends meet should... eat less, and less frequently. Next time I watch the news the workhouse will be back, as a simple and elegant solution to the problem of homelessness) or psychopathic. Yidam or no yidam, little else left to do.

Malcolm wrote:

The optimistic part is that you can still practice. Samsara has always been a burning house.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 16th, 2022 at 2:51 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen without deity yoga/two stages?

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

Bhikkhus, all is burning. And what is the all that is burning?.....

<https://www.accesstoinight.org/tipitaka/sn/sn35/sn35.028.nymo.html>

Malcolm wrote:

Sound words, but this is the path of renunciation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 16th, 2022 at 5:08 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen without deity yoga/two stages?

Content:

florin said:

Unless you practice dzogchen where samsara lives very comfortably next to nirvana

Malcolm wrote:

That depends considerably upon who you are. I know very miserable "dzogchen" practitioners who get very upset with other people for not agreeing with them. They are especially common on reddit.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 16th, 2022 at 10:12 PM

Title: Re: Dzogchen without deity yoga/two stages?

Content:

pemachophel said:

You're assuming that sentient beings in the 22nd century are not living in a Mad Max world -- IMO, large assumption.

Kai lord said:

I was being optimistic.

Not totally baseless though since the last Karmapa is said to be the 21th and Kalachakra has a prediction on the total degenerate period on Earth being connected to the 25th king of Shambhala who will be born hundreds of years from now given that the current king is 21th.

Malcolm wrote:

This is all offtopic.

The topic is "Dzogchen without deity yoga/two stages?"

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 16th, 2022 at 10:34 PM

Title: Re: "Past-life regression" in Tibetan Buddhism?

Content:

fckw said:

If you exhaust your dharmata...

Malcolm wrote:

The only way to exhaust dharmatā is to exhaust dharmin. It's not the other way around.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 16th, 2022 at 10:44 PM

Title: Re: "Past-life regression" in Tibetan Buddhism?

Content:

dpcalder said:

I have similar interests when it comes to a practice involving creating a new energy body. It is my understanding that it is possible to create a new energy body with a karmically clean slate. In general, I am interested in any texts I might be able to read from either the Hindu or Vajrayana Buddhist traditions on these topics, as I am having quite a difficult time finding reliable information.

Malcolm wrote:

This is a special position of the Geluk school. They theorize that when one attains buddhahood, one also attains a brand new illusory body composed of vāyu (energy, but actually the air element).

The other schools of Tibetan Buddhism assert that one's ordinary body instead transforms into its real nature as gnosis light.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 16th, 2022 at 10:47 PM

Title: Re: 30.08. Chetsang Rinpoche Nairatmya

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

I'm curious about something. I know DK wants to bring back Hevajra as it was Marpa's main gig, but who is responsible for the continuity of this practice lineage in DK? And has HHDKC done a retreat on Hevajra and accomplishes the signs of realization?

Malcolm wrote:

HH Chetsang requested this empowerment from HH Sakya Trizin, because the Sakyapas are the principle upholders of this system.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 17th, 2022 at 1:08 AM

Title: Re: "Past-life regression" in Tibetan Buddhism?

Content:

dpcalder said:

I have similar interests when it comes to a practice involving creating a new energy body. It is my understanding that it is possible to create a new energy body with a karmically clean slate. In general, I am interested in any texts I might be able to read from either the Hindu or Vajrayana Buddhist traditions on these topics, as I am having quite a difficult time finding reliable information.

Malcolm wrote:

This is a special position of the Geluk school. They theorize that when one attains buddhahood, one also attains a brand new illusory body composed of vāyu (energy, but actually the air element).

Kai lord said:

This is interesting, so illusory body is actually consists of very subtle air particles? I thought of them as energy that move like wind based on gelug commentaries. But they did hint on the most subtle energy wind having five colours of light.

Malcolm wrote:

Actually, there is not word "energy" that corresponds to a specific word in Tibetan or Sanskrit other than nus pa/shakti. The Greek antecedents means "interior work."

In this case, air, fire, and water all possess energy, but they are not "energy." The air element in the body is not quite the same as the outer air element, as it is refined through the lungs, and so on. However, each of the five elements also possesses five elements. Even consciousness possesses the five elements. Even pristine consciousness possesses the five elements. Everything is made of the five elements, from the most gross physical entity to the most subtle layers of consciousness. There is nothing that is not made of the five elements.

Kai lord said:

The other schools of Tibetan Buddhism assert that one's ordinary body instead transforms into its real nature as gnosis light.

As in the body of light or Jalu? Some claimed the former is used in mother tantra and latter is used for Thogal and then some think the opposite is true, making me confused between the two terminologies.

Malcolm wrote:

The term "body of light" occurs in texts such as the sgra thal gyur. The term rainbow body occurs in no canonical text in either Kanjur or Nyingma Gyudbum. It occurs once in a Tenjur text attributed to Naropa, translated by Marpa.

'ja' lus is basically a Tibetan colloquial term for 'od kyi lus, as far as I can tell. It is primarily a Nyingma concept, which occurs almost exclusively in Dzogchen tantras.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 17th, 2022 at 1:33 AM

Title: Re: "Past-life regression" in Tibetan Buddhism?

Content:

Sādhaka said:

I've gleaned that although Illusory Body and the Body of Light are not the same; they're also not mutually-exclusive.

In other words, one or both can be attained; and one could even be attained before the other and vice-versa.... Although I don't think that I'd want to say more on the topic.

Malcolm wrote:

If someone realized the body of light, the illusory body is superfluous.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 17th, 2022 at 2:04 AM

Title: Re: "Past-life regression" in Tibetan Buddhism?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

If someone realized the body of light, the illusory body is superfluous.

Sādhaka said:

Yes and no. It depends.

Malcolm wrote:

No it doesn't. Illusory body is definitely considered a result inferior to the body of light. Why? Illusory body is merely a body of vāyu and mind (rlung sems) appearing as the deity, it is relative and compounded. It's a stage in the completion stage. The body of light, on the other hand, is result of thogal, when all the coarse elements of the revert into their original nature as ye shes, pristine consciousness.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 17th, 2022 at 2:25 AM

Title: Re: "Past-life regression" in Tibetan Buddhism?

Content:

Kai lord said:

Reminds me of the age old debate that clear light is not rigpa but a subtle form of sems.

Malcolm wrote:

Everyone possess this mind of clear light. Not everyone possesses rigpa (knowledge of the basis). That's the difference. The subtle mind of clear light in Geluk school is their name for what is termed in Dzogchen, "the basis," that is, one's unfabricated mind.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 17th, 2022 at 2:36 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen without deity yoga/two stages?

Content:

Sennin said:

If a Dzogchen practitioner isn't inclined to put in the effort towards the two stages as a secondary practice, would śamatha be the alternative?

Malcolm wrote:

Guru yoga is the alternative.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 17th, 2022 at 3:08 AM

Title: Re: "Past-life regression" in Tibetan Buddhism?

Content:

Kai lord said:

Reminds me of the age old debate that clear light is not rigpa but a subtle form of sems.

Malcolm wrote:

Everyone possess this mind of clear light. Not everyone possesses rigpa (knowledge of the basis). That's the difference. The subtle mind of clear light in Geluk school is their name for what is termed in Dzogchen, "the basis," that is, one's unfabricated mind.

Kai lord said:

So clear light being the nature of mind is alaya (gzhi) ?

Malcolm wrote:

Well, in Dzogchen terms, the ālaya and the gzhi (sthana) are different. The former is the nature of ignorance and the collector of traces. The basis is not a collector of traces.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 17th, 2022 at 11:13 AM

Title: Re: Are all Mahayana sutras sutras of definitive meaning?

Content:

Shunyatarbha said:

Are all Mahayana sutras sutras of definitive meaning? Or only the 3rd turning. Also what does it mean for a sutra to be a sutra of definitive meaning?

Malcolm wrote:

Some hold that only second turning sutras are definitive.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 17th, 2022 at 11:18 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen without deity yoga/two stages?

Content:

yagmort said:

Malcolm, in the op i quoted you saying "...when you have finished the two stages connected with the practice of Chetsun", what do one do as the completion stage of 2 stages in Chetsün Nyingthig?

Malcolm wrote:

Receive it and find out.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 17th, 2022 at 8:23 PM

Title: Re: Are all Mahayana sutras sutras of definitive meaning?

Content:

Shunyatagarbha said:

Are all Mahayana sutras sutras of definitive meaning? Or only the 3rd turning. Also what does it mean for a sutra to be a sutra of definitive meaning?

Kai lord said:

In the current day context of Buddhist Mahayana community. Tathāgatagarbha sūtras are universally regarded as having definitive meaning.

Malcolm wrote:

Not so. Geluk does not consider them so. In Sakya it depends on whether the nine examples are interested correctly or not.

Kai lord said:

You can also view Tathāgatagarbha as the final philosophical form that evolved from Yogacarīn tenets on Buddha gotra, Trikayas, five wisdoms, pure seeds (Bija) found in Eighth consciousness, Ālayavijñāna.

Malcolm wrote:

Also false. The Tathagatagarbha doctrine predates yogacara.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 17th, 2022 at 9:24 PM

Title: Re: Are all Mahayana sutras sutras of definitive meaning?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

But I'm a bit confused by your take on the yogacara tradition. Do you believe there is something lacking in the yogacara worldview? I spent some time drilling into it and I can't understand why it cannot be totally reconciled with Madhyamaka. Or maybe I'm just misreading you.

Malcolm wrote:

The three own natures, parikalpita, paratantra, and pariniṣpanna contain two problems. The first problem is how the all-basis consciousness is understood. If we consider paratantra, the dependent nature, to be the all-basis consciousness, there is an internal contradiction in asserting that something compounded becomes uncompounded in the transformation of the basis into the perfected nature, pariniṣpanna.

If on the other hand, we considered the perfected nature to be empty of the imagined nature and the dependent nature, there is a problem of the inability to reconcile this with the inseparability of saṃsāra and nirvāṇa.

There are other problems with Yogacāra view as well, which mainly arise from their reluctance to accept that consciousness is also a dependent designation.

So, what do we rely upon yogacāra for? Yogacāra has an extensive explanation of the Mahāyāna paths and stages. So, we rely on Madhyamaka for view and Yogacāra for practice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 17th, 2022 at 9:40 PM

Title: Re: HYT Wangs

Content:

jmlee369 said:

ee syllables 108 times daily would suffice. However, until receiving this waiver, the disciples were doing as they were told originally.

When old students changed tradition and gave up their daily practice commitments given to them by their Gelug vajra masters since their new root guru taught that all practices can be united into a single practice as you mention, it certainly raised eyebrows of the Gelug teachers. For one thing, the definition of root guru is different between the traditions.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. What is considered a root guru in Sakya and Kagyu is not the same as what is considered a root guru in Nyingma and Kagyu.

jmlee369 said:

It's true that these practice commitments are not necessary for enlightenment.

Malcolm wrote:

The point is that all commitments can be maintained through guru yoga. But, this is not something one goes to a Geluk teachers and proclaims boldly. It would be disrespectful.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 17th, 2022 at 10:13 PM

Title: Re: Are all Mahayana sutras sutras of definitive meaning?

Content:

Kai lord said:

Regarding the predating, Sandhinirmocana Sutra was dated to 1st to 3rd AD centuries almost as early as the earliest Tathāgatagarbha sūtras much like Mahāyāna Mahāparinirvāṇa Sūtra and Tathāgatagarbha Sūtra. Given the uncertainty of range in hundreds of years, Its entirely unclear who was earlier, more likely both doctrines start developing in parallel to each other before each reaching their final form in 5th to 6th century.

Malcolm wrote:

You do realize the Yogacāra school is distinct from its founding sūtras?

In any case, the Yogacāra school entirely neglects tathāgatagarbha. The latter was largely neglected in India until the Vajrayāna period.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 17th, 2022 at 11:20 PM

Title: Re: Western Dzogchenpa has NDE, Becomes Perennialist

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

fixed it for you.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 17th, 2022 at 11:36 PM

Title: Re: Are all Mahayana sutras sutras of definitive meaning?

Content:

Kai lord said:

Regarding the predating, Sandhinirmocana Sutra was dated to 1st to 3rd AD centuries almost as early as the earliest Tathāgatagarbha sūtras much like Mahāyāna Mahāparinirvāṇa Sūtra and Tathāgatagarbha Sūtra. Given the uncertainty of range in hundreds of years, Its entirely unclear who was earlier, more likely both doctrines start developing in parallel to each other before each reaching their final form in 5th to 6th century.

Malcolm wrote:

You do realize the Yogacāra school is distinct from its founding sūtras?

In any case, the Yogacāra school entirely neglects tathāgatagarbha. The latter was largely neglected in India until the Vajrayāna period.

Kai lord said:

Yes and Chinese Yogacara school eventually died as well after a short period of growth and Chinese Buddhist school like Huayan criticized yogacarins for not accepting the one vehicle doctrine among other nine criticisms. And I never believed Asanga wrote Uttaratantra

My original point is that late period Tathāgatagarbha Sūtras like Lankavatara Sutra in 3rd century and the Awakening of Faith in 7th century continued to evolve and did integrate Yogacara tenets with Buddha nature. For the latter, it even subsumed. Nichiren school who uphold buddha nature and one vehicle as their supreme core doctrines, even create a ninth consciousness called amala-consciousness which they equate to Buddha nature.

Malcolm wrote:

These developments are only of academic interest to me. In my opinion, tathāgatagarbha thought more easily integrates with Madhyamaka than Yogacāra. Longchenpa is an excellent example of this.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 18th, 2022 at 12:00 AM

Title: Re: Western Dzogchenpa has NDE, Becomes Perennialist

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

Sometimes people do shit.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, if one can't shit, it becomes a real problem.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 18th, 2022 at 12:04 AM

Title: Re: 40c temp London next two days possible

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

So we're bracing ourselves for extreme heat the next two days in the UK.

It's never hit 40c here since records began. Highest temp recorded was 38.7c in Cambridge in 2019.

But 40c is possible in the South East and London.

As a country we're not really set up for it people don't really have air-con in their homes and so forth.

Any advice dedications welcome to help cope with it

Malcolm wrote:

Swamp cooler, aka redneck air conditioner:

<https://momwithaprep.com/redneck-air-conditioner/>

<https://www.diycraftsy.com/diy-air-conditioner-projects/>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 18th, 2022 at 12:09 AM

Title: Re: Are all Mahayana sutras sutras of definitive meaning?

Content:

Kai lord said:

Pretty sure the Gelugpas will agree with you, as they define Buddha nature as a non-implicative negation and equate it to Clear light of mind.

Malcolm wrote:

No, they won't. Their nonaffirming negation can't be accepted as tathāgatagarbha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 18th, 2022 at 1:43 AM

Title: Re: Are all Mahayana sutras of definitive meaning?

Content:

Kai lord said:

Pretty sure the Gelugpas will agree with you, as they define Buddha nature as a non-implicative negation and equate it to Clear light of mind.

Malcolm wrote:

No, they won't. Their nonaffirming negation can't be accepted as tathāgatagarbha.

Kai lord said:

Because it also negates inherent Buddha qualities like the five wisdoms?

Looking at all the major disagreements on this subject between various schools, I am starting to agree with the popular saying that comprehending Buddha nature is a difficult task even for Bodhisattvas on the bhumi.

So the safest bet will be to go with Mipham's middle path formula of Buddha nature = clarity + dharmadhatu free from all reference points

Malcolm wrote:

Because it is a cessation.

Mipham's tathagātagarbha is just cribbed from Sapan by way of Gorampa.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 18th, 2022 at 1:50 AM

Title: Re: David Hinton's 2020 book "China Root"

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

I confess that I haven't read it. But Hinton is a poet and translator, not a practitioner or a historian; my understanding is that his argument is largely philological. On that basis, I would be wary: Hinton published a translation of the Wumenguan a few years ago that...I didn't like. Hinton's translation differs mightily from every other English translation of the text that I'm aware of. When your translations are an outlier and you're making essentially a linguistic argument, I'm skeptical from the start.

Malcolm wrote:

Poets....ugggggh.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 18th, 2022 at 4:18 AM

Title: Re: Are all Mahayana sutras of definitive meaning?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

In considering the three natures this way...

Malcolm wrote:

Here, we can point specifically to the problem I identified:

In Compendium of Mahāyāna [Burnnhölzl, vol.1, pg. 235-6, Asanga states, "[The dharmakāya has] the characteristics of fundamental change. For when the dependent nature in its afflicted part that consists of all obscurations has come to an end, it converts into the dependent nature in its pure part, which is liberated from all obscurations and in which the mastery of all dharmas is present."

Thus, all-basis consciousness here is asserted to transform into the dharmakāya, consequently (1) something compounded is asserted to transform into something uncompounded or (2) the all-basis consciousness is uncompounded, or (3) dharmakāya is compounded. These are three undesirable consequences of the three natures scheme.

FiveSkandhas said:

Thus ultimately there are no internal contradictions if the three natures are understood in this sense.

Malcolm wrote:

Unfortunately for your exercise this is not how the Yogacāra school parses things.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 18th, 2022 at 4:28 AM

Title: Re: Taking 8 Mahayana Vows

Content:

Toenail said:

Is there any defect or problem with taking the eight Mahayana one day vows as a tantric practitioner? Because of the distinction of pure/impure that seems inherent of following a set of vows like that.

Malcolm wrote:

No. If you have to do a ganapuja that day, there is no fault. The higher vow supersedes the lower, when there is a conflict.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 18th, 2022 at 4:32 AM

Title: Re: Music time

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 18th, 2022 at 4:47 AM

Title: Re: Are all Mahayana sutras of definitive meaning?

Content:

Astus said:

Things have never been apart from emptiness in the first place.

Malcolm wrote:

Emptiness is yogacāra is clearly an extrinsic emptiness. As asserted in the Madhyantavibhanga, "emptiness exists" as a consciousness devoid of duality. This is fine, but this is a limited emptiness, not the ultimate free from extremes of Madhyamaka.

Astus said:

Apart from space and various forms of cessation the only uncompounded in Yogacara is suchness (Abhidharmasamuccaya, p 23-25; http://www.cttbusa.org/100shastra/100dharma_1.asp.html).

Who says consciousness isn't compounded? Sounds more like a buddha-mind type of idea.

Malcolm wrote:

Abhidharmasamuccaya is not a Yogacāra text. Even so, it is pretty clear Asanga's view has an internal contradiction when looking at Mahāyānasamgraha, as above. And there is the fact that Vimuktisena chides the Yogacāra school for possessing a realist view of the objective support in Abhisamayālamkāravṛtti [Spareham, vol. 1, pg. 88].

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 18th, 2022 at 5:45 AM

Title: Re: Are all Mahayana sutras of definitive meaning?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Emptiness is yogacāra is clearly an extrinsic emptiness. As asserted in the Madhyantavibhanga, "emptiness exists" as a consciousness devoid of duality.

Astus said:

Where does it assert such a consciousness?

Malcolm wrote:

"The imagination of the unreal exists..."

One cannot have an imagination of the unreal in absence of a consciousness imagining the unreal.

Astus said:

From Mipham's commentary: 'If it were the case that the emptiness of duality did not exist, the duality of apprehended and apprehender would become existent, as a double negation is an affirmation.' (Middle Beyond Extremes, p 37)

Malcolm wrote:

That does not address the point, and even Mipham admits in this text that consciousness exists ultimately, otherwise, there would be no reason for him to suggest that if one merely tweaks rnam par rig pa (vijñāpti) to rnam par snang ba, that is "appearing as an aspect" (impossible in Sanskrit), the text is rendered compatible with Madhyamaka.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 18th, 2022 at 8:58 PM

Title: Re: Are all Mahayana sutras sutras of definitive meaning?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

"The imagination of the unreal exists..."

One cannot have an imagination of the unreal in absence of a consciousness imagining the unreal.

Astus said:

Imagination exists as unreal, it appears real to the deluded and false to the wise. And when it is seen as actually unreal, there is no observing consciousness either, as the verse after the next stanza states explicitly.

Malcolm wrote:

That's not how it is read. What is understood to be unreal is parikalpita, the imagination of the unreal, not the imagination itself, paratantra. Otherwise, there is no point in saying "no duality exists in it."

Astus said:

Is there such an admittance somewhere explicitly, or is it something assumed? Furthermore, Yogacara works are quite explicit that there are eight consciousnesses, none of them ultimately existing.

Malcolm wrote:

Think you need to brush up a bit on Yogacara.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 19th, 2022 at 12:28 AM

Title: Re: Are all Mahayana sutras of definitive meaning?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Think you need to brush up a bit on Yogacara.

Astus said:

That's probably so. Still, I cannot recall encountering the idea somewhere in a Yogacara work that there is an ultimate, uncompounded consciousness, despite this being a standard charge against them. On the other hand, the twofold emptiness is regularly affirmed.

Malcolm wrote:

You can find evidence of this in the Bodhisattvabhūmi [Engles, pp. 77-86], where Asanga excoriates mādhyamikas for over-negation, where he describes the negation of a designation as valid, but strongly objects to the negation of the basis of designation, a so-called "bare substance." He tries to play off śrāvaka realists on the one hand who hold characteristics truly exist, and mādhyamikas who negate [pg. 80] a "substance that truly exists in ultimate truth in the form of an ineffable essence." He goes on to say that the latter are true nihilists who should be avoided at all costs. He continues [pg. 80], "For someone who denies the bare [underlying] substance of such entities as form, etc., neither ultimate reality nor [verbal designations exist, they are both invalid."

For Asanga, "bare substance," vastumātram, is a synonym of suchness.

Finally in Brunhölzl, vol.1, 192, Vimuktisena's reference to gold as an example of purity may be found. Here it is seen that the dependent nature, the cognition that appears as the unreal or appears as real is never itself negated. And, given Asanga's references to a "bare substance" in the BBh above, one can only conclude that this ultimate is an existent cognition devoid of duality, itself ultimately established even if its contents are not, since, it cannot be nonexistent according to the Yogacāra scheme set forth by Asanga.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 19th, 2022 at 1:11 AM

Title: Re: HYT Wangs

Content:

Ayu said:

This literally is the Gelug subforum and the OP's question was regarding Gelug approach.[/color]

Malcolm wrote:

[metatopic] Sure, and the long discussion of Hevaja and Cakrasamvara was in the Sakya subsection, but was largely populated by people from this thread...so...[/metatopic]

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 19th, 2022 at 2:43 AM

Title: Re: Current state of the Democratic party

Content:

Queequeg said:

Call down the unions in support.

Malcolm wrote:

Union leadership already supports the Dems. It's the rank and file that have been lost to nationalist fantasies.

Queequeg said:

This opinion piece danced around it, but if Dems want support of workers, then immigration is going to need to be a little more nationalist. There's going to have to be stronger border security - not a wall, but a high tech fence, hard enforcement, fast deportation, but balanced with a liberal legal path to working in the US that falls short of permanent residence with limited time frames - expand temporary worker visas and the like. We ought to have an amnesty for people who have been working illegally but still paying taxes, etc. Maybe some sort of permanent residence category that can't daisy chain family into the US. That might be the hardest part to sell, but I think it can be sold to US voters: even Trumpists I know will admit under their breath that they respect the hard, honest work many undocumented guys perform. Shit, they often employ them.

Malcolm wrote:

You are just falling into the same trap as Clinton, trying to be better Republicans than the Republicans. It won't work this time.

BTW, Mexico is giving us 1.5 Billion for border security.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 19th, 2022 at 3:10 AM

Title: Re: Current state of the Democratic party

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

So the conundrum is that the part of the Democratic Party most likely to fight for real economic reform is the same part which is the least appealing to the Republicans reactionary working class base (and let's say it, mostly white, though not all) base.

Malcolm wrote:

The problem is, as I pointed out here 7 years ago, in America, race is class. Whites are a higher social class than blacks and latinos, in America, and as a result, will not willingly give up their class privilege. It's just a fact. Explicit racism is now the worst it has ever been in my lifetime, the move by the right to limit civil rights, women's rights, etc., should all be wake up calls.

But we sleep...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 19th, 2022 at 4:49 AM

Title: Re: Any ideas on Carlos Castaneda?

Content:

prsvrnc said:

I loved the Carlos Castaneda books!!! I didn't find them confusing. If you're interested in Chogyam Trungpa's thoughts, he gave a four-talk series on the parallels between the path portrayed in Carlos Castaneda's books on Don Juan and the path of Buddhist Tantra.

<https://www.chronicleproject.com/the-question-of-reality/>

Malcolm wrote:

This was some years before it was revealed that his thesis was a completely fraudulent publication:

Imagine my surprise when I learned that the most successful author of "Indian" books of all time was a fake. His name was Carlos Castaneda. He made a national and international name for himself, and made himself very rich, by making up whole stories about a medicine man who never existed.

Hundreds of colleges used his books by the ton. And they are still using them, misguided though they are. He sold more than eight million copies of his books, starting with "The Teachings of Don Juan." The Don was supposed to be a Yaqui medicine man who divulged his secrets to Castaneda in Mexico and in a bus station in Tucson. Unfortunately, there was no Don Juan, and Castaneda never met him. He made the whole thing up. It earned him a doctorate from the Department of Anthropology at UCLA. But once they learned about the fraud, they took the doctorate back—the only case I know of where this has happened.

<https://indiancountrytoday.com/archive/the-fake-carlos-castaneda>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 19th, 2022 at 8:29 AM

Title: Re: Current state of the Democratic party

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This opinion piece danced around it, but if Dems want support of workers, then immigration is going to need to be a little more nationalist. There's going to have to be stronger border security - not a wall, but a high tech fence, hard enforcement, fast deportation, but balanced with a liberal legal path to working in the US that falls short of permanent residence with limited time frames - expand temporary worker visas and the like. We ought to have an amnesty for people who have been working illegally but still paying taxes, etc. Maybe some sort of permanent residence category that can't daisy chain family into the US. That might be the hardest part to sell, but I think it can be sold to US voters: even Trumpists I know will admit under their breath that they respect the hard, honest work many undocumented guys perform. Shit, they often employ them. You are just falling into the same trap as Clinton, trying to be better Republicans than the Republicans. It won't work this time.

Queequeg said:

What alternative is there? Point to one realistic alternative.

Open borders are not realistic. There is no North American Union anywhere on the horizon.

Malcolm wrote:

Fact. We will never, ever close the borders, our economy depends on open borders and "illegal" laborers.

Look at Brexit, total disaster for the British. Appealing to white xenophobia is a dead end solution.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 19th, 2022 at 12:13 PM

Title: Re: Current state of the Democratic party

Content:

Queequeg said:

I don't buy it and calling any attempt to regulate border crossings as racist per se is a losing position and one that will never get us to a rational immigration policy.

Malcolm wrote:

We have had open borders in this country for 250 years. Crops withering unpicked in the fields is only one consequence of closing the borders. We e already seen the travesty of Abbots attempts to,regulate border crossing into Texas. Total debacle.

Most border crossing from Central America is a result of endemic violence and climate change. The idea we can stem climate refugees from Central America and so on is simply absurd. Most of the US is empty. The idea we don't have room for immigrants is as ludicrous as it is racist.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 19th, 2022 at 10:06 PM

Title: Re: Current state of the Democratic party

Content:

Queequeg said:

We don't have a regulated border.

Malcolm wrote:

We don't need one.

Queequeg said:

What I'm saying, and I think its obvious to everyone, the border needs to be thought out in light of present circumstances and we need a comprehensive policy that addresses the various concerns.

Malcolm wrote:

There is nothing which will prevent people from coming into the US seeking opportunities they do not have elsewhere, even if they do not have a visa.

Queequeg said:

You're all about democracy, except when you don't agree with the democratic impulse. Vast majority of people, Republican and Democrat, want a secure border.

Malcolm wrote:

I am a citizen and I am voicing my opinion. People in Massachusetts and VT could give two shits about the Southern border, other than the racists of course. NYC would not be NYC without all "Illegal aliens" who live and work there, and the same goes for every other major urban area in the US.

Queequeg said:

Sure, some of the impulse is racist. There are also impulses to want law and order - the chaos of thousands of people bum rushing the border elicits a visceral reaction and democrats are losing on this because democrats get blamed for it. Add to that concerns about national security, drug trafficking. I'm tired of politically losing for these side issues - and in the scheme of things, this is a side issue. Its shit like this that keeps us from infrastructure policy, universal healthcare, and all those other social programs to improve opportunities for citizens. In a democracy, the citizens matter before everything else. Don't lose sight of that obvious fact.

Malcolm wrote:

Sorry, but this "control the border" business just creates more problems than it solves. Look at the total waste of money on the so-called wall that has completely upset sensitive natural areas, interrupted species migrations, blasted useless corridors through living rock, falls down scant years after being erected, etc.

Sure, we need policies, but not knee-jerk "git your guns."

First of all, we don't properly identify what the actual border problems are. It sure isn't migration. That hurts no one but migrants. We've tried outsourcing our border control to Mexico, but that has proven to be a farce. Drugs are a problem, that is easily solved by legalizing all drugs and putting the cartels out of business. Cross-border trade isn't a problem.

So what's the real problem? Rounding up people and putting them in concentration camps is the real problem. Not providing migrants with proper health care is a problem, etc. Putting an army on the southern border hasn't solved anything and won't solve anything. It just creates more problems.

Queequeg said:

There's concerns about fairness - there is a widespread perception that undocumented workers take from everyone else who plays by the rules.

Malcolm wrote:

Except that it is completely false concern. Undocumented workers contribute far more than than they take.

Queequeg said:

It doesn't matter that these concerns behind wanting a secure border are not strongly grounded in facts.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, it matters. Otherwise, you are just appealing to people's worst sentiments for political power. That is a shitty attitude, worthy of the GOP. As I said, you are just aiming to be a better Republican. But, in aiming to be a better Republican, you just lose to the house. Your suggestions are like the guy who has lost 50k at the table, borrows another 100k loses it and realizes the vig is so high he will never get out from under. The only way to win is to not play their game.

Queequeg said:

If you think facts are all that matter in the democratic process, you're delusional. Emotion sometimes matters more, and we're in a time where emotion is ruling.

Malcolm wrote:

See above.

Queequeg said:

A comprehensive border policy would primarily establish a secure border.

Malcolm wrote:

This is a fantasy. The southern border cannot be secured without Iraq war levels of spending. It is not feasible. It's a complete waste of money and resources. It will make the US much weaker, not stronger. Fortress America a bad look. It is the opposite of this lady's mission statement:

Queequeg said:

It would also address domestic labor needs.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it won't.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 19th, 2022 at 10:15 PM

Title: Re: Current state of the Democratic party

Content:

Queequeg said:

Oh, by the way, if the Dems are seriously going to be a worker's party, they need to address the perception that undocumented workers have a depressing effect on wages.

Malcolm wrote:

