Wealthy people don't really get what poverty is...46 grand is above the poverty line but a disaster for someone born into wealth...

Malcolm wrote:

For most of my life, I have lived on considerably less than this.

Minobu said:

it just came off sort of well you know how the other half lives...

wasn't knocking you really...when mired in poverty remarks like that hurt..

Malcolm wrote:

Having lived on considerably less than this, I understand that 46k a year for a family of four is peanuts. That's 11k per person. That's nothing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, November 30th, 2020 at 8:04 PM

Title: Re: weird as...

Content:

Minobu said:

it just came off sort of well you know how the other half lives...

wasn't knocking you really...when mired in poverty remarks like that hurt..

Malcolm wrote:

Having lived on considerably less than this, I understand that 46k a year for a family of four is peanuts. That's 11k per person. That's nothing.

Minobu said:
again you missed my point ...and went...well..

look there are millions of americans and people working in the ?USofA that could only dream of the amount you mentioned..tens of millions...

it's one of the podiums best avoided by a person of privilege..

we live in a caste system Malcolm...
In Britain the moment you speak it is a pigeon hole situation...

it goes beyond being sensitive to a group of people dreaming of a life

Malcolm wrote:
Peanuts is peanuts. It's an objective fact. The present federal minimum wage is much lower than that, not even peanuts, just crumbs from the table.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, November 30th, 2020 at 8:23 PM
Title: Re: In 543 AD Emperor Justinian put the Pope in jail for a year
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
#https://hds.harvard.edu/news/2019/03/19/flesh-and-fire-reincarnation-and-universal-salvation-early-church

More apropos, Origen's heresy.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, November 30th, 2020 at 11:55 PM
Title: Re: weird as...
Content:
Mantrik said:
To some of us outside of the US many of its citizens seem to have no international (or national?) perspective and think themselves badly treated parochially...

Malcolm wrote:
Ahem, same forces that drove Brexit, and for largely the same reasons.

The myth of the sophisticated and cosmopolitan European is just that—a myth.

I've been all over Europe and the UK, and encountered exactly the same parochialism in Europeans that I've encountered in Americans.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 1st, 2020 at 1:20 AM

Title: Re: weird as...

Content:

Mantrik said:

Why would Europeans be any different?

The geography works against parochial isolation as many of our poorest will experience a mix of cultures and ethnicity just a couple of hours away 'abroad'. Cosmopolitan describes most EU cities, actually, and I'm pretty sure that a huge proportion of our European population has an international perspective, made quite poignant at the moment as the EU disintegrates.

Malcolm wrote:

You think the US is any different? I have about as much in common with New Yorkers as you do with the Dutch.

Mantrik said:

Bigoted racism and xenophobia for sure..... but they are not as isolated from other nations as parts of the USA or as inward-looking and able to be manipulated on that score.

Malcolm wrote:

Go to Umbria...you'll be very surprised.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 1st, 2020 at 1:24 AM

Title: Re: In 543 AD Emperor Justinian put the Pope in jail for a year

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

I found Origen's theology on this point interesting:

So, we were first made as minds, and as minds we were made in the image of God, imago dei. And since, as the scriptures tell us, "God is a consuming fire" (Deut. 4:24, 9:3; Heb. 12:29), minds were made in the image of this fire. In fact, they were made to be like irons in the great fire of God: as long as they were plunged into the fire, they were aflame. But just like irons, when they were removed from God's fire, they cooled and became evermore solid and slow. This cooling is our mythological descent into souls and bodies, the fall into flesh.

For Origen, all of this is by God's design. Our fall into flesh is in fact our opportunity for rehabilitation. The original fiery mind moved quickly, too quickly, and so it was easily distracted. The descent into this world slows the mind down, now encumbered by a soul and a body, and trains it over many, many lifetimes to pay steadier attention.

Whenever we successfully pay steady attention to anything, this or that, we inch closer to contemplation, and we blaze just a little brighter.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 1st, 2020 at 3:50 AM

Title: Re: Vipassanā

Content:

monkishlife said:

In Therevada, non-duality is seen as not so important; in fact, Bikkhu Bodhi says that Theravada Buddhism is neither dualistic or non-dualistic.

Malcolm wrote:

This is the position of all Buddhist schools. There cannot be one without many and vice versa.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 1st, 2020 at 10:28 AM

Title: Re: weird as...

Content:

Queequeg said:

<https://www.businessinsider.com/the-11-nations-of-the-united-states-2015-7>

Malcolm wrote:

This map, is a bit facile, but the idea is ultimately based on the book Albion's Seed by David Hackett Fischer.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 1st, 2020 at 10:34 AM

Title: Re: Practices for epidemics and pandemics

Content:

javier.espinoza.t said:

my root guru told me everything one would need about guardians, but never ever mentioned gesar.

maybe my teacher chnn practiced it, but it wasn't that useful or didn't matter or worked after all. otherwise it would be "there", somewhere at least.

i appreciate your messages guys. i take my leave.

Malcolm wrote:

What were you saying about Gesar and CHNN?

<https://www.dzamlingar.net/en/support/fundraising-prizes/divination-cord>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 1st, 2020 at 7:53 PM

Title: Re: weird as...

Content:

Queequeg said:

I think this map is based on a more recent book. <https://www.amazon.com/American-Nations-History-Regional-Cultures/dp/0143122029>

That Albion book looks interesting. I'll never read it, but I'll look around for the crib notes.

Malcolm wrote:

I've read both. The former book from which the map is drawn is based on Albion's Seed and merely extends its arguments.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 1st, 2020 at 7:57 PM

Title: Re: Dalit Buddhism

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

My teacher has worked extensively with the Ambedkarites. Did you have any specific questions?

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

No, but thanks.

I personally believe that politics and religion should stay separated. Others here believe differently. I just thought I'd share with them a politically oriented Buddhist sect. They may find it interesting.

Malcolm wrote:

They also hotly reject rebirth, so, BINOs.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 1st, 2020 at 10:07 PM

Title: Re: Vipassanā

Content:

Astus said:

As for the Theravada view of material dharmas, the smallest unit according to post-canonical teachings are called https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Kalapa_%28atomism%29, they are considered composite,

Malcolm wrote:

Not that different than paramanus, actually.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 2nd, 2020 at 1:08 AM

Title: Re: In 543 AD Emperor Justinian put the Pope in jail for a year

Content:

Brahma said:

In this sense everything being a product of the mind is a similar orthodoxy in Buddhism.

Malcolm wrote:

One difference is that there is no godhead in Buddhadharma, and no creator, and no creation. There is only beginningless dependent origination.

Brahma said:

The world has life to it, so why not meditate on the basis of Immortality? It is found in all Spiritual Teachings, and mentioned by Jesus even by His followers when He asked who Jews back then thought He was, as possibly Elijah, or one of the other Prophets, when Peter simply reveals Him to be the Christ. And Jesus mentions, that for these who are willing to accept it, John the Baptist is the Elijah that is to come. Elijah has a very distinct personality and individuality, so Jesus was a great Teacher who understood reincarnation and He could obviously identify someone's reincarnation according to that part of the New Testament.

Malcolm wrote:

Jesus's trip had nothing to with Buddhadharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 2nd, 2020 at 4:18 AM

Title: Barr Calls it For Biden:

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 2nd, 2020 at 5:29 AM

Title: Re: "Extensive Daily Confessions of Cakrasamvara" by Bhuripa

Content:

Lobsang Damchoi said:

Does anyone have any knowledge of this (possibly) Sakya text?

I found this intriguing title in the Great Mind Training Collection merely cited as the source of a quotation. The quote doesn't mention the yidam and is a standard main training precept. The full citation is below. Thanks, [author:] Bhuripa.

Extensive Daily Confessions of Cakrasamvara [Practice].

Dpal 'khor lo mde mchog gi rgyun bshags rgyas pa. Toh 1533, rgyud 'grel za. P2244, pha.

Malcolm wrote:

It is not a Sakya text, it is an Indian text.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 2nd, 2020 at 8:15 PM

Title: Re: In 543 AD Emperor Justinian put the Pope in jail for a year

Content:

Aemilius said:

name Christ comes from Krishna (meaning "dark" or "black-blue").

Malcolm wrote:

No.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 2nd, 2020 at 8:19 PM

Title: Re: Vipassanā

Content:

Astus said:

'You observe this structure that initially appears to be so solid, the entire physical structure at the level of sensation. Observing, observing you will reach the stage when you experience that the entire physical structure is nothing but subatomic particles: throughout the body, nothing but kalapas (subatomic particles). And even these tiniest subatomic particles are not solid. They are mere vibration, just wavelets.'

(<https://pariyatti.org/Free-Resources/Articles-and-Excerpts/Buddhas-Path-is-to-Experience-Reality>)

Malcolm wrote:

Someone has been reading too much physics.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 2nd, 2020 at 10:53 PM

Title: Re: Reaching the path

Content:

Könchok Thrinley said:

Alan Wallace talks sometimes about so called "reaching the path". Has anyone seen anything about this topic from other teachers, or could one share ones understanding what it means, etc?

Malcolm wrote:

He is talking about the five paths, which begin with the path of accumulation. That path begins with rousing Mahāyāna bodhicitta.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 2nd, 2020 at 11:54 PM

Title: Re: In 543 AD Emperor Justinian put the Pope in jail for a year

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

However later someone went to that monastery...

Malcolm wrote:

Plus, anyone with any knowledge of history knows that there were no Tibetan Buddhist monasteries at all in Ladakh during the time Jesus supposedly spent there.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 3rd, 2020 at 1:08 AM

Title: Re: Is monastic life a right livelihood?

Content:

SaaZ said:

where one "leave" the society to develop one own personal practice, while keep being dependent from the help of the society.

Malcolm wrote:

That's not why one becomes a monastic. One becomes a Buddhist monastic because one has genuine renunciation.

Further, by living on dana you allow other people to generate merit.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 3rd, 2020 at 1:25 AM

Title: Biden's Cabinet

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

https://www.counterpunch.org/2020/12/02/biden-and-the-lost-art-of-political-cabinetry/?fbclid=IwAR2DKuE39FvOTrU0zbZQjfo3xiVcN32p4kEQFJMZMAMZxJPWZ_uuzk1BHNA

Unknown said:

The worst president in U.S. history and the worst Cabinet in U.S. history will soon be succeeded by Joe Biden and the promise of the best and most effective Cabinet in recent time. Biden's success will ultimately be determined by the political posture of Senator Mitch McConnell, but the initial appointments to his administration point to a strategy designed for political success. The punditry class that dominates the mainstream media is wrong to suggest that his first nominees are insufficiently progressive or merely represent Obama 2.0. Without exception, Biden has turned to individuals with the experience and expertise needed to rehabilitate a government that Donald Trump has severely ravaged.

Malcolm wrote:
I strongly agree with this guy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 3rd, 2020 at 3:42 AM

Title: Re: Biden's Cabinet

Content:

Queequeg said:

If Bernie Sanders was the incoming president, would you support the same approach to building the cabinet?

Malcolm wrote:

With a possible Republican senate? Sure. I definitely would support Blinken for State.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 3rd, 2020 at 4:36 AM

Title: Re: Biden's Cabinet

Content:

Queequeg said:

I can't imagine Sanders putting together a cabinet like this. I'm saying this without judgement.

It looks like a thoroughly competent cabinet. If all goes well, the federal government will not be news for the next four years because they do their jobs without scandals.

I'm worried, though, that its not going to be enough to fend off another Republican scorched Earth assault on the country, especially if its some Trumpist in 2024.

Whatever else happens, Biden is going to have to make the lives of lower middle and working class voters palpably better. Its not going to be easy because the economy will be knee capped coming out of this winter - I don't think we've hit the wall yet. If the vaccine(s) works, recovery will be quick... I expect the Republicans to do what they can to sabotage the economy, though.

I see your point that competence is required at this time. I'm worried at the domestic Vandals running amok, though, at the same time. Its a two front war, and I don't know if the old hands are innovative, flexible, and bold enough to take on the totally irresponsible right populism. How do you defend against people who have no scruples at all without going on an overwhelming offensive against them?

Malcolm wrote:

Take a look at GA today—mind blowing.

<https://twitter.com/kaitlancollins/status/1334225962326700034?s=20>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 3rd, 2020 at 7:34 AM

Title: Re: Is monastic life a right livelihood?

Content:

SaaZ said:

Moreover, sticking with the Theravada e Zen tradition, it seems to me that the emphasis is put on free one self rather than generate merit for others. Bottom line, I personally not find it a good argument.

Malcolm wrote:

It is the support lay people offer those who have renounced lay life and taken up robes that generates merit, not your meditation. Their generosity generates merit for them. You don't generate it for them. You understand? It does not really matter whether you find it a "good argument." This is what the Buddha taught. You can accept it or reject it, but you have to understand why he taught what he taught and to whom he taught it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 3rd, 2020 at 7:36 AM

Title: Re: Biden's Cabinet

Content:

Queequeg said:

Its a two front war, and I don't know if the old hands are innovative, flexible, and bold enough to take on the totally irresponsible right populism. How do you defend against people who have no scruples at all without going on an overwhelming offensive against them?

Malcolm wrote:

Take a look at GA today—mind blowing.

And you should see Ghouliani in MI tonight in the MI house oversight committee hearing that's happening right now. Mind blowing, he is repeating the all the same lies they fired Powell for spewing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 3rd, 2020 at 10:14 AM

Title: Re: Biden's Cabinet

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

<https://twitter.com/tribelaw/status/1334295732917039106?s=21>

I have no words.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 3rd, 2020 at 10:19 PM

Title: Re: Is there a place for me in Tibetan buddhism?

Content:

Artziebetter1 said:

I want to badly have a place in vajrayana but I have some beliefs I can't let go of. one of these is a undifferentiated ultimate reality. I have read plotinus arguments for the one in his works, father spitzer and ramanuja and Shankara in their Brahma sutra commentaries when dealing with momentary consciousness as well as the govindabhaya to the Brahma sutras and I am convinced based on all these authors that a permanent unconditioned self exists. I have read both arguments for momentariness and arguments against a self from various authors in Indian literature but remain unconvinced by their arguments and I just can't let go of this belief. oh well that's my karma. I have read the debates between nayaiyikas and mimamsaka and Buddhists who espoused a momentary consciousness and I was convinced a self exists.

I read the golden light sutra and sanghata sutra and it says that you will basically never abandon the dharma or stray from the path once you've read it and I've recited mantras from Gelug sources at that which promise a last rebirth in the womb and no retrogression so I don't think I will ever leave Buddhism explicitly though my understanding of it may be faulty due to human error and karma and imperfections .

So I need a buddhism that will accommodate by brahman view. I heard some kagyus and Jonangpa believe in this . should I follow them?

I'm not here to argue whether I'm wrong or right I just want to stay in buddhism and have a school which can accommodate my seeming unshakeable view in a brahman.

Again I'm not here to argue for this view as it could be wrong I just am personally convinced that it's true and I want to practice vajrayana so I wonder if any schools can accommodate my viewpoints?

Usually questions like this receive a lot of frustration but I'm trying my best to be Buddhist and this is just where I'm at at the moment.

Malcolm wrote:

You can be a Buddhist in Name Only (BINO). But you can't practice Vajrayana because possession of an extreme view such as yours entails an immediate root downfall.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 3rd, 2020 at 10:55 PM

Title: Re: Is monastic life a right livelihood?

Content:

SaaZ said:

I can believe that generosity could be a form of practising non-attachment, thus generating merits. However, is not that people need me to become a monk to start being generous;

Malcolm wrote:

The merit generated by making offerings to the Three Jewels surpasses that of generosity to mundane objects. As a monastic, one represents the Sangha jewel.

This is the reason the Buddha encouraged generosity on the part of the lay population. It's your vows that make you a special object for merit generation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 3rd, 2020 at 11:23 PM

Title: Re: Is there a place for me in Tibetan buddhism?

Content:

Artziebetter1 said:

I want to badly have a place in vajrayana but I have some beliefs I can't let go of. one of these is a undifferentiated ultimate reality. I have read plotinus arguments for the one in his works, father spitzer and ramanuja and Shankara in their Brahma sutra commentaries when dealing with momentary consciousness as well as the govindabhasya to the Brahma sutras and I am convinced based on all these authors that A permanent unconditioned self exists. I have read both arguments for momentariness and arguments against a self from various authors in Indian literature but remain unconvinced by their arguments and I just can't let go of this belief. oh well that's my karma. I have read the debates between nayaiyikas and mimamsaka and Buddhists who espoused a momentary consciousness and I was convinced a self exists.

I read the golden light sutra and sanghata sutra and it says that you will basically never abandon the dharma or stray from the path once you've read it and I've recited mantras from Gelug sources at that which promise a last rebirth in the womb and no retrogression so I don't think I will ever leave Buddhism explicitly though my understanding of it may be faulty due to human error and karma and imperfections .

So I need a buddhism that will accommodate by brahman view. I heard some kagyus and Jonangpa believe in this .should I follow them?

I'm not here to argue whether I'm wrong or right I just want to stay in buddhism and have a school which can accommodate my seeming unshakeable view in a brahman.

Again I'm not here to argue for this view as it could be wrong I just am personally convinced that it's true and I want to practice vajrayana so I wonder if any schools can accommodate my viewpoints?

Usually questions like this receive a lot of frustration but I'm trying my best to be Buddhist and this is just where I'm at at the moment.

Malcolm wrote:

You can be a Buddhist in Name Only (BINO). But you can't practice Vajrayana because possession of an extreme view such as yours entails an immediate root downfall.

Artziebetter1 said:

I have seen arguments that this is what the Jonangpa believed and some karma kagyus: a undifferentiated ultimate reality that isn't a object of consciousness .are you saying black shentongpas can't practice vajrayana. how is this different from the black shentong view?

Malcolm wrote:

Sigh. Your concepts are a big obstacle for you. People with lots of obstinate concepts are not really suited for Vajrayana practice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 4th, 2020 at 12:10 AM

Title: Re: Is there a place for me in Tibetan buddhism?

Content:

Artziebetter1 said:

I want to badly have a place in vajrayana but I have some beliefs I can't let go of. one of these is a undifferentiated ultimate reality. I have read plotinus arguments for the one in his works, father spitzer and ramanuja and Shankara in their Brahma sutra commentaries when dealing with momentary consciousness aswell as the govindabhasya to the Brahma sutras and I am convinced based on all these authors that A permanent unconditioned self exists.

Again I'm not here to argue for this view as it could be wrong I just am personally convinced that it's true and I want to practice vajrayana so I wonder if any schools can accommodate my viewpoints?

kirtu said:

NO WAY!!!! JUST GIVE UP NOW!!!

Just joking.

No Vajrayana school will support these views.

But it doesn't matter (this is directly in opposition to our friend who claims that your view constitutes a root downfall from the start).

People start in different places. There was once a Mahasiddha who began completely as an eternalist, just like you. He was actually sort of tricked into practicing Buddhist tantra because his guru was actually a Buddhist sadhu and not a Hindu sadhu (I don't quite know the correct term here - if this happened nowadays we would say his guru wasn't actually an adherent of Sanātana dharma).

It doesn't really matter. The main thing is turning to the accumulation of merit, turning away from the pursuit of negativities, deepening lovingkindness and compassion. Wisdom grows from that.

If you feel that you want to "use Vajrayana Buddhism" to develop your compassion and positive qualities then go for it.

Kirt

Malcolm wrote:

This is quite unsound advice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 4th, 2020 at 8:32 AM

Title: Re: Is there a place for me in Tibetan buddhism?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Naw...I'm not letting you get away with "perennialist" here without you defining it precisely. You've done this before, Perennialism is both a specific school of modern and historical spiritual thought, and a general tendency :

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Perennial_philosophy

So, which one are you talking about and in what way is he a perennialist?

This way, from the Wikipedia article:

The perennial philosophy (Latin: philosophia perennis), also referred to as perennialism and perennial wisdom, is a perspective in philosophy and spirituality that views all of the world's religious traditions as sharing a single, metaphysical truth or origin from which all esoteric and exoteric knowledge and doctrine has grown.

Also why are you associating perennialism with Shentong?

From the same Wikipedia article the next sentence is: Perennialism has its roots in the Renaissance interest in neo-Platonism and its idea of the One, from which all existence emanates.

So, like that.

Malcolm wrote:
So a BINO.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, December 4th, 2020 at 8:39 AM
Title: Re: Is there a place for me in Tibetan buddhism?
Content:
kirtu said:
Shentong is not perennialism.

Kirt

Malcolm wrote:
It's also not monistic, but whatever.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, December 4th, 2020 at 10:27 AM
Title: Re: Is there a place for me in Tibetan buddhism?
Content:
Artziebetter1 said:
I have never seen any arguments for momentariness of self ..

Malcolm wrote:
Why would there be arguments for the momentary existence of something that exists only as a nominal designation?

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, December 4th, 2020 at 10:28 AM
Title: Re: Is there a place for me in Tibetan buddhism?
Content:
Johnny Dangerous said:
read Spinoza or something.

Malcolm wrote:
Spinoza was basically a materialist on the model of Epicurus.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, December 4th, 2020 at 9:05 PM
Title: Re: Is there a place for me in Tibetan buddhism?
Content:
Schrödinger's Yidam said:
To give an idea of how varied Shentong can be, this is Brunnhölzl talking about Mikyo Dorje (H.H.Karmapa 8).

“When the Clouds Part” p.73: The Karmapa emphasizes that the tathāgata heart is the only ultimately real entity, which is permanent and able to perform functions (such as enlightened activity). He also repeatedly says that the tathāgata heart and sentient beings are mutually exclusive since sentient beings are nothing but the sum of adventitious stains. Thus, sentient beings neither possess nor are the tathāgata heart. This also means that it is not the case that buddha nature exists in sentient beings, but sentient beings (seem to) exist in buddha nature, just like clouds floating in the sky without affecting it.

So here Buddha Nature, which originally was 100% about sentient beings, in this “Empty-of-Other” presentation excludes sentient beings. Kinda suggests that it is transpersonal—at least in HHK8’s interpretation. So don’t think there’s one Shentong view.

Note also Buddha Nature is described as “...the only ultimately real entity, which is permanent and able to perform functions (such as enlightened activity).”

Malcolm wrote:

There are mistaken views about tathagatagarbha, this is just one more. Coming from a Karmapa does not make it less erroneous. It also directly contradicts the Uttaratantra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 4th, 2020 at 9:32 PM

Title: Re: Is there a place for me in Tibetan buddhism?

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:
read Spinoza or something.

Malcolm wrote:

Spinoza was basically a materialist on the model of Epicurus.

tobes said:

????

A pretty direct link back to the Stoics, but I can't really see Epicureanism there.

Malcolm wrote:

https://www.parrhesiajournal.org/parrhesia32/parrhesia32_guyau.pdf

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 4th, 2020 at 9:41 PM

Title: Re: Is monastic life a right livelihood?

Content:

SaaZ said:

For the same reasons that I underlined above (agnostic, etc.), I'm skeptical of this interpretation. I don't see why making offers to the Shanga is greater than making offers to undernourished children. I find it difficult to believe that my personal vows, done in the silence of my head (this is figurative speech, is actually noisy there), suddenly generate merits for other people.

Malcolm wrote:

First, one does not make these vows silently, in one's head. There is no self-ordination in Buddhadharma, not even to become an upasaka.

You receive vows in specific rites, which vary from order to order, while the general outline is the same.

Second, the object is free of affliction. Now, while today monastics are probably not even stream entrants, they still represent arhats. As such, they are representative of the Buddha's Noble Sangha.

But no one would argue there was no merit to supporting undernourished children, but not as much. Why? One has no idea how that person will turn out. The Sangha jewel is only virtuous.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 4th, 2020 at 9:54 PM

Title: Re: The material world of Mahayana

Content:

PeterC said:

I suspect what appeals to people is the aesthetics rather than the content. But who knows. The dominant school often changes over time, too. Sri Lanka once had a large Mahayana sangha. In parts of modern Southeast Asia vajrayana was until not so long ago regarded as less reputable than common Mahayana.

Malcolm wrote:

Ironically, considering Vajrayana was, for a short while, the state religion of Cambodia and also Sumatra, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 4th, 2020 at 10:02 PM

Title: Re: Is there a place for me in Tibetan buddhism?

Content:

haha said:

Even a famous Mahasiddha, Krisnacharya, was a shaiva heretic; there is no problem to practice vajrayana; his teacher took full responsibility to guide him; later, he became the accomplished master.

Malcolm wrote:

First, before he was granted empowerments and so on, Krishnacarya accepted that he had been defeated in debate. Accepting general Buddhadharma has always been a precondition for receiving empowerment in Vajrayana.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 12:03 AM

Title: Re: Is there a place for me in Tibetan buddhism?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

For a little over 100 years now Kongtrul's interpretation seems to be widely accepted within the Karma Kagyu.

Malcolm wrote:

Even the 8th Karmapa did not accept his own view. His writings on gzhan stong were early. His mature view was quite different.

As for Kongtrul, while he had great devotion to Taranatha, his actual writing on gzhan stong reflects more the views of Śākya Chogden, who held among other things that that gnosis, ye shes, was relative.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 12:05 AM

Title: Re: Is there a place for me in Tibetan buddhism?

Content:

Brahma said:

The Dalai Lama would not drive you away...

Malcolm wrote:

I personally heard HHDL say in Tucson, in 2005, "I tell my Christian friends who are interested in emptiness, it's none of your business."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 12:10 AM

Title: Re: Is monastic life a right livelihood?

Content:

SaaZ said:

In ones head or formally made doesn't make much difference to me.

About the second point, with all due respect, It seems to me a bit naive to believe that the Sangha can only be virtuous; there are plenty of examples of non-virtuous behaviours.

Malcolm wrote:

As for the first point: you don't really seem to understand the perspective of vows in Buddhism. A vow you make up yourself is not actually considered right discipline. It is a discipline, sure, but it is not connected with the eight fold path of noble ones.

As for the second point, I addressed that. When you make offerings to a monastic, you are not really making offerings to a person; you are making offerings to an ideal—that people can awaken through the practice of discipline, samadhi, and wisdom.

The Sangha represents that ideal.

I suspect you have not studied these issues carefully, based on your answers. Clearly, at this point in your life, becoming Buddhist monk, a member of the ordained Sangha, is not for you.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 12:12 AM

Title: Re: The material world of Mahayana

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Another pricey set of Mahayana accoutrements: This 8-piece gold butsugu "selection" for a home altar features candlesticks, a flower vase, vessels for offerings, and several other ritual implements. Price: over 46 million yen, or roughly $441,335 United States Dollars at current exchange rates:

<https://item.rakuten.co.jp/dentouhonpo/tko0184/>

Malcolm wrote:

Well, better than a toilet made of gold, were I to be able to make such a extravagant choice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 12:28 AM

Title: Re: Is there a place for me in Tibetan buddhism?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Back to the OP; I say yes, you can be a Buddhist.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, no. He can't. Why? It is very simple. To take the vows of refuge, you have to abandon nonbuddhist teachers, which the OP clearly is unable to do. To take the bodhisattva vows, not only is one not to make a serious study of nonbuddhist tenets, but also one is supposed to avoid spending too much time on Hinayāna tenets and scriptures. And when it comes to Vajrayāna, wrong view is actually a root downfall, that is, abandoning the view of freedom from extremes.

Telling this man he can become a Vajrayāna Buddhist without relinquishing his wrong views is like giving him a plane ticket for a nonstop flight to the hell realms. It is completely irresponsible, idiot compassion.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 1:50 AM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

Ayu said:

Was it true or satire that Trump wants to change the constitution?

Malcolm wrote:

he would if he could...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 2:11 AM

Title: Re: Is there a place for me in Tibetan buddhism?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

In his "Big Red Book" Dudjom Rinpoche says that if you have faith you don't need any of that.

Malcolm wrote:

How can one say one has faith in the Buddha if one disagrees with everything he ever said?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 3:25 AM

Title: Re: Is monastic life a right livelihood?

Content:

SaaZ said:

About the first point, for instance, who decide that a vow made by myself is not right discipline? Different Buddhist traditions have different vows, so who decide which is right?

Malcolm wrote:

Right discipline has been presented by the Buddha in many sources, both the Pali Canon and Mahāyāna. In general, a vow is something one receives from a preceptor. There is a broad consensus across Buddhist traditions that taking such a vows from a preceptor renders the virtue generated by that vow a much more powerful karma. The basic reason for this is that you are entering into a community of practitioners. Just as a man who watches a hundred people kill another man and approves of it receives one hundred times more negative karma than if he just killed a man himself, likewise, someone who takes Buddhist precepts generates as much merit from that as there are people who have also take those precepts.

Self-made vows do not have that force because there is no community to support them.

SaaZ said:

About the second point. Is it really like that? Offering to the ideal of Sangha really generate greater merits than other kinds of offerings? How can you be so sure?

Malcolm wrote:

Again, this is another one of the thing about which there is broad consensus across Buddhist traditions.

SaaZ said:

You might be right, I probably didn't study this things enough, but as I already said, I don't indiscriminately accept all the things that are supposed to be Buddhism as true.

Malcolm wrote:

It is also important not to indiscriminately reject things, just because they challenge your preconceptions about Buddhism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 3:30 AM

Title: Re: Is there a place for me in Tibetan buddhism?

Content:

shankara said:

And how does one know when one has "relinquished wrong views"?

Malcolm wrote:

Quite simple, really. One accepts the view of dependent origination as the correct explanation for the arising of all phenomena. Apart from space and cessation, there aren't any other phenomena.

shankara said:

Does this mean not having any thoughts which are not in accordance with the view of voidness? Really it seems unrealistic to suggest that in order to maintain a pure Vajrayana practise, one has to completely abandon the mental factor of doubt, which I'm sure is present in even many advanced practitioners.

Malcolm wrote:

If someone has doubt about emptiness, they should not enter Vajrayāna teachings.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 4:07 AM
Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
Too rich:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 4:16 AM
Title: Re: Is there a place for me in Tibetan buddhism?
Content:

shankara said:
I think that to completely rid oneself of doubt about anything, one would have to become something of a 'true believer' in the cultish sense. Doubt is a natural part of the process of thinking things through and developing understanding. Personally I have serious doubts about the Prasangika, and am not entirely convinced that the "Tirthika" paths are so useless as many people seem to think them to be.

This doesn't mean I'm not engaging in practice, familiarizing myself with teachings on emptiness in order to meditate on them, or taking refuge in non-Buddhist teachers. I figure so long as I'm undergoing such a process, practicing sincerely, then I'm pretty much on the right track. I'm also pretty sure that there are plenty of Vajrayana practitioners in "the same boat", but who have faith in the method if not complete and unquestioning acceptance of the entire philosophy (of whatever particular school of Vajrayana that may be, and there do seem to be some pretty serious conflicts between each of them...)

Malcolm wrote:
It is not even possible to practice any Vajrayāna sadhana if one lacks conviction in emptiness. How can one practice Vajrayāna methods if one lacks confidence in Vajrayāna view? It is not necessary to be a Prasangika. It is simply necessary to have conviction in emptiness ala the Heart Sūtra. That is sufficient.

Basically, if one reads the Heart Sūtra and is freaked out by it, rejects its message and so on, one is not a candidate for receiving Vajrayāna teachings, any Vajrayāna teachings, including Dzogchen.

Buddha spoke about three gates of liberation: signlessness, emptiness, and wishlessness. He did not mention a fourth anywhere.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 4:27 AM
Title: Re: Is there a place for me in Tibetan buddhism?

Content:

Cinnabar said:

I have seen in myself and my fellow dharma siblings wrong views transmuted through the blessings of practice, study, and devotion.

Malcolm wrote:

Wrong view here specifically refers to not accepting dependent origination and karma with its results.

There is also wrong devotion. What is that? Devotion which lacks wisdom is wrong devotion. Wisdom does not arise from outside oneself.

As Nāgārjuna says:

Only those with the essentials of emptiness and compassion accomplish awakening.

View is the basis of the path. Without a correct view, it is impossible for one's path to be correct.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 5:02 AM

Title: Re: Is there a place for me in Tibetan buddhism?

Content:

Cinnabar said:

I guess I started my practice wrong.

I harbored a combination of eternalist and nihilist views when I came to Buddhism. It took me some time to eradicate those. Some years really.

If I hadn't had faith in my teacher I wouldn't have persevered.

I'd get a text and not understand anything and pray and learn the first word I didn't understand. Then the second. And so on. In time I found myself with madhyamaka and experiential exercises related to emptiness, nature of mind. But it took years.

According to these criteria you present, I should not have started until I had an understanding of dependent origination. I find that a very very very deep and subtle topic. It took a long time to get my mind around, and even now it still gets deeper. It took years and years.

Malcolm wrote:

The difference between you and the OP is that you clearly wanted to change your view, and understood already that you did not have correct view. So you tried to discover that.

But in general, I would not recommend that people who do not understand the basics of Mahāyāna Buddhism seek to enter Vajrayāna right away. Otherwise, people who try to practice Vajrayāna without a correct view of emptiness simply wind up taking rebirth as rudras, they either negate cause and result because they have an annihilationist view, or they negate cause and result because they have an eternalist view. But you are talking to someone who wept when first reading the Perfection of Wisdom sūtras, and whose hair stood on end when hearing the word "śūnyatā."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 5:53 AM

Title: Re: Is there a place for me in Tibetan buddhism?

Content:

Soma999 said:

Hindu dharma does not negate karma and dependent arising.

Malcolm wrote:

Shankarācārya explicitly rejects dependent origination as do all other Hindu polemicists. The Hindu doctrine of karma is quite deterministic, compared to that of the Buddha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 6:13 AM

Title: Re: Is there a place for me in Tibetan buddhism?

Content:

Soma999 said:

There can be a fear of dying or disappearing that makes one stick to certain beliefs, like of a self.

It won't be resolved in a forum. It can be resolved in graciousness and harmony with efficient persons.

Even a good therapist can remove certain blocks and things will be in harmony.

Malcolm wrote:

Ummm, that's actually besides the point.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 9:29 AM

Title: Re: Reaching the path

Content:

Könchok Thrinley said:

Alan Wallace talks sometimes about so called "reaching the path". Has anyone seen anything about this topic from other teachers, or could one share ones understanding what it means, etc?

Malcolm wrote:

He is talking about the five paths, which begin with the path of accumulation. That path begins with rousing Mahāyāna bodhicitta.

Könchok Thrinley said:

I see. He mentions often that when one reaches the path one is basically already irreversible. So does it equate with accomplishing the path of accumulation?

Malcolm wrote:

There are various forms of irreversibility, not only one.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 8:38 PM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

To be honest I would not call Trump an "idiot." You don't become a self-made billionaire, not to mention President of the US after starting out as a joke in the primaries, by being an idiot.

Malcolm wrote:

He is not a billionaire, never has been, all his money is from daddy. He is in fact an idiot, as are his children.

NY real estate people consider him a joke. I know this to be so because I know the former dean of the NYU real estate institute.

The only thing you have correct in the above is that he is a conman and a narcissist. But you don't have to be smart to be conman. You just have to find someone more stupid than you.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 8:49 PM

Title: Re: How is shentong different from tirthika doctrine

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

ibid Thus, in this context, one needs to keep in mind that since all phenomena of seeming reality are not really existent in the first place (and Dolpopa and Mahamudra agree on this), there is always only one ultimately real phenomenon to begin with, which is buddha nature or mind's natural luminosity. Consequently, in fact, there is only a single actual reality, and therefore any presentation or separation of two realities is necessarily of expedient meaning.

This was the next paragraph from my post immediately above. I include that here because Malcolm and JD had unanswered posts from a thread now closed.

Malcolm wrote:

This directly contradicts your assertion that Buddhanature and sentient beings are mutually exclusive. Why? Because here you've defined the luminosity of the mind as Buddhanature. No sentient being, no Buddhanature.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 8:51 PM

Title: Re: How is shentong different from tirthika doctrine

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

BTW, I read some Kagyu teachers and am not particularly doctrinaire about Shentong/Rangtong...I just don't think Shentong is equivalent to Platonism, Advaita, Monism generally, or whatever.

Malcolm wrote:

It isn't, it's a form of false aspectarian cittamatra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 9:28 PM

Title: Re: Reaching the path

Content:

Könchok Thrinley said:

I see. He mentions often that when one reaches the path one is basically already irreversible. So does it equate with accomplishing the path of accumulation?

Malcolm wrote:

There are various forms of irreversibility, not only one.

Könchok Thrinley said:

Could you please elaborate, or mention them?

Malcolm wrote:

For example, there is irreversibility on the path of accumulation, where one's bodhicitta becomes stable; on the path of application, one is irreversible at the level of patience, where one will no longer take birth in the three lower realms; the path of seeing is by definition irreversible, and after achieving it, one will always achieve it again in every birth; the irreversibility on the path of cultivation happens on the eighth bhumi, where one will never take birth in the desire realm again. And of course Buddhahood is irreversible.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 9:52 PM

Title: Re: How is shentong different from tirthika doctrine

Content:

shankara said:

I just last night read something of Taranatha on this subject. A short treatise you can find here: <https://dzokden.org/read/library/study/lineage-commentaries/>.

What he says about the Rangtong treating the second turning of the wheel of Dharma as definitive and the third (as well as the first) as provisional is very interesting. Firstly, I would like to know if this is true? If so, it strikes me as problematic.

Malcolm wrote:

The whole theory of the three turnings of the wheel is problematic, actually. There isn't any agreement which sutras are "third turning."

The Indian masters paid no attention to the three turnings at all. As a doctrine it finds no place in Dzogchen teachings at all until after the thirteenth century. The Sakyapas largely ignore it.

The Gelukpas treat the second turning as definitive.

Some teachers include the tathāgatagarbha sūtras in this category (though the Indian Yogacāra master themselves were skeptical of tathāgatagarbha theory, since they advocated the theory of the icchantika, Madhyāmikas were actually more open to it than Yogacārins).

This is mostly a Tibetan trip, based on the commentary of the Korean Master Wongchuk on the Samdhinirmocana Sūtra, translated during the imperial period.

shankara said:

The "Mahaparinirvana Sutra" is apparently of the third turning, and personally I think it is the most definitive of all Sutras (excepting perhaps the Lotus) due to it being the last preached before the death of Shakyamuni. Does the Rangtong school really regard this Sutra as provisional?

Malcolm wrote:

There is no such thing as a "rang stong school," except in the eyes of gzhan stong pas.

Generally speaking, everyone in India, including the Yogacāra masters, regarded the Prajñāpāramitā sūtras as definitive in meaning. We know this for example because Virupa, who had been a Yogacāra master prior to his awakening, carried a copy of the PP in 8000 lines with him everywhere he travelled.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 10:52 PM

Title: Re: How is shentong different from tirthika doctrine

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

ibid

This was the next paragraph from my post immediately above. I include that here because Malcolm and JD had unanswered posts from a thread now closed.

Malcolm wrote:

This directly contradicts your assertion that Buddhanature and sentient beings are mutually exclusive. Why? Because here you've defined the luminosity of the mind as Buddhanature. No sentient being, no Buddhanature.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I never asserted that. I reported HHK#8's remarkable interpretation of Buddha Nature/Shentong as an interesting outlier to the gamut of possible views. My own interpretation is fluid, as different moods may dictate.

Malcolm wrote:

You know what Buddha said about views, right?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 5th, 2020 at 11:52 PM

Title: Re: How is shentong different from tirthika doctrine

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

You know what Buddha said about views, right?

No. What did he say?

Malcolm wrote:

They are a thicket.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 6th, 2020 at 1:57 AM

Title: Re: 45 missing children recovered during statewide anti human trafficking operation in ohio

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.factcheck.org/2020/08/viral-chart-distorts-human-trafficking-statistics/>

Unknown said:

Defendants charged. The number of defendants charged annually went up from 181 in fiscal year 2010 to 531 in fiscal year 2016 under Obama. That number again went up in fiscal year 2017 to 553, before dropping the following two years — to 386 and 343 in fiscal years 2018 and 2019, respectively.

Trafficking convictions. Convictions — which often result from prosecutions initiated in previous years — are up in recent years, relative to years past. In fiscal year 2016, there were 439 convictions, up from 297 the year before. There were 499, 526 and 475 convictions in fiscal years 2017, 2018 and 2019, respectively.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 6th, 2020 at 6:49 AM

Title: Re: How is shentong different from tirthika doctrine

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

No. What did he say?

Malcolm wrote:

They are a thicket.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Ah.

That must be why Zen avoids the subject.

Malcolm wrote:

And what's the actual point of Madhyamaka...?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 6th, 2020 at 7:57 AM

Title: Re: How is shentong different from tirthika doctrine

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

And what's the actual point of Madhyamaka...?

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

To give someone the insight so they can “let go” of appearances, and to bring closure to the intellect and its misdirected attempts to understand.

It's a jumping off point.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it's to relinquish all views.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 6th, 2020 at 8:24 AM

Title: Re: How is shentong different from tirthika doctrine

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

To give someone the insight so they can "let go" of appearances, and to bring closure to the intellect and its misdirected attempts to understand.

It's a jumping off point.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it's to relinquish all views.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

That's what I just said.

Malcolm wrote:

Relinquishing views is not about relinquishing appearances. Further, without relying on conventional truth, one cannot understand ultimate truth. And if one does not understand ultimate truth, nirvana cannot be realized. So what is ultimate truth? Dependently originated things are empty. Empty of what? Extremes of existence and nonexistence. What are views? Views concern existence and nonexistence. What cures them? Dependent origination. But your view constantly argues for the existence of this and the nonexistence of that. Therefore, you are not free from views. It's why you spend so much time arguing and advocating for a view. You set up the pins, I knock them down. When you are free from views then you will stop setting up the pins and the game will be over.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 6th, 2020 at 11:00 AM

Title: Re: How is shentong different from tirthika doctrine

Content:

tobes said:

Very nailed Malcolm.

Danny said:

Hang on a moment moon reflected in water!

M's assertion/non assertion is established view.

It's how Prasaṅgika negate opponents.

I.e. don't forward a position to be refuted.

It's called the four way Mula way of arguing. But is still a "view", a philosophical position.

Malcolm wrote:

Any philosophical position necessarily entails a proposition concerning existence or nonexistence. I have never made a proposition concerning either. If someone puts forth such a proposition, they are at fault. Since I have never put forward any such proposition, I am free from fault. Dependent origination alone frees one from the tangle of views.

Nevertheless, I still look both ways when crossing the street.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 6th, 2020 at 9:32 PM

Title: Re: Dzogchen Community of Chogyal Namkhai Norbu

Content:

Könchok Thrinley said:

Hi, I would like to ask what happened that Palyul Choktrul felt that this needed to be said?

Malcolm wrote:

What rumors?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 7th, 2020 at 2:53 AM

Title: Re: Picking and choosing

Content:

CosmosFF said:

uhm guys i have another question

If picking and choosing leads to suffering, where is the limit to what is considered picking and choosing? Is picking and choosing conscious acts or more? If I want to live and thus eat rice, is this picking and choosing? Or am i acting out of buddha nature? Is saving all living beings picking and choosing, when i could be smacking rocks together in the forest instead? is there any difference between these two? Is that picking and choosing?

Malcolm wrote:

Actually, you have to choose nonafflicted things and avoid afflicted things, you have to choose virtuous things and avoid nonvirtuous things.

Between choosing to benefit yourself and benefit others, the former has merely led to your present state of suffering, the latter frees everyone.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 7th, 2020 at 3:35 AM

Title: Re: Picking and choosing

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Actually, you have to choose nonafflicted things and avoid afflicted things, you have to choose virtuous things and avoid nonvirtuous things.

Between choosing to benefit yourself and benefit others, the former has merely led to your present state of suffering, the latter frees everyone.

CosmosFF said:

If buddha eats to stay alive, this cant be leading to a state of suffering, right? Do you mean it leads to a state of suffering if you choose yourself over others? Since compassion and all that... I also interpret that you mean "choosing the benefit of others" to be the liberation of all beings, not just benefit as in something pleasurable that would lead to my own dukkha. Is this correct?

Malcolm wrote:

The Buddha taught a middle way between asceticism and indulgence.

Choosing to benefit others will lead to your own happiness. It can involve liberation of all sentient beings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 7th, 2020 at 10:18 AM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

Minobu said:

i had this conversation recently..Dems are big on war ..

Malcolm wrote:

Historically false. Nixon escalated Vietnam, the Bushes started both Iraq wars.

Eisenhower began the US involvement in Vietnam after the French were routed at Diem Bien Phu.

As for Trump, he started a war against the American people.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 7th, 2020 at 9:53 PM

Title: Re: Prajnaparamita sutra - other translations than Conze's?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The pp in 10,000 lines was published at 84,000.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 7th, 2020 at 11:26 PM

Title: Re: Dzogchen Community of Chogyal Namkhai Norbu

Content:

heart said:

Why was he embalmed? Who decided that and so on?

Malcolm wrote:

According to what I have been told, Rinpoche decided his body was to be embalmed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 8th, 2020 at 12:44 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen Community of Chogyal Namkhai Norbu

Content:

heart said:

I am not against it, I just don't understand why the students don't get informed.

Malcolm wrote:

As far as I can tell, it is because Yeshe is in a conflict with the Dzogchen Community.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 8th, 2020 at 7:31 PM

Title: Re: Dzogchen Community of Chogyal Namkhai Norbu

Content:

Giovanni said:

He saw D.C.fading away and taking new forms. That is my guess.

Malcolm wrote:

This contradicts everything he ever said in his life about the future of the DC.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 9th, 2020 at 1:34 AM

Title: Re: How exactly is there a momentariness of consciousness ?

Content:

Artziebetter1 said:

If one chitta perishes and the next arises,from what does this next chitta arise?in a chain of chittas you would either have to have a chitta perishing and it's subsequent chitta arising from nothingness,and thus there could be no conditioning of a chitta by another or you would have a chitta giving rise to another chitta and then perishing in wich case there would be confused experiences and such arising would fall under arising from other wich is still exnihilo arising and cannot really occur.I think that abhidharma teaches the former view of momentariness and that the latter is just a possible form I've given for the sake of argument in favor of the momentariness view but even that does not hold water because creation from other is still exnihilo creation.

Malcolm wrote:

This is addressed in Madhyamaka: causes and effects are neither the same nor are they different. Further, this criticism you raise, applies only to moments that have parts. Partless moments are immune to Madhyamaka reasoning. So, 1) given that causes and effects are neither the same nor are they different, for example, milk and its curds; 2) given that moments are partless; and 3) given that nothing can arise from a single cause; and further, 4) given that when moment of mind ceases there nothing to prevent the arising of the subsequent moment of mind, your qualm is removed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 9th, 2020 at 5:15 AM

Title: Re: How exactly is there a momentariness of consciousness ?

Content:

Artziebetter1 said:

This is exactly what I've been saying and is also the vedantin view. materiality undergoes a change in substance or form but nothing new is ever created or destroyed (even light goes on into more subtle states).

Malcolm wrote:

That's not what saying "cause and effect are neither the same nor different" means. One thing does not change into another thing. For example, this flame does not become that flame when one lights one candle with another. They are not the same, and nothing is transferred, and nevertheless there is a serial continuity.

Artziebetter1 said:

With regards to chitta however, chitta is not substantial and doesn't transform into anything apart yet same from it like milk to butter. And to say there is nothing to prevent the arising of the subsequent moment of mind is false as this is still arising from other which is impossible

Malcolm wrote:

Citta is supported by caittas, and vice versa, they arise together and support each other, being the supporting conditions for each others arising.

Artziebetter1 said:

and the sarvastavadin and Theravada abhidharmas do seem to say that a cause totally perishes before an effect can arise which I'm glad you don't believe.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no such thing as arising from a single cause. In Buddhadharma, at least in Indian Buddhadharma, there are six causes and four conditions. One of the six causes is the creative cause, karanahetu, which is the fact that all phenomena are a cause for all other phenomena apart from themselves.

Artziebetter1 said:

In any case It seems that there is only one chitta in the mind's stream if arising from other also cannot be established and if it is also ex nihilo creation.

Malcolm wrote:

All cittas arise with caittas, as above. For example, vedana and samjñā are two dominant caittas given the status of skandhas. All sentient beings have five skandhas, though the number of caittas they possess varies depending what realm they inhabit; desire, form, or formless realm.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 9th, 2020 at 5:24 AM

Title: Re: Four Classical Indian Languages

Content:

kirtu said:

Paiśācī

Malcolm wrote:

Is Pali, the language of the Sthaviravādins.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 9th, 2020 at 8:45 PM

Title: Re: How is shentong different from tirthika doctrine

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

And again, you stated that there was a claim that samsara arises from the Dharmakaya somehow, I don't see that here either, not that I expect to.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Kongtrul's "Light Rays of the Stainless Vajra Moon" tr. Brunnhölzl. (p.847 of "When the Clouds Part"):

Kongtrul said:

These appearances of the three existences (the container that is the outer world and the [inner] content [of sentient beings], just as a face's being transferred [as a reflection] into a mirror, appear as the magical display of inner nadis, vayus, and tilakas, and these three abide as the aspects of "the other"--the circle of the supreme mandala with its support and supported. All of these are true reality's--the sugar heart's--own light and own radiance, the dharmakaya itself appearing as all aspects, and utterly changeless wisdom.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

(formatting mine)

If you're not into this type of approach that's fine. Tsongkhapa would say it is a bunch of horse apples. Plenty of highly realized masters completely reject that kind of idea. But plenty of highly realized masters embrace it too. So it's a personal and karmic choice.

Malcolm wrote:

That's not transpersonal. That's saying appearances exist in rig pa the same way a reflection exists in a mirror.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 9th, 2020 at 8:59 PM

Title: Re: How exactly is there a momentariness of consciousness ?

Content:

Artziebetter1 said:

This is exactly what I've been saying and is also the vedantin view. materiality undergoes a change in substance or form but nothing new is ever created or destroyed (even light goes on into more subtle states).

Malcolm wrote:

That's not what saying "cause and effect are neither the same nor different" means. One thing does not change into another thing. For example, this flame does not become that flame when one lights one candle with another. They are not the same, and nothing is transferred, and nevertheless there is a serial continuity.

Artziebetter1 said:

With regards to chitta however, chitta is not substantial and doesn't transform into anything apart yet same from it like milk to butter And to say there is nothing to prevent the arising of the subsequent moment of mind is false as this is still arising from other which is impossible

Malcolm wrote:

Citta is supported by caittas, and vice versa, they arise together and support each other, being the supporting conditions for each others arising.

Artziebetter1 said:

and the sarvastavadin and Theravada abhidharmas do seem to say that a cause totally perishes before an effect can arise which I'm glad you don't believe.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no such thing as arising from a single cause. In Buddhadharma, at least in Indian Buddhadharma, there are six causes and four conditions. One of the six causes is the creative cause, karanahetu, which is the fact that all phenomena are a cause for all other phenomena apart from themselves.

Artziebetter1 said:

In any case It seems that there is only one chitta in the mind's stream' if arising from other also cannot be established and if it is also ex nihilo creation.

Malcolm wrote:

All cittas arise with caittas, as above. For example, vedana and samjñā are two dominant caittas given the status of skandhas. All sentient beings have five skandhas, though the number of caittas they possess varies depending what realm they inhabit; desire, form, or formless realm.

Artziebetter1 said:

I can understand the subtle mind giving rise to Vedana and perception etc but not the other way around. If the caittas come from cittas then when one citta perishes how can its caittas give rise to another new subtle mind which hosts the mental factors? What I mean by this is that if caittas are dependant on cittas to exist, then when one citta perishes how can its caittas give rise to a new citta with its own caittas? If this happens in the case where one citta perishes only after its subsequent citta arises due to the former's caittas, there would be confused experience and multiple selves at once wouldn't there?

How does caitta create citta? How can something give rise to something else completely new? If arising cannot be established at all, then there must be only one citta. That's the point of OP.

Malcolm wrote:

Caittas do not create cittas; cittas and caittas arise together and support one another. A citta arises when there is sensory contact with an object, either physical or mental. For example, when the eye organ and a form meet, there is an eye consciousness. When the mental organ and a caitta meet, there is a mental consciousness, etc. caittas are the objects of a citta. That's how caittas support cittas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 10th, 2020 at 12:48 AM

Title: Re: How is shentong different from tirthika doctrine

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I don't think appearances are considered as such in Shentong. The images are never anything other than the mirror, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

And this is why gzhan stong does not go beyond false aspectarian cittamatra, since it is just false aspectarian cittamatra.

But does not mean that everything is only your ultimate gnosis. If it were, that would mean I am your ultimate gnosis.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 10th, 2020 at 1:33 AM

Title: Re: How is shentong different from tirthika doctrine

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I don't think appearances are considered as such in Shentong. The images are never anything other than the mirror, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

And this is why gzhan stong does not go beyond false aspectarian cittamatra, since it is just false aspectarian cittamatra.

But does not mean that everything is only your ultimate gnosis. If it were, that would mean I am your ultimate gnosis.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

We are both appearances of transpersonal gnosis.

Malcolm wrote:

Is that transpersonal gnosis dual or nondual? If it is the former, it cannot be an ultimate gnosis since it is dualistic; if it is the latter, dualistic appearances cannot appear within a nondual gnosis. Further, if dualistic appearances are manifesting in this gnosis, like reflections in a mirror, it must be a personal gnosis (as suggested by the term pratyatmyavedanajñāna, i.e. the gnosis that one intuitively individually), rather than a transpersonal gnosis, because if it were a transpersonal gnosis everyone would experience it at the same time just as it was, and buddhahood would be impossible. If it is a personal gnosis, then dualistic outer appearances can manifest to it, without that gnosis becoming dualistic, and without outer, dependently-originated, apparent phenomena being "mind only." And this is what it means to say that all appearances are included in sugatagarbha, which is just the gnosis that one intuitively individually (look it up). There is a difference between appearances and apparent objects, even in gzhan stong. Appearances are like the moon in the water, apparent objects are like the moon. No moon, no reflection; no water, no reflection.

I suggest you stop tying yourself up in conundrums and go study these things in a proper way. Your self-study is just confusing you.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 10th, 2020 at 4:03 AM

Title: Re: How is shentong different from tirthika doctrine

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

You literally just got done trying to prove to me that samsara arises from the Dharmakaya, so apparently you think Shentong does in fact teach that the conditioned phenomena arise from the unconditioned.

Malcolm wrote:
Or worse, the faults arise from buddha qualities.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, December 10th, 2020 at 8:06 AM
Title: Re: How is shentong different from tirthika doctrine
Content:
Johnny Dangerous said:
You literally just got done trying to prove to me that samsara arises from the Dharmakaya, so apparently you think Shentong does in fact teach that the conditioned phenomena arise from the unconditioned.

Malcolm wrote:
Or worse, the faults arise from buddha qualities.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:
Yep. Sad but true.

Malcolm wrote:
Do you realize how incoherent that is?

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, December 10th, 2020 at 8:13 AM
Title: Re: Dzogchen Community of Chogyal Namkhai Norbu
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
This thread has actually descended into idle gossip.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, December 10th, 2020 at 10:08 AM
Title: Re: How is shentong different from tirthika doctrine
Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:
Yep. Sad but true.

Malcolm wrote:
Do you realize how incoherent that is?

Schrödinger's Yidam said:
Rigpa>marigpa.

Doesn't seem all that strange to me.

Malcolm wrote:

That just means you, nominally, don't get it. Pure phenomena cannot produce impure phenomena. Buddha qualities cannot give rise to their opposite. If they could, Buddhas could become sentient beings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 10th, 2020 at 10:13 AM

Title: Re: How exactly is there a momentariness of consciousness ?

Content:

Artziebetter1 said:

but I thought that in Yogachara there are no external objects?so when one Chitta perishes what gives rise to the subsequent chitta?the chitta is alaya and you guys say that alaya ceases and perishes basically and arises.I don't understand how you can believe this.

Malcolm wrote:

Even in Yogacara, conventionally, outer objects exist. At the level,of analysis, caittas give rise to the appearance of outer objects.

You really don't understand Buddhist tenets because you have not properly studied them.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 10th, 2020 at 10:19 AM

Title: Re: How is shentong different from tirthika doctrine

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Rigpa>marigpa.

Doesn't seem all that strange to me.

Malcolm wrote:

That just means you, nominally, don't get it. Pure phenomena cannot produce impure phenomena. Buddha qualities cannot give rise to their opposite. If they could, Buddhas could become sentient beings.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Sounds like you've never met a fallen tulku. Try watching Gesar Mukpo's movie.

Malcolm wrote:

Laughable. Tulkus are just Tibetan cultural bullshit, did you ever ask yourself why there were never any Indian Tulkus? Or Tulkus in China, Japan, etc.?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 10th, 2020 at 10:22 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen Community of Chogyal Namkhai Norbu

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This thread has actually descended into idle gossip.

Johnny Dangerous said:

I feel like Malcolm is probably right and we have pretty much done this to death. Since this is an omnibus thread, I'm gonna ask that everyone just take a bit of a break for now. I feel like everyone (including me) got their say, and we should probably leave the thread be for questions about practice etc., which will be a much more positive direction.

Thanks.

Aloke said:

How democratic!

Malcolm wrote:

Given that I am the OP, I think this thread has lived out its natural life.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 10th, 2020 at 10:28 AM

Title: Re: Abhidharmakosabhasyam Book Club

Content:

Manjushri said:

Their approach when it comes to challenging confusion and wrong ideas might still be a tad too uninhibited and even confrontational

Malcolm wrote:

It helps to remember that it's not the person that is being negated, but the sentence on the page. It isn't personal.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 10th, 2020 at 10:31 AM

Title: Re: Illuminating Quotes by Malcolm Namdrol-la

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Tulkus are just Tibetan cultural bullshit, did you ever ask yourself why there were never any Indian Tulkus? Or Tulkus in China, Japan, etc.?

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

<https://www.dharmawheel.net/viewtopic.php?p=561123#p561123>

Malcolm wrote:

Not to mention the fact that the Tulku institution only emerged in Tibet in the 13th century, after Dharma had been in Tibet for nearly 500 years...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 10th, 2020 at 10:38 AM

Title: Re: How is shentong different from tirthika doctrine

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

How about you. Do you think any tulkus are nitmanakaya Buddhas? (Hint; this is on the record. I'm posting it to your "Malcolm quotes" thread.)

Malcolm wrote:

Nope. Not a single one. There might be some outside the system (most certainly, actually) though, unrecognized and anonymous.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 10th, 2020 at 11:09 AM

Title: Re: How is shentong different from tirthika doctrine

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Unrecognized tulkus are bodhisattvas on their Paths.

Malcolm wrote:

Then they are not Tulkus, by definition.

A Tulku is a fully realized Buddha, not a Bodhisatva on the path.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 10th, 2020 at 11:17 PM

Title: Re: Practices for epidemics and pandemics

Content:

karmanyangpo said:

Hello Malcolm, I noticed you mentioned that a 3 day retreat is obligatory for Dorje Gotrab and I am wondering if this is always the case since I have heard there are different terma and practices for the mantra. My own teacher didn't seem to say that we needed to do a 3 day retreat to activate it. Would appreciate your input.

Malcolm wrote:

According to the original terma of Dorje Lingpa. Three day retreat uninterrupted by other speech. Alternately, a one month retreat of Guru Drakpo.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 11th, 2020 at 10:08 AM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

karmanyngpo said:

These are my 2 cents... Even if a person who supports Trump is dead wrong and deluded, hopefully a Dharma practitioner who supports Biden can at least imagine how a person could be duped to support him.

Malcolm wrote:

I can imagine, but I am not especially sympathetic of fascists.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 11th, 2020 at 6:00 PM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

Dan74 said:

The others are always dead wrong and deluded and now also fascists/traitors, hillbillies/sheeple, troglodytes/perverts, etc.

Choose your side.

Malcolm wrote:

Guess you like the view up there in your Swiss Ivory tower. On the other hand, here in the United States there is a defeated president trying his best to overturn his legitimate defeat. So yeah, he and his followers are fascists, American style, which involves a lot of hillbillies, sheeple, and other assorted deplorables who all seem unable to distinguish reality from tv.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 11th, 2020 at 7:58 PM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

Dan74 said:

There are millions of people who firmly believe the election was stolen and that Trump is fighting for democracy. Some of those people are surely sincere and not stupid, or do you see that as a logical impossibility? Neither do they necessarily have to be fascists, racists, etc..

Malcolm wrote:

Anyone who thinks the election was stolen from Trump is an idiot. Anyone who supports Trump is a fascist. There really isn't any discussion to be had about this.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 11th, 2020 at 8:19 PM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

So yeah, he and his followers are fascists, American style, which involves a lot of hillbillies, sheeple, and other assorted deplorables who all seem unable to distinguish reality from tv.

FiveSkandhas said:

Beings are numberless. Don't Bodhisattvas vow to save them all? Even the seventy million who voted for Trump?

Malcolm wrote:

The older I get, the more I think the Yogacarins were onto something with their idea of icchantikas.

Anyway, bodhisattvas can't save anyone. That's not how the Dharma works. Everybody must liberate themselves.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 11th, 2020 at 9:52 PM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

And I don't know how you feel about Pure Land "other power" but a great many believers of that strain of thought might take issue with the statement "Everybody must liberate themselves."

Malcolm wrote:

Amitabha can't liberate anyone. That's just not how the Dharma works.

"Sins can't be washed away with water, suffering cannot be manually removed,

I can't give you liberation, but I can show you a path."

— Śākyamuni Buddha

Its up to everyone to practice that path themselves, including Pure Land Buddhists, all of them.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 11th, 2020 at 9:59 PM

Title: Re: Four Classical Indian Languages

Content:

kirtu said:

Sanskrit...

Malcolm wrote:

Is derived from Prakrit.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 11th, 2020 at 10:02 PM

Title: Re: If Nagarjuna had a mirror

Content:

Astus said:

mirroring.

Malcolm wrote:

Apart from what has been mirrored and not been mirrored, there is no [present] mirroring. A mirroring mirror is redundant, just like moving movers.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 11th, 2020 at 10:06 PM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Icchantikas...yikes. Well, the Dharmakshema version of the Nirvana Sutra provides for their salvation, and that's good enough for me. I wonder if there are any old-school Faxian Yogacarins who still hold to the original doctrine.

"Anyway, bodhisattvas can't save anyone"...well, the argument can be made in a Prajnaparamita sort of sense, and probably based on other sources...but those who take the Bodhisattva Vows promise to liberate them all anyway.

Malcolm wrote:

Formally speaking, Mādhyamikas reject the idea of icchantikas. Practically speaking, mādhyamikas admit that there may be some sentient beings who are so benighted that liberation is totally beyond them. I am not sure there are any such beings among Trumpsters, but I wouldn't rule it out either. Its a pity, but what to do. One can lead a horse to water, but one can't make it drink.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 11th, 2020 at 10:28 PM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Well, according to the 4th Shinshu patriarch Tao-ch'o, "...there is no power inherent either in the reciter or in the words recited. The power was with Amida Buddha alone, and the power of His Primal Vow was all that was needed to bring the devotee to the Pure Land."

<http://web.mit.edu/stclair/www/patriarchs.html>

Malcolm wrote:

Devotee? That implies a path. Also, it means that, according to this reasoning, the primal vow is not very powerful and Amitabha is not very powerful. Why? Because not all sentient beings are devotees of Amitabha.

FiveSkandhas said:

The most "Other power"-centric strains of pure land seem to entertain ideas such as faith in Amida and Nenbutsu itself being a gift from Amida, and the chanting of the Nenbutsu being powered by Amida rather than the chanter.

Malcolm wrote:

A very selective Buddha then, since not everyone receives this gift.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 11th, 2020 at 10:32 PM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Whether or not the horses choose to imbibe, we can be sure that they will soon have to accept the end of Trumpism. A kind of forced intubation if you will.

Malcolm wrote:

We will see. I don't think the Trumps are going away anytime soon, and I am sure they will remain a toxic force in American politics for decades, unless, and one can only hope, Donald Trump and his children are jailed for tax evasion by the State of NY.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 11th, 2020 at 10:34 PM

Title: Re: How exactly is there a momentariness of consciousness ?

Content:

Artziebetter1 said:

The only reason to practice for me is to gain merit, to be born in the deva realms as long as possible

I value my consciousness.

Bristollad said:

And this is another reason why it would be inappropriate for you to practise Buddhist tantra - this aspiration is insufficient for that practice.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. As Mañjuśrī said to Sachen,

If you are attached to this life, you are not a Dharma practitioner.

If you are attached to samsara, renunciation is lacking.

If you are attached to your own goals, bodhicitta is lacking.

If grasping arises, the view is lacking.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 12th, 2020 at 1:43 AM

Title: Re: Four Classical Indian Languages

Content:

kirtu said:

The usual definition is that Prakrit is derived from Sanskrit (and most Hindu scholars would say that, and probably Kongtrul would have said that as well).

Malcolm wrote:

Sanskrit literally means "refined language." Prakrit literally means "natural language."

"When the term arose in India, "Sanskrit" was not thought of as a specific language set apart from other languages, but rather as a particularly refined or perfected manner of speaking. Knowledge of Sanskrit was a marker of social class and educational attainment and the language was taught mainly to members of the higher castes, through close analysis of Sanskrit grammarians such as Pāṇini. Sanskrit, as the learned language of Ancient India, thus existed alongside the Prakrits (vernaculars), which evolved into the modern Indo-Aryan languages (Hindi, Nepali, Assamese, Marathi, Konkani, Urdu, and Bengali)."

<https://www.newworldencyclopedia.org/entry/Sanskrit>

This entry is very good, based on excellent sources.

"a particularly refined or perfected manner of speaking"

We have examples of Buddhist brahmins in the Pali cannon looking askance at lower caste monks' inability to correct pronounce long and short syllables, like a and ā, and the Buddha rebuking them for their arrogance. A sort of tomato and tomato kind of thing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 12th, 2020 at 9:06 AM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Well, according to the 4th Shinshu patriarch Tao-ch'o, "...there is no power inherent either in the reciter or in the words recited. The power was with Amida Buddha alone, and the power of His Primal Vow was all that was needed to bring the devotee to the Pure Land."

<http://web.mit.edu/stclair/www/patriarchs.html>

Genjo Conan said:

But rebirth in a Pure Land is not the same as liberation. My understanding of Pure Land soteriology is that, once in the Pure Land, practitioners study the dharma with Amitabha and countless bodhisattvas until they realize buddhahood. Which, clearly rebirth in a Pure Land is conducive to liberation, but is not, by itself, a sufficient condition of liberation: the practitioner still has to put in the work.

SonamTashi said:

This is true of most Pure Land schools, but Jodo Shinshu teaches that those who rely on the 18th vow immediately attain full buddhahood upon rebirth in the pure land, and subsequently immediately return to the saha world.

Malcolm wrote:

You ever met anyone who made the round trip?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 12th, 2020 at 9:20 AM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Who knows how many times we have been given assistance due to their unfathomable compassion, without realizing it?

Malcolm wrote:

Speculative. But one thing I know for a fact is that merit which was gathered in past lives leads to meeting the Dharma in this one. That's something I can take to the bank.
Karma is unerring.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 12th, 2020 at 10:19 AM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Who knows how many times we have been given assistance due to their unfathomable compassion, without realizing it?

Malcolm wrote:

Speculative. But one thing I know for a fact is that merit which was gathered in past lives leads to meeting the Dharma in this one. That's something I can take to the bank.
Karma is unerring.

FiveSkandhas said:

May your merit only increase; may your practice be met with success in every way.

Malcolm wrote:

We generally hope that for everyone. Unfortunately, not only do trumpsters follow a wrong path, they follow a non virtuous path that leads only to lower realms.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 12th, 2020 at 10:21 AM

Title: Re: Mod Team - Coming and Going

Content:

Queequeg said:

yes, its a little weird... LOL its like a light bulb burned out.

Awesome to see Anders and Narwahl on the team.

Malcolm wrote:

Just remember to duck.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 12th, 2020 at 8:59 PM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

We generally hope that for everyone. Unfortunately, not only do trumpsters follow a wrong path, they follow a non virtuous path that leads only to lower realms.

FiveSkandhas said:

That's a big generalization about 70 million people. There are people who hold deluded views but would still rush into a burning building to save you.

Malcolm wrote:

You do understand there is only one right path, and one truly virtuous path right? The rest of it is just samsaric karma, positive and negative.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 12th, 2020 at 9:00 PM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

SonamTashi said:

I'm not a Shin Buddhist. I was just clarifying that there is at least one school that equates rebirth in Sukhavati with liberation.

Malcolm wrote:

Yup, there are a lot of schools alright.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 12th, 2020 at 9:02 PM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

DNS said:

I would think so. But Trump supporters are persistent, they might say it's still not over. I don't know what Trump could do at this point? Perhaps just refuse to leave the White House?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 12th, 2020 at 9:12 PM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Radiate boundless love towards the entire world — above, below, and across — unhindered, without ill will, without enmity.

-The good ole Metta Sutta

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, it does a lot of good for one's mind. But you confuse my disapproval for enmity.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 12th, 2020 at 9:14 PM

Title: Re: How exactly is there a momentariness of consciousness ?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

So much of lay Buddhism revolves around merit and hopes for a better reincarnation, this-worldly benefits, or filial piety such as to transfer merit to deceased relatives and ancestors, etc. It may be shortsighted but it's a motivation for millions.

Malcolm wrote:

It's also not Dharma practice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 12th, 2020 at 11:31 PM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

That's a big generalization about 70 million people. There are people who hold deluded views but would still rush into a burning building to save you.

Malcolm wrote:

You do understand there is only one right path, and one truly virtuous path right? The rest of it is just samsaric karma, positive and negative.

Sādhaka said:

Right, and therefore bideners, bernie bro's., and anyone else who is not a practitioner who follows political agendas of abrahamists or materialist-carvaka's, is not any different than trumpsters in that regard.

Malcolm wrote:

The difference is that they support trumps falsehoods, lies, and malfeasance. This is a wholly nonvirtuous path, not only a wrong path.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 13th, 2020 at 12:43 AM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

kirtu said:

Each person has to find specific steps to offer their vision and energy to society, and to empower those around them. If we don't do this, change won't happen. The vision will not be fulfilled.

Malcolm wrote:

First, you have to correctly diagnose the problem. Grifters like Trump would not be attracted to politics if it wasn't lucrative.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 13th, 2020 at 12:50 AM

Title: Re: Is there a universal consciousness?

Content:

Supramundane said:

Let me reframe the question: could Bodhicitta be seen as a sort of universal or 'impersonal' consciousness?

Malcolm wrote:

Definitely not. It seems to me you do not understand the term "bodhicitta" in its Mahāyāna context. In its Mahāyāna context it means the aspiration for awakening. It also has two subdivisions: relative bodhicitta and ultimate bodhicitta. Relative bodhicitta has two components: aspirational bodhicitta and engaged bodhicitta. Aspirational bodhicitta is the wish to attain buddhahood for the benefit of all beings. Engaged bodhicitta is the practice of the six perfections.

Ultimate bodhicitta also has two components: the path and the result. The path consists of śamatha, or calm abiding meditation; and vipaśyanā, or insight. The result is the realization of ultimate truth: all phenomena, including nirvana, buddhas, etc., lack inherent existence.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 13th, 2020 at 12:55 AM

Title: Re: How exactly is there a momentariness of consciousness ?

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

I think it's fair to say that these days, in the west, while there are many "deep-sea diving"

Dharma students, particularly within Vajrayana, whose aim is to escape samsaric rebirth, that there are many more people who simply want to live life with some kind of ethics and compassion, and have turned to Buddhism as the source for that, whether they've taken refuge or not.

Malcolm wrote:

People inspired by Buddhism, who practice ethics and meditation for this life are not Dharma practitioners, no matter how nice, kind, or good they may be, whether they consider themselves Buddhists or not.

I would venture a guess and say that most people in the world who self-identify as Buddhists are not Dharma practitioners.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 13th, 2020 at 6:27 AM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

kirtu said:

Flushing the 99 Weekers down the economic toilet, targeting people to become economic slaves, intentionally crushing people socially, economically and civilly - as 44's admin did and as most modern admins have done is ALSO malfeasance.

Malcolm wrote:

Obama did not do this. However, he did face a racist GOP that sought to block him everything he ran on since the day he took office.

kirtu said:

Additionally ALL admins since Clinton have engaged in unrestrained world war. ALL OF THEM. To his credit 45 dialed it back somewhat (although as my ex pointed out he had to be talked out of intervention more than once).

Malcolm wrote:

Not true. Trump increased to number of air attacks in Yemen greatly. He didn't dial back anything. If anything, he left us much less secure and the world a less safe place.

kirtu said:

The entire US "political" leadership is responsible for this kind of unrestrained warfare. And this is completely unaddressed.

Malcolm wrote:

This happened under Bush II, not Obama.

kirtu said:

Current and former D's at the highest levels included. This is also a wholly nonvirtuous path.

Malcolm wrote:

Sorry, I just don't you think can compare the Democrats with the GOP in terms of totally despicable behavior. YMMV.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 13th, 2020 at 6:28 AM

Title: Re: How exactly is there a momentariness of consciousness ?

Content:

Artziebetter1 said:

I never wanted to practice tantra just be able to call myself vajrayana because I believe it's the highest path and the bodhisattvas like Tara etc exist

Malcolm wrote:

I think you are really confused.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 13th, 2020 at 9:53 AM

Title: Re: How exactly is there a momentariness of consciousness ?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

People inspired by Buddhism, who practice ethics and meditation for this life are not Dharma practitioners, no matter how nice, kind, or good they may be, whether they consider themselves Buddhists or not.

Astus said:

How about what is called "the least capacity" or "lesser scope"?

'Know that those who by whatever means

Seek for themselves no more

Than the pleasures of cyclic existence

Are persons of the least capacity.'

(Lamp for the Path, v 3, in Illuminating the Path to Enlightenment, p 69)

'Given the distinction between virtue and nonvirtue as laid down in the teachings, it is important to rely on virtue. The ten virtues tending to happiness will produce happy destinies, while negative action will precipitate a fall into the states of loss. To understand this distinction correctly, according to the karmic law of cause and effect, and to adopt positive rather than negative behavior is the so-called path of beings of lesser scope.'

(Treasury of Precious Qualities, vol 1, p 151)

Malcolm wrote:

These are people without renunciation, not people attached to this life.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 13th, 2020 at 10:10 AM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

kirtu said:

This is not a problem exclusive to Establishment D's. Americans in general ignore or simply accept the fact that American capitalism destroys millions during a crisis and consigns millions to lower class economic slavery due primarily to structural racism (although there are other reasons as well).

Malcolm wrote:

Structural racism is something which Johnson tried to change, changes systematically undermined by the GOP.

kirtu said:

In this particular case the Establishment D's declared the 2nd Great Depression to be over and went home, ignoring all of the lasting economic damage. And D's supported with this deceptive move on the whole - they ignored the ongoing catastrophe because only 7-8M had been permanently shut out of the workforce. Typical behavior. Declare the facts to be what you want them to be and market that viewpoint.

Malcolm wrote:

We live in a liberal market economy, not a coordinated market economy. Accept the consequences of where you live or try to change the system.

kirtu said:

We can just stop here because of course most people born and raised in the US simply rewrite history to support their own prejudices.

Malcolm wrote:

You are entitled to your opinions, but not your own set of facts.

kirtu said:

Trump has certainly not done the right thing anywhere and America has abandoned the Yemeni people but Trump is factually the first President since Reagan to not initiate a war or a major incursion.

Malcolm wrote:

As I said above, stick to facts.

kirtu said:

Their hands are all bloody.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, it goes along with providing security to a nation.

kirtu said:

All the Presidents since Bush I have engaged in the exercise of aggressive war. Trump also through ongoing drone warfare. However he dialed the war machine back compared to his predecessors.

Malcolm wrote:

1) That depends on what one defines as “aggressive.” 2) Trump did nothing of the kind, he increased arms sales to the Saudis, launched more drone strikes in his administration than the entire period from 2003-2015, etc.

kirtu said:

The fact that people born and raised in the US automatically impose their R vs. D framework on events and invariably try to score points for their team shows that they have lost their ability to analyze history and current events.

Malcolm wrote:

It's not about D vs. R, it's about democracy vs. fascism. Get your head on straight.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 13th, 2020 at 9:17 PM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

kirtu said:

Thus the fact is established that Trump, unlike his five predecessors, did not initiate a new war or major incursion.

Although he also failed to end American Endless War.

Kirt

Malcolm wrote:

Obama did not start a new war, neither did Clinton.

Facts matter. The only new wars started since the end of Vietnam were all started by GOP presidents.

This is remarkably sloppy, “ Since both [Bosnia and Libia] military engagements are referred to as wars, for purposes of this fact-check, we will consider them new wars the country entered.”

Both were NATO.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 13th, 2020 at 9:37 PM

Title: Re: Is there a universal consciousness?

Content:

Supramundane said:

Yes, consciousness can end. It has a beginning and an end; it is conditioned.

Malcolm wrote:

Compounded phenomena cannot be said to have beginnings since there is no first cause.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 13th, 2020 at 10:49 PM

Title: Re: How exactly is there a momentariness of consciousness ?

Content:

Artziebetter1 said:

How is it different from sravaka nibbana? the only difference is that a bodhisattva Buddha has past merit and volition (I don't know how this would actually work without a storage for that past merit and volition and how a unconscious being can complexly interact but That's the belief)...

PadmaVonSamba said:

Perhaps that isn't the belief, which would certainly explain the difficulty in figuring out "how that would actually work". You keep asserting that a Buddha has no awareness. You continue to confuse the extinction of attachment (to the illusion of self) with total elimination of awareness itself.

By the way, I'm still waiting to find out from you exactly who gets reborn ...you, or your consciousness?

Artziebetter1 said:

Show me sources that a Buddha has subjective awareness .

Malcolm wrote:

They have two kinds of omniscience, hence they possess subjective awareness. They are not inert.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 13th, 2020 at 11:46 PM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

There are so many facts wrong in the above, I don't know where to begin.

But let's just start with fact that the Korean War was started by North Korea, and that the international response to it was managed by the UN.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 14th, 2020 at 12:47 AM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

There are so many facts wrong in the above, I don't know where to begin.

But let's just start with fact that the Korean War was started by North Korea, and that the international response to it was managed by the UN.

Minobu said:

i got the dates of the presidents and when the wars happened..from wiki...

<https://www.google.com/search?q=presidents+during+viet+nam+war&oq=presidents+during+viet+nam+war&aqs=chrome..69i57j0i10i457j0i10j0i22i30l2.7113j0j15&sourceid=chrome&ie=UTF-8> and you can check the other presidents and time periods...

you want to put spin on it...fine ...but i did not post inaccurate info.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, in this case you have.

Moving onto Nixon, Vietnam was grossly escalated by Nixon, after Johnson declined to run for a second term out of his shame for getting us involved in that war to begin with. Nixon did not oversee the end of Vietnam, Ford did, Nixon having already resigned out of fear of impeachment.

Carter did not start a war in Nicaragua. The Contras thing was GOP all the way.

As for Bosnia, that was a UNC/NATO operation to prevent widespread ethnic violence in the Balkans after the fall of the USSR left a power vacuum in the region.

Libia was NATO, and not "started" by Obama.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 14th, 2020 at 3:44 AM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

Minobu said:

All these governments are corrupt , people accept it and still support them .

Malcolm wrote:

In a democracy, the people are the government.

But the principle of karma entails that we only share the karma of those things with which we agree.

I am not arguing for the merits of this or that war, far be it. I am arguing however that broadly slapping the label of "warmonger" on Democrats and Republicans in the US is basically false. The GOP has consistently been the war party. The idea that "The Democrats and Republicans are two sides of one party" is simple-minded and overlooks key differences between them.

Bill Clinton reduced the size of the US Military, as Obama. Trump, contrary to some people's fantasies, was gearing up for a major international war with Iran, and has increased military spending in each successive year since 2016. He may still attack Iran yet. After all, he has 5 weeks and 2 days left to do so. He, along with Pompeo, deliberately sabotaged resumption of the Iran deal, just to make shit more difficult for Biden.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 14th, 2020 at 3:47 AM

Title: Re: Is there a universal consciousness?

Content:

Supramundane said:

Yes, consciousness can end. It has a beginning and an end; it is conditioned.

Malcolm wrote:

Compounded phenomena cannot be said to have beginnings since there is no first cause.

Supramundane said:

What about my consciousness, M? Didn't it begin with my birth?

Malcolm wrote:

No, in Buddhadharma we have this little thing called "rebirth."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 14th, 2020 at 9:53 AM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

Shotenzenjin said:

Both parties are parties of the ruling class. Which Biden is a part of. so is trump

The Dems have a socialist section that would argue otherwise for them. But they are a part of a party of the ruling class

Without a class analysis the conversation just circles around a drain

Malcolm wrote:

People have been analyzing class at least since Plato. It hasn't changed a thing. Why? Karma.

In a government what actually matters is policies, execution of those policies, and so on. When one participates in a democracy, one is advocating for a set of policies.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 14th, 2020 at 9:55 AM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

amanitamusc said:

One similarity the Dems and Repubs share is the need to bail out the major banks and insurance co's ect .

Malcolm wrote:

Never asserted Obama was the wisest person....

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 14th, 2020 at 10:30 PM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Jonang doesn't understand Shentong as a take on Madhyamaka?

Let's just say that the Gelugpas persecuted the Jonang school as heretics because of their Shentong. I'm sure there is more to the story, but that was their pretext. Why the Karma Kagyu were not persecuted in the same way puzzles me. There's something to the story that doesn't make sense.

Malcolm wrote:

That is not correct. The Gelugpas would install a number of Gelug monks at rival monasteries within the administrative reach of the Lhasa gvt. So, Jonang and Gelug monks, or Sakya and Gelug monks, etc., would inhabit the same monasteries, each practicing their own tradition. What is true is that in Central Tibet, block prints of Taranatha, Dolbupa, Gorampa, the Karmapa, etc, any one who criticized Tsongkhapa were locked up and forbidden to be printed. Thus however did not prevent the distribution of manuscripts. The actual situation on the ground was far more complicated than your simplistic assessment would indicate.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 14th, 2020 at 10:41 PM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Jonang doesn't understand Shentong as a take on Madhymaka?

Let's just say that the Gelugpas persecuted the Jonang school as heretics because of their Shentong. I'm sure there is more to the story, but that was their pretext. Why the Karma Kagyu were not persecuted in the same was puzzles me. There's something to the story that doesn't make sense.

Malcolm wrote:

The Karma Kagyu school was put down much harder than Jonang, much harder, as a result of the defeat of the Karma Kagyu king of Tsang, who teamed up with eastern Tibetan bonpos in his attempt to overthrow the Lhasa gvt.. You should really read some detailed accounts of Tibetan history in the 17th century. It just so happens that the king of Tsang, Karma Tenkyong, also was a patron of Jonang. Arguably, the Sakyas escaped similar monastic censure in Western Tibet because of their distance and prestige. The Nyingmapas experienced an increase in fortunes during the same period, due to the patronage of the Great 5th. What is salient here is that gzhan stong was quite popular with Nyingmapas in Central Tibet, but no effort was effort made to suppress Lochen Dharmashri's works, because his patron was the Fifth Dalai Lama.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 14th, 2020 at 11:15 PM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

What is salient here is that gzhan stong was quite popular with Nyingmapas in Central Tibet, but no effort was effort made to suppress Lochen Dharmashri's works, because his patron was the Fifth Dalai Lama.

That is the first time you've admitted to Nyingmapas embracing Shentong.

Malcolm wrote:

Not at all. I just rejected your assertion that since both Dudjom R. And Dilgo R. were partial to it, it was the dominant Madhyamaka View of Nyingmapas. In fact the dominant Madhyamaka presentation is that of Rongzom, Longchenpa, and Mipham, none of whom can be described as gzhan stong. But this did not prevent gzhan stong from gaining currency among some nyingma and Sakya scholars.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 15th, 2020 at 12:16 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen prerequisite?

Content:

Jeff H said:

I've just been rereading ChNN's Gura Yoga and this sentence caught my eye:
on page 33 ChNN said:

If you do not have a connection with the teaching and with the transmission from previous lives, you can never enter the Dzogchen path.

Jeff H said:

Does this mean that only certain beings can ever enter Dzogchen? And if this sentence is to be taken literally, how did those beings come to have a connection in a previous life?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, but there are many paths to full awakening. If one manages to achieve buddhahood by those means, one does not need Dzogchen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 15th, 2020 at 3:41 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

Bristollad said:

they misunderstood Candrakirit and instead went with Tsongkhapa's invention

Malcolm wrote:

A common Sakya criticism of Tsongkhapa is that he was an "upside down" gzhan stong pa.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 15th, 2020 at 8:51 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

A common Sakya criticism of Tsongkhapa is that he was an "upside down" gzhan stong pa.

I have no idea what that means.

Malcolm wrote:

It means that Tsongkhapa also argued for a kind of extrinsic emptiness. Tables aren't empty of tables, they are only empty of inherent existence.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 15th, 2020 at 10:07 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

It means that Tsongkhapa also argued for a kind of extrinsic emptiness. Tables aren't empty of tables, they are only empty of inherent existence.

That's a reasonable way to teach emptiness if you want people to continue looking both ways before crossing the street.

Malcolm wrote:

It's still a kind of gzhan stong.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 15th, 2020 at 10:44 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I have no idea what that means.

Malcolm wrote:

It means that Tsongkhapa also argued for a kind of extrinsic emptiness. Tables aren't empty of tables, they are only empty of inherent existence.

PeterC said:

Is this what Gendun Chopel criticized when he said that Tsonkhapa's formulation of the object of negation resulted in a completely pointless refutation?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, since Tsongkhapa insisted that one only refutes something, inherent existence, that does not exist even conventionally, like the child of a barren women.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 15th, 2020 at 8:53 PM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

tobes said:

Also: if tables are empty of inherent existence, then they are necessarily also empty of being tables.

Malcolm wrote:

Not according to Gelug analysis— tables are not empty of mere existence as tables, only inherent existence, which is something other than the table itself.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 15th, 2020 at 8:55 PM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

In that Tsongkhapa accepts a limited validity to interdependent phenomena?

Malcolm wrote:

No, in that tables are empty of something other than the table. Tables are not empty of relative existence, only ultimate existence, which is something other than the table, hence, inverted gzhan stong.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 15th, 2020 at 9:14 PM

Title: My sentiments, exactly

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Found on Facebook:

British-Indian novelist Hari Kunzru:

"Mike Pence you repressed joyless would-be witchfinder, every time you spoke you always looked like you were straining to expel an enormous bolus of your own hypocrisy from your clenched sphincter.

"Betsy DeVos you blandly foolish soulless entitled child-stealing witch, rotting like a corpse inside your Chanel suit.

"All the generals, you spineless buzz-cut phallus-brained plastic Spartans fawning and wriggling to distract yourself from your moral cowardice.

"Kayleigh McEnenay, you evacuated husk of a mean-girl cheerleader, the cavity where your heart once was pumped full of spite and moronic lies.

"Bill Barr you vast pompous pus-filled bladder of casuistry, you are an enemy of justice, bloated with resentment and cruelty, wobbling like a jelly at the feet of the oligarchs.

“Jared Kushner, you vacuous dainty preening overpromoted nub of mediocrity, squeezed like an entitled smear of toothpaste into a silk suit bought with tear-stained dollars wrung out of the suffering tenants of your slum apartments.

“Ivanka Trump, you monstrous slug of vanity, you infantile ninny so marinated in self-regard that in your pea brain you believe we ought to love you for your crimes.

“Mike Pompeo, you bubble, you booby, you flatulent zero, that roiling in your ample guts that you mistake for world shaking significance is just the acid reflux of irrelevancy.

“Don Junior, you scabrous single-nostriled unloved elephant-murdering human wreckage, vibrating with bitterness and impotent rage at all the opportunities you’ve squandered.

“Sarah Sanders, you crude hulking beetle-browed bully, working your multiple chins as you masticated another stinking quid of falsity, spitting again and again on the people you were supposed to inform.

“Interlude: all you staffers and interns, so eager to crunch your way in your shiny new work shoes over the bodies of the poor and powerless, I smite you and cast you out one by one.

“Eric Trump, you pallid clammy suppurating nocturnal semi-human grub, your absence of charisma is your only notable trait and the act of flushing you from memory will so be smooth and painless that in a month people will find it hard to picture your moon face.

“Rudy Giuliani, you capering cartoonish skull-faced bag of graft and corruption, too stupid even to ask who’s pulling your strings just so long as you can cake your crusty face in tv make-up and clack your jaw at a camera.

“And of course Stephen Miller, you weeping pustule upon the social body, you dreg, you homunculus, you noxious slime felched from the gaping cavity of Jim Crow, one day may you find yourself walking barefoot across hot sand, desperate for water, crying for your missing child.

“With that I’ll rest a while, and go to find a street corner to dance on.”

He missed Sean Spicer, but I guess that’s ok after he humiliated himself on Dancing With The Stars.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 15th, 2020 at 10:05 PM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

In that Tsongkhapa accepts a limited validity to interdependent phenomena?

Malcolm wrote:

No, in that tables are empty of something other than the table. Tables are not empty of relative existence, only ultimate existence, which is something other than the table, hence, inverted gzhan stong.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Okay. Got it.

Cute.

Malcolm wrote:

Arguably, Tsongkhapa's Madhyamaka can be seen as an overreaction gzhan stong, Tsongkhapa's teacher decried gzhan stong as basically nonBuddhist.

Other Sakya Lamas like Rongton and Gorampa had a more level head, considering it a transitional teaching from Yogacara to pure Madhyamaka, i.e higher than yogacara, lower than Madhyamaka.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 15th, 2020 at 11:36 PM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Arguably, Tsongkhapa's Madhyamaka can be seen as an overreaction gzhan stong, Tsongkhapa's teacher decried gzhan stong as basically kya Lamas like Rongton and Gorampa had a more level head, considering it a transitional teaching from Yogacara to pure Madhyamaka, i.e higher than yogacara, lower than Madhyamaka.

Now that idea I hadn't heard before.

Malcolm wrote:

You weren't paying attention, I have stated this many times before.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 16th, 2020 at 5:37 AM

Title: Re: Shentong vs. Prasangika and consistency

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Chandrakirti and Tsongkhapa were commenting on Nagarjuna. Dolpopa was elaborating on Asanga. Apples and oranges.

Malcolm wrote:

Correcting, he was commenting on Maitreyanātha, but he insisted on calling his system "dbu ma chen po" (like every other Tibetan from the time of Kawa Paltsek, including Tsongkhapa) And he was commenting on Nagārjuna, but very much in the tradition of earlier Yogacārinś like Dharmapāla and Ratnakaraśanti, who tried to reconcile Madhyamaka and Yogacāra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 16th, 2020 at 6:49 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

tobes said:

I've never heard any Gelugpa negate intrinsic existence only to discover the thing remains.....

Malcolm wrote:

So mere existence is negated? It isn't left over?

What about "Not existing in the ultimate, not not existing the relative?" This after all is Tsongkhapa's famous formulation of the negation of existence and nonexistence.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 16th, 2020 at 6:53 AM

Title: Re: Shentong vs. Prasangika and consistency

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Correcting, he was commenting on Maitreyanātha, but he insisted on calling his system "dbu ma chen po" (like every other Tibetan from the time of Kawa Paltsek, including Tsongkhapa) And he was commenting on Nagārjuna, but very much in the tradition of earlier Yogacārinś like Dharmapāla and Ratnakaraśanti, who tried to reconcile Madhyamaka and Yogacāra.

He used Yogacara's lexicon of 3 Natures.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, much in the same way as Dharmapāla and Ratnakaraśanti try to reconcile the three natures with the two truths.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 16th, 2020 at 9:19 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

tobes said:

I mean, if the object of Madhyamaka critique/negation is not svabhava, then what else could it possibly be?

Malcolm wrote:

Existence, bhava, and the rest. In other words, it is not sufficient to negate only svabhava.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 16th, 2020 at 10:18 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

tobes said:

The truly great Jamyang Khyentse Wangpo....was Shakya & Shentong(ish).

Malcolm wrote:

Not really a gzhan stong pa.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 16th, 2020 at 10:20 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

tobes said:

I mean, if the object of Madhyamaka critique/negation is not svabhava, then what else could it possibly be?

Malcolm wrote:

Existence, bhava, and the rest. In other words, it is not sufficient to negate only svabhava.

tobes said:

Svabhava entails the grasping to existence. If it is negated, so too is the grasping to existence.

Malcolm wrote:

No, as Tsongkhapa's reformulation of the twin negation shows.

If it were, Nagarjuna would not have insisted on the fourfold negation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 16th, 2020 at 10:58 AM

Title: Re: My sentiments, exactly

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

Sounds like the song about the Grinch.

PeterC said:

The only thing he stole was one christmas. These people got away with four years...

Malcolm wrote:

Not only that, but Trump ran over little Cindy Lou Who.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 16th, 2020 at 7:25 PM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

tobes said:

Svabhava entails the grasping to existence. If it is negated, so too is the grasping to existence.

Malcolm wrote:

No, as Tsongkhapa's reformulation of the twin negation shows.

If it were, Nagarjuna would not have insisted on the fourfold negation.

tobes said:

It doesn't show this.

Only in the cartoon Gelug presentation.....where this is all and only a philosophy glass bead game.

"You've left existence untouched!"

Well, no. If something is dependently arisen, it has never existed. So, seeing appearances as dependent arisings after the negation of svabhava in no way implies existence.

Malcolm wrote:

All that is negated in the Gelug presentation is svabhava, not bhava, meaning that for them, the ultimate is a nonexistent and the relative is an existent. They never directly negate the table, only the table's svabhava.

Tsongkhapa's point of view is laid out very clearly in Lam Rim Chen mo. What I am saying is noncontroversial

In fact, Tsongkhapa makes this the key point of his system, claiming that one should not use the coarse object of negation, existence (contra Candrakīrti), and only the subtle object of negation, inherent existence. This is why his view slides towards the extreme of nonexistence, just as gzhan stong slides towards the extreme of existence, and is why the two positions are reflections of each other,

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 16th, 2020 at 9:12 PM

Title: Re: Is there a universal consciousness?

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

even though I suppose it's possible.

karmanyngpo said:

Hello Dharma friend I was grateful for your response on other threads so thank you if I did not already say so

I am curious about the possibility of a universal consciousness from a buddhist perspective. You seem to be knowledgeable so I wonder if you might know any teachings or scriptures that can be interpretable as talking about a universal consciousness?

KN

Supramundane said:

No one here seems to like the term universal; however, there is reference in the sutras to "original mind". This is a mind which is 'shining, luminous and permanent'. Various sutras make reference to such luminosity of mind, although they never use the term universal; nonetheless, universal does not seem too far from the concept of an original mind. (at the time of the Buddha, I doubt if there was such a word as 'universal').

there are meditative states in which one is aware of awareness. In such a state, there are no thought formations and thus, some may call it an original mind. All people are capable of experiencing this meditative state. Is this Universal enough?:)

Malcolm wrote:

As a generic quality, it is universal, just like all fires are hot, but there is no absolute universal fire.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 17th, 2020 at 7:47 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

tobes said:

It doesn't show this.

Only in the cartoon Gelug presentation.....where this is all and only a philosophy glass bead game.

"You've left existence untouched!"

Well, no. If something is dependently arisen, it has never existed. So, seeing appearances as dependent arisings after the negation of svabhava in no way implies existence.

Malcolm wrote:

All that is negated in the Gelug presentation is svabhava, not bhava, meaning that for them, the ultimate is a nonexistent and the relative is an existent. They never directly negate the table, only the table's svabhava.

Tsongkhapa's point of view is laid out very clearly in Lam Rim Chen mo. What I am saying is noncontroversial

In fact, Tsongkhapa makes this the key point of his system, claiming that one should not use the coarse object of negation, existence (contra Candrakīrti), and only the subtle object of negation, inherent existence. This is why his view slides towards the extreme of nonexistence, just as gzhan stong slides towards the extreme of existence, and is why the two positions are reflections of each other, toebes said:

Yes, but if the subtle object of negation is successfully negated, then the coarse one cannot still abide.

The idea that it somehow still can, is - as I have been suggesting at length - grounded in an entirely outsider/critics approach, based entirely on reading texts such as the Lam Rim Chen Mo, divorced from any real practical Gelug context. It is actually very tiresome. It is not different, in my opinion, to a Theravada or Zen practitioner coming onto the Dzogchen thread and making all sorts of claims based on their reading of Dzogchen texts.....whilst having no DL or authentic relationship to the tradition. One can only say: this is a very fabricated conceptual proliferation.

In reality, Gelug Madhyamaka is transmitted, not merely read, not merely studied textually. And it will be transmitted in different ways depending on the dispositions of the disciple. This is why the cartoon version does not fly: it refuses upaya even though all these questions are, in the final analysis, matters of upaya.

And: anytime I have received a transmission, the table goes. Full stop. No one leaves the existence of the table untouched, no matter how much you keep reasserting this.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure they do, they call it "mere" existence, nominal existence, existence by designation, etc.,

“Not existent in the ultimate, not nonexistent in then relative.”

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 17th, 2020 at 7:53 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

tobes said:

In reality, Gelug Madhyamaka is transmitted...

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, there is a discussion, but it is not some kind of direct introduction. In fact Tsongkhapa negates the whole idea of direct introduction. One still has to engage in ones own analysis, the Geshe does not do it for you. For the record, you are not the only person who has listened to Gelug view presented by a Geshe. HHDL has literally hundreds of hours of Madhyamaka teachings one can listen to. It's a little incredible you don't take this into account.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 17th, 2020 at 9:57 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

tobes said:

Yes, but if the subtle of object of negation is successfully negated, then the course one cannot still abide.

The idea that it somehow still can, is - as I have been suggesting at length - grounded in an entirely outsider/critics approach, based entirely on reading texts such as the Lam Rim Chen Mo, divorced from any real practical Gelug context. It is actually very tiresome. It is not different, in my opinion, to a Theravada or Zen practitioner coming onto the Dzogchen thread and making all sorts of claims based on their reading of Dzogchen texts.....whilst having no DI or authentic relationship to the tradition. One can only say: this is a very fabricated conceptual proliferation.

In reality, Gelug Madhyamaka is transmitted, not merely read, not merely studied textually. And it will be transmitted in different ways depending on the dispositions of the disciple. This is why the cartoon version does not fly: it refuses upaya even though all this questions are, in the final analysis, matters of upaya.

And: anytime I have received a transmission, the table goes. Full stop. No one leaves the existence of the table untouched, no matter how much you keep reasserting this.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure they do, they call it “mere” existence, nominal existence, existence by designation, etc.,

“Not existent in the ultimate, not nonexistent in then relative.”

tobes said:

Are you suggesting that Chandrakirit always refuses lunch?

Malcolm wrote:

No, I am suggesting he didn't analyze his lunch at all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 17th, 2020 at 10:00 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

tobes said:

Thanks for this condescension Malcolm, I had until this point really believed that I was the only one who has listened to a Gelug view....

Malcolm wrote:

Based on your comments above, could one draw some other conclusion?

I would suggest at this point the thread has reached a natural conclusion.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 17th, 2020 at 10:29 AM

Title: Re: Abrahamic religions and Buddhism

Content:

PeterC said:

So they go and wander around in nature, read Thomas Aquinas, study the Kabbalah, immerse themselves in Ralph Waldo Emerson, whatever, add a light seasoning of out-of-context Buddhist quotes, ideas about love and metta, and think they've discovered the 'real' Dharma. Then they talk to actual Dharma teachers who have studied it for a long time, and they find that their exciting, liberated, spiritual ideas don't have a lot to do with what these people teach, so they decide that these people are trapped in their antiquated, dogmatic ideas, and that they themselves have discovered the 'true Dharma' in this new age concoction.

Malcolm wrote:

Sounds like a Facebook “Dharma.”

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 17th, 2020 at 10:40 AM

Title: Re: PERSONAL OPINIONS: Can people who don't practice buddhism enlighten

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

I think it's a specious ecumenism that says "all religions basically get to the same place", or words to that effect...

I think in fact that we do a disservice to all religions--both ours and the others--by failing to recognize the very real, substantive differences between them. I think it's only in that recognition that we can come to a genuine ecumenism.

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed, hence HHDL's POV that the only place Buddhadharma meets other religions is the necessity of compassion, and even there, compassion, as conceived by other religions is quite limited.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 17th, 2020 at 11:01 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

tobes said:

Are you suggesting that Chandrakirti always refuses lunch?

Malcolm wrote:

No, I am suggesting he didn't analyze his lunch at all.

tobes said:

But nonetheless he still ate it.

Malcolm wrote:

Because it was not a subject of analysis.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 17th, 2020 at 11:04 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

tobes said:

Thanks for this condescension Malcolm, I had until this point really believed that I was the only one who has listened to a Gelug view....

Malcolm wrote:

Based on your comments above, could one draw some other conclusion?

I would suggest at this point the thread has reached a natural conclusion.

tobes said:

Agreed. Why am I on the internet trying to help you appreciate a tradition you have never shown respect for?? I should know better.....

Malcolm wrote:

Dude, you are tripping. I have actually spent time energetically rejecting unfair criticisms of Tsongkhapa's view by Nyingma partisans, such as the idea that one cannot successfully practice Dzogchen if one's understanding of Madhyamaka is derived from the Gelug tradition. So buzz off, you really have no idea what you are talking about and to whom you are speaking. Get a clue.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 17th, 2020 at 11:07 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Existence, bhava, and the rest. In other words, it is not sufficient to negate only svabhava.

tobes said:

Svabhava entails the grasping to existence. If it is negated, so too is the grasping to existence.

cloudburst said:

precisely.

Malcolm wrote:

Not below the path of seeing. There are many other faults of this monopole negation. You can read Gorampa , Gaden Chopel, Mipham etc., yourself and discover what they are.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 17th, 2020 at 5:54 PM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Not below the path of seeing.

cloudburst said:

not totally, no, same as every other method.

Malcolm wrote:

There are many other faults of this monopole negation. You can read Gorampa , Ganden Chopel, Mipham etc., yourself and discover what they are.

cloudburst said:

I have discovered what these authors believe they are, I dont find them impressive. The supposed faults, that is. Mipham I enjoy quite a bit.

The truth is, Je Tsongkhapa's method is perfect, but if you are ideologically invested in not seeing it, you wont see it.

Malcolm wrote:

Tsongkhapa's approach to Madhyamaka is ok, it just has some holes, and one of those is the monopole negation. No Gelugpa has ever successfully rebutted Gorampa's critique of Tsongkhapa's novelties, but we've had this discussion before. And Tsongkhapa has even been challenged within his own school.

Mipham largely bases his arguments on Gorampa.

Now, what does any of this have to do with the OP?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 17th, 2020 at 6:46 PM

Title: Re: My sentiments, exactly

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

Imagine being so culturally colonised that you sit down and write this even though you live in Europe

Malcolm wrote:

Britain's divorced Europe, or hadn't you heard?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 17th, 2020 at 7:48 PM

Title: Re: Why do monks reside in temples

Content:

neander said:

prof. Schopen's article explains the following as far as I understand:

There is no archeological evidence of Buddhist monasteries during Ashoka ,

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, there is no evidence of Buddhist monasteries with stone structures prior to 350 CE because Indians did not start buildings structures out of stone until comparatively late, around 350 CE. This cannot and does exclude viharas with wooden and thatch structures, evidence of which doesn't survive well in the humid, hot climate of India.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 18th, 2020 at 10:23 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I'll listen to somebody that has properly studied emptiness, but I'll follow someone who can sit in it.

Malcolm wrote:

Assuming you are not clairvoyant, would you know the difference between one and the other?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 18th, 2020 at 8:18 PM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I'll listen to somebody that has properly studied emptiness, but I'll follow someone who can sit in it.

Malcolm wrote:

Assuming you are not clairvoyant, would you know the difference between one and the other?

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

In my life I believe I have met enlightened masters. I will leave it at that.

Malcolm wrote:

So you can't actually tell the difference between one and the other, you just "feel" there is a difference between one person and another. Glad to know your standards are so rigorous.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 19th, 2020 at 12:50 AM

Title: Re: The passing of Tsikey Chökling Rinpoche

Content:

heart said:

It is so sad. I will miss him.

/magnus

Malcolm wrote:

The final lesson of all buddhas, all compounded phenomena are impermanent.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 19th, 2020 at 12:50 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I'll listen to somebody that has properly studied emptiness, but I'll follow someone who can sit in it.

Malcolm wrote:

Assuming you are not clairvoyant, would you know the difference between one and the other?

conebeckham said:

This was sort of my point. It all starts with "listening," which is all we can do initially, with any teacher. I include spending time with a guru as "listening," as well. I know you're not implying anything about any specific teacher. As Kongtrul said, in advice to prospective retreatants, one should respect the Vajra Master "Who performs the activities of the Buddhas in front of you" (I am paraphrasing here). It's not merely the words a guru speaks, nor is it merely the ritual gestures of empowerment, etc. At the end of the day, though, faith and confidence in a teacher is something that can't be measured or explained.

Malcolm wrote:

My point is that SY makes a lot of confident proclamations...but has nothing more to back them up than their feelings. I am sure you understand why someone would not really be comfortable with this.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 19th, 2020 at 1:41 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

My point is that SY makes a lot of confident proclamations...but has nothing more to back them up than their feelings. I am sure you understand why someone would not really be comfortable with this.

One of your gurus was HHDL's designated rainmaker. Do you believe he was actually capable of weather control?

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, but I would not stake your belief in this on my belief. These are just my feelings. They are not objective.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 19th, 2020 at 5:34 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

One of your gurus was HHDL's designated rainmaker. Do you believe he was actually capable of weather control?

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, but I would not stake your belief in this on my belief. These are just my feelings. They are not objective.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

But it's not the only way.

Malcolm wrote:

When it comes to Madhyamaka, its about what it is in the text, not in someone's invisible realization.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 19th, 2020 at 5:35 AM

Title: Re: 8 months of no rain!

Content:

DNS said:

Las Vegas broke it's own record for the longest dry streak of no measurable rain.

240 days of no rain, until today when it finally rained. I believe this is the longest dry streak of no rain for any large city in the U.S., since they started keeping records.

<https://www.weather.gov/vef/2020DryStreak>

Malcolm wrote:

You've really got to improve your sutta recitations for good fortune.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 19th, 2020 at 5:53 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

When it comes to Madhyamaka, its about what it is in the text, not in someone's invisible realization.

Is rainbow body visible or invisible?

Malcolm wrote:

You mean the shrinking of a body? That's irrelevant to Madhyamaka. Nobody attains rainbow body through Madhyamaka.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 19th, 2020 at 6:17 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Is rainbow body visible or invisible?

You mean the shrinking of a body? That's irrelevant to Madhyamaka. Nobody attains rainbow body through Madhyamaka.

Is it "just one's feeling"? Or is it objectively verifiable? (Assuming that is you're in proximity to see it.)

Malcolm wrote:

Rainbow body has never been empirically verified, unlike thugdam.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 19th, 2020 at 9:19 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu lineage/school which teaches shentong mahamudra or dzogchen?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Rainbow body has never been empirically verified, unlike thugdam.

What's "thugdam"?

Malcolm wrote:

When someone is clinically dead, but their body does not become livid and retains warmth for days and even weeks, presumably because they are in a state of samadhi.

There are medical teams now dispatched to observe this phenomena and in the past month two Gelug monks have shown this result.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 19th, 2020 at 10:41 AM

Title: Re: 8 months of no rain!

Content:

tingdzin said:

And, as with Germany, the Rocky Mountains have vast areas where the trees are ill both from lack of water and from heat, which has allowed massive invasion of beetles -- one reason, besides the temperatures, for the huge fires this year.

Malcolm wrote:

The Northeast US, especially the mid-Atlantic region, is set to be a global climate sweet spot for the next 50 years, as the West dries out and precipitation increases in the Northeast. Expect an eastward migration which results in NY-DC megapolis.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, December 19th, 2020 at 11:24 PM

Title: Re: AOC Says Democrats , Pelosi and Schumer 'Need to Go'

Content:

Queequeg said:

The Tom Haydens look like mainstream democrats that make Progressives sneer.

Malcolm wrote:

A nicer way to put it is there is conflict between idealism and pragmatism. The idealists seem Impractical to the pragmatists, and the pragmatists seem like hypocrites to the idealists.

“A more perfect union” means we are always failing, but we keep trying.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 20th, 2020 at 3:15 AM

Title: Re: 8 months of no rain!

Content:

DNS said:

The best weather in the U.S. is in the Southwestern states from about West Texas to San Diego.

Malcolm wrote:

Today, not in 20 years.

Basically, the region between the 40th and 50th parallel is the safest best for long term climate viability. Everything below the 40th parallel will become too hot for comfort.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 20th, 2020 at 3:33 AM

Title: Re: Why do monks reside in temples

Content:

Aemilius said:

Indians were already building houses from bricks during the Indus valley civilisation, that is 1700...

2500 BCE. The oldest stone temples also come from this era. The descriptions in Vinaya that involve monks making bricks are consistent with the house building techniques that existed in Northern India at the time of Buddha.

Malcolm wrote:

Have you ever seen how long a mudbrick structure lasts without being maintained? Even with adobe, not very long, and then only in dry climates.

<https://www.alamy.com/stock-photo-old-adobe-ranch-buildings-in-taos-new-mexico-33836027.html>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 20th, 2020 at 3:36 AM

Title: Re: Why do monks reside in temples

Content:

Aemilius said:

Looking at the magnificent ruins of the cities of the Indus Valley Civilisation, I find it ludicrous to think that after that the Indian culture went backwards several thousands of years to a primitive level of building!

Malcolm wrote:

Primitive? There is nothing primitive about thatch and wood structures. You can't build or maintain one. So who is primitive now? Honestly, your cultural bias is showing, better zip up.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 20th, 2020 at 3:38 AM

Title: Re: Why do monks reside in temples

Content:

tingdzin said:

This is an interesting discussion, but the fact is that we can never know what "Original Buddhism" was like, and the urge to say it was either this or that is usually based on peoples' preconceptions, and desires of what they think it should have been.

Pointing to masonry structures at traditionally Buddhist sites as evidence that Buddha's followers lived in them from the beginning, however, is pretty risky; a lot of Buddhist sites that have been excavated show considerable changes over the centuries as shown in different historical strata. Sites like Jetavanarama may be nothing like they were when the Buddha was around. As Malcolm pointed out, stone structures are not the same as grass huts, and to take the pictures of Buddha's alleged retreat dwelling as even approximating the footprint of what he stayed in requires a huge leap of faith. Yes, the Harappan civilization used stone, but we cannot assume that the Gangetic Plain civilizations followed suit and maintained a cultural continuity in that way unless there is some evidence, which there is not. It's a big mistake to think of "Indian civilization" as a unified whole, especially in the earliest periods..

As far as the Vinaya, everyone knows there are many versions. Pace Aemilius, I don't know of any modern scholar who thinks there is a single authoritative Vinaya that used to be longer than the existing versions. The quotes from the Chinese may refer to the Dharmaguptakas, as they were the most important school in the early period of translation, being gradually superseded by the Sarvastivadins. It's also important to remember that Vinayas were not written down for a long, long time -- the earliest Chinese converts expressed exasperation that the Indian and Central Asian monks they were getting Buddhist texts from did not have "hard copies" of the Vinaya, it being based wholly on memorization.

Bronkhurst's and Schopen's books are quite interesting, and certainly prompt one to re-examine assumptions about early Buddhism and the actual historical evidence we have, or don't have, in relation to the received tradition. For my money, one of Bronkhurst's most useful observations is that Buddhism cannot be seen as a derivative of or a reaction to "Hinduism", because the two germinated in different geographic regions and subcultures of the Indian subcontinent. I also think it is undeniable that Buddhism underwent huge changes in institutional structure during the Maurya and Kushan periods.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 20th, 2020 at 9:18 PM

Title: Re: AOC Says Democrats , Pelosi and Schumer 'Need to Go'

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

the corporate folks that basically make policy? That's just politics.

Malcolm wrote:

Hey corporations are people too....come on...

The fact is that Republican trickle down economics are the main thing that have gutted the middle class, not globalization.

You want $20 an hour minimum wage and universal health care? Raise taxes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 20th, 2020 at 10:02 PM

Title: Re: Correction: 12/20 is Nine Bad Omens Day

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

This wouldn't apply to astronauts in outer space because they would see that there are no actual nights and days, that it's just a matter of whether your side of the Earth is facing away from or toward the Sun. It's like saying one side of a constantly spinning prayer wheel is more auspicious than the other, when in fact, it's a rotating cylinder.

karmanyngpo said:

You are right that if a Vajrayana Dharma practitioner went out to space it would not apply. However I do think we should not discard these things as fake because I know that astrology is taught as a part of the kalachakra system

KN

Malcolm wrote:

Kalachakra also says karma outweighs astrology.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 21st, 2020 at 12:12 AM

Title: Re: AOC Says Democrats , Pelosi and Schumer 'Need to Go'

Content:

Queequeg said:

But we need something else, too. As people, we're broken. We need to build back trust in each other.

Malcolm wrote:

There was no trust among the thirteen colonies, why should we expect there to be trust now?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 21st, 2020 at 2:07 AM

Title: Re: 45 missing children recovered during statewide anti human trafficking operation in ohio

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

The sad thing is, this objectively wonderful thing, the children recovered, will be spun by QAnon idiots as proof of their conspiracies, which often largely centre around child trafficking.

Malcolm wrote:

It's just a new form of blood libel. Democrats = Jews.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 21st, 2020 at 2:54 AM

Title: Re: AOC Says Democrats, Pelosi and Schumer 'Need to Go'

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

So if you insist on me accepting that these things are just "idealism", then yeah, that is that.

Malcolm wrote:

"Idealism" in her case means wishing to have universal health care passed right away in a country where 73.4 million Americans voted for a fascist. Don't get me wrong, in the ideal world, all of these progressive ideas would have happened in 2009. However, there is the small matter of Republicans to deal with first. Hopefully, for the benefit of the world, the GOP will splinter into irreconcilable factions, and hopefully, they will actually lose in GA. Then maybe some idealism will be possible. But with Moscow Mitch as majority leader in the Senate, well, we've seen what 14 years of that has brought.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 21st, 2020 at 4:48 AM

Title: Re: Hi from a South African Gelugpa!

Content:

WhispersOfGanden said:

Hi everyone, I'm a South African Dharma practitioner in the Ganden lineage. This forum is so vast! Wonderful to be a member.

Malcolm wrote:

As long as you don't belong to the ghost worshipper school...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 21st, 2020 at 4:55 AM

Title: Re: AOC Says Democrats, Pelosi and Schumer 'Need to Go'

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I'm not wishing for it right away, I'm complaining that the mainstream of the party is out of step with the positions of its base, that's where the subject came up.

Malcolm wrote:

It is really as simple as who controls the senate and the house. Right now, it is split. Until McConnell either drops dead, retires, or loses his majority leader position, it will be very hard to bring any progressive legislation to the table and expect it to pass. This is simply a matter of pragmatism. This does not mean I want Bernie or the Squad to shut up. Far from it, they need to rattle the cages of congress loudly and often. And, the progressive base is a but a (loud) minority fraction of the constituency of the US. Pragmatism in the end dictates very little will happen that favors the progressive agenda in the next four years. Blame the people of the US, not the parties, and not the media.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 21st, 2020 at 4:57 AM

Title: Re: AOC Says Democrats , Pelosi and Schumer 'Need to Go'

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Those 73.4 million people who voted for Trump aren't worried about courting the middle like that, and neither are politicians on the right. The Democrats have to develop some talking points around policies beyond "slightly nicer looking version of the status quo"...otherwise the Biden presidency is going to be an anomaly.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. and if this is the case, and another Trumpster comes to power, at that time one might consider it time to find a residence in some other, more sane country.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 21st, 2020 at 8:02 AM

Title: Re: AOC Says Democrats , Pelosi and Schumer 'Need to Go'

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I'm not wishing for it right away, I'm complaining that the mainstream of the party is out of step with the positions of it's base, that's where the subject came up.

Malcolm wrote:

It is really as simple as who controls the senate and the house. Right now, it is split. Until McConnell either drops dead, retires, or loses his majority leader position, it will be very hard to bring any progressive legislation to the table and expect it to pass. This is simply a matter of pragmatism. This does not mean I want Bernie or the Squad to shut up. Far from it, they need to rattle the cages of congress loudly and often. And, the progressive base is a but a (loud) minority fraction of the constituency of the US. Pragmatism in the end dictates very little will happen that favors the progressive agenda in the next four years. Blame the people of the US, not the parties, and not the media.

PeterC said:

McConnell is a good illustration of why the democrats need to change their entire approach.

The role of senate majority leader is not defined in the constitution, any law or any rules resolution of the senate. It is purely customary. The Vice President as leader of the senate recognizes the senate majority leader when senate business commences, who for that reason has the power to set the agenda. No written rule requires the VP to do that.

Suppose Kamala Harris was VP of a Republican senate. Nothing stops her from recognizing a Democrat, who could then introduce legislation. Sure, the republicans could then vote it down, but they would have to vote. What McConnell does is avoid having people like Lisa Murkowski embarrass themselves by voting down popular legislation: he simply keeps it off the floor. This would result in a lot of marginal legislation actually getting passed. Of course the republicans would describe this as an unprecedented breach of rules and norms but...they have been doing that in so many ways for over a decade with the senate.

If they want to start putting wins on the board, they need to start playing by the new rules.

Malcolm wrote:

It would just be simpler for GA to go blue.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 23rd, 2020 at 1:25 AM

Title: Re: AOC Says Democrats , Pelosi and Schumer 'Need to Go'

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Working class and populist people in both main parties seem close to grabbing tar, feathers, torches & pitchforks.

People should have been going Independent, Libertarian, Green, and Constitutional Party all these years, instead of supporting corporate neocon rinos and neoliberal democrats.

Malcolm wrote:

Thats just not where the center of power is. America has a two party system. It always has. We are witnessing the birth of the seventh party system. The likelihood of a third party ever emerging which is capable of challenging the two main parties' is exceedingly small. It is necessary to understand this and accept it. Voting for third parties is a waste of time. Put in candidates in the party of one's choice who reflect one's positions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 23rd, 2020 at 1:28 AM

Title: Re: AOC Says Democrats , Pelosi and Schumer 'Need to Go'

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Now for Pelosi's sake, she seems to have a connection to the Dalai Lama; which is good. She likely only participated not knowing what she's doing and just thinking that she's doing something "liberal"; but maybe I'm wrong. Any connection is better than none.

Malcolm wrote:

Pelosi has been a supporter of HHDL for many years.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 23rd, 2020 at 9:09 AM

Title: Re: AOC Says Democrats , Pelosi and Schumer 'Need to Go'

Content:

amanitamusc said:

AOC is disgusted and rightly so. She is stuck in a right wing party cooperating with the extreme right republicans. The two party system is moving further to the right as time goes on.

Malcolm wrote:

Yup, because people don't vote.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 23rd, 2020 at 10:51 PM

Title: Re: AOC Says Democrats , Pelosi and Schumer 'Need to Go'

Content:

Queequeg said:

As the time ticks down, Trumpists are approaching purity of their essential nature... stripped of any illusion of power, all that's left is a cranky disposition.

Malcolm wrote:

The essential part is the delusion of power.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 24th, 2020 at 3:09 AM

Title: Re: Where is this mantra from? Rainbow light/rainbow blessing/yera/water dakini rainbow blessing mantra

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It is not a Buddhist mantra either. Must be a new age "terma."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 24th, 2020 at 6:03 AM

Title: Re: The Orgyen Nyendrup lineage

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Orgyen Nyendrup is one of the "eight lineages of accomplishment" but I can find almost no detailed information about it.

Although the Rime master Jamgön Kongtrul preserved information on all eight lineages in the Treasury of Precious Instructions, the volume on Orgyen Nyendrup has not yet been translated into English. The internet seems to have very little specific information on the nature or practices of the lineage, other than listing it among the eight.

It also appears to have gone extinct in medieval times with a broken lineage. Perhaps the only place information is to be found is in Jamgön Kongtrul's writings.

Does anyone have any information on this seemingly "lost lineage"?

Malcolm wrote:

It is not lost or broken at all. It concerns the practice of Kalacakra. As one of the translators on this project (volume 5 and 6), I can assure you it will be translated and is forthcoming.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 24th, 2020 at 6:31 AM

Title: Re: The Orgyen Nyendrup lineage

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Thank you for your reply Malcolm. Thank you also for your hard work translating this monumental text.

So it is still a living lineage? Perhaps I am doing something wrong but I can find no information to that effect on the Internet.

Are you aware of any links, etc. that would provide a brief overview suitable for a non-initiate?

Malcolm wrote:

Not translating that text specifically, I am working on the Sakyapa material.

Yes, it is a living lineage, but it is not an independent lineage, like Chod, Zhije, or Kadampa.

Orgyenpa was the 3rd Karmapa's guru, and this teaching is mainly found in the Karma Kagyu school.

There is a synopsis of Orgyen Nyendrup here:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 25th, 2020 at 3:21 AM

Title: Re: AOC Says Democrats , Pelosi and Schumer 'Need to Go'

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Well, imagine an action thriller based on the danger of heart disease...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 25th, 2020 at 9:18 PM

Title: Re: Tribute to: Longde before Dzin Dharmabodhi?

Content:

yagmort said:

... I have also heard a tiny part of the instructions of the Master that originated in Drāmiḍa, and that was transmitted through Indian scholars. Although I have not actually seen the historical texts that tell the Indian tales, the tales are included in the texts of the history of our lineage of teachers, both scholars and masters. I have also seen many texts that contain the history of the spread of the Dharma to Drāmiḍa... any info on Drāmiḍa?

MiphamFan said:

Malcolm speculated Zangdog Palri could be Madagascar.

Malcolm wrote:

David Templeman, actually. But I think his argument is sensible.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, December 25th, 2020 at 9:21 PM

Title: Re: AOC Says Democrats , Pelosi and Schumer 'Need to Go'

Content:

PeterC said:

I think the broader point the chart was making was that we greatly overweight the risk of terrorism. Which is clearly the case.

Malcolm wrote:

They missed the category of death by incompetent political leadership.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, December 27th, 2020 at 2:14 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen meditation

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

If you have not had direct introduction and then ascertained the mind essence, you can sit in "open awareness" as long as you want and it will not be the practice of Dzogpachenpo. So if you are serious, find a master and then do what they say.

Sonnald said:
Hi all!

For those who may be familiar with the Dzogchen tradition and its main open awareness meditation, I've become aware of different suggestions as to how long sittings should be. Some say that the sittings should be short (5-10 minutes) and more frequent so as to support the ease and effortlessness of the approach, and to dissolve egoic tendencies through 'nonmeditation'. Others say that sittings should be longer (30-45 minutes) as habitual tendencies are ingrained over a number of years and so should be tackled with more sitting. I'm not too sure where I stand on this, and so would much appreciate any help or suggestions from those of you who are practiced in the Dzogchen tradition and could help to shed light on this particular aspect of the practice

All the best

Sonny

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, December 27th, 2020 at 6:11 AM
Title: Re: How exactly is there a momentariness of consciousness ?
Content:

Artziebetter1 said:
Show me sources that a Buddha has subjective awareness .

Malcolm wrote:
They have two kinds of omniscience, hence they possess subjective awareness. They are not inert.

Artziebetter1 said:
If that's the case then I don't fear nirvana. But I thought the sutras say they have no sensation or wisdom contact anymore and also the alaya ceases so what's left of a buddha?

Malcolm wrote:
Nondual jñāna, gnosis.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, December 28th, 2020 at 1:41 AM
Title: Re: How exactly is there a momentariness of consciousness ?

Content:

Artziebetter1 said:

Is that an actual functioning not merely conceptual thing or merely an abstraction?do Buddhas have minds?I think not.I also heard from nyanasagara that in Jnana there is no subjective awareness or appearances.So How do Buddhas act and interact with the world without a mind or perception?

Malcolm wrote:

Spontaneously, in accord with the needs of sentient beings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 28th, 2020 at 4:47 AM

Title: Re: Copper Colored mountain location?

Content:

Tenma said:

And if it truly is Buddhist, why isn't Buddhism there anymore...

Malcolm wrote:

Why did Buddhism die out in India?

Anyway, all evidence suggests that anthropologically, rakṣasas were a tribe of ocean-going cannibals. They used to be the dominant people in Śrī Lanka, before they were all exterminated from that island by Indians. The mythos of Ravana, Dasagriva being defeated and the rakṣasas being driven out is a deep Indian cultural trope, not confined to Hindus, but very prevalent in Buddhist sources as well.

One interesting factoid: the language of Madagascar has only one cognate language in the world—the language of the headhunters of Borneo.

Madagascar was colonized by Indians during the 8th century, who established colonies of Indian merchants on the island. Templeman speculates it was they who hired him to tame the indigenous people, known to us as "rakṣasa."

Northern Afghanistan used to be Shambhala. There isn't Buddhism there anymore either...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 28th, 2020 at 5:32 AM

Title: Re: Copper Colored mountain location?

Content:

Tenma said:

And if it truly is Buddhist, why isn't Buddhism there anymore...

Malcolm wrote:

Why did Buddhism die out in India?

Anyway, all evidence suggests that anthropologically, rakṣasas were a tribe of ocean-going cannibals. They used to be the dominant people in Śrī Lanka, before they were all exterminated from that island by Indians. The mythos of Ravana, Dasagriva being defeated and the rakṣasas being driven out is a deep Indian cultural trope, not confined to Hindus, but very prevalent in Buddhist sources as well.

Tenma said:

Considering that there are rituals and mantras for "warding away rakṣasas," wouldn't you say that this is a pretty racist usage, to drive away people whom you consider "savages" or "mythical demons?" If there is a prayer that asks for "God to drive out the Amazonian Natives" from their rainforest homes, would you not say this is a similar usage?

Malcolm wrote:

There isn't much literature that isn't more racist than the Mahāvamsa, the telling of the Buddhist subjugation of the indigenous population of Śrī Lanka in the second century BCE by King Dutugamunu, but Rama's war against Ravana and his cannibal legions predates it by many centuries, how many, we just don't know, perhaps around 1,000 BCE. Supposedly, the earliest portions of the Ramayāna date from around 700-500 BCE.

However, by the time such myths arrived in Tibet they have been so divorced from actual historical content, that their racism does not exist for Tibetans, who considered themselves, in one telling, to be descendants of sring pos and monkeys.

So much history, so much racism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 28th, 2020 at 9:43 AM

Title: Re: How exactly is there a momentariness of consciousness ?

Content:

Artziebetter1 said:

Is that an actual functioning not merely conceptual thing or merely an abstraction?do Buddhas have minds?I think not.I also heard from nyanasagara that in Jnana there is no subjective awareness or appearances.So How do Buddhas act and interact with the world without a mind or perception?

Malcolm wrote:

Spontaneously, in accord with the needs of sentient beings.

Artziebetter1 said:

this explains what he does but not how.without a Mind or receptacle for past volition and Merit,without cognition,interaction could basically never occur.What is Jnana?is it a type of mind?is it an abstraction talking about how a Buddha acts with 5 wisdoms despite having no Mind?

Malcolm wrote:

Based on his past aspirations while a bodhisattva on the path. A Buddhas gnosis is a consciousness that has become free of limitations.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, December 28th, 2020 at 10:42 PM

Title: Re: Copper Colored mountain location?

Content:

jmlee369 said:

For the sake of argument, I will try to justify all these things.

Malcolm wrote:

That's an exercise in futility. So, just for sake of argument, I shall reveal the casuistry that lays beneath your justifications.

jmlee369 said:

For people practising Mahayana in general and Vajrayana in particular, we really need to adjust ourselves to the fact that the enlightened experience of reality is radically different from our current experience. As it says in one ganachakra text:

E-ma-ho! In the grand play of deep awareness, all lands and regions are vajra-fields; the structures majestic vajra-palaces; oceans of clouds of Samantabhadra offerings billow forth. The objects of enjoyment possess every glory wished; all dwelling therein are actual viras and virinis; not even the words "impurity" or "flaw" exist: nothing is less than infinitely pure.

<https://studybuddhism.com/en/advanced-studies/prayers-rituals/tantric-practices/the-guru-puja>

Malcolm wrote:

Apart from this line, "not even the words "impurity" or "flaw" exist: nothing is less than infinitely pure," this is all metaphorical.

jmlee369 said:

Many times the buddhas and bodhisattvas have and continue to manifest themselves as humans, gods, demons, yakshas, nagas, and so forth, including rakshasas. Buddhas and bodhisattvas make themselves available to each and every sentient being, there is no land or country where they do not manifest. So I don't see what's so troubling about identifying these emanations. The Avatamsaka Sutra explicitly states that bodhisattvas on the first bhumi often manifest as leaders of countries to benefit beings.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, but not to lead wholesale slaughters and genocides. Even Rudracakravartin does not actually kill anyone, he creates an apparition of an army to intimidate the mlecchas, but he does not actually cause anyone to die.

jmlee369 said:

Zopa Rinpoche's thoughts on Queen Victoria come from Serkong Tsenshab Rinpoche, which I believe in turn come from the 13th Dalai Lama's identification. The Manchu emperors were long held by (mainly Gelug, I suppose) lamas to be emanations of Manjushri, especially Qianlong. If it helps, there is a Korean master and his students who also believe Qianlong to be a tulku. And yet the same Qianlong ordered the Dzungar genocide.

Malcolm wrote:

As queens go, Victoria was a pretty good one. But remember, Āryadeva points out that monarchs are fools when they think they deserve their power, and forget their power comes from the people they govern.

As for genocides, you really think the Qianlong emperor was a Mañjuśrī emanation. This is clearly just a result of political favoritism.

jmlee369 said:

Likewise, there is the well known story from the early Tibetan histories such as the Testimony of Ba and the Pillar Testament identifying Songtsen Gampo as Avalokitesvara in the story of the two Khotanese monks, who were terrified when they saw that this supposed bodhisattva inflicted such cruel punishments and mass executions on his subjects, yet had their doubts dispelled by Manjushri.

Malcolm wrote:

One ought not rely on either the Testimony of Ba's many difference recensions nor the Pillar Testament for an accurate depiction of Songtsen Gampo's reign.

jmlee369 said:

Lama Zhang Yudrakpa, one of the previous incarnations of the Dalai Lamas, raised an army and raided villages and monasteries, but in reality the soldiers were having Mahamudra realisations during battle.

Malcolm wrote:

Ridiculous. One cannot have mahāmudra realizations whilst engaged in the slaughter of battle.

jmlee369 said:

Those in the know also understand Mao Zedong's true identity. After all, Mao's mother entrusted him into the care of Avalokitesvara when he was an infant - why would Avalokitesvara simply stand by and do nothing if this child would grow up to inflict true harm to the Buddhadharma?

Malcolm wrote:

Avalokiteśvara watched in silence while Dharma disappeared from India. This is some of the worst casuistry I have ever seen.

jmlee369 said:

Manjushri taught Ananda's disciples emptiness and caused them to be born in hell, yet the Buddha praised Manjushri's actions.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, no. Ananda's disciple slandered the teachings they received, that's what caused them to be born in hell.

jmlee369 said:

This is all to say, the wondrous activities of the Buddhas and bodhisattvas cannot be judged by ordinary standards, and even the most terrible sufferings of sentient beings are the play of their own ripening karmic causes. As a dharma practitioner, we can't blame anyone or anything outside of ourselves.

Malcolm wrote:

Through this casuistry, you might as well argue that no one can ever commit negative karma through killing, stealing, and rape of another. After all, you just claimed that all suffering comes from ourselves. Certainly this is not the intention of the Buddha. Karmavipaka may be unerring, but it does not mean that we cannot be the victims of the nonvirtues of others. It does not mean, for example, that Hitler, Mao, and Stalin did not harm countless sentient beings.

jmlee369 said:

Dharma is not compatible with cultural relativism.

Malcolm wrote:

Of course it is, it's called upaya. Buddhadharma adapts itself to whatever culture it finds itself in.

jmlee369 said:

Cause and effect are infallible.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, which is why your reasoning above is so shallow. Genocidal leaders take birth in hell. There is no relativism here to be had, or excuse, "He was a bodhisattva, yet murdered thousands and millions."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 29th, 2020 at 1:50 AM

Title: Re: Is world domination SGI's goal?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Axiom 1: All online conversations about Nichiren Buddhism between Nichiren Buddhists and non-Nichiren Buddhists end in flame wars.

Axiom 2: All online conversations about Nichiren Buddhism between Nichiren Buddhists and other Nichiren Buddhists end in flame wars.

Axiom 3: All online conversations about Nichiren Buddhism are best avoided.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 29th, 2020 at 2:37 AM

Title: Re: Is world domination SGI's goal?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Axiom 1: All online conversations about Nichiren Buddhism between Nichiren Buddhists and non-Nichiren Buddhists end in flame wars.

Axiom 2: All online conversations about Nichiren Buddhism between Nichiren Buddhists and other Nichiren Buddhists end in flame wars.

Axiom 3: All online conversations about Nichiren Buddhism are best avoided.

FiveSkandhas said:

I love talking about Nichiren and am not a Nichiren Buddhist.

Because I come with an almost anthropological detachment to the topic, I make no judgements. I am merely interested in Nichiren doxography and theology as abstract propositions.

I've never felt attacked or flamed by a Nichiren Buddhist on this board and respect most of them as valuable sources of interesting information.

The occasional contextless wall of text Goshō quotation blitz is the only drawback, and once identified they can be scrolled past.

Malcolm wrote:

There are always innocent bystanders...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 29th, 2020 at 3:57 AM

Title: Re: Famine and Plague in Medieval Japan: Jaw-dropping horror

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

If you really contemplate these statistics, it takes the breath away. Has any other civilization endured so much famine and plague over so many centuries? What does this do to people, psychologically and sociologically?

Malcolm wrote:

Plague:

<https://jmvh.org/article/the-history-of-plague-part-1-the-three-great-pandemics/>

Smallpox:

<https://www.infoplease.com/math-science/health/diseases/epidemics-of-the-past-smallpox-12000-years-of-terror>

Famine:

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Great_Famine_of_1315%E2%80%931317

War:

Speaks for itself.

Nothing really special about Japan in this respect.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 29th, 2020 at 5:11 AM

Title: Re: Famine and Plague in Medieval Japan: Jaw-dropping horror

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Nothing really special about Japan in this respect.

FiveSkandhas said:

50% and 75% death tolls are "special", especially in two years. Very few if any other mass famine/plague dieoffs were so hard so fast.

Malcolm wrote:

The new world, 1492—1592. Mexico suffered a 90 percent reduction in Indigenous population by 1542, thirty million down to three in fifty years.

A similar case can be found for native people in the US. 700,000 native people in Florida in 1520; 2000 by 1700.

As I said, Japan is not remarkable in this respect.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 29th, 2020 at 5:58 AM

Title: Re: Famine and Plague in Medieval Japan: Jaw-dropping horror

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

50% and 75% death tolls are "special", especially in two years. Very few if any other mass famine/plague dieoffs were so hard so fast.

Malcolm wrote:

The new world, 1492—1592. Mexico suffered a 90 percent reduction in Indigenous population by 1542, thirty million down to three in fifty years.

A similar case can be found for native people in the US. 700,000 native people in Florida in 1520; 2000 by 1700.

As I said, Japan is not remarkable in this respect.

FiveSkandhas said:

In raw numbers and absolute scope, I have to concede to you.

In terms of speedy population decimation, however, I have yet to read of anything anywhere else in history like the 50% population drop in a single year brought by the 806 Japanese plague.

Malcolm wrote:

Population of Japan in 800, between 4 and 6 million.

The black death killed half the population of Europe, the Near East, and North Africa in under five years, somewhere between 75 and 200 million people. Sorry, Japan just isn't that special in this regard. 25 to 50 million of those people lived in Europe. That's slightly less than six million people a year in various parts of Europe. Depending on whose estimates you read, in one year, 40-60 percent of England's population died. Its population was between 3.7 and 5.7 million in 1347. So, basically the same as Japan.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 29th, 2020 at 6:14 AM

Title: Re: Is world domination SGI's goal?

Content:

Queequeg said:

No. The comparison is outrageous and inflammatory. Its like saying Democratic Socialists are comparable to Nazis because they both advance a notion of social consciousness.

Get over yourself.

PadmaVonSamba said:

It's comparable to saying they share in common a view of changing the world by attracting more supporters and members. It's not a question of their internal content.

I'm not the one saying that by intending to convert, that therefore SGI and other groups who hope to convert people are the same, or that seeking to convert others always leads to a bad ending.

Perhaps you should direct your objection to the comment by soma999 who stated that: "... There have been many who wanted to convert the world. It has never brought any good."
(About eight posts prior to this one).

Queequeg said:
So you want to double down?

Ridiculous. Do you even know what you're talking about? SG is an easy target to criticize, but comparing them to a group that tried to immanentize armageddon with sarin gas in a train station is national enquirer level lazy. I hope that's not the effort you put into your other endeavors.

And as for the whole question of saving all beings, it's comical when people who regard bodhisattva vows to save all beings positively get condescending when some people actually try to do it.

Smh

Malcolm wrote:
Proof of Axiom 1.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, December 29th, 2020 at 6:47 AM
Title: Re: Is world domination SGI's goal?
Content:

Queequeg said:
So you want to double down?

Ridiculous. Do you even know what you're talking about? SG is an easy target to criticize, but comparing them to a group that tried to immanentize armageddon with sarin gas in a train station is national enquirer level lazy. I hope that's not the effort you put into your other endeavors.

And as for the whole question of saving all beings, it's comical when people who regard bodhisattva vows to save all beings positively get condescending when some people actually try to do it.

Smh

Malcolm wrote:
Proof of Axiom 1.

Queequeg said:
Nah. Your interjection in this thread was you performing Axiom 1.

Malcolm wrote:
Nah, just a clinical observation of based 25 years of observation. You're not even old enough to remember the Nam/namu Usenet war of 1995.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, December 29th, 2020 at 9:26 AM
Title: Re: AOC Says Democrats , Pelosi and Schumer 'Need to Go'
Content:
Dan74 said:
Terrorism ticks many boxes, like public imagination/indignation/anxieties and military industrial/neocon interests.

PeterC said:
True, terrorism isn't really about terrorism in the US. A terrorist blew up most of a city block in Nashville on Christmas Day. The president didn't bother to leave the golf course, call the mayor or make any public statement about it subsequently, nor did any senior politician in his party. Guess what color the terrorist was.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, December 29th, 2020 at 9:36 AM
Title: Re: Ngondro as a complete path to enlightenment
Content:
FiveSkandhas said:
Hello.

I've heard it from a number of sources that Ngondro can serve as a complete path to enlightenment, rather than being thought of merely as "preliminaries."

I am curious if you yourself, or anyone you know of, has decided to practice Ngondro this way, devoting themselves to it completely as a self-contained path and never receiving higher transmissions, teachings, etc. Have there been any famous historical figures known for a devotion to "Ngondro only"?

Just curious about this perspective. I think it would be a noble path indeed, and a singularly humble one. I think in many if not most beginners' minds, there is an at-least-subconscious tendency to be offput by the "preliminary" label. (Not to mention the physical stress of all the prostrations, etc.). Many may seek to "rush through this odious task so I can get to the good stuff higher up." Thus, to embrace Ngondro as a single lifetime practice would involve a deeper understanding of what it is, and a kind of wise humility that would be very refreshing and inspiring.

Malcolm wrote:

The main practice of Tibetan Buddhism is guru yoga, which is part of a “ngondro.”

There is no higher practice in Buddhadharma than guru yoga. But in order to practice guru yoga, an empowerment of unsurpassed yoga tantra is required.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 29th, 2020 at 10:11 AM

Title: Re: AOC Says Democrats , Pelosi and Schumer 'Need to Go'

Content:

Dan74 said:

Terrorism ticks many boxes, like public imagination/indignation/anxieties and military industrial/neocon interests.

PeterC said:

True, terrorism isn't really about terrorism in the US. A terrorist blew up most of a city block in Nashville on Christmas Day. The president didn't bother to leave the golf course, call the mayor or make any public statement about it subsequently, nor did any senior politician in his party. Guess what color the terrorist was.

FiveSkandhas said:

Was that done intentionally? The early news report (from a reliable mainstream source) said "no foul play was suspected." I got the impression it was some sort of accident. Have they since determined it was intentional?

Malcolm wrote:

Excuse me? The RV broadcast for 15 minutes it was going to blow up, and it took out a regional telecom station

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 29th, 2020 at 10:35 AM

Title: Re: Ngondro as a complete path to enlightenment

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Hello.

I've heard it from a number of sources that Ngondro can serve as a complete path to enlightenment, rather than being thought of merely as "preliminaries."

I am curious if you yourself, or anyone you know of, has decided to practice Ngondro this way, devoting themselves to it completely as a self-contained path and never receiving higher transmissions, teachings, etc. Have there been any famous historical figures known for a devotion to "Ngondro only"?

Just curious about this perspective. I think it would be a noble path indeed, and a singularly humble one. I think in many if not most beginners' minds, there is an at-least-subconscious tendency to be offput by the "preliminary" label. (Not to mention the physical stress of all the prostrations, etc.). Many may seek to "rush through this odious task so I can get to the good stuff higher up." Thus, to embrace Ngondro as a single lifetime practice would involve a deeper understanding of what it is, and a kind of wise humility that would be very refreshing and inspiring.

Malcolm wrote:

The main practice of Tibetan Buddhism is guru yoga, which is part of a “ngondro.”

There is no higher practice in Buddhadharma than guru yoga. But in order to practice guru yoga, an empowerment of unsurpassed yoga tantra is required.

karmanyipgo said:

Howdy Malcolm. My own teacher told us to practice guru yoga without empowerment, just lung. Can you help me to understand why there is this apparent discrepancy? I would ask my teacher but he is probably busy and not easily accessible directly. Thanx.

KN

Malcolm wrote:

No empowerment, no guru. Thus is universally understood. I can't comment on why you've been encouraged to practice guru yoga sans empowerment or direct introduction. Perhaps he or she thinks devotion is a sufficient condition for guru yoga. But guru yoga is not simply devotion,

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 29th, 2020 at 11:18 AM

Title: Re: AOC Says Democrats , Pelosi and Schumer 'Need to Go'

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Was that done intentionally? The early news report (from a reliable mainstream source) said "no foul play was suspected." I got the impression it was some sort of accident. Have they since determined it was intentional?

Malcolm wrote:

Excuse me? The RV broadcast for 15 minutes it was going to blow up, and it took out a regional telecom station

FiveSkandhas said:

That's horrifying.

I just read the breaking news when it happened and moved on. I don't pay more than casual attention to US news for the most part.

Disgusting there was no statement from the president or other rightwing officials.

Will now go read more about this tragedy.

Malcolm wrote:

Fortunately, apart from the suicide bomber, only three people suffered minor injuries because of the swift actions of the police in alerting neighbors.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 29th, 2020 at 11:19 AM

Title: Re: AOC Says Democrats , Pelosi and Schumer 'Need to Go'

Content:

PeterC said:

US news media is a joke.

Malcolm wrote:

It's a little punch drunk.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 29th, 2020 at 11:51 AM

Title: Re: Ngondro as a complete path to enlightenment

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Apparently Situ R has said that you can get enlightened doing NgonDro. I can't source it though.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, because it is just gathering the two accumulations capped by the practice of guru yoga.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 29th, 2020 at 8:19 PM

Title: Re: Copper Colored mountain location?

Content:

Palden_Norbu said:

Sorry to be the fact checker here, but

Malcolm wrote:

One interesting factoid: the language of Madagascar has only one cognate language in the world—the language of the headhunters of Borneo.

Palden_Norbu said:

This is false. Malagasy, the language of Madagascar, is part of the Austronesian family, one of the largest language families in the world, stretching from Madagascar in the West to Easter Islands in the East, and from Taiwan in the north to New Zealand in the south. Yes, it is related to the Iban language of Borneo (the headhunters), just like it is related to Indonesian, Hawaiian, Maori and hundreds of others.

Malcolm wrote:

There isn't much literature that isn't more racist than the Mahāvamsa, the telling of the Buddhist subjugation of the indigenous population of Śrī Lanka in the second century BCE by King Dutugamunu, but Rama's war against Ravana and his cannibal legions predates it by many centuries, how many, we just don't know, perhaps around 1,000 BCE. Supposedly, the earliest portions of the Ramayāna date from around 700-500 BCE.

Palden_Norbu said:

In 1000 BCE the Indo-Aryans were just settling Northern India, pretty unlikely they would wage war against someone in Sri Lanka then.

Malcolm wrote:

That's a little late, IMO. Nevertheless, the prevalence of a legend of a war in Shri Lanka in both Buddhist and Hindu sources that predates the Buddha by some centuries, the war could have just easily been between Tamils and ocean-going cannibals, and later Aryanized.

As for Guru P in Madagascar, see Templeman.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 29th, 2020 at 8:28 PM

Title: Re: Ngondro as a complete path to enlightenment

Content:

Lingpupa said:

I would be interested, if Malcolm reads this, to hear how he squares this with his view that, if I may paraphrase, no empowerment => no guru => no guru yoga. Is it that the teachers concerned were teaching wrongly? Or was the guru yoga practice involved somehow only of a low-grade? Or was it in some way not a "real" guru yoga? (Alert: the third possibility soon leads to the "no true Scotsman" fallacy.)

Malcolm wrote:

No empowerment, no guru, no guru yoga is something that is very clearly stated in the tantras.

I know that in the seventies and eighties, some kagyu and nyingma lamas insisted western people perform a ngondro as prerequisite to receiving empowerments to see how serious they were.

This approach has largely collapsed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 29th, 2020 at 8:32 PM

Title: Re: AOC Says Democrats , Pelosi and Schumer 'Need to Go'

Content:

PeterC said:

US news media is a joke.

Malcolm wrote:

It's a little punch drunk.

PeterC said:

After this year, yes. But then again, it was in part the billions in free publicity that they gave trump in 2016 that got us into this state

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, I agree. This is where CNN in particular has much to be ashamed. But they are aware of this and have admitted it to be so. Anyway, as I am sure you agree, one should rely on papers of record, not "the media," for journalism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 29th, 2020 at 9:50 PM

Title: Re: Ngondro as a complete path to enlightenment

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

I know that in the seventies and eighties, some kagyu and nyingma lamas insisted western people perform a ngondro as prerequisite to receiving empowerments to see how serious they were.

This approach has largely collapsed.

Lingpupa said:

OK, but I think the question still remains: was the guru yoga as practised by those westerners really guru yoga, or did the said lamas pull the wool over their eyes?

Malcolm wrote:

How can one take the four empowerments if one has not received them first from a guru, even in their most minimal form?

As it says in the Ornament of Mahāmudra Tantra:

Without empowerment there are no siddhis, like pressing sand for oil.
Whoever explains the tantras and the upadeśas to those without empowerment, both master and disciple go to hell, even if siddhis have been obtained.

Now, I am quite sure that even though there were those in the 70's and 80's who did ngondros and so on without empowerment, they received little if no explanation of the tantric subjects prior to being properly ripened. So, not I don't think you were being hoodwinked, I think you were being tested to see if you were serious.

M

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, December 29th, 2020 at 9:53 PM

Title: Re: Respecting dharma texts - notes

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Some years ago I read an article that noted a concern among many practitioners in East Asia regarding the disposal of digital texts. They felt wrong merely pressing delete on a file containing a sutra or parts of a sutra. I believe somebody at one point set up a special service you could send your old Dharma texts to, and they would either preserve them on a server or dispose of them "properly." Not sure about the details, though.

Malcolm wrote:

I am sure they got over it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 30th, 2020 at 2:21 AM

Title: Re: Trump aids Dali Lama . powerful Bill to protect His position.

Content:

Minobu said:

this article reminded me of something His holiness once said ...not exact quotes here...it is from memory..

so Donald Trump assures himself of not going to Hell ...

Malcolm wrote:

It is a bill introduced by a Democrat, of course.

Minobu said:

after all is said done on this forum...He did more for His holiness than any other president or person in power world wide..

Malcolm wrote:

Umm, that is complete and total nonsense. The last three presidents met with HHDL several times. Trump has never met with HHDL or even spoken with him.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 30th, 2020 at 2:37 AM

Title: Re: Ngondro as a complete path to enlightenment

Content:

Lingpupa said:

Or would it be more appropriate to say that the first time round was "real but a little thin" and that it should now be deepened through at least some continued practice?

It seems a bit harsh to say to such people that they were only being tested, and that their efforts were otherwise pointless.

PS Your implication that there was a woeful shortage of explanation is one with which I can wholeheartedly concur.

Malcolm wrote:

The gnosis aroused by guru yoga depends on the introduction of the fourth empowerment. Without it, the seed of that gnosis is not planted.

But those faithful students who persevered certainly received empowerments eventually, or at least they created a positive dharma link.

The fruit of guru yoga is the realization of the great perfection or mahāmudra. Without introduction or empowerment, I very much doubt the necessary ground has been prepared nor the seeds planted to result in either fruit.

I don't mean to be harsh, but for a tradition which holds up samaya all the time as being the foundation of the path, people seem to disregard it a lot based in this or that justification.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 30th, 2020 at 2:41 AM

Title: Re: Is world domination SGI's goal?

Content:

Queequeg said:

All this just shows, including the interlopers in this thread who have nothing to do with the tradition but feel compelled to cast shade, that the smaller the real estate gets, the more bitterly people fight over it.

Malcolm wrote:

Nailed it. Axioms 1, 2 and 3. Bravo.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 30th, 2020 at 2:43 AM

Title: Re: Trump aids Dali Lama . powerful Bill to protect His position.

Content:

tingdzin said:

As my farmer grandfather used to say,"Even a blind pig roots up an acorn now and then". Then there's Bruce Lee : "God and the Devil change places with lightning speed." (remembering that the change back can be equally quick).

Malcolm wrote:

Trump did tell Xi it was perfectly correct to intern a million Muslims in concentration camps...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 30th, 2020 at 3:06 AM

Title: Re: Ngondro as a complete path to enlightenment

Content:

karmanyngpo said:

What about a situation in which a student has received pointing out directions from another teacher in another context? Is this sufficient? I believe that is my situation.

Malcolm wrote:

Can I ask why you are doing a ngondro under a teacher other than your guru?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 30th, 2020 at 3:57 AM

Title: Re: Ngondro as a complete path to enlightenment

Content:

karmanyngpo said:

What about a situation in which a student has received pointing out directions from another teacher in another context? Is this sufficient? I believe that is my situation.

Malcolm wrote:

Can I ask why you are doing a ngondro under a teacher other than your guru?

karmanyngpo said:

I attended an open teaching a while ago and the teacher later told me that he tries to point out at every teaching he does. I do not have a formal or personal relationship with this teacher but his teachings are pretty public and so I have attended a couple. Not sure if he even teaches ngondro.

Ngondro is being done under a different teacher. He has done online ngondro retreats and that is how I was taught by him.

Is that bad?? Never really got the impression from either teacher that taking teachings from other teachers would be bad. They both seem to have a lot of students and are pretty open.

KN

Malcolm wrote:

I am not sure as I don't know which teachers you are talking about.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 30th, 2020 at 3:59 AM

Title: Re: Ngondro as a complete path to enlightenment

Content:

Lingpupa said:

Something else just occurred to me - it wasn't just in the 70s and 80s. I'm pretty sure that people are starting Tersar ngondros these days without yet having received a higher tantric empowerment. I can't believe they are all being either hoodwinked or tested. Are they?

Malcolm wrote:

By the time they finish prostrations, they will have certainly received. Remember, it is guru yoga that is the main issue.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 30th, 2020 at 6:18 AM

Title: Re: Non-exclusivist independent Nichiren Buddhism

Content:

illaraza said:

so i have made it a point to emulate Nichiren and see the results.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 30th, 2020 at 10:08 AM

Title: Re: Trump aids Dalai Lama . powerful Bill to protect His position.

Content:

Minobu said:

this article reminded me of something His holiness once said ...not exact quotes here...it is from memory..

so Donald Trump assures himself of not going to Hell ...

Malcolm wrote:

It is a bill introduced by a Democrat, of course.

Minobu said:

after all is said done on this forum...He did more for His holiness than any other president or person in power world wide..

Malcolm wrote:

Umm, that is complete and total nonsense. The last three presidents met with HHDL several times. Trump has never met with HHDL or even spoken with him.

Minobu said:

The man served The Buddha Avalokiteshvara .

He has proven to be a servant of Buddha Avalokiteshvara , how is this not a fact.

simple as that...

unprecedented since the fall of Tibet .

The Tibetan Policy and Support Act of 2020 approves USD 1 million per annum for the Special US Coordinator on Tibet, USD 675,000 towards scholarship provisions, USD 575,000 for scholar exchange initiatives, USD8 million for the Tibetan Autonomous Region and Communities in China, USD 6 million for Tibetans living in India, USD3 million for Tibetan governance.

Malcolm wrote:

It's a bill written by a Democrat. Trump is only a servant his own narcissistic impulses. I am sorry to disappoint you, but the Democrats such as Pelosi and Republicans such as Bush II have been giving aid and support to HHDL for a very long time. Trump is a Johnny-come-lately to the issue. When His Holiness spoke from steps of Congress in 2007, I was there:

<https://www.dalailama.com/messages/acceptance-speeches/u-s-congressional-gold-medal/congressional-gold-medal>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 30th, 2020 at 10:14 AM

Title: Re: Ngondro as a complete path to enlightenment

Content:

karmanyngpo said:

Question, what constitutes a "serious Vajrayana practice with samaya commitments"?

Malcolm wrote:

A practice based on receiving the four empowerments completely. There is no disagreement on this point by those who have studied both Nyingma and Sarma tantras.

There is lower tantra of course, but there is no guru yoga in lower tantra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 30th, 2020 at 10:42 AM

Title: Re: Trump aids Dalai Lama . powerful Bill to protect His position.

Content:

Minobu said:

The man served The Buddha Avalokiteshvara .

He has proven to be a servant of Buddha Avalokiteshvara , how is this not a fact.

simple as that...

unprecedented since the fall of Tibet .

Malcolm wrote:

It's a bill written by a Democrat. Trump is only a servant his own narcissistic impulses. I am sorry to disappoint you, but the Democrats such as Pelosi and Republicans such as Bush II have been giving aid and support to HHDL for a very long time. Trump is a Johnny-come-lately to the issue. When His Holiness spoke from steps of Congress in 2007, I was there:

<https://www.dalailama.com/messages/acceptance-speeches/u-s-congressional-gold-medal/congressional-gold-medal>

Minobu said:

you seem blinded by the event with your politics and hatred for Trump.

come now, not even a token sentiment for what this means to the Tibetan people and

The Buddha.

No other political leader has signed anything close..

this tells a story .

to watch people in here ...unreal...

Malcolm wrote:

I don't hate Trump, he is a dangerous fool who has harmed countless millions, but I don't hate him.

But the idea he can take credit for three decades+ of Democrat's constant initiatives to help Tibetans is ludicrous.

In any case, it is part of a larger package, it's not an independent bill.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 30th, 2020 at 11:05 AM

Title: Re: AOC Says Democrats , Pelosi and Schumer 'Need to Go'

Content:

PeterC said:

US news media is a joke.

Malcolm wrote:

It's a little punch drunk.

PeterC said:

After this year, yes. But then again, it was in part the billions in free publicity that they gave trump in 2016 that got us into this state

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.tennessean.com/story/news/crime/2020/12/29/nashville-explosion-woman-warned-mnpsd-warner-building-bomb-2019/4082253001/>

It's not just the US news media that is on Xanax.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 30th, 2020 at 11:52 AM

Title: Re: Ngondro as a complete path to enlightenment

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

There is lower tantra of course, but there is no guru yoga in lower tantra.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I have heard that often. Yet in the Karma Kagyu Ngondro, the Vajrasattva practice is Yogatantra level. When he is visualized above one's head he is considered to be the same as your guru. How is that not a guru yoga?

Malcolm wrote:

There is a difference in how Vajrasattva is practiced in Yoga tantra and Niruttarayogatantra. Guru yoga exclusively exists in the latter and not the former. Vajrasattva purification exists in both, but the understanding is not the same.

And, it is not certain that Vajrasattva practice in Karma Kagyu is actually yoga tantra level.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 30th, 2020 at 7:35 PM

Title: Re: Copper Colored mountain location?

Content:

jmlee369 said:

If the claim troubles you, you have an issue with Changkya Rolpai Dorje and master Kim Jae Woong, not me.

Malcolm wrote:

This whole conversation boils down to the quip by Sapan in Domsum: "And even common geshees are praised as buddhas. What's acceptable for poets is not acceptable for the learned."

Hyperbolic praise of royalty and world leaders cannot be trusted. No doubt right now some fool of a Tibetan is extolling Trump as an emanation of Vajrapani.

Also Sapan points out that relics prove nothing about someone's realization.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, December 30th, 2020 at 7:53 PM

Title: Re: Ngondro as a complete path to enlightenment

Content:

tobes said:

The ground may have been prepared in previous lives.

Malcolm wrote:

Empowerments taken in past lives are not a valid basis for practice in this one. Of the three vows, two are lost at death: personal liberation vows and samaya vows.

No empowerment, no guru; no guru, no samaya. Claiming one is doing Vajrayana practice when one has not received empowerment is like claiming one is bhikshu without having received ordination. Unfortunately, these days the latter will always be more strongly condemned than the former, even though former is a more serious problem.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 31st, 2020 at 12:33 AM

Title: Re: Trump aids Dalai Lama . powerful Bill to protect His position.

Content:

Minobu said:

what ever you want to say he did this.

Malcolm wrote:

No, actually, he didn't do anything at all. He was too busy golfing, avoiding responsibility for the pandemic, pretending he won the election, and bilking his deluded followers out of millions of dollars. But advocate for Tibet? No, he didn't spend a single second on that, other than the time it took him to sign, under significant pressure, a 5000+ page plus budget that had a symbolic resolution about Tibet buried deep in it. He never even looked at it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 31st, 2020 at 1:43 AM

Title: Re: Trump aids Dalai Lama . powerful Bill to protect His position.

Content:

Minobu said:

you are lost in samsaric politics that will be of zero consequence to your Buddhist development.

Malcolm wrote:

I am not concerned about Trump for myself. I am concerned for others. It is not about my development, it is about their safety and wellbeing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 31st, 2020 at 9:13 AM

Title: Re: Tibetan: chos and gcod - homophones?

Content:

karmanyangpo said:

I was wondering if chos (choe - Dharma) and gcod (chod or choed - Severance practice) were homophones in Tibetan.

KN

Malcolm wrote:

No, not to Tibetans.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 31st, 2020 at 9:33 AM

Title: Re: Ngondro as a complete path to enlightenment

Content:

tobes said:

The ground may have been prepared in previous lives.

Malcolm wrote:

Empowerments taken in past lives are not a valid basis for practice in this one. Of the three vows, two are lost at death: personal liberation vows and samaya vows.

No empowerment, no guru; no guru, no samaya. Claiming one is doing Vajrayana practice when one has not received empowerment is like claiming one is bhikshu without having received ordination. Unfortunately, these days the latter will always be more strongly condemned than the former, even though former is a more serious problem.

tobes said:

What is at stake here is the question: how is gnosis accomplished through guru-yoga?

And the point is: if you have previously cultivated the ground, you may not need the 4th empowerment in order for realisations to ripen.

Malcolm wrote:

Without empowerment, one does not have a guru in this life.

tobes said:

It may be enough to simply meet (again). Samaya may be lost at death, but guru devotion is not.

Malcolm wrote:

You don't know who your guru was in your past life. So what do you do, guess? In any case, Mahayana does not have the practice of guru yoga.

tobes said:

The further point is: there is much more variability here than you are suggesting. It is as variable as all the different karmic dispositions in all the different disciples, on all the different stages of the path - from pure beginner to advanced bodhisattva.

Malcolm wrote:

You either have the karmic disposition for Vajrayana or you don't. And if you don't it takes two asamkhyakalpas to hit the eighth bhumi, and one more for buddhahood.

If you don't receive Vajrayana empowerment there are no extraordinary means in sutra by which you might attain even the path of seeing in this life, and that is not related to guru devotion. There is no sutra that teaches guru devotion as a cause for rapid attainment of buddhahood, despite the encouragement to venerate teachers. It's just part of general merit accumulation. So if you were a Vajrayani in a past life, but did not meet Vajrayana in this life (through lack of merit, since this is the only reason one would fail to meet Vajrayana again), there are no means by which you can "ride the fumes" of your past life practice of Vajrayana to realization in this life.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 31st, 2020 at 9:55 AM

Title: Re: Tibetan: chos and gcod - homophones?

Content:

karmanyigpo said:

I was wondering if chos (choe - Dharma) and gcod (chod or choed - Severance practice) were homophones in Tibetan.

KN

Malcolm wrote:

No, not to Tibetans.

karmanyigpo said:

How are they pronounced differently by native speakers? I have heard that many final consonants in Tibetan are not pronounced or cause lengthening of the vowel.

KN

Malcolm wrote:

Gcod is higher and sharper than Chos.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 31st, 2020 at 10:29 AM

Title: Re: Tibetan: chos and gcod - homophones?

Content:

karmanyngpo said:

How are they pronounced differently by native speakers? I have heard that many final consonants in Tibetan are not pronounced or cause lengthening of the vowel.

KN

Malcolm wrote:

Gcod is higher and sharper than Chos.

karmanyngpo said:

So it is a minimal pair differentiated by tone? Are the "ch" sounds both aspirated?

KN

Malcolm wrote:

No, the first is not aspirated

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 31st, 2020 at 10:43 AM

Title: Re: Palden Lhamo Mantra Query

Content:

jmlee369 said:

Palden Lhamo Magzor Gyalmo

Malcolm wrote:

Technically, Makzorma is Remati, rides a black ass, and is Palden Lhamo's servant.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 31st, 2020 at 10:49 AM

Title: Re: Copper Colored mountain location?,

Content:

jmlee369 said:

With all due respect to Sapan, Changkya Rolpai Dorje (not to mention the 8th Dalai Lama) was not just a common geshe...But I would be curious to know more about Sapan's reasoning on this matter.

Malcolm wrote:

You missed the point, poetic hyperbole has very low standards for veracity, even when written by high lamas, as for example when a worldly king is compared with a Cakravartin or a Dharmaraja.

He points out that relics can be the simple play of elements, tricks of nonhuman beings, etc.

jmlee369 said:

Changkya Rolpai Dorje is not just your run-of-the-mill Gelug lama, he is a lineage holder of the 7th Dalai Lama, a lineage lama for the major yidam transmissions. This is why I find suspicions around his motives and authority hard to accept.

Malcolm wrote:

Flattering the religious vanity of rulers is an old Buddhist game, goes right back to the murderous king Ashoka, who, after his conversion, murdered 18,000 Jains because of a cartoon which depicted Buddha prostrating to Mahavira, as you can read in the Ashokavadana.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 31st, 2020 at 11:19 AM

Title: Re: Ngondro as a complete path to enlightenment

Content:

tobes said:

Everyone on this thread needs to understand that this is a valid position one can take, but it is not the only valid position.

i.e. we're back in the old terrain of Mahamudra: can it be attained outside of Vajrayana?

Malcolm wrote:

No, actually, we are not.

If we are talking about cig car bas, they are as rare as stars in the daytime. And cig car bas don't attain realization through devotion, they attain it through introduction.

The practical reality is that there isn't a single person who attained mahamudra realization who wasn't first a Vajrayana practitioner. You can't name even one.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 31st, 2020 at 9:47 PM

Title: Re: Ngondro as a complete path to enlightenment

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

The practical reality is that there isn't a single person who attained mahamudra realization who wasn't first a Vajrayana practitioner. You can't name even one. You're undermining my faith in general Mahayana.

Malcolm wrote:

Tobes brought it up, not me. I've just been talking about what is necessary to practice guru yoga, a practice that is not even found in Yoga Tantra, much less common Mahayana.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 31st, 2020 at 9:50 PM

Title: Re: Trump aids Dalai Lama . powerful Bill to protect His position.

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 31st, 2020 at 9:52 PM

Title: Re: Copper Colored mountain location?,

Content:

jmlee369 said:

As for Ashoka, I am aware of that incident, which if I remember correctly was not directed against Jains,

Malcolm wrote:

You remember incorrectly. After Ashoka murdered the Jains, he placed a 5 dinar bounty on the heads of Jain monks. Ashoka's brother was murdered by a farm couple for that bounty, because they mistook the brother for a Jain monk. When they presented this head to Ashoka, the latter was mortified, and removed the bounty.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 31st, 2020 at 9:58 PM

Title: Re: Copper Colored mountain location?,

Content:

jmlee369 said:

Qianlong as Manjushri was not just limited to poetry, but we've reached a dead end at this point.

Malcolm wrote:

You do realize that you're making religious excuses for murderers, right? This is why I termed your arguments "casuistry."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 31st, 2020 at 10:15 PM

Title: Re: Trump aids Dalai Lama . powerful Bill to protect His position.

Content:

Dan74 said:

Yeah, must be something like that. He also speaks plainly and is unguarded compared to other politicians. There's a force of nature quality to him, which is probably a result of a lack of self-reflection.

Malcolm wrote:

Except that he lies through his teeth, constantly, forcing everyone around him to become party to his lies. No one would have called Trump a "force of nature" prior to his fluke electoral college win.

And it's bullshit that Trump isn't a politician, that's all he's ever been, his whole life.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 31st, 2020 at 10:22 PM

Title: Re: Response to PadmaVonSamba

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

I don't know about what that Ashvaghosha fellow may have said, but any assertion of atman (intrinsically arising thus permanent self) is completely inconsistent with the teachings of Nagarjuna.

illaraza said:

Ashvaghosha would disagree with you:

In The Awakening of Faith in the Mahayana, Ashvaghosha writes about the skandas [aggregates]:

Mark

Malcolm wrote:

Not written by Ashvaghosha, at least not by the Indian Acharya called Ashvaghosha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 31st, 2020 at 11:42 PM

Title: Re: Trump aids Dalai Lama . powerful Bill to protect His position.

Content:

Dan74 said:

Yeah, must be something like that. He also speaks plainly and is unguarded compared to other politicians. There's a force of nature quality to him, which is probably a result of a lack of self-reflection.

Malcolm wrote:

Except that he lies through his teeth, constantly, forcing everyone around him to become party to his lies. No one would have called Trump a “force of nature” prior to his fluke electoral college win.

And it’s bullshit that Trump isn’t a politician, that’s all he’s ever been, his whole life.

Dan74 said:

I wonder if it's still lying if you don't even know you are lying, if truth is nothing but a nebulous abstract concept for you.

Alternative facts, post-Truth, holding personal beliefs over the views of the experts, I think Trump embraced all these and made them more acceptable, but he didn't invent them. And as with all the other nasty stuff, perhaps he was a leader that made people more comfortable with their shadow.

This just in:

<https://www.msn.com/en-gb/cars/news/trump-tops-list-as-most-admired-man-in-america-in-annual-gallop-survey/vi-BB1clRIO?ocid=msedgntp>

Malcolm wrote:

Um Dan, a polling sample by a right wing pollster of 1018 people? Come on man. We have another poll...80+ Million to 73.4.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, December 31st, 2020 at 11:43 PM

Title: Re: Trump aids Dalai Lama . powerful Bill to protect His position.

Content:

Dan74 said:

I wonder if it's still lying if you don't even know you are lying, if truth is nothing but a nebulous abstract concept for you.

Malcolm wrote:

He knows. He is a sociopath. No empathy. Probably tortured small animals when he was a child.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 1st, 2021 at 12:11 AM

Title: Re: Ngondro as a complete path to enlightenment

Content:

Schrödinger’s Yidam said:

You’re undermining my faith in general Mahayana.

Malcolm wrote:

Tobes brought it up, not me. I've just been talking about what is necessary to practice guru yoga, a practice that is not even found in Yoga Tantra, much less common Mahayana.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I'm no expert, but I'd like to think that general Mahayana produces buddhas too, just more slowly.

Malcolm wrote:

Of course, but that was never a question.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 1st, 2021 at 12:58 AM

Title: Re: Ngondro as a complete path to enlightenment

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

A Vajra Master sees things as they actually are.

Malcolm wrote:

No, not necessarily. Not all vajra masters are actually buddhas. In fact, virtually none of them are, from their own point of view. Being a buddha is not a requirement for being a vajra master. If it were, Vajrayāna would be impossible.

The tantras never prohibit ordinary people from acting as vajra masters, provided they have done the retreats, etc., needed to act as a vajra master.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 1st, 2021 at 2:44 AM

Title: Re: Trump aids Dalai Lama . powerful Bill to protect His position.

Content:

Minobu said:

But he did serve the Buddha Avalokiteshvara with a stroke of his pen..

Malcolm wrote:

So let me get this straight: you believe there is merit in neutral karma? That when you do something without knowing you are doing it, it is meritorious?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 1st, 2021 at 3:22 AM

Title: Re: Trump aids Dalai Lama . powerful Bill to protect His position.

Content:

Minobu said:

But he did serve the Buddha Avalokiteshvara with a stroke of his pen..

Malcolm wrote:

So let me get this straight: you believe there is merit in neutral karma? That when you do something without knowing you are doing it, it is meritorious?

Minobu said:

i dunno...but what ever you do makes ripples in the pond whether you know what you do or not...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 1st, 2021 at 3:48 AM

Title: Re: Response to PadmaVonSamba

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Check out Ven Bhavaviveka describing suchness:

Malcolm wrote:

And there is no way to read Bhavaviveka other than as ridiculing and reducing to absurdity the Vedantin point of view, which is evident when you read his auto-commentary, Tarkajvala.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 1st, 2021 at 4:16 AM

Title: Re: Response to PadmaVonSamba

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

I've not yet had an opportunity to read any complete work of Ven Bhavaviveka at all. I had taken the section I had quoted as a series of typically contrarian Madhyamaka statements of "If X, then Y," designed to make us question common Buddhist assumptions and doctrines.

I had taken it as similar to when Ven Vimalaksa says that some Buddhas teach atmavada when their audience has neither fear of hell nor belief in deeds nor belief in rebirth.

Malcolm wrote:

Bhavaviveka is covering the "Introduction to the Principles of the Proponents of Vedantic Philosophy," as the chapter title suggests in order to refute them. He is not doing some antinomian Buddhist thing, he is using the very words Vedantins use for their own school to overthrow them by showing the internal contradictions in their school's use of language. His polemics against other buddhists are chapters 4 and 5, śrāvakas and yogacārins respectively.

Following his polemics against Vedantins, he then goes after Mimamsa in chapter 10. Vaiṣeṣika is negated in 7 and 8, Samkhya in 6. He offers his proof of a buddha's omniscience in 11. Chapters 1-3 lay out his vision of Buddhist practice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 1st, 2021 at 4:23 AM

Title: Re: Response to PadmaVonSamba

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

The whole of the Buddha's teaching (upheld in Mahayana, Theravada, Hinayana, Vajrayana) rests on the fact that there is nowhere that anything can be identified as an inherently existent being, and further, that based on the illusion that a self-being exists, suffering and rebirth result.

Caoimhghín said:

Actually, many Theravadins teach that any dhamma that exists is inherently existent in at least one of four ways -- as form, as mind, as mental factor, or as nibbana. All of the dhammas "inherently exist" in the Theravadin Abhidhamma system.

PadmaVonSamba said:

Yeah, but they don't add up to a "self".

They don't constitute an intrinsically existent being.

Malcolm wrote:

They constitute inherently existing entities.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 1st, 2021 at 5:52 AM

Title: Re: akāromukha mantra in the Releasing of the Flaming Mouths

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

To perform the Releasing of the Flaming Mouths ceremony, a samgha with a celebrant priest is required.

Malcolm wrote:

Quite false old chap.

Here is a short version taken from Tibetan sources:

The Preta Oblation Rite

To be without obstacles at all times, place food and water into a clean vessel and it is proper to also bless it with the three syllables. It is also fine without the blessing, and there isn't any fault. Recite seven times the mantra Namaḥ samantabuddhanaṃ, namaḥ sarvatathāgata avalokite oṃ sambhara sambhara hūṃ. A great stream of nectar flows forth from the fingers of one's outstretched right hand. Then, filling the vast and wide vessel, imagine that all ghosts equal with space are satisfied. Seal with snapping one's fingers three times.

Also if one wishes to do that extensively, after reciting the mantra seven times, since one says "I prostrate to Tathāgata Very Precious" imagine that oblation becomes inconceivable enjoyments of whatever is desired. Say "I prostrate to Tathāgata Sublime Form", imagine that the mouths and throats of the ghosts become vast and beautified. Say "I prostrate to the Tathāgata Abundant Soft Body" and imagine that after the ghosts are satisfied with food, the discomfort of their bodies, the destination of Kukula hell and so on is pacified. Say "I prostrate to Tathāgata Free from All Fear" and imagine the ghosts are very happy with without the fear of fighting, strife and robbing one another over food. Then snap one's finger seven times and tell them to depart to their own places.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 1st, 2021 at 9:18 AM

Title: Re: Trump aids Dalai Lama . powerful Bill to protect His position.

Content:

Dan74 said:

As for Trump's character, I don't know enough about the man to declare it with any certainty. To me, as the POTUS, he just... left a lot to be desired...

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, well I know a number of people who know him quite well...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 1st, 2021 at 10:29 AM

Title: Re: Ngondro as a complete path to enlightenment

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

A Vajra Master sees things as they actually are.

Malcolm wrote:

No, not necessarily. Not all vajra masters are actually buddhas. In fact, virtually none of them are, from their own point of view. Being a buddha is not a requirement for being a vajra master. If it were, Vajrayāna would be impossible.

The tantras never prohibit ordinary people from acting as vajra masters, provided they have done the retreats, etc., needed to act as a vajra master.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I meant a real one, not a ceremonial one.

Obviously.

Malcolm wrote:

From the point of view of the student, there is no difference. That's the point of the whole thing, a point which you clearly overlook. Every master is a disciple, and always will be. That's why our Vajrayana lineages are so strong.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 1st, 2021 at 10:33 AM

Title: Re: Preliminary Practices

Content:

Mateooooo said:

H

My goal is to realize Mahamudra in the Kagyu lineage; but I am a newbie so I need to build foundations.

Malcolm wrote:

You need a guru. You should make a connection with Zurmang Gawang Rinpoche, he relatively young, speaks English fluently and is quite expert in this tradition, given that he is a lineage head.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 1st, 2021 at 9:02 PM

Title: Re: The material reality of Sumeru

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Is Sumeru real for you in the sense that the Himalayas are real? Is Sumeru specifically mythological in the sense that it is "not real" like the Himalayas are real? Something else entirely?

Please don't say "It's empty" as an answer. Everything is empty.

Malcolm wrote:

Once it was real, now it is myth.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 1st, 2021 at 9:24 PM

Title: Re: The material reality of Sumeru

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Is Sumeru real for you in the sense that the Himalayas are real? Is Sumeru specifically mythological in the sense that it is "not real" like the Himalayas are real? Something else entirely?

Please don't say "It's empty" as an answer. Everything is empty.

Malcolm wrote:

Once it was real, now it is myth.

tkp67 said:

I assume you used myth instead of historical on purpose? I guess what I am asking was it ever a physical topographical feature or was it real because it was in the landscape of the mind in the populous back then lost to lack of belief? Perhaps minds lost the capacity to maintain its purpose?

Malcolm wrote:

If Sumeru can be considered to have any basis in reality, it was a mountain sited on the Tibetan plateau, largely inaccessible to any but the most adventurous Indians, with its many ranges, rivers and lakes. It's just another Axis Mundi myth. But it's not even historical, unlike Uddiyana and Shambhala, which were countries that once existed in Central Asia.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 2nd, 2021 at 12:35 AM

Title: Re: Trump aids Dalai Lama . powerful Bill to protect His position.

Content:

Tlalok said:

Didn't he also try to pocket veto this bill in the first place?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, he actually did veto this bill the first go round. This has been pointed out. But our good natured friend is trying to see some good in Donald...an exercise in futility in his current rebirth.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 3rd, 2021 at 1:22 AM

Title: Re: Trump aids Dalai Lama . powerful Bill to protect His position.

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Do we actually know that he had no idea about this Tibet business in the bill? We don't AFAIK...

Malcolm wrote:

We do know, actually. This bill is merely an extension of a bill that was passed 18 years ago and extended by its sponsor, James McGovern, and in the bill it specifies:

SEC. 2. MODIFICATIONS TO AND REAUTHORIZATION OF TIBETAN POLICY ACT OF 2002.

<https://www.congress.gov/bill/116th-congress/house-bill/4331/text?r=10&s=5>

If any president deserves personal credit for this bill, it would be Bush II, who met HHDL in 5/21/2001. And Bush I also met with HHDL on more than one occasion.

Now, there are those of here who have some insight into to inner workings of the US-Tibet relations, know who the major players in the game are, and have actually talked to some of them in person. Then there are those who do not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 3rd, 2021 at 1:23 AM

Title: Re: Response to PadmaVonSamba

Content:

illaraza said:

One significant difference between the Lotus Sutra and provisional Buddhism is that not only the Dharmakaya of the Eternal Buddha has no beginning and no end but also the Saṃbhogakāya, and the Nirmāṇakāya. This is one aspect that makes the Lotus Sutra difficult to believe and difficult to understand.

Thus the Appearance, thus the Nature, and thus the Essence of the common mortal also has no beginning and no end. The provisional Buddhists say we have no self but despite the vast differences in body, nature (mind), and essence between newborn baby Johnnie and elderly nursing home resident Johnnie, no one can say that newborn baby Johnnie is NOT elderly nursing home resident Johnnie. Life and death and life and death Johnnie, despite his even more vast differences in body, nature, and essence from lifetime to lifetime has an aspect of individuation thanks to Johnnie's Karma that is still "Johnnie". Even were Johnnie an unrepentent slanderer of the Lotus Sutra and he becomes a snake in his next lifetime, he is still "Johnnie" but now he is "Johnnie" the snake.

Malcolm wrote:

Just a view of self that the Buddha rejected completely. Sad.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 3rd, 2021 at 3:00 AM

Title: Re: Response to PadmaVonSamba

Content:

illaraza said:

One significant difference between the Lotus Sutra and provisional Buddhism is that not only the Dharmakaya of the Eternal Buddha has no beginning and no end but also the Saṃbhogakāya, and the Nirmāṇakāya. This is one aspect that makes the Lotus Sutra difficult to believe and difficult to understand.

Thus the Appearance, thus the Nature, and thus the Essence of the common mortal also has no beginning and no end. The provisional Buddhists say we have no self but despite the vast differences in body, nature (mind), and essence between newborn baby Johnnie and elderly nursing home resident Johnnie, no one can say that newborn baby Johnnie is NOT elderly nursing home resident Johnnie. Life and death and life and death Johnnie, despite his even more vast differences in body, nature, and essence from lifetime to lifetime has an aspect of individuation thanks to Johnnie's Karma that is still "Johnnie". Even were Johnnie an unrepentant slanderer of the Lotus Sutra and he becomes a snake in his next lifetime, he is still "Johnnie" but now he is "Johnnie" the snake.

Malcolm wrote:

Just a view of self that the Buddha rejected completely. Sad.

Minobu said:

how so Malcolm...i have no idea what illarazza is on about here ...so i don't see what you see...

The provisional Buddhists say we have no self but despite the vast differences in body, nature (mind), and essence between newborn baby Johnnie and elderly nursing home resident Johnnie, no one can say that newborn baby Johnnie is NOT elderly nursing home resident Johnnie.

Malcolm wrote:

He is claiming there is some perdurable identity among the impermanent aggregates (which constitute a basis of designation for a self) that is a self. However, the only connection between baby Johnnie and elderly Johnnie is a continuity of nominal imputation and false grasping at a self over a lifetime.

As for his other claim about the three kāyas, this is also mistaken. The two or three kāyas are inseparable and unceasing. This is just standard Mahāyāna doctrine, not a special feature of Lotus Buddhism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 3rd, 2021 at 3:05 AM

Title: Re: Trump aids Dalai Lama . powerful Bill to protect His position.

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Do we actually know that he had no idea about this Tibet business in the bill? We don't AFAIK, and please anyone do prove me wrong.

Minobu said:

If bush was responsible...why is this only happening now...bush , Clinton , Obama all had a chance...they did not do it...

Malcolm wrote:

Minobu, have you fallen and hit your head? This bill is a REAUTHORIZATION of an act passed in 2002 and signed into law in by Bush II.

Is there something about the word REAUTHORIZATION that you do not understand, or are you just trolling for fun?

Mods, this thread as outlived its useful life. Please shut it down.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 3rd, 2021 at 4:06 AM

Title: Re: Response to PadmaVonSamba

Content:

tkp67 said:

The existence between birth and death is just that, the development of one's life is just that. If the only connection between child and adult has no meaning mother and father are meaningless as are the benefit of being born human, lineages and indigenous practices as well.

Malcolm wrote:

They are not meaningless, they are merely conventional, with nothing ultimate holding them together. But this does not mean there is some invisible "thing" that makes baby Johnny the same person as elderly Johnny, other than a persistent conventional identification of a stream of aggregates that always change and never remain the same. What ties a stream together over infinite lifetimes from beginningless time is the false grasping at the aggregates as "I and mine." Nothing more is needed to account for the beginningless and endless (until awakening) series of births. After awakening of course, since the three kāyas are inseparable and because sentient beings are endless, buddhas do not abide in nirvana but continue to aid sentient beings in samsara for as long as there is a samsara.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 3rd, 2021 at 6:37 AM

Title: Re: Trump aids Dalai Lama . powerful Bill to protect His position.

Content:

Danny said:

Trump admin "re engaged" the Tibetan issue on human rights. A simple search will provide all the relevant details.

Malcolm wrote:

Not at all.

Danny said:

Background

Since 1988, Congress has initiated and funded several US government programs that benefit Tibetans in exile and inside Tibet through humanitarian assistance, economic development, educational assistance, democratic governance, and other efforts. These programs are annually a part of the State-Foreign Operations Appropriations bill, which Congress incorporated into the larger omnibus Consolidated Appropriations Act 2020.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://savetibet.org/us-congress-expands-tibet-support-programs-in-2021-budget/>

Danny said:

human rights.

Malcolm wrote:

Trump is on record telling Xi his treatment of the Uigurs is proper and appropriate. Fortunately, there is another bill in that package that addresses that travesty of human rights.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 3rd, 2021 at 10:39 PM

Title: Re: What happens after Ngondro? (Nyingma)

Content:

Padmist said:

If Ngondro is a long term preliminary practice, what happens after this is completed?
What comes next after preliminary practice?

Malcolm wrote:

More Ngondro.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 4th, 2021 at 1:18 AM

Title: Re: Gelug Madhyamaka

Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

I still get the impression that they are stating nothing truly exists.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, if by "truly" you mean "ultimately."

The Geluks make a distinction between "mere existence", which is not an object of analysis, and "true existence," which is an object of analysis. In Geluk Madhyamaka, the mode of investigation is to search for inherent existence in a given thing.

So yes, the Geklukpas are saying nothing truly exists, and that things exist merely on a conventional level, which cannot withstand ultimate analysis.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 4th, 2021 at 1:19 AM

Title: Re: Beyul: The Sacred Hidden Valleys

Content:

cjdevries said:

"Beyul: The Sacred Hidden Valleys"

I just found this short documentary on the Khumbu valley, which is one of many Beyuls, or sacred valleys of the Himalayas. It's an uplifting documentary, and it makes me want to tell other about the place so they can experience the peace and sacred energy of that area:

Malcolm wrote:

Please don't. The reason they are places of peace and sacred energy is that they are hidden. If you tell people to go there, they will be destroyed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 4th, 2021 at 1:52 AM

Title: Re: Wait, so Karma and Rebirth don't exist?

Content:

JoaoRodrigues said:

There's no real agreement to what karma is, it's not a consistent doctrine

Malcolm wrote:

It is in fact quite consistent in Buddhadharma. The Buddha said that "Karma is intention and what results from intention."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 4th, 2021 at 5:20 AM

Title: Re: 'I just want 11,780 votes'

Content:

rose said:

Are there likely to be any actual consequences for president Trump?

Malcolm wrote:

Nope, the POS.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 4th, 2021 at 8:10 AM

Title: Re: Wait, so Karma and Rebirth don't exist?

Content:

JoaoRodrigues said:

There's no real agreement to what karma is, it's not a consistent doctrine

Malcolm wrote:

It is in fact quite consistent in Buddhадharma. The Buddha said that "Karma is intention and what results from intention."

Sādhaka said:

Is that the definitive meaning on karma in Buddhадharma? (at least as far as Hinayana and common Mahayana are concerned)....

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, it is definitive for all yanās. Karma is easy to understand, karmavipaka, the ripening of karma is a bit more difficult to understanding.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 4th, 2021 at 8:44 AM

Title: Re: 'I just want 11,780 votes'

Content:

PeterC said:

Can he be charged with a crime? Well, seditious conspiracy requires a plan that involves use of force, and that element will be hard to show. Attempted electoral fraud seems like a safer bet, though there would be a good defence available that he's simply deluded and thinks he did win.

The shocking part of this is how few republicans are willing to stand up and condemn his behavior. They're hiding behind the letter of the law - claiming 'concerns', demanding an 'investigation', and threatening to use their (lawful) right to object to the ballot count on the 6th January. All of which is probably legal, but it's still treason, it's contrary to their oath of office and harmful to their country. And the Republican Party is fine with it.

Malcolm wrote:

Fascist bastards all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 4th, 2021 at 8:46 AM

Title: Re: Response to PadmaVonSamba

Content:

illaraza said:

No-self and not-self are an integral attribute of phenomena, including human beings. So is self or Atman. Although humans demonstrate temporality and non-substantiality, they also possess the truth of the Middle Way (Tientai) which means that the true nature of phenomena is that they are neither non-substantial nor temporarily existent but they display attributes of both. Non-self or Anatman is a partial or provisional teaching, failing to take into account the eternal reality of phenomena.

Malcolm wrote:

You don't understand the middle way. You just fell into the third extreme, asserting that things both exist and do not exist.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 4th, 2021 at 9:56 AM

Title: Re: Wait, so Karma and Rebirth don't exist?

Content:

haha said:

Only particular cetanas are regarded as Karma, not all.

Malcolm wrote:

Source?

haha said:

Nor the vipaka is karma.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, it is the ripening of karma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 4th, 2021 at 10:20 AM

Title: Re: Wait, so Karma and Rebirth don't exist?

Content:

haha said:

Only particular cetanas are regarded as Karma, not all.

Malcolm wrote:

Source?

haha said:

Nor the vipaka is karma.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, it is the ripening of karma.

haha said:

Only cetana accompanies with 29 kinds of consciousness (citta) is called Karma (i.e. Kusala, Akusala, Rupa, and Arupa). So, vipaka citta is not karma, nor kriya citta (i.e. cetana accompanies with). I don't have the source. Anyone who is well versed in Theravada Abhidharma could tell. I only picked that was useful for me.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, vipaka citta is not karma, they are the ripening of karma, but all volition all factors are karma, either positive, negative, or neutral, so I am not sure what your objection too is.

And here, Vasubandhu and Asanga are the standard.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 4th, 2021 at 10:21 AM

Title: Re: 'I just want 11,780 votes'

Content:

PeterC said:

Can he be charged with a crime? Well, seditious conspiracy requires a plan that involves use of force, and that element will be hard to show. Attempted electoral fraud seems like a safer bet, though there would be a good defence available that he's simply deluded and thinks he did win.

The shocking part of this is how few republicans are willing to stand up and condemn his behavior. They're hiding behind the letter of the law - claiming 'concerns', demanding an 'investigation', and threatening to use their (lawful) right to object to the ballot count on the 6th January. All of which is probably legal, but it's still treason, it's contrary to their oath of office and harmful to their country. And the Republican Party is fine with it.

Malcolm wrote:

Fascist bastards all.

PeterC said:

Someone pointed out to me recently that, appropriately enough, 'senator' is an anagram of 'treason'.

They are fascists, by the commonly-used definition of the term. They do not believe in democracy. Congress can, and should expel them. This is as simple as a referral to a committee then a passed resolution. In the past it has expelled members for supporting the confederacy, but the power to expel can be for failure to maintain appropriate standards of conduct, and on that, they have clearly failed. We've had 58 lawsuits over the election, all have been thrown out, all have found no factual basis for claiming misconduct in the election. This is now established fact reviewed by multiple state and federal courts, up to and including the supreme court. Any member of congress who signs onto an objection to the electoral count now should be expelled.

Malcolm wrote:

I agree. Will be calling my senators and congressional rep.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 4th, 2021 at 9:14 PM

Title: Re: Are there any forms of Buddhism where ordination/priesthood does not require a 4 year degree?

Content:

Snowbeast said:

So this is just something I have been interested in for a while. Does anyone know if there are any schools of Buddhism that do not require a four year degree for ordination? It seems like most Japanese schools do, Jodo Shinshu definitely does, and in Jodo Shu the training for monks is equivalent to a four year degree. Are there any schools that do all of the training for becoming a monk or priest within the temple? Are there any Buddhist varieties that require a long training session but it is not related to western style four year education? If anyone could explain how ordination works in their particular school it would be very interesting to hear.

Malcolm wrote:

Tibetan Buddhism schools do not require a four year degree. Just celibacy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 4th, 2021 at 10:45 PM

Title: Re: What are the most popular Tibetan Buddhist sutras?

Content:

Padmist said:

Heart?

Diamond?

Vimalakirti?

What would be the top 5

Malcolm wrote:

The most important sutras in Tibetan Buddhism are the Perfection of Wisdom Sutras, specifically those in 25,000 lines and 8,000 lines. This is evident from the fact that in India and Tibet more commentaries have been written on these two sutras than any other sutras.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 5th, 2021 at 12:28 AM

Title: Re: Buddha without 9 realms, permanent aggregates, and the aggregates of nirvana

Content:

Queequeg said:

Tathagatagarbha texts such as the Mahayana Mahaparinirvana Sutra use positive language to discuss things like Buddha Nature. In that text, for instance, the Buddha flips his usual script a bit, declaring that reality is marked by permanence, bliss, true self, and purity. Some people read that and think, "Oh, the Buddha actually teaches Self!" They think its license to reify their naive and mistaken notions about conventional self and call it "True Self!". But that's not what the text actually says. The caveat of emptiness still applies. These words are not some final "truth" but rather a therapeutic convention to bring people back from the desiccated absorption in the one-sided view of emptiness only, ie. the view of emptiness that forgets that emptiness is only found in conventions. This is illustrated by the parable of the king's physician in, iirc, chapter 5.

Malcolm wrote:

And why the text is interpretable, rather than being definitive.

Queequeg said:

A firm understanding of, for instance, MMK, is required for entry into MHCK.

Malcolm wrote:

A firm understanding of MMK is required, period.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 5th, 2021 at 1:37 AM

Title: Re: Gelug Madhyamaka

Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

I still get the impression that they are stating nothing truly exists.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, if by "truly" you mean "ultimately."

The Geluks make a distinction between "mere existence", which is not an object of analysis, and "true existence," which is an object of analysis. In Geluk Madhyamaka, the mode of investigation is to search for inherent existence in a given thing.

So yes, the Geklukpas are saying nothing truly exists, and that things exist merely on a conventional level, which cannot withstand ultimate analysis.

Nicholas2727 said:

Would they also say that consciousness does not ultimately exist?

Malcolm wrote:

Consciousness is a dependently arising dharma. So not, it does not ultimately exist.

Nicholas2727 said:

I would be curious how this fits with Madhyamaka philosophy. From my very limited understanding, Madhyamaka is supposed to be the middle way between nihilism and externalism. If they say nothing ultimately exists how is this between nihilism and eternalism?

Malcolm wrote:

Whatever is dependently originated, that is empty, that is dependently designated, and that is the middle way.

That which arises dependently is free from the extremes of permanence and annihilation. You might try reading Tsongkhapa's Praise to Dependent Origination. Many people consider it Tsongkhapa's final statement on his realization of emptiness.

Nicholas2727 said:

Also from my understanding, many Sakyapas hold the Rangtong view of emptiness. Does their interpretation match with the Gelug view that nothing ultimately exists?

Malcolm wrote:

There is no such thing as a rang stong view of emptiness unless one holds a gzhan stong view of emptiness. Since neither the Sakyas nor the Geluks hold a gzhan stong view of emptiness, they cannot maintain a rang stong view of emptiness.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 5th, 2021 at 1:40 AM

Title: Re: Buddha without 9 realms, permanent aggregates, and the aggregates of nirvana

Content:

Queequeg said:

As to whether its interpretable or definitive

Malcolm wrote:

Definitely interpretable.

Queequeg said:

With the caveat that I am suspicious of any categorical statements, especially ones that I profess, there is little that is truer; as close to a definitive teaching as I can fathom.

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed, and Candrakīrti's exposition of it is the clearest and is best for removing Buddhist misconceptions about the view.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 5th, 2021 at 1:52 AM

Title: Re: Buddha without 9 realms, permanent aggregates, and the aggregates of nirvana

Content:

Queequeg said:

As to whether its interpretable or definitive

Malcolm wrote:

Definitely interpretable.

Queequeg said:

With the caveat that I am suspicious of any categorical statements, especially ones that I profess, there is little that is truer; as close to a definitive teaching as I can fathom.

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed, and Candrakīrti's exposition of it is the clearest and is best for removing Buddhist misconceptions about the view.

Queequeg said:

Working my way to Candrakīrti. A lot on the plate. Its interesting to me because Candrakīrti did not make to East Asia. It will be interesting to compare Candrakīrti to Tachitūlun attributed to Nagarjuna, which arguably is the framework for understanding Nagarjuna in EA. Gimme 10 years or so to be able to comment.

Malcolm wrote:

The East Asian commentary which is closest to Candrakīrti's is the one by Piṅgala on the MMK, translated and expanded by Kumarajīva. It has been translated into English.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 5th, 2021 at 3:55 AM

Title: Re: 'I just want 11,780 votes'

Content:

Unknown said:

Plaintiffs' theory that all of these laws are unconstitutional and that the Court should instead require state legislatures themselves to certify every Presidential election lies somewhere between a willful misreading of the Constitution and fantasy...

Yet even that may be letting Plaintiffs off the hook too lightly. Their failure to make any effort to serve or formally notify any Defendant — even after reminder by the Court in its Minute Order — renders it difficult to believe that the suit is meant seriously. Courts are not instruments through which parties engage in such gamesmanship or symbolic political gestures. As a result, at the conclusion of this litigation, the Court will determine whether to issue an order to show cause why this matter should not be referred to its Committee on Grievances for potential discipline of Plaintiffs' counsel.

Malcolm wrote:

https://www.courtlistener.com/recap/gov.uscourts.dcd.225330/gov.uscourts.dcd.225330.10.0_1.pdf

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 5th, 2021 at 4:30 AM

Title: Re: Can someone explain Yogacara to me?

Content:

Dharmalight889 said:

In one article I read on Lionsroar.com, it lead me to believe that there is a philosophical split between Madhyamaka and Yogacara and one could not follow both schools. I am assuming from some of the answers, this conclusion may have been wrong.

Malcolm wrote:

In most Tibetan Buddhist schools, Madhyamaka is the highest viewpoint, with the Yogacāra school's perspective held as being inferior. This hierarchy is also enshrined in tantras such as Hevajra, where Madhyamaka is held to be superior to Yogacāra.

There is a lot of modern scholarship however, which tries to reinterpret yogacāra in better light. I personally don't find it very convincing, but others do.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 5th, 2021 at 5:51 AM

Title: Re: 'I just want 11,780 votes'

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Plaintiffs' theory that all of these laws are unconstitutional and that the Court should instead require state legislatures themselves to certify every Presidential election lies somewhere between a willful misreading of the Constitution and fantasy...

Yet even that may be letting Plaintiffs off the hook too lightly. Their failure to make any effort to serve or formally notify any Defendant — even after reminder by the Court in its Minute Order — renders it difficult to believe that the suit is meant seriously. Courts are not instruments through which parties engage in such gamesmanship or symbolic political gestures. As a result, at the conclusion of this litigation, the Court will determine whether to issue an order to show cause why this matter should not be referred to its Committee on Grievances for potential discipline of Plaintiffs' counsel.
https://www.courtlistener.com/recap/gov.uscourts.dcd.225330/gov.uscourts.dcd.225330.10.0_1.pdf

Dan74 said:

Wow... this is pretty damning...

As regards Trump's phone-call, it's a bit hard to know how to read him. Either he genuinely believes all that he spouts and then he is basically just saying to Raffensberger to "do the right thing and identify the fraudulent votes" or he wants to appear that way to his supporters. And in Trumpworld, there's probably not a lot of difference between the two..

Malcolm wrote:

He actually asked Raffensberger to commit voter fraud by "recalculating" the votes" and finding 11,800" votes for Trump The lawyer on the call should be disbarred for even suggesting that GA turn over private voter information to the Trump campaign. This is a serious felony both at the federal and the state level, and it is a direct result of the gutless GOP not impeaching the bastard when they had the opportunity. They still have sixteen days though.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 5th, 2021 at 6:06 AM

Title: Re: 'I just want 11,780 votes'

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The lawyer on the call should be disbarred for even suggesting that GA turn over private voter information to the Trump campaign.

Her firm is upset. Bet she loses her job:

Firm Response to Reports of Partner Cleta Mitchell's Involvement in Post-Election Challenges

04 January 2021 Media Contact: Dan Farrell News

Foley & Lardner LLP is not representing any parties seeking to contest the results of the presidential election. In November, the firm made a policy decision not to take on any representation of any party in connection with matters related to the presidential election results. Our policy did allow our attorneys to participate in observing election recounts and similar actions on a voluntary basis in their individual capacity as private citizens so long as they did not act as legal advisers. We are aware of, and are concerned by, Ms. Mitchell's participation in the January 2 conference call and are working to understand her involvement more thoroughly.

<https://www.foley.com/en/insights/news/2021/01/firm-response-reports-partner-cleta-mitchells>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 5th, 2021 at 9:58 AM

Title: Re: Three kayas

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

After many years, I have yet to find a really clear explanation of the meaning of Dharmakaya
Nirmanakaya
Sambhogakaya

Malcolm wrote:

From a sutra point of view, the Abhisamayalamkara has the best definition. From a sarma point of view, you can find good explanations of the seven limbs of the kayas in several Sakya, Kagyu, or Gelug texts. In nyingma, look no further than longchenpa.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 5th, 2021 at 9:59 AM

Title: Re: Three kayas

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

From a practical standpoint, the three kayas are present in the state of the individual, and can be..."experienced" as limited a term as that might be, recognized is maybe a better term?

Malcolm wrote:

This the trikaya of the basis, not the result.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 5th, 2021 at 10:24 AM

Title: Re: Three kayas

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

From a practical standpoint, the three kayas are present in the state of the individual, and can be..."experienced" as limited a term as that might be, recognized is maybe a better term?

Malcolm wrote:

This the trikaya of the basis, not the result.

Johnny Dangerous said:

I don't recall the distinction between the two at the moment, at least not in way that's immediately obvious to me, can you elaborate please?

Malcolm wrote:

The trikaya of the basis is the potential for the three kayas of the result, but that potential has not manifested its qualities. Mahamudra and Lamdre present a similar idea.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 5th, 2021 at 10:49 AM

Title: Re: Three kayas

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I don't recall the distinction between the two at the moment, at least not in way that's immediately obvious to me, can you elaborate please?

Malcolm wrote:

The trikaya of the basis is the potential for the three kayas of the result, but that potential has not manifested its qualities. Mahamudra and Lamdre present a similar idea.

Johnny Dangerous said:

I get that, but how do you distinguish the Trikaya of the result, simply saying that the qualities which were potential are manifest in the result, aka Buddhahood? I mean, it seems that nine times out of ten when we want to talk about the Trikaya, we can only do so from the point of view of potentiality.

I don't remember how this distinction is made in Dzogchen or Mahamudra, in particular, other than the obvious as above, that's why I'm asking.

Malcolm wrote:

The dharmakaya of the basis is the emptiness of the mind, the dharmakaya of the result is the omniscience from realizing that emptiness, for example.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 5th, 2021 at 9:22 PM

Title: Re: Definition: "Outflows" ?

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

In various texts, the term "outflows" is used, such as the Buddha or his disciples being free from outflows.

I know that finding the right word in English to translate a concept from Sanskrit can be a challenge, but the meaning of this one is really unclear to me.

What does the term refer to,
and what specifically isn't "flowing out" ?

Malcolm wrote:

In Theravada, they usually translate this as cankers. It refers to a state of affliction, which is like a weeping sore.

In Tibetan, asrava is translated as zag bcas, “with effluents”

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 6th, 2021 at 12:17 AM

Title: Re: Gelug Madhyamaka

Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

Thank you for all of your replies, that helps clarify some confusion I had on the issue. Would you be able to clarify more on the last point that I quoted? I understand that they do not have a rangtong view since they do not hold a shentong view, but what disagreements do they have on emptiness then? From what I have seen, the Sakya Pandita and Tsongkhapa had different interpretations of emptiness, but from the little bit I have read it seems the Sakya interpretation and Gelug interpretation are similar.

Malcolm wrote:

The disagreements between Sakya and Geluk on Madhyamaka fill many volumes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 6th, 2021 at 9:40 AM

Title: Re: Election results to be certified tomorrow

Content:

PeterC said:

The only hope we have is if both senate seats in Georgia go democrat...

Malcolm wrote:

Looking pretty good at 8:30 pm.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 6th, 2021 at 10:33 AM

Title: Re: 'I just want 11,780 votes'

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The lawyer on the call should be disbarred for even suggesting that GA turn over private voter information to the Trump campaign.

Her firm is upset. Bet she loses her job:

Firm Response to Reports of Partner Cleta Mitchell's Involvement in Post-Election

Challenges

04 January 2021 Media Contact: Dan Farrell News

Foley & Lardner LLP is not representing any parties seeking to contest the results of the presidential election. In November, the firm made a policy decision not to take on any representation of any party in connection with matters related to the presidential election results. Our policy did allow our attorneys to participate in observing election recounts and similar actions on a voluntary basis in their individual capacity as private citizens so long as they did not act as legal advisers. We are aware of, and are concerned by, Ms. Mitchell's participation in the January 2 conference call and are working to understand her involvement more thoroughly.

<https://www.foley.com/en/insights/news/2021/01/firm-response-reports-partner-cleta-mitchells>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 6th, 2021 at 11:05 AM

Title: Re: Election results to be certified tomorrow

Content:

PeterC said:

The only hope we have is if both senate seats in Georgia go democrat...

Malcolm wrote:

Looking pretty good at 8:30 pm.

PeterC said:

They might take both.

Interesting reflection on race here. If Warnock wins, he would be the 11th black senator ever, and the first ever from Georgia. A third of Georgia's population is black, and apart from Mississippi at 39%, is the highest proportion of any state. (DC would be higher if it wasn't disenfranchised.) I'm not saying that's a reason why he should be elected - I think he deserves to win because he's better-qualified and less extreme than his opponent - but I think a lot of Georgians would appreciate it.

Malcolm wrote:

Waiting on Dekalb...82 percent of votes in, GOP has slim lead right now, but the mail-in vote has not been fully tabulated.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 6th, 2021 at 11:57 AM

Title: Re: Election results to be certified tomorrow

Content:

PeterC said:

most observers are now estimating that the final result will go against them in both races for this reason.

Malcolm wrote:
Indeed...

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, January 6th, 2021 at 6:37 PM
Title: Re: Election results to be certified tomorrow
Content:

PeterC said:
most observers are now estimating that the final result will go against them in both races for this reason.

Malcolm wrote:
Indeed...

PeterC said:
Looks like both seats are in the bag for the democrats at this point, though by margins of victory in the thousands of votes, so cue weeks of more republican whining about electoral fraud.

There seems to be relatively low republican turnout - so it could well be that Trump's constant complaining about mail-in votes actually cost them the senate

Malcolm wrote:
I love the sound of "Minority Leader Mitch McConnell." Now let's pass some bills.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, January 6th, 2021 at 7:00 PM
Title: Re: New here with question on Gay
Content:

Ardha said:
. I'm at a point in my life where I am tired of feeling like this, tired of "apologizing" for being gay and wanting to move past this and heal. Can this help with that?

Malcolm wrote:
Be happy that you are gay. It's not a choice. According to Tibetan medicine, it's just biology.

Have some compassion for yourself, and how you've been conditioned to regard yourself with disregard and hatred.

Therapy might help, but extending love to yourself will work wonders.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 6th, 2021 at 9:21 PM

Title: The Restoration...

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It's not going to be easy, but now we are in a position to restore American institutions and make them stronger. Today is a good day, despite the fascist wailing and gnashing of teeth in DC today.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 6th, 2021 at 9:43 PM

Title: Re: The Restoration...

Content:

PeterC said:

There's been coverage but as you say less than the race riots. It's interesting to see how quickly the MAGA crowd drops "blue lives matter" as a slogan when it's their violent protest that's getting shut down.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, now the police are Chi-coms, all in a matter of a few weeks.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 6th, 2021 at 9:45 PM

Title: Re: The Restoration...

Content:

Könchok Thrinley said:

I especially hope that the progressive voice will be heard and liebrals won't suddenly feel like everything is okay. Because it is not.

Malcolm wrote:

Now that Dems control the White House, the Senate, and the House, I am sure Biden will not squander this, and further, that the left will push hard to get our agenda through, green new deal, infrastructure, reducing military spending, etc. Joe Manchin is a problem, but surmountable.

Most importantly, national mobilization of vaccines, and international cooperation to stamp out covid.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 7th, 2021 at 1:20 AM

Title: Re: The Restoration...

Content:

Dan74 said:

.... or it may be the beginning of the Great Disappointment. The reminder of why Trump could ever have been contemplated as someone fit for office.

On the other hand, if you get 3 out of the 4 things you mention, Malcolm, I will happily donate $1000 to your charity of choice.

Malcolm wrote:

I am not going to hold you to that, but I appreciate the sentiment despite its basis in cynicism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 7th, 2021 at 1:54 AM

Title: Re: The Restoration...

Content:

Dan74 said:

.... or it may be the beginning of the Great Disappointment. The reminder of why Trump could ever have been contemplated as someone fit for office.

On the other hand, if you get 3 out of the 4 things you mention, Malcolm, I will happily donate $1000 to your charity of choice.

Malcolm wrote:

I am not going to hold you to that, but I appreciate the sentiment despite its basis in cynicism.

Johnny Dangerous said:

IDK about cynicism, going by the record of past Democratic administrations, The Great Disappointment seems like an accurate guess. Like in all things political though, looking only at politicians tells a small portion of the story. I am pretty enthused that we are going to see substantial criminal justice reform over the next years, at least.

Malcolm wrote:

Only if you set your expectations in some left wing Lala land.

First order of business is to rebuild a functional gvt.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 7th, 2021 at 4:50 AM

Title: Re: The Restoration...

Content:

Ayu said:

Can't read twitter. I can only guess, what this thread is about.

Malcolm wrote:

Fascists gnashing their teeth, engaged in treason and terrorism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 7th, 2021 at 4:51 AM

Title: Re: The Restoration...

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

If this were a BLM protest doing the same thing can you imagine the police presence?

Norwegian said:

National Guard would be there within 2.4 seconds, there would be water cannons, tear gas, pepper spray, tasers, rubber bullets, actual bullets, riot vans, shields, batons, everything. Trump would be screaming in caps lock on Twitter about evil communist left wing radical extremist terrorists and would urge the police to shoot on sight.

And DOD has declined Pelosi's request to send in the National Guard...

Malcolm wrote:

Trump controls DC national guard.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 7th, 2021 at 4:52 AM

Title: Re: Election results to be certified tomorrow

Content:

DNS said:

Some Congressman stood up to object to the results for Arizona, so the voting on certification has temporarily stopped. But like I say, it will be easily dismissed within 2 hours and then they continue to the other states until there is another objection for another state and the process stops, debates, then votes and continues again after that.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, except for terrorist attack on the capital building.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 7th, 2021 at 5:16 AM

Title: Re: The Restoration...

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

There is bloodshed, someone has been shot, no information beyond that at this point.

Könchok Thrinley said:

Didn't know it when I wrote it. Horrible horrible, it looks quite scary even from the safety of Europe. Might be because every major war in the history of the west took place basically where I live. But seriously tho, this is a really scary moment. Makes me wonder what happens next.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, a women, an insurrectionist, was shot in the chest during an armed standoff on the house floor.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 7th, 2021 at 5:25 AM

Title: Re: Election results to be certified tomorrow

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, except for terrorist attack on the capital building.

DNS said:

Almost looks like a coup d'état!

Malcolm wrote:

These people are all going to jail, the dumb f#@ks.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 7th, 2021 at 7:27 AM

Title: Re: The Restoration...

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

He's not a lunatic. He's not the best at being a fascist, but like I said, this can be seen as a practice run. He knows exactly what he is doing, and we should take these people seriously.

Malcolm wrote:

As I have been saying since 2015.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 7th, 2021 at 8:36 AM

Title: Re: The Restoration...

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

He's not a lunatic. He's not the best at being a fascist, but like I said, this can be seen as a practice run. He knows exactly what he is doing, and we should take these people seriously.

Malcolm wrote:

As I have been saying since 2015.

Dan74 said:

Well, you let a Real Estate huckster cum Reality TV star become President,

Malcolm wrote:

I didn't, you dumbass. And I am not the one here that flirts with fascists.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 7th, 2021 at 8:40 AM

Title: Re: The Restoration...

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This says it all:

MAGA people are traitors.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 7th, 2021 at 8:43 AM

Title: Re: The Restoration...

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

BTW they locked Twittler's Twitter account. About time.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 7th, 2021 at 8:44 AM

Title: Re: Election results to be certified tomorrow

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

In other news, looks like the senate has flipped.

Charlie123 said:

It is really good news. Stacey Abrams is a sort of hero.

Malcolm wrote:

She is a total Shero. With super powers.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 7th, 2021 at 9:12 AM

Title: Re: The Restoration...

Content:

DNS said:

The woman who was shot has died.

<https://www.washingtonpost.com/dc-md-va/2021/01/06/dc-protests-trump-rally-live-updates/>

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, she stupidly broke into the capital and was caught in the crossfire between her companions and the capital police.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 7th, 2021 at 9:18 AM

Title: Re: Election results to be certified tomorrow

Content:

Charlie123 said:

It is really good news. Stacey Abrams is a sort of hero.

Malcolm wrote:

She is a total Shero. With super powers.

Tlalok said:

What started with a Sherman ends with an Abrams.

Malcolm wrote:

Good one.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 7th, 2021 at 11:52 AM

Title: Re: Election results to be certified tomorrow

Content:

DNS said:

The U.S. Senate rejected the objection over the Arizona vote by a vote of 93-6. This will be the pattern for the rest of the objections too. This is what I have been saying from the beginning, since November 5th. Regardless if you support Trump or not, the votes just were never there to overturn the results.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. We know. That's not the point.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 7th, 2021 at 10:10 PM

Title: Re: Election results to be certified tomorrow

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

The pictures from the storming of the the Capitol are horrifying. What were/are these people hoping to achieve? Is this just some sort of base-brain explosion of crass emotion?

The damage to democracy will be abiding

PeterC said:

After all of that, and past midnight, republican legislators are still disputing the vote count. They do not believe in democracy.

Malcolm wrote:

No, they should be unseated.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 7th, 2021 at 10:19 PM

Title: Re: Response to PadmaVonSamba

Content:

Minobu said:

Cause correct me if I'm wrong but the middle way is saying it's both existence and non existence.

Malcolm wrote:

No. That is the third of the four extremes.

That which arises dependently is free of all four extremes: existence, nonexistence, both, and neither.

That's the middle way, according to the Buddha and Nagarjuna.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 8th, 2021 at 1:35 AM

Title: Re: The Restoration...

Content:

Könchok Thrinley said:

Yeah, I have heard. Quite a life she has lived, right? And makes one wonder really.

Malcolm wrote:

Don't forget, she died because she was participating in a terrorist attack on the US Capital, incited by the outgoing President of the United States in an attempt to disrupt the recognition of the victory of his opponent. What happened yesterday was terrorism, pure and simple.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 8th, 2021 at 1:48 AM

Title: Re: Response to PadmaVonSamba

Content:

Minobu said:

It actually is very clear. Nice for it helps to point to the view. Which is the best we can hope for with words

Malcolm wrote:

The best way to put it is that reality, emptiness, is inexpressible and free of proliferation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 8th, 2021 at 5:40 AM

Title: Re: The Restoration...

Content:

Könchok Thrinley said:

Yeah, I have heard. Quite a life she has lived, right? And makes one wonder really.

Malcolm wrote:

Don't forget, she died because she was participating in a terrorist attack on the US Capital, incited by the outgoing President of the United States in an attempt to disrupt the recognition of the victory of his opponent. What happened yesterday was terrorism, pure and simple.

Dan74 said:

Is that what you believe she was thinking?

The Buddha taught that the intention is paramount. So before we pass any judgment, it behoves us to inquire as to the people's intention. This was largely what I was interested in when I engaged with Patriot Prayer, or as you put it "flirted with fascists".

Malcolm wrote:

She was engaged in a terrorist act, no less than Bader-Meinhoff, the SLA, or the Red Brigades. The fact that terrorists act with deluded intentions does not make their acts any less terrorist. As for your choice of conversational partners, well, only fools dialogue with fascists.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 8th, 2021 at 5:41 AM

Title: Re: The Restoration...

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

There really are Trump supporters who are decent people.

Malcolm wrote:

Sorry, I can't agree. There is no decency in supporting Trump.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 8th, 2021 at 5:43 AM

Title: Re: The Restoration...

Content:

karmanyngpo said:

I can not say I agree with them or support many of their ideas actions and words but I do understand that there are levels to the madness and perfectly ordinary and often "good" people get caught up in all this.

KN

Malcolm wrote:

Good Germans, huh?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 8th, 2021 at 6:49 AM

Title: Re: The Restoration...

Content:

karmanyngpo said:

I can not say I agree with them or support many of their ideas actions and words but I do understand that there are levels to the madness and perfectly ordinary and often "good" people get caught up in all this.

KN

Malcolm wrote:

Good Germans, huh?

Johnny Dangerous said:

Yes.

Malcolm wrote:

You missed the point of reference. The people who ignored the atrocities of the Nazis were the "good Germans."

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Good_German

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 8th, 2021 at 10:36 AM

Title: Timothy Snyder—The Big Lie

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 8th, 2021 at 7:01 PM

Title: Re: Timothy Snyder—The Big Lie

Content:

PeterC said:

Who does this remind you of?

"His primary rules were: never allow the public to cool off; never admit a fault or wrong; never concede that there may be some good in your enemy; never leave room for alternatives; never accept blame; concentrate on one enemy at a time and blame him for everything that goes wrong; people will believe a big lie sooner than a little one; and if you repeat it frequently enough people will sooner or later believe it. He has the "never say die" spirit. After some of his severest set-backs he has been able to get his immediate associates together and begin making plans for a "come-back"."

"Never to admit a fault or wrong; never to accept blame; concentrate on one enemy at a time; blame that enemy for everything that goes wrong; take advantage of every opportunity to raise a political whirlwind."

By internet rules I'm going to lose any argument I'm engaged in, because the sources were these. But the quotes do seem...eerily prescient.

<https://phdn.org/archives/www.ess.uwe.ac.uk/documents/osssection3pt1.htm>

<https://archive.org/details/AnalysisThePersonalityofAdolphHitler>

Malcolm wrote:

Godwin's law only applies when you say the name...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 8th, 2021 at 7:04 PM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The older I get, the more I think the Yogacarins were onto something with their idea of icchantikas.

Anyway, bodhisattvas can't save anyone. That's not how the Dharma works. Everybody must liberate themselves.

Sādhaka said:

I often wonder if there is an such thing as an icchantika (which is similar to the idea of an organic portals or NPC); but didn't you once post that believing in icchantika's is considered an downfall, that is in the Mahayana teachings that are considered more definitive than Cittamatra and/or Yogacara?

And if it is considered a downfall, then what, if any, scriptural sources explicitly outline why or how?

Malcolm wrote:

There are no icchantikas, however some sentient beings are so afflicted, they might as well be, according the Candrakirti.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 8th, 2021 at 7:18 PM

Title: Re: Timothy Snyder—The Big Lie

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Btw, here is the text of the executive order trump signed about federal property: Sec. 2. Policy. (a) It is the policy of the United States to prosecute to the fullest extent permitted under Federal law, and as appropriate, any person or any entity that destroys, damages, vandalizes, or desecrates a monument, memorial, or statue within the United States or otherwise vandalizes government property. The desire of the Congress to protect Federal property is clearly reflected in section 1361 of title 18, United States Code, which authorizes a penalty of up to 10 years' imprisonment for the willful injury of Federal property. More recently, under the Veterans' Memorial Preservation and Recognition Act of 2003, section 1369 of title 18, United States Code, the Congress punished with the same penalties the destruction of Federal and in some cases State-maintained monuments that honor military veterans. Other criminal statutes, such as the Travel Act, section 1952 of title 18, United States Code, permit prosecutions of arson damaging monuments, memorials, and statues on State grounds in some cases. Civil statutes like the Public System Resource Protection Act, section 100722 of title 54, United States Code, also hold those who destroy certain Federal property accountable for their offenses. The Federal Government will not tolerate violations of these and other laws.

(b) It is the policy of the United States to prosecute to the fullest extent permitted under Federal law, and as appropriate, any person or any entity that participates in efforts to incite violence or other illegal activity in connection with the riots and acts of vandalism described in section 1 of this order. Numerous Federal laws, including section 2101 of title 18, United States Code, prohibit the violence that has typified the past few weeks in some cities. Other statutes punish those who participate in or assist the agitators who have coordinated these lawless acts. Such laws include section 371 of title 18, United States Code, which criminalizes certain conspiracies to violate Federal law, section 2 of title 18, United States Code, which punishes those who aid or abet the commission of Federal crimes, and section 2389A of title 18, United States Code, which prohibits as material support to terrorism efforts to support a defined set of Federal crimes. Those who have joined in recent violent acts around the United States will be held accountable.

<https://www.whitehouse.gov/presidential-actions/executive-order-protecting-american-monuments-memorials-statues-combating-recent-criminal-violence/>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 8th, 2021 at 8:04 PM

Title: Re: Timothy Snyder—The Big Lie

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Btw, here is the text of the executive order trump signed about federal property:

PeterC said:

There have been five state legislators - all republicans - identified so far among the rioters.

Fortunately for them trumps executive orders have as much force as a piece of toilet paper signed by a monkey.

Malcolm wrote:

Oh, that's not the point. This document puts together all the laws addressing these kinds of crimes, and many of these clowns are gonna to do hard time, especially now that a cop died.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 8th, 2021 at 8:51 PM

Title: Re: Timothy Snyder—The Big Lie

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

sane Republicans,

Malcolm wrote:

Those are in a the minority, as the house vote Thursday morning demonstrated. And yes, they do represent the views of their constituents.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 8th, 2021 at 9:43 PM

Title: Re: Timothy Snyder—The Big Lie

Content:

Ayu said:

I heard, if Trump would get impeached or deposed in another way within his last 12 days now, he cannot run for presidency next time.

That would be good news at the end of these four years.

Malcolm wrote:

He can be impeached after he leaves office as well.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 9th, 2021 at 12:24 AM

Title: Re: Timothy Snyder—The Big Lie

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

sane Republicans,

Malcolm wrote:

Those are in a the minority, as the house vote Thursday morning demonstrated. And yes, they do represent the views of their constituents.

FiveSkandhas said:

I don't live in America and I haven't been there in some time. But I find it hard to believe 70 million (the figure I heard) people who voted Republican are as insane as the lunatics who tarnished US democracy with the storming of the Capitol.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.courant.com/politics/hc-pol-q-poll-republicans-believe-fraud-20201210-pcie3uqqvrhyvnt7geohhsyepe-story.html>

FiveSkandhas said:

The latest national poll by the Hamden-based university shows huge differences in political perceptions by voters, based on their party affiliation. Among Democrats, 97% say there was no widespread fraud in the election, but 77% of Republicans believe there was. Among independents, 62% said there was no widespread fraud and 35% said they believe there was.

Malcolm wrote:

As I said.

FiveSkandhas said:

Around a third of registered voters in the U.S. (34%) identify as independents, while 33% identify as Democrats and 29% identify as Republicans, according to a Center analysis of Americans' partisan identification based on surveys of more than 12,000 registered voters in 2018 and 2019.

Malcolm wrote:

And:

Most independents in the U.S. lean toward one of the two major parties. When taking independents' partisan leanings into account, 49% of all registered voters either identify as Democrats or lean to the party, while 44% identify as Republicans or lean to the GOP. <https://www.pewresearch.org/fact-tank/2020/10/26/what-the-2020-electorate-looks-like-by-party-race-and-ethnicity-age-education-and-religion/>

There were a 159 million votes. 74 million went to Trump. 81 Million when to Biden.

So at least 50 million people think Biden stole the election. Hence, the house republicans do represent the views of their constituents.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 9th, 2021 at 12:25 AM

Title: Re: Timothy Snyder—The Big Lie

Content:

Ayu said:

I heard, if Trump would get impeached or deposed in another way within his last 12 days now, he cannot run for presidency next time.

That would be good news at the end of these four years.

FiveSkandhas said:

He's already been impeached once...does that mean he can't run again? Or is there something special about this particular period in his tenure?

Malcolm wrote:

He has to be convicted. And he can be impeached once he leaves office.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 9th, 2021 at 12:58 AM

Title: Re: Timothy Snyder—The Big Lie

Content:

Ayu said:

I heard, if Trump would get impeached or deposed in another way within his last 12 days now, he cannot run for presidency next time.

Genjo Conan said:

That is one theory. It's never been tested. No one knows what would happen if a President who's been removed from office tries to run again, because it's never happened and the Constitution is silent on it.

(I assume that, by "impeached," you mean "convicted." Impeachment is the first step; the House does that. Then the President goes to trial in the Senate.)

Malcolm wrote:

"Convicted", as far as I know, means that official cannot never hold another office.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 9th, 2021 at 1:32 AM

Title: Re: Timothy Snyder—The Big Lie

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

To be honest, though, I take this all to be legal prapanca. I think the chances of Trump being removed from office are substantially less than the chances that, say, he starts a war with Iran in the next twelve days.

Malcolm wrote:

Guess we will see.

Anyway, I am rooting for impeachment and conviction even if he has left office. And yes, that has happened. The cabinet secretary you mention, Belknap. Resigned after he was impeached, and was still convicted.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 9th, 2021 at 1:46 AM

Title: Re: malcolm please have a look here

Content:

Minobu said:

What i said was pure Madhyamika ...the way Lord Nagarjuna taught it and the way Gelug teaches.

Malcolm wrote:

No. Actually it isn't.

The rest of your screed is purely sectarian, uneducated bullshit. So I am not going to respond to it. I have better things to do.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 9th, 2021 at 5:21 AM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Then according to Candrakirti, there's no such thing as an icchantika, but at the same time there kind of is?

Did Candrakirti elaborate on that at all?

Malcolm wrote:

Not really. In general, Madhyamakas reject the concept, but admit some beings are hopeless, like these people:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 9th, 2021 at 9:37 AM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

Minobu said:

It's a game...like toss trillions and never pay back...like not even five bucks...

like i said money is not real...it's a game ...wall street owns the system...the whole system...the military economy ...the government ...banks...corporations...the whole enchilada..

PeterC said:

My friend, you could not be more wrong. You have no idea what the monetary expansion of the past year is going to do to us when the consequences arrive.

People often dismiss these things as meaningless because they don't understand them. But they are very, very significant.

Malcolm wrote:

Hopefully Biden will be able to successfully navigate us through the crushing contraction that is ahead.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 9th, 2021 at 10:07 AM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

PeterC said:

My friend, you could not be more wrong. You have no idea what the monetary expansion of the past year is going to do to us when the consequences arrive.

People often dismiss these things as meaningless because they don't understand them. But they are very, very significant.

Malcolm wrote:

Hopefully Biden will be able to successfully navigate us through the crushing contraction that is ahead.

Norwegian said:

It will take an inordinate amount of effort and coordination from many people to manage it. May that truly happen. Nothing would be better.

Malcolm wrote:

There is some hope on the fascist front, this is who we are facing—not safe for the overly compassionate, fascist sympathizers, or the morally superior:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 9th, 2021 at 10:48 AM

Title: Re: Congratulations President elect Joe Biden

Content:

PeterC said:

My friend, you could not be more wrong. You have no idea what the monetary expansion of the past year is going to do to us when the consequences arrive.

People often dismiss these things as meaningless because they don't understand them. But they are very, very significant.

Malcolm wrote:

Hopefully Biden will be able to successfully navigate us through the crushing contraction that is ahead.

PeterC said:

He's got a good team. But the end of cheap money is a bit like climate change or the failure of antibiotics. It's going to happen and we're just going to have to live through the consequences.

Malcolm wrote:

I guess we have to put the stock market in rehab sooner or later.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 9th, 2021 at 10:52 AM

Title: Re: malcolm please have a look here

Content:

Queequeg said:

They got it in East Asia. Its expressed differently, but that's a linguistic matter.

Malcolm wrote:

Some did, some didn't, just like in India and Tibet.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 9th, 2021 at 8:04 PM

Title: Re: Election results to be certified tomorrow

Content:

PeterC said:

He's now banned permanently from Twitter. For now he's also banned on Facebook, twitch, etc. I suspect other platforms will follow shortly and the ban will be permanent. This is a very important step - taking away his ability to talk to the crazies will show how dependant he was on social media. But the crazies will still be out there and others will be talking to, courting and provoking them. At some point the circumstances that created them in the first place will have to be dealt with.

Brunelleschi said:

That power over US democracy (and other democracies) is now increasingly in the hands of a few Silicon Valley oligarchs without accountability is obviously problematic. Especially since it's usually leftists to speak truth to power.

PeterC said:

I agree. The traditional media used to abuse that power in the past, and would still today if not for their increasing irrelevance. But they had explicit agendas and were subject to regulations on content. The social media companies are worse because they represent no position and are subject to no effective regulation - they simply sell access to and information on voters to the highest bidder.

Malcolm wrote:

This issue IMO is anonymity, not access. Anonymity encourages irresponsibility. I understand some people have very valid reasons for being anonymous, nevertheless, my point stands.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 10th, 2021 at 3:12 AM

Title: Re: Response to PadmaVonSamba

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

Minobu, if you believe that Nagarjuna supports your view, it would be helpful to provide some quotations or citations to back that up.

Malcolm wrote:

You'll be waiting until the least next Mahākalpa for that.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 10th, 2021 at 3:42 AM

Title: Re: Election results to be certified tomorrow

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

Thirdly, they've already started purging all kinds of account on their platforms - including leftist ones.

Malcolm wrote:

Free speech does not apply to privately owned platforms, including this one.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 10th, 2021 at 6:22 AM

Title: Re: Election results to be certified tomorrow

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

Thirdly, they've already started purging all kinds of account on their platforms - including leftist ones.

Malcolm wrote:

Free speech does not apply to privately owned platforms, including this one.

Brunelleschi said:

Which, when these platforms are the main source of information for billions of people could have long lasting consequences. Last time there was a purge like this a number of Pro-Palestinian organisations were banned. This is not concerning to you?

Malcolm wrote:

No. Leftists can build their own platforms.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 10th, 2021 at 6:24 AM

Title: Re: Election results to be certified tomorrow

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

"Do nothing" is not an option here, calling for transparent and fair standards in content moderation is.

Relevant articles

Malcolm wrote:

That can only happen if people are not faceless nymys on the internet.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 10th, 2021 at 8:14 PM

Title: Re: Response to PadmaVonSamba

Content:

Minobu said:

I see now that I was wrong

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and you need to apologize for making an unfounded objection based in your sectarian biases and lack of education in the sutras of the Buddha and writings of Nagarjuna.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 10th, 2021 at 8:18 PM

Title: Re: A single sadhana or practice

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Is the secrecy attached to personal practice Vajrayana etiquette in particular?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and people here gossip too much about what they are doing and so on.n

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 10th, 2021 at 8:21 PM

Title: Re: Election results to be certified tomorrow

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

"Do nothing" is not an option here, calling for transparent and fair standards in content moderation is.

Relevant articles

Malcolm wrote:

That can only happen if people are not faceless nymys on the internet.

PeterC said:

Agree. The lack of responsibility for ones speech is central to this. Pre the Internet, speech free of responsibility was limited to what you said in private with people you trusted. With social media, people can now speak to audiences of millions with no real responsibility. We need to go back to the pre-Internet standard - and while that means some people can't speak so freely on the Internet, that's generally no bad thing and they will be able to live with it.

Malcolm wrote:

Apparently, people need licensing and insurance before they are allowed to drive on the internet. And kids under sixteen should not be allowed access to the open internet at all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 10th, 2021 at 10:16 PM

Title: Re: TODAY at 4 pm pacific time - Transmission of Dzogchen Texts - Vajrayana Foundation

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Mr Malcolm Namdrol likes to say this is only an Anuyoga Sadhana.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, because that's what Chogyal Namkhai Norbu said about the sadhana.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 10th, 2021 at 10:37 PM

Title: Re: Response to PadmaVonSamba

Content:

Minobu said:

I see now that I was wrong

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and you need to apologize for making an unfounded objection based in your sectarian biases and lack of education in the sutras of the Buddha and writings of Nagarjuna.

Minobu said:

I always admit when i'm wrong....this past few weeks have been a lesson in extremes for me..

Malcolm wrote:

I see, so you are refusing to apologize. Figures, since you also,just admitted to being sectarian. Fruit never falls far from the Shugden tree.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 10th, 2021 at 11:02 PM

Title: Re: Response to PadmaVonSamba

Content:

Minobu said:

I always admit when i'm wrong....this past few weeks have been a lesson in extremes for me..

Malcolm wrote:

I see, so you are refusing to apologize. Figures, since you also,just admitted to being sectarian. Fruit never falls far from the Shugden tree.

Minobu said:

now who is being sectarian...

what are you saying now...what does that even mean what i underlined and i did apologize ..obviously you did not read the whole post...

maybe you need also to look in the mirror..

Malcolm wrote:

I read your whole post. A lot of waffling around, declarations of contempt for all other Buddhist schools, but no apology.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 11th, 2021 at 2:57 AM

Title: Re: Vajra Armor (Dorje Gotrab) Question

Content:

Charlie123 said:

Yes, Acarya Malcolm was probably writing to ChNN's students about ChNN's system.

Malcolm wrote:

It's in the original terma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 11th, 2021 at 5:29 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 11th, 2021 at 6:21 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

complete and final and not upon those that are not complete and final."

Malcolm wrote:

That's a funny translation of nitārtha (definitive) and neyārtha (provisional) (not yours, I understand).

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 11th, 2021 at 6:30 AM

Title: Re: A single sadhana or practice

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Hello.

Many of you have received multiple sadhana and practice empowerments; it seems some of you have received many indeed.

I am just curious: if you were to restrict yourself to a single sadhana or practice, which would you choose and why?

Jangchup Donden said:

Whichever my guru recommended. I don't have the wisdom to know which practice would have the most benefit to others and myself, but he does.

Malcolm wrote:

Transformation practices are all the same; heads, faces, arms, hand implements, mantras, are all incidental and depend on karma, opportunity, etc. There is nothing really to choose from.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 11th, 2021 at 6:51 AM

Title: Re: A single sadhana or practice

Content:

Jangchup Donden said:

Whichever my guru recommended. I don't have the wisdom to know which practice would have the most benefit to others and myself, but he does.

Malcolm wrote:

Transformation practices are all the same; heads, faces, arms, hand implements, mantras, are all incidental and depend on karma, opportunity, etc. There is nothing really to choose from.

Jangchup Donden said:

Very true. No different in essence, and accomplishing one accomplishes all. That being said (maybe it's my ignorance) but I have a feeling different people's karma may respond better to different visualizations, different lineages of transmission, etc., otherwise we wouldn't have the wide variety of deity yoga practices.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't know, this may sound cynical, but sometimes it sounds like McDonald's, Burger King, Wendie's, Arby's, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 11th, 2021 at 6:53 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

tkp67 said:

The comparative method of evaluating sutras is a backbone of EA Buddhism.

Malcolm wrote:

Right, because no one else thought that they might comparatively evaluate sūtras...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 11th, 2021 at 6:55 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

So it's never going to work out; there is not enough common ground. It's like two people who speak different languages.

Malcolm wrote:

Please recall my three axioms:

Axiom 1: All online conversations about Nichiren Buddhism between Nichiren Buddhists and non-Nichiren Buddhists end in flame wars.

Axiom 2: All online conversations about Nichiren Buddhism between Nichiren Buddhists and other Nichiren Buddhists end in flame wars.

Axiom 3: All online conversations about Nichiren Buddhism are best avoided.

<https://www.dharmawheel.net/viewtopic.php?p=562998#p562998>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 11th, 2021 at 9:14 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Nichiren doxology and history is fascinating.

Malcolm wrote:

In a kind of forensic sort of way...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 11th, 2021 at 11:08 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

So it's never going to work out; there is not enough common ground. It's like two people who speak different languages.

Malcolm wrote:

Please recall my three axioms:

Axiom 1: All online conversations about Nichiren Buddhism between Nichiren Buddhists and non-Nichiren Buddhists end in flame wars.

Axiom 2: All online conversations about Nichiren Buddhism between Nichiren Buddhists and other Nichiren Buddhists end in flame wars.

Axiom 3: All online conversations about Nichiren Buddhism are best avoided.

<https://www.dharmawheel.net/viewtopic.php?p=562998#p562998>

tkp67 said:

I believe that axiom is of your own design correct?

Malcolm wrote:

I didn't design them, I merely observed them.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 11th, 2021 at 12:03 PM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

So does the OP disagree with the editors of WND that in WND 1:66 when Ven Nichiren says that "This four-phrase verse sums up the four teachings and three truths contained in the Flower Garland, Wisdom, and other sutras. It does not express the three truths as revealed and unified in the Lotus Sutra," these four phrases are in fact:

1. We speak of all things as 'empty'
2. which are dependent in origination.
3. They are no more than 'existence in name only.'
4. This is the Middle Way."

Malcolm wrote:

And this itself is just a summary of a single verse of the MMK, found nowhere in the Lotus.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 11th, 2021 at 12:07 PM

Title: Re: Election results to be certified tomorrow

Content:

Norwegian said:

22 posts within the Twitter thread. An observation on what took place at Capitol Hill, and what kind of people were there.

PeterC said:

There's been a lot of calls from 'conservatives' for 'healing', 'unity' etc. since the coup attempt. I think what they're really asking for is amnesty and a chance to regroup and try again. It's increasingly important that that does not happen. History has lessons here. The beer hall putsch was a joke and put down very easily. It was fifteen years from then until Kristallnacht, but at that point it was not a joke at all. Once these things build momentum - and this clearly has momentum in the US - they are very hard to stop.

Malcolm wrote:

They will find no solace. They are being deplatformed, their access to revenue and capital canceled as we speak, they are being placed on no-fly lists—in short, they are bad for business, and US corporations have no interest these days in being Nazi bitches like I.G Farben, Krupps, etc. we need to be watchful, but at this point Fascism is bad for business. Hell, the PGA cancelled their open at Bedminster in 2020.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 11th, 2021 at 8:33 PM

Title: Re: Resources Request: Development of Buddhism at Nalanda (5th-7th century)

Content:

Padmist said:

I would like to learn how Nalanda's form of Buddhism developed. I haven't come across historical academic materials or videos on the development of Buddhism in the area from the time of the councils to the 5-6th century. Can you name any Buddhologists that talked about this period?

Malcolm wrote:

Davidson. The rise of Indian esoteric Buddhism

Snellgrove, Indo-Tibetan Buddhism 1 & 2

Etc

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 11th, 2021 at 9:36 PM

Title: Parler Hacked

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 11th, 2021 at 9:56 PM

Title: Re: Parler Hacked

Content:

PeterC said:

They uploaded their drivers licenses to a site where they discussed violent insurrection.

How stupid can you be, really?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. But it is also more sinister, because Parler was also encouraging users to be influencers and rewarding them financially, once you were a trusted user. So, the next conspiracy theory is that Parler from the beginning was a deep state honeypot.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 11th, 2021 at 11:19 PM

Title: Re: Parler Hacked

Content:

Norwegian said:

70TB of data was scraped. A lot of Parler users should be nervous now.

Sādhaka said:

Why? Because the Maoists & CHEKA may soon be coming after them?

Malcolm wrote:

Dude, I've come to the conclusion that you're either suffering from a brain injury or a personality disorder because the shit you say is just so dumb.

To answer your question, it's because the FBI, etc., is going to round up those seditionists who breached the Capital building, and anyone who participated even tangentially in conspiring to overthrow a valid election, and thus, the US government. That's a federal crime, it's treason, and should be punished harshly. And don't give me your "what about BLM?" The idea that BLM or Antifa even remotely had any interest in hanging the Vice President of the United States and executing senators and representatives if they refused to go along with Trump's plot to overturn the election is totally absurd. You might have noticed that BLM and Antifa were completely absent from DC on the 6th. Why? Because the Democrats won the election, against all odds given the amount of GOP corruption.

These people are fascists. No tolerance for fascists. If you not against them, your for them. No middle ground. Choose your side.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 11th, 2021 at 11:21 PM

Title: Re: Parler Hacked

Content:

PeterC said:

They uploaded their drivers licenses to a site where they discussed violent insurrection.

How stupid can you be, really?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. But it is also more sinister, because Parler was also encouraging users to be influencers and rewarding them financially, once you were a trusted user. So, the next conspiracy theory is that Parler from the beginning was a deep state honeypot.

PeterC said:

Parler was the brainchild - sorry, child - of Rebeca Mercer (daughter of hedge fund billionaire and previously involved in Cambridge Analytica) and Steve Bannon. I'm sure they fully intended to capture as much information about the users as possible for future political uses. I'm also sure that nobody good at cyber security would be caught dead working for them. So perhaps this shouldn't be a surprise

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed, I know this...but the right wing in this country seems to have become immunized against facts. And yes, Parler is basically Wordpress, and Wordpress security issues are well known.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 11th, 2021 at 11:22 PM

Title: Re: Parler Hacked

Content:

Sādhaka said:

When I say maoist & cheka, I mean big gov. in general.

It's a nice idea to think that Trump was maybe a 5D chess player who was at least a speed bump to their stalinist nwo; but now I'm not so sure that he wasn't an psyop, used to further establish the stalinist trend of things we see happening....

Malcolm wrote:

Dumb and dumber...this how QAnon seeds itself in peoples brains.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 11th, 2021 at 11:32 PM

Title: Re: Parler Hacked

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

These people are fascists. No tolerance for fascists. If you not against them, your for them. No middle ground. Choose your side.

Sādhaka said:

Okay G. Dubya.

So choose fascists or stalinists.

Seems legit.

Malcolm wrote:

Dumb, dumber, dumbest. I am surprised you remember to breath.

Just remember, when you start out by falsely calling people stalinists, they are not gonna to put up with your bullshit for a second, you little shit. (this is in reference to your Gang of Four reference the other day).

And for your information, both my grandfathers fought fascists in WWII, and my uncle fought communists in Korea. So piss off.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 12:23 AM

Title: Re: Parler Hacked

Content:

Sādhaka said:

So choose fascists or stalinists.

Seems legit.

Bristollad said:

No choose authoritarianism or democracy. Hitler and Stalin were both authoritarians. Trump was a wannabe authoritarian, I guess that's why he had a soft spot for Xi, Putin, Erdogan, Kim and probably others like the Saudis. I really don't understand why some so-called American libertarians embraced and supported Trump.

Malcolm wrote:

Libertarianism is a gateway drug to Fascism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 1:00 AM

Title: Re: Parler Hacked

Content:

Dan74 said:

Folks like you and talk like the above, Malcolm, make fascists.

Malcolm wrote:

Ummm, not Dan, it is the Neville Chamberlains like you who permit fascists to flourish.

Dan74 said:

Yeah, execute the whole lot of them for treason. Why don't you lock up the 70 million who voted for Trump, while you are at it, Amerika can do with free labor, people get paid peanuts already.

Malcolm wrote:

Dumb.

Dan74 said:

Or at least disenfranchise them, since they are too dumb to have the right to vote. Fascism, eh?

Malcolm wrote:

Shutting down Parler does not disenfranchise anyone. Cutting someone off of twitter because their speech causes riots does not disenfranchise anyone.

The free speech argument is bogus. Those assholes still have free speech. Anytime Twittler wants, he can have a press conference. He could have even done a Chavez, a weekly Sunday show for six hours. He still can, for another 9 days.

I fully support the right of dumb motherf@#kers to vote for the idiots of their choice. If they win, as they did in 2016, I may not like the consequences, but as long as THEY DO NOT COMMIT TREASON AND FOMENT AN OVERTHROW OF THE GOVERNMENT THROUGH LIES AND VIOLENCE, I live with it.

I didn't like living under Reagan or Bush I, but I never thought the GOP was going to be involved in a plot to overthrow the government. I didn't even think this was a possibility under Bush II, since the GOP was still somewhat chastened by the memory of Nixon.

I never contested Trump's election or called foul. I did point out that Trump is a fascist. Over and over again in fact. I warned people that this was likely to happen. Thank goodness he lost he election by a huge margin. But here is the point: HE REFUSED TO CONCEDE, STILL REFUSES TO CONCEDE, AND IS A MENACE TO SOCIETY. Not only is he a menace to US society, he is a world menace, Napoleon level. America really only has to blame itself, but the lies about Clinton got into people's heads, and due to a fluke, and some bad judgment on the part of Comey, Russian agitprop, etc., Trump got in and ran the greatest grift in world history. You are going to be reading about the full extent of it for years to come. And so now, it comes to an end, and sadly, for all those people that got caught up in his grift, there will be serious consequences, jail time, probation, and for the specific people involved in beating that cop to death inside the capital building, yes, death sentences—which in this case I FULLY SUPPORT.

Right now, however, Trump and his band of insurrectionists need to be shut down hard, for the good of America and for the good of the world. Good thing we have Pelosi, the FBI, etc., on the job, doing just that. Lord knows that the GOP are feckless cowards.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 1:02 AM

Title: Re: Parler Hacked

Content:

Bristollad said:

No choose authoritarianism or democracy. Hitler and Stalin were both authoritarians. Trump was a wannabe authoritarian, I guess that's why he had a soft spot for Xi, Putin, Erdogan, Kim and probably others like the Saudis. I really don't understand why some so-called American libertarians embraced and supported Trump.

Malcolm wrote:

Libertarianism is a gateway drug to Fascism.

Dan74 said:

Folks with libertarian tendencies...

Malcolm wrote:

Dumber.

Libertarianism is a distinct American political movement, with roots in the writings of Calhoun (and not Ayn Rand) and others who argued against federal power (where convenient) in order maintain the slave order; whereas "libertarian" refers to a political outlook. On all political tests, I am defined as very deep on the Left libertarian scale.

Read some American History, start with Democracy in Chains or How the South Won the Civil War.

Luckily, America just managed to avoid tazing itself in the balls to death. I fear next time, we won't be so lucky.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 1:31 AM

Title: Re: Parler Hacked

Content:

Dan74 said:

Folks like you and talk like the above, Malcolm, make fascists.

Bristollad said:

Do you disagree that Trump was authoritarian-leaning? I don't understand why people who are so gung-ho for freedom, were so strong in their support for Trump. Were they mislead, mistaken or simply willing to go along with it because he promised to fulfil some other, more important goal they had?

Malcolm wrote:

You should have seen the Parler video I saw this morning, with dogwhistles about "Rebirth of a Nation" etc. The three most important tv shows that cap this whole sad episode are the Handmaiden's Tale, the Watchmen, and The Boys.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 1:36 AM

Title: Re: Parler Hacked

Content:

PeterC said:

They uploaded their drivers licenses to a site where they discussed violent insurrection.

How stupid can you be, really?

Johnny Dangerous said:

Pretty stupid I'd say. I mean, they thought they were gonna be literally overthrowing the government and reversing election results with their white man-baby tantrum. Not people with a good grasp of scale, at the very least.

Malcolm wrote:

Hitler, in the beginning, did not have a good grasp of scale. People learn through error. First it was the attacks last year on the Michigan state capital, the Oregon State, the Wisconsin State Capital, and so on. They were the dry runs. Then this assault on the US Capital. It is clear there was a coordinated attempt to make it happen, depriving police of manpower, refusing to release the National Guard, it has all the earmarks of an actual plot. The only reason it did not succeed is that was done under the guise of a "mob gone wild," rather than a specific military operation, which would have stood out and been more easy to prevent. These guys participated in the initial breach, and they clearly had military training:

But it was this guy who prevented the Senate from being held hostage:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 1:49 AM

Title: Re: Parler Hacked

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

There are a few smart, scary people amongst, and directing the LARPers. I hope those are the people the effort is focused on, the people who get serious sentences, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, the people who didn't actually break anything, they will get probation, lose their jobs; all the dipshits who broke things will get mandatory ten years, thanks to their furher's EO last summer. The copkillers and those who violently beat the DC cop senseless on the steps will get death sentences or at least life, in the former case, and lengthy sentences in the latter.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 1:52 AM

Title: Re: Some questions about Shingon

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

The Shingon Risshu tradition is supposed to be extant and if so, they should, in theory, be following a full vinaya system.

I could be wrong about this, but my understanding is that, the same as the other Japanese Buddhist schools, the Risshu school was forcibly secularized during the Meiji-era haibutsu kishaku "reforms" (for lack of a better word). There are individual Japanese priests or temples that follow the Dharmaguptaka vinaya but, to the best of my knowledge, the Dharmaguptaka lineage itself has died out in Japan.

Malcolm wrote:

Long ago, as a result of Saicho's Mahāyāna reformation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 2:02 AM

Title: Re: Parler Hacked

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

But it was this guy who prevented the Senate from being held hostage:

Tlalok said:

Sorry to correct you Malcom, but this wasn't going to be a hostage taking. They came to lynch Mike Pence, Nancy Pelosi and any other congressperson they could get their hands on.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure it was, before you can lynch anyone, you have to take them hostage. Had they managed to lay their hands on them, it would have swiftly turned into a hostage situation. The gallows were set up outside. Anyway, it do not happen, but next time? We need to make sure they never have another chance to get in.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 2:23 AM

Title: Re: Parler Hacked

Content:

Tlalok said:

The Beer Hall putsch was about as well organized as this, but the Germans weren't laughing ten years later.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct. And this is my point, despite some stupid people here who think, against all evidence, that fascists can be reasoned with, or that we should talk to them nicely. They seem to forget the paradox of intolerance on a daily basis.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 2:29 AM

Title: Re: Parler Hacked

Content:

amanitamusc said:

IMO the security at the capitol needs to be more none white. There is a serious loyalty problem.

Malcolm wrote:

Yup, And the Black cops had to put up with tremendous amount of racist comments from the insurrectionists.

In other news, "r/donaldtrump" is shutdown, so the deplatforming of fascists on private platforms continues apace.

Now <https://thedonald.win> and Gab need to go.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 2:31 AM

Title: Re: Parler Hacked

Content:

Dan74 said:

It doesn't follow, however, that all the people who support him are racists and fascists as some here imply.

Malcolm wrote:
Dumbest.

If you support a fascist racist, how are you not a fascist racist? You make no sense Dan. I guess the air is too thin in your tower. Maybe you bring an oxygen tank up with you.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 2:32 AM
Title: Re: Parler Hacked
Content:

Tlalok said:
The Beer Hall putsch was about as well organized as this, but the Germans weren't laughing ten years later.

Malcolm wrote:
Correct. And this is my point, despite some stupid people here who think, against all evidence, that fascists can be reasoned with, or that we should talk to them nicely. They seem to forget the paradox of intolerance on a daily basis.

Johnny Dangerous said:
A key point of opposing fascists is people being willing to do so en masse, in public.

Malcolm wrote:
Hello, isn't this IN PUBLIC?

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 2:37 AM
Title: Re: Parler Hacked
Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:
That said, relying on the state to fight fascism (rather than simply use it as an opportunity to further state power) is also a position which is in opposition to available evidence.

Malcolm wrote:
We are the state. That is what it means to live in a democracy. The state is not something other than the voters, who put people in power. This kind of rhetoric is actually much of the problem. It causes people to think they are not responsible, when in fact it is their votes, or lack of votes, which govern these issues. Not enough people voted in 1968, 1972, 1980, 1984, 1988, 2000, 2004, and 2016. What is happening now is a direct consequence of lack of voter participation in those years.

Since we are the state, we should make sure that our interests are represented, so that institutions like the FBI, Justice Dept, etc., function in our interests. There really is no other way.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 2:46 AM

Title: Re: Parler Hacked

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Not really. Wouldn't it be nice though if we could just fight it from the comforts of DW while calling fellow users names?

The propaganda of fascism operates partially on the ability to physically threaten in public, if people do not have a counter-response creating a public, anti-fascist presence, discussions like this mean very little.

Malcolm wrote:

Yeah, it really is.

Antifa's tactics are not a strategy. They are very temporary, and they are mostly west coast white dudes.

I was in antiwar/no nuke rallies before you were born. So please, don't lecture me about "physical presence."

The past year shows that all the physical confrontations of Antifa with the Proud Boys, etc., does not help. It legitimizes latter.

By contrast, the nonviolent marches of BLM demonstrated that Gandhi and King were right.

The best thing that Antifa and BLM did in DC last week was NOT SHOW UP. Because fascists, by their nature, will engage in violence even without provocation. If you think the only place I object to fascists is here, well, of course not. The reason I am not out standing somewhere is COVID.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 3:49 AM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Poice State

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

https://www.fastcompany.com/90592060/capitol-attack-fascism-surveillance-censorship?link_id=1&can_id=203678ed3087b4a2546dc0024813ec21&source=email-our-take-2&email_referrer=email_1041395&email_subject=you-cant-stop-fascism-with-authoritarianism

From a member of Fight For The Future, a great organization.

The new administration and Congress should resist the urge to rush through legislation or enact headline-grabbing policies that claim to respond to right-wing violence while reinforcing the systems that foster and enable it. Instead, they should listen to the communities most harmed by Trump and his supporters' actions, and enact meaningful structural changes that begin the work of addressing systemic injustices at their root.

Malcolm wrote:

Right, taking personal responsibility for being the government, voting, etc.

BTW, I was not saying that one should never get out and stand up to fascists. I was saying that it was good that BLM etc. did not get out there last week on the mall. The point was that if there had been a large BLM/Antifa presence, we would have never seen what these people truly want to do.

The only way any of this changes is through the ballot box.

I still think your rhetoric of the state being some alien organism is mistaken.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 4:10 AM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Poice State

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

I still think your rhetoric of the state being some alien organism is mistaken.

Johnny Dangerous said:

So you know of a time in American history where the enforcement arm of the state was solidly on the side of democracy? The only time I can think of is marginally during desegregation, even then only begrudgingly. As we can see from events in our time; Law Enforcement is still grossly institutionally racist.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and that changes only through voting.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Other than that, expanded police powers are almost uniformly turned against the people who deserve scrutiny the least...again part of the reason that I keep predicting that the capitol insurrectionists will face less arrests and consequences than BLM protestors, labor right supporters etc. , environmentalists, etc. even though they present a real threat to democracy that the other groups do not.

Malcolm wrote:

That changes only through voting.

Johnny Dangerous said:

That is the consistent history of US law enforcement, which is most certainly an arm of the State. The change there will come from actual deep structural changes in US policing pushed by communities...-

Malcolm wrote:

That changes only through voting.

Johnny Dangerous said:

not- from expanding their already insane powers of surveillance, etc. - which is exactly what I'll bet the mainstream democrats will be pushing for...in "bipartisan" fashion with what's left of the GOP after Trump recedes into the background. That is just a recipe for more of the same.

Malcolm wrote:

That changes only through voting.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Indeed "The State" is not some alien organization, it is a complex structure full of often contradictory interests depending on where you look. Some parts of it most definitely operate in the service of democracy, other parts (like most of the executive branch) are usually squarely pointed against democracy, or at least pull it towards authoritarianism on the regular.

Malcolm wrote:

That changes only through voting. So keep voting, and make sure that unlike 1968, 1972, 1980, 1984, 1988, 2000, 2004, and 2016, that voter turnout is huge. Stacy Abrams is the right model here, not fist fights with Proud Boys in Portland (who BTW, were never scared away by a large Antifa presence).

On the activist side of things, of course, large scale nonviolent protests, and the understanding that a great number of people who work for the government are not merely paper pushers, and who have the same interests as you and I. That includes police officers, FBI and CIA agents, soldiers, state department workers, etc.

If you don't like the government you see, then change it. The way we do that in this country for lasting, positive, forward change is by voting in people who will serve our interests, and voting them out if they don't. If you have some other way this all works, I am all ears, but so far, I see no other way that does not lead to total violence, anarchy, and war. These are the exact set of conditions fascism thrives in. That said, I also have no sympathy for fascists who get punched. Zero.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 4:59 AM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Poice State

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I'm all for voting, but it only does so much. I have voted in every election I have been eligible for since age 18. Voting and electoral politics are not exclusive to other forms of activism, anyway.

Malcolm wrote:

I never said they were, but for lasting change, voting is the only way to ensure lasting change. You have to get the people you want into office, and then pressure them to represent your interests. Hence, GOP voter suppression tactics, which have done more damage to progressive causes than anything else.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 5:00 AM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Poice State

Content:

taleen said:

I also have no sympathy for fascists who get punched. Zero.
And this is the guy that all these western buddhists listen to ?

Could you imagine if someone on this board dared to say they have no sympathy for violent criminals or drug dealers who get shot by the police ?

Malcolm wrote:

Who said I had any sympathy for violent criminals or drug dealers who get shot by the police? Karma is a bitch.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 5:25 AM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Speaking of police state, is anyone here cheering for Klaus Schwab's "Great Reset"?

Possible mandatory vaxxing, and who knows what other kinds of authoritarian tyranny?

Malcolm wrote:

Vaccination is already mandatory and has been for decades, that is, if you want your kids to go to school.

Sādhaka said:

State vaccination laws include vaccination requirements for children in public and private schools and daycare settings, college/university students, and healthcare workers and patients in certain facilities.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.cdc.gov/phlp/publications/topic/vaccinationlaws.html>

The idea that this is "authoritarian" is ludicrous.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 7:18 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Queequeg said:

I answered that. Buddhanature is the basis of mutuality between all beings.

Malcolm wrote:

In what sutra is this stated?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 8:20 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Queequeg said:

I answered that. Buddhanature is the basis of mutuality between all beings.

Malcolm wrote:

In what sutra is this stated?

Queequeg said:

Do we need to debate whether all sentient beings have buddhanature?

Malcolm wrote:

No, but what does this word "mutuality" have to do with it? Do you mean that Buddhanature is a potential that all beings have in common?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 8:23 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Yes, which is why it is odd to say, in the context of the "system" of how Tiantai/Tendai is taught today, that the Buddha lacks the sense entrances etc. "of the other nine destinies." You can't have one without the others, in theory.

Malcolm wrote:

Clearly sense entrance is a translation through Chinese of ayatana, which here can't possibly mean sense gate, but is more akin to the four formless ayatanas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 8:41 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Even then, it's the ayatanas of buddhatva and not the other nine destinies. It's an odd little statement.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, like formless ayatanas. Usage wise, it must mean entryway, rather than sense entry.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 8:43 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Queequeg said:

I answered that. Buddhanature is the basis of mutuality between all beings.

Malcolm wrote:

In what sutra is this stated?

tkp67 said:

does the concept violate the dharma seals?

Malcolm wrote:

It's just a strange phrase to use to describe tathgatagarbha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 8:56 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Even then, it's the ayatanas of buddhatva and not the other nine destinies. It's an odd little statement.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, like formless ayatanas. Usage wise, it must mean entryway, rather than sense entry.

Caoimhghín said:

But the formless ayatanas include sense entrances, namely the mind? BTW, the Chinese is "entrance" in the sense of ayatana. I forgot to confirm that.

Malcolm wrote:

There is a Mano ayatana, yes, but ayatana can mean existence, as in the four formless realms.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 9:50 AM

Title: Re: Second impeachment

Content:

PeterC said:

<https://int.nyt.com/data/documenttools/articles-impeachment-trump-xml/b0422e292cebafda/full.pdf>

Honestly I think this is a bad idea. The story will be - vindictive democrats pursue tired impeachment nonsense again when the poor man only has days left in office. What they should have done is demanded a public inquiry at the start of the next congressional session. If/when the republicans try to block that, first they will fail, because they no longer control the senate, second they will look like the obstructionists they are. Over the next few weeks some unpleasant facts will come to light over who encouraged and orchestrated this, and that will be a much better basis for action against trump and others.

Malcolm wrote:

We have to do it. He sent a mob to hang his own VP. The facts won't change. But these representatives and senators were the targets of terrorists sent by Trump himself to do them injury. Further inquiries, and so on will be made. Further actions will be taken.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 10:03 AM

Title: Re: Second impeachment

Content:

PeterC said:

https://www.washingtonpost.com/national-security/trump-protests-washington-guard-military/2021/01/07/c5299b56-510e-11eb-b2e8-3339e73d9da2_story.html

This is why we need the inquiry first.

Malcolm wrote:

I respect your opinion, but he has to be impeached while in office. It may not be the optimal strategy, but he must be impeached. The senate hearing won't happen for some three months. During that time, inquiries and so on can happen. No facts are in dispute.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 10:04 AM

Title: Re: Second impeachment

Content:

PeterC said:

However I think the bigger goal here should be a federal conviction of the ex-president and co-conspirators for treason at some point after he leaves office, and a failed impeachment now makes that less rather than more likely.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and that will happen too.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 10:07 AM

Title: Re: Second impeachment

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Meanwhile...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 10:20 AM

Title: Re: Second impeachment

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 10:24 AM

Title: Re: Second impeachment

Content:

PeterC said:

If they're delivered to the next senate then he's already out of office, which is the only sanction this process offers.

Malcolm wrote:

They will not delivered to the Republican controlled senate. Not this time around. Precedent for this is 1874 impeachment of the war secretary, who was convicted following his resignation after he was impeached. If the new senate manages to convict, he will be barred from holding any public office loses all benefits, pension, health care, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 10:42 AM

Title: Re: Second impeachment

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Meanwhile...

Shotenzenjin said:

This guy has two tats that that are commonly used by fascist and white nationalist. You can't really see it in this photo but that's a valknot three interlocking triangles tattoo and he has a Odin's hammer tat below it

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 7:48 PM

Title: Re: Second impeachment

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 12th, 2021 at 7:50 PM

Title: Re: Second impeachment

Content:

PeterC said:

I'm sure the vote will pass the house, since it has been tabled. At that point he will have been impeached, again, the first time ever a president has been impeached twice in his term of office. What happens to the articles of impeachment after that, I don't know. If they're delivered to the current senate then it fails. If they're delivered to the next senate then he's already out of office, which is the only sanction this process offers.

DNS said:

Even in the next Senate, it would likely fail. It only needs simple majority of 50% plus one in the House, but two-thirds super majority in the Senate. That would require 67 out of 100 Senators voting for Impeachment to convict; therefore, not likely with the 50-50 split in the new Senate.

I imagine some Republican Senators might vote to convict, but probably not 17.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 12:58 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

So sometime between Ven Jizang and medieval Japanese Madhyamaka, there come to be two truths and four middles!

Malcolm wrote:

You just got to love the propensity of the human mind to engage in proliferation...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 2:49 AM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

EFF On issues surrounding content moderation and tech monopoly power as regards speech:

<https://www.eff.org/deeplinks/2021/01/beyond-platforms-private-censorship-parler-and-stack>

Worth a read if you are interested in this issue.

Less well known is the paradox of tolerance: Unlimited tolerance must lead to the disappearance of tolerance. If we extend unlimited tolerance even to those who are intolerant, if we are not prepared to defend a tolerant society against the onslaught of the intolerant, then the tolerant will be destroyed, and tolerance with them.—In this formulation, I do not imply, for instance, that we should always suppress the utterance of intolerant philosophies; as long as we can counter them by rational argument and keep them in check by public opinion, suppression would certainly be most unwise. But we should claim the right to suppress them if necessary even by force; for it may easily turn out that they are not prepared to meet us on the level of rational argument, but begin by denouncing all argument; they may forbid their followers to listen to rational argument, because it is deceptive, and teach them to answer arguments by the use of their fists or pistols. We should therefore claim, in the name of tolerance, the right not to tolerate the intolerant.

Malcolm wrote:

Open Society and its Enemies, Karl Popper.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 2:57 AM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

EFF On issues surrounding content moderation and tech monopoly power as regards speech:

<https://www.eff.org/deeplinks/2021/01/beyond-platforms-private-censorship-parler-and-stack>

Worth a read if you are interested in this issue.

The core problem remains: regardless of whether we agree with an individual decision, these decisions overall have not and will not be made democratically and in line with the requirements of transparency and due process, and instead are made by a handful of individuals, in a handful of companies, most distanced and least visible to the most Internet users.

Malcolm wrote:

The argument here hinges on two things: whether the internet should be nationalized, and I can see both pro and con sides to this; and second, the fact is that these decisions will inevitably end up in the hands of a small group, like the FCC, anyway.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 3:00 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

IMO It depends on how serious and widespread the misapprehension of the two truths as one being a false nothing and the other being either 1) a true nothing or 2) a bright luminous non-nothing and/or all-dharma soup. If these misconceptions were really so widespread, the necessity of the different middles posited by the Sanlun, Tiantai, and Huayan might be somewhat contextualized as to how they arose, even if it seems some of these doctrines just go back to "all-dharma existence soup." I am speaking particularly of pop Buddhology notions of Huayan teachings on radical interconnectedness specifically when I say "all-dharma soup."

If not and they weren't widespread, well then everything is just messier, which could well be the case.

Malcolm wrote:

Or, one can just read Candrakīrti, who really does nail Buddhapaṇita's intent, and that of Nāgārjuna. Otherwise, studying post-classical treatments of Madhyamaka outside of India (including in Tibet) is basically a forensic exercise in sectarian polemics.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 3:03 AM

Title: Re: Second impeachment

Content:

PeterC said:

If they're delivered to the next senate then he's already out of office, which is the only sanction this process offers.

Malcolm wrote:

They will not be delivered to the Republican controlled senate. Not this time around. Precedent for this is 1874 impeachment of the war secretary, who was convicted following his resignation after he was impeached. If the new senate manages to convict, he will be barred from holding any public office, loses all benefits, pension, health care, etc.

Mantrik said:

Apparently that may not be the case. This was described by CNN as having come from one opinion which was shared widely, but on the same CNN piece some legal opinions were shared and it was concluded that he would lose none of those through impeachment, except possibly his personal protection. His ability to run for office would depend on a secondary prosecution following impeachment, a prosecution method which does only require a simple majority, so still possible..... eventually.

Malcolm wrote:

It's a senate vote following conviction.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 3:11 AM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I truly don't know what the correct decision is. I just know I find the monopolistic control over speech concerning.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, you have monopolistic control over speech here. Some people have expressed concern about this. I was admin for E-Sangha, people complained about me there, and they still do.

Johnny Dangerous said:

This is especially true because these companies basically created the communities they are now banning via algorithm.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, they put into place algorithms that pushed content based on preferences. The net result of that was the creation of toxic echo chambers.

But on the other hand, it also created the Pussy Hat March. My feed is not filled with toxic shit because I curate it. The problem is not companies, the problem is education.

Johnny Dangerous said:

So in my opinion, people are right to demand both more safeguards to free speech -and- less incitement to extremism via algorithm from these companies.

Malcolm wrote:

In my opinion free speech is safe enough already. What has emerged here is a lack of safe guards (under the guise of free speech) against dangerous and harmful speech which leads to violent insurrections.

The the bat-shit crazy right has been reduced to putting up fliers. Good. Screw them. If leftists go down the same road as the bat-shit crazy right, screw them too, since many on the bat-shit crazy left are just as totalitarian as those on the right, like the Trots, and so on.

But right now our problem is White ISIS.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 3:15 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

I was going to mention Ven Candrakīrti, oddly enough. He has twenty emptinesses. Whether or not the enumeration is a proliferation en toto is whether or not it is teaching something of purport, which is all we can say of any other enumerations of the teaching.

Malcolm wrote:

They are in the PP Sūtras. He just relists them.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 3:23 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3

Truths

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

I have to actually read a full version of one of the larger Wisdom sutras in full one day.
After the Flower Garland...

Malcolm wrote:

I would revise that order, considering that more commentaries were written in India on the 8000 and 25000 line sutras than any other single text. There are no Indian commentaries on the Avatamska, etc., other than the Dasabhumika chapter, attributed to Nāgārjuna.

But the 10,000 line sūtra was published on 84000, so there is that.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 3:29 AM

Title: Re: "Enlightened intent" in the Choying Dzod

Content:

Nick r said:

I have been pondering the meaning of "enlightened intent" in Lonchenpa's Choying Dzod by Padma Publishing. I am curious how others personally define that phrase and also how it applies to their daily life.

Thank you

Malcolm wrote:

The term is dgongs pa, and the translation is not apt—it actually refers not to an intent per se, but a buddha's continuous state of samadhi, 24/7/365. It part of a progression that begins with mental focus (sems zin), concentration (dhyāna, bsam gtan), and samādhi (ting nge 'dzin). Translators try to deal with this usage in a variety of ways, none of which really capture the meaning, including my equivalent, "transcendent state" (from samati = dgongs pa).

The term dgongs pa can mean intention, but in regular Tibetan, it is commonly just an honorific for mind/thought (sems).

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 3:40 AM

Title: Re: ChNN lung question (Losar Mandarava retreat Mar 12 2017)

Content:

climb-up said:

Hey everyone,

I was checking something else on the list of lung I wrote down from the March 2017 Mandarava retreat, and I noticed that the last thing on my list, after black manjushri and the Simhamukha of Ayu Khandro was "mami melong?" (The question mark was in my notes, I clearly wasn't sure what it was and/or how to spell it).

I have no idea what that might be.
Does anyone know?

Malcolm wrote:
Marme Monlam. aspiration of the butter lamp.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 4:19 AM
Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State
Content:
Johnny Dangerous said:

At one time "the problem right now" was Al Qaeda, etc. and what we got was the patriot act and all kinds of awful stuff. Some long term thinking about precedent is needed in a democracy. Our history is replete with all kinds of awful stuff done in response to a particular problem in time, with a shortsighted view of the future implications...even in the relatively near future.

Malcolm wrote:
We are not dealing with a free speech issue, in fact. No one's right to speak about whatever insane crap they want to spew has been limited at all.

We still have to deal with White ISIS.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 4:21 AM
Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths
Content:
Caoimhghín said:
I have to actually read a full version of one of the larger Wisdom sutras in full one day. After the Flower Garland...

Malcolm wrote:
I would revise that order, considering that more commentaries were written in India on the 8000 and 25000 line sutras than any other single text.

Caoimhghín said:
There's something very brilliant in the Flower Garland. There is a reason why even the Lotus schools had to admit it a special place of honour. I do think, just as literature alone and not as Dharma, it might be one of the summits of achievement, the construction of this massive vaipulya. But it is so long that I'm likely to finish several other sūtras while making my way through it.

Malcolm wrote:

Most people imagine this to be the case, because it had a lot of glowing praise vis a vie Hua Yen, etc. Of course it is a very interesting text, and having read it in its entirety, it is not very philosophical, though it has its moments, and in fact is principally practice oriented, even defining itself as the definitive sūtra for Buddhist practice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 4:58 AM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State

Content:

Unknown said:

This year America had fascism on the ballot and nonwhite people mercifully said no. The fascists, however, are now saying f#@k ballots. And enough of the population is like f#@k yeah!

Malcolm wrote:

<https://indica.medium.com/i-lived-through-a-coup-america-is-having-one-now-437934b1dac3>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 5:31 AM

Title: Re: Respectful treatment of images/texts - 8 auspicious symbols included?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Just recycle it. If it helps, imagine it is all going into soft toilet paper to ease the hemorrhoids of the constipated.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 6:07 AM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This year America had fascism on the ballot and nonwhite people mercifully said no. The fascists, however, are now saying f#@k ballots. And enough of the population is like f#@k yeah!

<https://indica.medium.com/i-lived-through-a-coup-america-is-having-one-now-437934b1dac3>

Brunelleschi said:

Since 2016 Trump increased his numbers with basically every minority, but lost a fairly big share of white men.

Malcolm wrote:

Nevertheless it was the minority vote in AZ, NV, and GA, that put Biden over the top.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 8:23 AM

Title: Re: Second impeachment

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Mitch approves of the impeachment.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 8:52 AM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Well, you have monopolistic control over speech here. Some people have expressed concern about this. I was admin for E-Sangha, people complained about me there, and they still do.

Johnny Dangerous said:

I don't think there's any real comparison. For there to be a comparison Dharmawheel would have to have monopolistic control over all Buddhist dialogue on the internet, even the ability to shut down other Buddhist sites.. it has nothing like that.

Malcolm wrote:

That's not the case even for Amazon. AWS is merely one of thousands of providers.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Well, they put into place algorithms that pushed content based on preferences. The net result of that was the creation of toxic echo chambers.

But on the other hand, it also created the Pussy Hat March. My feed is not filled with toxic shit because I curate it. The problem is not companies, the problem is education. IDK, Facebook in particular has been algorithmically pushing people towards the lowest common denominator of dialogue for a while, they make money off of controversy, ruining people's thinking, all while misusing their data from my perspective. I admit I'm biased for sure, I think social media is mostly poisonous. Even "non toxic" dialogue on FB degrades into nonsense because the platform is designed to infantilize people and to act like a kind of slot machine for their interests, not to promote them to use their brains or actually connect with others.

Malcolm wrote:

That absolutely depends on how one curates ones feed. But, on the other hand, I have a certificate in Web Application Programming and used to work in the server farm of a major ISP.

Johnny Dangerous said:

In my opinion free speech is safe enough already. What has emerged here is a lack of safe guards (under the guise of free speech) against dangerous and harmful speech which leads to violent insurrections.

I can agree there, generally.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, at least we agree on something for a change.

Johnny Dangerous said:

However, the monopolistic control of information these companies has has already affected free speech negatively, and it will only get worse as they get bigger, while trying to simultaneously appease shareholders and the winds of politics...with little attention paid to protecting actual users, because their business models all rely on user exploitation, to one degree or another.

Malcolm wrote:

Users have to protect themselves, just as voters have to educate themselves. There is no mommy solution to this other than educating kids at home how to use the net.

Johnny Dangerous said:

If not exploitation, their business at the very least involves putting users rights at the lowest level of priority. This is a serious issue, and I think it will only become a bigger one in the future.

Malcolm wrote:

You know quite well that “user rights” don’t exist. Privileges are not rights. For example, as soon as the mods here decide I am more of a pain in the ass than I am now, you can arbitrarily decide to ban me for no cause at all, suspending my privileges to post here for any reason at all, including, but not limited to, the fact that the mods here just don’t f#@king like me.

Johnny Dangerous said:

I'm personally glad Parler is banned, but what happens in a foreseeable future where a breakaway arm of BLM, Antifa organizes some violence and gets deplatformed the same way. That's the bad thing about setting this kind of precedent..while I totally get why it needed to happen..there are issues.

Malcolm wrote:

BLM better make sure they don’t support an insurrectionary movement, no? But on the other hand they have never engaged in rhetoric of violence against persons.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Which is one critique of the Popper quote from earlier. One of the possible ways Fascism operates is by getting liberal democracy to eat itself and become more authoritarian, due to it being seen as necessary to be "intolerant of intolerance". Fascists misappropriate free speech, and eventually get liberal democracy to restrict itself..this allows them a greater opening to present their "alternative" to it.

Malcolm wrote:

Arguably, this is a specious objection. This is not a problem in Germany, Australia, New Zealand, Canada, etc. These countries do not even have a first amendment, but I do not see their democracies being thereby impacted. They also ban intolerant speech.

Johnny Dangerous said:

It's not a black and white thing, there are times where most definitely people have to be intolerant of intolerance, but it can also be a slippery slope to a less democratic society overall.

Malcolm wrote:

So, intolerance of intolerance is mainly a problem in undemocratic societies, but not in democratic ones? Question, have you read An Open Society and it's Enemies? It should not go unmentioned, Soros' money is one of the mainstays of Buddhist translation projects.

Johnny Dangerous said:

The the bat-shit crazy right has been reduced to putting up fliers. Good. Screw them. If leftists go down the same road as the bat-shit crazy right, screw them too, since many on the bat-shit crazy left are just as totalitarian as those on the right, like the Trots, and so on.

The problem is that historically when speech is restricted, it is not the people with some power that need to worry.

Malcolm wrote:

Extremists should be shut down when they start resorting to bombs and guns. As long as they are just talking, no problem, they should be allowed to say whatever crazy shit they want. We've passed that point. They are heading into McVeigh territory now.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 10:01 AM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

That's not the case even for Amazon. AWS is merely one of thousands of providers

Johnny Dangerous said:

AWS owns a significant chunk of the webs infrastructure. It's notable enough that every anti-monopoly group sees it as a huge issue. It's like the size of its greatest fifteen rivals or something, it's huge. Definitely not just one random company among others.

Malcolm wrote:

Antitrust issues are adjudicated in courts.

Johnny Dangerous said:

That absolutely depends on how one curates ones feed. But, on the other hand, I have a certificate in Web Application Programming and used to work in the server farm of a major ISP.

I worked in tech for years too, and was a reasonably early adopter of internet use generally in the early and mid 90s. I probably remember enough about using a Unix shell to still get most of stuff done today with one. My opinions come from experience and a little knowledge, not ignorance of how they work.

Malcolm wrote:

I'll accept this as agreement.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Users have to protect themselves, just as voters have to educate themselves. There is no mommy solution to this other than educating kids at home how to use the net. Ideally ompanies who essentially own the public square should prioritize democratic values, or be compelled to do so.

Malcolm wrote:

Again, this is an issue for the courts and/or legislation, which will then be adjudicated by the courts.

Johnny Dangerous said:

You know quite well that "user rights" don't exist. Privileges are not rights. For example, as soon as the mods here decide I am more of a pain in the ass than I am now, you can arbitrarily decide to ban me for no cause at all, suspending my privileges to post here for any reason at all, including, but not limited to, the fact that the mods here just don't f#@king like me.

Again, a small forum is no comparison to a cluster of behemoth companies that are now the defacto public square.

Malcolm wrote:
Again, an issue for the courts,

Johnny Dangerous said:
BLM better make sure they don't support an insurrectionary movement, no? But on the other hand they have never engaged in rhetoric of violence against persons.

Malcolm wrote:
No, but groups like the NFAC are a new level of escalation, and one can easily see a situation where due to the actions of a group like this, BLM in general would face some kind of deplatforming.
Courts again.

Johnny Dangerous said:
So, intolerance of intolerance is mainly a problem in undemocratic societies, but not in democratic ones? Question, have you read An Open Society and its Enemies? It should not go unmentioned, Soros' money is one of the mainstays of Buddhist translation projects.
I've read it, but it's been years. I recall not being blown away. Then again, I'm not sure I'm classifiable as a liberal, so to me it is not a significant work in the way it would be to someone who sees liberal democracy as a pinnacle of human achievement...rather than a very flawed version of "least worst choice at the present".

Malcolm wrote:
Liberal democracy is, so far, a better gvt. than all the other ones we've tried, no?

Johnny Dangerous said:
That is true of these people in this particular time. It is also true that in less democratic countries maneuvers such as these (by some of the same companies) are, and have been used to suppress the free speech of democracy activists, etc. E.G. Google in China. It's all well and good to say "no problem" in this one instance with Parler etc., but the larger problem remains.

Malcolm wrote:
Well, it's pretty hard to pass laws on international corporations about how they do business in other countries. Right now, China is rather tangential for me.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 10:07 AM
Title: Re: Second impeachment
Content:
Malcolm wrote:

Mitch approves of the impeachment.

windoverwater said:
Yup. Game changer.

PeterC said:

We'll see. He may not obstruct an emergency session only to tell his troops to vote the articles down. His wife was the first member of Trump's cabinet to resign, though I think she did that primarily to avoid being asked to sign a 25th amendment letter. Her resignation letter, unlike Betsy De Vos', had no condemnation of Trump at all, only the last sentence that read "...after the events at the US Capital, I will resign...effective Monday...to provide a short period of transition".

<https://thehill.com/homenews/administration/533311-read-resignation-letter-from-transportation-secretary-chao-to-trump>

Malcolm wrote:

In my opinion, Mitch took this personally, and Mitch is freaked out. Mitch wants the Trumps out of politics.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 10:16 AM

Title: Re: Buddhāvataṃsaka Reflections

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

My random musings. Very sophomoric. You (Malcolm) needn't feel pressured to respond. Has anyone else read or tried to read the Flower Garland?

Malcolm wrote:

Clearly's translation is basically a CF. But, if one knows a primary language it is useful as a framework.

The Avatamsaka is about you, it's about your own state, not something far away...but then all Buddhist sutras, including those "inferior" words of the Buddha in the shravaka canon are as well.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 10:40 AM

Title: Re: Second impeachment

Content:

PeterC said:

Mitch knows well that if the rioters had got a little further into the congress before he was taken out, he would have been...taken out.

Malcolm wrote:

Yup, that was really my point.

As for our generals, they are, for the most part, educated men who take their oaths seriously...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 10:53 AM

Title: Re: Second impeachment

Content:

PeterC said:

While reading the news on this I stumbled across a few articles on the question of whether Chuck Norris was one of the putschists. This is, of course, nonsense. As we all know from his oeuvre, if Norris had been there, he would have blown up the white house, killed both the senate and the MAGA rioters, and defeated Pence in hand-to-hand combat before planting the flag of a newly-independent Republic of Texas in the smoking pile of rubble.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, only to be supplanted by Kevin Sorbo...

Irony is utterly lost on these people...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 9:18 PM

Title: Re: Second impeachment

Content:

tobes said:

Thoughts on the proposition: what happened last week was the best possible outcome?

If it stays all virtual/digital and abstract, then it lives on and festers.

But because they expressed a tiny bit of hard power, we all get to see that they actually have virtually none; this was the moment where they properly met with causation, after 4 years in pure idealism/fantasy.....and the effects which follow from their causes will splinter them away.

Dan74 said:

In a way, but are you not troubled by this alliance? FB, Twitter, the political establishment, etc are all on the same side. Add the former Secretaries of Defence and lefties retweeting Dubya and Cheney...

Then you have the millions of Trumpsters feeling disenfranchised, vilified and silenced..
I would not be ready to celebrate in such a situation..

There are no winners, when 49% of your compatriots are the losers.

Malcolm wrote:
You go girl, keep rooting for fascists.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 9:21 PM
Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State
Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Ah, on an unsurprising note some GOP opportunists already trying to use the situation to get some new anti-protest legislation going:

<https://theintercept.com/2021/01/12/capitol-riot-anti-protest-blm-laws/>

Malcolm wrote:
Yeah, sure, like that will ever get past a challenge in SCOTUS.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 10:00 PM
Title: Re: Second impeachment
Content:

Dan74 said:

In a way, but are you not troubled by this alliance? FB, Twitter, the political establishment, etc are all on the same side. Add the former Secretaries of Defence and lefties retweeting Dubya and Cheney...

Then you have the millions of Trumpsters feeling disenfranchised, vilified and silenced..
I would not be ready to celebrate in such a situation..

There are no winners, when 49% of your compatriots are the losers.

Malcolm wrote:
You go girl, keep rooting for fascists.

Dan74 said:
I'm not engaging with you anymore, Malcolm. No point. But feel free to continue hurling your insults if it makes you feel better.

Malcolm wrote:

That's perfectly fine, Dan, you say nothing of value. Buts it's not surprising that you live in a country that acted as bankers for Nazis.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 10:03 PM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State

Content:

Queequeg said:

The knuckleheads who stormed the Capitol should be processed through the criminal justice system with the banal humorlessness of a career prosecutor. The bozos need the message that Qanon is not some grownup version of Pokemon that's just shits and giggles.

The capitol police need to be investigated to find out why they treated this so differently than the BLM protests.

The profiles of the people getting arrested are pathetic.

We don't need a bunch of new policies or laws. Maybe some updates to existing laws to criminalize the behavior of these Trumpists and competent, workmanlike police investigations and prosecutions.

Last thing we need to do is turn this into some sensational cause.

PeterC said:

100% agree. There are a hundred things they can be charged with. You could get every one who invaded the capital with a felony murder charge for the policeman that they beat to death.

They do, however, need to start policing these people the same way they police other terrorist groups. FBI infiltration, seizure of funds, no fly lists, etc. The state has a lot of ways to apply pressure. They will need to keep up the pressure for decades. A lot of these people we have lost and won't get back.

Malcolm wrote:

If they even policed them the way they police Black people, that would be sufficient. I am quite sure no Rastafarian in jail is getting organic food.

Thus is all a symptom of white privilege. And yes, apply terrorism laws across the board.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 10:27 PM

Title: Re: How To Evaluate A Teacher?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The worst way to evaluate a teacher is to be concerned with how much they will benefit oneself. The best criteria is to observe how much they benefit others.

NatureTalk said:

As a thought experiment, let's imagine we're interested in the kinds of psychological topics which Buddhism addresses and so we want to find a teacher who can help us advance our understanding. We're open minded at this early point in our investigation so maybe the teacher we choose will be Buddhist, or maybe someone from some other tradition, we're not sure yet. How should we evaluate a teacher? How to choose one over another?

I know very little about Buddhism so I will leave other members to address this question within that realm. I know a bit more about what might generally be called "new age gurus" so I'll address that instead.

I've noticed that such teachers are typically surrounded by adoring students. The teacher is perhaps sitting on a pillow in the spotlight on stage, the center of attention and respect etc. Often the teacher is being somehow financially supported by the students, and thus doesn't need to get the kind of mundane job you and I might have.

When I see this very common setup I can't help but sometimes think to myself, "Geez, even I could be enlightened within that situation". I really don't feel sarcastic or cynical so much as I would be attracted to a different kind of teacher. Like for instance...

Let's say I'm working double shifts at a burger joint shoveling fries over the counter all day. It's greasy, it's loud, everyone's impatient, the boss is kinda demanding, the pay sucks. I'm getting worn out, grouchy and annoyed. And then I look over at my co-worker and....

They're having a good time. There's a relaxed smile on their face, they're humming some nice little tune, and seem entirely content with whatever anyone asks them to do. And their contentment isn't just today, it's not just this moment or that moment, but a consistent pattern every time they show up to work, for the whole shift. Nobody adores them, nobody supports them, they live in a dumpy little one bedroom apartment and ride a bike to work. And that's cool with them, no problem.

Ok, so this is perhaps a ridiculously demanding criteria for a teacher. Or maybe not. Don't we want some teacher who can help us be at peace with the real world, and not just ideal situations? Wouldn't the best evidence that a teacher can teach us how to be at peace in the real world be that the teacher themselves can do it?

What say you?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 11:28 PM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

In fact, no one has been deprived of their right of free speech. And private venues do not have to tolerate any speech they don't like at all.

Queequeg said:

One question that has been rattling around in my head is this:

What do we do about the misinformation that underlies this whole thing?

Being honest - if the election actually was rigged, mass resistance and even overthrow of the illegitimate government would be expected, and from an American Mythology perspective, the right thing to do. The rationale for revolution is written into our Declaration of Independence. Founders of the United States rallied in protest of "Taxation without Representation."

But the facts bear out that the allegations of a fraudulent election are utterly false.

What we have is a factual information dissemination failure.

There's a couple components to this as I can figure -

1. The demagogues who are spreading claims of massive fraud.
2. The failure of a large segment of people to be able to process information and discern fact from lies.

Limiting the speech of the demagogues is problematic because free speech is one of the values we define ourselves by. I'll leave that question open to debate about what we can do, but I'm personally against restricting speech as a matter of principle. There is a part of me that understands cutting off the speech of irresponsible people with large megaphones is an option, but in my view, that's a last resort and if we have to do that, then the game is long over.

That leaves the people. I don't know what to do about that. Fundamentally, I'm afraid most people lack the basic intelligence to process the deluge of information. I know that I am unable to do so and am experimenting with limiting consumption of information to give my long form thought processes a chance to work again. I don't know if that's a solution for others, I don't know if that's a solution for myself.

I put that question to the floor with this quote from Thomas Jefferson that reading now is disconcerting.

Wonderful is the effect of impudent and persevering lying. The British ministry have so long hired their gazetteers to repeat and model into every form lies about our being in anarchy, that the world has at length believed them, the English nation has believed them, the ministers themselves have come to believe them, and what is more wonderful, we have believed them ourselves. Yet where does this anarchy exist? Where did it ever exist, except in the single instance of Massachusetts? And can history produce an instance of a rebellion so honourably conducted? I say nothing of it's motives. They were founded in ignorance, not wickedness. God forbid we should ever be 20. years without such a rebellion. The people can not be all, and always, well informed. The part which is wrong will be discontented in proportion to the importance of the facts they misconceive. If they remain quiet under such misconceptions it is a lethargy, the forerunner of death to the public liberty. We have had 13 states independant 11 years. There has been one rebellion. That comes to one rebellion in a century and a half for each state. What country before ever existed a century and half without a rebellion? And what country can preserve it's liberties if their rulers are not warned from time to time that their people preserve the spirit of resistance? Let them take arms. The remedy is to set them right as to facts, pardon and pacify them. What signify a few lives lost in a century or two? The tree of liberty must be refreshed from time to time with the blood of patriots and tyrants. It is it's natural manure.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 13th, 2021 at 11:52 PM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

In fact, no one has been deprived of their right of free speech. And private venues do not have tolerate any speech they don't like at all.

Queequeg said:

I'm not commenting on the actions of FB, Twitter, AWS, etc. I'm asking a bigger question that may implicate those forums, but that's not what I'm presently concerned about. As far as that's concerned, I agree with you.

Malcolm wrote:

There are ways to limit harmful speech without violating anyone's rights. Shunning people to begin with. Encouraging news organizations to not give a platform to demagogues, etc. Encouraging cable companies to de platform Fox, etc. encouraging businesses to pull ads from Tucker, Hannity, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 12:05 AM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

There are ways to limit harmful speech without violating anyone's rights. Shunning people to begin with. Encouraging news organizations to not give a platform to demagogues, etc. Encouraging cable companies to de platform Fox, etc. encouraging businesses to pull ads from Tucker, Hannity, etc.

Queequeg said:

That's a big ask. There is so much money at stake that I have a hard time believing that the private sector can be relied on to lead like that. But maybe. Maybe Jefferson's idea that even an ignorant and dangerous mob is enough to keep the powerful stakeholders on the up and up. Maybe? We will see soon enough.

Malcolm wrote:

Oh, it's as basic as, would you object to your kid marrying a Republican? I sure as hell would.

There is a lot of money at stake, but we've seen that systematic targeting of businesses can eat into their profits, so eventually, they change their behavior. For example, boycotting Trump allies businesses, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 12:47 AM

Title: Re: Second impeachment

Content:

Dan74 said:

In a way, but are you not troubled by this alliance? FB, Twitter, the political establishment, etc are all on the same side. Add the former Secretaries of Defence and lefties retweeting Dubya and Cheney...

KathyLauren said:

Why is it troubling to you that those opposed to Trump would form an alliance?

Malcolm wrote:

Don't pay attention to Dan, he is not a stakeholder in this discussion. He is just a dude from Switzerland with little to no common sense, who likes to dabble in right wing politics while protesting he is actually a "liberal."

KathyLauren said:

Do you find it troubling that those opposed to sedition are a majority? I take it that you would rather have the opposition fragmented, so that they are easier to control. But democracy doesn't work that way. Alliances are natural when people and groups share a common interest. Getting rid of a traitor is certainly a worthwhile common interest.

Malcolm wrote:

Dan is clutching his pearls at the idea 49 percent of the country is being disenfranchised. Actually, a recent poll shows that 55% of Americans want Trump removed. Mitch has already signaled his approval of impeachment.

And as more details come out, more of the USA will turn against the GOP, that is those who were not already opposed to it. What people like Dan don't get is that the GOP is hopelessly destroyed itself, just as Lindsey Graham predicted.

What details? Details like Ayanna Pressley's panic button that was inexplicably removed from her office shows that there was a real plot afoot to harm members of congress, aided from the White House and by far-right cops in the Capitol Police:

As people rushed out of other buildings on the Capitol grounds, staffers in Pressley's office barricaded the entrance with furniture and water jugs that had piled up during the pandemic. Groh pulled out gas masks and looked for the special panic buttons in the office.

"Every panic button in my office had been torn out — the whole unit," she said, though they could come up with no rationale as to why. She had used them before and hadn't switched offices since then. As they were escorted to several different secure locations, Groh and Pressley and her husband tried to remain calm and vigilant — not only of rioters but of officers they did not know or trust, she said.

<https://www.bostonglobe.com/2021/01/13/nation/it-was-like-looking-evil-capitol-attack-through-eyes-massachusetts-delegation/>

The cop who killed himself just happened to be the son of one of Paul Manafort's partners. And Dan wants us to be nice to people who supported a coup. Sure Dan. GFY.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 1:14 AM

Title: Re: Second impeachment

Content:

Dan74 said:

it is troubling because it is done out of ulterior motives and will lead to detrimental results.

Malcolm wrote:

Dumb. As if an attempted coup in the US is not enough reason.

Dan74 said:

Going after the rioters, who acted on what millions had thought, is not going to solve this problem.

Malcolm wrote:

It's a good start. It sends a clear signal to the far right that we won't put up with this bullshit.

Dan74 said:

Side-lining Trump is a good thing, muzzling him or making a martyr out of him, will only energize his base. They will feel vindicated, as everything they had suspected of the elites comes to pass.

Malcolm wrote:

The man's mouth is a serious danger to Democracy. Juliette Kayyem is right: During his political career, Trump has given comfort to and conferred logistical coherence upon a coalition that will not die without him—but also will not thrive. The United States is a divided nation, but only a tiny fraction of Trump's more than 74 million voters showed up in Washington, D.C., eager to fight. The way to unite this country is to isolate acts of violence—and a leader who incites it—from legitimate expression. Trump was a north star for a certain kind of radical. Americans will be safer the more that star loses its shine.

<https://www.theatlantic.com/ideas/archive/2021/01/stop-domestic-terrorism-shut-down-its-leader/617640/>

Since you are basically a fifth columnist, I recommend that everyone here who is an American ignore you and shun you.

Dan74 said:

Will the unholy alliance of the various elements of the establishment

Malcolm wrote:

The establishment is not the problem here. The US Military leadership, the intelligence services like the CIA, law enforcement like the FBI, the Judicial branch, etc. have all shown remarkable and commendable resistance to Trump. The problem is people like Steve Bannon, Steven Miller, etc. who wish to dismantle democratic institutions, and opportunistic grifters like Jared Kushner, Pompeo, and so on. From the beginning, this group of people has sought to undermine the establishment, that is, the system of checks and balances through which we exercise our rights and privileges as citizens of the United States. This alliance is not unholy, this alliance is the basis of our Democracy. I am not going to sit here and let a fifth columnist like you go uncalled out for what you are clearly doing, acting as a fifth column voice.

Dan74 said:

In years to come, they will become a force to be reckoned with, much more so than the clowns we saw on the cameras in the Capitol.

Malcolm wrote:

Oh, we will deal with them alright. Many of those clowns, as you call them, are looking at 20 years of hard time for their "clownery." What you seem to not understand is that this was a coordinated plot to take down the US Government and install Trump as a dictator. He is done, and I hope sensible Americans here are done with you too.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 1:21 AM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State

Content:

Queequeg said:

I can't imagine someone who grew up at your dinner table could ever even befriend a Republican.

Malcolm wrote:

My late father was a Reagan Republican, I am so glad he passed in 2015 away before he could see all of this. It would have broken his heart. Since we live in Massachusetts, he mostly kept his mouth shut when talking about politics with his friends, many of them had no idea he was a conservative in the William Buckley mode.

Before all this, I would have tolerated a Republican in the family. Now, no chance, at least not one would supported Trump throughout all of the weeks following the 2020 election.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 1:33 AM

Title: Eisen on Free Speech and what the GOP gets wrong

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.politico.com/news/magazine/2021/01/13/trump-impeachment-incitement-free-speech-458884>

Unknown said:

[S]ome Republicans have retreated to makeshift claims that Trump cannot be impeached because his speech at the rally was somehow protected by the First Amendment. As the late Justice Antonin Scalia might say, that is pure applesauce. It fails on every level.

To start, it turns the First Amendment upside down: the Free Speech Clause exists to protect private citizens from the government, not to protect government officials from accountability for their own abusive statements. The Supreme Court has held that government officials and public employees enjoy substantially reduced First Amendment protection for speech relating to the performance of their official duties. As the saying goes, with great power comes great responsibility.

More important, any “free speech” defense gets the Impeachment Clause wrong. The articles of impeachment against Presidents Andrew Johnson, Richard Nixon, Bill Clinton, and Trump (from just a year ago) all arose, in part, from statements they had made. Yet in none of these cases did anyone assert that the First Amendment barred impeachment. That is unsurprising. Impeachment does not inflict punishment or inhibit speech; rather, it is forward looking, protecting the nation from a president whose continuance in office threatens the republic.

Accordingly, even if Trump’s statements would not count as “incitement” under cases limiting the government’s power to punish private speakers, the House is fully authorized to find that Trump's actions constitute a high crime and misdemeanor. It really isn't a close question. Trump's statements in fact incited the mob to besiege the Capitol—and were part of a broader effort to subvert the democratic process. If anything, the article of impeachment against Trump vindicates core First Amendment interests. The right to participate in our political process means little if the president can use violence and threats to overturn election results.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 1:39 AM

Title: Re: Is This A Tribal Site Or A Philosophy Site?

Content:

NatureTalk said:

Personally, I find such an intellectual process interesting and useful, but also pretty much impossible to explore at any length on tribal sites, that is, almost all sites. Lots of us enjoy poking holes in other people's ideas, but few wish to apply that process to all ideas, including their own. And don't challenge me on this idea of mine or I'll get really mad!! Kidding, kidding, a joke.

Malcolm wrote:

The purpose of studying Buddhist tenets is to eliminate proliferation, prapañca, and reification, samaropa, in line with the Buddha's observation that all phenomena arise dependently due to causes and conditions. The purpose of Buddhist practice is to apply that insight to oneself.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 1:49 AM

Title: Re: Prayers for family

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I have two family members with Covid, one on oxygen at home and one in the hospital, prayers, wishes and aspirations much appreciated.

Malcolm wrote:

You can do Dorje Gotrab for your family members. Recite it over water, give it to them to drink.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 2:14 AM

Title: Re: Some questions about Shingon

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Long ago, as a result of Saicho's Mahāyāna reformation.

Queequeg said:

That is terribly misleading. You are ignoring 1200 years of history.

Monks, including those in the Tendai order continued to observe much of the Vinaya, including celibacy, for centuries, up to the time that Oda Nobunaga burned the whole mountain down. The Bodhisattva Precepts did not supplant vinaya. Generally, they were in addition.

Malcolm wrote:

What are you talking about? Saicho cancelled bhikṣu ordination, calling for it to be replaced by a ten precept Mahāyāna ordination:

The Hossō school was in charge of the Bureau of Monks at that time, and so in a position to block Saichō's writings from reaching the court. In frustration, the normally reticent and humble Saichō became more extreme in his positions, until finally the noise reached the court in spite of the Bureau's attempts to cut him off. From an initial position advocating some minor changes in the ordination process, Saichō came to request that Mt. Hiei be declared a solely Mahāyāna temple exempt from having to use the Hīnayāna ordination precepts of the Ritsu or Vinaya school. He proposed that, instead, they take their ordination from a Mahāyāna scripture, the Fan wang ching, or 'Sūtra of Brahma's Net'. These precepts are referred to as the Bodhisattva precepts, and had always functioned as a complement to the traditional monastic precepts; they were never designed to replace them. Thus, the establishment found Saichō's position entirely inadmissible.

<https://www.oxfordreference.com/view/10.1093/oi/authority.20110803100436835>

Groner's book makes it pretty clear too.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 2:48 AM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

Since 2016 Trump increased his numbers with basically every minority, but lost a fairly big share of white men.

Malcolm wrote:

Nevertheless it was the minority vote in AZ, NV, and GA, that put Biden over the top.

Brunelleschi said:

Sure, perhaps I'm nitpicking. Interesting to hear from someone with that perspective. However, I'm thinking American democracy is more stable than that of Sri Lanka. Or not.

Malcolm wrote:

There was an unprecedented turnout among all demographics in the election, but especially among minorities, largely because of the work of Stacy Abrams, and other vote organizers.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 3:35 AM

Title: Re: Some questions about Shingon

Content:

Queequeg said:

This discussion really doesn't belong in this thread, but, again, more nuanced than you make it out.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure it does, since the full bhikṣu ordination only survives in Shingon.

Queequeg said:

Saicho envisioned a very strict code of behavior on Mt. Hiei, and in practice, monks were expected to observe the good behavior expected of monks throughout the Buddhist world. In the end he came around to a view that that monks who left the mountain to serve functions in society ought to take the full Vinaya precepts.

Malcolm wrote:

Not according to all sources I have read on the issue.

Queequeg said:

How that played out in practice is another story - but in general, it wasn't as if all of a sudden monks had no code of conduct. And moreover, Saicho hardly had the influence to be able to bring anything like Vinaya ordination to a halt.

Malcolm wrote:

Not him personally, but the debate he started with Nara establishment would eventually have the effect.

Queequeg said:

As I was saying, the process was gradual one that played out over centuries.

Malcolm wrote:

I didn't say other wise, nevertheless you might find this of interest:

https://www.jstor.org/stable/44362410?read-now=1&refreqid=excelsior%3A279fd0778872e6037847bf8b7081d12d&socuid=416dbf56-86d9-4b7e-bd29-b8d95ff6e6ae&socplat=email#page_scan_tab_contents

Even though Saicho's reformed ordination was not instituted in his lifetime, it was instituted within days of his death. This set the stage for the eventual decline of bhikṣu ordination and the Ritsu school, so that within 500 years, there were no bhikṣus left in Japan. Eison revived bhikṣu ordination by ordaining himself since there was no valid ordination lineage left in Shingon.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 3:43 AM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State

Content:

Queequeg said:

There's a lot of breathless talk about what's happening now. Its serious and its critical, but its not a national disaster.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, that's what they said in 1923. Ten years later it was 1933.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 3:56 AM

Title: Re: Some questions about Shingon

Content:

Queequeg said:

Saicho envisioned a very strict code of behavior on Mt. Hiei, and in practice, monks were expected to observe the good behavior expected of monks throughout the Buddhist world. In the end he came around to a view that that monks who left the mountain to serve functions in society ought to take the full Vinaya precepts.

Malcolm wrote:

Not according to all sources I have read on the issue.

Queequeg said:

I made a few statements there. Are you disputing everything or just some things or one thing?

Malcolm wrote:

I am disputing your contention that Saicho's abandonment of bhikṣu ordination did not lead to the inevitable decline of bhikṣu ordination in Japan.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 4:04 AM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State

Content:

Queequeg said:

As I wrote above, this is a civil and criminal matter. This is not a state of war. Far from it.

Malcolm wrote:

In the minds of the bat-shit crazy right, it is.

Queequeg said:

That's not to say the dangers are not real and not very serious. We should be treating this as a civil and criminal matter and not reacting like this is a mortal blow to our system. We need very serious, very sober people diligently and persistently working on this.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it is not a mortal blow. It is a serious blow.

Queequeg said:

We need to get to a point where we can give and take again. In a democracy that means we have to sit at a table and work through the problems even with people we find utterly distasteful. That's on the other side of dealing with this inflammation we are having now. If we can't do that, if that's not what we're aiming for, then the democracy IS over already and we're just walking dead.

Malcolm wrote:

This all began with Newt, Rush, and Roger (Ailes). It's reached the point where debate and counterargument are no longer effective. They've crossed the Rubicon.

This in no way can be laid at the door of the Democrats.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 4:30 AM

Title: Re: Is the Mahayana or vajrayana canon closed?

Content:

Dgj said:

Can anyone offer information?

Are any of the canons closed? For example the Chinese Tripitaka; is it a closed canon?

References would be greatly appreciated.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, in one sense. The canon of translated texts is closed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 4:53 AM

Title: Re: Some questions about Shingon

Content:

Queequeg said:

And moreover, Saicho hardly had the influence to be able to bring anything like Vinaya ordination to a halt.

Caoimhghín said:

Well, as the founder of his own sect, he does have that power in his own house:

<https://www.google.com/url?sa=t&source=web&rct=j&url=http://dharma-rain.org/wp-content/uploads/2016/04/Saicho-Writings-on-the-Bodhisattva-Precepts-Groner.pdf&ved=2ahUKEwi2h5Tz25nuAhUiFlkFHV0PBU0QFjAHegQIBRAB&usg=AOvVa w0bunvkRLUU4laoyKh1Ynax>

Queequeg said:

Actually, he didn't. That was why he was petitioning the government for permission to set up an ordination platform, which was granted.

My point was, even as Tendai monks may not have been receiving the Vinaya precepts, they were still expected to observe very strict codes of conduct. Maybe I should have been clear but I was trying to point out that monks were still observing strict codes of conduct long after Saicho, both in Tendai and in Japan in general, disputing Malcolm's terse and misleading remark.

Malcolm wrote:

My remark was not at all misleading. It was indeed terse. I made no comment on the strictness, or otherwise, of Tendai monks. That was your trip. For example, Hindu monks have very strict discipline, but they are not bhikṣus.

Queequeg said:

Malcolm, as we all know, is just argumentative most of the time.

Malcolm wrote:

In fact, you raised the argument, not me.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 5:01 AM

Title: Re: Some questions about Shingon

Content:

Queequeg said:

Then you're arguing with a straw man. I'm disputing your simplistic remark above that credits Saicho with the disappearance of the Vinaya precepts in Japan.

Malcolm wrote:

They lead to that, most certainly.

Queequeg said:

BTW, the article you cited above refers to a fellow who self ordained because he wasn't happy that the ordinations that were continuing to be given were not serious enough for him.

Malcolm wrote:

It is not that they were not serious ordinations, they were pure shams that were not carried out according to the Dharmaguptaka Vinaya procedures. By this point, Ritsu had already died out, etc.

Queequeg said:

Again, it was a while, and the result of a lot of steps by a lot of people that finally ended the vinaya ordinations in Japan. Sure, Saicho and Tendai had a part, but its misleading to say that Saicho was the reason it died out.

Malcolm wrote:

Pretty much, as the most important monastic establishment in close proximity to the capital, Kyoto, the absence of bhikṣu ordination there most certainly was the principle factor that lead to the decline of bhikṣu ordination in Japan during the Heian era.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 5:03 AM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State

Content:

Queequeg said:

As I wrote above, this is a civil and criminal matter. This is not a state of war. Far from it.

Malcolm wrote:

In the minds of the bat-shit crazy right, it is.

Queequeg said:

Christ, dude. Do you always have to turn everything into this?

Malcolm wrote:

May I point out that you ought to observe the yak on your own nose before you point out the pimple on mine?

In any case, there are people in this country who have actually declared war against it.

Meanwhile as we speak, the House is voting to impeach Trump.

So far, five GOP people are not gutless wonders.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 5:21 AM

Title: Re: Some questions about Shingon

Content:

Queequeg said:

"Are there only non monastic clergy (priests) in Shingon or is there also a full vinaya system?"

That question is actually a little confusing because there are monastics, and have been, who in general look and live as Buddhist monks, though they may not have received vinaya precepts. The categories assumed by OP don't line up well with the situation, and your response didn't offer clarity on that. I didn't make that clear either.

Malcolm wrote:

There is a monastic ordination in Shingon, it is once again largely symbolic, as I understand.

https://www.jstor.org/stable/44362396?read-now=1&refreqid=excelsior%3A5a1125219e3b4e48778d2c75aa993109&seq=17#page_scan_tab_contents

This offers more clarity on the situation with the evolution of Shingon Risshu.

M

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 5:31 AM

Title: Re: Some questions about Shingon

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

BTW, the article you cited above refers to a fellow who self ordained because he wasn't happy that the ordinations that were continuing to be given were not serious enough for him.

It is not that they were not serious ordinations, they were pure shams that were not carried out according to the Dharmaguptaka Vinaya procedures. By this point, Ritsu had already died out, etc.

Queequeg said:

That's what Eizon et al. seemed to think, and the article quotes a colorful remark about people running around an ordination platform. I'm going to take that with a grain of salt.

Ordination is as serious as one takes it. All the ritual formalities could be observed, and every effort made to impress the seriousness of the vows. Buddhist history is still littered with monks behaving badly even in places where we can assume ordination is the real deal.

Malcolm wrote:

The fact is that the bhikṣu ordination lineage in Japan was broken. Generally, Vinaydharas in India, Tibet, China, etc., would not accept such a lineage as valid.

Queequeg said:

Pretty much, as the most important monastic establishment in close proximity to the capital, Kyoto, the absence of bhikṣu ordination there most certainly was the principle factor that led to the decline of bhikṣu ordination in Japan during the Heian era.

That is a good point. But you're assuming a certain set of assumptions about the state of the monastic institutions and monastics in Japan in the Heian period. Are you depending on other sources for this position? Are you arguing that the formality of ordination doesn't qualify as the continuation of vinaya ordination?

Malcolm wrote:

An ordination rite depends on the rite being carried out correctly, by a sthavira who has been a monk for ten years, and a quorum of other senior monks. It is a complicated procedure, where the vows are gone through in blocks, and the aspirant accepting them. If it is not carried out correctly, it isn't valid.

In addition, in no school does one become a fully ordained bhikṣu in one day, other than the merit ordinations most Thai men undergo. Generally, one is ordained a śrāmana, a novice, then later, a bhikṣu, after living as novice under the direction of preceptor for some years.

"...people running around an ordination platform." I think this not merely hyperbole.

Queequeg said:

I can't site to a particular article to dispute you - just that from what I know of Buddhist history in Japan, Buddhism was still a robust and vital force in Japan up until the Tokugawa period with many robust monastic communities throughout the country.

Malcolm wrote:

But not, unfortunately, the community of bhikṣus. Monastic ≠ bhikṣus.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 7:12 AM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State

Content:

Queequeg said:

Senate Trial won't happen until after inauguration, if it can happen at all procedurally once Trump is out of office.

I'd like to see the benefits offered to former presidents revoked (pension, offices, etc.) and a ban from public office.

I wonder if they can block building a presidential library. I doubt it.

Malcolm wrote:

I think they should what they did to Nixon's...turn it into an exhibition of corruption. But let them build it, if they raise the money...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 7:13 AM

Title: Re: Some questions about Shingon

Content:

Queequeg said:

"Are there only non monastic clergy (priests) in Shingon or is there also a full vinaya system?"

That question is actually a little confusing because there are monastics, and have been, who in general look and live as Buddhist monks, though they may not have received vinaya precepts. The categories assumed by OP don't line up well with the situation, and your response didn't offer clarity on that. I didn't make that clear either.

Malcolm wrote:

There is a monastic ordination in Shingon, it is once again largely symbolic, as I understand.

https://www.jstor.org/stable/44362396?read-now=1&refreqid=excelsior%3A5a1125219e3b4e48778d2c75aa993109&seq=17#page_scan_tab_contents

This offers more clarity on the situation with the evolution of Shingon Risshu.

M

Queequeg said:

When you say symbolic, you're saying it doesn't follow the process you described above, and we're talking about a bhiksu ordination specifically?

Again, I'm afraid the way you comment on these matters fails to present an accurate picture of what actually goes on. There may be those on the forum who could offer a more definitive and informed explanation. As I understand, Shingon ordination even now is not just symbolic. Maybe if we are talking about a bhiksu ordination, non-

Japanese might conclude Shingon ordination is merely symbolic. But becoming a Shingon ordinand is not just a facile formality. It requires one to enter into a student-master relationship with a teacher and to undergo training. I don't know the exact course on Koya-san, but it takes considerable time and effort. And that's the similar for other sects of Japanese Buddhism.

Malcolm wrote:

Shingon monks marry and drink. As I said their bhiksu ordination is purely a formality.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 7:23 AM

Title: Re: Some questions about Shingon

Content:

Queequeg said:

"Are there only non monastic clergy (priests) in Shingon or is there also a full vinaya system?"

That question is actually a little confusing because there are monastics, and have been, who in general look and live as Buddhist monks, though they may not have received vinaya precepts. The categories assumed by OP don't line up well with the situation, and your response didn't offer clarity on that. I didn't make that clear either.

Malcolm wrote:

There is a monastic ordination in Shingon, it is once again largely symbolic, as I understand.

https://www.jstor.org/stable/44362396?read-now=1&refreqid=excelsior%3A5a1125219e3b4e48778d2c75aa993109&seq=17#page_scan_tab_contents

This offers more clarity on the situation with the evolution of Shingon Risshu.

M

Queequeg said:

When you say symbolic, you're saying it doesn't follow the process you described above, and we're talking about a bhiksu ordination specifically?

Again, I'm afraid the way you comment on these matters fails to present an accurate picture of what actually goes on.

Malcolm wrote:

We're talking about Dharmaguptaka bhiksu ordination as it exists in Japan, and as it exists at present, only in Shingon.

My comments are entirely accurate, as you will discover when you read a bit more about the history of Vinaya in Japan, how and why it disappeared.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 8:02 AM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 9:54 AM

Title: Re: Some questions about Shingon

Content:

Queequeg said:

Again, are only those who receive a vinaya ordination monks?

Malcolm wrote:

The only people who can bear the appellation bhiksu are those who have been ordained into one of three surviving vinaya lineages: Theravada, Mulasarvastivada, or Dharmaguptaka.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 10:43 PM

Title: Re: Buddhist Morality

Content:

NatureTalk said:

New user here, know little about Buddhism. Here's a thought experiment which may with your help expand my understanding.

Let's say I've stolen my neighbor's car. Unless you correct me, I'll assume for now that Buddhism would advise me to return it.

Let's say my father stole the car and gave it to me. I had nothing to do with the theft, but I know it was stolen and who the rightful owner is. Return the car?

Let's say my great grandfather stole the car, and it was passed it down through the family each generation. Now I own the car (must be an early Model T Ford!), I know it was stolen, and which family it was stolen from. Return the car?

Malcolm wrote:

If you know it's stolen, and you accept it, you participated in its theft just as much as the original thief.

This is the classical Buddhist position.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 10:57 PM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State

Content:

PeterC said:

Two things that you should always do when you engage counsel: sign an engagement letter, and pay them. Because if you don't, you may find yourself unable to enjoy privilege, which in this case would be highly entertaining. I'm sure trump did neither.

https://www.huffpost.com/entry/trump-wont-pay-rudy-giuliani-election-legal-work_n_5fffa763c5b6c77d85ecbe46

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 11:40 PM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Queequeg said:

Showing profound compassion for those unable to comprehend the gem of the doctrine of three thousand realms in a single moment of life, the Buddha wrapped it within the five characters [of Myoho-enge-kyo], with which he then adorned the necks of the ignorant people of the latter age.

-Kanjin no Honzon sho

That is no minor teaching. It is profoundly honest about our reality as human beings, realistic about the capacities of most people, practical in foregoing high expectations implicit in much of Buddhist teachings, and profoundly caring in being accessible to a wide range of people.

tkp67 said:

For as long as I can remember I have treated all beings as if they had the capacity to hold this gem even though they declined to do so. The inability to manifest the later was what attracted me to Nichiren's teaching in the first place because all previous vehicles and teachings have predicates and limits.

Malcolm wrote:

Because you so thoroughly investigated all of them.....riiiight.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 14th, 2021 at 11:58 PM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths
Content:

tkp67 said:

For as long as I can remember I have treated all beings as if they had the capacity to hold this gem even though they declined to do so. The inability to manifest the later was what attracted me to Nichiren's teaching in the first place because all previous vehicles and teachings have predicates and limits.

Malcolm wrote:

Because you so thoroughly investigated all of them.....riiiight.

tkp67 said:

Before I answer that succinctly why not define them. Do you mean Buddhist vehicle?

Malcolm wrote:

Of course.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 12:07 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Well, there you go.

Do people actually approach Buddhist sects with the idea of "this sect is X vehicle of the three vehicles?" I don't, because almost every single Buddhist sect is nominally Mahayana anyways and I'm no longer interested in Theravada Buddhism after a two year flirtation with it. "The three vehicles" are not a useful hermeneutic to classify contemporary Buddhist sects by in my opinion.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure they are: Theravadins by and large aspire to arhatship and pratyekabuddhahood. Mahāyānis aspire to full buddhahood.

Caoimhghín said:

If people do approach Buddhist sects with the idea of "this sect is X vehicle of the three vehicles," then which sect would constitute the pratyekabuddha vehicle sect?

Malcolm wrote:

Theravada.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 12:27 AM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State

Content:

Queequeg said:

I expect that the laws affecting online media will be revised early in the Biden administration. The easiest thing to do would be the revocation of immunity for entities that manage or host sites. That, however, is a very blunt remedy that would have deep and far reaching effects. Sites even like this one would have to carefully review moderation procedures. That might be going too far. A partial revocation of immunity, along with statutory procedures for parties to have content removed along with private means of enforcement could go a long way. Even that, though would have very stark effects.

It is likely the internet is going to change dramatically in the coming years.

Malcolm wrote:

Nothing is going to happen to Section 230, not in the near future, anyway. All that needs to happen is that existing laws are applied to White ISIS.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 12:28 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

So pratyekabuddhayāna and not śrāvakayāna? Whyso?

Malcolm wrote:

It includes both.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 12:29 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

He doesn't Buddhist vehicle. Definitely not IMO. Maybe I'm wrong. He's talking about contemporary sects and traditions.

tkp67 said:

Bingo.

Malcolm wrote:
Try answering the question.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 12:53 AM
Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths
Content:

tkp67 said:
Bingo.

Malcolm wrote:
Try answering the question.

tkp67 said:
I did. Non Buddhist vehicles. Your presumption was just that.

Your desires fulfill your view of me not my interpretation of reality. I am reportedly too misunderstood for that one. Right?

Malcolm wrote:
I see, so you examined a bunch of nonbuddhist traditions in order to establish that you have discovered the definitive buddhist practice, but without exploring other buddhist traditions, correct?

My presumption, just to correct you, was that you were asserting that you had explored other buddhist traditions. Why would I care about your exploration of Hinduism, Christianity, etc.?

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 9:09 PM
Title: Re: Buddhist Morality
Content:
Malcolm wrote:

Taking what is not given, i.e. stealing, is strictly defined in Buddhism as depriving another of something they believe they possess. Our notion that we stole land from Natives is rather modern, and involves concepts of property we introduced. Thus, I am not sure your shifting of goal posts is applicable.

NatureTalk said:
Ok, point taken, but perhaps we are getting a bit too clever?

It's true that the Indian concept of land ownership was quite different than the European concept. Nonetheless, the Indians lived off a particular area of land, and Europeans kicked them off and took over that area. To be fair, the Indians often did the same thing amongst themselves.

This thread is in part an exploration of the tribal nature of ideologies (not just Buddhism). We can observe how at the moment that the thought experiment became inconvenient we jumped from a seemingly universal peaceful agreement to a pattern of dodge and weave rationalizations, ie. a defense of the tribal territory. The exact same thing happened when I posed these questions on a Catholic forum.

I don't see this as an exclusive property of Buddhism or any other religion, but instead a universal property of all ideologies (as best I can tell). We attach ourselves to some collection of thoughts, and when that collection of thoughts is perceived to be under threat we circle the wagons and start moving towards conflict.

Typically we try to solve this by jumping from one ideology to another. If we see the Christians in conflict with each other, we turn up our noses and try some other religion. But the pattern of conflict seems to follow us where ever we go. What can we learn from that?

The thread might also be seen as an exploration of the limits of ideology. Europe was dominated by Christianity to a degree unimaginable to us today for 1,000 years before the European discovery of North America. 1,000 years. And yet that didn't stop there from being a very wide spread largely uncontested nearly universal consensus for genocide once some inconvenient people got in the way.

Ok, there's been some improvement along the way. We aren't that in to genocide now, but we're still content to sit on the stolen property without much concern. We don't even think of it as stolen property.

And let's not pick on religion here. Science culture philosophy claims we should accumulate new knowledge as fast as we possibly can, even though that process has aimed thousands of massive hydrogen bombs down our throats. We see the threat, and are largely bored by it.

Is morality a myth? Ok, too sweeping a question. But not that unreasonable.

Malcolm wrote:

But I already provided you with your answer: in India, rather than attempting to codify a social ethic, Buddhists typically relied on the treatises, called niti shastras, that already addressed such issues. Likewise, I mentioned that the answers for theses issues will not be found in Buddhism, but rather in a robust formulation of secular ethics, as HH Dalai Lama has indicated in an entire book he wrote on the inadequacy of all religious ethical traditions to deal with social justice issues and so on.

So, the answer to your question still remains as above,

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 9:13 PM

Title: Re: Buddhist Morality

Content:

NatureTalk said:

I'm not trying to attack Buddhism here, so nobody really needs to get defensive. I'm attempting to make a larger point about ALL ideologies, indeed all humans.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 9:18 PM

Title: Re: Buddhāvataṃsaka Reflections

Content:

tkp67 said:

It is paramount in the perspective of the LS but most importantly in the Nichiren tradition that this aspect is an active part of propagation not an ultimate destination or one risks the devil of the sixth heaven (self) to arise in its place.

Malcolm wrote:

"Freedom from all views" means that one has realized suchness. There is no danger of devaputra māra here.

tkp67 said:

That doesn't address how others who read that type of division will interpret it. This is one of the subtleties that seems to stand clear for me in the LS and Nichiren's teachings.

Malcolm wrote:

That's merely because you don't appreciate the subtlety of the heart sutra, and on and on. You picked a dharma gate, there are 83,999 others for you to examine.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 9:37 PM

Title: Re: Buddhāvataṃsaka Reflections

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

My random musings. Very sophomoric. You (Malcolm) needn't feel pressured to respond. Has anyone else read or tried to read the Flower Garland?

Malcolm wrote:

Clearly's translation is basically a CF. But, if one knows a primary language it is useful as a framework.

The Avatamsaka is about you, it's about your own state, not something far away...but then all Buddhist sutras, including those "inferior" words of the Buddha in the shravaka canon are as well.

tkp67 said:

To see it as that is a misinterpretation of what Nichiren was trying to teach. Since his teaching was meant to be ambiguous on the outside to all an adaptive to the relative causes, conditions and capacities of the practitioner this subtle type of snark is really systematic slander.

Malcolm wrote:

Tkp67, we are not in the Nichiren forum, and my comment was directed at any person who feels that among the words of the Buddha, some are superior and some are inferior. I was not talking about Nichiren at all. So take a breath.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 10:00 PM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

tkp67 said:

I did. Non Buddhist vehicles. Your presumption was just that.

Your desires fulfill your view of me not my interpretation of reality. I am reportedly too misunderstood for that one. Right?

Malcolm wrote:

I see, so you examined a bunch of nonbuddhist traditions in order to establish that you have discovered the definitive buddhist practice, but without exploring other buddhist traditions, correct?

My presumption, just to correct you, was that you were asserting that you had explored other buddhist traditions. Why would I care about your exploration of Hinduism, Christianity, etc.?

tkp67 said:

Why would you care about how the causes, conditions and capacity of others facilitates the propagation of buddhism in others?

You care enough to participate in the sub forum of the traditions that teach the importance of such thing and the necessity to recognize the conditioning involved in the perceived differentiation.

If one does not understand how these things fit within the narrative of the LS then perhaps you don't care about the Lotus and thus should avoid discussions that you don't care about. Trying to assert some lack on my part to understand this thing will exhaust you alone.

Malcolm wrote:

Again, the point is that you have not really explored Buddhism at all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 10:04 PM

Title: Re: Buddhāvataṃsaka Reflections

Content:

tkp67 said:

By evoking the gate I choose you draw the tradition I practice into the conversation.

Malcolm wrote:

No, I am talking about you, specifically, one who constantly pontificates about all Buddhists traditions having studied pretty much none of them in any depth at all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 10:20 PM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

tkp67 said:

If the Japanese held a teaching for this long does it not deserve as much?

Malcolm wrote:

The Peace Pagoda people are nice. I go to their stupa in Leverett, Ma sometimes. It has beautiful grounds and a sapling of the Bodhi tree there. I sit on the grounds and do my own practice, circumambulate the stupa. The monks and nuns there are nice. Right down the hill from them is a Theravada monastery.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 10:24 PM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

tkp67 said:

I expect direct, distinct answers in the context of the Nichiren tradition so you can demonstrate the compassion, equanimity, boundlessness and purity you propose you understand so succinctly.

Malcolm wrote:

The point is that you not studied anything outside it. That's ok, but it necessarily means your perspective on Dharma is very narrow. Not that my perspective is universal, I've never deeply studied Chan, etc., mainly because what appeals to me is Indo-Tibetan Buddhism. We have our own triumphalism, and it's equally as silly as your's.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 10:33 PM

Title: Re: Mahayana Sutras Lack Oral Transmission?

Content:

Bodhiquest said:

There's nothing much that would allow us to conclusively say that certain ideas and teachings were never given by the Buddha and were simply developed later by "philosophers" and the like.

Astus said:

That's not necessarily so. For instance, the concept of alayavijnana is a later development as we can see in the Mahayanasamgraha how Asanga has to explain himself for proposing its existence, and what scriptural sources he can present (abhidharma works and the Samdhinirmocana Sutra), while 5 centuries later Jinamitra quotes from several Mahayana sutras (see 'The Ālaya-Consciousness in Yogācāra Treatises' in the Introduction of 'A Compendium of the Mahayana' by Brunnholzl, vol 1). Similarly, where one finds the mention of ideas that are not found in the Agamas but only in abhidharma texts, unless we attribute such abhidharma treatises to the Buddha, the sutras using such concepts are necessarily later than the Agamas.

Malcolm wrote:

The answer is that there is an oral transmission for the Tibetan canon. Questions of the source of the Mahayana are adequately answered in traditional accounts. Text critical scholarship is fine, but it has nothing to do with the aim of Mahayana.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 10:36 PM

Title: Re: Buddhist Morality

Content:

NatureTalk said:

I'm not trying to attack Buddhism here, so nobody really needs to get defensive. I'm attempting to make a larger point about ALL ideologies, indeed all humans.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and?

NatureTalk said:

The question, for all ideologies, is do we actually believe them? Here's an example from elsewhere which may help illustrate.

On the anniversary of the Hiroshima atomic attack the Pope went to Japan and gave a speech on the subject, outlining Catholic moral doctrine on such issues. The Pope's a nice guy, and he means well, but.... He didn't ask anybody to do anything specific.

So I came up with a specific suggestion which I then tried to sell online. If each Catholic donated $1 per year that would raise a billion dollars a year to bring further attention to the subject of nuclear weapons, as seen from the Catholic perspective. Absolutely no interest, none whatsoever.

This naturally raises the question, do Catholics believe the Pope when he says nuclear weapons are an important threat? Does the Pope even believe that? Or is it just pleasing moral theory which is fun to say?

Malcolm wrote:

This just means your efforts at getting your message out were inadequate. Did you actually reach a billion people? A million? How can you say a billion Catholics were not interested in your specific campaign if you did not manage to reach a billion Catholics?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 10:43 PM

Title: Re: Buddhist Morality

Content:

NatureTalk said:

What is the appropriate (according to Buddhism) relationship of an individual American Buddhist to the fact that they are likely living on stolen property?

Malcolm wrote:

But we aren't. If I own a house on the East Coast of the US, I have a deed, which shows a line of ownership which will go back to one of the kings of England. So, not stolen according to our system of jurisprudence. For example, the town I live in was divided up into forty acre lots, which were given to veterans of the French-Indian war after it ended in 1764. These plots were awarded by the crown. And actually, the area where I live was not claimed by any tribe. All the tribes lived down near the Connecticut River, not up in the hills. It was territory where hostile tribes would fight each other, kind a no mans lands between the Mohawks of the Hudson River valley in New York and Nonotuck Tribes.

NatureTalk said:

Buddhist ethical theory is about personal conduct,
There you go, that's all I'm saying. Personal conduct in relation to the environment which we inhabit. Relevant. On topic. Or so it seems to me.

Malcolm wrote:

You missed the point. Buddha's teachings are not equipped to handle social justice issues. They provide no comment or remedies. When the Buddha's relatives were carried off into slavery he sat under a dead tree and watched, impassive, from a distance.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 10:54 PM

Title: Re: What Is The Nature Of Thought?

Content:

NatureTalk said:

If division and conflict arise primarily from the content of thought, then some flavor of philosophy would seem suggested to correct the damaged content..

Malcolm wrote:

Holding onto views does not correct other views, it merely causes more views. Freedom from views is the only corrective to views.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 11:00 PM

Title: Re: Buddhist Morality

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This just means your efforts at getting your message out were inadequate. Did you actually reach a billion people? A million? How can you say a billion Catholics were not interested in your specific campaign if you did not manage to reach a billion Catholics?

NatureTalk said:

I agree that all problems described above are entirely a result of my own personal failings and poorly implemented tactics and that in no case could any of the issues described in any way be a function of any kind of imperfection in any tribal society, philosophy, religious authority or anything at all except me. Amen.

Malcolm wrote:

You just picked a bad example. Don't hate the player, hate the game. Reminder, you brought the game here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 11:10 PM

Title: Re: Buddhist Morality

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

in India, rather than attempting to codify a social ethic, Buddhists typically relied on the treatises, called niti shastras, that already addressed such issues.

NatureTalk said:

I hear you to be saying that somebody (the authors of the niti shastras?) codified morality, and then most others decided not to think such issues through for themselves but to rely instead on the authority of the treatises? Is this a fair summary? If yes, then much the same thing would seem to have happened in the West, and probably pretty much everywhere else, such is the human condition.

Malcolm wrote:

I guess you don't understand much about classical Indian civilization, it's culture and philosophy. You might try reading Coursebook in Indian Philosophy first, and come back and tell us about how little Indians thought about such issues, 'k?

NatureTalk said:

Likewise, I mentioned that the answers for these issues will not be found in Buddhism, Not arguing, because again I know little about Buddhism. Just a tad confused because earlier in the thread there seemed to be a consensus that Buddhism did provide moral guidance.

Malcolm wrote:

For some issues, not for others. In other words, he did not provide a comprehensive moral catechism. He provided moral guidance only for personal actions, and really did not discuss social issues very much.

NatureTalk said:

but rather in a robust formulation of secular ethics, as HH Dalai Lama has indicated in an entire book he wrote on the inadequacy of all religious ethical traditions to deal with social justice issues and so on.

I am of course unfamiliar with the book.

Malcolm wrote:

It is called Beyond Religion. In it, he argues, and I agree, that all religions are inadequate when it comes to providing comprehensive ethical guidance in a diverse world. There he argues strongly for secular ethics removed from religious contexts.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 11:25 PM

Title: Re: Buddhist Morality

Content:

NatureTalk said:

Ok, posts being killed by moderators now. We've entered the realm of too inconvenient to bear I guess. No worries, that always happens.

Malcolm wrote:

More likely, bellicose stranger walks into bar and expresses surprise when regulars begin to object...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 11:28 PM

Title: Re: What Is The Nature Of Thought?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Freedom from views is the only corrective to views.

NatureTalk said:

Ok thanks, this is interesting. If the problem we are trying to address arises from thought itself, and if all views are made of thought, then freedom from views seems a sensible corrective. But then, this becomes yet another view, and we're back in the same old game.

Malcolm wrote:

No, actually this is not the case. Freedom from views is something one realizes, it's not a position one holds.

As Nagarjuna puts it, "if I had a thesis, I would be at fault, since I alone have no thesis, I alone am free of fault."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 11:44 PM

Title: Re: Buddhist Morality

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Don't hate the player, hate the game. Reminder, you brought the game here.

NatureTalk said:

I don't hate anybody here, just to be clear. Really I don't. I'm just not rewarding automated rejectionism with my time, that's all. However, every post and every thread is a fresh start.

Malcolm wrote:

Use better examples, that's my advice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 15th, 2021 at 11:48 PM

Title: Re: What Is The Nature Of Thought?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

No, actually this is not the case.

NatureTalk said:

Of course not.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, of course not. Someone here recommended you might be interested in Madhyamaka. When you study that subject, you will understand the basis for mine and Peter's comments. Until then, probably not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 16th, 2021 at 12:11 AM

Title: Re: Buddhist Morality

Content:

Jeff H said:

If modern America can eventually admit to and atone for its inherent racism, that will be the moral answer to our ancestors' sins in a Buddhist sense.

Malcolm wrote:

And, karma is unerring. To the extent that Americans perpetuate white supremacy, to that extent they continue to reproduce the errors of the past.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 16th, 2021 at 12:12 AM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Brahma said:

there is no higher gift than the gift of Love. Om.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure there is—the gift of Dharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 16th, 2021 at 12:23 AM

Title: Re: What Is The Nature Of Thought?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Freedom from views is something one realizes, it's not a position one holds.

NatureTalk said:

To counter in a more constructive manner, I would propose that freedom from views is something one experiences. It comes, and it goes, like everything else.

Malcolm wrote:

You don't really understand what freedom from views really means here.

Do you actually want to understand, or are you just passing through? Let me know, since that will determine whether I concern myself with you any longer.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 16th, 2021 at 12:54 AM

Title: Re: What Is The Nature Of Thought?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

You don't really understand what freedom from views really means here.

NatureTalk said:

I understand only that just about every one of your posts seems to be about how you understand and I don't.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, given that I have studied and practice Buddhadharma since 1985, and you haven't studied or practiced it at all...you do the math.

I can see however you just want to blather on, so, enjoy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 16th, 2021 at 1:35 AM

Title: Re: Buddhist Theory of Momentariness - Sources for Studying

Content:

Manjushri said:

I've been interested in the concept of Time

Malcolm wrote:

In Abhidharma, the basic unit of time the duration of a thought. That is the basis for calculating time in Buddhadharma in the Indian tradition. Not sure about the Theravadin tradition.

See my blog post here:

<http://www.bhaisajya.net/2008/10/time-in-tibetan-medicine.html>

So basically, there are 75 moments in one second. That is the smallest unit of time in the Indian Buddhist tradition.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 16th, 2021 at 2:00 AM

Title: Re: What Is The Nature Of Thought?

Content:

NatureTalk said:

You know, 99% of humanity are not academics, so....

Malcolm wrote:

99 percent of humans will also never transcend samsara in this lifetime, so there is that...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 16th, 2021 at 2:25 AM

Title: Re: Buddhist Morality

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Here's a Buddhist term for you to look up: Prapanca

Malcolm wrote:

It's been suggested already, but to no avail.

A drunk and bellicose stranger walks into bar, sits down, and starts raving about shit no one in the bar cares about. Eventually, after being ignored by the regulars, offended that no one offers to buy him a beer, the stranger lurches unsteadily onto his feet and heads out to find another bar.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 16th, 2021 at 2:39 AM

Title: Re: What Is The Nature Of Thought?

Content:

Archie2009 said:

NatureTalk, a good academic introduction to Nagarjuna's thought would be Jan Westerhoff's Nagarjuna's Madhyamaka: A Philosophical Introduction.

NatureTalk said:

Thank you. If you, or anyone, can reference a non-academic introduction that could be helpful as well.

If Nagarjuna can only be understood by academics, ok, to each their own of course, but personally I don't really believe in the value of any philosophy which can only be communicated to academics. You know, 99% of humanity are not academics, so....

jake said:

I agree, I also think that when I'm in China all the signs should be in English. Or in France, so many tourists come to France but all the signs and menus are in French. It's just not something I really believe has value. If they really wanted to have visitors and tourists then everything in their country should be in plain English, then the tourists don't have to make any effort at all. Right?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 16th, 2021 at 3:37 AM

Title: Re: Buddhist Morality

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

A drunk and bellicose stranger walks into bar....

NatureTalk said:

A pompous know it all strides arrogantly in to a bar, demands the stage, and begins to lecture everyone about only he knows the real Buddhism, thus distracting everyone from what could have been an intelligent conversation.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, stranger, I've been standing at this bar already when you walked in, and have been standing here since it opened, pompous know-it-all that I may be, and in all likelihood, I will be standing here long after you've decided to move on...so there is that. But one thing I will tell you, and it will be true, I know more about Buddhism than you do.

As for patting yourself on the back for your intelligence, did it ever occur to you announcing your arrival like this was immediately antagonistic?

<https://www.dharmawheel.net/viewtopic.php?p=565190#p565190>

Now, I've pointed out to you that the Buddha did not really address the issues you want to address, but if you wish to see how they explored by Buddhists, I direct you to the <https://blogs.dickinson.edu/buddhistethics/> where you may, if you choose, educate yourself on the subject.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 16th, 2021 at 7:37 PM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

tkp67 said:

I expect direct, distinct answers in the context of the Nichiren tradition so you can demonstrate the compassion, equanimity, boundlessness and purity you propose you understand so succinctly.

Malcolm wrote:

The point is that you not studied anything outside it. That's ok, but it necessarily means your perspective on Dharma is very narrow. Not that my perspective is universal, I've never deeply studied Chan, etc., mainly because what appeals to me is Indo-Tibetan Buddhism. We have our own triumphalism, and it's equally as silly as your's.

tkp67 said:

No.

There is no triumphalism in a vehicle regardless of tradition from the perspective of the buddha. This is simply a human construct.

Malcolm wrote:

So now you are speaking from the perspective of a buddha? You really do need to go back and examine your posts.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 16th, 2021 at 7:40 PM

Title: Re: Buddhāvataṃsaka Reflections

Content:

tkp67 said:

By evoking the gate I choose you draw the tradition I practice into the conversation.

Malcolm wrote:

No, I am talking about you, specifically, one who constantly pontificates about all Buddhists traditions having studied pretty much none of them in any depth at all.

tkp67 said:

If you want to claim that buddhism is somehow proprietary have at it. If my actions are inappropriate from the perceptive of the teachings or teachers I follow I suggest you correct me.

Vague platitudes that don't reveal fault but simply point to it without distinction while nothing more than unproductive conceptual proliferation is also provisional.

If you are going to claim fire at least prove there is smoke, it makes for a much more interesting use of bandwidth imho.

Malcolm wrote:

I can't correct you, only you can correct you. But I suggest you might do thus by studying with some teachers outside your tradition for a change.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 16th, 2021 at 7:53 PM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Sure there is—the gift of Dharma.

Brahma said:

"It doesn't matter whether one calls oneself a Buddhist or not a Buddhist. The Dharma is Love." ~ H.E. Garchen Rinpoche

This can be applied to Zen Buddhism as well as the mind of Enlightenment is a mind that is Only full of Love. Everyone's original state was once Love, and returning to it and Advancing to a stage of non-regressive Enlightenment is the goal. I could have said the Dharma is Love myself, but it is good to feel it from a Powerful Source as well.

Malcolm wrote:

Neither love nor compassion are strong enough to uproot the causes of suffering, according to Dharmakirti. YMMV

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 17th, 2021 at 2:16 AM

Title: Re: Buddhāvataṃsaka Reflections

Content:

Queequeg said:

He ought to start by understanding his own professed path.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, that is a desiderata, certainly.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 17th, 2021 at 2:19 AM

Title: Re: Buddhism and missionary work

Content:

Alastair said:

so why have I never noticed Buddhists doing missionary work? Do Buddhists do that?

Malcolm wrote:

Because, you can't convert people to Dharma. All you can do is hold it up as something they might be interested in, the rest is up to them.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 17th, 2021 at 2:22 AM

Title: Re: My problem with Enlightenment

Content:

Vinc said:

First Problem: When "I" don't exist, why should "I" pursue enlightenment then?

Malcolm wrote:

Where did the Buddha say you don't exist?

Vinc said:

Second Problem: How can enlightenment be permanent?

Malcolm wrote:

In the same way a burnt seed is not viable, and never will be.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 18th, 2021 at 12:02 AM

Title: Re: Is This A Tribal Site Or A Philosophy Site?

Content:

NatureTalk said:

I must honestly report that I don't find this consistent pattern of little lectures from almost every member to be very interesting at all, and if that's what Buddhism is, it seems true I'm in the wrong place.

Malcolm wrote:

The problem may lie with you rather than with Buddhism. Just something for you to chew on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 18th, 2021 at 1:50 AM

Title: Re: Accounting for the Chinese Destruction of Tibet

Content:

Matt J said:

If Tibetan Buddhism has some of the highest teachings, advanced practitioners, etc. including powerful tantric practices, how do Tibetan sources account for the Chinese invasion and destruction of Tibet?

Malcolm wrote:

They have a variety of answers. Shugden is one of the main ones. Because the Tibetan Govt. was dominated by the Shugden faction, the reasoning goes, Palden Lhamo and Nechung abandoned the Tibetan state.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 18th, 2021 at 2:48 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Queequeg said:

Strictly speaking, though, I think when you say something like that to people who adhere more strictly to Madhyamaka, they will very strongly disagree... "There are only two truths, not three!" I believe you've participated in some of these arguments on DW.

Malcolm wrote:

Even the Buddha said there were only two truths, not three. But we had that convo already, people can look it up.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 18th, 2021 at 8:57 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Hi Mark

illaraza said:

Therefore, contrary to Malcolm's assertion, Nagarjuna's did postulate Three Truths in his Tetralemma but they differ slightly from Tientai's Three Truths. According to Nichiren, Tientai's Three Truths are the "unification of the Three Truths".

Malcolm wrote:

I appreciate your attempt at an argument, but fact is that Nagarjuna only discusses two truths. There isn't a single citation from Nagarjuna which you can use to justify such a position. The Buddha himself rejects to idea that there is a third truth. I cited the sutra passage in previous discussion with QQ.

The fourfold negation is not a formulation of three truths. It is a step-by-step negation of erroneous propositions about things. It is not in fact a postulate; Nagarjuna has no postulates. His dialectic is strictly negative. For Nagarjuna, there are only veridical perceptions, or false perceptions. There are no perceptions that are simultaneously true and false. Hence, there is no third truth, punto cerrado.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 18th, 2021 at 9:19 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

illaraza said:

Nagarjuna stated in his treatise, the Great Perfection of Wisdom,

Malcolm wrote:

This text is not by Nagarjuna. It is too large to go unnoticed by Indian scholars, and no Indian scholar in the Madhyamaka school mentions it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 18th, 2021 at 9:49 AM

Title: Re: Accounting for the Chinese Destruction of Tibet

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

They have a variety of answers. Shugden is one of the main ones. Because the Tibetan Govt. was dominated by the Shugden faction, the reasoning goes, Palden Lhamo and Nechung abandoned the Tibetan state.

n8pee said:

Isn't there also just the sad fact that a culture focused on spiritual pursuit will always lose to a more militaristic focused culture? We're in samsara after all.

Malcolm wrote:

It's not like that. A corrupt country always plants the seeds of its own demise, and Tibet, politically speaking, was extremely corrupt.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 18th, 2021 at 11:18 AM

Title: Re: "Please allow me to introduce myself..." - Rolling Stones

Content:

tony_montana said:

Hi Everyone,

I'm new here and would love to say hi to everybody. I have a great interest in Vajrayana. Nothing more to add at this point, just that I hope to have great interactions with everybody.

Warm regards,
Tony

Malcolm wrote:
Great song.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 18th, 2021 at 9:28 PM

Title: Re: Accounting for the Chinese Destruction of Tibet

Content:

Brahma said:

Bad people who wanted to create a materialistic atheistic government wanted to wipe out the power and strength of a Spiritually motivated civilization. Luckily Tibet is still holding on. You think Bodhisattvas don't suffer? You think it's all some kind of deserved karma? Reevaluate your perception of cause and effect, and of this extremely unfair world. Only compassion and Maitri is fair, so fully turn to that, and never let go of Buddhism.

Malcolm wrote:

But it wasn't a spiritually motivated civilization. Tibet was in a state of constant internecine warfare, tribe against tribe, school against school, monastery against monastery, region against region. Time to take off the rose colored spectacles.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 18th, 2021 at 9:29 PM

Title: Re: Accounting for the Chinese Destruction of Tibet

Content:

Brahma said:

...a Spiritually motivated civilization...

PeterC said:

...is really not what Tibet was at the end. One would need to ignore history to believe that. The Tibetan state contained the Dharma like gold encased in dirt.

Malcolm wrote:

Also, not in the beginning or the middle.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 18th, 2021 at 9:41 PM

Title: Re: State supported Buddhism and engaged Buddhism

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

In the West, which has never had a tradition of state support, "engaged Buddhism" also can serve as a way of connecting Buddhist centers and other institutions with society at large.

Malcolm wrote:

The best thing engaged Buddhists can do is support democracy and secular ethics.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 18th, 2021 at 10:11 PM

Title: Re: Accounting for the Chinese Destruction of Tibet

Content:

Brahma said:

Look at the Government in the U.S.A. . What is here? Meat eating on the level of genocide. Abortion. WMDs. But we all know, sense, feel, and understand that this Nation should not be invaded or overthrown by anyone, and that there is still and will always be hope for it. The same is for Peaceful Buddhist Tibet, which can still be mined for Buddhist Dharma like you say by the honest Practitioner with the craftsmanship of education. Om.

Malcolm wrote:

The USA was founded as a slave-owning nation bent on exterminating an indigenous population. From whom did the Chinese get the idea they could do the same? The USA. Concentration camps, systematic genocide, the use of incarcerated labor were all modeled by our country first.

Our only saving grace is democracy, which has slowly allowed us to transcend these sordid origins. But as Trumpism shows us, our republic is fragile and easily damaged.

Tibet was an aristocratic autocracy where the nobility could injure the common folk with absolute impunity. There was no justice system, so while a thief might lose a hand or an eye, aristocrats just became more and more wealthy. The amount of child abuse in Tibetan monasteries was staggering, the amount of rape in Tibetan culture was likewise staggering. Murder was very common. Cruelty to animals was commonplace. Literacy was no more than 15 percent of the population. Now, was Tibet an incredible civilization with many redeeming qualities as well? Certainly, but all we see is the literary culture of Tibet. We do not see the Tibet of the average person, whose voices are only rarely heard in the writings of the elite scholars and yogis whom we admire so much.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 18th, 2021 at 10:57 PM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

tkp67 said:

Say what you like about Nichiren but the Lotus is still established and being practiced in Japan. Japanese buddhism has carried that nation to prosperity in a way that is reflective of the blessing of the Lotus itself.

Malcolm wrote:

That's a nice declaration of faith, but that's about it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 19th, 2021 at 1:38 AM

Title: Re: Accounting for the Chinese Destruction of Tibet

Content:

Matt J said:

I suppose one could flip the question as ask why it lasted as long as it did...

Malcolm wrote:

It's not like that. A corrupt country always plants the seeds of its own demise, and Tibet, politically speaking, was extremely corrupt.

Well, in a sense it didn't. There were various periods in Tibetan history, and "Tibet" as a monolith, is a western invention. So, many kingdoms in Tibet rose and fell, and along with them, the fortunes of various schools. The demise of these kingdoms was always tied to corruption somehow.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 19th, 2021 at 2:04 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

haha said:

What is Buddha nature? That is not talked at least in Mulamadhyamakakarika. I have no idea where it fits in eightfold negation or in fourfold negation.

Malcolm wrote:

"Whatever is the nature of the tathāgata, that is the nature of the world; as the tathāgata has no nature, also the world has no nature."

I think that sums the MMK position on buddhanature pretty well.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 19th, 2021 at 2:42 AM

Title: Re: Response to PadmaVonSamba

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

I could have corrected you without implying that misunderstanding Ven Nagarjuna leads to hell. Sorry.

Malcolm wrote:

But indeed, it is a kind of Buddhist hell to misunderstand Nāgārjuna...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 19th, 2021 at 3:21 AM

Title: Re: Response to PadmaVonSamba

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

I'm also concerned about setting a precedent. It only takes a little bit to have everyone threatening hell against each other for various frivolous reasons related to personal disputes.

Malcolm wrote:

You know what they say: Heaven for the climate, hell for the company.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 19th, 2021 at 5:50 AM

Title: Re: Is Nostalgia and Enjoying Happy Memories Okay in Buddhism?

Content:

Roro said:

The whole “live in the moment and don’t dwell in the past” thing can be a concern of mine regarding nostalgia.

Malcolm wrote:

Could be a fake buddha quote.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 19th, 2021 at 6:03 AM

Title: Re: Namkhai Norbu lineage

Content:

Atton said:

Hello there

I gave another student of Chogyal Namkhai Norbu a lung of a Longsal text.

Malcolm wrote:

Good luck with that. Let us know how it goes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 19th, 2021 at 10:47 AM

Title: Re: Are there any forms of Buddhism where ordination/priesthood does not require a 4 year degree?

Content:

Snowbeast said:

So this is just something I have been interested in for a while. Does anyone know if there are any schools of Buddhism that do not require a four year degree for ordination? It seems like most Japanese schools do, Jodo Shinshu definitely does, and in Jodo Shu the training for monks is equivalent to a four year degree. Are there any schools that do all of the training for becoming a monk or priest within the temple? Are there any Buddhist varieties that require a long training session but it is not related to western style four year education? If anyone could explain how ordination works in their particular school it would be very interesting to hear.

Malcolm wrote:

Tibetan Buddhism schools do not require a four year degree. Just celibacy.

Chaz said:

For the title "Lama" you'd have to do a three-year retreat. That's Kagyu, BTW.

Malcolm wrote:

That has nothing to do with ordination.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 19th, 2021 at 8:11 PM

Title: Re: Are there any forms of Buddhism where ordination/priesthood does not require a 4 year degree?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

There is freedom of religion in Japan; anyone can shave their head, order some robes online, and call themselves a monk.

Apart from that, there are also "ordination mills" that promise to make you a prelate in a few months, usually for several thousand USD. They often have titles that resemble the kanji for traditional priest/monk (僧侶) but are subtly, cleverly different. They might have a name that resembles one of the thirteen traditional schools, but call themselves a "協会" (church) instead of a "sect" (宗). There are other tricks out there too.

There are also other "short cuts" into the traditional schools, but they are generally ment for children or relatives of traditional priests and may be hard for a layperson to make use of.

It also depends on the sect. Some are more stringent about training requirements than others.

But despite the fact that the most "orthodox" route involves a 4-year university and time training at a temple under a priest, the ordination situation in Japan can be described as "eclectic." I personally know of one "self ordained" Jodo Shinshu monk who has a stable position at a respected medium-sized temple staffed by fellow monks who followed the more orthodox route, and he seems to be accepted by the institution as legitimate. I am not sure how he pulled that off.

Malcolm wrote:

These people are not bhiksus

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 19th, 2021 at 9:04 PM

Title: Re: Are there any forms of Buddhism where ordination/priesthood does not require a 4 year degree?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

These people are not bhiksus

FiveSkandhas said:

There is one traditional sect, the Risshu, that follows the Dharmaguptaka Vinaya quite strictly. Another traditional sect, the Shingon-Risshu, is also Vinaya-oriented, perhaps to a lesser degree than the former. Both are quite small.

Malcolm wrote:

Does the former still actually exist? I know it was one of the Nara schools. Has the Dharmaguptaka Ordination been reintroduced from China? Shingon Risshu is a formality, as far as I know, and it is a broken ordination lineage in any case.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 19th, 2021 at 10:28 PM

Title: Re: Sakya Pandita's Ordinary Wisdom

Content:

Könchok Thrinley said:

Hi,

does anyone have any experience/thoughts on this book called Ordinary Wisdom?
<https://wisdomexperience.org/product/ordinary-wisdom/>

I have an old czech translation of the Treasury of Good Advice and would be quite interested in hearing people, how applicable the teachings are and if they have any experience with it and would recommend it. The Czech translation at least is really nicely translated into real verses, just it can be a bit harder to interpret thanks to it. So, what about the English version, how is it?

Malcolm wrote:

It's quite good, since it also contain the commentary.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 19th, 2021 at 10:30 PM

Title: Re: Are there any forms of Buddhism where ordination/priesthood does not require a 4 year degree?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

There is one traditional sect, the Risshu, that follows the Dharmaguptaka Vinaya quite strictly. Another traditional sect, the Shingon-Risshu, is also Vinaya-oriented, perhaps to a lesser degree than the former. Both are quite small.

Malcolm wrote:

Does the former still actually exist? I know it was one of the Nara schools. Has the Dharmaguptaka Ordination been reintroduced from China? Shingon Risshu is a formality, as far as I know, and it is a broken ordination lineage in any case.

FiveSkandhas said:

The Risshu Sect still exists at Toshodaiji Temple in Nara. They may have a few subsidiary temples still but I am not sure. They supposedly practice the full Dharmaguptaka Vinaya and train monks in the tradition at an institution called the Kaigakuin. I don't know whether their Vinaya practice has remained unbroken since it was introduced in the 8th century by the Chinese monk Jianzhen.

As you note the Shingon-Risshu was established based self-ordination verified by miraculous signs. An elaborate rationalization for this based on several Mahayana Sutras exists, and some consider it a kind of Japanese equivalent to Terma Revelation, but the legitimacy of this lineage is certainly questionable from a continental and perhaps even Japanese perspective.

Malcolm wrote:

It's questionable from the point of view of the three vows. Each set of vows has its own procedures. There is no bhiksu ordination rite prescribed in any Mahayana Sutra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 19th, 2021 at 10:33 PM

Title: Re: Wait, so Karma and Rebirth don't exist?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

The precise mechanics of Karma are considered one of the "four imponderables" (Acinteyya).

Therefore, o monks, do not brood over [any of these views] Such brooding, O monks, is senseless, has nothing to do with genuine pure conduct (s. ādibrahmacariyaka-sīla), does not lead to aversion, detachment, extinction, nor to peace, to full comprehension, enlightenment and Nibbāna, etc.

-Samyutta Nikaya 56

This has not stopped countless thinkers from formulating theories about karma, and such theorizing may fall outside the scope of the imponderables. Even so, it is a thorny topic to speculate too deeply upon, IMHO.

Malcolm wrote:

Buddha declared very simply what karma is: karma is volition and what proceeds from volition.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 19th, 2021 at 10:37 PM

Title: Re: Sakya Pandita's Ordinary Wisdom

Content:

Manjushri said:

While I do not wish to hijack the thread, since I'm genuinely interested in hearing other users opinions concerning the applicability and faithfulness of translation, I would also like to put out a question concerning the book.

I got an edition called "Elegant Sayings" containing Nagarjuna's "Staff of Wisdom" and Sakya Pandita's "A Precious Treasury of Elegant Sayings" and to my understanding, this Treasury is the same "Treasury of Good Advice" present in "Ordinary Wisdom". Will someone confirm this?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, they are the same.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 19th, 2021 at 11:17 PM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

haha said:

For 22:16 "Whatever is the nature of the tathāgata, that is the nature of the world; as the tathāgata has no nature, also the world has no nature."

I might be incorrect but it is about svabhava and nisvabhava. I did not see how the tathagata-garbha (buddha-nature) fits here.

Malcolm wrote:

For those whom emptiness is appropriate, everything is appropriate; for those whom emptiness is not appropriate, nothing is appropriate.

haha said:

For catuskoti, there is correlation in 4 types of Samadhi of Tianti, then three truths.
That is: sitting, walking, walking and sitting, neither walking nor sitting.

Malcolm wrote:

The catuskoti is just a rhetorical device. It can be used and misused. But Nāgārjuna uses it as follows:

An existent does not arise from an existent;
an existent does not arise from a nonexistent;
a nonexistent does not arise from an existent;
a nonexistent does not arise from a nonexistent.
Where can there be arising?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 20th, 2021 at 12:33 AM

Title: Re: Sakya Pandita's Ordinary Wisdom

Content:

Manjushri said:

While I do not wish to hijack the thread, since I'm genuinely interested in hearing other users opinions concerning the applicability and faithfulness of translation, I would also like to put out a question concerning the book.

I got an edition called "Elegant Sayings" containing Nagarjuna's "Staff of Wisdom" and Sakya Pandita's "A Precious Treasury of Elegant Sayings" and to my understanding, this Treasury is the same "Treasury of Good Advice" present in "Ordinary Wisdom". Will someone confirm this?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, they are the same.

Manjushri said:

Thanks, Malcolm. Really hope someone in a near future gets to translate his Treasury of Valid Reasoning as well to English.

Malcolm wrote:

It's in the works at Library of Tibetan Classics:

20. Tibetan Buddhist Epistemology I: The Sakya School (trans. Matthew Kapstein)

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 20th, 2021 at 4:52 AM

Title: Re: Books on Early Mahayana Development, History and Sutras

Content:

Padmist said:

I just want a historical account of how Mahayana started and developed. Not for religious practice.

I'm Tibetan Buddhist.

Malcolm wrote:

The traditional accounts and the accounts of western scholars are quite divergent. I personally prefer the traditional accounts, such as Buton's, Taranatha's, and so on.

That said, Indo-Tibetan Buddhism by Snellgrove is ok.

Indian Esoteric Buddhism: A Social History of the Tantric Movement is interesting for a review of post-Gupta Indian Buddhism.

I never read the Williams book. He became a Catholic.

Indian Buddhism: A Survey with Bibliographical Notes by Hajime Nakamura

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 20th, 2021 at 6:12 AM

Title: Re: Namkhai Norbu lineage

Content:

PeterC said:

Well, others will have more detailed explanations, but just by the normal standards for transmission of lungs:

1/ the person giving it needs to be able to read it in the language it was originally given, and give any associated empowerments and methods of introduction required in order to read it;

Arnoud said:

But isn't that the problem here? CNN didn't authorize anyone to transmit his Longsal cycle besides his children, neither of whom want to do that, and so there is really no-one to transmit it?

Malcolm wrote:

There is no official lineage holder. This does not mean that there are no people who are qualified to give the transmissions they have received.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 20th, 2021 at 9:37 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Queequeg said:

middle=thusness; not just emptiness. emptiness is just another aspect of conventionality. middle in the sudden & perfect teaching is seeing both fully integrated. distinct teaching sees the three aspects of the perfect teaching distinctly. Perfect teaching is described in MMK 24:18

Malcolm wrote:

Suchness is also just a convention, it's nothing more than emptiness. Suchness and emptiness are absolute synonyms.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 20th, 2021 at 9:39 AM

Title: Re: Books on Early Mahayana Development, History and Sutras

Content:

Padmist said:

I just want a historical account of how Mahayana started and developed. Not for religious practice.

I'm Tibetan Buddhist.

FiveSkandhas said:

The origin of Mahayana is one of the most contentious and unsettled questions in all of academic Buddhist studies.

Padmist said:

Your analysis is spot on. I started on this journey because discussing Buddhism online ultimately gets you exposed to arguments by others that their form of Buddhism is the pure, original, text-based, historical-based. It's not until you actually dig deeper at the evidence and then dig even deeper after that that you see the error of such claims. I'm in my early stages on my research (LaMotte, Williams, Nattier) but I'm getting an impression that Mahayana IS the true form of Buddhism.

Malcolm wrote:

It's a true form of Buddhism, not THE true form of Buddhism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 20th, 2021 at 9:42 AM

Title: Re: Namkhai Norbu lineage

Content:

Arnoud said:

But isn't that the problem here? CNN didn't authorize anyone to transmit his Longsal cycle besides his children, neither of whom want to do that, and so there is really no-one to transmit it?

Malcolm wrote:

There is no official lineage holder. This does not mean that there are no people who are qualified to give the transmissions they have received.

Aloke said:

This doesn't seem to be the official position of the Dzogchen Community.

Malcolm wrote:

The Dzogchen Community, by their own admission, has no authority here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 20th, 2021 at 9:47 AM

Title: Re: Namkhai Norbu lineage

Content:

Arnoud said:

Do you think anyone who has done the necessary retreats to act as a Vajra master can transmit them? Does that mean that any legitimate Vajra master can transmit any of the empowerments they themselves have received?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 20th, 2021 at 10:36 AM

Title: Re: Namkhai Norbu lineage

Content:

Aloke said:

We can't simply say that he has a "conflict" with the Community, and not pay attention or disregard what he does, or in this case what he doesn't do or don't want to do.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure we can.

Aloke said:

If we admit that it was Rinpoche's wish to appoint Yeshe and his daughter (I'm not sure about his daughter but about Yeshe I certainly heard and read many times) as his lineage holders, we must also admit that Rinpoche knew very well what he was doing, and I'm sure he also knew his own son and daughter very well, and choosed to do so. Otherwise, we would be disrespecting Rinpoche's wish as a tertön, (and also the legit lineage holders appointed by him, regardless if they want or not to have this position) or maybe saying that Rinpoche was wrong when appointing his son and daughter as his lineage holder, or even that Rinpoche doesn't know his own children very well. What would be absurd.

Malcolm wrote:

You are free to interpret things however you wish. So are others.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 20th, 2021 at 10:38 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Queequeg said:

middle=thusness; not just emptiness. emptiness is just another aspect of conventionality. middle in the sudden & perfect teaching is seeing both fully integrated. distinct teaching sees the three aspects of the perfect teaching distinctly. Perfect teaching is described in MMK 24:18

Malcolm wrote:

Suchness is also just a convention, it's nothing more than emptiness. Suchness and emptiness are absolute synonyms.

Caoimhghín said:

It's a difference of method being accompanied by different conceptions.

Malcolm wrote:

You want citations?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 20th, 2021 at 10:52 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

I'm not disagreeing that emptiness is suchness and suchness is emptiness and these all refer to the same.

I do want citations though, but not because I'm disputing it. I like reading. Ven Zhiyi himself says several times that suchness is emptiness, also that suchness is conventionality and that conventionality is emptiness, but I don't think that Ven Zhiyi has normal "Indian" Madhyamaka either.

Malcolm wrote:

I was responding QQ's claim that emptiness was an extreme and suchness was term for freedom from extremes (the middle). It's a baseless claim, one which cannot be supported in sutra, sashtra, nor through reasoning.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 20th, 2021 at 10:53 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

I do want citations

Malcolm wrote:

Tomorrow.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 20th, 2021 at 11:00 AM

Title: Re: Namkhai Norbu lineage

Content:

Aloke said:

Well, in one way or another, maybe as it seems is already done, or sooner or later, we will have someone giving transmissions in CNNR's Lineage. Deal with it.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct. The first teaching I attended by CHNN, in 1992, he very carefully went into what it meant to "hold a lineage." The idea of "lineage holders" is politics, more about intellectual property than anything else. The ability to transmit teachings depends on whether one has realized the meaning of a teaching. That's it. Therefore, students have to be very discerning about whom they choose to follow. The criteria for being able to give teachings is very clearly laid out in the tantras. That should be our guide, not lineage politics.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 20th, 2021 at 9:15 PM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Queequeg said:

To use ziporyn's terminology, local coherence (conventions/dharma's) / global incoherence (emptiness). A is A in contrast to Not A; but Not A is an arbitrary distinction (Buddha makes distinctions in order to teach - upaya); but if A is intelligible only contrasted with Not A, Not A is actually an integral aspect of A. Taken to it's end, everything turns out to be an aspect of A, which makes A incoherent when everything is taken into account. Without distinctions, A can't be discerned. A is the sum of everything Not A. Careful examination of A reveals only Not A.

That last analysis is Madhyamaka. The rest of the argument is a sort of reverse analysis. This is Zhiyi's threefold contemplation. The argument doesn't just devolve to emptiness as some interpretations of Madhyamaka argue. It is reversible. Emptiness after all is emptiness of a compounded thing. There's no emptiness without a compounded thing. This fluid identity between compounded things and emptiness is called the middle. Nagarjuna says just this in 24:18.

Zhiyi also points out that this fluid identity is the Buddha function to point this out. We don't see it without the Buddha pointing this out. We are without buddha, naively convinced of the solidity of compounded dharmas. The fact that they are compounded though is the reality of buddha. Or in other words, middle way/buddha nature.

There is something else going on here than mere Madhyamaka.

Malcolm wrote:

Not so, there is also the emptiness of uncompounded entities.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 3:00 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

I'm not disagreeing that emptiness is suchness and suchness is emptiness and these all refer to the same.

I do want citations though, but not because I'm disputing it. I like reading. Ven Zhiyi himself says several times that suchness is emptiness, also that suchness is conventionality and that conventionality is emptiness, but I don't think that Ven Zhiyi has normal "Indian" Madhyamaka either.

Malcolm wrote:

Ārya-dharmasaṃgīti-nāma-mahāyāna-sūtra:

Child of a good family, so called "suchness, suchness" is a term designating emptiness. The empty neither arise nor cease.

As for QQ:

Ārya-aṣṭādaśasāhasrikā-prajñāpāramitā-nāma-mahāyāna-sūtra:

If one is diligent in the emptiness of ignorance, one is called diligent. If one is diligent in the emptiness of ignorance, formations, consciousness, name, form, six sense bases, contact, sensation, craving, addiction, becoming, birth, aging, and death, one is called "diligent." If one is diligent in the emptiness of all dharmas, one is called "diligent." If one is diligent in the emptiness of compounded and uncompounded phenomena, one is called "diligent."

The Sūtra of Great Liberation (no Sanskrit title, so probably translated from Chinese):

That being the case, child of a good family, the Buddha is the the dharma, the dharma is the sangha. The sangha is uncompounded. The uncompounded is emptiness. The emptiness of the uncompounded, the emptiness of the compounded, the internal emptiness, and external emptiness, the emptiness of the large, and the emptiness of the small are alike as emptiness, and not otherwise.

As for the middle way, the so-called middle way is inexpressible as we see in such sūtras as the Ārya-kāśyapa-parivarta-nāma-mahāyāna-sūtra:

Kāśyapa, if it is asked how one undertakes the dharma according to the approach of a bodhisattva, it is as follows, true discernment into the dharmas of the middle way.

Kāśyapa, If it is asked what is true discernment into the dharmas of the middle way, Kāśyapa, the true discernment into the absence of identity, true discernment into the absence of a sentient being, the absence of a creature, the absence of a life, the absence of a person, the absence of an individual, the absence of a human, the absence of a man. Kāśyapa, this is called "true discernment into the dharmas of the middle way."

Kāśyapa, furthermore, the true discernment into the dharmas of the middle way is not discerning permanence nor discerning impermanence in matter. Kāśyapa, likewise, it is not discerning permanence nor discerning impermanence in sensations, perceptions, formations, and consciousness. Kāśyapa, this is called "correct discernment into the dharmas of the middle way."

Kāśyapa, further, the true discernment into the dharmas of the middle way is is not discerning permanence nor discerning impermanence in the element of earth, and likewise, is not discerning permanence nor discerning impermanence in the element of water, the element of fire, the element of air, the element of space, or the element of consciousness. Kāśyapa, this is called "the true discernment into the dharmas of the middle way."

Kāśyapa, further, the true discernment into the dharmas of the middle way is not discerning permanence nor discerning impermanence in the eye sense base, and likewise, not discerning permanence nor discerning impermanence in the ear, nose, tongue, tactile, and mental sense bases. Kāśyapa, this is called "the true discernment into the dharmas of the middle way."

Kāśyapa, "permanence" is one extreme, "impermanence" is the second extreme. Whatever is between those two extremes cannot be investigated, demonstrated, cannot be a support, cannot appear, cannot be made known, and cannot abide. Kāśyapa, this is called "the true discernment into the dharmas of the middle way."

Kāśyapa, "self" is one extreme, "nonself" is the second extreme. Whatever is between those two extremes cannot be investigated, demonstrated, cannot be a support, cannot appear, cannot be made known, and cannot abide. Kāśyapa, this is called "the true discernment into the dharmas of the middle way."

Kāśyapa, "correct thought" is one extreme, "incorrect thought" is the second extreme. Absence of thought, absence of intention, absence of mind, and absence of consciousness, Kāśyapa, this is called "the true discernment into the dharmas of the middle way."

All dharmas of virtue and nonvirtue, mundane and transcendent, with sin and without sin, contaminated and uncontaminated, compounded and uncompounded are just like that.

Kāśyapa, "afflicted" is one extreme, "purified" is the second extreme. Whatever is nonacceptance, nonexpression, or nonspeaking of those two extremes, Kāśyapa, this is called "the true discernment into the dharmas of the middle way."

Kāśyapa, "existence" is one extreme, "nonexistence" is the second extreme. Whatever is between those two extremes cannot be investigated, demonstrated, cannot be a support, cannot appear, cannot be made known, and cannot abide. Kāśyapa, this is called "the true discernment into the dharmas of the middle way."

Kāśyapa, "samsara" is one extreme, "nirvana" is the second extreme. Whatever is between those two extremes cannot be investigated, demonstrated, cannot be a support, cannot appear, cannot be made known, and cannot abide. Kāśyapa, this is called "the true discernment into the dharmas of the middle way."

Kāśyapa, I have explained to you, "Through the condition of ignorance arise formations; through the condition of formations, consciousness; through the condition of consciousness, name-and-form; through the condition of name-and-form, six sense bases; through the condition of six-sense bases, contact; through the condition of contact, sensation; through the condition of sensation, craving; through the condition of craving, addiction; through the condition of addiction, becoming; through the condition of becoming, birth, through the condition of birth, aging-and-death, misery, lamentation, suffering, unhappiness, and the arising of disturbance. As such only a great mass of suffering arises.

Because ignorance ceases, formations cease; because formations cease, consciousness ceases; because consciousness ceases, name-and-form ceases; because name-and-form ceases, the six sense bases cease; because the six sense bases cease, contact ceases; because contact ceases, sensation ceases; because sensation ceases, craving ceases; because craving ceases, addiction ceases; because addiction ceases, becoming ceases; because becoming ceases, birth ceases; because birth ceases, aging-and-death, misery, lamentation, unhappiness, and disturbance cease. As such, this whole mass of suffering ceases."

Kāśyapa, knowledge and ignorance, those are not two, but are inseparable as two aspects. Kāśyapa, knowledge of this is called the true discernment into the dharmas of the middle way.

Likewise, formations and the cessation of formations; consciousness and the cessation of consciousness; name-and-form and the cessation of name-and-form; six sense bases and the cessation of six sense bases; sensation and the cessation of sensation; craving and the cessation of craving; addiction and the cessation of addiction; becoming and the cessation of becoming; birth and the cessation of birth; aging-and-death and the cessation of aging-and-death, those are not two, but are inseparable as two aspects. Knowledge of this is called "the true discernment into the dharmas of the middle way."

Kāśyapa, moreover, the true discernment into dharmas of the middle way is not making dharmas empty with emptiness, dharmas themselves are empty; it is not making dharmas without characteristics with the absence of characteristics; dharmas themselves lack characteristics; it is not making dharmas free of aspiration through aspirationlessness, dharmas themselves are without aspiration; it is not making dharmas unfabricated through nonfabrication, dharmas themselves are not fabricated; it is not making dharmas not arise through nonarising, dharmas themselves do not arise; it is not making dharmas unproduced through nonproduction, dharmas themselves are unproduced; it is not making dharmas lack inherent existence through lacking inherent existence, dharmas themselves lack inherent existence. And such discernment, Kāśyapa, is called "the true discernment into the dharmas of the middle way."

And the Mahāparinirvana sūtra:

Bodhisattvas teach the middle way. If it is asked why, though all dharmas do not exist, it is also explained they do not not exist, and are not ascertained to be the same. Why? Consciousness arises by means of the condition of eye, form, light, mental factors, and the intellect. Also it is definite that consciousness does not exist in the eye, the form, the light, the mental factor, nor the the intellect, nor in between. It does not exist, it does not not exist, but because it arises from being dependently produced it is said "to exist." Because it has no inherent existence, it is said "not to exist." Therefore, the Tathāgata has said that though all dharmas do not exist neither do they not exist.

and the Ārya-mahāyānopadeśa-nāma-mahāyāna-sūtra:

Abandoning all views is entering into the middle way, seeing all dharmas as equal.

But one does not need to propose a third truth to understand this.

Arya-pratyutpanne buddha-saṃmukhāvasthita-samādhi-nāma-mahāyāna-sūtra:

Bhadrapāla, in that way, any son or daughter of a good family who wishes for perfect full awakening and any son or daughter of a good family who wishes for personal awakening, or any son or daughter of a good family who wishes for arhatship, they must investigate those dharmas. After they investigate those dharmas in that way, dharmas should not be investigated as pacified, nor should they be investigated as not pacified. Why Bhadrapāla? Because nothing is destroyed and nothing is born. If one conceives "all dharmas are pacified" in dharmas that are totally unestablished, this is one extreme. If one conceives "all dharmas are not pacified", this is the second extreme.

Bhadrapāla, not perceiving, not conceiving, not establishing, not thinking about, and not engaging these two extremes—pacified and unpacified—is the middle way through the explanation of the mundane relative in a manner of enumeration, however, in the ultimate, the extremes or the middle are not perceived. Why Bhadrapāla? As such all phenomena are like space, equal with nirvana. They cannot be annihilated, cannot be destroyed, are not permanent, and do not exist forever. They do not abide in a region, they do not abide in a direction, they are without characteristics, and cannot be enumerated. Since they cannot even be approached by the learned through enumeration nor perceived, all phenomena are called "non-enumerable."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 3:11 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Queequeg said:

Are uncompounded entities even entities? Or just imputation of entities? If imputations, then they're actually compounded... takes a subject to impute it. In a sense, that is the same as all entities that we otherwise say are compounded - its all imputation.

We say they are uncompounded as a matter of distinction only.

Malcolm wrote:

Space, the two cessations, suchness/emptiness and all their synonyms are the uncompounded entities mentioned in Mahāyāna.

But as Nagārajuna cogently points out in the MMK,

Since arising, abiding, and perishing are not established, the compounded are not established; since the compounded have never been established, why would the uncompounded be established?

People keep on trying to fix or improve upon Madhyamaka. It's never been necessary.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 4:11 AM

Title: Re: You Can't Fight Fascism By Expanding The Police State

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 8:57 AM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche - Hevajra Empowerment and 4 Dharmas of Gampopa

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

On a related note, Tsadra Foundation is working on an English translation of the entire Hevajra Tantra. However I don't know when it will be ready.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't think so. And it is not very long. Who told you this? I've recently finished the first volume of Lamdre material and submitted it to Shambhala. But I am not aware of a Hevajra project.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 9:24 AM

Title: Trumps last day, post your fav vids

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 9:29 AM

Title: Re: Trumps last day, post your fav vids

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 9:32 AM

Title: Re: Trumps last day, post your fav vids

Content:

PeterC said:

Not a vid, but the ongoing meltdown of the q-anon community is both entertaining and profoundly disturbing. This is a widespread mental health crisis. This article is a great illustration of how extreme the delusions have become.

<https://gizmodo.com/heres-how-qanon-reacted-as-they-realized-the-storm-isnt-1846095605>

Malcolm wrote:

Here is the video:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 9:43 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

So in what sense do you bring up the emptiness of unconditioned things here (as opposed to conditioned things, I presume)?

Malcolm wrote:

In the same sense that space and the two cessations are included in the dharmadhatu as objects of the manodhatu.

The term “dharma,” in all its ten meanings, has no direct translation into English, but there do exist, conventionally speaking, uncompounded dharmas such as space, the two cessations, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 10:04 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

I can see already how difficult this conversation would be to even have, so we probably shouldn't have it and won't. Maybe if we meet some day we'll have it, who knows. I too can concede that the dharmas in the matrices of the Abhidharmas "exist" in a way, but I don't give them any kind of actual ontological status whatsoever.

Malcolm wrote:

They exist conventionally.

Caoimhghín said:

I don't even give them "conventionally ontologically existing" status.

Malcolm wrote:

That's an error. There are no such thing as "conventionally ontologically-existing" entities. There are conventional entities, like uncompounded space, however.

Caoimhghín said:

They are just ways that X or Y tradition of Buddhism has chosen to schematize reality based on the experiences of the meditators therein.

Malcolm wrote:

How is space, absence of impediment, an experience of meditation? How is the cessation of the series of a burnt seed an experience of meditation? Granted, cessation due to analysis is a result of insight, but that refers to the cessation of births, so how are these three uncompounded dharma not even conventional entities?

Caoimhghín said:

So I can agree with you enough to get what you meant then.

Malcolm wrote:

You need to study abhidharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 10:10 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

I don't believe in Abhidharma, but I do agree that I need to study it if I want to criticize it.

Malcolm wrote:

You mean you don't believe you have five skandhas? Twelves ayatanas, eighteen dhatus, twenty-two indriyas? Etc?

I am not suggesting one has to accept Abhidharma uncritically, but one needs a solid grounding in it.

Not only that, but the things I mentioned are quite acceptable conventionally. Why? Because they are functional, arthakriya. For example, if one does not accept space, there can be no extension and all material entities must occupy the same location, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 10:25 AM

Title: Re: Wait, so Karma and Rebirth don't exist?

Content:

Pascal2 said:

So far I have heard just philosophical discussions, but no evidence.

Malcolm wrote:

You won't hear evidence for rebirth and karma because they are not falsifiable. So continuing to demand proofs and explanations for them is fruitless. Buddhism is a religion, not a science.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 10:33 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

How is space, absence of impediment, an experience of meditation? How is the cessation of the series of a burnt seed an experience of meditation? Granted, cessation due to analysis is a result of insight, but that refers to the cessation of births, so how are these three uncompounded dharmas not even conventional entities?

Caoimhghín said:

The space between your fingers is conditioned. The space that is seen in a cave is conditioned. The unconditioned spaces are the products of divine vision, as far as I am aware, like the "endless deepest darkness" between world systems described in the suttas. Similarly, the burnt seed is not burnt, because the Buddhas rouse the Arhats. When I talk about "dharmas," I mean "moments." I don't think the "moments" actually exist. They are just one way to divide experience. According to the MMK, they have no moment of arising, no moment of abiding, and no moment of cessation. They do not actually exist as discrete entities at all, ultimately speaking, because they have no "edges."

Malcolm wrote:

Unconditioned space is just absence of obstruction. That's all. If you don't study and internalize these basic definitions, you'll just engage in tons of proliferation as you have here. Further, you won't understand the crucial metaphor of space that is endemic in all Mahayana texts all the way through Dzogpachenpo, Chan, and so on.

Caoimhghín said:

I was once very seriously interested in Theravada, so I don't feel that I'm especially ignorant of how Theravadin Abhidhammika Buddhism presents itself to potential lay adherents

Malcolm wrote:

Abhidhamma is irrelevant to Mahayana. Abhidharma, however, is pretty important. For example, if one wishes to understand the negation of cause and condition in the first chapter of MMK and have any hope of following the exchange.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 10:57 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

haha said:

The point is that every school would make their own assertion. Even in the interpretation of Tibetan Buddhism, Tsongkhapa has regarded sutra is not enough to realize emptiness (i.e. four types of emptiness); the tantric practice is needed.

Malcolm wrote:

False. Tsongkhapa merely acceded to the notion that common Mahayana was a slow path,

In dzogchen, madhyamaka type of emptiness is regarded as a kind of calm abiding or empty experience.

False. Longchenpa admits that the view of dzogchen is analytically identical with prasanga.

This is going off topic.

My point is simple: Madhyamaka needs no improvement. It's the highest of the four tenet systems, and attempts to improve upon it merely obscure its austere elegance.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 11:05 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

If you don't study and internalize these basic definitions, you'll just engage in tons of proliferation as you have here.

Caoimhghín said:

I'm explaining to you how Theravadins believe in the dhammas and how I don't believe in that. I don't think the Theravadins and the Sarvastivadins are exceptionally different in how they believe in the naive reality of the dharmas. The Sarvastivadins believe in the persistence of the dharmas though extra times.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. That's not the Abhidharma that is relevant here. Sorry. You need to study Vasubandhu,

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 11:18 AM

Title: Best inaugural fireworks ever

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 12:05 PM

Title: Re: Wait, so Karma and Rebirth don't exist?

Content:

Pascal2 said:

I think it would be better for both if you could tell me openly if I and other people are allowed to question politely the core of your beliefs or whether you do not want other people to do that.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, since these doctrines are not falsifiable, they are won't withstand demands for empirical confirmation. One either accepts them or not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 12:14 PM

Title: Re: Wait, so Karma and Rebirth don't exist?

Content:

Pascal2 said:

I think it would be better for both if you could tell me openly if I and other people are allowed to question politely the core of your beliefs or whether you do not want other people to do that.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, since these doctrines are not falsifiable, they are won't withstand demands for empirical confirmation. One either accepts them or not.

Pascal2 said:

I am not sure they are not falsifiable or we are not interested in trying to falsifying them. Please let me explain: if I say that I consider apples more tasty than bananas, this statement is not falsifiable.

If I say that committing a sin will have you end up in a lower realm this statement is, at least in principle, falsifiable.

To any person who makes this statement the obvious question I would ask is: "how do you possibly know that?"

Malcolm wrote:

Which is why these things are not falsifiable. They are accepted purely on the authority of the Buddha's say so. Generally Buddhists decide that what Buddhas has taught with regard to dependent origination is true, and so they generally choose to accept the rest.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 12:22 PM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche - Hevajra Empowerment and 4 Dharmas of Gampopa

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

On a related note, Tsadra Foundation is working on an English translation of the entire Hevajra Tantra. However I don't know when it will be ready.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't think so. And it is not very long. Who told you this? I've recently finished the first volume of Lamdre material and submitted it to Shambhala. But I am not aware of a Hevajra project.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

When HHK came to the women's retreat he gave them a list of things to study. One was the Hevajra Tantra, which supposedly Elizabeth Callahan was working on. However I just checked the Tsadra Foundation blurb on Callahan and there's no mention of it being in the works.

So maybe it isn't true.

Malcolm wrote:

I'll ask her. I see her a couple of times a month via zoom. She's a very nice person.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 9:56 PM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

haha said:

The point is that every school would make their own assertion. Even in the interpretation of Tibetan Buddhism, Tsongkhapa has regarded sutra is not enough to realize emptiness (i.e. four types of emptiness); the tantric practice is needed.

Malcolm wrote:

False. Tsongkhapa merely acceded to the notion that common Mahayana was a slow path,

haha said:

It is not my assertion (sorry for me being poor in my expression). Lower tantras (i.e. assertion is that they are superior then sutra; same way comparing Zhiyi's view on Madhyamaka from five periods) lead up to the path of seeing, not beyond. From that point to Buddhahood, one is not going to attain Buddhahood faster unless anuttaryoga is used. So, it is about time (i.e. quicker or longer).

For reference for above statement: Guy Newland - "Tsongkhapa's Explanation of Emptiness and the Two Truths" - Session 1 of 4 (timing around 1hr:17min) link: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=UPRIHcHi68U>

They did not consider the examination of time (Kala pariksa) in their interpretation; they considered sutra vs tantra.

Malcolm wrote:

The difference is method, and thus time on the path, one to sixteen lifetimes vs three samkhyakalpas.

haha said:

In dzogchen, madhyamaka type of emptiness is regarded as a kind of calm abiding or empty experience.

False. Longchenpa admits that the view of dzogchen is analytically identical with prasanga.

Here is my point:

Malcolm wrote:

You said Madhyamaka, according to dzogchen, is a kind of empty experience or calm abiding. But thus is false. Again, the difference between Dzogchen and Madhyamaka is method. The latter uses analysis, the former does not.

haha said:

This is going off topic.

My point is simple: Madhyamaka needs no improvement. It's the highest of the four tenet systems, and attempts to improve upon it merely obscure its austere elegance. I also fully agree on this point. But it is nice in theory only. What they do practice is more important than what they do say. For practically speaking, everyone (Tsongkhapa, Longchenpa, Dolpopa, Zhiyi, Nichiren, etc.) has their own way. Everyone had built something over it.

Malcolm wrote:

With respect to the first two masters you mention, they did not build anything over Madhyamaka, they are simply Vajrayana practitioners; with the respect to the third, his Madhyamaka is distorted; with respect to fourth, it seems he used Madhyamaka as a departure and indeed constructed a novel system, and the fifth follows the fourth.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 10:03 PM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche - Hevajra Empowerment and 4 Dharmas of Gampopa

Content:

lelopa said:

"Hevajra belongs to the eight great Herukas"

I only know the 8 Kagye Nyingma Herukas, where Demchok is sometimes described as the same as Yangdag.....

What are the 8 to which Hevajra belongs?

Malcolm wrote:

Hevajra = Shri Heruka (yang dag), according to HHST.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 10:06 PM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche - Hevajra Empowerment and 4 Dharmas of Gampopa

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

2. Profound inner meaning: (completion stage) for Naro Chödrak.

Malcolm wrote:

She is working on one of the Kagyu volumes of Damngak dzod right now, specifically naro chodruk material.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 10:22 PM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Bristollad said:

Tsongkhapa himself says the Perfection Vehicle and the Mantra Vehicle do not differ in regards to realising emptiness, nor in bodhicitta, only in regards to method:

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed, as do almost all Tibetan scholars following Sakya Pandita.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 10:25 PM

Title: Re: Brief Sang Offering - transmission needed or no

Content:

Soma999 said:

By the inner experiences, and the results in one's life.

How do you know you have really been initiated during an empowerment ?

Malcolm wrote:

If you understood the instructions, followed the recitations after the master, and genuinely made effort to follow the visualizations, then you received it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 21st, 2021 at 11:41 PM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche - Hevajra Empowerment and 4 Dharmas of Gampopa

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

2. Profound inner meaning: (completion stage) for Naro Chödrak.

Malcolm wrote:

She is working on one of the Kagyu volumes of Damngak dzod right now, specifically naro chodruk material.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

It's beginning to sound like the notes I was given were confused.

But let me know when you're sure.

Malcolm wrote:

It sounds like you were given a list of desiderata. The Hevajra Tantra cannot be understood easily without a commentary. I have translated the first section myself. Even to read it in English, it needs commentary. In the Sakya tradition, which specializes in Hevajra, there are eight Indian commentaries, which are distilled down in one. In the Kagyu tradition, there are also many commentaries, but I am not sure which Indian commentaries they regard as authoritative. JKLT wrote a commentary on Hevajra that is supposed to be quite good, but I have not read it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 22nd, 2021 at 3:28 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

With respect to the first two masters you mention, they did not build anything over Madhyamaka, they are simply Vajrayana practitioners; with the respect to the third, his Madhyamaka is distorted; with respect to fourth, it seems he used Madhyamaka as a departure and indeed constructed a novel system, and the fifth follows the fourth.

haha said:

Different is method. That is accepted. If Madhyamaka needs no improvement, then why one should need different methods.

Malcolm wrote:

Madhyamaka concerns the view, not the path.

haha said:

In other word, it means that it is not enough to realize. If someone says it takes three asamkhyakalpas, it is polite way to saying one is not going to attain. lol Three asamkhyakalpas is differentiating rhetoric (between arhat and buddhahood).

Malcolm wrote:

This is your interpretation. "Asamkhya" is an actual Indian number.

haha said:

Somewhere, someone wrote articles mentioning Dolpopa theory based on Prajnaparamita. So, I would not say distortion; otherwise, one is saying such and such the prajnaparamita texts are distortion.

Malcolm wrote:

Dolbupa's Madhyamaka is distorted. If you are interested, you can read Gorampa and Tsongkhapa to find out why.

haha said:

Nagarjuna is a big tree. Svatantrika Madhyamaka, Prasangika Madhyamaka, Yogacara Madyamaka,

Malcolm wrote:

There is at base only a disagreement over how to present emptiness, no disagreement about the nature of the two truths here.

haha said:

Great Madhyamaka, Secret Mantra-Madhyamaka, they all are the branches.

Malcolm wrote:

Great Madhyamaka is a term all Tibetans use for their own school. There is no such thing as "Secret Mantra Madhyamaka."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 22nd, 2021 at 3:31 AM

Title: Re: Namkhai Norbu lineage

Content:

Aloke said:

I didn't affirm that Malcolm has proclaimed something, or that he has or not taught Longsal. I was just making a question. I know that Malcolm says that his "job is the 17 tantras." But he has also said things like:

"ChNN was one of the most accessible teachers in modern memory. He answered every email, etc., as well as sitting for hours after almost every session to greet students personally until he became too ill. He also taught in a way that was so comprehensive as to anticipate nearly any question a student might have. He is the most important link to authentic Dzogchen teachings on this globe. I am proud to be his student, his lineage will continue as long as I am alive, and beyond, among my students, whether they are recognized by Dzogchen Community or not. Last edited by Malcolm on Sun Nov 22, 2020 10:35 am, edited 1 time in total."

Malcolm wrote:

I have many lineages of Dzogchen teachings from many different masters. When I teach, those lineages pass through me to my students.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 22nd, 2021 at 5:38 AM

Title: Re: Trumps last day, post your fav vids

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Uh, have you guys seen the anti-Trumper meltdown vids?

Malcolm wrote:

Dumb.

Four years ago, the meltdowns were not from members of a toxic cult that spread noxious lies about how top democrats were literally sacrificing children and eating them, etc., they were meltdowns were over a guy who they knew was going to be the WORST PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES EVER. And they were 100% correct.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 22nd, 2021 at 9:10 PM

Title: Re: Trumps last day, post your fav vids

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Every Jew I personally know, including my wife; agrees. Just replace 'Jew' with globalist, lizard alien or whatever. These conspiracy theories are always made so that they can accommodate what group is needed though. The big enemy is always kind of amorphous until it's time to target someone specific. So fascist-communist-lizard-demon-alien-Zionist-Muslim antifa satanist pedophile Illuminati...or whatever.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, except for the fascist part, I agree.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 22nd, 2021 at 9:12 PM

Title: Re: Books on Early Mahayana Development, History and Sutras

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

I thought this was a thread about books on early Mahayana?

Aemilius said:

There are many strands of knowledge in the world...

PeterC said:

Sure, but still: would be interested to hear who asserts this, and on what textual / archeological / other basis. Or is it your theory?

Also the examples you offer also talk about some sort of eternal soul, which is definitely not the Bodhisattvayana.

Aemilius said:

You must understand that there is no continual tradition reaching us from the time of Pythagoras, subtle things are always subtle, it is true of any tradition that says "reincarnation" or "consciousness" etc.. that the mind can and will reify them to be self-existing eternal entities. It is in the nature of language.

Who says this? One thing is what the various scholars publish in papers, another thing is what they say in lectures, and the third is what they say in private conversations. I think it is clearly evident from the things that exist, and that I referred to. You must be able to think for yourself also. I really can't say that it is my own theory that the Indo-Aryan peoples had a world view, and had spiritual traditions, before they migrated to different parts of the world. This has been said many times, emphasizing different things and different ideas, depending on the person.

Thor Heyerdahl had the idea that Odin was a historical person, who lived somewhere in the area around the Black sea. I have a similar kind of view, namely that Odin is the same person as the Oddiyan guru or Padmasambhava, and that he lived in Georgia, which is the original Urgyen (Ge-orgyen) i.e. the Oddiyan country. Guru of Orgyen was assimilated into Christianity as Saint George, the Patron Saint of Georgia. Heyerdahl studied his ideas concerning Odin for many years.

Asko Parpola is a well known researcher in this area, his emphasis is on the hindu ideas:
"Books

1994: Deciphering the Indus Script, Cambridge University Press, 2015: The Roots of Hinduism: The Early Aryans and the Indus Civilization, Oxford University Press,

Selected articles

1988: The coming of the Aryans to Iran and India and the cultural and ethnic identity of the Dāsas, Studia Orientalia, Vol. 64, pp. 195–302. The Finnish Oriental Society.
2008: Is the Indus script indeed not a writing system? In: Airāvati: Felicitation volume in honour of Iravatham Mahadevan: 111–31. VARALAARU.COM, Chennai.

Reception

Parpola's long journal article The Coming of the Aryans is widely cited by historians and scholars of Indo-European Studies. Colin Renfrew, who has reviewed the article, called it a "richly annotated and well-illustrated essay," which brings together a number of different lines of arguments, including literary and archaeological. It contains rich and interesting insights into a variety of topics, including the "amalgamation of the Aryan and Dasa religions," and the Nuristani language.

Awards

Asko Parpola received the Kalaignar M. Karunanidhi Classical Tamil Award for 2009 on June 23, 2010 at the World Classical Tamil Conference at Coimbatore. In 2015, he was awarded India's Presidential Award of Certificate of Honour in Sanskrit. He is an honorary member of the American Oriental Society."

In the early (, middle or late) 1900's the issue was a dangerously political one, and thus the early translators like Rhys-Davids or Edward Conze didn't say anything about the possible connection of Dharma to the Indo-Aryan culture. Earlier Max Muller had said something about, for example in his book: F. Max Müller (1888) Biographies of Words and the Home of the Aryas. Kessinger Publishing reprint, 2004.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 23rd, 2021 at 11:21 PM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

They exist conventionally.

Queequeg said:

bbbbbbbut... only one convention (or rather conventional way to look at reality) is TRUE!!!!

Christ. This conversation has gone stupid.

Malcolm wrote:

“Conventional” simply means “functional,” it does not mean arbitrary or subjective. For example, perceiving water as amṛta, pus, boiling metal, etc., is invalid in the human realm.

One can build many kinds of cars, but if they don’t function as cars, they are not cars, conventionally speaking.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 23rd, 2021 at 11:33 PM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

tkp67 said:

convention is subjective and thus conditional

Malcolm wrote:

No, conventions are not subjective, they are conventions because one or more people have agreed to call a functional thing a given name. For example, a truck is called a lorry in England, but they both refer to a heavy vehicle that carries loads.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 24th, 2021 at 1:21 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

"Conventional" simply means "functional," it does not mean arbitrary or subjective.

Queequeg said:

Yes. Exactly. That's exactly what Zhiyi said the Middle Way/Buddhanature is.

Functions are responsive. Conditions being various, various functions are necessary.

Give it a rest, bro.

Malcolm wrote:

The middle way is inexpressible. It's beyond convention. That's the point.

If you are claiming that the term "the middle way" is merely a convention, that's fine. The words "middle way" have a function. But those words are not the inexpressible middle way taught by the Buddha in the sutras I mentioned.

If something has a function, it is compounded, and impermanent. There are no permanent, functional phenomena. Buddhanature is not a functional phenomena, if it were, it would be compounded.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 24th, 2021 at 1:44 AM

Title: Mansplaining Women's Enlightenment

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

A Buddhist Literary Scandal; the Curious Case of 'The First Free Women':

This is how—step-by-step—our sacred Buddhist scriptures can be lost. The scandal is that we allowed it to happen. But if we don't do something about it now, to firmly say that this crosses a line and stand up for the integrity of our scriptural tradition, then it won't just be a scandal; it will be a tragedy.

<https://lokanta.github.io/2021/01/21/curious-case/?fbclid=IwAR2omUnevXCltZ2M8dkeo-2HB-bPN2r0HKEmSZo8nPzSGVX3Dwol-tfQqYo>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 24th, 2021 at 1:45 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Queequeg said:

We get what you're saying. There's something else going on.

Malcolm wrote:

So you keep saying.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 24th, 2021 at 1:47 AM

Title: Re: The Dao of Politics and ideology

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

I've been following this Daoist teacher on facebook named Damo Mitchell. He has a stance on politics that I respect a lot, which is that it's all a joke and cultivators don't take these things so seriously.

So, I'm wondering how some of you would relate with these things.

Malcolm wrote:

Piss poor attitude for a so-called Taoist. Taoism is a deeply political ideology.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 24th, 2021 at 1:48 AM

Title: Re: Namkhai Norbu lineage

Content:

Aloke said:

About Yeshe you said that "he wants to have nothing to do with the DC", and you asked me if I have attended the meeting during which the IDG answered people's questions. I have not attended the meeting, I thought it would be a waste of time, but of course, I read the documents they provided, and one of the answers to one of the questions about Transmissions / Lungs, more specifically: "Will Yeshe give direct transmission?"

Was: "Yeshe announced that he would give direct transmission in Merigar West for people seriously interested in the teaching of Chogyal Namkhai Norbu in Easter 2020.

Then the event was canceled due to the Covid pandemic. Yeshe said in the two meetings in August that he intends to make it possible to access the texts and teaching of Chogyal Namkhai Norbu, by meeting people seriously interested in the Teaching of the Master, when circumstances make it possible."

I am still trying to find the coherence between saying that Yeshe don't want to have nothing to do with the Dzogchen Community, and the Dzogchen Community people keep saying things like this not only in informal conversations, but in their Annual General Meeting. Finally, about Yeshe's reasons behind his conflict with the Dzogchen Community I do think that we should not ignore it. It would be foolish, as sooner or later some stuff will show up.

laowhining said:

The lack of coherence is due to differences in understanding of what was said during the meeting. I attended the meeting and my understanding of what Khyentse Yeshe said does not correspond entirely to the collection of points sent out some days after the meeting that seems to have proliferated online. I'm not saying one is wrong or right, just that what is circulating online is mostly speculation.

I don't think this speculation is particularly fruitful, at least not what I see online; it seems more like gossip than anything else. Maybe it's helpful if we reflect on how we, as a Community, have interacted with Rinpoche and Yeshe and the rest of the family in a way that could create this kind of tension, but I think it's necessary to know more about what happened than most of us do if we want to make these conversations anything more than speculation and useless hand-wringing about "the future of the teachings."

Malcolm wrote:

You attended both meetings?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 24th, 2021 at 2:13 AM

Title: Re: The Dao of Politics and ideology

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

I've been following this Daoist teacher on facebook named Damo Mitchell. He has a stance on politics that I respect a lot, which is that it's all a joke and cultivators don't take these things so seriously.

So, I'm wondering how some of you would relate with these things.

Malcolm wrote:

Piss poor attitude for a so-called Taoist. Taoism is a deeply political ideology.

Könchok Thrinley said:

That is an interesting claim. Would you care to elaborate? I don't have much experience with Taoism, but it always seemed quite non-political.

Malcolm wrote:
Taoism is the Machiavellianism of the Sinosphere.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 24th, 2021 at 2:34 AM

Title: Re: The Dao of Politics and ideology

Content:

Brahma said:

Here are some "political passages" from the <https://personaltao.com/recommended-books/the-gnl-tao-de-ching/#31>:

61. Submission

A nation is like a hierarchy, a marketplace, and a maiden.
A maiden wins her husband by submitting to his advances;
Submission is a means of union.

So when a large country submits to a small country
It will adopt the small country;
When a small country submits to a large country
It will be adopted by the large country;
The one submits and adopts;
The other submits and is adopted.

It is in the interest of a large country to unite and gain service,
And in the interest of a small country to unite and gain patronage;
If both would serve their interests,
Both must submit.
68. Compassion

Compassion is the finest weapon and best defence.
If you would establish harmony,
Compassion must surround you like a fortress.

Therefore,
A good soldier does not inspire fear;
A good fighter does not display aggression;
A good conqueror does not engage in battle;
A good leader does not exercise authority.

This is the value of unimportance;
This is how to win the cooperation of others;
This is how to build the same harmony that is in nature.
It really is a Philosophy for all levels of society, but written by someone observing from the very top of the so called "ladder."

Malcolm wrote:

Taoism is more than the Dao De Jing, it is also Sun Tzu's Art of War, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 24th, 2021 at 2:35 AM

Title: Re: The Dao of Politics and ideology

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

I've been following this Daoist teacher on facebook named Damo Mitchell. He has a stance on politics that I respect a lot, which is that it's all a joke and cultivators don't take these things so seriously.

So, I'm wondering how some of you would relate with these things.

Malcolm wrote:

Piss poor attitude for a so-called Taoist. Taoism is a deeply political ideology.

SilenceMonkey said:

Taoism's not an ideology, malcolm. It's a philosophical and mystical way of being in the world. It is by nature flexible and adapts to any circumstance, vocation or persuasion.

It's been used for political purposes, but the politics is in the people and not the Dao (or Daoism) itself. Whatever ideology you hold, it can mold to it to express inner principles of Dao.

Long story short... Daoism isn't political, you are.

Malcolm wrote:

Yeah, sure.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 24th, 2021 at 2:37 AM

Title: Re: The Dao of Politics and ideology

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Daoism has a strong hermit tradition of living in obscurity... staying in the shadows and leaving no footsteps.

Malcolm wrote:

Great, so go talk about Daoism on a Daoist site. This is a Buddhist site. So you are:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 24th, 2021 at 3:17 AM

Title: Re: The Dao of Politics and ideology

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Maybe dzogchenpas would share this view of cultural detachment...

people get too political in the buddhist world, and it can do a lot of harm to our system.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't know about you, but my politics are a direct result of my commitment to Buddhadharma. YMMV.

But I am not about to be passive when there is great harm being done because some people have this idea:

...that it's all a joke and cultivators don't take these things so seriously
This is called "spiritual bypassing" and its a huge steaming pile of shit.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 24th, 2021 at 3:18 AM

Title: Re: The Dao of Politics and ideology

Content:

Matt J said:

I tend to agree that Taoism tends to be apolitical, or even anti-political. I\

Malcolm wrote:

Historically, this is completely false. A quick read of Chinese history should correct this notion immediately.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 24th, 2021 at 3:19 AM

Title: Re: Namkhai Norbu lineage

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

You attended both meetings?

laowhining said:

I did not attend the first, as far as I know that was only open to SMS instructors, but I attended the second that was open to Gakyil and others representing some kind of organization within the DC orbit.

Malcolm wrote:

I attended neither, but I know people who attended both. What a shit show.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 24th, 2021 at 4:10 AM

Title: Re: The Dao of Politics and ideology

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

I think the non-engagement with news, politics and arguments is actually a good quality for dharma. Moving away from these sources of wordliness is moving nearer to a mind of retreat. The sort of people who meditate all day often won't spend much time with these things.

Malcolm wrote:

I see, like HH Dalai Lama?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 24th, 2021 at 4:50 AM

Title: Re: The Dao of Politics and ideology

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

I find many people who defend political engagement as dharma practice tend not to look at their ideological blinders.

Malcolm wrote:

I am an American. I like democracy. I don't like people who try to overthrow elections and generally destroy our admittedly already imperfect system of governance, i.e., the GOP.

I didn't say that politics was Dharma practice, I said my point of view of politics is informed by Dharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 24th, 2021 at 4:51 AM

Title: Re: The Dao of Politics and ideology

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

yeah, forget the guy I mentioned. What I'm referring to is learning how to have discussion without being so agitated (even at a subtle level) that you'll want to take sides. Not falling into the trap of "us and them."

Malcolm wrote:

Sometimes there is an "us" and a "them" but...

Portland Antifa going around looking for fascists to fight with, and failing to find any, destroying the offices of the Democratic Party, burning flags in protest of Joe Biden in Denver, and so on is some pretty dumb, clueless shit.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 24th, 2021 at 8:42 AM

Title: Re: The Dao of Politics and ideology

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

.

Like I said, I suspect your bone to pick is more with media, social media, and what they do to the conversation than simply with having ideas about what is right or wrong in terms of political policies, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

Nah, he explicitly mentioned dzogchen practitioners. He has a problem with my outspokenness.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 24th, 2021 at 9:13 AM

Title: Re: How long was your honey moon phase with Buddhism?

Content:

karmanyngpo said:

Hello all. I am curious to know how long your "honey moon" phase with Buddhism was. I've heard stories of practitioners getting really fervent and too excited and then petering out after a short period of time. I am sure it differs from person to person. How long did that period of initial "madly in love" and maybe being overly excited rather than having a firm grounding in the real reasons for practice (like impermanence, precious human life, bodhichitta etc) last for you?

I feel like this is too casual of a topic to put in Personal Experiences so hopefully it is ok to put it here too for very relaxed discussion

KN

Malcolm wrote:

It's not over, going strong since 1986.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 24th, 2021 at 11:18 AM

Title: Re: The Dao of Politics and ideology

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

I find it admirable the way you defend your political views. It doesn't seem like Dharma to me, but neither does it to you as you mentioned earlier.

SilenceMonkey said:

They are not really political views. They are observations about what is decent and what is not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 24th, 2021 at 11:56 AM

Title: Re: Questions about "Early" as in early early.

Content:

Padmist said:

How do Mahayana Buddhists handle claims that Pali Canon is the authentic teachings of the Buddha and anything beyond it is isn't Buddha's teachings?

Malcolm wrote:

Mahāyāna, as a self-conscious movement, begins with Nāgārjuna. Why do I say this? Nāgārjuna was the first identifiable author that we know of in the history of Buddhism to defend the sūtra tradition we call Mahāyāna. This is why he is the most important Mahāyāna figure, apart from the Buddha in Mahāyāna sūtras. Of course there were Mahāyāna sūtras prior to Nāgārjuna, but he was the first person to articulate a polemical defense of Mahāyāna and the first historical person (by western criteria) to give Mahāyāna a serious intellectual platform.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 24th, 2021 at 7:42 PM

Title: Re: The Dao of Politics and ideology

Content:

Pero said:

After some other things he said I reflected on my own life and noticed I slowly got too sucked into worldly concerns over the last 9 years or so, politics being one of them.

Malcolm wrote:

It's ok to be upset about fascists. If one isn't, one is likely a fascist oneself.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 24th, 2021 at 10:10 PM

Title: Re: Books on Early Mahayana Development, History and Sutras

Content:

Aemilius said:

...

PeterC said:

All largely irrelevant to the question of whether there was a bodhisattvayana preceding Gautama. That's four times I've asked and you haven't responded, so I'll assume you don't have any evidence for this.

We do know, and it's very well documented, that there were sramana movements before, during and after his life. But to claim that a bodhisattvayana existed, you need more than just beliefs in reincarnation and spiritual practices.

Aemilius said:

I have said before that there are no academic proofs for this claim or view, but there are spiritual proofs, and these are not accepted by the academic world view. I.e. the Five eyes and the Six supernormal powers, these have been accepted as a basis of knowledge in the Dharma for 2500 years. Next arises the question whose extraordinary perceptions will be accepted ? I believe that You you have been a member in a modern Buddhist movement, so that you would know that there still is knowledge passing around that comes from supranormal perceptions. Different traditions accept different authorities, who are then relied on and quoted in these matters.

The supranormal perceptions can be, and quite often are, in opposition to the prevailing academic views. In this case all we can do, in the academic field, is to say that it is possible that the Mahayana has existed as an oral tradition, long before the writing down of the Mahayana sutras.

There is also a spiritual necessity for the existence of the Mahayana. You would know this only when you are quite advanced on the spiritual path, so this also doesn't count as an academic proof. Which is unfortunate.

I hope this discussion has not been in vain.

Malcolm wrote:

There is a difference between personally accepting tenets of faith on the one hand and asserting them as empirical facts on the other. If the former are asserted as the latter, that is the pathway of fanaticism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 24th, 2021 at 11:14 PM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Matylda said:

The whole topic which I picked up concerns exclusively Japanese zen.

Astus said:

The main point still stands: Practising with koans is in order to gain realisation, shikantaza is practice-realisation, so there is a difference. If there were stages to be reached in shikantaza, then realisation were apart from practice.

Malcolm wrote:

The consequence of this is that one is only realized during shikantaza. How does this escape the equipoise/post-equipoise division? And if there is a division between equipoise/post-equipoise, this means that there are stages.

In any case, stages are not measures of realization, but only qualities.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 25th, 2021 at 12:36 AM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Matt J said:

Essentially, what I've seen with this interpretation is that the "stages" are just shifted to "pre-Shikanataza" stage.

Malcolm wrote:

So Shikantaza becomes itself becomes a stage, which one is either on or not. Then there is the problem of what "practice" means. If "practice-realization" means the practice is being in a state of realization, then I think, most people are shit out of luck.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 25th, 2021 at 12:52 AM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Matt J said:

Similarly, if you're drifting off into the alaya, fantasizing about sex or murdering your enemies, falling asleep, you're not really practicing Shikantaza.

Matylda said:

fantasizing about sex or murdering your enemies, falling asleep - all those are not alaya state, they are just common thoughts. so it has nothing to do with arriving at alaya in zazen.. if anyone will adopt such opinion about alaya will be in serious trouble, and will mistake all kinds of experience in zazen... is is not my opinion, but one may find description of the alaya state of zazen in writings of some masters...

Malcolm wrote:

Why would one want to arrive at the ālaya state?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 25th, 2021 at 1:50 AM

Title: Re: The Dao of Politics and ideology

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

So the big question for me is... how do we maintain the unconditional love and compassion of a Buddha while engaging in petty squabbles and arguments over politics?

Malcolm wrote:

By understanding that everything is like a dream or an illusion.

I don't hate cockroaches, but if they invade my home, and will not leave peacefully, then I will have to call the exterminator, because they bring disease, etc.

I really dislike the ideology that the GOP embraces, and I think that in general, people who follow such ideas are fools who do not understand how harmful their ideology is to the planet and everyone on it. We are at a crisis point in the history of our species, and if we do not get our shit together democratically now, it is inevitable that draconian measures will be needed later to save our species, if it is worth saving at all.

Still, dreams and illusions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 25th, 2021 at 2:50 AM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Matylda said:

fantasizing about sex or murdering your enemies, falling asleep - all those are not alaya state, they are just common thoughts. so it has nothing to do with arriving at alaya in zazen.. if anyone will adopt such opinion about alaya will be in serious trouble, and will mistake all kinds of experience in zazen... is is not my opinion, but one may find description of the alaya state of zazen in writings of some masters...

Malcolm wrote:

Why would one want to arrive at the ālaya state?

Matylda said:

nobody sober of course

but zen masters warned disciples that in the course of great efforts it happens that one attains the great quietude and equipoise... the state is overwhelming and many consider it as great achievement... but it all way wrong and even dangerous.

it is not from my own experience since I have very limited, but it is what one can hear or read from experienced masters, since our friend wrote that thinking about killing, sexing etc. is of alaya in zazen I just reacted, since I have never heard such things... alaya is not desired state or is not considered desirable. But based on the history of zen we may see that it was problem since those who were trapped considered themselves liberated or enlightened etc. it was just big mistake.

Malcolm wrote:

Ok, in Dzogchen, this is a very great error.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 25th, 2021 at 5:09 AM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche - Hevajra Empowerment and 4 Dharmas of Gampopa

Content:

Sennin said:

This empowerment was for the 9 deity mandala?

Cinnabar said:

It was for the coemergent form of Hevajra. The practice emphasizes Hevajra and Nairatmya in union, alone. Each with two arms.

There are mother and father mantras.

Malcolm wrote:

"Sahaja" here simply means "natural," i.e. one face, two arms, and two legs.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 25th, 2021 at 5:27 AM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche - Hevajra Empowerment and 4 Dharmas of Gampopa

Content:

Cinnabar said:

It was for the coemergent form of Hevajra. The practice emphasizes Hevajra and Nairatmya in union, alone. Each with two arms.

There are mother and father mantras.

Malcolm wrote:

"Sahaja" here simply means "natural," i.e. one face, two arms, and two legs.

Cinnabar said:

That makes sense.

I think some people like to translate sahaja as “coemergent”. Which makes some sense from the parts of the Tibetan lhan cig tu skye ba. But I can’t translate, just poke at words.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, they do, but they miss the meaning. Lhan cig skyes is just a translation of sahaja, and sahaja, in this context, does not mean connate, it means simply "natural" in contrast with the three faced, six arm form, or the eight faced, sixteen arm form, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 25th, 2021 at 9:49 AM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche - Hevajra Empowerment and 4 Dharmas of Gampopa

Content:

Cinnabar said:

That makes sense.

I think some people like to translate sahaja as “coemergent”. Which makes some sense from the parts of the Tibetan lhan cig tu skye ba. But I can’t translate, just poke at words.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, they do, but they miss the meaning. Lhan cig skyes is just a translation of sahaja, and sahaja, in this context, does not mean connate, it means simply "natural" in contrast with the three faced, six arm form, or the eight faced, sixteen arm form, etc.

Cinnabar said:

In some sense, isn’t “natural” symbolic of “connote”?

Malcolm wrote:

In this case it just means a deity that is one face two arms, like a natural human, it doesn’t mean anything more than that.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 25th, 2021 at 10:12 AM

Title: Re: Books on Early Mahayana Development, History and Sutras

Content:

Aemilius said:

I have said before that there are no academic proofs for this claim or view, but there are spiritual proofs, and these are not accepted by the academic world view. I.e. the Five eyes and the Six supernormal powers, these have been accepted as a basis of knowledge in the Dharma for 2500 years. Next arises the question whose extraordinary perceptions will be accepted ? ...

PeterC said:

Ok let’s pause there. Is this a personal insight you have developed? Or has a teacher told you this? If so, who?

There is also a spiritual necessity for the existence of the Mahayana. You would know this only when you are quite advanced on the spiritual path, so this also doesn't count as an academic proof. Which is unfortunate.

Actually this is not a spiritual but a textual insight. The disappearance and reappearance of the Buddhadharma over time is discussed extensively in many places.

But are you asserting that you are quite advanced on the spiritual path and can therefore perceive this directly in a way that those of us in the cheap seats cannot? I hope this discussion has not been in vain.
That depends on whether you plan on providing backup for your assertion or not.

Aemilius said:
Nagarjuna says in Bodhicittavivarana (or in Bodhisambhara) that one should not doubt the authenticity of Mahayana.

Malcolm wrote:
Ratnavali, actually.

Aemilius said:
Vasubandhu defends the authenticity of Mahayana in his commentary to Maitreya's Mahayanasutralankara, actually the original verses of Maitreya also defend the authenticity of Mahayana sutras.

Malcolm wrote:
Yes. But thus does not prove your points. All this proves is that someone said something.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, January 25th, 2021 at 7:36 PM
Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori
Content:
Malcolm wrote:

This all very much depends on what one means by "enlightenment."
The consequence of this is that one is only realized during shikantaza. How does this escape the equipoise/post-equipoise division? And if there is a division between equipoise/post-equipoise, this means that there are stages.

Astus said:
The main point is that if shikantaza is practice-realisation, then there is no point of working towards a realisation apart from it, there is no satori later. A comparison of the two approaches from Shohaku Okumura:

'Uchiyama Roshi emphasizes that the zazen practice transmitted from Dogen Zenji to Sawaki Roshi differs from D. T. Suzuki's Zen. For example, Dogen Zenji described the oneness of a practitioner and other people and objects, using the example of a cook and his work with colleagues, ingredients, firewood, and water, as well as those who eat the food. In "Tenzokyokun," or "Instructions for the Cook," in Dogen's Pure Standards for the Zen Community, he wrote, "All day and all night, things come to mind and the mind attends to them; at one with them all, diligently carry on the Way.” Here there’s no mysterious satori, or becoming conscious of the Unconscious. There’s only sincere, wholehearted practice in ordinary activities.’

(Zazen Is the Stability of One’s Whole Life, in Homeless Kodo)

And from Kodo Sawaki:

‘Nine hundred years ago there was a Zen system in which there were gradations of satori—three hundred and some tens of cases. Finally completing them all you would perfect a great satori. That system was contrasted with what was referred to as mokusho Zen [silent illumination]. It was also labeled eko and hensho. The other teaching [which uses koans] was called kanna Zen.

Dogen Zenji’s is a religion of practice. Dogen goes so far as to say there is no benefit in recitation with the mouth. In the Bendowa, Dogen wrote: “Continuously uttering sounds is like a frog crying in the night in a spring rice paddy and is ultimately worthless.”

In the Butsuyuikyogyo, too, [the Buddha] warns against useless talk... Satori is not something that is uncovered by the mind. Practice is enlightenment.

Again in the Bendowa, “A beginner’s wholehearted practice of the Way is the totality of the original enlightenment.” And in Zanmai O Zanmai [The King of Samadhi], “The posture for shikantaza is the most important meaning in Buddhist teaching.”

(From a talk titled “Dogen’s Zen,” delivered in August 1952 in Kumamoto, in Discovering the True Self)

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, January 25th, 2021 at 11:25 PM

Title: Re: Wait, so Karma and Rebirth don't exist?

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

I very much think that whether karma and rebirth are facts or not depends largely on how one defines karma and rebirth. And, there can be many definitions.

Malcolm wrote:

The Buddha defined them pretty clearly in many places. So there it is not the case that there are many definitions, unless by "many" you mean the Buddha defined them consistently many times.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 26th, 2021 at 12:13 AM

Title: Re: Questions about "Early" as in early early.

Content:

neander said:

Buddhist lineages not only did not respect but killed and slaughtered different versions of Shangha.

You can just study a short period like Kamakura and Sengoku in Japan to realize this. Armed attacks were very frequent between various lineages. In the main monasteries in mount Hiei armed attacks occurred within the very same temple, each side accusing the other of slandering the Dharma.

The implementation of what a Shanga should have been was not clear since the first council when already 19 different schools had different ideas...

Malcolm wrote:

You are conflating politics of Medieval Japan with Ancient India now? The Buddha's split into eighteen schools was predicted in King Krikin's dream. This split occurred because in a past life, the Buddha himself had been a sectarian.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 26th, 2021 at 1:18 AM

Title: Re: Questions about "Early" as in early early.

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Another point. Ven Bhavaviveka cites a version of the Sīsapāvanasutta (familiar to us via the Pali Canon most likely) where the Buddha addressed it to Ven Ananda instead of the bhiksusamgha like it is in both the Sarvastivadin and Theravadin versions.

Malcolm wrote:

It can also be a paraphrase, a misquote, and so on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 26th, 2021 at 2:20 AM

Title: Re: Wait, so Karma and Rebirth don't exist?

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

I very much think that whether karma and rebirth are facts or not depends largely on how one defines karma and rebirth. And, there can be many definitions.

Malcolm wrote:

The Buddha defined them pretty clearly in many places. So there it is not the case that there are many definitions, unless by "many" you mean the Buddha defined them consistently many times.

PadmaVonSamba said:

Read the follow-up paragraph.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, even so, there are many definitions which try to include this idea of absence of self, which are nevertheless quite at a variance with what the Buddha taught, so my point remains.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 26th, 2021 at 4:56 AM

Title: Re: Questions about "Early" as in early early.

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

What follows is entirely my own theory: If we dismiss the text-critical evolutionary model but retain what we have learned from the critical study of the texts, then we get an image of Mahāsāṃghika communities significantly more influenced by Mahayana

Malcolm wrote:

Walser's new book opines that the Ur-PP sūtra was written by a Sarvastivādin monk who was from a Maitrayaṇī Brahmin family in Mathura in the last half of the first century, CE, and that it intended to present a Buddhist compatible version of brahman, and further, that it was a fundamentally political move to secure a position at court. He further argues that Mahāyāna arose in Brahmin communities where "Buddhist" and "Brahmin" were ambiguous distinctions at best.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 26th, 2021 at 5:01 AM

Title: Genealogies of Mahāyāna Buddhism: Emptiness, Power and the Question of Origin

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Walser's new book opines that the Ur-PP sūtra was written by a Sarvastivādin monk who was from a Maitrayaṇī Brahmin family in Mathura in the last half of the first century, CE, and that it intended to present a Buddhist compatible version of brahman, and further, that it was a fundamentally political move to secure a position at court. He further argues that Mahāyāna arose in Brahmin communities where "Buddhist" and "Brahmin" were ambiguous distinctions at best.

Discuss!

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 26th, 2021 at 5:33 AM

Title: Re: Questions about "Early" as in early early.

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Really? Is he published by Princeton University Press? I usually only associate that level of speculative incompetency with them, publishing "Greek Buddha" and Elaine Pagels. I've read other scholarship that several older redactions of the PP sūtras are Āndhraka in origin. I'll find the paper in a bit.

Malcolm wrote:
Routledge.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, January 26th, 2021 at 5:34 AM
Title: Re: Questions about "Early" as in early early.
Content:

Caoimhghín said:
Really? Is he published by Princeton University Press? I usually only associate that level of speculative incompetency with them, publishing "Greek Buddha" and Elaine Pagels. I've read other scholarship that several older redactions of the PP sūtras are Āndhraka in origin. I'll find the paper in a bit.

Malcolm wrote:
He goes over all of the older scholarship. You may not agree, but he is hardly incompetent. Please respond here:

<https://www.dharmawheel.net/viewtopic.php?f=102&t=35714>

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, January 26th, 2021 at 8:30 AM
Title: Re: Questions about "Early" as in early early.
Content:

Caoimhghín said:
I'll respond there once I've read the work. I'll say what it sounds like, trash pseudo-academic pop Buddhology like "Greek Buddha." I will be very surprised if any of his claims are anything specific. I have to first finish an Ng text I am reading for another thread and then see if I want to buy the Genealogies text. It isn't the sort of thing I would ever normally spend money on given that description of it.

Malcolm wrote:
His claims are actually quite specific, nothing like the latest Beckwith book. He is a good scholar actually,

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, January 26th, 2021 at 9:24 AM
Title: Re: Questions about "Early" as in early early.
Content:

Caoimhghín said:
I look forward to being pleasantly surprised if I purchase it.

Malcolm wrote:
You will be. You may not agree with him, not saying I do, but one of interesting points of departure he makes is his administration that he wrote the book once he realized he didn't actually know why he thought he knew what Mahayana was.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, January 26th, 2021 at 10:00 PM

Title: Re: Books on Early Mahayana Development, History and Sutras

Content:

Aemilius said:

But I have persistently, during the course of thirty years, seen what I have said above, and a little more: Shakyamuni got certain Mahayana teachings from a materially existing order of bodhisattvas.

Malcolm wrote:

Source for this claim? This is after all the academic forum, and you've offered nothing to support this claim.

Aemilius said:

And also, when Shakyamuni had attained Buddhahood he had direct access (telepathically) to the teachings of thousands of Buddhas, and this is another source to the Mahayana sutras, which he then "edited" (in his mind) to suit the present situation on planet Earth and in India.

Malcolm wrote:

Speculative.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 27th, 2021 at 1:12 AM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This all very much depends on what one means by "enlightenment."

Astus said:

'Students of the Way should desire to be obstructed by the Way. To be obstructed by the Way means to forget any trace of enlightenment. Practitioners of the Way must first of all have faith in the Way. Those who have faith in the buddha-way must believe that one (the self) is within the Way from the beginning; that you are free from delusive desires, upside-down ways of seeing things, excesses or deficiencies, and mistakes. Arousing this kind of faith, clarifying the Way and practicing the Way comprise the foundation of learning the Way. We do this by sitting and cutting off the root of the discriminating mind; by turning away from the path of intellectual understanding. This is a skillful way to lead beginners. Next, drop off body and mind, and throw away both delusion and enlightenment. This is the second stage. Truly it is most difficult to find a person who believes that his self is within the buddha-way. Only if you believe that you are really inside the Way, will you naturally clarify the scenery of the Great Way and understand the origin of delusion and enlightenment. Try to sit cutting off the root of discriminating mind. Eight or nine out of ten will be able to immediately see the Way.'

(Gakudo Yojinshu by Dogen, in https://www.sotozen.com/eng/library/leaflet/heartofzen/pdf/Heart_of_Zen.pdf, p 32-33)

Malcolm wrote:

Looks like stages to me, in direct contradiction to your claim.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 27th, 2021 at 6:06 AM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Looks like stages to me, in direct contradiction to your claim.

Astus said:

Yes, seems so, but not. The first stage mentioned is of faith, the second is acting upon that faith, and it's the second what comprises shikantaza.

Malcolm wrote:

So, shikantaza is kind of like nembutsu or nam myoho renge kyo.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 27th, 2021 at 6:33 AM

Title: Re: The Dao of Politics and ideology

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

it's about charging up your spirit board to cast spells at your enemies, get girls, and become immortal.

Malcolm wrote:

The problem, as ever, is finding the right charger.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 27th, 2021 at 7:52 PM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

So, shikantaza is kind of like nembutsu or nam myoho renge kyo.

Astus said:

There are similarities.

'Dogen taught his religion through the language and lore of Chinese Ch'an; yet in many ways the structure of his religion reflects familiar patterns in the soteriological strategies of Japanese writers like Shinran and Nichiren. This is hardly surprising, since many of the same issues that determined the rules of Ch'an discourse in China - the theory of the supreme, Buddha vehicle and the perfect, sudden practice appropriate to it - had long been at work in the dominant Tendai system in Japan, the system that initially educated Dogen, Shinran, Nichiren, and other leaders of the reformation. Despite their obvious differences, in very broad terms, the ideologies of all three of these famous religious thinkers can be seen as an attempt to define the true practice of the Tendai Buddha vehicle - a sudden practice to be based solely on the absolute truth of Buddhahood itself, not on the upaya of the relative teachings and gradual practices.' (Dogen's Manuals of Zen Meditation, p 165)

Malcolm wrote:

So, Tendai in Zen robes. Ok, got it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 27th, 2021 at 7:54 PM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Matylda said:

I see.. well official soto is the very problem.. those people deny everything when they hear satori etc. and start talking, that everything is satori etc. and that practice with aim of satori is almost a sin.. and of course they have myriad excuses and nice theories.

Astus said:

Why expect Soto to follow ideas that are prevalent in Rinzai (koan practice, dokusan, emphasis on kensho, etc.)? Even if once the two branches were quite similar, after the 18th century reforms in both, they have intentionally distanced themselves from each other, unlike in China where lineage association has practically no bearing on one's views and methods.

Malcolm wrote:

You recall that our friend Matylda is from a Soto family, right?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 27th, 2021 at 9:09 PM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Matylda said:

Where is it said that koan dokusan satori etc. belongs only to rinzai??? it is not true.

Astus said:

I meant commonly found in and associated with Rinzai, not that it was their property or that others were excluded. If you say it's not the consequence of reformations that Sotoshu is what it is today, then what do you say is the reason behind it? Also, do you find current Rinzai more according to your standards of Zen, and would that be because they practise with koans?

Malcolm wrote:

I think what she is saying is the picture of Soto zen you paint is abstracted from books by western scholars, rather than a deep knowledge of the tradition based on fluency in Japanese, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, January 27th, 2021 at 9:44 PM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

I think what she is saying is the picture of Soto zen you paint is abstracted from books by western scholars, rather than a deep knowledge of the tradition based on fluency in Japanese, etc.

Astus said:

It seems to me more like criticism of Soto both in Japan and in Western countries. Of course, if it turns out to be otherwise, and all she meant so far was a problem with the academic representation of Soto while at the same time what actually happens in temples and centres are fine with her, then I have misread things.

Malcolm wrote:

If I understand what she has been saying here for more than a decade, she is criticizing what she sees as historical revisionism in Japan, which in her view has had a deleterious effect on how the Soto tradition is understood in the West by both academics and practitioners, resulting an anti-intellectual, enervated interpretation of Shikantaza that is more of a faith-based practice than authentic zen, and does not represent the actual practice of the Soto school over the centuries. She can correct my assessment of her view if she likes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 28th, 2021 at 4:11 AM

Title: Re: Academic Sources on Development of Vajrayana

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

What do you think of the term "mantrayana?" I personally find it more precise than "Vajrayana" and wish it had more widespread use.

Malcolm wrote:

In the Indian Buddhist tantras preserved in the Kengyur, there are 93 mentions of vajrayāna; 2 mentions of guhyamantrayāna; and 21 mentions of mantrayāna.

In the Indian commentarial literature preserved in the Tengyur, there are 461 mentions of vajrayāna; 75 for guhyamantrayāna; and 191 for mantrayāna, but many times, mantrayāna and guhyamantrayāna are quite close to each other in proximity, meaning that the former is often a contraction of the latter.

I would say, that since the Vajramāla commentary and other texts equate Vajrayāna and Mantrayāna, Vajrayāna is clearly the more widespread and widely used term in Indian sources, and therefore, mere force of usage in Indian literature favors the use of the term Vajrayāna as an overall name for this Buddhist textual movement.

In Tibetan sources one often see "Secret Mantra Vajrayāna" (gsang sngags rdo rje'i theg pa).

To add to this, the earlier tantras transmitted to Japan are quite few in number, compared with the very large amount of tantras transmitted to Tibet at exactly the same time (800 CE). The term "vajrayāna" was already widely used in India by this time even for so-called "lower tantras" like the Subāhuparipṛcchā Tantra, or "yoga tantras" like the Vajraśikhara tantra, in which is found the term "vajrayāna," though not in the incomplete version translated by Amoghasiddhi.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 28th, 2021 at 4:43 AM

Title: Re: OCD

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

OCD thoughts and ruminations (as anyone with them will surely attest) aren't impulses involving much volition, they simply appear, and indeed they seem to sort of have a life of their own.

Malcolm wrote:

OCD appears to be a seizure disorder.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 28th, 2021 at 5:18 AM

Title: Re: OCD

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I repetitively thought about things, it would prevent them from happening.

Malcolm wrote:

I suffered from that during the 2016 campaign...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, January 28th, 2021 at 6:29 AM

Title: Re: Academic Sources on Development of Vajrayana

Content:

tingdzin said:

in fact little in common at all except perhaps in terms of ritual structures (and some scholars think that ritual structures are in fact the defining feature of "tantra"). If one does define tantra in this way, then one could say that "tantra" can be found in non-Vajrayana Buddhism. It all depends on how one uses the words.

Malcolm wrote:

The earliest text we know of to be titled a "tantra" is the fabled Agniveśa Tantra, held to be the core text around which the Caraka Samhita is written. Caraka Samhita is the earliest Ayurvedic medical text, most likely written somewhere around 100 BCE-100 CE.

In Tibetan Medicine, the word "tantra" is held to mean "to protect the body" from "tanu + tra."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 29th, 2021 at 1:46 AM

Title: Re: Books on Early Mahayana Development, History and Sutras

Content:

Aemilius said:

I agree. But that is the nature of the present cultural situation and the situation within Buddhism. Buddhism indeed puts you into a messianic position, if you decide to trust your own spiritual experiences and what they tell you. It is not only messianic, it also accords with what the Buddha has promised to all his followers who put his teachings into practice.

Malcolm wrote:

And sometimes it happens that Māra appears to you in the guise of the Buddha, or a bodhisattva, or a ḍākinī and declares, "This will be your name, this will be the place where you attain buddhahood, this will be your retinue" etc. The deceptions of Māra are many, genuine experiences on the path is rare. Especially in the West, but also among Chinese people, there are many people deluded by Māra, who do not rely on qualified teachers, and carry others along in their deluded vision.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 29th, 2021 at 3:41 AM

Title: Re: What do ACADEMICS say are the origins of Avalokiteshvara and Amitabha?

Content:

Queequeg said:

hey can, through the use of the various tools of analysis at their disposal, offer informative answers about things like the origin of Amitabha, but that information is not really useful to buddhasmṛti practice and could actually be discouraging and a hindrance... "You mean Amitabha is Ahura Mazda?"

tingdzin said:

Yes, I would say that if you don't have a mind that can see nuances, or is not capable of holding on to two seemingly contradictory views, you might be well advised to concentrate on practice and not dip your toe into scholarship. If you are an experienced practitioner whose primary focus is still practice, then scholarship can be quite useful, for the reasons mentioned above.

Queequeg said:

Case by case. There's not a lot of nuance once one starts poking around in the origins of the Mahayana and Vajrayana pantheon. The faithful versions and the academic versions often say very different things that no amount of nuance is going to resolve. Avoiding specifics, when a deity is a central focus in a tradition, with a back story that puts it squarely in the Buddhadharma tradition, and then you look at academic studies that show this was the totem deity of some tribe or caste in the distant past, in a religious system that had nothing to do with Buddhism... how do you then interpret a teacher's claims that they had a spiritual communion with this deity and received sacred instructions? To keep it up is going to require some serious fudging of details or putting up firewalls in the mind.

I'm fully open to accepting I'm one of those people who lack the intellectual finesse to reconcile divergent claims over the same intellectual geography.

Malcolm wrote:

The Indian mind was a lot more flexible about such issues. This is why one sees tropes shared with the Ramayāna that show up recontextualized in a Buddhist context, for example, to explain the origins of the Buddhist protectress, Śrīdevī Mahākālī. Śrīdevī is known originally named Sita Śankhapāla. She elopes with Dasagriva aka Ravanna, having been tricked into it by Dasagriva's sister, Remati. Umadevi (the worldly manifestation of the protectress Ekajati), her mother disowns her, and Sita Śankhapāla takes on the form of a rakṣasī as a result, etc., eventually to be tamed by the Brahmin Vararuci. Since as far as I am concerned this is a myth and the myth of Sita's abduction by Ravanna have equal standing as a myth, I don't worry about it too much. In Tibet, different schools have different accounts of the taming of Rudra, all based on Indian sources, they are often in conflict about details, and no one blinks an eyelash. Indeed, in the same school different tantric cycles will have differing explanations of the taming of Rudra, and again, no one bats an eyelash. The validity of the practice has more to do with whether one can manifest siddhis from it, rather than whether or not it fits some neurotic compulsion to reconcile different narratives. For example, in Shingon, it is maintained that the tantras were first revealed by Vajrasattva in an iron tower in South India. In Tibet, in the Sarma schools, it is generally maintained that the tantras were also revealed in South India by a king who travelled to Oddiyāna and received them a siddha yoginī who was descendent from Nāgas. In Nyingma, it is generally held they were first revealed by a king in Zahor named Dza. While there is a bit of bickering back and forth between the Nyingmas and the Sarma schools over the accuracy of the interpretation of the King Dza account, not one really cares that much. Then, of course, the Bonpos claim they are the source of everything, but no one pays them much mind either. When Buddhists resort to the services of Bonpo Lamas it is because the latter have siddhi, not because Buddhists accept Bonpo history. But talk of siddhis will get you shut down pretty fast in the Academy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 29th, 2021 at 5:15 AM

Title: Re: What do ACADEMICS say are the origins of Avalokiteshvara and Amitabha?

Content:

Queequeg said:

I don't know if there is anything monolithic we can actually work with like "the Indian mind." Even if there was, the records of extensive, hair splitting debates suggests "the Indian mind" has a penchant for endless disputation rather than a simple smiling acceptance of divergent details.

Malcolm wrote:

They tended to argue about atoms and first principles, not narrative tropes.

I

Queequeg said:

can buy a widespread attitude of just shrugging details off implicitly acknowledging "its all just stories anyway" said with an Indian shake of the head.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, this is what I am saying. Why else could someone set down in writing a tale clearly related to the Ramayāna with a straight face in a Buddhist tantra of authentic Indian provenance?

Queequeg said:

In a practice context I grok the way fictions are freely utilized for certain salvific or edifying purposes and participated in in a manner that takes the fictions as true. Running out of the burning house to claim deer carts, goat carts and ox carts, and all that. But, I also don't think I have to search very hard for people who have lost interest in Dharma because they found out that the Mahayana sutras were written half a millennia after the parinirvana, if that even happened. There's a whole movement of Buddhists trying to save for themselves what they can by excising what doesn't fit with their scientific truths.

Malcolm wrote:

These people don't believe in siddhis. They are fairy killers, homicidally bent on lynching Tinker Bell.

Queequeg said:

Anyway, my point was, an academic approach to Buddhism is not necessarily going to be helpful for practice, and may well not be compatible. For some people. The academic study of Buddhism is not Buddhism. Its social science.

Malcolm wrote:

Depends on the person. I find lots of benefit in academic studies, if only because the Academy translates a lot of stuff from Sanskrit, Chinese, Tibetan, etc. I just ignore their conclusions, where I don't agree, or snort in derision at some of their total lack of real knowledge of what they are studying. And some academics, while not personally interested in practice, like Robert Mayer, nevertheless do excellent work.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 29th, 2021 at 5:36 AM

Title: Re: Funeral Homes are Overwhelmed

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Yup, thanks to Donald F@#cking Trump and other idiotic world leaders who did not act in a timely fashion. Their hands are covered in blood.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 29th, 2021 at 6:42 AM

Title: Re: What do ACADEMICS say are the origins of Avalokiteshvara and Amitabha?

Content:

Queequeg said:

Its really genius that a religious path was developed consciously using this suspension of belief. That is a HUGE departure from most other religions that assert their stories are factually 100% true and will kill you for not believing.

Malcolm wrote:

I am pretty sure that educated Indian knew that the narratives in Mahāyāna sūtras were not meant to be taken literally. They are largely emblematic, it's only outside of India where people started killing each other over what were, in India, merely emblematic narratives that served didactic, rather than historical, purposes. We see this here all the time, with notions of Mappo, and triumphalism of this school over that when all of us are actually just schmucks who have barely scratched the surface of the Mahāyāna path of accumulation, let alone even come anywhere near the path of seeing.

Queequeg said:

So I think there are two ways of looking at the academic study of Buddhism. One is as the social scientist, as one who actually does the academic work. The other is to take the fruits of the social scientist, particularly the translations.

Malcolm wrote:

Sometimes i read with interest what people say, like Walser, etc. Mostly, I am just looking for sources.

Queequeg said:

I guess to an extent the views I'm expressing here are based on my idiosyncratic adventure in the Academy as a practicing Buddhist studying Buddhism. It was not without confusion, which I was warned about by my Buddhist advisors - both of my advisors were practicing Buddhists and I think they held some sympathy for me, for which I'm grateful. The atmosphere they fostered, however, may have also contributed to my confusion about the distinctions between Buddhism as an object of academic inquiry and Buddhism as a path. I'm passing on a warning to youngsters who might go down that path. Hopefully they're more savvy than I was, and if not, behold my scars and abandoned dead ends, wasted time and thought processes.

Malcolm wrote:

I hear you. People in Buddhist studies mainly write about what other people in Buddhist studies write. For example, there is a guy named David Drewes, as far as I can tell, he has no actual interest in Early Mahāyāna, but he is really interested in dredging through 150 years of Western Academic scholarship in this paper:

https://d1wqtxts1xzle7.cloudfront.net/35500600/Drewes-Early_Mahayana_I_rev_ed.pdf?1415632234=&response-content-disposition=inline%3B+filename%3DEarly_Indian_Mahayana_Buddhism_I_Recent.pdf&Expires=1611877106&Signature=Rhb3hudRIJS9EWKTIIfxEPBjc7ABp4ZcSq7lgXMEU3LT h0XmZQn46DPKPDUt06S-DY1oJo0QNclwSleUImczehBakTKQBDIDZNJXh6JY3TMaZYvBA0Nz8Tupyc1WPGletNj-czEmCGAwmfIn2C0QopamNhpXxcGHS~deCw-MH6e-z9n-8~tVHmtMnwW29sbihgrwSjE-gCwxnt7BSuOolTy8UeJQ4hMqoAQhYe-PbJtWQzodwRLbp3Go2y6eVWfvatttOb~NXqX~YPkLglt1JtnB-JotC~5fv94L3iijpYRWfig5AN3le7NmMYfgNTbWcX16rgQTa1OCbOn9s6FsyA__&Key-Pair-Id=APKAJLOHF5GGSLRBV4ZA

You can see from his paper, that Buddhology is as equally involved with critiquing Western scholarship as it is in examining primary sources.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 29th, 2021 at 10:36 AM

Title: Re: What do ACADEMICS say are the origins of Avalokiteshvara and Amitabha?

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

I found that engaging with academic scholarship can kill your faith. At least for the young and impressionable like I was when I was exploring buddhism in this way. Might not be worth it.

Malcolm wrote:

Only if your faith is blind.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 29th, 2021 at 10:38 AM

Title: Re: Mansplaining Women's Enlightenment

Content:

PeterC said:

The book sounds completely idiotic.

Queequeg said:

Karen needs shanti, too.

PeterC said:

"I teach suffering and the ending of suffering"

"You can't come in here talking about suffering. I'm an American citizen, I have Rights under The Constitution, no immigrant is going to tell me I have to suffer, I want to talk to your manager about this, it's illegal for you to make me suffer!"

"This is the noble truth of the causes of suffering: the desire that makes for further becoming - accompanied by passion and delight..."

"You're saying that I can't have happiness. I know the Constitution, it says there that every American can pursue happiness, at least I think it's the constitution, but you know what, I don't need to read it, I know it's there, and you're telling me that I can't be happy. You know what you are? You're a communist. A leftist communist fascist. You're unamerican. If you don't like it here why don't you go back to your shithole country like president trump said?"

Malcolm wrote:

Yup, pretty much explains one half of the country...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 29th, 2021 at 10:54 AM

Title: Re: What do ACADEMICS say are the origins of Avalokiteshvara and Amitabha?

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

I found that engaging with academic scholarship can kill your faith. At least for the young and impressionable like I was when I was exploring buddhism in this way. Might not be worth it.

Malcolm wrote:

Only if your faith is blind.

SilenceMonkey said:

Good point. Like I said, in the beginning of the journey when young and impressionable. With not much else to go on than western academia.

It takes a good while for faith to develop beyond the level of blind faith. And it doesn't come about through academics, but Dharma study and practice. A lot of students starting to learn about Dharma will confuse academia with Dharma.

Malcolm wrote:

People need to make up their own minds. We just explain what Dharma is and what it is not. Trying to condition people is an error.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 29th, 2021 at 11:01 AM

Title: Re: Funeral Homes are Overwhelmed

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Our society has spent so long now with the mantra of "efficiency" and "free market" being synonymous that we've now "efficiency-ed" ourselves and our family members out of dying of Covid with a shred of dignity...especially if you're poor. It's so disgusting it's hard to put into words.

Malcolm wrote:

Blaming capitalism is facile, anyone with half a brain could see a huge market opportunity in preventing covid. Instead, populism handed us this crisis.

The problem is politics, not economics, the same goes for climate change.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 29th, 2021 at 11:16 AM

Title: Re: How Mentally Ill Prisoners are Treated in the United States

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Well, it's not just poor people; our justice system is racist.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 29th, 2021 at 9:03 PM

Title: Re: Funeral Homes are Overwhelmed

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Our society has spent so long now with the mantra of "efficiency" and "free market" being synonymous that we've now "efficiency-ed" ourselves and our family members out of dying of Covid with a shred of dignity...especially if you're poor. It's so disgusting it's hard to put into words.

Malcolm wrote:

Blaming capitalism is facile, anyone with half a brain could see a huge market opportunity in preventing covid. Instead, populism handed us this crisis.

The problem is politics, not economics, the same goes for climate change.

Johnny Dangerous said:

I disagree, decades of neoliberalism have affected our response to this directly, it's been a race to the bottom for "efficiency" (i.e. taking apart the commons) and whether it's not being able to produce or own PPE efficiently, or expecting "the marketplace" to take care of what it clearly cannot, economic policy is a big player in the equation.

Malcolm wrote:

Economic policy is politics.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, January 29th, 2021 at 10:18 PM

Title: Re: Funeral Homes are Overwhelmed

Content:

KathyLauren said:

There may be market opportunities in the fight against covid, but the marketplace could never have prevented it.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, of course not.

KathyLauren said:

Even with good leadership, Americans will always put their personal wants ahead of the public good. You can debate which policies make it worse, but the problem is based on the values on which your nation was founded. Policies will not make it go away.

Malcolm wrote:

This is not a uniquely American flaw. Example, Britain.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 30th, 2021 at 12:06 AM

Title: Re: What do ACADEMICS say are the origins of Avalokiteshvara and Amitabha?

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

I found that engaging with academic scholarship can kill your faith. At least for the young and impressionable like I was when I was exploring buddhism in this way. Might not be worth it.

Malcolm wrote:

Only if your faith is blind.

Queequeg said:

I think the sentiment behind this goes too far. The path needs to be open for people of all capacities, not just the geniuses and the vain who think they're geniuses. Sometimes, life presents such circumstances that faith is all a person has. Or, at the beginning stages when one doesn't have the breadth of knowledge and experience to discern the path, faith serves as the vehicle. Faith is the universal gateway. Which is why those who teach faith paths ought to be held to the highest standards.

Malcolm wrote:

There are three kinds of faith identified by the Indian masters: blind faith, aspiring faith, and confident faith. The latter two are workable. The first results in Qanon. When I first met a real Dharma teacher, it was made very clear that to me that blind faith was very undesirable.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 30th, 2021 at 12:12 AM

Title: Re: How Mentally Ill Prisoners are Treated in the United States

Content:

Prison Policy Initiative said:

Nevertheless, 4 out of 5 people in prison or jail are locked up for something other than a drug offense — either a more serious offense or an even less serious one.

Johnny Dangerous said:

So yeah, I think I'd take issue with this,

Malcolm wrote:

And rightly so, a significant majority of people (I can find a stat, but not right now) in American prisons who are incarcerated for non-drug related offenses were intoxicated when the offense was committed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 30th, 2021 at 1:53 AM

Title: Re: Tibetan Translation Help

Content:

Seeker12 said:

Hello,

I'm wondering if anyone could help me with a word-by-word translation for a six line prayer in Tibetan. I know a good deal of the words, it's just pieces here and there that I'm trying to figure out. Ideally just a couple of PMs would do it. Thanks for consideration.

Malcolm wrote:

post it

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 30th, 2021 at 2:08 AM

Title: Re: How Mentally Ill Prisoners are Treated in the United States

Content:

Matt J said:

When you say intoxicated, are you including alcohol? Because JD claim was that decriminalizing drugs would empty out the prisons. In this case, AFAIK, alcohol is legal in the U.S. presuming you are over 21.

Malcolm wrote:

And rightly so, a significant majority of people (I can find a stat, but not right now) in American prisons who are incarcerated for non-drug related offenses were intoxicated when the offense was committed.

Sure, booze may be legal, but it sure is at the root of a lot of criminal behavior.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 30th, 2021 at 3:59 AM

Title: Re: Tibetan Translation Help

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

དུས་གསུམ་སངས་རྒྱལ་གྱི་བླ་མ་ཐོ་ཆེ། times three buddha guru precious

དངོས་ཐུབ་ཀྱན་བདག་བདེ་བ་ཆེན་པོའི་ཞབས།

siddhi all master bliss great feet

བར་ཆད་ཀྱན་སེལ་བདུད་འདུལ་དྲག་པོ་རྩལ། obstacles all remove māra tamer fierce powerful

གསོལ་བ་འདེབས་སོ་བྱིན་གྱིས་བརྒྱབ་ཏུ་གསོལ། supplicate request give blessing please

ཕྱི་ནང་གསང་བའི་བར་ཆད་ཞི་བ་དང་། outer inner secret obstacles pacify

བསམ་པ་ལྷན་གྱིས་འགྲུབ་པར་བྱིན་གྱིས་ཞོབས། wishes effortlessly accomplish give blessing

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 30th, 2021 at 4:57 AM

Title: Re: Tibetan Translation Help

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

siddhi all master bliss great feet

Seeker12 said:

How does feet fit in here? On lotsawahouse it's translated as "Master of all siddhis, Guru of Great Bliss", is it something about like sitting at the lotus feet of the guru or something?

Malcolm wrote:

zhabs is pāda, it is an honorific, mahasukhapāda, bde ba chen po'i zhabs, it is a title of the Guru Rinpoche.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 30th, 2021 at 10:02 AM

Title: Trump, Russian Asset

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 30th, 2021 at 7:44 PM

Title: Re: What do ACADEMICS say are the origins of Avalokiteshvara and Amitabha?

Content:

Queequeg said:

I agree with the gist of what you're saying. But faith, even one that is not connected to any verifiable truth is not condemned per se. It's the failure to safeguard truth that is the problem. It's when one says on faith, only this is true, all else false, that faith of any degree becomes a problem. That is the disposition of a closed mind. Proceeding on our best information, lacking actual knowledge, is what most of us do most of the time. This is basically the definition of a deluded being who has not overcome delusion... as long as delusion remains, by definition there are things we don't know and don't even know we don't know. So long as we are open to new information, we keep the path to awakening open. The moment we think we know all there is to know, no matter how much we know, we've closed the path to awakening.

The Buddha didn't preclude the path of prasada. It might not be a direct path, but even such naive faith is accepted for those who cannot manage more. We have a responsibility for our one eyed kin.

Malcolm wrote:

Our traditions are at odds then. Blind faith is never acceptable for anyone.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 30th, 2021 at 8:13 PM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Food for thought:

Therefore, the fascination with and yearning for unmediated religious experience may be more a reflection of modern Western preoccupations than an inherent quality of Zen Buddhism. Sharf claims that the role of 'experience' may have been exaggerated in contemporary scholarship on Zen. He argues that historical and ethnographic evidence suggests that the privileging of experience may well be traced to twentieth-century Zen reform movements that urged a 'return' to Zen meditation (especially the Sanbōkyōdan movement, see below), and that these reforms were profoundly influenced by religious developments in the West. Sharf even controversially claims that 'Zen monastic training in contemporary Japan continues to emphasize physical discipline and ritual competence, while little if any attention is paid to inner experience'.

https://www.academia.edu/2269031/Zen_spirituality_in_a_secular_age_Charles_Taylor_and_Zen_Buddhism_in_the_West?email_work_card=title

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, January 30th, 2021 at 11:42 PM

Title: Re: What do ACADEMICS say are the origins of Avalokiteshvara and Amitabha?

Content:

tkp67 said:

No.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 31st, 2021 at 12:05 AM

Title: Re: Genealogies of Mahāyāna Buddhism: Emptiness, Power and the Question of Origin

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

How is this review of the book to those who've read it?

<https://jcrt.org/religioustheory/2019/10/23/review-genealogies-of-mahayana-> buddhism-ananda-abeysekara/

Malcolm wrote:

Good review, it's why I bought Walser's book. I would add, however, that his knowledge of Tibetan Buddhist schools is rather shaky, and he makes blunders which indicate this.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 31st, 2021 at 2:09 AM

Title: Re: Nopales

Content:

DNS said:

You can usually find them in any Latino style grocery.

Malcolm wrote:

Or likely, in your backyard.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 31st, 2021 at 2:37 AM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

clyde said:

Matylda's critique and her expressed disappointment in Soto seems to suggest that Soto Zen, as taught and practiced today and especially in the West, is of little or no value and that, as she suggested to me, we would be better going elsewhere.

Am I mistaken about her view of Soto?

Malcolm wrote:

Clyde, I think the disconnect you are seeing is that in Japan, Soto is a religious institution, a major function of which is to do funerary rites, etc. They serve a client population with rituals. I am sure this is also true with Rinzai, etc.

These services are not generally requested by Westerners, some of whom seem to think they are going to become enlightened or think they already are, regarding "practice" as a performative demonstration of their innate enlightenment.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 31st, 2021 at 8:21 AM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Matt J said:

But in current Soto, there is no need to demonstrate understanding via dokusan or any other form. Rather, sufficient ritual mastery is often the primary requirement to be a certified Zen master, potentially with some amount of prior formal training as well.

clyde said:

That doesn't match my experience and observation of Soto Zen, its teachers and students, in the Bay Area, mostly of the Suzuki Roshi lineage.

Malcolm wrote:

You hit the nail on the head...in the Bay Area.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, January 31st, 2021 at 10:35 PM

Title: Re: The oddity of rebirth

Content:

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

There are mentions in Buddhism of a mind stream that passes from one life to the next until enlightenment, which realizes the lack of an individual self and it (or "something") is released from suffering, but it is hard to ignore that this is a rephrasing of the Hindu atman or Jain jiva released by merging with the brahman (Hinduism) or the jiva floating to the top of the universe (Jainism).

Without a soul, a self, an essence that separates you and I, on what basis can one say there is personal continuation after death?

Malcolm wrote:

There is no personal continuation: but a individual consciousness, conditioned by affliction and action, does appropriate a new series aggregates.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 1st, 2021 at 1:35 AM

Title: Re: The oddity of rebirth

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

but a individual consciousness, conditioned by affliction and action, does appropriate a new series aggregates.

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

So there is an irreducible essence to a person, if I understand correctly.

Malcolm wrote:

No, there are just coalescence of causes and conditions that have no beginning.

An individual consciousness, like seed, is a dependently-originated composite, impermanent phenomena; for example, if there is no form, there can be no eye consciousness; if there is no organ of sight, there can be no eye consciousness; if there is no consciousness, an eye consciousness cannot arise. Because three things come together: the organ of sight, a consciousness, and a form, there is eye consciousness.

The Buddha that a putative person has five aggregates in order to show that there was no self. The five aggregates are matter, sensation, perception, mental formations, and consciousness. They do not constitute a self together, there is no self in one of them individually, and there is no self apart from them. The five aggregates constantly arise together based on cause and condition. Though nothing is transferred from this life to the next, there is nevertheless serial continuity of a given psycho-physical continuum.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 1st, 2021 at 2:57 AM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Food for thought:

Therefore, the fascination with and yearning for unmediated religious experience may be more a reflection of modern Western preoccupations than an inherent quality of Zen Buddhism. Sharf claims that the role of 'experience' may have been exaggerated in contemporary scholarship on Zen. He argues that historical and ethnographic evidence suggests that the privileging of experience may well be traced to twentieth-century Zen reform movements that urged a 'return' to Zen meditation (especially the Sanbōkyōdan movement, see below), and that these reforms were profoundly influenced by religious developments in the West. Sharf even controversially claims that 'Zen monastic training in contemporary Japan continues to emphasize physical discipline and ritual competence, while little if any attention is paid to inner experience'.

https://www.academia.edu/2269031/Zen_spirituality_in_a_secular_age_Charles_Taylor_and_Zen_Buddhism_in_the_West?email_work_card=title

Matylda said:

Well Sanbokyodan has no influence in Japan. Close to zero. They cannot compete with rinzai, soto or even with obaku which is the smallest zen school in Japan. Its founder Yasutani Hakuun was very influenced by Daiun roshi of Hosshinji. But the group later on was never strong. As for quality of their kensho testimonies there are many questions in Japan, but generally nobody takes care of their claims. I do not say that there is something wrong with them and in fact they had dozens of foreign students, but they are not very convincing anyway. I mean in Japan.

Inner experience in Japanese monasteries. That is interesting phenomenon. One has to be aware that there are no people looking for awakening. Soto or rinzai does not matter. There are young boys from family temples who must have to go through monastic training. In soto one year in rinzai 3 years. Young boys are young boys. In rinzai when they stay for 3 years have 6 sesshins a year and twice a day dokusan. They practice koan but after maybe a few months will be permitted to go on with more koans, so they pass so called 1st hosshin koan without much experience.

In zen - rinzai or soto does not matter it was kensho or satori which allowed one to go on further koans. Toaday it is not so. But it does not mean that it is all fine and ok. Some teachers point out that it is fruitless. Some say something different and give at least some reason.

If we read biographies of famous masters, all of them had kensho satori etc. even in the XX century, not only in some hazy ancient times. But it happens so rarely today. About shikan taza I wrote already at length so there is no point to repeat it. Only one sentence - shikan taza never excluded kensho or satori. Never.

Malcolm wrote:

I think the author is trying to point out that there is a bit of a Pizza effect happening here. D.T. Suzuki imported William James' notion of religious experience from his book Varieties of Religious Experience to Japan; this interested the Kyoto school, Sanbokyodan, etc., this in turn caused the latter tradition to export a version of Zen to the West which is profoundly informed by Western ideas about religious experience. Varieties of Religious Experience was catalyzed by William James' experiments with Nitrous Oxide.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 1st, 2021 at 3:59 AM

Title: Re: The oddity of rebirth

Content:

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

I think we should get clear about what we mean when we say "I wake up." If I am an individualized consciousness, an irreducible self, different from others, that remembers a continuity and grasps other forms of aggregates to quench my cravings, that which makes me know that my life 10 years ago is my life, we might as well acknowledge that.

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhist scholars for centuries have argued a) mind streams (cittasaṃtana) are individual b) that they do not constitute a self because they are compounded entities. The facet of being compounded is in general explained through a theory of momentariness. In order for there to be an irreducible self, the mind stream would have to a permanent entity moving through time. As there is no such thing as a permanent entity at all, there is also no irreducible self. "Self" is just a convention applied to the series of aggregates, much in the same way we apply the label "car" to an assembly of metal, plastic, and rubber.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 1st, 2021 at 4:01 AM

Title: Re: The oddity of rebirth

Content:

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

I understand the distinctions like that too. Awareness as atemporal and nonlocal. And if so, it does not follow that "it" has an individualized series of rebirths in the sense of how we say it. What I mean is, someone being born right now equally has this "awareness," it is another birth of this awareness.

Malcolm wrote:

To speak of a birth of anything means it is compounded, temporal, and localized in a set of causes and conditions. Therefore, to claim both that an awareness is born and that it is atemporal and nonlocal is a contradiction in terms.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 1st, 2021 at 5:50 AM

Title: Re: The oddity of rebirth

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhist scholars for centuries have argued a) mind streams (cittasaṃtana) are individual b) that they do not constitute a self because they are compounded entities. The facet of being compounded is in general explained through a theory of momentariness. In order for there to be an irreducible self, the mind stream would have to a permanent entity moving through time. As there is no such thing as a permanent entity at all, there is also no irreducible self. "Self" is just a convention applied to the series of aggregates, much in the same way we apply the label "car" to an assembly of metal, plastic, and rubber.

PadmaVonSamba said:

For the sake of clarity as it pertains to this discussion, on what basis is the statement (I highlighted it in red) established? Is it said to lack permanence because it moves through time?

Malcolm wrote:

Permanent entities cannot arise from impermanent entities; they must necessarily produce themselves. "Arising from self" is negated in all the Buddha's teachings, and common experience shows that there are no permanent entities that are observable.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 1st, 2021 at 5:51 AM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

clyde said:

I agree that “practice as enlightenment” is open to misunderstandings and it is the duty of teachers to help their students by pointing to a correct understanding. But it also incumbent on the student to do the work of seeing through their delusions to a realization.

jimmi said:

If, as per Matylde’s critique, Soto teachers are for the most part lacking in the correct understanding of “practice as enlightenment” well, it’s clear where that will go. How can students be expected to do the work and arrive at authentic Shikantaza if those tasked with transmitting the necessary understanding have themselves fallen short? It makes the adage that Zen cannot be practiced without a teacher somewhat problematic.

Malcolm wrote:

Cue Astus.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 1st, 2021 at 11:25 AM

Title: Re: The oddity of rebirth

Content:

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

I agree, Matt. I think to assume you have a personalized series of rebirths different from my series of rebirths is to posit something fundamentally different between you and I. At its core, it is eternalist.

Malcolm wrote:

This is an unsupported assertion. For example, no one asserts that the causes and conditions which produce corn necessarily produce wheat.

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

If subjectivity was truly atemporal/nonlocal,

Malcolm wrote:

This term is introduced as an an unverified assumption.

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

o think of rebirth as a form of personal continuity is actually a self-grasping of the conceptual mind. This hints at that:

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhadharma does not view rebirth as personal continuity.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 1st, 2021 at 12:03 PM

Title: Re: The oddity of rebirth

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhadharma does not view rebirth as personal continuity.

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

When you talk about your rebirths, you are indeed asserting this.

Malcolm wrote:

No, in fact we are not, no more than when I say I am responding to your assertion it is necessarily implied there is an essential agent engaged in an action.

These things are merely conventions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 1st, 2021 at 9:54 PM

Title: Re: Trump, Russian Asset

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

Alright, I posted and removed this but here goes.

This is, as far as I know, the proven influence of the Russians on the 2016 election when it comes to Ads. According to Google's CEO around ~$4700 was spent. I fail to see how that would influence the contest between Trump and Clinton which cost around $2,65 Billions.

Bristollad said:

Because paying for adverts on Google was not the full extent of Russia's effort and involvement.

Brunelleschi said:

Yeah no one said that. I however showed what there is proof of in regards to Russian influence when it came to ads. Obviously $4700 is nothing compared to the vast sums of money being spent.

There was no evidence found by Mueller that Trump or any of his aides coordinated election interference in 2016 with the Russian government (from: <https://www.nytimes.com/2019/03/24/us/politics/mueller-report-summary.html>)

This is of course only my view and it could very well be wrong. However, I do notice that you fail to rebuke the point nor provide any sources of your own. So please, show what there is hard proof of and we can have a discussion regarding its impact and what that means - if you so please.

Malcolm wrote:

And how much money was spent by Russians on Twitter and Facebook...that's much more relevant.

<https://www.sandiegouniontribune.com/opinion/the-conversation/sd-how-much-money-russians-spent-twitter-facebook-ads-20170928-htmlstory.html>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 1st, 2021 at 10:10 PM

Title: Re: The oddity of rebirth

Content:

Supramundane said:

Some people seem to be implying that rebirth is a collective event, as opposed to an individual one.

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

I think you are right. There is a paradox in all of this, in karma/rebirth perpetuating individuality/self-grasping on the one hand, and teachings on selflessness on the other, one where I do not see the tradition satisfactorily reconcile. Maybe we can say that it is the tendency to self-grasp that causes karma/rebirth, but it's hard to ignore there is influence also going the other way. For example, when I vow to attain liberation in future lives, I am self-grasping. When I fear the results of my karma in a future life, I am also self-grasping. It is a self-perpetuating cycle.

Malcolm wrote:

Rebirth is the problem Buddhadharma endeavors to resolve. You are claiming that it's solution to this problem is something other than the recognition that there is no permanent, uncompounded entity, a self, that undergoes a transition from one lifetime to another is faulty because the Buddha affirms an imputed or conventional self which does not truly exist.

There is no difference between saying I will attain buddhahood in some unspecified number of rebirths than there is to say next year I am going to California. In neither case is this an assertion of a permanent, uncompounded self. This is seeming contradiction is addressed by the Buddha in such sutras as the Vajraccheddika, where it is said, "The bodhisattva, recognizing that sentient beings do not exist, vows to lead all sentient beings to nirvana."

"Self-grasping" means believing that there is a permanent uncompounded entity which transitions from one moment to another without change. As Matt pointed out, the very fact of cognition means a consciousness cannot be a self. Your paradox is false.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, February 1st, 2021 at 10:21 PM
Title: Re: Mahakala as Yidam
Content:
AmidaB said:
Tashi Delek to all of you!

After I have eaten myself through William Stablein's dissertation on the Mahakala Tantra and the 'Healing Image' I am curious which schools, traditions or lineages approach and emphasize Mahakala as a yidam deity.

Best, ab

Malcolm wrote:
All.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, February 1st, 2021 at 10:24 PM
Title: Re: Transcendent reality in Buddhism
Content:
Aemilius said:

Human beings are not the only realm or the only level of existence in Mahayana or Sravakayana Dharma. The realms of Devas, Yakshas, Nagas, etc.. exist, the realms of Buddhas and Bodhisattvas exist. Beginningless reincarnation exists. Vast time scales exist. Sutras, Dharanis, Mantras, oral commentaries and other teachings exist in different realms, on different levels of existence. Supranormal powers (abhijñā) exist. Modern science is like a single anthill in a great forest of a planet in a vast galaxy of stars, which thinks that there is nothing else, and no other conscious beings exist anywhere in the world.

Malcolm wrote:
Modern science is not a monolithic entity.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, February 1st, 2021 at 10:26 PM
Title: Re: Commentaries on Prajnamaparamita 25000 & 8000 lines?
Content:
Padmist said:
Do you know of any?

Malcolm wrote:
Yes. Gareth Sparham has translated both in his three volume set on the Abhisamayalamkara. He also translated Tsongkhapa's excellent commentary on the same.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 1st, 2021 at 11:01 PM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

jimmi said:

If, as per Matylde's critique, Soto teachers are for the most part lacking in the correct understanding of "practice as enlightenment" well, it's clear where that will go. How can students be expected to do the work and arrive at authentic Shikantaza if those tasked with transmitting the necessary understanding have themselves fallen short? It makes the adage that Zen cannot be practiced without a teacher somewhat problematic.

Malcolm wrote:

Cue Astus.

Astus said:

That's the difficult consequence of the dharma-transmission lineage concept: either every lineage member is a buddha, or the whole concept falls apart. But such an idealist view of the lineage can function only on paper.

'This [practice] relies on the mystical and authentic transmission of the subtle method from master to disciple, and the [disciple's] reception and maintenance of the true essence of the teachings.'

(Bendowa, in SBGZ, BDK ed, vol 1, p 5; T2582_.82.0015c24-26)

And that subtle method (妙術) transmitted correctly (正傳) is zazen (坐禪):

'Great Master Śākyamuni exactly transmitted, as the authentic tradition, this subtle method of grasping the state of truth, and the tathāgatas of the three times all attained the truth through zazen. Thus the fact that [zazen] is the authentic gate has been transmitted and received. Furthermore, the patriarchs of the Western Heavens and the Eastern Lands all attained the truth through zazen. Therefore I am now preaching [zazen] to human beings and gods as the authentic gate.'

(p 7-8; T2582_.82.0016c11-17)

Malcolm wrote:

This basically consists only of teaching the śamathayāna. So, we can understand that zazen is śamatha. In śamatha, insight can occur naturally.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 12:03 AM

Title: Re: The oddity of rebirth

Content:

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

What, then, is the difference between saying a new body and personality is born in the future that inherits the results of the actions of this one, and a son or daughter being born that inherits the genes of this body?

Malcolm wrote:

There is a serial continuity of consciousness not present in genetic inheritance. One cannot inherit one's parent's minds.

You do realize these issues have been discussed to death here for more than a decade?

The classical defense of rebirth may be found in the Pramāṇavārttika by Dharmakīrti. There really isn't anything one can add here to improve upon his arguments.

Then there is the Mahānidānasutta, which is perhaps the clearest statement by the Buddha about the process of rebirth. Also, denying rebirth constitutes wrong view, or so the Buddha has said in many places, the wrong view of annihilationism, just as the assertion of a uncompounded self constitutes eternalism.

Trying to redefine the Buddhist concept of rebirth in terms of genetic inheritance is just a massive fail on every level. You don't have to believe in rebirth, but by denying rebirth one denies the very problem Buddha set out to solve. And by rejecting rebirth, one rejects the Buddha's teachings in toto.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 12:05 AM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This basically consists only of teaching the śamathayāna. So, we can understand that zazen is śamatha. In śamatha, insight can occur naturally.

Astus said:

'Good friends, our teaching takes meditation and wisdom as its fundamental. Everyone, do not say in your delusion that meditation and wisdom are different.

Malcolm wrote:

Still śamathayāna.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 1:11 AM

Title: Re: Mahakala as Yidam

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I believe there are 13 versions of 6 arm Mahakala in various colors, etc. Karma Kagyu focuses on a 2 arm standing black Mahakala.

AmidaB said:

Are those practised as a yidam in their respective lineages?

Malcolm wrote:

Mahakala is practiced as a yidam in all schools of Tibetan Buddhism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 3:01 AM

Title: Re: The oddity of rebirth

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Trying to redefine the Buddhist concept of rebirth in terms of genetic inheritance is just a massive fail on every level.

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

Not at all. Shantideva put it in just about exactly the same way:

Meditation

Verse 98

To think that "I will have to suffer it"

In fact is but a false conception

In the present moment, "I" will perish;

At a later time, another will be born.

Verse 112

Why, then, not identify

Another's body, calling it my "I"?

And vice versa, why should it be hard,

To think of this my body as another's?

-Bodhicaryavatara

Malcolm wrote:

You are misusing this citation and taking it out of context. This is argumentation in bad faith.

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

Although a seal produces a seal impression,

We don't apprehend that the seal transmigrates.

It isn't there [in the impression,] but nor are they wholly different.

In the same way, composite things are not annihilated and not eternal.

- <https://plato.stanford.edu/entries/shantideva/#MetaNoSelfEmpt>

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, this is why an individual mind stream can continue beyond this lifetime without being considered a self. Whatever is a composite phenomena lacks self.

Consciousness is a composite phenomena. Consciousness therefore lacks a self.

However, this does not indicate that one can inherit one's parents consciousness and their karma. So again, you are arguing in bad faith and taking the citation out of context.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 3:13 AM

Title: Re: The oddity of rebirth

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

There is a serial continuity of consciousness not present in genetic inheritance. One cannot inherit one's parent's minds.

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

In this there is a getting into an "essentializing self" territory.

I do, in fact, inherit minds all the time. I am inheriting yours as we discuss.

Malcolm wrote:

Really, you are thinking my thoughts?

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

As well as from books, from stories. Thoughts are constantly being shared, transmitted. If not only through physical mediums, but the tradition speaks of telepathy...thoughts transmitted more instantaneously. We also do know, that biology contributes to the contours of one's "mental life." To see this any other way is to see the mind as a "thing" that is at the core of what makes you you.

Malcolm wrote:

What does this have to do with the Buddha's teaching on the subject?

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

And my contention is that there is no difference between a future body and mind a year later inheriting an older body and mind's intention to go to California, a new body and mind inheriting a dead person's karma, and a daughter inheriting the mother's tissue to form a physical body.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, well, you seem to be a physicalist, but this is not the intention of the Buddha's teaching.

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

To feel like there is an essence that makes you you compared with another person other than apparent spatial and temporal separation is implying an essential self.

Malcolm wrote:

No, such a feeling is merely an error of cognition. It does not imply there is an essential self.

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

That you feel like this is a denial of personal survival is interesting. You were, several posts back, stating that Buddhadharma does not imply personal continuity.

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhadharma does not imply true or ultimate personal continuity. It states that there is a continuity of the addictive aggregates until the craving that drives that addiction ceases, and that is all. It allows for nominal personal continuity in much the same way that one can call the form cast by a bit of stick and clay onto a screen in a shadow puppet show an "elephant."

I have already stated this, and now I am repeating it to you again. You are failing to distinguish between the two truths here. Conventionally, a self is imputed onto the five aggregates, ultimately no such entity as a self can be found. If you cannot understand this, well, good luck.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 3:14 AM

Title: Re: The oddity of rebirth

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Whatever is a composite phenomena lacks self. Consciousness is a composite phenomena. Consciousness therefore lacks a self.

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

That there is no constant found in any process of experience, including mental states, but that "you" will continue after death is a contradiction in terms.

Malcolm wrote:

No, when it is understood that the term "you" is simply a label for an appearance, i.e., a convention, there is no such contradiction in terms, unless one believes that all statements are ultimate statements, and clearly, the latter is not the case.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 3:18 AM

Title: Re: Trump, Russian Asset

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Guys, Russia supposedly wanted to boost Bernie's campaign at one point too.

I mean, I find Trump nauseating on so many levels, in some ways the disaster of the last four years is hard to even contemplate. But seriously, this whole red scare thing just seems silly to me. It's also unneeded to describe the rise of Trump. The last election American's more than proved that we are capable of our own tremendous stupidity with very little outside influence, and of their own volition.

Malcolm wrote:

I disagree. Russia has been propping up Trump for years, through Deutsche Bank, and so on.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Intelligence agencies wrt to geopolitics make all kinds of calculations, assuming that there is some overarching plan "let's install the worst president in modern history" is giving them too much credit.

Malcolm wrote:

Trump was a very good president for Russia, all things considered.

Johnny Dangerous said:

I'm quite sure they wanted Trump in and put a little money down to the end, but damn, how is that controversial? The US does that kind of stuff as a matter of policy constantly, it is not a unique behavior of any nation to do that.

Malcolm wrote:

Really, so we just let it go with "everyone does it"?

Johnny Dangerous said:

The agency of these well..agencies is more diffuse, and their policy decisions are more abstract...there's no moral imperative there, just them wanting whatever might slightly weaken the US empire..which is a wide range of things.

Malcolm wrote:

Personally, I rather like a world dominated by the US. YMMV.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 3:22 AM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Matt J said:

Part of the problem with Zen is all the Zen-speak. A lot of the sources are ambiguous, in part I imagine due the ambiguity of the language (especially traditional Chinese), in part because specifics were likely reserved for oral teachings, and in part due to "beyond words" issue. Accordingly, meanings diverge, and people can interpret what they want.

The question is, without kensho, if everyone is already a Buddha and all practice is an expression of Buddhature, then what's the point? If the practice of a master is the same as the practice of some one sitting in their fantasies, falling asleep, staring off into space, etc., then it seems no different than neo-Advaitins declaring that everything is perfect as it is and that one only need to give up the concept that things are imperfect (and in some cases, then asking for large donations or sex from students). In other words, delusion is enlightenment. It just seems like a form of philosophical nihilism, or worse, roleplaying (let's pretend we're Buddhas). It is like a group of short people sitting around saying "just remove the idea of smallness." they can believe what they want, but they won't be able to dunk a basketball.

Malcolm wrote:

And I would add, there are a lot of adherents of Zen, and supposed Zen teachers, who also add the study of Advaita to their resumes, such as Stephan Bodian.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 3:44 AM

Title: Re: The oddity of rebirth

Content:

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

That there is no constant found in any process of experience, including mental states, but that "you" will continue after death is a contradiction in terms.

Malcolm wrote:

No, when it is understood that the term "you" is simply a label for an appearance, i.e., a convention, there is no such contradiction in terms, unless one believes that all statements are ultimate statements, and clearly, the latter is not the case.

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

You are still asserting a self of some form that remains constant in your experience, that fundamentally makes you and I different. I would like you to express that more clearly. What do you feel is constant throughout your lifetime that makes your rebirth "you" and not someone else being born in the future?

Malcolm wrote:

As I pointed out, the self you keep referring to is merely a nominal label for a continuum of addictive aggregates. In this lifetime I am called Malcolm. In some other lifetime, this continuum will be given another label. In a previous lifetime, it was also given a label, assuming that Buddha's teaching on rebirth is correct. In this lifetime, the only constant is my name. And even that changes, depending on context. In Tibet, everyone called me Kunga because Malcolm is hard on the Tibetan tongue.

I have repeatedly pointed out that imputing a nonexistent self onto the aggregates for convenience of discourse is perfectly acceptable in Buddhadharma. So what is it you find difficult to understand? If I say "that car is a Ford, and that car is a Chevy" no Buddhist in their right mind assumes that I am saying there is a truly existing Ford or Chevy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 3:53 AM

Title: Re: Trump, Russian Asset

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Really, so we just let it go with "everyone does it"?

Johnny Dangerous said:

No, but honestly, so what? A competing (well, kinda) nation state wants to destabilize America, spends a little money to get a demagogue elected that would be more favorable to them than the status quo...what is surprising or noteworthy there?

Malcolm wrote:

What is surprising is not that Russia and so on would want this, what is surprising is that so many Americans think it is not big deal, or express the lackadaisical attitude you've expressed here.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Personally, I rather like a world dominated by the US. YMMV.

Boy that sounds a lot like a modern reincarnation of the Domino Theory.

I am not remotely worried about Russia dominating the world nor am I particularly convinced that Russia had a primary role in bringing Trump to power, though I certainly acknowledge they wanted him there, and put a little intelligence effort into it.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't think I said that Russia had a primary role in putting Trump in office per se. They have been central to keeping Trump fat and happy for a long time as an asset, a useful idiot, that's what I've said. And that has had quite negative connotations for the Atlantic Alliance. This in turn has led to the arising of authoritarian regimes in Poland and Hungary, an increase in racism and antisemitism in all western countries, and so on.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Again, Russia's gonna support whatever seems to make the status quo less likely to succeed...I am not sure why people need to elevate that narrative into something unusual.

Malcolm wrote:

The point is not that it is unusual, indeed, everyone in the intelligence community is and has been quite aware of these facts for decades. The point is that we had an American President who aided Russia in its goal of destabilizing alliances which are crucial to US national security.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 5:47 AM

Title: Re: The oddity of rebirth

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

I have repeatedly pointed out that imputing a nonexistent self onto the aggregates for convenience of discourse is perfectly acceptable in Buddhadharma.

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

But it is simply shorthand, like calling wood put together a certain way a "chair." You have taken it to be a metaphysical constant that transmigrates between births. You are doing it by accepting this idea of a "continuum."

Malcolm wrote:

So you keep claiming. "Continuum" is another convention, an empty label imposed on an empty appearance. It is no different than a nominal self, in this respect. So no, you err in asserting that I have accepted any such thing.

Your attempts at forcing consequences are cute, but ineffective.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 7:39 AM

Title: Re: The oddity of rebirth

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

So you keep claiming. "Continuum" is another convention, an empty label imposed on an empty appearance. It is no different than a nominal self, in this respect. So no, you err in asserting that I have accepted any such thing.

Your attempts at forcing consequences are cute, but ineffective.

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

I do not have a problem that there is a continuum of habits or tendencies that transfers between births. We assume a metaphysical working for karma. It is beside the point.

But why this continuum is any more "you" than a gene is the question. Why is the continuum personal and a gene impersonal?

Let me put it this way: like genetic inheritance, a continuum of habits/tendencies/mental states is inherited by another person after the death of this person.

Where do you disagree?

Malcolm wrote:

There is no "person," per se, other a label for a set of aggregates that have serial continuity. "Continuity" itself is just a label for the appearance of a series of causes and conditions, but when examined, not continuity can be found as such. "Causes and conditions" are just a label for an appearance of arising of phenomena, but since these phenomena can't be found, neither can their causes and conditions. None of these things—self, continuum, causes, conditions, etc. Asserting any of these things as truly existent is a metaphysical assertion. Accepting these things as conventions does not entail an acceptance of true existence in anyway. On the other hand, absence of functionality contradicts conventionality.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 9:49 AM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Still śamathayāna.

Astus said:

Why do you call it such?

Malcolm wrote:

You should read article by Lance cousins. But in a short, shamathayana is the quick path.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 10:10 AM

Title: Re: The oddity of rebirth

Content:

Dhalsim's Pratyahara said:

Rebirth is really not the kind of personal survival people think it is.

Malcolm wrote:

No one asserted it was, other than you,

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 10:12 AM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Matt J said:

This one?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 10:15 AM

Title: Re: Trump, Russian Asset

Content:

PeterC said:

(I don't think, though, that we should spend one minute trying to punish Russia in some way for this. It's just what they and the US do and have been doing for more than half a century now.)

Malcolm wrote:

The US should not punish Russia, but we should put the squeeze on the oligarchs...for obvious reasons.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 8:40 PM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

You should read article by Lance cousins. But in a short, shamathayana is the quick path.

Astus said:

But where do you see samatha taught in Zen to be succeeded by insight? It's been quite a central point almost from the beginning that samadhi and prajna are not separated (hence the Platform Sutra quote), and then in the teachings of Dogen and his heirs the unity of practice and realisation is affirmed regularly. Also, as Dogen put it in his first work after returning from China: 'Zazen is not the practice of dhyana it is just the dharma gate of ease and joy. It is the practice and verification of ultimate bodhi.' (https://web.stanford.edu/~funn/zazen_instructions/Fukanzazengi.pdf;

T2580_.82.0001b01-3)

Malcolm wrote:

You didn't really read Cousins article, did you? BTW "ease and joy" are two mental factors accompanying the first dhyana. Practice and verification implies having a view and applying it in equipoise. Rhetoric is one thing, reality is another. As we know, shikantaza is just "shamatha/vipashyana" in Japanese.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 8:53 PM

Title: Re: Transcendent reality in Buddhism

Content:

Aemilius said:

Human beings are not the only realm or the only level of existence in Mahayana or Sravakayana Dharma. The realms of Devas, Yakshas, Nagas, etc.. exist, the realms of Buddhas and Bodhisattvas exist. Beginningless reincarnation exists. Vast time scales exist. Sutras, Dharanis, Mantras, oral commentaries and other teachings exist in different realms, on different levels of existence. Supranormal powers (abhijñā) exist. Modern science is like a single anthill in a great forest of a planet in a vast galaxy of stars, which thinks that there is nothing else, and no other conscious beings exist anywhere in the world.

PeterC said:

To make this statement completely misunderstands what science is. Modern science, as commonly understood, absolutely does not make unfalsifiable negative assertions of that kind.

Aemilius said:

The habitual tendency, taken for granted, in modern Buddhism is that (in the scientific view) Indra, Brahma, Lokeshvara, Yaksha etc are "mythical beings". Which again equals that they are nonexistent, in practical terms.

If we postulate that Indra etc exist, is that a falsifiable statement concerning the nature of the universe?

Science is a collection of habitual and normative views.

And the universe is different in Dharma or in Buddhism.

Malcolm wrote:

Science doesn't have a view of Indra, etc. The existence of Indra is not falsifiable, so, outside the range of scientific inquiry.

Mt. Meru, etc., on the other hand are falsifiable propositions. And guess what? It's existence is false, there is no Mt. meru per se. Instead Meru cosmology is an Indian interpretation of the known world circa 400 CE. Even the HHDL acknowledges this.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 9:05 PM

Title: Re: Transcendent reality in Buddhism

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Science:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 9:09 PM

Title: Re: Transcendent reality in Buddhism

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Not science:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 9:49 PM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Astus said:

There are teachers who first instruct people to count breath, to focus on the posture, etc., so there it would be valid to say they begin with calming the mind.

Malcolm wrote:

Reality.

Astus said:

But when it comes to practising zazen according to the teachings of Dogen, it is to go directly to suchness.

Malcolm wrote:

Rhetoric.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 9:53 PM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

You didn't really read Cousins article, did you?

Astus said:

I actually did. That's why I asked where you found the samatha part to be followed by vipashyana, because that is the one version of the four that is named samathayana.

Malcolm wrote:

The Shamathayana referring to the Buddha's attaining awakening in one session is the one I was referring to.

For ordinary people, vipashyana first, then shamatha.

In any case, no matter what one's rhetorical stance, all Buddhist equipoise practice ultimately comes down to a union of shamatha and vipashyana.

Otherwise, are we expected to believe the magical theory that merely sitting in a Soto Zendo somehow is sitting in the state of Buddhahood? Or that merely sitting in a posture is Buddhahood? Clearly you can see the ridiculous consequences emerging from such a stance. Obviously Dogen didn't believe this.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 10:37 PM

Title: Re: Trump, Russian Asset

Content:

PeterC said:

Agree, though that only gets you so far. When they are subject to sanctions it limits their ability to travel, invest and spend outside Russia. But Mogil evich still has a pretty good life inside Russia, apparently.

Malcolm wrote:

As long as the Russians tolerate Putin, well, for that long they will remain isolated and subject to the whims of their Tsar.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 10:42 PM

Title: Re: Mansplaining Women's Enlightenment

Content:

PeterC said:

"I teach suffering and the ending of suffering"

Malcolm wrote:

I think this book was meant to appeal to people whose notion of suffering is running out of Chardonnay.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 11:14 PM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Otherwise, are we expected to believe the magical theory that merely sitting in a Soto Zendo somehow is sitting in the state of Buddhahood? Or that merely sitting in a posture is Buddhahood? Clearly you can see the ridiculous consequences emerging from such a stance. Obviously Dogen didn't believe this.

Astus said:

I have not seen Dogen, or later teachers, turn away from the Zen rhetoric

Malcolm wrote:

Even marmots know how to sit. I've got your marmot Buddha right here:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 2nd, 2021 at 11:44 PM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Astus said:

I have not seen Dogen, or later teachers, turn away from the Zen rhetoric and follow gradual Mahayana teachings.

Malcolm wrote:

Clearly, Dogen perceives stages in zazen, for exmple, on page 859 of Tanahashi translation.

On 440 he talks of "The understanding at the moment of thorough realization should be authentic..." etc. He speaks of how this practice accumulates over months and years, and over lifetimes. Dogen clearly embraces gradualism too.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 3rd, 2021 at 2:11 AM

Title: Re: Śūraṅgama Sūtra

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

I'm just finishing reading that edition now.
My understanding is that there are no surviving Sanskrit editions.

Malcolm wrote:
There never was a Sanskrit edition.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, February 3rd, 2021 at 2:15 AM
Title: Re: Mansplaining Women's Enlightenment
Content:
Queequeg said:
Did our shit talking here help bring about a change? I'm feeling empowered... like those hooligans on r/wallstreetbets.

Malcolm wrote:
Maybe you would like to speak to the manager along with Karen?

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, February 3rd, 2021 at 3:19 AM
Title: Coup Aerobics
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
<https://fb.watch/3pnKEo1mEb/>

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, February 3rd, 2021 at 4:40 AM
Title: Re: Life after Death: Buddhism VS Other Views
Content:

FiveSkandhas said:
So I am not really sure "spirit mediums" can be said to be part of most types of Buddhism unless they have somehow found a way to communicate with those in other Samsaric realms. Since we are Buddhists communicating on a Buddhist online community and not a comparative religion site, I really don't have much to say about experiences of non-Buddhists with such people.

Malcolm wrote:
Mediumship in Tibetan/Trans-Himalayan, Chinese, Japanese, Korean, Burmese, Thai, Cambodian, Vietnamese, Laotian, and Mongolian Buddhism is very clearly a survival of pre-Buddhist trance shamanism.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, February 3rd, 2021 at 6:08 AM
Title: Re: Śūraṅgama Sūtra
Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:
I'm just finishing reading that edition now.
My understanding is that there are no surviving Sanskrit editions.

Malcolm wrote:
There never was a Sanskrit edition.

khandha said:
I am interested to hear some reasons for this conclusion. I will also try to search some of the older threads on this sutra that may touch on the reasons why this sutra is not from India.

Malcolm wrote:
This is the consensus of most scholars on the issue.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, February 3rd, 2021 at 7:32 AM
Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
Clearly, Dogen perceives stages in zazen, for exmple, on page 859 of Tanahashi translation.

Astus said:
Could you specify the chapter title?
On 440 he talks of "The understanding at the moment of thorough realization should be authentic..." etc. He speaks of how this practice accumulates over months and years, and over lifetimes.
The topic of that chapter is 'expressing the truth'
(https://www.sotozen.com/eng/library/key_terms/pdf/key_terms15.pdf), and it does not really describe a gradual improvement, but rather continuously expressing the truth with one's practice.]
(Dotoku, in SBGZ, BDK ed, vol 2, p 333)

Malcolm wrote:
I disagree.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, February 3rd, 2021 at 7:37 AM

Title: Re: Śūraṅgama Sūtra

Content:

khandha said:

I am interested to hear some reasons for this conclusion. I will also try to search some of the older threads on this sutra that may touch on the reasons why this sutra is not from India.

Malcolm wrote:

This is the consensus of most scholars on the issue.

Manjushri said:

I recall hearing Khenpo Sodargye's lectures on the Surangama Sutra (available on Youtube), in which he states that a sanskrit version had been found some time ago. I assume there are doubts in regards to this?

I've also found this on another article:

Henan Nanyang Bodhi Temple originally had one Sanskrit language manuscript sutra, consisting in total 226 leaves, of which 6 were missing... according to the introduction, it contains the Śūraṅgama Sūtra and is most probably the only extant Sanskrit manuscript dating from the Tang Dynasty. The letters are roundish and belongs to a type used in South India and has been recognized by the country as a Category 1 cultural artifact. It is now located in the Peng Xuefeng Memorial Museum.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't think this manuscript has ever been examined. So until it has, I don't think this counts as evidence.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 3rd, 2021 at 7:45 AM

Title: Re: Śūraṅgama Sūtra

Content:

khandha said:

I am interested to hear some reasons for this conclusion. I will also try to search some of the older threads on this sutra that may touch on the reasons why this sutra is not from India.

Malcolm wrote:

This is the consensus of most scholars on the issue.

PadmaVonSamba said:

... but not all:

<https://online.sfsu.edu/rone/Buddhism/authenticity.htm>

Malcolm wrote:

I said most. Epstein has a sectarian commitment to the issue given his affiliation with City of 10,000 Buddhas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 3rd, 2021 at 8:07 AM

Title: Re: Mansplaining Women's Enlightenment

Content:

PeterC said:

"I teach suffering and the ending of suffering"

Malcolm wrote:

I think this book was meant to appeal to people whose notion of suffering is running out of Chardonnay.

PeterC said:

Well, there's the suffering of suffering, the suffering of change, and the suffering of Karen, and if Karen doesn't get something done about her suffering right away then she's going to have to talk to the manager.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, gamestop lost $165 today to close at $90. Most of the trading has been driven by institutions, not retail investors. All wallstreetbets did was make Wall Street a ton of money.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 3rd, 2021 at 9:42 AM

Title: Re: Mansplaining Women's Enlightenment

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.washingtonpost.com/technology/2021/02/02/gamestop-stock-plunge-losers/>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 3rd, 2021 at 10:16 AM

Title: Re: Trumps last day, post your fav vids

Content:

PeterC said:

Who let this guy onto the public stage? His only qualifications seem to be (a) being CEO of a company nobody has heard of, and (b) delusional paranoia.

Malcolm wrote:

Well sadly, in the US everyone has heard of my pillow...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 3rd, 2021 at 7:39 PM

Title: Re: Mansplaining Women's Enlightenment

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, gamestop lost $165 today to close at $90. Most of the trading has been driven by institutions, not retail investors. All wallstreetbets did was make Wall Street a ton of money.

Queequeg said:

Is there data on who is trading?

Malcolm wrote:

Yup.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 3rd, 2021 at 7:49 PM

Title: Re: Śūraṅgama Sūtra

Content:

microbodhi said:

Thank you all for your answers thus far

I was also thinking that there was no Sanskrit but i came upon the Shurangama Mantra which is in Sanskrit, is there any connection.

Malcolm wrote:

The mantra is a well known dharani.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 3rd, 2021 at 8:03 PM

Title: Re: Mahayana Mahaparinirvana Sutra

Content:

Queequeg said:

In other words, Tathagatagarbha teaching are therapies for a misguided view of emptiness.

Unfortunately people grasp it as something. Those people need the therapy of emptiness.

Malcolm wrote:

According to the Lanka, it is a doctrine for those afraid of emptiness, therefore provisional.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 3rd, 2021 at 8:15 PM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

You quote below is a recognition that the Buddha continued to practice shamatha, which is true. Clearly, in the passage I provided before, Dogen acknowledged that there is a liminal point of understanding. One certainly can't expect that a beginner is going to have this understanding immediately merely because they sit in a stiff posture. I disagree.

Astus said:

As you like. Just some extra:

'Not accompanied by the ten thousand things, what stages could there be? What do you use this for?'

(Eihei Koroku 4.301, p 281)

'These [family instructions] are simply the sitting cushions and Zen boards of the seven buddhas, and the source of the life root of the ancestors. Therefore, this is not in the realm of the four dhyanas or eight samadhis. How could it be measured in terms of the three wise or ten sacred stages? Every day just sit, dropping off body and mind. Do not be worried with a scene of laughable confusion about [comparisons between] barbarians or the civilized. Do not vainly waste a moment, but always cherish time.'
(8.1.12, p 487)

'Such examples as [Jinhua] Juzhi's one finger, Huangbo's sixty hits, Baizhang's whisk, Linji's shout, Dongshan [Shouchu]'s three pounds of sesame, and Yunmen's dried shitstick are not caught up in the stages from living beings to Buddha, and they already transcend the boundaries of delusion and enlightenment.'
(8.2.11, p 519)

'This practice is the effort of zazen. It is customary that such practice is not abandoned, even after reaching buddhahood, so that it is [still] practiced by a buddha. Teaching and verification should be examined in the same way. This zazen was transmitted from Buddha to Buddha, directly pointed out by ancestors, and only [transmitted] by legitimate successors. Even when others hear of its name, it is not the same as the zazen of buddha ancestors. This is because the principle of zazen in other schools is to wait for enlightenment. For example, [their practice] is like having crossed over a great ocean on a raft, thinking that upon crossing the ocean one should discard the raft. The zazen of our buddha ancestors is not like this, but is simply Buddha's practice. We could say that the situation of Buddha's house is the oneness in which the essence, practice, and expounding are one and the same. The essence is verification of enlightenment; expounding is the teaching; and practice is cultivation. Even up to now, these have been studied together.

We should know that practice is the practice of essence and expounding; expounding is to expound the essence and practice; and the essence is the verification of expounding and practice. If practice is not the practice of expounding and is not the practice of verification of enlightenment, how can we say it is the practice of Buddha Dharma? If expounding is not the expounding of practice and is not the expounding of verification, it is difficult to call it the expounding of Buddha Dharma. If verification is not the verification of practice and is not the verification of expounding, how can we name it the verification of the Buddha Dharma? Just know that Buddha Dharma is one in the beginning, middle, and end. It is good in the beginning, middle, and end; it is nothing in the beginning, middle, and end; and it is empty in the beginning, middle, and end. This single matter never comes from the forceful activity of people, but from the beginning is the expression and activity of Dharma.'

(p 521)

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 3rd, 2021 at 9:41 PM

Title: Re: Mansplaining Women's Enlightenment

Content:

Queequeg said:

This will definitely be a plot line in Billions, which is loosely based on Stephen A. Cohen....

Malcolm wrote:

Yup, Sorkin has written a lot on this in Dealbook, so it is certain to become an Axe Capital plot line.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 3rd, 2021 at 10:23 PM

Title: Re: Mahayana Mahaparinirvana Sutra

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

According to the Lanka, it is a doctrine for those afraid of emptiness, therefore provisional.

Seeker12 said:

According to Longchenpa, the TTG Sutras are the definitive ones. FWIW. I'm sure you know that.

Malcolm wrote:

They are for Gorampa as well, providing tathāgatagarbha is properly understood. But if for example the nine examples are not correctly understood, he states the TTG sūtras are provisional.

Also, the reason Longchenpa claims the TTG sūtras are definitive has to do with how he understands them in relation to Dzogchen. He also defines Prasanga Madhyamaka as the definitive view.

In general, however, the Buddha himself declares the tathāgatagarbha doctrine provisional, that is interpretable, in the Lanka Sūtra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 3rd, 2021 at 10:26 PM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

You quote below is a recognition that the Buddha continued to practice shamatha, which is true.

Astus said:

If zazen meant only samatha, then why would it ever turn into insight?

Malcolm wrote:

The Buddha has no further need of insight, since in a buddha śamatha and vipaśyāna are in union. This is not the case for others.

Astus said:

Clearly, in the passage I provided before, Dogen acknowledged that there is a liminal point of understanding.

If there were such a point, then he would be contradicting himself not just vis-a-vis his other works, but even in the same chapter

(<https://www.dharmawheel.net/viewtopic.php?p=568052#p568052>).

Malcolm wrote:

The ability of human beings to contradict themselves is incredible, isn't it? I know Dogen contradicted himself, that was the point of using that passage. Actually, Dogen frequently contradicts himself. You know what is said about consistency and great men.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 3rd, 2021 at 10:42 PM

Title: Re: Mahayana Mahaparinirvana Sutra

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Yogacara and Tathagatagarbha in particular seem to be set upon constantly by faulty readings.

Malcolm wrote:

No, Yogacāra really is a realist school, despite the attempts of some traditional Tibetan and Chinese scholars, and modern scholars like Dan Lusthaus, to revision it in nonrealist terms.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 3rd, 2021 at 10:44 PM

Title: Re: Mahayana Mahaparinirvana Sutra

Content:

Queequeg said:

In other words, Tathagatagarbha teaching are therapies for a misguided view of emptiness.

Unfortunately people grasp it as something. Those people need the therapy of emptiness.

Malcolm wrote:

According to the Lanka, it is a doctrine for those afraid of emptiness, therefore provisional.

Queequeg said:

I don't have an unassailable source, but I'll go out on a limb and assert that grasped emptiness is provisional, too. The razor's edge is tough to balance on.

Malcolm wrote:

You can just use Nāgārjuna as a source: emptiness incorrectly seen is like grasping a viper by the tail or incorrect reciting a vidyāmantra. Nevertheless, the Lanka's perspective on tathāgatagarbha is pretty clear.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 3rd, 2021 at 10:46 PM

Title: Re: Mahayana Mahaparinirvana Sutra

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Yogacara and Tathagatagarbha in particular seem to be set upon constantly by faulty readings.

Malcolm wrote:

No, Yogacāra really is a realist school, despite the attempts of some traditional Tibetan and Chinese scholars, and modern scholars like Dan Lusthaus, to revision it in nonrealist terms.

Queequeg said:

For the less learned, can you explain that?

Malcolm wrote:

For Yogacāra, emptiness exists, it is strictly defined as an affirming negation; a village is empty of a city, and so on. Asanga explicitly invokes the emptiness described in the Cullasuññata sutta in a rebuke to Madhyamakas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 4th, 2021 at 1:57 AM

Title: Re: Mahayana Mahaparinirvana Sutra

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

They are for Gorampa as well, providing tathāgatagarbha is properly understood. But if for example the nine examples are not correctly understood, he states the TTG sūtras are provisional.

Also, the reason Longchenpa claims the TTG sūtras are definitive has to do with how he understands them in relation to Dzogchen. He also defines Prasanga Madhyamaka as the definitive view.

In general, however, the Buddha himself declares the tathāgatagarbha doctrine provisional, that is interpretable, in the Lanka Sūtra.

Seeker12 said:

Just to add to this, FWIW, from Dudjom Rinpoche:

"...while the intention of the final transmitted precepts is not the same as that of the mundane Mind Only system in any of its forms, the purposes of the lower phases of the vehicle are gradually gathered within the higher, so that [Mind Only and the like] are not contradictory apart from their vindication of an extreme position. Indeed, one must truly comprehend that the great distinction of the higher over the lower phases is a feature of the precious teaching of the sublime Sugata. Otherwise, after one had been given teaching on suffering, selflessness, impurity and impermanence according to the first promulgation and everything had been established as emptiness according to the intermediate transmitted precepts, if one were then to grasp literally the meaningful intention revealed according to the final transmitted precepts concerning bliss, purity, permanence and true self, without knowing how to accept them with an attitude confident in the four kinds of reliance, one would engage in conceptualising thoughts which would confuse those who require training and wrongly scrutinize the teaching."

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, if you accept the scheme of the Samdhnirmocana Sūtra as definitive. I never have. I prefer the approach of the Sandhivāyākaraṇa Tantra: "The pleasing single vajra word is heard different by beings with different dispositions."

Also, I don't think that Dudjom Rinpoche's position here withstands examination. He is largely just repeating Kongtrul, etc. People who adhere to the extrinsic emptiness position will find this convincing, those who don't, won't.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 4th, 2021 at 1:59 AM

Title: Re: Mahayana Mahaparinirvana Sutra

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Yogacara and Tathagatagarba in particular seem to be set upon constantly by faulty readings.

Malcolm wrote:

No, Yogacāra really is a realist school, despite the attempts of some traditional Tibetan and Chinese scholars, and modern scholars like Dan Lusthaus, to revision it in nonrealist terms.

Archie2009 said:

Does that include Karl Brunnhölzl?

Malcolm wrote:

KB admits that the Yogacāra of Maitreyanatha, Asanga etc., adheres to the portrait of Yogacāra painted by Bhavaviveka.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 4th, 2021 at 2:01 AM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The Buddha has no further need of insight, since in a buddha śamatha and vipaśyāna are in union. This is not the case for others.

Astus said:

The Buddha has also regularly abided in emptiness (suññatāvihāra) and recommended others to do the same:

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, but at this point, it is not really insight since there is nothing left for a buddha to do.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 4th, 2021 at 2:02 AM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

[Actually, Dogen frequently contradicts himself. You know what is said about consistency and great men.

Virgo said:

I always aim for the good kind of consistency.

Virgo

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, not too runny, not too firm, like a good mayonnaise.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 4th, 2021 at 2:40 AM

Title: Re: Mansplaining Women's Enlightenment

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

<https://lithub.com/how-a-poetry-collection-masquerading-as-buddhist-scripture-nearly-duped-the-literary-world/>

Unknown said:

In the past, Weingast has admitted he isn't qualified to translate the text. Last May, Pamela Weiss, a prominent meditation teacher associated with the San Francisco Zen Center and the Insight Meditation Society, published an interview with Weingast that was held at the San Francisco Insight Meditation Community in front of an audience. In regard to his writing process, Weingast said, "I had no idea what I was doing, so it just kind of allowed me to just make it up as I went along [...] So it was kind of always just this seeing what it was, seeing what it was for me, that was the important part."

In response to a question about how Weingast chose specific English words to interpret their Pali originals, Weingast responded, "Not so much [in reference] to Pali, because she [the chief editor] doesn't have Pali," admitting that neither he nor the editor have any expertise in the text's source language. He then described a process of reading and re-reading the verses aloud in different ways, trying different words based on what "rings true."

Malcolm wrote:

You just can't make this shit up.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, February 4th, 2021 at 2:42 AM
Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori
Content:
LastLegend said:
Hmmm for what lol? Not too firm too soft?

Malcolm wrote:
One wants it to be spreadable.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, February 4th, 2021 at 2:49 AM
Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori
Content:
LastLegend said:
Hmmm for what lol? Not too firm too soft?

Malcolm wrote:
One wants it to be spreadable.

LastLegend said:
Sure I like for someone lousy like myself. But what purpose?

Malcolm wrote:
Grasshopper, you should have learned by now to free yourself of purposes...

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, February 4th, 2021 at 3:02 AM
Title: Re: Mansplaining Women's Enlightenment
Content:
Malcolm wrote:

<https://lithub.com/how-a-poetry-collection-masquerading-as-buddhist-scripture-nearly-duped-the-literary-world/>

In the past, Weingast has admitted he isn't qualified to translate the text. Last May, Pamela Weiss, a prominent meditation teacher associated with the San Francisco Zen Center and the Insight Meditation Society, published an interview with Weingast that was held at the San Francisco Insight Meditation Community in front of an audience. In regard to his writing process, Weingast said, "I had no idea what I was doing, so it just kind of allowed me to just make it up as I went along [...] So it was kind of always just this seeing what it was, seeing what it was for me, that was the important part."

In response to a question about how Weingast chose specific English words to interpret their Pali originals, Weingast responded, "Not so much [in reference] to Pali, because she [the chief editor] doesn't have Pali," admitting that neither he nor the editor have any expertise in the text's source language. He then described a process of reading and re-reading the verses aloud in different ways, trying different words based on what “rings true.”

You just can't make this shit up.

Johnny Dangerous said:

It's kind of amazing when the author himself makes a good case for what's wrong with the publication.....

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, it is pretty amazing. Definitely an editorial process fail. Publishers trust editors to make good choices. But bad choices can and do happen. I am quite certain Nikko Odiseos is really pissed and somewhat embarrassed since he is actually quite conservative in his Buddhist views (full disclosure: we are slightly acquainted and I have a book in editorial with Shambhala). While he is responsible, I am certain he did not have much to do with the book while it was in process. Shambhala is a big and complicated business.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 4th, 2021 at 4:19 AM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

jimmi said:

(Zazen) Shikantaza arises out of insight. Without insight Shikantaza would not much more than “have a break for a while and drift away” meditation. Having insight as its basis there is no requirement in Shikantaza to aspire to further insight. Courageous, equanimous abiding in immediacy is entirely sufficient.

Malcolm wrote:

Right, the point of all this is that we then have a situation where a person does not have insight. This means, according the definition you are providing, they are not doing shikantaza. This means there are two levels: shikantaza and not shikantaza. This means the path is gradated, despite whatever rhetoric one brings to bear.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 4th, 2021 at 5:54 AM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Right, the point of all this is that we then have a situation where a person does not have insight. This means, according the definition you are providing, they are not doing shikantaza. This means there are two levels: shikantaza and not shikantaza. This means the path is gradated, despite whatever rhetoric one brings to bear.

jimmi said:

There isn't a person who doesn't have or hasn't had insight.

Malcolm wrote:

So people have insight, but they don't know they have insight?

jimmi said:

What anyone chooses to do with the insight that they become aware of is up to them. Shikantaza and not shikantaza is not two levels but two different situations altogether. If one is somehow instructed in Shikantaza yet hasn't had the personal insight that motivates and energizes their zazen then it is not actually shikantaza. Which is not to say that in "not shikantaza" one cannot come to shikantaza, just that there is no inherent connection there. So no graduated path. No path at all. Immediacy.

Malcolm wrote:

Rhetoric, not reality.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 4th, 2021 at 9:47 AM

Title: Re: Trumps last day, post your fav vids

Content:

Queequeg said:

If he weren't swept up in something so ludicrous and dangerous, it would be easier to feel bad for the mypillow guy.

He's a recovering crackhead who looks like he fell hard off the wagon.

Here's some perspective on that Newsmax trainwreck.

<https://www.cnn.com/2017/09/20/how-mypillow-founder-went-from-crack-addict-to-self-made-millionaire.html>

PeterC said:

That's a very sad story. It sounds as if he has recurrent mental health problems, and quite serious ones at that.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.newsandguts.com/host-takes-blame-after-walking-off-set-during-interview-with-my-pillow-ceo/>

Even more sad is this.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 4th, 2021 at 8:12 PM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, but at this point, it is not really insight since there is nothing left for a buddha to do.

Astus said:

Just as there is nothing left to be done in zazen, or as it is sometimes put:

<http://www.sanshinji.org/sanshin-style-blog/why-zazen-is-good-for-nothing-1>
(mushotoku 無所得 - anupalabdha).

Malcolm wrote:

And yet Dogen talks about gaining thorough understanding, what maddening inconsistencies.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 4th, 2021 at 9:58 PM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

And yet Dogen talks about gaining thorough understanding, what maddening inconsistencies.

Astus said:

The thorough understanding of what?

'What is sudden awakening (tongo 頓悟)? Answer: Sudden is to suddenly remove false thoughts (muunen 妄念). Awakening is to awaken to nothing to gain (mushotoku 無所得).'

(<https://ymba.org/books/entering- tao-sudden-enlightenment/treatise-entering- tao-sudden-enlightenment; X63n1223p18a10>)

'Additionally, if a person retaining the concept of there being anything to be gained (ushotoku 有所得) generates the bodhi resolve and then proceeds to cultivate kindness, compassion, sympathetic joy, equanimity, giving, moral virtue, patience, vigor, dhyāna absorption, and wisdom, doing so for an incalculable number of asaṃkhyeyas of kalpas, one should realize that, on account of retaining the concept of something to be gained, such a person will not succeed in leaving behind birth and death and will not succeed in progressing towards bodhi.'

(http://kalavinka.org/Jewels/book_excerpts/V-Bcitta_excerpts/VBcitta_X-21_X-10.pdf; T32n1659p515c12-15)

Malcolm wrote:

Don't you just love dancing on books?

Looks like we didn't need any of this Zen stuff to begin with: Nagarjuna writes, "Nothing here to establish, nothing to remove, when reality is truly seen, liberation."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 5th, 2021 at 10:00 AM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Matt J said:

By working with Buddhist practices, we actually come to see that what we thought was solid is not solid, what we thought was graspable is not graspable, and what we thought was fulfilling is not fulfilling. In this way, a natural type of letting go occurs.

Astus said:

How about going directly to letting go of thoughts

(https://www.sotozen.com/eng/library/key_terms/pdf/key_terms08.pdf)?

Malcolm wrote:

“Let go of letting go.” Jetsun Drakpa Gyaltsen

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 5th, 2021 at 9:22 PM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

mabw said:

I'm just simply curious as to what Buddhism offers that Western thought cannot.

Malcolm wrote:

Liberation from suffering.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 5th, 2021 at 9:53 PM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

“Let go of letting go.” Jetsun Drakpa Gyaltsen

Astus said:

That's a proliferation of ideas about letting go,

Malcolm wrote:

Nah, you just like typing out citations, which only increases proliferation. More words = more proliferation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 5th, 2021 at 10:14 PM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

More words = more proliferation.

Astus said:

Okumura roshi on Dogen:

'Although he advised his students not to waste time arguing or criticizing, and he himself tried not to argue, he was not able to follow his own advice. I rather like his inconsistency on this point. I feel like he was an actual human being.'
(The Mountains and Waters Sūtra: A Practitioner's Guide to Dōgen's "Sansuikyo", 2-2)

Malcolm wrote:

It seems Dogen had a lot of proliferation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 5th, 2021 at 10:30 PM

Title: Re: Deity as Yidam, Protector, Guru, etc.

Content:

fckw said:

theory, there could also exist dakas, but I have never seen such a sadhana.

Malcolm wrote:

Viras = dakas. All male deities like Hevajra, etc are also dakas. Then there is the Cakrasamvara explanatory tantra, the Vajradaka., etc,

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 5th, 2021 at 11:42 PM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Matt J said:

By working with Buddhist practices, we actually come to see that what we thought was solid is not solid, what we thought was graspable is not graspable, and what we thought was fulfilling is not fulfilling. In this way, a natural type of letting go occurs.

Astus said:

How about going directly to letting go of thoughts

(https://www.sotozen.com/eng/library/key_terms/pdf/key_terms08.pdf)?

Malcolm wrote:

Have you ever tried to hold onto a thought? I think you will find it slips right through your fingers.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 6th, 2021 at 1:16 AM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Have you ever tried to hold onto a thought? I think you will find it slips right through your fingers.

Astus said:

Isn't it truly unattainable (mushotoku 無所得) then?

Malcolm wrote:

Hence the meaning of letting go of letting go. Not proliferation at all. I'll see your zenmaster and raise you a mahāsiddha:

Just like the limpid quality of water when it is undisturbed, remain relaxed without mental contrivances.

Just as a bird in the sky leaves no tracks, consciousness remains without support.

Just like the sun not concealed by clouds, remain in one's own unobstructed state relaxing into the objects of the six sense organs.

Just like water always falling, remain undistracted at all times and in all activities.

Dombhi Heruka

Other robes and bone ornaments, do you really see any difference between this and Dogen?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 6th, 2021 at 3:17 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

mabw said:

I'm just simply curious as to what Buddhism offers that Western thought cannot.

Malcolm wrote:

Liberation from suffering.

mabw said:

What if there is no such thing?

Malcolm wrote:

My alternative strategy, in absence of liberation, is Epicurean hedonism ala Lucretius.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 6th, 2021 at 5:57 AM

Title: Re: Soto zen and problem of satori

Content:

Matt J said:

There is no individual that could become enlightened; no one that needs to attain or realize anything. The drama of striving to achieve enlightenment through various practices is limited to the play of appearances. What practice is needed to simply be?

Nathan Gill

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, this is called the enlightenment of fish.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 6th, 2021 at 7:15 AM

Title: Re: Where are the "pratyekabuddha-yanist"?

Content:

Queequeg said:

Accepting the premise that pratyekabuddhas, as all beings in beginningless samsara have encountered buddhas. Does pratyekabuddha's awakening include recollection of past lives? So far the assertion has been made that pratyekabuddha do understand themselves in terms of Buddhadharma... are there any textual sources for this?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. Check out access to insight run a search on paccekabuddha

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 6th, 2021 at 11:23 AM

Title: Re: Wall Street, hedge funds

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

<https://apple.news/AuLz1IPkfRG68sbtQf-EKBg>

Unknown said:

The Boston-area trader at the center of the past week's frenzy over GameStop Corp. , who also worked until last week as a broker, may face legal jeopardy for potential violations of federal rules governing brokers' communications with the public, according to securities lawyers.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, February 6th, 2021 at 9:13 PM
Title: Re: Response to PadmaVonSamba
Content:

illaraza said:
Before predicting hell for another, one need know the causes for falling into hell and have a general idea of the various Buddhist hells:

Malcolm wrote:
Mainly hatred and splitting the Sangha (reserved for bhikṣus like Devadatta). Then there is killing one's parents, killing an arhat, or injuring a buddha.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, February 7th, 2021 at 1:25 AM
Title: Re: Gelug Madhyamaka
Content:

Nicholas2727 said:
The part I am confused about is how this does not fall into nihilism at the ultimate level. From your description and Malcolm's description, I understand that phenomena occur, but they have no intrinsic existence. Therefore to conventionally say nothing exists would be obvious nihilism and not true, but I am confused at how it is not nihilism at the ultimate level? I am not implying that it is nihilism, but I am having trouble understanding how it is not. Hopefully someone with more knowledge will be able to help.

Malcolm wrote:
If things existed ultimately, they would be permanent, and hence, this would be eternalism, for example, like Samkhya.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, February 7th, 2021 at 6:42 AM
Title: Re: Gelug Madhyamaka
Content:

Nicholas2727 said:
The part I am confused about is how this does not fall into nihilism at the ultimate level. From your description and Malcolm's description, I understand that phenomena occur, but they have no intrinsic existence. Therefore to conventionally say nothing exists would be obvious nihilism and not true, but I am confused at how it is not nihilism at the ultimate level? I am not implying that it is nihilism, but I am having trouble understanding how it is not. Hopefully someone with more knowledge will be able to help.

Malcolm wrote:

If things existed ultimately, they would be permanent, and hence, this would be eternalism, for example, like Samkhya.

Nicholas2727 said:

Correct, but wouldn't the other side of that argument be, if things don't exist ultimately, they would be impermanent and hence this would be nihilism? This is the part I am having trouble understanding. At the conventional level it makes sense, but at the ultimate level I am confused.

Malcolm wrote:

Things are impermanent.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 7th, 2021 at 6:47 AM

Title: Re: Sapan and Dzogchen

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I'm currently perusing "illuminations A Guide to Essential Buddhist Practices", translated by Geshe Wangyal and Brian Cutillo. It's a book from 1988, I don't know anything about the quality of the translation.

Anyway, there is a portion on Wrong View in which Sapan goes over various wrong views, connecting many of them to the famous debate with Hashang Mahayana.

If I am reading it correctly, it's essentially a polemic against "effortless" practices as well, there is lots of talk about how you must "correct deficiencies" etc. and claiming that versions of "Mahamudra" (Dzogchen is not explicitly mentioned, but language used in Dzogchen is, and it almost feels like the term is being used synonymously) which involve viewing "the mind as clear light" are incomplete. AS an example, multiple times he criticizes meditating "without modification".

The criticism is a little opaque to me, and I cannot tell if he is contextually arguing against the essentially non-gradual approach of Dzogchen meditation proper (not preliminaries), or whether he is referring to specific deviations with which I may not be familiar. I always imagined that Sapan had some pretty specific criticisms of Dzogchen.

I have always assumed that Sarma schools and Dzogchen were somewhat irreconcilable on paper (though of course not necessarily in practice)..again is this what I'm looking at?

Malcolm wrote:

This is not a good translation. You should get the one by David Jackson, which I believe you download from academia.edu.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 7th, 2021 at 10:57 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

Matt J said:

Is it though? I don't see that at all.

Malcolm wrote:

Definitely atheistic.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 7th, 2021 at 10:59 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

Matt J said:

That is not really Wallace's point in the article.

PeterC said:

I don't read the whole article. I got as far as where he said in the first paragraph; However, a careful analysis of Vajrayana Buddhist cosmogony, specifically as presented in the Atiyoga tradition of Indo-Tibetan Buddhism, which presents itself as the culmination of all Buddhist teachings, reveals a theory of a transcendent ground of being and a process of creation that bear remarkable similarities with views presented in Vedanta and Neoplatonic Western Christian theories of creation...

...and realized that I didn't need to, as he's clearly going off in a completely different direction and not addressing my argument.

If we were to discuss the Samghogakaya, Samantabhadra, Pure lands and pure vision with Lawrence Krauss and Daniel Dennett, I doubt we would be on the same page.

Fine. I think my argument on this is very clear and simple. I don't need to drag myself through the contortions of other peoples' parsing of the word "theistic". Krauss and Dennett are not teachers of mine so I don't need to reconcile my reasoning with theirs, nor would I regard them as authorities on the Dharma.

Malcolm wrote:

Wallace is totally full of it here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 8th, 2021 at 8:57 PM

Title: Re: Subduing and Oath Binding

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

I suspect that it's a very poetic way of saying that he took the existing religious methodologies (deities, rituals, etc) and turned them into Vajrayana Buddhist practices.

Malcolm wrote:

Umm...no.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 9th, 2021 at 12:41 AM

Title: Re: Questions Regarding Buddhist Academia

Content:

Tenma said:

Out of curiosity, what does academia look like in regards to Buddhist Studies? What does the path towards it look like? Would one focus entirely on certain aspects of a certain lineage or what? I've heard that this is a very difficult path (followed by questioning of one's faith in this), so I wanted to hear in regards to how the path goes. For those who pursue this, why did you choose Buddhist Studies exactly? What are some obstacles you might have if one were to pursue this?

Malcolm wrote:

If you are serious, you have to learn French and German; Pali or Sanskrit; Chinese and Japanese; Tibetan; Thai, Burmese, or Cambodian, Vietnamese, etc.

So, if focusing on East Asian traditions, in addition to the European languages, one will need Sanskrit, Chinese, and Japanese; if focusing on Indo-Tibetan Buddhism, then Sanskrit and Tibetan, Chinese useful; if focusing South-east Asian Buddhism, then Pali, Sanskrit, and a regional vernacular such as Thai or Burmese.

Not really for the faint of heart.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 9th, 2021 at 6:29 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Johndoe said:

Is there any equivalent to thogal in mahamudra or among the New Tantra schools?

Malcolm wrote:

Nope.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 9th, 2021 at 6:54 AM

Title: Re: Tibetan Cataract Surgery?

Content:

Tenma said:

<https://treasuryoflives.org/biographies/view/Yangchen-Lhamo/13598>

Is anyone familiar with how Tibetan Cataract Surgery goes? Is it safe? How is it performed (with knives or what) and what have been the outcomes?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. Yes. I describe the process in a footnote in an upcoming book.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 9th, 2021 at 7:28 AM

Title: Re: Tibetan Cataract Surgery?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

If I had to say what was the worst idea to come out of Tibet, this would be it.

Malcolm wrote:

It's actually fairly straight forward: one makes a small incision in the outside corner of the eye. Then, with small pair of tweezers, in conjunction with the patient making a strong exhalation through opposite nostril, one tugs the cataract free. It's not nearly as terrifying as the idea of premodern eye surgery may sound.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 9th, 2021 at 7:29 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Johndoe said:

Is there any equivalent to thogal in mahamudra or among the New Tantra schools?

Malcolm wrote:

Nope.

GrapeLover said:

Just curious, did this ever see thögal singled out for doubt or criticism by Sarma schools?

Malcolm wrote:

Yup. But Jigme Lingpa responds such criticisms quite handily.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 9th, 2021 at 7:42 AM

Title: Re: Tibetan Cataract Surgery?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I just had cataract surgery. There is an incision, the entire lens is removed, and a new plastic lens inserted. In other words, “the cataract” is the old lens. Even if everything else was modern level sterile and painless, removing the lens without replacing it would effectively blind you in that eye.

Malcolm wrote:

That’s the modern way, but actually what happens is that film forms on the lens, which can be removed separately from the lens. These kinds of surgeries were performed in old Tibet without blinding anyone.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 9th, 2021 at 9:20 PM

Title: Re: why is theravada section hosted on a separate website

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

Asian (Sri Lanka, Burma, Thailand, etc) and East Asian (Tibetan, Chinese, Korean, Japanese, etc)

Malcolm wrote:

Tibet is a Central Asian country.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 9th, 2021 at 10:01 PM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

tkp67 said:

Making buddhism atheist also makes it secular.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it’s just a recognition of a fact: buddhadharma does not recognize ex nihilo creation by a supreme being, a key feature of all theistic traditions. Samkhya, Jainism, and so on are also atheist traditions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 9th, 2021 at 10:05 PM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

Matt J said:

Buddhism contains many elements that atheists deem problematic: karma, rebirth, pure lands, hells, other realms and beings, etc.

I would say that the qualities usually ascribed to God or gods are here ascribed to sentient beings. There are many descriptions of Buddhas and Bodhisattvas that sound very god-like, and would not sit well with the typical atheist.

Malcolm wrote:

That's their problem, not ours. The teaching of Buddhадharma is dependent origination, that teaching explains all of the above and is also intrinsically atheistic.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 10th, 2021 at 12:19 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

Brahma said:

Where in the Dharmic texts does it say that Universes aren't created, and that certain living entities don't stem from other living entities?

Malcolm wrote:

A common doctrine of theistic religions is ex nihilo creation by a supreme being. There is no sūtra which teaches such creation of the universe or living beings. There is no beginning in Buddhадharma, because the principle of dependent origination forbids the idea of first causes altogether. The specific refutations of ex nihilo creationism can be found in Vasubandhu's refutation of the pudgala and other such texts.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 10th, 2021 at 12:52 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

Brahma said:

Buddha said that if you believe in God, you could be His Disciple, and also if you didn't profess to believe in God, you could be His Disciple.

Malcolm wrote:

No, the Buddha never made such a statement at all. In fact, if one takes refuge in the Buddha, one must relinquish all other refuges. This is very clearly taught by the Buddha.

Brahma said:

One of the major purposes of Buddhism is to bring atheists and agnostic philosophers to theism, and many modern Buddhists do this openly. Take Thich Nhat Hanh who openly talks about God, and His belief in God. Do you believe He is not Enlightened?

Malcolm wrote:

This is complete and utter nonsense.

Brahma said:

Take Thich Nhat Hanh who openly talks about God, and His belief in God. Do you believe He is not Enlightened?

Malcolm wrote:

This is what THT thinks:

In Buddhism we do not speak of God, we do not speak of creation, we do not speak of revelation, and we do not speak of redemption or punishment.

<https://plumvillage.org/about/thich-nhat-hanh/interviews-with-thich-nhat-hanh/thich-nhat-hanh-answers-weekly-magazine/>

This is correct.

THT states here, however: In Buddhism, what is equivalent to God is Mind, especially the collective mind. Mind is the ground of everything; and when your mind gets in touch with the collective mind, everything is possible.

This has to be understood in context. What THT is referring to here is known as the ālayavijñāna, the all-basis consciousness. The all-basis consciousness is not actually a "collective" consciousness in the sense that you likely understand it. Here, in Chinese, it is understood as a "storehouse," and the function of this consciousness is actually to collect and store seeds that produce the appearance of an external and its appearances world. Some of those seeds human beings share in common, and so this produces the appearance of our human realm; devas, asuras, animals, etc., have different sets of seeds that are responsible for the appearance of their respective realms, according to this idea. Equating the all-basis consciousness with "God" is very sloppy; but he does have a lot of people who are Christians who follow him, so he is trying to make an equation for them that they will understand, in the same way that Buddha taught tathāgatagarbha to those who feared emptiness.

Brahma said:

Or the Dalai Lama who encourages people of other faiths to meditate on their own faith's Deities during meditation as He teaches them how to meditate.

Malcolm wrote:

His Holiness discourages conversion to Buddhism in general, but not absolutely.

Brahma said:

Do not shy away from the Truth of the Dharma, and soon, you will find the Truth of what you have been looking for in Buddhism.

Malcolm wrote:

You don't really seem to know very much about Buddhadharma. The Buddha states in the Mahāparinirvana Sūtra:

Whoever goes for refuge to the Buddha, that true śramana does not go for refuge to other gods.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 10th, 2021 at 12:53 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

Brahma said:

Buddha said that if you believe in God, you could be His Disciple, and also if you didn't profess to believe in God, you could be His Disciple.

PeterC said:

Which sutra are you citing here?

Malcolm wrote:

The latest entry in Fake Buddha Quotes, apparently.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 10th, 2021 at 2:59 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

Matt J said:

I mean, would any atheist really pray to Buddha to be born into heaven?

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhists don't pray to Buddha to be reborn in heaven.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 10th, 2021 at 3:50 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

Matt J said:

I mean, would any atheist really pray to Buddha to be born into heaven?

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhists don't pray to Buddha to be reborn in heaven.

SilenceMonkey said:

Some do, at least in Theravadin countries.

Malcolm wrote:

This is a result of ignorance, but it not supported in Buddhadharma. The only way to be reborn in higher realms is through adhering to virtuous conduct.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 10th, 2021 at 3:57 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

Matt J said:

I think this is a bad definition of atheism, appearing to be designed (like with PeterC's) to exclude Buddhism. I doubt most atheists would agree that Tibetan Buddhism is atheistic, and we have at least two well established and respected teachers cited here who deny it (and probably more, especially if we were to delve into East Asian variants), showing that perhaps it is not as "profoundly" atheistic as suggested?

I mean, would any atheist really pray to Buddha to be born into heaven?

tkp67 said:

Making buddhism atheist also makes it secular.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it's just a recognition of a fact: buddhadharma does not recognize ex nihilo creation by a supreme being, a key feature of all theistic traditions. Samkhya, Jainism, and so on are also atheist traditions.

There is no God, no creator, etc. in Buddhadharma. Therefore, Buddhadharma has to be atheist. You seem to think that being an atheist is equivalent to being logical positivist in the mold of Bernard Russel.

One can be an atheist and still accept other kinds of non-falsifiable phenomena. The term non-theist is, in my opinion, a copout.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 10th, 2021 at 4:04 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

Brahma said:

In Christianity it is said that God created everything, including man, and there is a distinction made between the creator and the creature. The creature is something created by God. When I look at a rose, a tulip, or a chrysanthemum, I know, I see, I think, that this flower is a creation of God. Because I have been practicing as a Buddhist, I know that between the creator and the created there must be some kind of link, otherwise creation would not be possible. So the chrysanthemum can say that God is a flower, and I agree, because there must be the element "flower" in God so that the flower could become a reality. So the flower has the right to say that God is a flower.

Malcolm wrote:

He is actually criticizing theism in this passage. Theists maintain there is a first cause, an unmoved mover, a creator who exists apart from its creation. Here, THT is actually engaging in what most Christians since the 3rd century CE would classically consider a heresy.

He is making that point that there must be some link between a cause and its effect, so in this respect, he is rejecting the idea of the uncompounded creator. There are many arguments in Buddhадharma against such an uncompounded creator, which I am sure he knows well. So in this passage he is trying to lead this person into a Buddhist view. If you accept that a creator is not separate from its creation; it follows the creator, like the creation, must arise from a cause. If a creator arises from a cause, then what kind of a creator is this? Such a creator is just a noncreator, since it too is created from a cause, and is in fact an effect.

He is also saying that people tend to see ultimate principles in their own image: flowers see flowers as ultimate, etc. But it is not a defense of theism in Buddhадharma at all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 10th, 2021 at 6:48 AM

Title: Re: In what sense is the brain and consciousness not just biochemicals

Content:

Tata1 said:

If there is something as objective phenomena its unknowable in principle since all we know is through subjective experience.

Malcolm wrote:

This is a fallacy. If this were the case, anumana, inference, would be impossible, as well as the authority of direct perception.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 10th, 2021 at 9:45 AM

Title: Re: In what sense is the brain and consciousness not just biochemicals

Content:

Tata1 said:

If there is something as objective phenomena its unknowable in principle since all we know is through subjective experience.

Malcolm wrote:

This is a fallacy. If this were the case, anumana, inference, would be impossible, as well as the authority of direct perception.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Well, it's knowable in terms of Gnosis/Jnana in Buddhist terms, but outside of specific Buddhist notions of truth, it is self evident that inference is based on subjective experience, what else would it be based on?

Malcolm wrote:

Inference and direct perceptions can be confirmed by second parties. This is the basis for empiricism.

For example, I see smoke, and infer there is a fire. I tell another there is smoke, and thus, there must be a fire. They investigate, confirm there is a fire and let me know that indeed my inference was correct. Hence, there was a fire which produced smoke, and it occurred independently of my specific experience of it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 10th, 2021 at 10:06 AM

Title: Re: In what sense is the brain and consciousness not just biochemicals

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Well, it's knowable in terms of Gnosis/Jnana in Buddhist terms, but outside of specific Buddhist notions of truth, it is self evident that inference is based on subjective experience, what else would it be based on?

Malcolm wrote:

Inference and direct perceptions can be confirmed by second parties. This is the basis for empiricism.

For example, I see smoke, and infer there is a fire. I tell another there is smoke, and thus, there must be a fire. They investigate, confirm there is a fire and let me know that indeed my inference was correct. Hence, there was a fire which produced smoke, and it occurred independently of my specific experience of it.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Second parties are also using their subjective experience, I get why this applies to general truth claims wrt to relative phenomena, but I don't see how it applies here.

Malcolm wrote:

External phenomena are necessary for subjective experience: for example, the blindness of certain dwelling animals due to an inherited trait related to absence of visual stimulation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 10th, 2021 at 8:17 PM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

Norwegian said:

is so wrong that it's actually embarrassing to read. The entire article is sad. The fact that someone like Wallace can say these things is flat out astounding.

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed, it is embarrassing, but it is common error from insufficient study of the original tantras and related instructions of ati yoga.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 10th, 2021 at 8:19 PM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

PeterC said:

I don't get why people feel the need to get upset when it's pointed out that the Buddhadharma really has almost no common ground with most other religions.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, if you're an atheist, you must be a communist. And there is a new red scare going around.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 12:03 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

tkp67 said:

I don't need a citation to question the limits of belief that does not in and of itself define Buddhism or Buddhist practices. Neither atheism, theism or agnosticism are synonyms for Buddhism. Now please falsify the statement I made. Platitudes will do no good here.

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhism is atheist. That's an adjective, not a noun. The claim is not that Buddhism is Atheism. The claim is that Buddhism is atheist.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 12:42 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

Matt J said:

That is not really Wallace's point in the article.

If we were to discuss the Samghogakaya, Samantabhadra, Pure lands and pure vision with Lawrence Krauss and Daniel Dennett, I doubt we would be on the same page.

Malcolm wrote:

So basically, you are claiming that to be an atheist is necessarily to be a physicalist along the model of Dennet, etc.

Samantabhadra is not some external buddha in a concrete sense, other than as a symbolic name for the realization of dharmakāya. Sambhogakāya likewise is just a name for realized speech, but it does not exist somewhere "out there." Buddhafields are just other planets and dimensions that have been "prepared" in some fashion by a bodhisattva on the stages.

But none of these were created by an omnipotent supreme being; moreover, our liberation does not depend on our relationship with some "savior," unlike theistic religions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 12:44 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

tkp67 said:

I don't need a citation to question the limits of belief that does not in and of itself define Buddhism or Buddhist practices. Neither atheism, theism or agnosticism are synonyms for Buddhism. Now please falsify the statement I made. Platitudes will do no good here.

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhism is atheist. That's an adjective, not a noun. The claim is not that Buddhism is Atheism. The claim is that Buddhism is atheist.

tkp67 said:

Technically atheism is a derivative of deity. Technically if there is no independent existence so the past predicates the present. Technically brahma practices led to future brahma marks and brahma sounds the interpreted voices of the buddha. To separate belief in the realms from any existence (the buddha's or otherwise) is to deny Shakyamuni's the cause of his provisional existence and the effect of his existence.

Malcolm wrote:

No, that is not what the sixty-toned voice of Brahma means. It is just a metaphor.

To be an atheist means that one does not believe in God. Do you believe in God? If so, you are not an atheist. I do not believe in God, so I am an atheist. As far as I am concerned, Buddhadharma is atheist. YMMV.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 12:46 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

tkp67 said:

Did Shakyamuni's compassion differ before his enlightenment as opposed to afterwards?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. But this is irrelevant to the question before us.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 12:58 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

tkp67 said:

And Brahma Viharas are just qualities,

Malcolm wrote:

The Brahma viharas are practices.

tkp67 said:

So If one believes the mind can manifest an illusionary reality that requires liberation one is not an atheist according to how atheism is expressed as a function in the world one lives in.

Malcolm wrote:

You are apparently rather hard of hearing: to be in an atheist is one thing. To be follower of ATHEISM is another. The first is a simple absence of belief. An absence of belief in what? An absence of belief in a supreme being who creates the universe, etc. The second is an ideological position, a view, and a school. One needn't belong to the latter in order to be the former.

I am an atheist. I don't much care what you think about that.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 1:00 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

tkp67 said:

Did Shakyamuni's compassion differ before his enlightenment as opposed to afterwards?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. But this is irrelevant to the question before us.

tkp67 said:

No it isn't.

Malcolm wrote:

Of course it is. Buddhas have no perception of impure sentient beings at all, therefore, their compassion has no object. But this is beside the point. Start a new topic.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 1:22 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

boda said:

...faith is valued over reason.

Malcolm wrote:

Not in Buddhadharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 1:57 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

tkp67 said:

What I am saying most clearly is to label the buddha as either this or that is a misrepresentation of the dharma because he taught neither.

Malcolm wrote:

The Buddha was also an atheist. Many Indians of his day were atheists and negated the idea that the world was created by a supreme being.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 2:29 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

Matt J said:

The Buddha in the Pali Suttas did not deny the gods,

Malcolm wrote:

The Buddha denied the universe was created by a supreme agency. Epicurus is regarded as an atheist, but he as well accepted the existence of various supernatural entities:

<https://iep.utm.edu/epicur/#SH3e>

Matt J said:

Because of its denial of divine providence, Epicureanism was often charged in antiquity with being a godless philosophy, although Epicurus and his followers denied the charge. The main upshot of Epicurean theology is certainly negative, however. Epicurus' mechanistic explanations of natural phenomena are supposed to displace explanations that appeal to the will of the gods. In addition, Epicurus is one of the earliest philosophers we know of to have raised the Problem of Evil, arguing against the notion that the world is under the providential care of a loving deity by pointing out the manifold suffering in the world.

Despite this, Epicurus says that there are gods, but these gods are quite different from the popular conception of gods. We have a conception of the gods, says Epicurus, as supremely blessed and happy beings. Troubling oneself about the miseries of the world, or trying to administer the world, would be inconsistent with a life of tranquility, says Epicurus, so the gods have no concern for us. In fact, they are unaware of our existence, and live eternally in the intermundia, the space between the cosmoi. For Epicurus, the gods function mainly as ethical ideals, whose lives we can strive to emulate, but whose wrath we need not fear.

Ancient critics thought the Epicurean gods were a thin smoke-screen to hide Epicurus' atheism, and difficulties with a literal interpretation of Epicurus' sayings on the nature of the gods (for instance, it appears inconsistent with Epicurus' atomic theory to hold that any compound body, even a god, could be immortal) have led some scholars to conjecture that Epicurus' 'gods' are thought-constructs, and exist only in human minds as idealizations, i.e., the gods exist, but only as projections of what the most blessed life would be.

Malcolm wrote:

The idea of gods presented above is quite similar to the Buddhist notion of devas. But Epicurus, who lived a mere 70 years or so after the Buddha's parinirvana, was certainly called atheoi, just as the Buddha was called a nastika, the equivalent term for an atheist in ancient India, along with Carvakas, Samkhya, Jains, and so on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 6:50 AM

Title: Re: In what sense is the brain and consciousness not just biochemicals

Content:

Matt J said:

People are making the same mistake as the materialists, in my mind. Just because you amass a certain number of subjective impressions does not mean that at some point, as if by magic, objectivity leaps to the stage. Nor does adopting a set of inferences that have predictive value indicate the ontological truth of those inferences--- just because something is useful does not make it true. And indeed, inferences are always subject to falsification in any instance. 100 instances of smoke leading to fire doesn't mean it will do so on the 101st (for example, dry ice "smokes," as does smouldering peat or an ember.)

Nor does this skepticism amount to a denial of some kind of physical or external reality. By definition, everything we know is subjective. Shades of color aren't hanging out there, they are generated by sentient beings. With no observers, there is simply no qualia: no color, no sound, no texture. These are not only specific to the environment, they also vary from observer to observer (i.e. a color blind person may see no red). Those are all subjective qualities. If you don't accept that, explain how the motion of light relates to different colors, or how the vibration of molecules relates to the sounds we hear. It doesn't even make sense-- the redness of red is due to how light moves?

It is a tautology. However, because we have been conditioned into naive realism (i.e. things exist as we see them), we think this is not the case. If you wish to posit a colorless, soundless, textureless, non-experienced (because all of these are subjective) external reality, then by all means do so, although I don't know what you are positing.

Malcolm wrote:

Experiences cannot be subjective, if they were, objects would be not necessary. QED.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 8:00 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

Matt J said:

That's quite a stretch, especially since your quote says Epicurus denied the charge.

Malcolm wrote:

On the other hand, everyone understood Lucretius to be an atheist. The polite term for godless atheist in the 18th century was "deist,"

Matt J said:

No one said the Buddha was considered an atheist by the Brahmins in ancient India, rather the charge that Buddhism itself is atheistic and profoundly so.

Malcolm wrote:

Buddha was clearly an atheist since he rejected the idea that there was a supreme being.

Matt J said:

And consider this a non-affirming negation: by denying atheism, this does not mean Buddhism is some sort of W.Y. Evans-Wentz theosophy. I just don't think the clean conceptual categories really work here.

Malcolm wrote:

Either Buddha affirmed creation by a supreme being or he didn't. If he didn't, that satisfies the definition of being an atheist.

Matt J said:

Let's consider some comments, and ask if they would be acceptable to an atheist: But we must be careful here! Because to say mind is open like space is not to reduce it to something nonexistent in the sense of being nonfunctional. Like space, pure mind cannot be located, but it is omnipresent and all-penetrating; it embraces and pervades all things. Moreover, it is beyond change, and its open nature is indestructible and atemporal.

Kalu Rinpoche, Luminous Mind, p. 49-50.

Malcolm wrote:

Not an affirmation of creation of the world by a supreme being, so irrelevant, and further, the translation is suspect. "All things" is "chos thams cad," which does not refer to everything in the universe, but is a technical term which includes all phenomena of an individual in one aggregate, one sense base, and one sense element. So of course mind pervades all of these things.

Matt J said:

At the outset, let me state that Buddhism is not atheistic as the term is ordinarily understood. It has certainly a God, the highest reality and truth, through which and in which this universe exists. However, the followers of Buddhism usually avoid the term God, for it savors so much of Christianity, whose spirit is not always exactly in accord with the Buddhist interpretation of religious experience. Again, Buddhism is not pantheistic in the sense that it identifies the universe with God. On the other hand, the Buddhist God is absolute and transcendent; this world, being merely its manifestation, is necessarily fragmental and imperfect. To define more exactly the Buddhist notion of the highest being, it may be convenient to borrow the term very happily coined by a modern German scholar, "panentheism," according to which God is $\pi\alpha\nu\ \kappa\alpha\iota\ \epsilon\nu$ (all and one) and more than the totality of existence.

Soen Shaku

Malcolm wrote:

The is just some Platonic eternalism wrapped up in Buddhist drag.

Matt J said:

<https://www.sacred-texts.com/bud/zfa/zfa04.htm>

Let's not even talk about those Indonesians, who were forced to modify Buddhism to conform to Indonesian politics. Shall we eject them from the tent?:

Sanghyang Adi Buddha is the origin of everything in the universe, but he himself is without beginning or end, self-originating, infinite, omnipotent, unconditioned, absolute, omnipresent, almighty, incomparable, and immortal. However, those words are unable to describe the true self of Sanghyang Adi Buddha. The existence of Adi Buddha demonstrates that this life is not the product of chaos, but the product of spiritual hierarchy. By the presence of Adi Buddha, this life becomes useful and be possible to attain enlightenment and Buddhahood.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Sanghyang_Adi_Buddha

Malcolm wrote:

BINO.

Matt J said:

And here is a literal (Tibetan, not Pureland) prayer to a Amitabha to go to Sukhavati:
O Victorious One and Protector Amitābha,

To you I pray: inspire me with your blessing.

As soon as it is time to leave this life behind,

Guide me, I pray, to the realm of Sukhāvātī!

<https://www.lotsawahouse.org/tibetan-masters/dodrupchen-III/amtibha-prayer>

Malcolm wrote:

Not an affirmation of a supreme being who creates the universes, and, just an expression of dependent origination.

Matt J said:

Certainly, the atheist convention would ride us out of town if they learned of this from ChNNR, which is not far from what I said before about the divine qualities being located in us instead of in an external God:

Most Westerners receive a Christian education and in the Christian tradition God is very diffused. God is recognized as something outside. They don't know that God is in our real nature. If you have that knowledge and you are reading the bible, you can see there are many words that indicate God means our real nature. But then it developed in a more dualistic way. When they started to say, "the unique God governing all universe", then it became easy to think God is governing everything. But it does not correspond in the real condition. So it is very important when you follow the Dzogchen Teachings, that you really understand what God means. It is not necessary to wonder if God exists or not. Some people are worried there is no God in Buddhism. In Buddhism there are so many kinds of gods, but Buddhists do not speak of the unique God. The essence of Buddhist teaching is Dzogchen, which is the final teaching of the Buddha Shakyamuni.

Through Dzogchen we can really understand what God is and we don't have to worry if there is a God or not. God always exists as our real nature, the base, for everybody.
<http://ylonhost-eu.com/melong.com/wp-co%20...%20ror108.pdf>

Malcolm wrote:

This is just something nice CHNN said for people who are attached to God, that's it. CHNN also said we could call the basis "George," not once, but many times.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 8:16 AM

Title: Re: why is theravada section hosted on a separate website

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I believe the Theravada site actually came first.

PeterC said:

I thought some fragments of postings were found in an lomega drive written in Gandharan that proved that the earliest extant Dharmawheel postings actually predated the Dhammawheel postings?

Malcolm wrote:

Gandhara, in this case, was E-sangha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 9:49 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

Matt J said:

This definition of atheist bears a cultural bias...

Malcolm wrote:

I never said you have to be an atheist. I said I was one, still am, and will always be one, and that I understand the Buddha was also an atheist.

As an atheist, I do not believe that any version of theism—whether poly, pan, or mono—leads to liberation. I go for refuge to the Three Jewels. Whether there are mundane gods or not (not to mention the existence of a supreme being) is quite irrelevant.

Buddhism in atheist because we eschew refuge in all versions of theism, no matter what adjective one places before it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 9:51 AM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

Matt J said:

Many modern atheists have abandoned these definitions as they are very untenable philosophically. So instead of denying, they know "lack a belief." The second, however, is largely panned as centering on more modern, Westernized notions.

SilenceMonkey said:

Why can't everyone just acknowledge that there are two definitions to the word atheism?

1) Disbelief in the existence of God or Gods.

2) Disbelief in the notion of a creator God.

It's just a matter of preference for one or the other definition for the word.

Malcolm wrote:

Frankly, I have more in common with secular humanists than Christians, etc. YMMV. I am not worried about the former trying to slaughter me for my idiosyncratic beliefs; history shows the latter are dangerous to people like us.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 9:55 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

Matt J said:

This definition of atheist bears a cultural bias...

Malcolm wrote:

I never said you have to be an atheist. I said I was one, still am, and will always be one, and that I understand the Buddha was also an atheist.

As an atheist, I do not believe that any version of theism—whether poly, pan, or mono—leads to liberation. I go for refuge to the Three Jewels. Whether there are mundane gods or not (not to mention the existence of a supreme being) is quite irrelevant.

Buddhism in atheist because we eschew refuge in all versions of theism, no matter what adjective one places before it.

To follow up on this, Buddhists are nang pas because we do not believe in external saviors or refuges. That's why we are atheists.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 10:09 AM

Title: Re: In what sense is the brain and consciousness not just biochemicals

Content:

Matt J said:

Your explanations were clear, and I think you're right: you either get it or you don't, but once you do, it's obvious.

I think some may fear they might turn into Yogacarins, or even worse, Shetongpas.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Thanks, you explained this much better than I could. The bolded bit is the tacit belief of some materialists, and is exactly why the idea that subjective experience is completely reducible to physical components (again, referencing the OP) is questionable, to my mind at least.

Malcolm wrote:

The question of reducing consciousness to mere physical epiphenomena is not falsifiable. Thus, the entire line of discussion about the OPs qualms are reduced to nought with one sentence.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 11:17 AM

Title: Re: Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

I never said you have to be an atheist. I said I was one, still am, and will always be one, and that I understand the Buddha was also an atheist.

As an atheist, I do not believe that any version of theism—whether poly, pan, or mono—leads to liberation. I go for refuge to the Three Jewels. Whether there are mundane gods or not (not to mention the existence of a supreme being) is quite irrelevant.

Buddhism in atheist because we eschew refuge in all versions of theism, no matter what adjective one places before it.

To follow up on this, Buddhists are nang pas because we do not believe in external saviors or refuges. That's why we are atheists.

PadmaVonSamba said:

So, technically, by that definition, one could stolidly believe in the existence of a god or gods, even a 'creator of the universe' god (dependent origination aside) but at the same time regard them as useless as far as liberation from samsara is concerned.

I'm not sure that's how most atheists would carve it out, but okay.

I've always wondered, since the biblical (abrahamic) god describes himself as having anger and jealousy issues, whether Buddhists would classify 'him' as an asura.

Malcolm wrote:

Well no, since that violates the principle dependent origination.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 11:19 AM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

tkp67 said:

to quote Bob Thurman "so don't tell me buddhists are atheistic"

Note he remarks throughout he has made recent observations in regards to practices.
Nice to see his isn't blinded by provisional.

Malcolm wrote:

Thurman is not really very reliable, definitely not an authority.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 11:20 AM

Title: Re: In what sense is the brain and consciousness not just biochemicals

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I mentioned that earlier. It hasn't stopped people from trying to justify that point of view though.

Malcolm wrote:

They've abandoned science, in that case.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 11:38 AM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

tkp67 said:

to quote Bob Thurman "so don't tell me buddhists are atheistic"

Note he remarks throughout he has made recent observations in regards to practices.
Nice to see his isn't blinded by provisional.

Malcolm wrote:

Thurman is not really very reliable, definitely not an authority.

tkp67 said:

Glad to see you did your due diligence and digested his proposition on such things. When you can demonstrate you understand his position and can correct it without denouncing his character you will demonstrate your claim.

Malcolm wrote:

Thurman likes to play to those who have theistic tendencies, this is well known amongst Tibetan Buddhists. Some people think it is skillful means, but I don't. On the other hand, I don't have to appeal to uptown NYC city new agers in order to keep the family business going.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 11:44 AM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

tkp67 said:

Here is where the atheist theorem really falls apart. Causation.

Malcolm wrote:

You are confusing Atheism with atheist. But arguably, followers of Atheism are more likely to accept dependent origination than theists.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 7:57 PM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

tkp67 said:

Here is where the atheist theorem really falls apart. Causation.

Malcolm wrote:

You are confusing Atheism with atheist. But arguably, followers of Atheism are more likely to accept dependent origination than theists.

tkp67 said:

What about the dependence of buddhism on Brahmanism as the basis, cause and means for Shakyamuni?

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhadharma does not depend on Brahmanism in anyway.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 11:11 PM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

Queequeg said:

I'm not going to go back and read all this... would someone please restate what is meant by the following terms in the context of this discussion:

theism

Malcolm wrote:

the·ist | \ 'thē-ist \

plural theist

Definition of theist

: a believer in theism : a person who believes in the existence of a god or gods specifically : one who believes in the existence of one God viewed as the creative source of the human race

Not surprisingly, both scientific skeptics and theists whose ideas of God center primarily on the notion of "intelligent design" have found Darwinian ideas religiously incoherent.

— John F. Haught

[/quote] atheism

[/quote]

athe·ist | \ 'ā-thē-ist \

Definition of atheist

: a person who does not believe in the existence of a god or any gods : one who subscribes to or advocates atheism

While some argue against defining Buddhadharma as atheist, Muslims, Christians, theists in general understand Buddhadharma as an atheist tradition. For Buddhadharma, devas are just sentient beings who, when they exhaust their merit, fall into lower realms, nothing special at all. We believe in devas with about the same fervor as we believe in leprechauns, kobolds, elves, and fairies.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 11:18 PM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

tkp67 said:

I think the real point is that the mainstream understanding is materialsitic. DW represents a very narrow demographic of which display exemplary capacities, causes and conditions. <username's> atheistic perspective as a <tradition> buddhist is fine. Saying the buddha was an atheist is not because it makes it an obstacle for theists.

Malcolm wrote:

The conversion trip again—look, if you do not have the karma to meet Buddhist teachings and enter them in this life, you will not meet Buddhist teachings and enter them in this life. If you do, you will. QED.

If you tell Christians that Buddhists do not accept the Nicean creed, this causes them obstacles too. What is the Nicean Creed? Here is the Ecumenical version:

We believe in one God,
the Father, the Almighty,
maker of heaven and earth,
of all that is, seen and unseen.

We believe in one Lord, Jesus Christ,
the only Son of God,
eternally begotten of the Father,
God from God, Light from Light, true God from true God,
begotten, not made,
of one Being with the Father.
Through him all things were made.
For us men and for our salvation
he came down from heaven:
by the power of the Holy Spirit he became incarnate from the Virgin Mary, and was made man.
For our sake he was crucified under Pontius Pilate;
he suffered death and was buried.
On the third day he rose again in accordance with the Scriptures;
he ascended into heaven and is seated at the right hand of the Father.
He will come again in glory to judge the living and the dead, and his kingdom will have no end.

We believe in the Holy Spirit, the Lord, the giver of life, who proceeds from the Father and the Son.
With the Father and the Son he is worshiped and glorified.
He has spoken through the Prophets.
We believe in one holy catholic and apostolic Church.
We acknowledge one baptism for the forgiveness of sins.
We look for the resurrection of the dead,
and the life of the world to come. Amen.

This is not acceptable in Buddhadharma. We don't believe any of this.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 11:21 PM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

We believe in devas with about the same fervor as we believe in leprechauns, kobolds, elves, and fairies.

tkp67 said:

Glads to see you have revealed yourself as a great authority over all things Buddhist today than the world honored one himself.

Malcolm wrote:

Really, a "who made you king of the X" reply? Grow up dude. Whether devas exist or not is absolutely irrelevant to the Buddhadharma path.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 11:25 PM

Title: Re: Tibetan prātimokṣa chanting?

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

On another forum less specialized than this, someone recently asked if Tibetan monks chant the prātimokṣa, and it occurred to me I have no idea what Tibetan monastic observance looks like. Are there morning and evening services like in Chinese-influenced Buddhism? Is the prātimokṣa chanted at one point? Where would I be able to find translated liturgy books, with the obvious caveat in mind that I'm not looking for juicy secret teachings and forbidden things from "beyond the veil?" I imagine some sort of monastic chant would be to-do with the vinaya. Do they chant excerpts from the Vinayasutra instead?

Malcolm wrote:

Monastics, in Tibetan Buddhism, only recite prātimokṣa on Posada days.

However, there are many daily prayers they might do, depending on the monastery. Typically a Sakya monastery day begins with puja to Tārā, which will included a daily recital that reaffirms both prātimokṣa and bodhisattva vows. The Triskandha Sūtra is a common recitation, for example. And since most monastics are Vajrayāna practitioners, their sādhanā recitations will take care of maintaining their vows. But it really depends on school to school and monastery to monastery.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 11:37 PM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

tkp67 said:

This argument again. Look I never said buddhism should accept christian doctrine. What I am saying is the buddha would not be conditioned against it so why misrepresent it that way.?

Malcolm wrote:

The Buddha was quite opposed to many nonbuddhist doctrines, for example, the idea that one's status as a brahmin was determined by birth.

Just read something other than the Lotus Sūtra for a change and you will discover this quickly.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 11:42 PM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

tkp67 said:

Because there are no sentient beings left that benefit from that teaching?

Even if it is a conceptual means to eliminate mental constraints it doesn't negate meaning or value. There are other criteria for that evaluation. Not just one's own causes, capacities and conditions.

Malcolm wrote:

The only sentient beings who can attain liberation are human beings. This is why a human birth is called "precious." Hell beings, pretas, animals, asuras, and devas cannot attain buddhahood.

For this reason, whether hell beings, pretas, asuras, and devas exist or not is irrelevant to the path.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 11th, 2021 at 11:43 PM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

Queequeg said:

tkp, I request that you state your view in 5 SIMPLE sentences or less. Simple - not compound, not run on. Its really hard to understand what problem you could possibly have with the definitions of theism and atheism, and their application to Buddhism as explained by Norwegian and Malcolm above.

Malcolm wrote:

tkp has a savior complex, he is afraid we will alienate people from converting to Buddhadharma if we don't use nice and soothing words. Of course, I don't believe anyone "converts" to Buddhadharma. They either have the merit and karma to meet to the Dharma in this or some other life or not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 12:46 AM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

tkp67 said:

Just like I am questing the attachment to the notion of atheism or theism as categorically buddhist or not.

Malcolm wrote:

I am not attached to the idea that Buddhadharma is atheist. It just is.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 12:51 AM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

tkp67 said:

Mainstream atheism

Malcolm wrote:

Again, since you are hard of hearing: being an atheist is one thing; being a follower of atheism is another.

For example, I don't believe in emptiness, but things are empty.

I don't _believe_ there is no God since the doctrine of dependent origination excludes the possibility of such a being. I don't believe in dependent origination, it is obvious that all compounded entities arise dependently. As such, that makes me an atheist, but it does not make me a believer in Atheism, mainstream or otherwise.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 12:57 AM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

Matt J said:

In my world, there is room for atheists such as you, Malcolm, and Stephen Batchelor, but also room for Wallace

Malcolm wrote:

Wallace is quite simply wrong, and his view on this is not supported in any way in ati yoga texts.

Matt J said:

Thurman, Indonesian Buddhists, lay people with a less sophisticated understanding, etc. Mahayana after all is supposed to be the "big boat."

Malcolm wrote:

The existence of people who have a religious commitment to Buddhism, who yet fail to understand its essential principles goes all the way back to the Pudgalavādins, who asserted the existence of an inexpressible person, who is neither the same nor different than the aggregates. BINO's, in other words, Buddhists in Name Only.

Matt J said:

And if there are similarities to these truths amongst the mystics of many traditions, then it is even more likely to be universal.

Malcolm wrote:

There are no similarities between what the mystics of other traditions believe and what the Buddha taught and what has been practiced and realized in Buddhadharma since time immemorial. It is for this reason, for example, that the Rig pa Rang Shar divides vehicles into vehicles of samsara and vehicles of nirvana. Outside the nine yānas, everything else is a samsaric vehicle.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 1:00 AM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

tkp67 said:

Yet your interpretation of these things is developed over time, through capacity, according to cause and condition and reflects grand specificity.

Malcolm wrote:

Dependent origination excludes theism as a valid explanation of the world and the beings who inhabit it. Since dependent origination is the Dharma, and since the Dharma excludes theism as a valid explanation of the world and the beings who inhabit it, Dharma is atheist. QED.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 2:24 AM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

Matt J said:

Well, there are strands and practices that are based on Other Power.

Rinchen Samphel said:

Either way, at the end of the day, the Great Sage said that he can show us the methods that lead to liberation, but liberation depends upon oneself. So even if reality is by nature theist, not theist, both or neither, the responsibility of our awakening lies upon ourselves. What then is the necessity of theism? And if there isn't any necessity for theism, then how could one be theist in any meaningful way?

Malcolm wrote:

Even here, one has to wish for liberation, possess bodhicitta, and so on. It is not like Krishna picks one up like a kitten and carries one to Vaikuntha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 2:26 AM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

tkp67 said:

In the assembly of the Lotus Sutra the Buddha remarks the Brahmins have freed themselves of outflows so he recognized their means in provisional context.

Malcolm wrote:

You are claiming the Buddha recognized that all Brahmins are free from outflows?

Citation please.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 2:53 AM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

Sādhaka said:

My two cents here is that "Brahmin" is meant in the context as used in the Dhammapada, i.e. the term "Brahmin" used to mean one who actually sees the Dharma, not meaning your average run-of-the-mill follower of Brahminism.

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed, there are nominal Brahmins and then there are true Brahmins, i.e., āryas. It is unclear here what tkp is referring to.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 2:55 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Matt J said:

Does visualized mean imaginary?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, this is why in many sadhanas it says, "Imagine oneself as _insert name of yidam here_.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 3:28 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Matt J said:

Well, let's pull out some definitions:

im·ag·i·nar·y

/iˈmæjəˌnerē/adjective

1. existing only in the imagination.

im·ag·i·na·tion

/iˌmæjəˈnāSH(ə)n/

noun

1. the faculty or action of forming new ideas, or images or concepts of external objects not present to the senses.

Does the use of the second necessarily imply the first?

Does visualized mean imaginary?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, this is why in many sadhanas it says, "Imagine oneself as _insert name of yidam here_.

Both, actually. This is why we summon the jñānasattva, because until that point, the samayasattva is just a conceptual fiction. This is the basis of the whole Dzogchen critique of creation stage.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 3:38 AM

Title: Re: In what sense is the brain and consciousness not just biochemicals

Content:

Matt J said:

Is there eye consciousness in a dream? Contact?

Queequeg said:

Here's a stab at an analysis of that - Technically, if there is no contact between the visual object and eyes, there is no eye consciousness. Ananda knows he can't see because he notes, in mind consciousness, the absence of eye consciousness impinging on mind consciousness. That is itself a function of mind consciousness - mind consciousness takes as its object both consciousness of the 5 sense organs as well as the previous instances of mind consciousness.

Malcolm wrote:

No, but there is contact by the manodhātu of an object in the dharmadhātu resulting dream perceptions. So, there is no eye consciousness in a dream, there is however, contact.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 3:44 AM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

Matt J said:

Other Power

Queequeg said:

If I'm not mistaken, the Other Power is limited to Amitabha overriding ordinary karma which would determine rebirth and bringing all who call on him to Sukhavati where one would fare according to karma within that realm. The advantage of that realm is that it is a pure land.

Malcolm wrote:

While there are somewhat extreme views of so-called other power in Japanese Buddhism, there are restrictions placed upon who can take birth in Sukhavati, what grade they will be born as, etc.

And this idea of "call" is Shinran's rereading. The text actually says "hear."

Further, there are many sūtras, where based on the pranidhanas or aspirations of a given bodhisattva, their resultant buddhafield will admit the aspirant. For example, the Medicine Buddha pureland can be accessed by minimally reciting the Bhaisajyaguru dhāraṇī seven times a day, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 3:45 AM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

Matt J said:
Other Power

Queequeg said:

If I'm not mistaken, the Other Power is limited to Amitabha overriding ordinary karma which would determine rebirth and bringing all who call on him to Sukhavati where one would fare according to karma within that realm. The advantage of that realm is that it is a pure land.

Rinchen Samphel said:

Wait, what is "Other Power"? I just took it to mean some other power which is greater than myself that can help me and my development, does it have a more distinct meaning here in Buddhism?

Malcolm wrote:

It means relying on one of Amitabha's vows which guarantee rebirth in Sukhavativyuha:

https://en.wikisource.org/wiki/Amitabha%27s_forty-eight_vows

These are three most salient:

Vow 18

Provided I become a Buddha, if the beings of the ten quarters who after having heard my name, and thus awakened their highest faith and aspiration of re-birth in that country of mine, even they have recollected such a thought for ten times only, they are destined to be born there, with the exception of those who have committed the five deadly sins (Anantarya), and who have blasphemed the orthodox Law (Dharma), otherwise may I not attain the enlightenment.

Vow 19

Provided I become a Buddha, if the beings of ten quarters who have directed their thoughts towards the Bodhi and cultivated their stock of various merits with a fervent craving for re-birth in that country of mine, if at the moment of death, should I not appear with an assembly of retinue before them, then may I not attain the enlightenment.

Vow 20

Provided I become a Buddha, if the beings of ten quarters, after having heard my name always longing for that country of mine and cultivating various essential merits for the purpose of realizing their earnest wish to be born in my country, should their fulfillment be failed, then may I not attain the enlightenment.

Nevertheless, it is very clear here that one must have the aspiration oneself to be born in Sukhavati. Also, Buddhahood there takes eons.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 4:34 AM

Title: Re: Tibetan Cataract Surgery?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I just had cataract surgery. There is an incision, the entire lens is removed, and a new plastic lens inserted. In other words, "the cataract" is the old lens. Even if everything else was modern level sterile and painless, removing the lens without replacing it would effectively blind you in that eye.

Malcolm wrote:

That's the modern way, but actually what happens is that film forms on the lens, which can be removed separately from the lens. These kinds of surgeries were performed in old Tibet without blinding anyone.

AmidaB said:

First of all: May all the Buddhas of the Tree Times bless Yangchen Lhamo in her all past and future lives.

Malcolm La, with all due respect that statement was far from the true or complete explanation - that would be about the 'film forms' part.

With the classical procedure you can regain your 'sight' but you won't be able to focus with the affected eye.

There are several type of cataract and the correct information on the pathology/pathophysiology and the description of the classical Indian (Sushruta samitha) and modern 'western' treatment-variations is widely available on the web or in better case in medical textbooks. Please invest some time into learning 'modern' biomedicine from the scratch, including anatomy, physiology, pathophysiology, internal medicine, pharmacology, surgery etc. it will greatly helps in the in depth understanding of the classical systems and also a great fun. I also would like to apologize for my harsh words and openly confess my shallow understanding in the field of proper English usage and communication.

Malcolm wrote:

I gather you know Tibetan and can read what it says in the Medical Tantra and so on? In any case, what I have written here is an accurate representation of a description of said procedure.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 6:04 AM

Title: Re: In what sense is the brain and consciousness not just biochemicals

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

dharmadhātu resulting dream perceptions.

Queequeg said:

can you explain that?

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, the dharmadhātu is the object of the manodhātu, when these two things meet, it produces the manovijñānadhātu.

So, mental factors are part of the dharmadhātu, dream experiences are basically, distorted memories. Memories are mental factors.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 6:12 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Matt J said:

So can I just replace Ratnasambhava with say, Ronald McDonald?

Malcolm wrote:

If Ronald McDonald is taught by a Buddha in a tantra as a means of purifying the aggregate of sensation, then sure. If not, then I am afraid you are shit out of luck.

The reason we have a completion stage is to eliminate the conceptuality of the creation stage. The creation stage is meant to substitute impure conceptuality with pure conceptuality. The completion stage is meant to eradicate even pure conceptuality. Imagining oneself as a deity is just an exercise in conceptuality that also must be overcome.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 6:21 AM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

Tenma said:

Let's say that it was a "well-established fact" within a culture that the lunar cycle has control over our behavior, that spirits existed, that there were four elements, that chakras literally existed, and so forth. However, let's also consider that a person did not believe in any of the gods nor bothered to worship them. Though the person believes the generally-accepted "fact" that the lunar cycle controls behaviors and bodies, that spirits exist, etc., would they still be considered atheists for not believing in the gods and whatever other religions there were?

Malcolm wrote:

As long as you are clear that universe was not created by a supreme being, you are, in my opinion, an atheist.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 10:05 AM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Dependent origination excludes theism as a valid explanation of the world and the beings who inhabit it. Since dependent origination is the Dharma, and since the Dharma excludes theism as a valid explanation of the world and the beings who inhabit it, Dharma is atheist. QED.

boda said:

Why would dependent origination necessarily exclude theism? There's no universe creation story in Buddhism, last time I checked.

Malcolm wrote:

It excludes prime movers. And there indeed is a Buddhist cosmogony.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 10:07 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I've had a long lingering suspicion that Malcolm's not into the whole jñānasattva thing. I could be wrong about that.

Malcolm wrote:

It's a useful fiction for beginners.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 9:09 PM

Title: Re: In what sense is the brain and consciousness not just biochemicals

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

The teachings say that when looked for,
The mind cannot be found to reside either inside or outside of the body.

Yet, at the time of death,
consciousness is also said to leave the body,
(and preferably through the top of the head).
That would suggest that the mind is located in the body.

These two appear to contradict each other.
Can you resolve it?

Malcolm wrote:

The first is a ultimate analysis, the second is a conventional description. For example, a car cannot be found to reside in its parts or outside its parts, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 9:16 PM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

A jñanasattva is also a purely imagined representation. It's a method, but there is no inherently existing jñanasattva to invoke and absorb. It's just a creation stage symbol, so wholly imagined and conceptualized.

Secondary practices work because the process of reciting mantras function through accumulating merit and dependent origination, but they are still just conceptual because they are part of our dualistic experience.

Matt J said:

Certainly there is more to a deity than pure imagination, right? Otherwise there would be no difference between a jñanasattva and a samayasattva? And how would secondary practices work?

Malcolm wrote:

If Ronald McDonald is taught by a Buddha in a tantra as a means of purifying the aggregate of sensation, then sure. If not, then I am afraid you are shit out of luck.

The reason we have a completion stage is to eliminate the conceptuality of the creation stage. The creation stage is meant to substitute impure conceptuality with pure conceptuality. The completion stage is meant to eradicate even pure conceptuality. Imagining oneself as a deity is just an exercise in conceptuality that also must be overcome.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 9:20 PM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The difference of course is that the Buddhist story, from beginning to end, is grounded in understanding samsaric dependent origination and reversing samsaric dependent origination. So, your statement below depends on a false equivalence.

Matt J said:

I suppose one can say the same about any story, philosophy, worldview, religion, etc.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I've had a long lingering suspicion that Malcolm's not into the whole jñanasattva thing. I could be wrong about that.

Malcolm wrote:

It's a useful fiction for beginners.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 9:24 PM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

The corollary to that perspective is the idea that the deity is like a light switch and you are then the light bulb. You need faith and devotion in order to flip the switch.

But there's more than one correct approach.

Malcolm wrote:

No, the bulb is your ordinary body, voice and mind, the basis of purification; the jñanasattva is the element in the bulb, the three vajras, the purifier; empowerment is the switch.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 11:25 PM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

boda said:

Why would dependent origination necessarily exclude theism? There's no universe creation story in Buddhism, last time I checked.

Malcolm wrote:

It excludes prime movers. And there indeed is a Buddhist cosmogony.

boda said:

Endless cycles of development and dissolution? If so, that's not a creation story.

Malcolm wrote:

It is a cosmogenesis story: wash, rinse, repeat.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 11:26 PM

Title: Re: In what sense is the brain and consciousness not just biochemicals

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

The teachings say that when looked for,
The mind cannot be found to reside either inside or outside of the body.

Yet, at the time of death,
consciousness is also said to leave the body,
(and preferably through the top of the head).
That would suggest that the mind is located in the body.

These two appear to contradict each other.
Can you resolve it?

Malcolm wrote:

The first is a ultimate analysis, the second is a conventional description. For example, a car cannot be found to reside in its parts or outside its parts, etc.

PadmaVonSamba said:

So then, the mind is merely, let's say, "ending its association" with the body. But then, why would some texts suggest it matters through which orifice the consciousness "leaves" the body?

Malcolm wrote:

Its a karmic sign of where one will take rebirth. Again, just a conventional description.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 11:31 PM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Matt J said:

Well, I would not claim that all fictions are equal, or equally conducive to liberation.

Malcolm wrote:

There is only one thing conducive to liberation: seeing through the obscuration of self-grasping through realizing emptiness, which burns up afflictions.

Creation stage is something predicated on an Abhidharma model of a putative person, unlike Ronald McDonald. A deity is not an integral person anymore than we are. This is demonstrated by the Guru's three seats, for example, from whom we take empowerment, the five buddhas, their consorts, the male and female bodhisattvas, and the ten wrathful ones. We do not actually receive empowerment from a guru as an integral person, because an integral person is just a fiction. To break down that fiction, we substitute another fiction: the mandala. To break down the fiction of the mandala, we use the completion stage.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 12th, 2021 at 11:32 PM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Soma999 said:

Mantra (sound) creates yantra (form). Sound is vibrations. It transforms matter and put you in alignment with certain forces in the universe. It is physics.

I have seen experiments of how sound impacts form. It is impressive. Mandala can be formed this way.

Sound can carry information.

Form also can carry information. It can have tremendous effects when used correctly. It is all physics and resonance.

Saying a form is empty does not make it inexistent. Maybe the fire is empty, but it still burns.

Malcolm wrote:

This is all dualistic too.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 13th, 2021 at 4:47 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Matt J said:

From the POV I have been taught, all conceptual elaborations are fictitious...

Malcolm wrote:

Then why are you splitting hairs over imaginary and imagination? Surely the former is the product of the latter? That which is imaginary comes from one's imagination, it is in the very definitions you provided:

im·ag·i·nar·y

/iˈmajəˌnerē/

adjective

1. existing only in the imagination.

im·ag·i·na·tion

/iˌmajəˈnāSH(ə)n/

noun

1. the faculty or action of forming new ideas, or images or concepts of external objects not present to the senses.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 13th, 2021 at 5:05 AM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

tkp67 said:

Atheism or theism is a belief system

Malcolm wrote:

One does not to subscribe to a belief system to be an atheist. All that is required is that one does not accept there is such a thing as God. God, in this case, is similar to rabbit horns or the child of a barren woman. If one does not believe in rabbit horns or sons of barren women, this does not require a belief system since such things do not exist at all and have never existed, just like God.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 13th, 2021 at 5:58 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

In keeping with my well established habits, I will take the most heretical of all possible positions; the samayasattva are indeed imaginary, but the jñānasattva are Shentong, meaning empty of anything other than their own Buddha Nature.

I knew that would come out sooner or later.

Malcolm wrote:

Jñānasattvas are equally imaginary, they are symbols of suchness; they are not however actually suchness. One summons the jñānasattva simply to recall the principle that dharmin and dharmatā are inseparable.

The suchness that jñānasattvas symbolize may indeed not be empty of qualities, whatever that means, but nevertheless, jñānasattva themselves are just imaginary constructs in the creation stage process that serve a heuristic function.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 13th, 2021 at 6:37 AM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

All the self-declared atheists I know also reject any notion of Buddhist deities, ghosts, pure lands, etc. But perhaps this is that they are 'materialists'.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, they are lokayatis.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 13th, 2021 at 7:30 AM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

boda said:

Endless cycles of development and dissolution? If so, that's not a creation story.

Malcolm wrote:

It is a cosmogenesis story: wash, rinse, repeat.

boda said:

It appears as though they're just different stories, only Buddhism has no creation story that I'm aware of. I don't see how they're mutually exclusive stories. For instance, the same basic outline of how I was dependently originated would apply to God, wouldn't it? God being a sentient being.

Malcolm wrote:

If God were dependently originated, God would not fit the definition of a prime mover. QED.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 13th, 2021 at 7:32 AM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Buddhism looks directly into the nature of the world as well as the nature of Enlightenment. For those trying to fully understand everything about this world it may be difficult for them to openly come to terms with describing the idea of an All-Powerful God because they are defining the world from a perspective of converting all beings to the Path, all are welcome to Buddhism, theist, atheist, agnostic, etc. And there are so many difficult questions. Can a Buddhist believe in God and still be a Buddhist? I say yes. I believe if you say no to such a question you are missing the point of the all-inclusiveness of Buddhism. There are many belief systems, for example many people (and not just the Hindus) believe and believed that Buddha is God Himself. His birth was predicted thousands of years before He was born in a Vedic Purana (The Bhagavatam Purana), describing Him as the Lord. Many people of Buddha's time such as the common peasants of the towns He walked through, when they encountered Him, believed Him to be God. Such was the idea of advanced mendicants in India back in the day. What does your compassion and Dharmic Love tell you about who Buddha is, and what is behind His Emptiness? Ordinary people can achieve the most extraordinary things.

Malcolm wrote:

You mean you actually believe the story that Buddha is an avatar of Vishnu sent deceive the Daityas? If so, you are not a follower of Buddhadharma, but rather, Sanatanadharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 13th, 2021 at 9:03 PM

Title: Re: Atheism vs Buddhism (was Non Cultural Buddhists: What Made You Stay?)

Content:

boda said:

It appears as though they're just different stories, only Buddhism has no creation story that I'm aware of. I don't see how they're mutually exclusive stories. For instance, the same basic outline of how I was dependently originated would apply to God, wouldn't it? God being a sentient being.

Malcolm wrote:

If God were dependently originated, God would not fit the definition of a prime mover. QED.

boda said:

It doesn't really make sense to call God the prime mover because nothing comes before the prime mover, and if nothing comes before God, how could God be a creator? You can't simultaneously create and be created. Also, a creator requires sentients, and sentients is dependently originated.

Malcolm wrote:

Nevertheless, God is a prime mover. Not sure what you are arguing for here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 13th, 2021 at 9:53 PM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

tkp67 said:

One thing about the assembly is the buddha himself foresaw the cause and effect of his own enlightenment

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhahood has a cause?

tkp67 said:

The conditioning that allows it to continue...

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhahood is conditioned?

That's some pretty strange buddhahood.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 13th, 2021 at 11:08 PM

Title: Re: Superlarity Conceit in Buddhist Traditions

Content:

tkp67 said:

Or isn't he simply pointing out that these can be interpreted from the true aspect or from the perspective of self?

Delineating matters based on relative causal relation doesn't need evoke a self in the process.

jake said:

You use this phrase "true aspect" quite often but it has never been clear to me what you mean by it. Would you please share your understanding of this term?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 14th, 2021 at 2:14 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Matt J said:

Not wrong, but as noted, there are degrees of fiction.

Malcolm wrote:

Ummmm, you mean like one can be only a little bit pregnant?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 14th, 2021 at 6:06 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

tkp67 said:

One thing about the assembly is the buddha himself foresaw the cause and effect of his own enlightenment

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhahood has a cause?

tkp67 said:

Yes it is a function driven by cause and effect. The cause was suffering the effect was liberation.

Malcolm wrote:

That is the provisional view.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 14th, 2021 at 7:10 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

tkp67 said:

Yes it is a function driven by cause and effect. The cause was suffering the effect was liberation.

Malcolm wrote:

That is the provisional view.

Rinchen Samphel said:

Could you explain a little more what you mean by "Buddhahood has a cause?".

Malcolm wrote:

That which arises from causes and conditions is impermanent. Buddhahood arises from causes and conditions. Therefore buddhahood is impermanent. Thus is consequence of tkp67's assertion.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 14th, 2021 at 8:11 PM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Queequeg said:

Cause of Buddhahood -

The practices Shakyamuni carried out before he awakened in the remote past.

Malcolm wrote:

This is a provisional view.

That which is uncompounded does not arise from causes and conditions. The state of buddhahood is uncompounded. Therefore, buddhahood does not arise from causes and conditions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 14th, 2021 at 8:15 PM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

It's a useful fiction for beginners.

Ya know, if you're wrong about that, you're really missing out.

Just sayin'...

Malcolm wrote:

But I am not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 14th, 2021 at 8:16 PM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Ya know, if you're wrong about that, you're really missing out.

Just sayin'...

amanitamusc said:

What the hey! You think he's making this up? I don't.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I think he's wrong about it. And I think he's missing out.

But he's a big boy and I'm not his dad.

Malcolm wrote:

I think you may not have a very firm grasp on why we practice the two stages.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 14th, 2021 at 10:17 PM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

I think you may not have a very firm grasp on why we practice the two stages.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

And I think your focusing on the second stage misinforms your understanding of the role of the first stage.

But that's just my perspective based on my present karmic development.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, this is a thread in the dzogchen forum. So, dzogchen rules, not Sarma or lower tantra rules.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 14th, 2021 at 10:27 PM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Queequeg said:

Cause of Buddhahood -

The practices Shakyamuni carried out before he awakened in the remote past.

Malcolm wrote:

This is a provisional view.

That which is uncompounded does not arise from causes and conditions. The state of buddhahood is uncompounded. Therefore, buddhahood does not arise from causes and conditions.

tkp67 said:

Yes, conversely and without exclusion of that statement the obfuscation that prevent a person from realizing this state do arise from causes and conditions.

I would go as far to say the provisional and absolute (true aspect) exist in all things simultaneously and can be seen from a variety of perspectives because they are compounded. I invite people to examine the following from the lens of their own lives. I have yet to falsify it but perhaps this is a fault of mine.

Good Morning and Happy Valentine's Day

Malcolm wrote:

Since the state of Buddhahood is uncompounded, it is never affected by temporary obscurations or virtuous practices, just like the sun is never affected by white or dark clouds.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 14th, 2021 at 11:20 PM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Queequeg said:

Cause of Buddhahood -

The practices Shakyamuni carried out before he awakened in the remote past.

Malcolm wrote:

This is a provisional view.

That which is uncompounded does not arise from causes and conditions. The state of buddhahood is uncompounded. Therefore, buddhahood does not arise from causes and conditions.

Queequeg said:

Yes. That is understood in the Tiantai classification, where this term comes from.

Malcolm wrote:

Which term?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 14th, 2021 at 11:27 PM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Queequeg said:

Yes. That is understood in the Tiantai classification, where this term comes from.

Malcolm wrote:

Which term?

Queequeg said:

Original Cause. 本因妙

Malcolm wrote:

So you are calling something which is a not cause a cause? How is this nothing other than a euphemism?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 15th, 2021 at 12:24 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Queequeg said:

Original Cause. 本因妙

Malcolm wrote:

So you are calling something which is a not cause a cause? How is this nothing other than a euphemism?

Queequeg said:

I am not calling anything anything. I am explaining a term you asked about. Which is a provisional teaching in the Tiantai scheme, along the lines you suggested above.

Are you trying to make a controversy?

Malcolm wrote:

You mean the idea of “original cause” is provisional? If so you did not clearly state this.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 15th, 2021 at 3:57 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I think he's wrong about it. And I think he's missing out.

But he's a big boy and I'm not his dad.

Virgo said:

Unfortunately, you don't have a clue what you are talking about. You need to refer to Malcolm's analogy of electricity, the lightbulb, and filament, etc. and really try to grasp it before you make any more assertions in the thread. When you don't know something just ask questions, don't make assertions please. This makes it much easier on the people you are having the conversation with. Same goes for Matt J.

With respect,

Virgo

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Um, if you go back in the thread you'll see that the light switch/lightbulb analogy was originally my contribution.

Just sayin'....

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, which I corrected.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 15th, 2021 at 4:11 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Queequeg said:

When the Buddha explains his life span as nitya, he is displaying himself as Buddha without conditions as the Original Buddha. His trace appearances are then understood as functions for the sake of sentient beings.

Malcolm wrote:

Thanks for the explanation.

But I should point out, and not for the sake of generating controversy, that there are numerous sūtras in which the Buddha both defines the dharmakāya as uncompounded, and proclaims his identity as the dharmakāya, and where he declares that his appearance to sentient beings is based on past aspirations.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 15th, 2021 at 4:25 AM

Title: Re: Nagarjuna's tetralemma in contrast to Nichiren's interpretation of Tendai 3 Truths

Content:

Queequeg said:

When the Buddha explains his life span as nitya, he is displaying himself as Buddha without conditions as the Original Buddha. His trace appearances are then understood as functions for the sake of sentient beings.

Malcolm wrote:

Thanks for the explanation.

But I should point out, and not for the sake of generating controversy, that there are numerous sūtras in which the Buddha both defines the dharmakāya as uncompounded, and proclaims his identity as the dharmakāya, and where he declares that his appearance to sentient beings is based on past aspirations.

Queequeg said:

I don't think Zhiyi would have any problem with that. Nichiren Buddhists who insist everything comes from the Lotus might.

Malcolm wrote:

As always there is rhetoric and there is reality.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 15th, 2021 at 9:00 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

My basic point was about looking at the issue of betting one's practice regarding jñanasattvas with a cost/benefit analysis:

What does one gain by being dismissive of their nature if they are imaginary? Or what if they are valid? And what do you lose in both cases?

What does one gain by taking their nature seriously if they are imaginary? Or what if they are valid? And what do you lose in both cases?

By betting they aren't valid it costs you nothing, but you might be passing up something immensely valuable.

By betting they are valid you are potentially exposing yourself to criticism for being foolish, so there is a cost. But if they are valid you can also have immense benefit.

Is possibly looking foolish worth it for what might be offered? For me, yes. But then again looking foolish is a fairly common occurrence for me. So I don't care much.

I mean, compare that to the thread about Tibetan cataract surgery!

Malcolm wrote:

Pascal's wager, for those who follow Buddhadharma, is a complete copout.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 15th, 2021 at 9:17 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Pascal's wager, for those who follow Buddhadharma, is a complete copout.

I hadn't thought about it in those terms, but you're right. It's almost the same.

So now how is it a copout??

Malcolm wrote:

It's sems, not ye shes.

One of the four reliances is rely on ye shes, not concepts.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 15th, 2021 at 9:41 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I hadn't thought about it in those terms, but you're right. It's almost the same.

So now how is it a copout??

Malcolm wrote:

It's sems, not ye shes.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Experientially the spiritual path is the progression from sems to yeshe. So of course you start with sems. So no copout there.

The question at hand is how best to proceed from one to the other. The most direct way available to me is for my sems to merge with the yeshe of a tantric deity. (That's why the "Yeshe sempa" is not simply my own defiled imagination.) Presto!

How is that a copout? You think it's cheating?

Malcolm wrote:

The ye shes referred to is your own rang byung ye shes. It doesn't really come from somewhere outside you.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 15th, 2021 at 9:45 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

The ye shes referred to is your own rang byung ye shes. It doesn't really come from somewhere outside you.

And that takes us back to my original light switch and light bulb analogy.

Malcolm wrote:

The process of invoking the jnanasattva in a sadhana is just a conceptual process. It's good for beginners. This function is generally abandoned at the level of anuyoga, and especially in ati yoga. If you are not a practitioner of these two inner tantras, I understand why this idea may make you uncomfortable.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 16th, 2021 at 9:56 PM

Title: Re: Genghis Khan and India?

Content:

Queequeg said:

Mughals were not led by GK. This comment was about GK's decision only.

Malcolm wrote:

This is what PC was referring to:

Babur and Humayun (1526–1556)

Main articles: Babur and Humayun

Babur, the founder of the Mughal Empire, and his warriors visiting a Hindu temple in the Indian subcontinent.

The Mughal Empire was founded by Babur (reigned 1526–1530), a Central Asian ruler who was descended from the Turco-Mongol conqueror Timur (the founder of the Timurid Empire) on his father's side, and from Genghis Khan on his mother's side. [41] Ousted from his ancestral domains in Central Asia, Babur turned to India to satisfy his ambitions.[42] He established himself in Kabul and then pushed steadily southward into India from Afghanistan through the Khyber Pass.[41] Babur's forces occupied much of northern India after his victory at Panipat in 1526.[41] The preoccupation with wars and military campaigns, however, did not allow the new emperor to consolidate the gains he had made in India.[43]

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 17th, 2021 at 1:01 AM

Title: Re: Is Buddhism a methodological solipsism?

Content:

tkp67 said:

I know my friend, I know. I am not patronizing here. While I seem frivolous with belief that isn't a projection of my own mind. Do you realize I had to challenge the same distinctions. For me I could only do this through the lowest common denominator of empirical evidence.

PeterC said:

No, that's not it. It's not that we don't understand you because your ideas are profound. It's that we simply can't understand what you're saying because your posts are very confusingly written, and seem not to address the questions being discussed. Sorry.

tkp67 said:

What I am saying isn't profound.

I simply don't let my mind adhere to paradigms that serve 0 purpose.

That is why I say where is the benefit to your statements.

Remember friend one's mind determines the aspect of phenomenon one chooses to recognize (or not).

Malcolm wrote:

Apparently your mind is incapable of stringing together coherent sentences much of the time.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 17th, 2021 at 1:32 AM

Title: Re: Is Buddhism a methodological solipsism?

Content:

PeterC said:

No, that's not it. It's not that we don't understand you because your ideas are profound. It's that we simply can't understand what you're saying because your posts are very confusingly written, and seem not to address the questions being discussed. Sorry.

tkp67 said:

What I am saying isn't profound.

I simply don't let my mind adhere to paradigms that serve 0 purpose.

That is why I say where is the benefit to your statements.

Remember friend one's mind determines the aspect of phenomenon one chooses to recognize (or not).

Queequeg said:

It would help if you at least stuck to English, with its generally accepted meanings and syntax, as a paradigm. That's just a suggestion, though.

Malcolm wrote:

Based on cause and condition and without resort to predetermined outcomes, the awakening of the buddha surpasses the localized variants of time in your outlook, which prevaricates in tandem with the integration of all ten realms in one moment. QED.

We just have to learn his language...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 17th, 2021 at 2:03 AM

Title: Re: Are Zen teachers awakened?

Content:

unborn said:

Fortunately i have the opportunity to practice with an awakened rinzai zen teacher.

Malcolm wrote:

And how do you actually know your teacher is awakened? What is the sign or mark of that awakening?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 17th, 2021 at 6:36 AM

Title: Re: AKB, Ch. 1, V. 30-31: The eighteen dhatus and the three realms; purity of the dhatus

Content:

PeterC said:

He's presenting a Vaibhasikan argument for refutation, which is perhaps why it sounds so ridiculous. So a redundant organ persists even without having no purpose?

Malcolm wrote:

No, not the organ, the feature. The organ is just a patch of atoms. The nose is a feature. It exists because otherwise, devas won't be pretty.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 17th, 2021 at 8:48 AM

Title: Re: Are Zen teachers awakened?

Content:

unborn said:

Fortunately i have the opportunity to practice with an awakened rinzai zen teacher.

Malcolm wrote:

And how do you actually know your teacher is awakened? What is the sign or mark of that awakening?

Aemilius said:

Your own Buddha-nature sees or understands

Malcolm wrote:

So Buddhanature is a separate cognitive faculty apart from the mind?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 17th, 2021 at 9:45 PM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

This function is generally abandoned at the level of anuyoga, and especially in ati yoga. I ran this by someone who is fluent in Tibetan and has done the traditional Nyingma 3 year retreat. He said that as long as a dirty was involved the jnanasattva is invited at the beginning of the sadhana.

It is an academic issue for me since I don't practice the higher Tantras. But I thought that since this is a public forum the misinformation should be tagged.

Malcolm wrote:

He is wrong. Just plain wrong.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 17th, 2021 at 11:35 PM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Although if you want to practice with inviting the Jnanasattva in a Anuyoga Sadhana, it is part of Narag Tongtrug, if I'm not mistaken.

But yea I don't think that it is usually included in Anuyoga Sadhanas in general.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, there are Anuyoga sadhanas that have lines to the effect, "the jñānasattva and the samayasattva are nondual from the beginning, rest in the state of that recognition" and so on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 18th, 2021 at 1:25 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I do not think he is mistaken about the higher tantras—at least as they are taught here. He's not sloppy that way. However differences between specific lineages do occur, so there is that.

Malcolm wrote:

“Oh Vajrapāṇi, listen!

The vehicle of the great āgamas of Anuyoga maintains that two aspects, the dhātu and pristine consciousness, are held to be the vajra of inseparability. The entryway is either instant or gradual. The view to be realized is inseparability.

If it is asked what is instant entry, deities are not created, but perfected by merely recalling the essence.

If it is asked what is gradual entry, having gradually entered the dhātu and pristine consciousness, one obtains the result on the stage of Vajradhara.

Self Arisen Vidyā Tantra, pg. 188.

There are two approaches in Anuyoga. In the instant approach, there is no practice of the three samadhis and no summoning of a jñānasattva.

In the gradual approach, the three samadhis are summarized by the recollection of Samanbhadra, Samantabhadri, that is, pristine consciousness and the dhātu respectively, whose union results in the child, the seed syllable. In gradual Anuyoga sadhanas, there may be nominal jñānasattva, but the view is emphasized that there is no actual separation between the samayasattva and jñānasattva and nothing actually is invoked.

There is only one explanation of the three inner tantras: a Nyingma one. There is no such thing as a "Kagyū approach to the three inner tantras."

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, February 18th, 2021 at 5:37 AM
Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal
Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:
"Fictions for beginners" is not higher tantra.

Malcolm wrote:
There are beginners in higher tantra. They usually come from lower tantra.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, February 18th, 2021 at 10:13 PM
Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal
Content:

Crazywisdom said:
Nyingthig has deity yoga too.

Malcolm wrote:
Nyingthig cycles have anuyoga practices appended to them, it is true. But they are anuyoga practices of the three roots, where atiyoga is taken as the completion stage.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, February 18th, 2021 at 10:51 PM
Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal
Content:

Crazywisdom said:
Nyingthig has deity yoga too.

Malcolm wrote:
Nyingthig cycles have anuyoga practices appended to them, it is true. But they are anuyoga practices of the three roots, where atiyoga is taken as the completion stage.

heart said:
If you read Sechen Gyaltsab's "Illuminating Jewel Mirror" translated in "Vajra Wisdom" you will see that not all agrees with that view. According to Sechen Gyaltsab there is a Dzogchen development stage. Anyway in most terms the distinction between what is maha, anu and ati is not so sharp. The same deity might have a long sadhana with an invitation of the jnanasattvas and very short sadhanas without. For example Auy Khandros Simhamukha sadhana, which have an invitation of the jnanasattvas but that is according to ChNNR is a anuyoga practice. So it rather complicated and not very clean cut.

/magnus

Malcolm wrote:

Hi Magnus:

I addressed this discrepancy above. Some people consider arising without a seed syllable "Dzogchen development," but it is really just instant anuyoga creation stage. In Dzogchen proper, there is no creation and completion stage. In Dzogchen proper, there is no deity to create at all. Not understanding this point, many people mistake terms like "Dzogchen generation" for the actual practice of Dzogchen. You can ascertain this by looking up creation/generation stage in the index of the Tantra Without Syllables. But in particular, the deviations of the nine yānas are explained on pg. 180-181.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 19th, 2021 at 12:52 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

heart said:

But yes, strictly intellectually, there is no development and completion in Dzogchen. Unless you like Tulku Urgyen consider Tögal the natural development stage and Trechö the completion stage. So it is not so clean cut.

Malcolm wrote:

It is extremely clear cut in the tantras and commentaries, as well as in the teaching of Chogyal Namkhai Norbu.YMMV.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 19th, 2021 at 2:21 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Heart said:

The same deity might have a long sadhana with an invitation of the jñanasattvas and very short sadhanas without.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

My point being that with or without invitation, the visualized deity is never dismissed as simply one's own imagination/samayāsattva. If there's no invitation the presence of jñanasattva is assumed, not dismissed.

Malcolm wrote:

The creation stage deity is a conceptual construct, an antidote to other concepts. That's all. From a Dzogchen perspective, it is an deviation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 19th, 2021 at 2:23 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Malcolm: whether there's an invitation or not, the jnanasattva is a fiction and not to be taken seriously.

Malcolm wrote:

No, in mahayoga sadhanas, it is to be taken seriously as a symbolic method (but still a conceptual fabrication), just like it is in anuyoga.

But this does not apply to Dzogchen at all. The path is different, so the method is different.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 19th, 2021 at 3:08 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

heart said:

But yes, strictly intellectually, there is no development and completion in Dzogchen.

Unless you like Tulku Urgyen consider Tögal the natural development stage and Trechö the completion stage. So it is not so clean cut.

Malcolm wrote:

It is extremely clear cut in the tantras and commentaries, as well as in the teaching of Chogyal Namkhai Norbu.YMMV.

heart said:

Yes, I agree, but I don't want to limit myself like that.

/magnus

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, well, there is also the indirect approach to atiyoga through the creation and completion stage. It is not a question of limitation, but rather, definition.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 19th, 2021 at 3:36 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

heart said:

My point was that it doesn't matter how you define yourself or your practice it have to correspond to your actual capacity.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, if you are interested in sadhanas, then you should practice those. If you are not, then you just practice rushen, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 19th, 2021 at 4:07 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

heart said:

My point was that it doesn't matter how you define yourself or your practice it have to correspond to your actual capacity.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, if you are interested in sadhanas, then you should practice those. If you are not, then you just practice rushen, etc.

heart said:

I done many rushan retreats but I don't feel that it is one or the other, it is all good.

/magnus

Malcolm wrote:

It's all whatever one likes to do. But while rushen is indispensable in Dzogchen, deity yogas are not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 19th, 2021 at 4:16 AM

Title: Re: Integrating psychedelic experiences

Content:

Mindful Entity said:

Hello! I am new in this forum and I hope that I am posting this on the right board. Feel free to move the topic if necessary.

I have been experimenting with various psychedelics. I really believe that they have the potential to heal and help us. But the problem is that after the substance wears off and I come back to my normal state of consciousness, most of the revelations and insights fade away.

What are your views on this? How do you take the most from using these substances and what approaches do you take to integrate these experiences more deeply in your daily life?

Thank you!

Malcolm wrote:

There is nothing to integrate. Psychedelics only demonstrate one thing: the mind is not a fixed entity. Once you've sorted that, they are just entertainments.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 19th, 2021 at 10:31 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 19th, 2021 at 9:16 PM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

My point being that with or without invitation, the visualized deity is never dismissed as simply one's own imagination/samayasattva. If there's no invitation the presence of jnanasattva is assumed, not dismissed.

Malcolm wrote:

The creation stage deity is a conceptual construct, an antidote to other concepts. That's all. From a Dzogchen perspective, it is an deviation.

Crazywisdom said:

This is wrong. The deities are Dzogchen.

Malcolm wrote:

So the state of dzogchen has faces and hands? Really?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 19th, 2021 at 9:18 PM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Malcolm: whether there's an invitation or not, the jnanasattva is a fiction and not to be taken seriously.

Malcolm wrote:

No, in mahayoga sadhanas, it is to be taken seriously as a symbolic method (but still a conceptual fabrication), just like it is in anuyoga.

But this does not apply to Dzogchen at all. The path is different, so the method is different.

Crazywisdom said:

Dzogchen is not a method. ChNN said that often. This is an important point.

Malcolm wrote:

Dzogchen is a path, paths have methods. ChNN also stated this often. What ChNN said is that Dzogchen is not a technique.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 19th, 2021 at 9:51 PM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Dzogchen is not a method. ChNN said that often. This is an important point.

Malcolm wrote:

Dzogchen is a path, paths have methods. ChNN also stated this often. What ChNN said is that Dzogchen is not a technique.

Crazywisdom said:

Technique, path... The path is trekcho/togal. Or yangti. These are paths to realize Dzogchen

Malcolm wrote:

You left out rushen. This is indispensable on the path of Dzogchen. It enhances trekcho, and is the preliminary for thogal.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 19th, 2021 at 10:11 PM

Title: Re: Once DT Suzuki went back to Pure Land practice (Split from: Are Zen teachers awakened?)

Content:

Queequeg said:

When you guys say Suzuki took up Pure Land, what does that mean? You guys talk about Pure Land as if it's a monolith. It's far from it.

Malcolm wrote:

I always rather admired Ippen, for example. I enjoyed the book on his life and writings, No Abode, the Record of Ippen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 19th, 2021 at 10:47 PM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

You have this penchant for conditioning folks toward the Dzogchen tantras way.

Malcolm wrote:

The Dzogchen tantras teach a vehicle independent of the nine yānas. I am just following the teachings of ChNN. YMMV.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 19th, 2021 at 10:51 PM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

This is a variable. See how this is treated in Chetsun Nyingthig. Hardly at all.

Malcolm wrote:

Rushen is quite important in the Chetsun Nyinthig System, indeed it is mentioned in the root text. But there is no point in discussing this further in this kind of open forum. You might want to acquire Khen Rinpoche's book on the subject.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 19th, 2021 at 10:59 PM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Danny said:

The symbolic transmission apparently is not a thing these days.

Malcolm wrote:

Of course it is a thing. All Dzogchen transmissions contain it. Whether the guru makes it clear or not is another issue altogether.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 19th, 2021 at 11:33 PM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

You have this penchant for conditioning folks toward the Dzogchen tantras way.

Malcolm wrote:

The Dzogchen tantras teach a vehicle independent of the nine yānas. YMMV.

Crazywisdom said:
Then why is it called the 9th? It is Ati, right?

Malcolm wrote:
Dzogchen is beyond the nine vehicle system.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, February 20th, 2021 at 3:14 AM
Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal
Content:
Sādhaka said:
How are Atiyoga, sPyiti Yoga, and Yangti classified within Semde, Longde, and the four divisions of Menngagde (or vice-versa); if at all?

Malcolm wrote:
Yangti belongs to man ngag sde, according to ChNN.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, February 20th, 2021 at 3:38 AM
Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal
Content:

Crazywisdom said:
This is wrong. The deities are Dzogchen.

Malcolm wrote:
So the state of dzogchen has faces and hands? Really?

fckw said:
So, it's a state then?

Malcolm wrote:
Nominally speaking, and there is a path to discover that state. But if one thinks there are faces and hand in that state, that the shitro for example, is innate, one's view has not transcended mahāyoga, or so it is written by Longchenpa and others.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, February 20th, 2021 at 4:43 AM
Title: Re: Dzogchen books
Content:
Matt J said:

I actually wouldn't recommend any books because they'll fill up the head with ideas. I would find a teacher and get instruction--- one will have less to unlearn that way.

Malcolm wrote:

Generally, yes, but still, can't beat Crystal and the Way of Light.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 20th, 2021 at 4:58 AM

Title: Re: Equivalent to thogal

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

If you accept and reject it's mara.

Malcolm wrote:

I see you accepting and rejecting a lot of things in this thread, so?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 21st, 2021 at 6:25 AM

Title: Re: Integrating psychedelic experiences

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Can you point me to some studies? it's my impression that there is nowhere near the body evidence yet to suggest that something like replacing SSRI's with low doses of psilocybin or something is viable.

Malcolm wrote:

https://www.ciis.edu/CPTR/CPTR%20Documents/CPTR%20PDFs/Commentary_Roth.pdf

Johnny Dangerous said:

Two independent studies by Griffiths et al. (2016) and Ross et al. (2016) demonstrate that psilocybin, a serotonergic psychedelic, can produce a rapid and clinically significant decrease in the symptoms of depression and anxiety, which can persist for up to six months. Each study utilized a double-blind design and employed different active control compounds to address design-based confounds associated with the use of a psychoactive drug. Griffiths et al. (2016) used a low dose (1–3 mg) of psilocybin, while Ross et al. (2016) selected niacin. It is worth noting that the placebo effect is a major confound in the development of novel antidepressant drugs, as placebos can produce antidepressant effects in 30–40% of individuals (Papakostas et al., 2016). Psilocybin treatment was associated with statistically significant antidepressant and anxiolytic effects in both studies. The use of two separate control compounds (including a subclinical dose of psilocybin as control) minimizes the potential outcome that the effects are due to placebo rather than an active drug effect.

Malcolm wrote:

You can follow a clinical trial here:

<https://clinicaltrials.gov/ct2/show/record/NCT03775200>

And here:

<https://clinicaltrials.gov/ct2/show/NCT03429075>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 21st, 2021 at 11:43 PM

Title: Re: some hints on how to live

Content:

master of puppets said:

Meditation is letting your mind to wander in any direction and being aware of it.

Malcolm wrote:

No, this is called "spacing out."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 22nd, 2021 at 12:16 AM

Title: Re: some hints on how to live

Content:

master of puppets said:

Meditation is letting your mind to wander in any direction and being aware of it.

Malcolm wrote:

No, this is called "spacing out."

philji said:

Is not spacing out being unaware???

Malcolm wrote:

No, it's letting your mind be lost among sense objects.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 22nd, 2021 at 12:19 AM

Title: Re: some hints on how to live

Content:

master of puppets said:

Meditation is letting your mind to wander in any direction and being aware of it.

Malcolm wrote:

No, this is called "spacing out."

Arnoud said:

Two questions, if you don't mind:

1. Do you think this idea is the result of misunderstanding the maxim "thoughts arise and cease within the state of Rigpa" which is often how it is expressed (somewhat) in order to teach not to suppress thoughts?

2. Isn't it still better than letting your mind wander without being aware of it? Or equally useless?

Malcolm wrote:

The kind of instruction given above lacks any context. It's one of those things that sounds nice, lacks substance. We are not talking about Dzogchen here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, February 22nd, 2021 at 11:16 PM

Title: Re: Are there tertons at Gelug School?

Content:

n8pee said:

Luipa specifically? I've heard HHDL praise the body mandala of the Ghantapa tradition as well if I'm not mistaken.

Malcolm wrote:

The Ghantapāda body mandala system is the most profound of the three Cakrasamvara systems that came into Sakya through Mal Lotsawa. It is very widespread in Gelug.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 23rd, 2021 at 4:06 AM

Title: Re: Do the 10 Royal Sutras require transmission?

Content:

Tenma said:

Just wanted to check, do the 10 Royal Sutras that Mipham Rinpoche prescribed require an oral transmission or we can freely recite them?

<https://www.lotsawahouse.org/tibetan-masters/mipham/ten-royal-sutras-outline>

Malcolm wrote:

Only these four will require some transmission. There are empowerments for all of them.

Tenma said:

Vajravidāraṇa, the sūtra of cleansing, has three parts: 1) the background, 2) the actual dhāraṇī, and 3) the conclusion, including the benefits.

Sitātapatrā, Born from the Tathāgata's Uṣṇīṣa, the sūtra of dispelling, has three parts: 1) words of truth, 2) the mantra of true meaning, and 3) the unfailing results and benefits of the mantra.

The Blue-Clad Lord of Secrets (Vajrapāṇi), the sūtra of protection, has three parts: 1) the methods for the mantra, 2) the mantra that has such methods, and 3) the result of accomplishment from such methods.

The Stream of Wealth (Vasudhārā), the sūtra for increasing prosperity, has three parts: 1) the history, 2) the jewel-like dhāraṇī, and 3) the unfailing beneficial consequences that are the effects of the mantra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 23rd, 2021 at 5:46 AM

Title: Re: Alexander Berzin: "The Four Immeasurables (Brahma viharas) in Sravakayana, Mahayana and Bon"

Content:

Aemilius said:

"limited beings"

Malcolm wrote:

Sentient beings are limited by affliction. Affliction causes karma. Karma results in suffering: birth, aging, sickness, and death.

Thus, sentient beings are limited.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 23rd, 2021 at 5:47 AM

Title: Re: Alexander Berzin: "The Four Immeasurables (Brahma viharas) in Sravakayana, Mahayana and Bon"

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Sentient beings are unlimited in the sense that there are an infinite number of sentient beings in the universe!

Malcolm wrote:

But, according to the Buddha, there is actually a finite number of sentient beings in the universe, they are considered limitless because cannot comprehend their number. But there is in fact a limit.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, February 23rd, 2021 at 5:48 AM

Title: Re: Niche Ngondros

Content:

heart said:

Getting mind instructions and doing ngondro at the same time was the way Tulku Urgyen taught and this is the way his his sons teach. So, you don't do the ngondro to achieve anything but merit and wisdom.

Malcolm wrote:

Have to pass the time somehow.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 24th, 2021 at 12:26 AM

Title: Re: Music time

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 24th, 2021 at 1:29 AM

Title: Re: Alexander Berzin: "The Four Immeasurables (Brahma viharas) in Sravakayana, Mahayana and Bon"

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

But, according to the Buddha, there is actually a finite number of sentient beings in the universe, they are considered limitless because cannot comprehend their number. But there is in fact a limit.

Queequeg said:

Where can one find the source of this?

mutsuk said:

Yes, a source would be nice. It's interesting because it contradicts Wohnyo who pretends that the finite number of sentient beings "is a big error". I wonder if he means that in the sense of a "finite number" fixed by who/what?

Malcolm wrote:

Its in the Pali canon somewhere. When I find it again, I will post here. There is a statement to the effect that the sattva dhātu never increases or decreases.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 24th, 2021 at 2:39 AM

Title: Re: Movies you have watched a lot of times.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Mad Max movies; Seven Samurai, Yojimbo; The Night Porter; but I mostly only watch films once.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 24th, 2021 at 3:39 AM

Title: Re: Movies you have watched a lot of times.

Content:

Matt J said:

Lillyhammer,

Malcolm wrote:

Hilarious. Full disclosure, I've watched both the Sopranos and the Wire at least twice in their entirety.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 24th, 2021 at 3:46 AM

Title: Re: Alexander Berzin: "The Four Immeasurables (Brahma viharas) in Sravakayana, Mahayana and Bon"

Content:

mutsum said:

Yes, a source would be nice. It's interesting because it contradicts Wohnyo who pretends that the finite number of sentient beings "is a big error". I wonder if he means that in the sense of a "finite number" fixed by who/what?

Malcolm wrote:

Its in the Pali canon somewhere. When I find it again, I will post here. There is a statement to the effect that the sattva dhātu never increases or decreases.

Queequeg said:

Interesting. I think I've read that but can't recall where either. I didn't think of its import much at the time. My instinct would be to understand that as meaning infinite as an infinite quality, not as a quantity. I don't know if that makes sense. Is there commentary on this point as well?

Malcolm wrote:

It refers to the total number of sentient beings there are. That number is inconceivable, but still finite.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 24th, 2021 at 4:34 AM

Title: Re: Can you give back tantric vows if you don't want them anymore?

Content:

fckw said:

You can only give them back if you did not take them seriously in the first place.

Malcolm wrote:

No, one cannot give back Vajrayāna vows. Practice commitments are one thing; the general samayas are another.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 24th, 2021 at 4:52 AM

Title: Re: Alexander Berzin: "The Four Immeasurables (Brahma viharas) in Sravakayana, Mahayana and Bon"

Content:

mutsuk said:

The English translation can be found here :

<https://daitangkinh.net/Books/T16n0668/Buddha%20Pronounces%20the%20Sutra%20Of%20Neither%20Increase%20Nor%20Decrease%20%28Rulu%29.html>

Not really convincing in terms of explaining "finite number of sentient beings" imho... In fact the text does not discuss if there is a finite or infinite number but declares "increase and decrease in sentient beings" as a wrong view. It equates the dharma realm which neither increases or decreases with the realm of sentient beings. So that is clear but it does not discuss if there is a finite or infinite number of sentient beings. Or am I missing something?

Malcolm wrote:

There has to be a limit to sentient beings, otherwise, where do new sentient beings come from? It is not possible for there to be brand-new sentient beings.

It just stands to reason that there is a finite number of sentient beings, despite that number being beyond any comprehension.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 24th, 2021 at 5:31 AM

Title: Re: Alexander Berzin: "The Four Immeasurables (Brahma viharas) in Sravakayana, Mahayana and Bon"

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

There has to be a limit to sentient beings, otherwise, where do new sentient beings come from?

mutsuk said:

I understand, but what/who fixed that limit? And does any Indian text (as Indians are really into numbers) define that limit?

Malcolm wrote:

What fixes that limit is just the fact that no new sentient beings come into existence. Its a consequence of dependent origination. It is a finite set; it may be uncountable, but it is still finite.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 24th, 2021 at 5:33 AM

Title: Re: Alexander Berzin: "The Four Immeasurables (Brahma viharas) in Sravakayana, Mahayana and Bon"

Content:

Queequeg said:

A sentient being that awakens is no longer a sentient being, but a Buddha... so that means with each awakened being, there is one less sentient... ie. a decrease. That can't stand because that's wrong view.

Malcolm wrote:

A buddha's consciousness does not vanish into thin air. So in this case, still a sattva since Buddha began as a sattva, like all of us.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 24th, 2021 at 5:35 AM

Title: Re: Movies you have watched a lot of times.

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I have to confess also that as I've gotten older and more generally exhausted I also like watching more...um, purely "entertainment" stuff.

That's putting it politely, the truth is, I watch some trashy stuff to relax.

Malcolm wrote:

Looking forward to Monster Hunters...when it is rentable for cheap...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 24th, 2021 at 10:08 AM

Title: Re: Movies you have watched a lot of times.

Content:

Rei un said:

For best ever tv series: Downton Abbey. Nothing else even close! (Of course, there's no accounting for taste.)

Malcolm wrote:

I think All Creatures Great And Small is better. Whereas Downton Abbey is about a family of entitled and neurotic snobs, who despite their position and conditioning engage in acts of surprising kindness, ACGS is about a young Glaswegian vet selflessly and lovingly giving himself to the care of the people and animals of a small, rural town in Yorkshire.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 24th, 2021 at 10:46 AM

Title: Re: Alexander Berzin: "The Four Immeasurables (Brahma viharas) in Sravakayana, Mahayana and Bon"

Content:

mutusuk said:

I understand, but what/who fixed that limit? And does any Indian text (as Indians are really into numbers) define that limit?

Malcolm wrote:

What fixes that limit is just the fact that no new sentient beings come into existence. Its a consequence of dependent origination. It is a finite set; it may be uncountable, but it is still finite.

PadmaVonSamba said:

Although sentient beings occur,

There is nothing essential that truly exists that can be defined as a "sentient being",

Just as a tiger chasing one in a dream may certainly have a form, and may even produce in one a feeling of fear (the dreaming person may even toss and turn and sweat, and of course everything that is a result has a cause!) and in that sense it occurs, it happens for sure, but ultimately none of it exists.

Malcolm wrote:

Uh huh, so I see you've grasped the basics of buddhadharma. Excellent.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 24th, 2021 at 11:24 AM

Title: Re: Alexander Berzin: "The Four Immeasurables (Brahma viharas) in Sravakayana, Mahayana and Bon"

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

finite almost makes it feel like a fixed number, just a number we don't know.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, that what it is. A fixed number we can never know: n to the n th power. But it can never be more nor less than that.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 24th, 2021 at 10:05 PM

Title: Re: Alexander Berzin: "The Four Immeasurables (Brahma viharas) in Sravakayana, Mahayana and Bon"

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Interesting discussion.

The following post is from about 3.5 years ago; but I remembered about it, and thought I'd search it up:

Losal Samten said:

Presumably because just as time is infinite, so are sentient beings, so mathematically speaking there's always going to be someone that's out of reach. (IIRC that was one Yogacarin argument for the existence of icchantikas?)

Some sutras state that the sattvadhātu neither increases nor decreases (anunatvaapurnatva), is this to be only understood in the non-conceptual ultimate sense, or relatively too, since whether infinity +1, or infinity -1, it still equals infinity?

https://www.academia.edu/30408695/The_S%C5%ABtra_on_the_Residence_of_Ma%C3%B1ju%C5%9Br%C4%AB

Malcolm wrote:

This point is addressed by Longchenpa at the end of the difficult points chapter in the Treasury of the Supreme Vehicle. He resolves the difficulty by stating that while all sentient beings are liberated at the end of the great eon, because there is never any limit to latent traces in the dharmadhātu, new sentient beings can always arise. He claims these two points of view are not contradictory.

Sādhaka said:

Apparently contradictory, but as stated: It's one of those difficult points.

Malcolm wrote:

Since there are latent sentient beings, there are never actually any "new" ones.

Liberation also does not mean a sentient being vanishes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 24th, 2021 at 10:08 PM

Title: Re: AKB, Ch. 1, V. 32: Dhatus - vitarka and vicara

Content:

Queequeg said:

I was not sure what vitarka and vicara were, so I looked it up. A footnote refers to Ch. 2, vv. 28 & 33. That was not particularly helpful.

Ch. 2, V. 33 reads:

"Vitarka and vicara are grossness and subtlety of the mind."

The footnote there says this definition is from some unknown sutra.

These are caitasika - mental factors.

Vitarka is translated as "thoughts," "applied thought," or "applied attention" in the Princeton Dictionary of Buddhism. It "refers to the momentary advertence toward the chosen object of attention." It is of an indeterminate moral quality and can refer both to the ordinary mind turning from one object to the next, or it can refer to the direction of the mind to an object of contemplation in the first dhyana, dropping off thereafter.

Vicara is translated as "sustained thought," "sustained attention," "imagination," and "analysis" in the PDB. It is "the continued pondering of things." It is of an indeterminate moral quality and can refer to sustained thinking about an object in ordinary mind as well as sustained contemplation in the dhyanas, including the first dhyana.

This section considers the Eighteen Dhatus from the perspective of the factors of vitarka and vicara.

The consciousnesses associated with externalities - visual, auditory, olfactory, oral and tactile consciousnesses all include both vitarka and vicara. This is clear - visual consciousness can either be adverting to an object or sustaining attention to an object.

Now, with regard to the manodhatu (mental organ), manovijnanadhatu (mental consciousness), and dharmadhatu (mental objects), in the Kamadhatu, they all have both vitarka and vicara. They are both present in the first dhyana. In the second, third and fourth dhyanas, there is no vitarka but there is vicara. Once one has turned their attention to an object, and one capable of the dhyanas is by definition capable of maintaining attention, vitarka is done. In the arupadhatu, where beings manifest without manodhatu, vicara drops away.

The 5 sense organs and their 5 respective objects do not have vitarka and vicara because these are factors of mind.

Malcolm wrote:

They important mental factors in the first dhyana/shamatha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 24th, 2021 at 10:49 PM

Title: Re: Movies you have watched a lot of times.

Content:

mirrormind said:

12 Monkeys is particularly great to rewatch during a pandemic

Malcolm wrote:

Oh, try 28 Days Later for pandemic entertainment. Just imagine all the infected are Trumpistas. That's what it felt like living in America for the past four years.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 24th, 2021 at 11:17 PM

Title: Re: Movies you have watched a lot of times.

Content:

mirrormind said:

12 Monkeys is particularly great to rewatch during a pandemic

Malcolm wrote:

Oh, try 28 Days Later for pandemic entertainment. Just imagine all the infected are Trumpistas. That's what it felt like living in America for the past four years.

Queequeg said:

LOL

Jan. 6 at the Capitol Building:

Malcolm wrote:

Pretty much.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 24th, 2021 at 11:19 PM

Title: Re: AKB, Ch. 1, V. 32: Dhatus - vitarka and vicara

Content:

Queequeg said:

It also occurred to me why we are covering this now, and this is obvious, except I have been drowning a little in this chapter - Vasubandhu is explaining the category of Dhatu, which includes categories of both form and mind (citta). Mental factors clearly do not pertain to form, only citta. I am getting that he is pointing out these distinctions between categories of dhatus.

Following up on this - it is thus interesting that manodhatu, manovijnanadhatu and dharmadhatu, at least in the kamadhatu, all are associated with vitarka and vicara. The implication being that all three - the mind organ and mind objects as well as consciousness are not rupa (form).

This stands in contrast to Western Scientific Materialism that reduces the mind organ, its objects and consciousness to matter.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct. The perceptions of the five sense organs are nonconceptual vijñānas, since vijñāna is always nonconceptual, being a present mind. Manas is conceptual, being a "past" mind, that is not a mind in the past, but a mentation of past events.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, February 24th, 2021 at 11:23 PM

Title: Re: Alexander Berzin: "The Four Immeasurables (Brahma viharas) in Sravakayana, Mahayana and Bon"

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Since there are latent sentient beings, there are never actually any "new" ones. Liberation also does not mean a sentient being vanishes.

Queequeg said:

I'm a little surprised because I always thought that buddhas and arhats are not sattvas ie. sentient beings. This is because they are not subject to compulsive rebirth due to karma. If they are sattvas, this suggests that buddhas and arhats are something qualitatively different than is commonly described in Buddhism or sattva means something other than what is generally explained.

Also, if sattvas are infinite (and that is a fraught conception, but since we're wallowing in conceptions here, why not?) then its not possible to say that there is any increase or decrease, and so the implication that sattvas are infinite seems as plausible an implication as saying they are finite.

Is there commentary on this point supporting your interpretation?

Malcolm wrote:

All buddhas, etc. were once sentient beings. They therefore count as part of the sattva dhātu for the purposes of enumerating the limit of that dhātu. In order for the sattva dhātu to be infinite, it would have to admit new members. It is not like an infinite set of numbers, which are pure abstractions. No buddha starts out a buddha. They all were sentient beings first.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 25th, 2021 at 12:19 AM

Title: Re: Can you give back tantric vows if you don't want them anymore?

Content:

pemachophel said:

Tantric vows last for lifetime after lifetime.

Malcolm wrote:

No, they do not. They perish at death because they are connected with the body.

The only vow not lost at death is the bodhisattva vow.

So what is the impact of not keeping pure samaya in this life? In future lives, one will be parted from the guru who leads one to liberation. However, the vow itself is lost at death. This is why it is important for people to purify their samaya before they die.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 25th, 2021 at 12:36 AM

Title: Re: Movies you have watched a lot of times.

Content:

PeterC said:

You've heard the story of the samurai sword presented to Harvey Weinstein?

Malcolm wrote:

https://www.boredpanda.com/studio-ghibli-sent-sword-to-harvey-weinstein/?utm_source=google&utm_medium=organic&utm_campaign=organic

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 25th, 2021 at 12:39 AM

Title: Re: AKB, Ch. 1, V. 32: Dhatus - vitarka and vicara

Content:

Queequeg said:

Which, I understand is kind of the point of studying this stuff. We're not studying this just to acquire knowledge, but rather to inform our practice, to make our practice more effective by finely understanding how all of this tends to work in order to liberate from these limits and obstacles formed by grasping.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct. This is the anatomy of Buddhist teachings which apply to every higher tenet system, up to and including Dzogchen teachings. They explain the raison d'être of the Buddhist path.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 25th, 2021 at 2:19 AM

Title: Re: AKB, Ch. 1, V. 32: Dhatus - vitarka and vicara

Content:

Queequeg said:

In the arupadhatu, where beings manifest without manodhatu...

Is this correct? Reviewing, I'm not sure I made an accurate statement.

Manodhatu is not form, right? So it could very well persist in the arupadhatu... ?

Malcolm wrote:

Beings in the formless realm only have three dhātus: mano, manovijñāna, and dharma. There is no matter in the dharmadhātu. Their mind is only a past mind, since they are supported there on the formless realm samadhi that projected their birth.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 25th, 2021 at 2:21 AM

Title: Re: Can you give back tantric vows if you don't want them anymore?

Content:

Boomerang said:

I made this thread because I met a person who believes every type of vow can be returned in their sangha, including vajrayana vows.

Malcolm wrote:

They are mistaken on this point. One also cannot return bodhisattva vows. The only vows that can be returned are monastic vows.

Well, one can forsake refuge vows, but then you break everything.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 25th, 2021 at 4:43 AM

Title: Re: Can you give back tantric vows if you don't want them anymore?

Content:

Boomerang said:

I made this thread because I met a person who believes every type of vow can be returned in their sangha, including vajrayana vows.

Malcolm wrote:

They are mistaken on this point. One also cannot return bodhisattva vows. The only vows that can be returned are monastic vows.

Well, one can forsake refuge vows, but then you break everything.

Boomerang said:

Is there a text that explains this in plain language?

Malcolm wrote:

Not really. Bodhisattva vows and Vajrayāna vows only discuss violations, but not the procedure for returning them, since there is no procedure for returning them. The desire to return either of these two levels of vows is a violation of bodhisattva motivation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 25th, 2021 at 6:04 AM

Title: Re: Can you give back tantric vows if you don't want them anymore?

Content:

cjdevries said:

I just read this. <https://buddhism-controversy-blog.com/2012/06/25/offering-back-buddhist-vows/>

An excerpt: "What was new to me is what our Tantra teacher in Italy, Geshe Jampa Gelek who studied the Buddhist Tantras in India, said some weeks ago: you can also give back the Bodhisattva and the Vajrayana vows."

Malcolm wrote:

As I said, there is no procedure for giving back bodhisattva vows, and by extension, Vajrayāna vows, since the latter are connected with the former, though lost a death. I have studied the three vows literature very extensively, and there is just no such remedy provided in the tantras or the sūtras for returning such vows.

One can certainly decide one no longer wishes to follow them, but there is no way to formally return them without incurring a downfall, unlike monastic vows, in which you can return them to the person who ordained you, or failing that, a senior member of the ordained sangha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 25th, 2021 at 10:26 AM

Title: Re: Can you give back tantric vows if you don't want them anymore?

Content:

Boomerang said:

For anyone who happens upon this thread years in the future, you can read page 192 of the Kindle version of The Treasury of Knowledge: Book Five: Buddhist Ethics by Jamgon Kongtrul Rinpoche and see that returning bodhisattva vows is not possible:

"Although the returning of vows is permitted in the personal liberation system, to return the commitments of the awakening mind would have extremely serious consequences and is therefore absolutely prohibited.

Dying, being reborn, forgetting [one's previous existence], and so on, do not damage one's commitments."

You can read that returning tantric vows is not possible in chapters 20 and 23 of Chogyam Trungpa's The Tantric Path of Indestructible Wakefulness: The Profound Treasury of the Ocean of Dharma, Volume Three.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. This is all correct.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 25th, 2021 at 10:32 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

The Mantra Mongoose said:

. Could someone explain to me if this is actually correct,

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. It is correct.

The Mantra Mongoose said:

and does the lineage as a whole embrace his views or is it still debated?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes and no.

The Mantra Mongoose said:

Also, if someone would be willing to show me how that compares to other views held in the Nyigmapa lineage on Buddhahood and Gnosis I would greatly appreciate it. Given the importance and erudition he is said to have in the Nyigmapa Lineage/Tibetan Buddhism I find him really interesting and would love to learn all I can about his views.

Malcolm wrote:

Rongzom's view is the real Nyingma View. It is followed by both Longchenpa and Mipham.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 25th, 2021 at 10:50 AM

Title: Re: Why lung or transmission is needed

Content:

Matt J said:

I would also be curious if anyone has a source for lung for reading (as opposed to practices/mantra). Personally, I have doubts about whether one needs a lung to read commentaries, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

It's an ancient tradition left over from when sutras, vinaya, and abhidharma were only preserved orally. This is also why it is important to preserve this tradition for our most important texts.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 25th, 2021 at 11:09 PM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

The Mantra Mongoose said:

Hey Malcolm,

Thanks so much for your reply. I'm still trying to wrap my head around the ramifications/conclusions of having such a view in light of the other views of Buddhahood I've encountered. Though it makes more sense if I look at it from a Dzogchen Mindset rather than trying to dip into sutra as well. I'm probably gonna pick up the two works I see that are out in English as you have peaked my interest. It also humbles me and makes me realize I didn't have the understanding I thought I had of My teachers instruction in Dzogchen.

Malcolm wrote:

In reality, Rongzom's view is no different than that of Mañjuśrīmitra's:

Since the awakening of the sugata does not exist, his magical apparitions appear to the deluded, similar to an illusion.

This is no different than Haribhadra's assertion that from beginning to end, the entire path is an illusion.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, February 25th, 2021 at 11:17 PM

Title: Re: Alexander Berzin: "The Four Immeasurables (Brahma viharas) in Sravakayana, Mahayana and Bon"

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Why must all beings start out deluded?

Malcolm wrote:

All beings are subject to rebirth, and any being subject to rebirth is necessarily deluded.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 26th, 2021 at 1:19 AM

Title: Re: AKB, Ch. 1, V. 32: Dhatus - Vikalpa

Content:

Queequeg said:

We could say, its all about destroying vikalpa, couldn't we.

Vaibhsikas identify three vikalpas - these are listed above as svabhavavikalpa, abhinirupanavikalpa, and anusmaranavikalpa. The five sense consciousnesses only have the first kind of vipalka which is the same as vitarka.

Vasubandhu goes on to explain that basically all mental activity that is not dhyana is vikalpa.

Malcolm wrote:

Vikalpa, rnam rtoḡ, is pretty much the main problem. Dhyānas are one pointed direct perceptions, so are free of vikalpa. Direct perceptions of sense objects are also free of vikalpa.

Being free of vikalpa is not liberation, this is why Hindu nirvikalpa samadhi is not liberation, but when someone has insight into emptiness, then there is no difference between nirvikalpa samadhi and vajropama samadhi, they are in fact the same thing.

M

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 26th, 2021 at 2:21 AM

Title: Re: Are there any realist schools (mind independent reality exists conventionally) in Mahayana or Vajrayana?

Content:

Matt J said:

So a wallet that has no color, size, shape, texture, feeling sensation, or sound (since those are all qualia, i.e. mind)?

Dgj said:

So, for example, a school that teaches that your long lost and forgotten wallet still exists, even though you can't see it, don't think about it, and it is completely out of mind. It is under a bunch of brush in the forest where you went for a hike six months ago.

Okay, please forget what you take issue with in my example, then, and be so kind as to answer the question? Are there any schools of Mahayana or Vajrayana Buddhism that teach that mind independent reality exists conventionally?

Malcolm wrote:

Conventionally, they all do.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 26th, 2021 at 2:25 AM

Title: Re: Why lung or transmission is needed

Content:

Matt J said:

Doing things just because it has been the way things were done is not a good reason, in my opinion.

Malcolm wrote:

Tradition, of course, disagrees. But weren't you the one saying you were not going to read one of the tantras I translated until you had received the lung? Pretty sure it was you.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 26th, 2021 at 3:10 AM

Title: Re: Are there any realist schools (mind independent reality exists conventionally) in Mahayana or Vajrayana?

Content:

Dgj said:

Okay, please forget what you take issue with in my example, then, and be so kind as to answer the question? Are there any schools of Mahayana or Vajrayana Buddhism that teach that mind independent reality exists conventionally?

Malcolm wrote:

Conventionally, they all do.

Dgj said:

Thanks. Could you provide any text or texts confirming this? Either ancient or modern, where it is stated specifically that mind independent reality exists conventionally? I've only seen ones that affirm conventional reality broadly, and many (myself included, yet with difficulty reconciling this with other texts, hence this thread), assume this includes mind independent reality, but when actually reading texts I've not seen any specific affirmation of conventional mind independent reality.

Malcolm wrote:

Since the mainline of Madhyamaka schools accept the Śrāvakayāna model of cognition, a sense consciousness only arises when the sense organ meets a sense object, this itself is a confirmation of the idea that Madhyamaka conventionally accepts objects which exist independent of the mind.

Similarly, in the Dzogchen tradition, it is held that outer objects exist conventionally.

However, the term "realist" is problematical. Madhyamaka is not a realist school, unlike the lower three tenet systems.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 26th, 2021 at 3:21 AM

Title: Re: Why lung or transmission is needed

Content:

Matt J said:

Nice memory!

Not the lung, but the explanation, for the Blazing Lamp Tantra.

Why doesn't tradition apply to suttas and sutras then?

Malcolm wrote:

It does and it doesn't. The lung for everything in the Bka' 'gyur exists. Not everything in the bstan 'gyur has a lung.

Matt J said:

And why don't non-Tibetan schools do lung? And what about teachers who recommend or ask students to read certain books without giving lung?

Malcolm wrote:

Prior to the destruction of Buddhism in China in 845, there was a very robust tradition of sutra recitation in Chinese Monasteries. The same goes for Indian Buddhism. It is likely Tibetan custom of giving lungs comes from this. Also, there was more literacy in China and India than there ever was in Tibet until modern times. So reading transmissions are also an opportunity for people to hear books they otherwise could not read. And paper was scarce and expensive in Tibet, so only elite scholars actually could afford more than a few books.

If someone's teacher tells you to read a book, you should read it. If you want to give the transmission yourself, better get the lung.

Matt J said:

If you look at EPK's Flight of the Garuda, it says:

"It is the opinion of myself and Dudjom Rinpoche that texts such as these should only be shared with people who have received the pointing-out transmission from a qualified master."

H.H. Dilgo Khyentse Rinpoche.

Malcolm wrote:

I am quite sure, practically speaking, they would prefer people to have the lung as well.

The practice of giving reading transmissions is how we keep our tradition alive and vital.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 26th, 2021 at 3:26 AM

Title: Re: AKB, Ch. 1, V. 32: Dhatus - Vikalpa

Content:

Queequeg said:

We could say, its all about destroying vikalpa, couldn't we.

Vaibhsikas identify three vikalpas - these are listed above as svabhavavikalpa, abhinirupanavikalpa, and anusmaranavikalpa. The five sense consciousnesses only have the first kind of vipalka which is the same as vitarka.

Vasubandhu goes on to explain that basically all mental activity that is not dhyana is vikalpa.

Malcolm wrote:

Vikalpa, rnam rtog, is pretty much the main problem. Dhyānas are one pointed direct perceptions, so are free of vikalpa. Direct perceptions of sense objects are also free of vikalpa.

Being free of vikalpa is not liberation, this is why Hindu nirvikalpa samadhi is not liberation, but when someone has insight into emptiness, then there is no difference between nirvikalpa samadhi and vajropama samadhi, they are in fact the same thing.

M

Queequeg said:

I had to look up those samadhis so please correct me if its apparent I'm missing something.

Does this mean, if a Hindu yogi has an insight about emptiness, they will be at the completion stage of the pancamarga? Will they proceed to arhatship or buddhahood if they continue? Or does something else need to intervene in that path to bring them to completion?

Malcolm wrote:

A hindu, by definition will not have a proper insight into emptiness because they do not possess the view of dependent origination.

The two samadhis are the same: what is different is the person who is in those samadhis. In the case of hindus, that samadhi is not liberative, think of it as super-śamatha. In the case of a buddhist, it is the samadhi that arises beyond the āyatana of neither perception nor nonperception, the highest state of samsara, and is the samadhi that destroys all remaining traces of latent affliction, hence it is called "vajra-like."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 26th, 2021 at 3:51 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

The Mantra Mongoose said:

Thanks for the insight. I did have a question though which may shed light on where my confusion is coming from. How do those that follow specifically Jigten Sumgon's Gongchick teachings square them away with Dzogchen?

Malcolm wrote:

I honestly don't know what is says in Gongcik, I have never studied it.

I know however that Gampopa's view of gnosis is more or less the same as Rongzom's. You can discover this by reading chapter 20 of Gampopa's Jewel Ornament of Liberation, where he dismisses the idea that the twin gnosis of a buddha are anything but illusory and do not exist ultimately. He summarizes his position as follows:

"That being the case, the Buddha is the dharmakāya. Since the dharmakāya is nonarising and free from proliferation, it does not possess gnosis. Now then, if it is said that this contradicts the teachings in sūtra that there are two gnoses, there is no contradiction. Just as when an eye consciousness arises appearing as blue, it is said "blue is seen," likewise, that gnosis that becomes the dharmadhātu is maintained to be the gnosis of how things are. Since the gnosis that knows as much as there is to know is relative, it is defined as an appearance for those to be tamed."

So, in this way, we can see that there is little difference between Rongzom and Gampopa's perspectives.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 26th, 2021 at 3:54 AM

Title: Re: Are there any realist schools (mind independent reality exists conventionally) in Mahayana or Vajrayana?

Content:

Dgj said:

Really great would be a text by Chandrakirti or Nagarjuna, or another Madhyamaka giant, affirming that sense consciousness can only arise when a sense organ meets a sense object, and thus indirectly confirming mind independent reality on the conventional level.

Malcolm wrote:

Madhyamakāvatara explains this explicitly in its refutation of Yogacāra idealism. So does Śāntideva.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 26th, 2021 at 4:16 AM

Title: Re: Śūraṅgama Sūtra

Content:

Unknown said:

On Monday, March 1, Dr. James Benn of McMaster University is giving the lecture “Meditation in the Apocryphal Śūraṅgama Sutra” at Harvard. He notes, “In the later Chinese Buddhist tradition [this] text above all others has been extolled for the profundity of its ideas, the beauty of its language, and its insight into the practice of meditation.”

No wonder it was one of the Manchu Qianlong Emperor’s favorite texts. Because this sutra did not exist in Tibetan, one of the major translation projects undertaken by Qianlong and his Imperial Preceptor Changkya Rolpai Dorje was its translation from Chinese into Tibetan, as well as Mongolian and Manchu. Our library holds a copy of this Tibetan translation published in Beijing in 1779, and readers can see that it contains a preface from the Emperor himself. As it turns out, Professor Benn notes that scholars have concluded that Śūraṅgama is an apocryphal sutra fabricated in Chinese in the eighth century, with no Indic original.

The sutra begins with the seduction of the Buddha’s disciple Ānanda by a courtesan. On the brink of breaking his vow of celibacy, he is rescued by the Buddha’s recitation of the Śūraṅgama mantra. Mortified at his failing, Ananda makes a request for this teaching, the basis of the sutra, which can be said to be about Buddhist theories of consciousness. The Buddha says to Ānanda citing the benefits of the Śūraṅgama sutra and the Śūraṅgama mantra: “Ānanda, even in an infinite number of eons I could not fully describe the benefit that beings will gain from reciting this Sutra and from holding this mantra in their minds. By relying on this teaching that I have given you, and by practicing just as I have instructed you, you will go directly to full awakening without creating any more karma that would lead to entanglement in the demonic.”

Malcolm wrote:

<https://projects.iq.harvard.edu/harvardbuddhiststudiesforum/event/james-benn-meditation-apocryphal-%C5%9B%C5%ABra%E1%B9%83gama-sutra?fbclid=IwAR0qdtKsTQqdxTVcgKbMlc2M02SYV0pC->

3cFC8lkJgbeyP0OjAC2HuXx5Ls

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 26th, 2021 at 4:20 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

The Mantra Mongoose said:

Thanks for the insight. I did have a question though which may shed light on where my confusion is coming from. How do those that follow specifically Jigten Sumgon's Gongchick teachings square them away with Dzogchen?

Malcolm wrote:

I honestly don't know what is says in Gongcik, I have never studied it.

I know however that Gampopa's view of gnosis is more or less the same as Rongzom's. You can discover this by reading chapter 20 of Gampopa's Jewel Ornament of Liberation, where he dismisses the idea that the twin gnosis of a buddha are anything but illusory and do not exist ultimately. He summarizes his position as follows:

"That being the case, the Buddha is the dharmakāya. Since the dharmakāya is nonarising and free from proliferation, it does not possess gnosis. Now then, if it is said that this contradicts the teachings in sūtra that that there are two gnoses, there is no contradiction. Just as when an eye consciousness arises appearing as blue, it is said "blue is seen," likewise, that gnosis that becomes the dharmadhātu is maintained to be the gnosis of how things are. Since the gnosis that knows as much as there is to know is relative, it is defined as an appearance for those to be tamed."

So, in this way, we can see that there is little difference between Rongzom and Gampopa's perspectives.

The Mantra Mongoose said:

Hey Malcolm,

Just so I'm I know I'm understanding you correctly. Rongzom's main contention is with people who believe that the the so called twin Gnosis of the Buddha's exist substantially as constituents of enlightenment itself. he believes they are the illusory means Manifested by Buddha's due to there past aspirations/compassion to assist sentient beings and lead them towards enlightenment alone. Rongzom/Gampopa would both agree though that in Buddhahood there is a so called Gnosis, but that it's only constituents are the purified space of the Dharmadhatu which is ultimately inconceivable. Is this correct?

Malcolm wrote:

No, they do not agree that there is gnosis in buddhahood. They expressly deny this position. Gampopa states it clearly here:

The Buddha is the dharmakāya. Since the dharmakāya is nonarising and free from proliferation, it does not possess gnosis.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 26th, 2021 at 5:14 AM

Title: Re: Are there any realist schools (mind independent reality exists conventionally) in Mahayana or Vajrayana?

Content:

Dgj said:

I'm stuck on one point, though, that makes it sound like Chandrakirti taught that matter cannot exist independently of mind, or even that matter is created by mind:

Malcolm wrote:

It is axiomatic in Buddhism that matter arises from mind, even in Abhidharma.

However, what this means is clarified by Chandra in chapter 6 of the MAV. Verses 113-114 clarify that Madhyamakas do not reject mundane consensus concerning outer objects.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 26th, 2021 at 5:43 AM

Title: Re: AKB, Ch. 1, V. 32: Dhatus - Vikalpa

Content:

Queequeg said:

In the Buddhist view, what happens to a Hindu yogi who has achieved nirvakalpa samadhi? Do they reach only to neither-thought-nor-no-thought heaven? Presumably then they would continue to course in samsara, not attain moksha as they hold.

Malcolm wrote:

The result of nirvikalpa samadhi is the heaven of the unconsciousness devas, not even the formless realms.

Queequeg said:

I'm guessing we will be getting around to some of these questions as we work through the text?

Malcolm wrote:

Yup.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 26th, 2021 at 6:43 AM

Title: Re: Are there any realist schools (mind independent reality exists conventionally) in Mahayana or Vajrayana?

Content:

Matt J said:

Wait, what? You are an IDEALIST after all. A Yogacarín once removed?

Malcolm wrote:

It is axiomatic in Buddhism that matter arises from mind, even in Abhidharma.

Nice try. It's not that matter is mind stuff, but with the action of sentient beings in the world, matter, the four elements won't arise. The reason the universe forms (repeatedly) is due to the afflictions and karma of sentient beings. Thus it is axiomatic that matter arises from mind, since only the mind, as Candrakīrti puts it, is capable of being a creator. Matter is not so capable.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 26th, 2021 at 6:45 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

Matt J said:

This sounds very Shentong to me.

The Mantra Mongoose said:

I was looking into Rongzom's writings, and came across an interpretation of his views on Buddhahood that seem to suggest he believed that ultimately Buddhas do not have Gnosis rather Buddhahood is simply "the purified expanse of reality (Dharmadhātu, Chos Dbyings)"

Malcolm wrote:

It's not. Rongzom specifically rejects proto-gzhan stong ideas and stakes out a radical anti-realist position, because...he is a dzogchenpa.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 26th, 2021 at 8:18 AM

Title: Sam Harris and cultural imperialism

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

As far as "cultural imperialism", honestly I don't completely dislike Harris, I think he is worth listening to, just very wrong on a number of things. He is definitely a cultural imperialist.

Malcolm wrote:

There is not a whole lot of daylight between bigots like Harris and Gavin McInnes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 26th, 2021 at 9:10 AM

Title: Re: Superiority Conceit in Buddhist Traditions

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

As far as "cultural imperialism", honestly I don't completely dislike Harris, I think he is worth listening to, just very wrong on a number of things. He is definitely a cultural imperialist.

Malcolm wrote:

There is not a whole lot of daylight between bigots like Harris and Gavin McInnes.

Johnny Dangerous said:

For me the jury is still a bit out on Harris personally I don't find him to be morally repugnant in the manner of McInnes, I just find a lot of his arguments....not nearly as brilliant or insightful as he and many of his fans think they are.

On the general subject, yeah, I was just talking to a friend about this yesterday.

It's interesting how many of these "classical liberal" "intellectual dark web" whatever types that won't just take a stand against the right wingers have slowly gravitated towards lending their tacit endorsement to them. It's weird to watch the transition happen to some of them.

They go from making some pretty limited and sometimes valid criticisms about some specific things on the left - identity politics, cancel culture, whatever, to basically just turning into mini-mouthpieces for some despicable people and ideas.

Malcolm wrote:

In my judgement it merely reveals who they were from the start. A truly virtuous person does not begin to engage in non virtues merely because the environment is permissive.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 26th, 2021 at 10:19 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

The Mantra Mongoose said:

So I've been reading through "Rong-zom-pa's Discourses on Buddhology" by Orna Almogi. It does seem like Archie2009 alluded to that Mipham seems interpret Rongzom in a way to suggest that what he was refuting was extrinsic Gnosis, and not self occurring Gnosis. This discussion starts on Page 193 of her work. I'll quote the portion of the work I'm referring to below as I think it's an interesting addition to the discussion.

Malcolm wrote:

An extrinsic gnosis is one obtained from outside, like a guru or a book. Self-originated gnosis is a gnosis one discovers for oneself. But when it has exhausted all objects of knowledge, it too vanishes. Thus Buddhas do not possess gnosis. This is a special point of Dzogchen, unshared with the nine yantras.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, February 26th, 2021 at 11:38 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

She is citing Mipham, correct? Not Rongzom, correct?

The Mantra Mongoose said:

Hey Malcolm, I really have no reason to disagree with you if I'm being honest. I lack the knowledge and skill needed to be able to really discuss this any further though I'll give it a shot. That being the case there is another quotation from the work "Rong-zom-pa's Discourses on Buddhology by Orna Almogi" I previously quoted that seems to be contradicting your statement, and does cite sources from Mipham

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 27th, 2021 at 12:17 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I need to do some reading once I'm done with this school quarter it seems.

Malcolm wrote:

What Rongzom is making a distinction between is the pristine consciousness of the basis, which he equates with self-originated pristine consciousness and nonconceptual pristine consciousness, which is relative and arises from concepts.

So what does he say "self-originated" pristine consciousness is? He states that is the luminous nature of the mind. This is the only kind of "pristine consciousness" a Buddha can be said to possess. But we also possess this, right now.

He details three basic kinds of gnosis or pristine consciousness: non-conceptual, puremundane, and self-originated. The first two are two types of gnosis with which we are generally familiar. The third is the so-called "self-originated gnosis."

Rongzom is arguing merely that all phenomena are self-originated gnosis:

"Observe that all experiential ranges self arise as self-originated pristine consciousness." Experiential range refers to the experiential range of the sense organs of the six migrating beings. Self-originated pristine consciousness refers to the fact that since all formations are peaceful by nature, pristine consciousness self-originated.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 27th, 2021 at 12:30 AM

Title: Re: Lama Lena Testimonies/Credentials

Content:

philji said:

Who is this Candice Rinpoche she is introducing this weekend on you tube?

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.dharmawheel.net/viewtopic.php?f=40&t=12207>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 27th, 2021 at 12:53 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

Matt J said:

The absence of a cognitive element doesn't mean the absence of clarity (gsal ba)--- or does it?

Malcolm wrote:

It does not mean the absence of luminosity. But Rongzom's point is a bit different. The term "gnosis", "jñāna", ye shes, throws people off because it is assumed there is some content to this "gnosis."

Rongzom's arguments in Intro to Mahāyāna are long, complex.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 27th, 2021 at 3:22 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

The Mantra Mongoose said:

Hey Malcolm,

Could you clarify why Mipham seems to want to establish a cognitive element at the time of Buddhahood? Does he believe without it there could be no awareness in Buddahood ? Do you think he's worried that people would essentially interpret the state of Buddhahood without a cognitive element as merely dissolving into nothingness hence his worry about nihilism without it.

I'll be honest, I believe I'm confusing the categories above that you said most people stumble on. I'll admit that from my current understanding I don't know how there can be said to be awareness at the time of Buddhahood if there's no cognitive element even if it is said to be luminous. That all being said I appreciate the time and effort you and everyone on this thread has given to talk through this and help me see my ignorance.

Malcolm wrote:

What Rongzom seeks to show is that everything is not only like an illusion, but that everything is totally equivalent to an illusion.

If your concern is that buddhahood is an inert state, no, that is not what Rongzom is saying. He is saying that buddhahood amounts to realizing the luminous nature of the mind, which is not itself established as an entity.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, February 27th, 2021 at 4:14 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

The Mantra Mongoose said:

Hey Malcolm,

Could you clarify why Mipham seems to want to establish a cognitive element at the time of Buddhahood? Does he believe without it there could be no awareness in Buddhahood ? Do you think he's worried that people would essentially interpret the state of Buddhahood without a cognitive element as merely dissolving into nothingness hence his worry about nihilism without it.

I'll be honest, I believe I'm confusing the categories above that you said most people stumble on. I'll admit that from my current understanding I don't know how there can be said to be awareness at the time of Buddhahood if there's no cognitive element even if it is said to be luminous. That all being said I appreciate the time and effort you and everyone on this thread has given to talk through this and help me see my ignorance.

Malcolm wrote:

What Rongzom seeks to show is that everything is not only like an illusion, but that everything is totally equivalent to an illusion.

If your concern is that buddhahood is an inert state, no, that is not what Rongzom is saying. He is saying that buddhahood amounts to realizing the luminous nature of the mind, which is not itself established as an entity.

The Mantra Mongoose said:

Oh ok, so Rongzom's whole contention is with people who say that there is something substantial and not empty in Buddhahood.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, he is an anti-realist.

The Mantra Mongoose said:

What he is saying is not only is everything illusory meaning empty, but so is Buddhahood itself. So from beginning to end it's all like a rainbow.

Malcolm wrote:

From top to bottom, it's all totally unreal.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, February 28th, 2021 at 9:36 PM

Title: Re: Does anyone here agree with Jay Garfield that Nagarjuna was a "robust realist" and...

Content:

Dgj said:

Does anyone here agree with Garfield that Nagarjuna was a "robust realist"

Malcolm wrote:

I don't. Jay Garfield principally draws on Gelug sources, but even here, it goes to far to say the MMK is realist. The Sideritz translation is better, BTW.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 1st, 2021 at 1:16 AM

Title: Re: Can you give back tantric vows if you don't want them anymore?

Content:

WeiHan said:

Will one be parted from the guru who leads one to liberation if one has more than one guru but break samaya only with one of them?

Malcolm wrote:

What do you mean by "break samaya."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 1st, 2021 at 1:17 AM

Title: Re: How to practice quietly with bell?

Content:

Dharmaswede said:

How do you do practice quietly with the bell – early in the morning when family is still asleep?

Thank you.

Malcolm wrote:

You don't use the bell.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 1st, 2021 at 2:48 AM

Title: Re: Why lung or transmission is needed

Content:

karmanyangpo said:

I just have a hard time believing that masters such as HH Dalai Lama and HE Garchen Rinpoche are not telling the truth when they tell students that they can receive such and such online or even via recording. I know you are mainly asking about lung but I think the same applies to wang despite their being more stringent conditions.

Malcolm wrote:

There are a variety of opinions out there. For example, Chogyal Namkhai Norbu maintained that one could not give the elaborate vase empowerment online because it involves various substances, nor could one receive a lung or any kind of empowerment from a recording. He maintained that only direct introduction and so-called "meaning empowerments" could be given online. There are a number of other teachers who happen to agree with ChNN's stance on this point.

In the end, one has to follow one's own feelings. No one should be surprised if they attended an online empowerment, live or recorded from one teacher, only to be told by another teacher the latter do not consider that a valid means of empowerment.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 1st, 2021 at 3:15 AM

Title: Re: Can you give back tantric vows if you don't want them anymore?

Content:

WeiHan said:

Will one be parted from the guru who leads one to liberation if one has more than one guru but break samaya only with one of them?

Malcolm wrote:

What do you mean by "break samaya."

WeiHan said:

Thinking some of his/her behaviour is worse than some of ordinary beings, opportunistic, defensive, ignorant and even childish. Don't feel inspired anymore and do not attend his/her teachings, empowerments anymore. If I am not wrong, impure perception is already breaking of samaya..that is where also I suspect many vajrayanists are just pure hypocrites.

Malcolm wrote:

This is not breaking samaya. There is no samaya to have a unrealistic view of a given teacher. This is why we do not generally visualize our gurus in ordinary, impure forms, but rather, in the form of Vajradhara, Guru Rinpoche, our Yidam, etc.

In this case, what you do is you quietly move on. You don't have to criticize this person, but you are also not a slave.

And no, having negative feelings about a teacher you decide is not a qualified teacher does not constitute a cause to part with your root guru in future lives.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 1st, 2021 at 6:23 AM

Title: Re: Why lung or transmission is needed

Content:

Soma999 said:

If you think the guru (lama) is just this body, and the body and the substance perform the empowerment, then you can't receive it online.

Malcolm wrote:

You're missing the point, but I don't have the energy to explain to you what you do not seem to understand.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 1st, 2021 at 8:22 AM

Title: Re: Accounting for the Chinese Destruction of Tibet

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

But it wasn't a spiritually motivated civilization. Tibet was in a state of constant internecine warfare, tribe against tribe, school against school, monastery against monastery, region against region. Time to take off the rose colored spectacles.

WeiHan said:

This has to be so! It is just human nature in play. People who believe otherwise has to be damn idealistic. I think Dharma has never been in decline, just idealistic people looking into the past and think there has been more saints in the past but in reality, human nature today is the same human nature in the past.

SilenceMonkey said:

In the past, it's said that over 100,000 practitioners at Kathok monastery alone have achieved rainbow body. Almost no one is achieving it these days. Maybe one practitioner every year or two... Maybe not even that.

Malcolm wrote:

That's what's said. Hyperbolic at best.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 1st, 2021 at 11:42 AM

Title: Re: Accounting for the Chinese Destruction of Tibet

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

It's possible, though. I'd bet they have records of every practitioner of theirs who achieved it.

Malcolm wrote:

I bet they don't.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 1st, 2021 at 11:44 AM

Title: Re: Accounting for the Chinese Destruction of Tibet

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

It's possible, though. I'd bet they have records of every practitioner of theirs who achieved it.

You think this is a stretch. And maybe so. But why would it not be a stretch to say the Dharma was never in decline? That sounds ridiculous.

Hazel said:

Why does it sound ridiculous?

SilenceMonkey said:

History is all about rise and decline. Before the Buddha, there was no Dharma in this world.

Malcolm wrote:

That's simply not true.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 2nd, 2021 at 1:31 AM

Title: Re: Failing to discover the nature of ones mind in this lifetime.

Content:

fckw said:

Many dzogchen texts contain instructions on phowa for exactly that purpose. But we should also not forget that many dzogchen texts are quite serious about the possibility to realize the teachings within one single lifetime. So, phowa is only for those unlucky ones who did not get it beforehand.

Malcolm wrote:

Most people do not achieve liberation in this lifetime. Most Dzogchen practitioners attain liberation in the bardo of dharmatā.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 2nd, 2021 at 1:32 AM

Title: Re: Failing to discover the nature of ones mind in this lifetime.

Content:

coldbeer said:

What about combining Nembutsu (Namo Amida Butsu) with Dzogchen? Would that work too?

Könchok Thrinley said:

No problem. I think HH Jigme Phuntsok Rinpoche a completely realized master also went to Dewachen. Many great masters go to pure lands, or rather in their case manifest there. I myself also practice in such a way so I can get reborn in Dewachen, time is limited and sometimes it is not easy to gain some realization.

coldbeer said:

What is the reason to go there if one has already become realized in this lifetime?

Malcolm wrote:

To visit? Club Med for Buddhas?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 2nd, 2021 at 2:15 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

cloudburst said:

Brother, this thread is a mess, can you clear it up

Malcolm wrote:

Thus Buddhas do not possess gnosis. This a special point of Dzogchen, unshared with the nine yanās.

Gampopa's view of gnosis is more or less the same as Rongzom's.

"That being the case, the Buddha is the dharmakāya. Since the dharmakāya is nonarising and free from proliferation, it does not possess gnosis.

cloudburst said:

Is not possessing gnosis a special feature of Dzogchen or do Mahamudra people like Gampopa teach it as well?

Further, this has come up many times, can you clarify the difference between Dzogchen and the ninth yana. they are very often used synonymously

Malcolm wrote:

Dzogchen takes ye shes as the path. The nine yānas take mind as the path. This is the basic difference between Dzogchen and the Nine Yānas.

There are some similarities between general Dzogchen language and Kagyu Mahāmudra language, because Milarepa and Gampopa were both raised in the Nyingma tradition. Not only this, but Dzeng Dharmabodhi exchanged teachings with Gampopa, the former teaching the space series, the latter teaching mahāmudra.

The basic point that Rongzom and Mipham make is that in Dzogchen, the absence of gnosis in the result is not an absence of gnosis per se. In Dzogchen, gnosis is the basis. Recognizing that gnosis is the path. The gnosis lacking the result is the two-fold gnosis. It is a complicated issue, totally beyond the scope of this forum or my energy to address.

Also

cloudburst said:

So Buddha's do possess gnosis, or pristine consciousness, the self-originated pristine consciousness of luminous mind, one of the three types of gnosis according to Rongzom

Malcolm wrote:

This gnosis, so called rang byung ye shes, is the basis. Everyone possesses this gnosis, buddha or not. In the Kagyu school they call this ground mahāmudra or the all-basis; in Sakya, it is called cause mahāmudra or the all-basis cause continuum; in Geluk, it is the subtle mind of luminosity; in Nyingma it is called "the triune pristine consciousness of the basis."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 2nd, 2021 at 2:23 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Dzogchen, gnosis is the basis. Recognizing that gnosis is the path

cloudburst said:

this is Gelug mahamudra as well

Malcolm wrote:

Mahāmudra and trekcho have commonalities. But there is no thogal in the former.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 2nd, 2021 at 3:12 AM

Title: Re: Do Empowerments Give Refuge, Precepts, and Bodhisattva Vows?

Content:

Motova said:

"Refuge, Precepts and Bodhisattva vows are to be taken separately in detail. The repetitions you do after the lama during empowerments is only symbolic." -from another Lama (This sounds like a no to me, and so I asked a following question and am waiting on his response)

Malcolm wrote:

That's bullshit.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 2nd, 2021 at 4:43 AM

Title: Re: Accounting for the Chinese Destruction of Tibet

Content:

Nemo said:

Buddhism adapted to Tibet and the theocracy was a grand Mongol experiment. I think for the time it was incredibly beneficial and superior to what had come before.

Malcolm wrote:

The actual rule of the Ganden Phodrang started in 1642 with the execution of Karma Tenkyong, the king of Tsang, and ended in 1704 with the abduction and probable execution of the 6th Dalai Lama in 1706. It was born in the bloodshed of the war of king of Tsang. The 7th Dalai Lama was politically weak, as were the 8th-12th.

The political situation of Tibet was precarious at best, and actually saw very few periods of overall peace and prosperity. We can see this actually in the flourishing of the first renaissance in Tibet, from 1000 to roughly 1250. Then again, from roughly 1400-1500.

Otherwise, Tibetan history was filled with a lot of war, violence, and power struggles.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 2nd, 2021 at 4:44 AM

Title: Re: Do Empowerments Give Refuge, Precepts, and Bodhisattva Vows?

Content:

Könchok Thrinley said:

I would just like to ask if there is a difference between Bodhicitta vows and Bodhisattva vows.

Malcolm wrote:

No.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 2nd, 2021 at 4:48 AM

Title: Re: One wisdom or three wisdoms?

Content:

Viach said:

In the list, wisdom through hearing-wisdom through reflection-wisdom through meditation, does the word wisdom refer to the same wisdom (namely direct vision of 4TN = 4 Truths of the Noble) or is it three fundamentally different types of wisdom. Is it possible, based on the analysis of the Pali / Sanskrit grammar of the original text (sutra), to give an unambiguous answer to the question posed above? The background of my question is that in the time of the Buddha and not only there were cases of enlightenment at the moment of listening to the dharma. I.e. the hearing was just a trigger.

Malcolm wrote:

There are three trainings: śīla, samadhi, and prājñā. In the category of prajñā are the prajñā's of hearing, reflection, and cultivation. They are different. The first is hearing a dharma topic; the second is reflecting on its meaning; the third is integrating into the path. Only the third is pure wisdom, the first two are conceptual.

Those āryas who had sudden realization from hearing a word of dharma, like Shariputra, had strong past life traces with the Buddhadharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 2nd, 2021 at 7:59 AM

Title: Re: Do Empowerments Give Refuge, Precepts, and Bodhisattva Vows?

Content:

Könchok Thrinley said:

I would just like to ask if there is a difference between Bodhicitta vows and Bodhisattva vows.

Malcolm wrote:

No.

Könchok Thrinley said:

Thank you. Also one more since we are at it. I have heard that one has to know the vows one is taking to really take them and therefore receive an empowerment. What do you think about it?

Malcolm wrote:

It helps. Its the responsibility of the teacher to explain this. If the teacher does not explain this, it is a fault.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 2nd, 2021 at 8:53 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

cloudburst said:

this is Gelug mahamudra as well

Malcolm wrote:

Mahāmudra and trekcho have commonalities. But there is no thogal in the former.

cloudburst said:

correct, not needed

Malcolm wrote:

That depends on your aims.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 2nd, 2021 at 9:55 AM

Title: Re: Failing to discover the nature of ones mind in this lifetime.

Content:

coldbeer said:

What is the reason to go there if one has already become realized in this lifetime?

Malcolm wrote:

To visit? Club Med for Buddhas?

coldbeer said:

Ah ok.

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhas only see pure buddha fields. Buddhas have no impure vision, they only have pure vision.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 2nd, 2021 at 11:41 PM

Title: Re: Dzogchen and the 9 vehicles

Content:

Lingpupa said:

1) what authorities other than ChNRR state that dzogchen is not ati yoga and is outside the nine yanas?

Malcolm wrote:

Well, for example, there is this passage from the Vairocana Aural Lineage in the Gongpa Zangthal:

The dharmas of the nine vehicles are like a blind man's cane, like the scaffold for a building, like the hem of a robe, like a limb of the body and are not indispensable. Though they exist, they are not essential. The teaching of the Great Perfection is like giving a blind man eyes, and having gained sight, has no need for the cane. Like the pillar that supports the building, since the building is supported in the center, the scaffolding can be removed. Since the body has a heart, limbs can be lost.

Lingpupa said:

2) if it is true that dzogchen (presumably including space, mind and instruction classes, rushen trekchod, thogal) is not what ati yoga is about, then what teachings, practices, or anything do belong to the ati yoga class? What else does it contain?

Malcolm wrote:

Atiyoga, in this context, is the completion stage of anuyoga. In the commentary on the Tantra Without Syllables attributed to Vimalamitra, we find two kinds of Ati yoga mentioned, "the proponents of Ati who assert words that are approximations" and "those who are beyond words and expressions are those of the unmistakable Atiyoga."

In the Commentary to the Tantra Without Syllables, pp. 166, it is stated:

Since the reality of inexpressible Atiyoga cannot be illustrated by the path of the partisan tenets of the nine vehicles, it naturally cannot be illustrated by their different terminologies. Therefore, since there is no grasping to the different objects of the five sense gates in the mode of being of entities, it cannot be confirmed with words. Therefore, it is explained that yogis who adhere to words are deviating into the common vehicles.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 2nd, 2021 at 11:44 PM

Title: Re: Failing to discover the nature of ones mind in this lifetime.

Content:

coldbeer said:

Ah ok.

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhas only see pure buddha fields. Buddhas have no impure vision, they only have pure vision.

Jangchup Donden said:

Wouldn't that contradict their omniscience, as they should be able to see what ordinary beings see as well?

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhas have no impure vision. This does not affect their two-fold omniscience. They know that pretas see pus and blood, etc. But they do not themselves experience any impure phenomena, even in hell.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 2nd, 2021 at 11:46 PM

Title: Re: Resentful buddhas?

Content:

fckw said:

On the eleventh bhumi, the four noble truths are not just truths in terms of ethical understanding and discipline, but they become wisdom, or jnana. You experience their absolute truth. You have actually understood at last what you began with as a student on the path of accumulation. You have made a complete circle, but in this case you have done it with more understanding. Previously, you were just tossed and challenged by the consequences of the truth, rather than understanding it as jnana, or higher truth. That process is very important; it makes the whole thing very real. In the end, you have not bypassed anything, but you are returning to the origin—to the source of your original inspiration at the level of the first path. Tantric scriptures say that you might feel enormously resentful that the journey was a complete put-on, a sort of pacifier. Nevertheless, you did make a journey, and you did get somewhere.

Chögyam Trungpa makes this claim in the book "The Bodhisattva Path of Wisdom and Compassion" about Buddhas having reached the 11th bhumi.

Malcolm wrote:

The only thing to disagree with is that one would resent this. But yes, the journey is completely illusory from beginning to end. In reality, there was never anywhere to go.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 2nd, 2021 at 11:51 PM

Title: Re: Resentful buddhas?

Content:

fckw said:

If it's supposed to be either a figure of speech or needs to be contextualized - why then does CT claim there is scriptural authority for his claim? And does anyone have any clue what scriptural reference he could have meant?

Malcolm wrote:

As the Tantra Without Syllables states:

Since there is no destination in me,
the self-apparent domain is totally perfect.

I am not a place to go, beyond all.

One goes beyond to a place that is not a destination.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 3rd, 2021 at 12:56 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

cloudburst said:

correct, not needed

Malcolm wrote:

That depends on your aims.

cloudburst said:

I suppose that's true by definition. mahamudra enables us to become a thirteenth ground Vajradhara in his life, cannot do better

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, one can do a little better; one can attain the sixteenth stage, unsurpassed gnosis (ye shes bla ma).

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 3rd, 2021 at 1:29 AM

Title: Re: Why lung or transmission is needed

Content:

Soma999 said:

No one should blindly follow a lama. And more especially now as we see all kind of perverted people who are not clear with money, power and sexe.

The commitment to follow the Guru is first a commitment between you and the Guru principle (which means that remove darkness : gun is darkness, ru removes darkness).

Malcolm wrote:

I do not know where you found this, but it does not accord with Buddhist tradition, where guru is etymologized as one heavy (guru) with qualities (guna).

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 3rd, 2021 at 1:30 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

cloudburst said:

I suppose that's true by definition. mahamudra enables us to become a thirteenth ground Vajradhara in his life, cannot do better

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, one can do a little better; one can attain the sixteenth stage, unsurpassed gnosis (ye shes bla ma).

cloudburst said:

you used to be against "dancing on books"

Malcolm wrote:

You know what they say about consistency...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 3rd, 2021 at 2:23 AM

Title: Re: Why lung or transmission is needed

Content:

Soma999 said:

A good sanskrit analysis of the word guru, allowing to better understand what it represents :

<https://sampadanandamishra.medium.com/sanskrit-words-for-a-teacher-2-ad0e4ba5c315>

Malcolm wrote:

The Buddhist tradition is as I have explained it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 3rd, 2021 at 2:27 AM

Title: Re: Why lung or transmission is needed

Content:

karmanyangpo said:

I will wait for Malcolm to explain more about the Sanskrit because that is not an area of expertise for me but I do know that there are many pseudo entymologies out there for ancient language words and a lot of pseudo linguistics in general about Sanskrit. You also see it with languages like Hebrew and Tamil. Many made up origins for words and breakdowns of words. Language is a gray area for many people because since it associates with literature and the arts it is seen as more fuzzy and in a sense that is true, .. but those who study language such as linguistics and entymologists do follow rigorous methods for analyzing language and many pseudo explanations fail to meet basic criteria for this

KN

Malcolm wrote:

The Hindus have their way of explaining things, and the Buddhists have a different way explaining things. Take samādhi for example; the Hindu explanation is often "together" (sam) with the highest (ādhi). The Buddhist explanation is quite different: evenly (samā) holding (dhi).

So, we cannot go and conflated the way Hindus explain technical terms with the way we explain technical terms.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 3rd, 2021 at 2:28 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

cloudburst said:

you used to be against "dancing on books"

Malcolm wrote:

You know what they say about consistency...

cloudburst said:

Im pleased you admit you are dancing on books, I prefer honest conversation partners. Do not forget that is is a foolish consistency that is criticized, you should have tried to remain with your initial good impulse

Malcolm wrote:

Even Geluk Mahāmudra is a path with takes mind as the basis, rather than ye shes. That's not dancing on books; that's irrefutable.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 3rd, 2021 at 2:42 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

cloudburst said:

There is mahamudra based on the mind, and there is mahamudra based on wisdom, both exist

Malcolm wrote:

Really, so in Geluk Mahāmudra, below the path of seeing, there is a mahāmudra based on ye shes and the direct perception of dharmatā?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 3rd, 2021 at 2:43 AM

Title: Re: Dzogchen and the 9 vehicles

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The dharmas of the nine vehicles are like a blind man's cane, like the scaffold for a building, like the hem of a robe, like a limb of the body and are not indispensable. Though they exist, they are not essential. The teaching of the Great Perfection is like giving a blind man eyes, and having gained sight, has no need for the cane. Like the pillar that supports the building, since the building is supported in the center, the scaffolding can be removed. Since the body has a heart, limbs can be lost.

Seeker12 said:

Wow that is a very good quote.

Malcolm wrote:

There are many similar citations like this in the Gongpa Zangthal and other Nyinthig cycles.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, March 3rd, 2021 at 3:12 AM
Title: Re: Dzogchen and the 9 vehicles
Content:

Seeker12 said:
Wow that is a very good quote.

Malcolm wrote:
There are many similar citations like this in the Gongpa Zangthal and other Nyinthig cycles.

Seeker12 said:
Since the body has a heart, limbs can be lost

heart said:
Pretty weird statement.

/magnus

Malcolm wrote:
Dzogchen is the ideal teaching for quadriplegics.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, March 3rd, 2021 at 3:41 AM
Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis
Content:
cloudburst said:
Dzogchen too has no direct perception of dharmata below the path of seeing

Malcolm wrote:
That is incorrect.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, March 3rd, 2021 at 3:44 AM
Title: Re: Failing to discover the nature of ones mind in this lifetime.
Content:

GrapeLover said:
Does this imply that even wrathful pure lands aren't perceived as they're described to us? Or, in this context, is there a difference between wrathful 'manifestations' of enlightenment and impure karmic phenomena?

Would even pleasant karmic phenomena count as impure perception in this context?
Eg in pure perception a hell wouldn't be hellish, but even a heaven wouldn't be like how devas perceive a heaven?

Malcolm wrote:

Peaceful and wrathful is from the point of view of those to be tamed.

Buddhas have no experience of impure phenomena of any kind. They perceive all sentient beings as buddhas, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 3rd, 2021 at 4:45 AM

Title: Re: Do devas & hell beings experience time differently than we do?

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

There is no time occurring...

Malcolm wrote:

You should have stopped here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 3rd, 2021 at 4:46 AM

Title: Re: Do devas & hell beings experience time differently than we do?

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

I mean time is a measurable unit

Malcolm wrote:

In Buddhadharma, the smallest unit of time is the length of a concept.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 3rd, 2021 at 6:20 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

cloudburst said:

Dzogchen too has no direct perception of dharmata below the path of seeing

Malcolm wrote:

That is incorrect.

cloudburst said:

fascinating! since the direct perception of the dharmata is the threshold defining the path of seeing, how can that make sense?

Malcolm wrote:

It's the difference between a path based on sems and a path based on ye shes.

If you want more details, you will have to go study Dzogchen under a qualified person.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 3rd, 2021 at 6:37 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

cloudburst said:

fascinating! since the direct perception of the dharmata is the threshold defining the path of seeing, how can that make sense?

Malcolm wrote:

It's the difference between a path based on sems and a path based on ye shes.

If you want more details, you will have to go study Dzogchen under a qualified person.

cloudburst said:

sounds amazing, best of luck

Malcolm wrote:

Thanks, you too.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 3rd, 2021 at 10:38 AM

Title: Re: Do devas & hell beings experience time differently than we do?

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Here's an important question: what about the differences between time effecting those in the cessated stage, Nibbana, and those still caught in the kleshas? How is time perceived differently in either consciousness?

Malcolm wrote:

Time depends on objects, actually, even though the unit of time is measured in terms of discrete thought moments.

When there are no objects, one does not notice lapses in time. Buddhas don't experience time as we understand it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 3rd, 2021 at 11:00 PM

Title: Re: Reset rule for ngondro accumulations - your experience?

Content:

Soma999 said:

Yuthok clearly realised it when he does a one week ngondro.

Malcolm wrote:

Yuthok's short ngondro is designed for physicians who do not have much time to practice. Why do I know this? Because I am a Doctor of Tibetan Medicine.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 3rd, 2021 at 11:40 PM

Title: Re: Reset rule for ngondro accumulations - your experience?

Content:

Soma999 said:

Many people don't have much time for practice.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, but many people also do not accumulate as much merit merely from their jobs as physicians do. I am quite familiar with the Yuthok Nyingthik, and I understand quite clearly what it says about itself concerning the reason its practices are so brief. Basically, it is for physicians. Its not really a practice for regular practitioners.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 4th, 2021 at 4:24 AM

Title: Re: One wisdom or three wisdoms?

Content:

Viach said:

P.S. Standard explanations are already known to me and are not the subject of my post.

Malcolm wrote:

What makes you think anyone here has the requisite language skills in Pali or Sanskrit to answer your question? You should know better.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 4th, 2021 at 5:11 AM

Title: Re: Reset rule for ngondro accumulations - your experience?

Content:

karmanyngpo said:

Although if your teacher tells you, you must reset if you miss a day, what is there to do?

Malcolm wrote:

Find a more reasonable teacher.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 4th, 2021 at 5:59 AM

Title: Re: One wisdom or three wisdoms?

Content:

Viach said:

P.S. Standard explanations are already known to me and are not the subject of my post.

Malcolm wrote:

What makes you think anyone here has the requisite language skills in Pali or Sanskrit to answer your question? You should know better.

Crazywisdom said:

Punya is a pretty well trodden term buddy.

Malcolm wrote:

He is asking about prajñā, wisdom. Punya is merit.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 4th, 2021 at 10:41 AM

Title: Re: Reset rule for ngondro accumulations - your experience?

Content:

Terma said:

Agreed. I guess everyone is different, but I would not want such a rigid approach from my teachers. After all, we are trying to eliminate suffering! I guess I've been very fortunate to have teachers with a much more relaxed approach.

PeterC said:

The 'reset' requirement is a standard thing with many excellent teachers from major lineages. And honestly it's not such an imposition to commit to doing ten minutes of practice every day. If we can't even do that, we're probably not going to get very far with the Buddhadharma.

karmanyngpo said:

I am genuinely curious not intending disrespect in anyway - is there a scriptural basis for the reset rule or is it tradition?

Also, if it is tradition, did it used to be universal as a requirement for ngondro practitioners?

KN

Malcolm wrote:

Nothing is written in stone. Different lamas have different attitudes towards these issues. There is no one correct opinion about any of this, instead there are many different correct opinions about all this. They all, in the end boil down to oneself and ones teacher.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 4th, 2021 at 11:06 PM

Title: Re: Question about Sand Mandalas

Content:

escargotmycargo said:

Hi everyone!

Quick question for you: when a sand Mandala is made, do the practitioners making it memorize the image first and make it based on the image in their mind, or do they look at a picture as a reference?

Thank you very much!

Malcolm wrote:

It is laid out very precisely before hand.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 4th, 2021 at 11:08 PM

Title: Re: Do devas & hell beings experience time differently than we do?

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

If you have a body, you have time. All sentient beings have bodies, even the formless ones.

Seeker12 said:

Do you know of any source that discusses this much? I've seen it said, and it makes sense to me, that there's basically a very subtle body, but I can't recall any citations or anything on the topic exactly.

Malcolm wrote:

According to Vasubandhu, time depends a) on objects b) the unit of measuring time is the duration of a thought. When one does not perceive objects, it seems as though no time has passed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 4th, 2021 at 11:09 PM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Life lives on death. It is really simple and not complicated at all to figure out.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 5th, 2021 at 12:14 AM

Title: Re: AKB, Ch. 1, V. 35: Dhatus as Tangibles

Content:

Queequeg said:

Avijnapti is a peculiar category

Malcolm wrote:

It is a form of matter created by taking vows. That's all. It is debated extensively in chapter 4.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 5th, 2021 at 1:13 AM

Title: Re: AKB, Ch. 1, V. 35: Dhatus as Tangibles

Content:

Queequeg said:

Avijnapti is a peculiar category

Malcolm wrote:

It is a form of matter created by taking vows. That's all. It is debated extensively in chapter 4.

Queequeg said:

The Princeton Dictionary suggests its a broader category - including all intentions. Do you know where that comes from if not in this text?

Malcolm wrote:

The only ramification it has is with vows. That's why it is debated in the karma chapter. BTW, Sautrantikas reject it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 5th, 2021 at 2:19 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Life lives on death. It is really simple and not complicated at all to figure out.

Könchok Chödrak said:

Tell that to someone in the Amida Buddha Pure Land. Why can't we work on creating a similar Pure Land here?

Malcolm wrote:

"Pure" is not an objective state. It is a subjective state, which depends on whether one has traces of affliction or not. Even Sukhavati will appear impure to someone with impure visions.

The only pure land one can work on is one's own pure vision.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 5th, 2021 at 2:46 AM

Title: Re: Question about Sand Mandalas

Content:

escargotmycargo said:

Thank you very much for your reply! So I assume they use a reference for that then, and are not doing it from memory?

Malcolm wrote:

Not from memory. They are following a text.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 5th, 2021 at 9:41 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Along those lines, I would argue that if we wanna "go there", then the absolute most harm-free diet one can adopt today (providing that's a priority, and I don't think it needs to be to for everyone, I'd go as far as to say that if it's a priority for someone, it's an indication of a privileged lifestyle) is the modern equivalent of Shakyamuni's diet - basically, something like freeganism.

SilenceMonkey said:

What about local, organic farming?

Or better yet, growing your own food.

Malcolm wrote:

Have you ever tried to live on only the food you grow yourself? Local organic farming is great, if you don't live in an urban or rural food desert, of which there are far too many. JD is right, Veganism is just white privileged wrapped in a diet.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 5th, 2021 at 10:32 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

What about local, organic farming?
Or better yet, growing your own food.

Malcolm wrote:

Have you ever tried to live on only the food you grow yourself? Local organic farming is great, if you don't live in an urban or rural food desert, of which there are far too many. JD is right, Veganism is just white privileged wrapped in a diet.

SilenceMonkey said:

I haven't, no. But I think it's a great idea.

Malcolm wrote:

It's a great deal more work than I think you realize. For example, do you know how long it takes to grow a head of broccoli or cauliflower? Tomatoes? Corn?

A modern vegetarian diet with broccoli etc. every day is only possible with the globalization of agriculture and cheap farm labor. The craze for quinoa has made this grain prohibitively expensive in Andes, where it is a staple. The craze for avocado toast has resulted in the devastation of old growth forests in the Michoacán highlands, the only Mexican state allowed to export avocados to the US.

Global food security is more important than our individual diet morality. We need to address the former first. That includes a major overhaul of industrial agriculture. But to expect people to stop eating meat is unrealistic.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 5th, 2021 at 11:23 PM

Title: Re: GMO and right livelihood hi all,

Content:

neander said:

Buddhology is independent of individual researcher's ignorance.

Malcolm wrote:

As Bristollad points out to you, you are merely describing the limitations of text-critical methodology. That methodology perishes in absence of texts.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 5th, 2021 at 11:37 PM

Title: Re: GMO and right livelihood hi all,

Content:

neander said:

However, in 2021 we cannot be dogmatic and say: This is the true Buddhism .. as we do not have the means to do so

Malcolm wrote:

This is excessively skeptical.

We certainly know that there is a historical consensus about what constitutes the Dharma: absence of personal and phenomenal identity; emptiness; dependent origination; rebirth caused by affliction; karma and its results; four truths of nobles; and so on.

That historical consensus, consistent for over two thousand years, is sufficient to infer what was taught by the historical Buddha. The principles he enunciated are more important than the books in which they were eventually written down.

The problem with your method, and indeed the method of post-Schopen Buddhology, is that it is materialist, and only accepts direct perception as a valid authority.

However, in Buddhadharma, the historical consensus shows across cultures, time, and sects, three forms of authority are acceptable in Buddhadharma: valid direct perception; inferences based on valid direct perception; and testimony of reliable witnesses.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 5th, 2021 at 11:39 PM

Title: Re: Do we know what Buddha taught? (split from GMO and...)

Content:

neander said:

<https://tricycle.org/magazine/myth-historical-buddha/>

With today's philological accuracy, comparative studies, and resources we have from the digital revolution the picture is quite clear...there are no hard facts.

Malcolm wrote:

There is a hard fact— recorded in thousands of texts, many dating back to the first century BCE—the 2000 year-old, consistent, historical consensus on what the Buddha taught three centuries earlier.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 5th, 2021 at 11:57 PM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

PeterC said:

It's complete nonsense. Cryptocurrencies in their current forms are for fools and criminals. Particularly foolish criminals, who want to leave a permanent record of their transactions for governments to decode at their leisure.

jake said:

Indeed. Naked Capitalism has had a few good pieces the past weeks on crypto-currency. <https://www.nakedcapitalism.com/2021/02/what-happens-if-bitcoin-succeeds.html> Prices will collapse once people realise it's not as useful/beneficial as the techies suggest.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, paying for things is a little difficult with bitcoin.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 6th, 2021 at 1:42 AM

Title: Re: Do we know what Buddha taught? (split from GMO and...)

Content:

neander said:

<https://tricycle.org/magazine/myth-historical-buddha/>

With today's philological accuracy, comparative studies, and resources we have from the digital revolution the picture is quite clear...there are no hard facts.

Malcolm wrote:

There is a hard fact— recorded in thousands of texts, many dating back to the first century BCE—the 2000 year-old, consistent, historical consensus on what the Buddha taught three centuries earlier.

neander said:

There are no hard facts whatsoever much less consensus:

Malcolm wrote:

You are just flat out wrong.

neander said:

Buddhists scriptures are also far from coherent, “we must accept the fact there are divergences and contradictions in the Buddhist scriptures” The beginning of Buddhism J.W.De Jong, he also writes

“According to the traditions there were from time to time meetings called councils in English,the Pali term sangiti means singing or reciting together; the accounts we have of these councils are unreliable”

Malcolm wrote:

This is an opinion, not a fact.

neander said:

From the wiki page of Pre Sectarian Buddhism:

Edward Conze held that there was an "absence of hard facts"

Donald Lopez: "The original teachings of the historical Buddha are extremely difficult, if not impossible, to recover or reconstruct.

Etienne Lamotte argues that while it "is impossible to say with certainty"

Malcolm wrote:

These are opinions, not facts.

neander said:

please note also the article I linked comes from Trycicle a Buddhist website, so if something is posted it must have some validity

Malcolm wrote:

Trike as a Buddhist authority has no merit.

neander said:

You can follow up on this and study all moder Buddhist literature.

Malcolm wrote:

I have, and for much longer than you.

neander said:

Please also note that it should be clear that I am not against any Buddhist tradition per se, provided they do not sell for historical evidence dating back to Lord Buddha's life what is historical evidence dating back centuries after his death.

Malcolm wrote:

I have already pointed out to you that there are documents, physical documents, dating back before the common era, which show broad agreement with what we understand Buddhadharma to be today.

<https://gandhari.org>

All Buddhist traditions agree that the Buddha's words were not set down in writing until a considerable time following his parinirvana, depending on how that is dated. That is a fact.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 6th, 2021 at 1:49 AM

Title: Re: Does anyone here agree with Jay Garfield that Nagarjuna was a "robust realist" and...

Content:

Archie2009 said:

I just realised Jay Garfield did the three part Wisdom Academy course Buddhist Philosophy in Depth which I'm about to start. This is very disappointing. I now wonder if there are any other wrong or questionable views of his I need to be aware of.

Malcolm wrote:

Jay is fine-- his view is very influenced by Gelug sources, but he is a trained philosopher and a very smart guy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 6th, 2021 at 4:31 AM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

tkp67 said:

Blockchain and cryptocurrency are not separable.

Malcolm wrote:

Blockchain is not particularly innovative. It is useful for some kinds of data storage, and not useful for other kinds of data storage, where one is better off using relational databases that use SQL.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 6th, 2021 at 5:23 AM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

tkp67 said:

Blockchain and cryptocurrency are not separable.

Malcolm wrote:

Blockchain is not particularly innovative. It is useful for some kinds of data storage, and not useful for other kinds of data storage, where one is better off using relational databases that use SQL.

tkp67 said:

Decentralization within the internet ecosystem is what makes performance different.

Centralization of systems such as this is antiquated and the transitional nexus for corruption.

Malcolm wrote:

Again, it quite depends on what one wants use one has for a database. For example, I can't think of a single company that would trust any of their secure data in a shared node database of the kind that bitcoin employs. At this juncture, it seems that the best use for blockchain databases is logistics tracking in a supply chain. But blockchain databases begin to degenerate in performance when the datasets become large and complex.

A relational database is as secure as the network it is set up on and the servers in which it sits. It is generally much superior to a blockchain database in terms data integrity (aka normalization), speed, and so on, when working with multiple data points in a complex environment. Its performance can suffer if encryption is required on tables in the database itself. But encryption load can also be downside of blockchain databases.

So again, it just depends on the application. Remember, everything looks like a nail to a hammer.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 6th, 2021 at 5:26 AM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

jake said:

Anyway, paper wealth isn't true wealth. True wealth is having an energy infrastructure that can handle a few degrees below zero without grinding to a halt and killing people.

Malcolm wrote:

Yeah, but what about muh freedom?

jake said:

Or a functioning medical system that permits people to return to work, generate tax revenue, and have meaningful lives.

Malcolm wrote:

Yeah, but what about muh freedom?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 6th, 2021 at 6:11 AM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

tkp67 said:

The IEEE commentary talks to all the points you mention and they don't hold up under said commentary.

Malcolm wrote:

What the IEEE claims and what works in the real world are two different things.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 6th, 2021 at 6:15 AM

Title: Re: Does anyone here agree with Jay Garfield that Nagarjuna was a "robust realist" and...

Content:

Aemilius said:

12. Reject the concepts "it exists," "it doesn't exist" about that which is not evident prior to, now or after seeing etc.

Malcolm wrote:

Ultimately. But "eye contacting form results in eye consciousness" is a convention which Madhyamaka does not reject. Why? Because it is how common people explain sight.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 6th, 2021 at 7:02 AM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

tkp67 said:

Technology evolves too rapidly to pretend conceptual limitations matter. That was the point of the AOL comment.

Malcolm wrote:

You've clearly never worked in a datacenter, worked in a software project, or designed a database once in your entire life.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 6th, 2021 at 10:15 AM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

tkp67 said:

I maintained a Microsoft partnership for close to 20 years. Was also an executive for a leading Novell integrator.

Malcolm wrote:

Glad to be wrong. But it makes your visionary stance towards blockchain all the more puzzling. It's all still pretty speculative, and depends on a level of voluntary cooperation which is difficult at best to find in competitive markets, for example, convincing people to install Novell enterprise-wide.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 6th, 2021 at 11:21 AM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

tkp67 said:

it does represent the next stage of internet cloud based technologies.

Health record access is an interesting application for example.

Malcolm wrote:

As I said, as a technology for storing serial records, it's fine. It simply has realworld limitations.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 6th, 2021 at 8:24 PM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

tkp67 said:

They aren't direct indicators of bitcoin's long term value but the money they are generating is being spent to build out the industry.

For example and to the topic. One of the purchasers of the art mentioned that it might lose all value over the term but the investment into the future of virtual art was worth the investment at face value. Reportedly young people making a seeming windfall in digital currency incites discretionary spending. From what I understand the artists received compensation from these sales driving some of the momentum.

PeterC said:

What's being "built out", exactly?

The people doing work on distributed records in actual real world applications are a completely different set of people from the Bitcoin fanboys on social media. What cryptocurrency is promoting investment in is wasteful use of resources to "create" something that has zero utility.

The idea that 'virtual art' is somehow comparable to editions of prints or photos is nonsense. Editions only have value if they are limited editions. Open editions are very hard to sell and priced very low, because they have no scarcity value. Virtual art is not even comparable to open editions. Why? Because you can download exactly the same thing for a cost of zero.

tkp67 said:

A virtual market and economy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 6th, 2021 at 8:28 PM

Title: Re: Does anyone here agree with Jay Garfield that Nagarjuna was a "robust realist" and...

Content:

Aemilius said:

12. Reject the concepts "it exists," "it doesn't exist" about that which is not evident prior to, now or after seeing etc.

Malcolm wrote:

Ultimately. But "eye contacting form results in eye consciousness" is a convention which Madhyamaka does not reject. Why? Because it is how common people explain sight.

Aemilius said:

That is not quite right. You have to refresh your memory. According to Abhidharma, that is accepted by Madhyamaka and other schools, perception takes place in a rapid sequence of stages, first you perceive a "thing", then you project an identity, like a car, person, frog, snake etc., then you perceive what you perceive. (This is a simplified version of it.) This exists in the Sravakayana Abhidharma already, it is not a product of the later developments of Dharma, (You should be aware of this).

Here is what Alex Berzins says about it <https://studybuddhism.com/en/advanced-studies/science-of-mind/ways-of-knowing/seven-ways-of-knowing-objects/context-of-ways-of-knowing-bare-perception>

Malcolm wrote:

There is no contradiction here to what I said.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 6th, 2021 at 8:40 PM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

tkp67 said:

See he above and let me know if you need some ghee for your popcorn

Malcolm wrote:

As I said, no company is going to place its sensitive data in the hands of strangers, for any reason.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 6th, 2021 at 9:30 PM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

tkp67 said:

See he above and let me know if you need some ghee for your popcorn

Malcolm wrote:

As I said, no company is going to place its sensitive data in the hands of strangers, for any reason.

tkp67 said:

What does that have to do with blockchain technology changing the internet ecosystem?

If you read the research paper from Japan you will notice it speaks to the very dynamic being discussed by the OP. Cause, Effect and purpose.

Your argument doesn't hold up to reality either way. Ask Netflix how they were able to support streaming a few years after establishing a business model. When they first started streaming wasn't a viable business model.

Malcolm wrote:

These are entirely different issues.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 6th, 2021 at 9:36 PM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

tkp67 said:

See he above and let me know if you need some ghee for your popcorn

Malcolm wrote:

As I said, no company is going to place its sensitive data in the hands of strangers, for any reason.

narhwal90 said:

Not so, observe the rush to outsource everything to the cloud and office365. once the data leaves your servers its no longer yours. When the vendor abuse becomes too onerous I suppose the pendulum will swing back. The opportunity to outsource and realize short term savings on the balance sheet looks irresistible I suppose.

Seems to me blockchain's primary application so far is to create hype and expensive consultants.

Malcolm wrote:

Service providers agree to provide security for ones proprietary data. That's not true with a blockchain applications. Blockchain requires third party intervention to manage data integrity.

Blockchain only functions if every node has a full copy of the data. That's inherently inefficient. That's why it can't scale.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 6th, 2021 at 11:06 PM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

narhwal90 said:

Not so, observe the rush to outsource everything to the cloud and office365. once the data leaves your servers its no longer yours. When the vendor abuse becomes too onerous I suppose the pendulum will swing back. The opportunity to outsource and realize short term savings on the balance sheet looks irresistible I suppose.

Seems to me blockchain's primary application so far is to create hype and expensive consultants.

Malcolm wrote:

Service providers agree to provide security for ones proprietary data. That's not true with a blockchain applications. Blockchain requires third party intervention to manage data integrity.

Blockchain only functions if every node has a full copy of the data. That's inherently inefficient. That's why it can't scale.

narhwal90 said:

Service providers agree to the letter of the contract, to the extent it can be enforced. I'm involved with a move of systems into AWS as we speak and its personally shocking to see how quickly an organization can decide that it doesn't need to run its own hardware and transitions to a model where it pays an external organization for access to its own sensitive internal systems and data.

Malcolm wrote:

There is a cost/benefit analysis running such decisions. Having ones own equipment does not assure security—look at the just discovered MS exchange/outlook hack.

The “cloud” is just a bunch of externally located virtual servers. No different than web hosting 20 years ago, other than scale.

narhwal90 said:

I don't see redundancy as a big problem- storage is cheap and duplication provides redundancy which has its own value- otoh I wonder if the ledger size and computational overhead will limit the scaling.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, that's the point.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 6th, 2021 at 11:09 PM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

tkp67 said:

services providers are third parties.

Malcolm wrote:

I am referring to the external authorities that are supposedly responsible for ensuring data block integrity in the blockchain model.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 6th, 2021 at 11:49 PM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

narhwal90 said:

storage is cheap and duplication provides redundancy which has its own value- otoh I wonder if the ledger size and computational overhead will limit the scaling. It wouldn't surprise me if blockchain finds its niches where either the money is there to cover the scaling costs (ie finance), or where it can be small, and the world moves on.

PeterC said:

<https://digiconomist.net/bitcoin-energy-consumption>

Malcolm wrote:

Yup, also an environmental travesty.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 7th, 2021 at 12:45 AM

Title: Re: Lama Lena Testimonies/Credentials

Content:

tobes said:

I wouldn't underestimate this though. Dharma seeds can ripen in very unexpected ways, and they do not necessarily depend on the disciple being diligent, committed etc at the time of them being given/planted.

I owe a lot to this fact!

Malcolm wrote:

We all do, nevertheless, we have no idea when such traces ripen, and in most case, probably not in this life.

Adamantine said:

I'm not sure I completely agree with you here Malcolm, because in a sense it would imply that you had to have some level of realization to have a Guru. Yet we have to start somewhere... and on a related theme...I like this quote from the wandering Indian siddha, Bhagawan Nityananda, "The outer Guru is the one who points to the well, the inner Guru is the one who drinks from it."

So let's not conflate the outer Guru and the inner Guru. The outer one may point, and our inner one may not drink... yet the label Guru would still apply to the outer one, no?

Malcolm wrote:

I don't think you read the whole exchange.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 7th, 2021 at 12:49 AM

Title: Re: Do we know what Buddha taught? (split from GMO and...)

Content:

neander said:

and then comes down also to your own's integrity and honesty:

I follow a Zen / Nichiren path but I would never tell anyone that I have hard evidence that this is what Lord Buddha taught, this is 2021 CE.....

integrity and honesty that is so often lacking even in east and west monasteries and lay communities..

Malcolm wrote:

Your approach is grounded in materialism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 7th, 2021 at 5:45 AM

Title: Re: Do we know what Buddha taught? (split from GMO and...)

Content:

SonamTashi said:

Your entire premise is flawed.

Malcolm wrote:

We've tried to tell them this...but...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 7th, 2021 at 10:19 PM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

Unknown said:

One major reason: As a means of processing transactions, blockchain-based systems are comparatively slow. Blockchain's sluggish transaction speed is a major concern for enterprises that depend on high-performance legacy transaction processing systems.⁹ A lack of standards and interoperability between various blockchain platforms and solutions is another challenge.¹⁰ Unless blockchain technology can be readily connected to existing enterprise systems, it will be of little utility in large programs and initiatives. Legal and regulatory concerns around data privacy, intellectual property, enforceability of contracts, and choice of jurisdiction are inhibiting the technology's adoption.¹¹ And businesses are constrained by blockchain's technical complexity, which limits the feasibility of implementing distributed ledger systems.

Malcolm wrote:

https://apnews.com/sponsored/?prx_t=wYAEAVYYzAniAPA

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 7th, 2021 at 11:18 PM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The conclusion: Blockchain, another one bytes the dust.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 7th, 2021 at 11:45 PM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

Archie2009 said:

Pardon me for being so bold, but "just words" sounds a bit dismissive, as if speaking from a lack of realization?

Crazywisdom said:

Can be. I just find tregcho teachings often to be very wordy and tiresome. Not tregcho itself. To my taste the Bindu yoga carries all the meaning in itself and one doesn't need to bother sounding fancy.

Malcolm wrote:

Trekcho is more subtle, thus harder to explain.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 8th, 2021 at 2:43 AM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

tkp67 said:

Since the coin cap is now about 1.5 trillion it seems there is plenty of money for block chain to fuel its own disruptive purposes outside any one person's desires.

Malcolm wrote:

That capitalization is not money, it represents the unrealized gains of a piece of property, like your house.

Bitcoins are not money, they are property, according to the IRS. In other words, they are not legal tender. They don't even fit the definition of "coins."

<https://www.globallegalinsights.com/practice-areas/blockchain-laws-and-regulations/usa>

See section five, on taxes. One cannot use bitcoin to pay for groceries...well one can, but the tax reporting is onerous, as this web page notes.

tkp67 said:

That is outside any of the market Gartner predicts as emerging in the next few years. They predict it to be scalable by 2025.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://101blockchains.com/disadvantages-of-blockchain/>

None of these issues are overcome, and the privacy issues is, in particular, a major issue.

tkp67 said:

Application value is already in the tens of billions.

Malcolm wrote:

Not sure what you mean by "application value."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 8th, 2021 at 2:47 AM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

jake said:

Ah, here is the common refrain, we're too academic or too conditioned, our minds are not open enough to fully grasp the nuance and complexity. Hear this from you a lot.

Malcolm wrote:

That's because we puny mortals cannot possibly comprehend the genius that is tkp67.

jake said:

Not sure what point you are trying to make by talking of the "opportunity cost of salaries" (mixing two things here, btw) that we are wasting trying to force you to our perspective. What are you trying to say? that we are somehow wasting money talking to you?

Malcolm wrote:

He seems to be asserting that you are wasting the money of your companies by arguing with him on company time.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 8th, 2021 at 2:50 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis
Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Can be. I just find tregcho teachings often to be very wordy and tiresome. Not tregcho itself. To my taste the Bindu yoga carries all the meaning in itself and one doesn't need to bother sounding fancy.

Malcolm wrote:

Trekcho is more subtle, thus harder to explain.

Crazywisdom said:

That's true. But then it follows it may be the harder path.

Malcolm wrote:

It is both the harder and the easier path.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 8th, 2021 at 10:36 PM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

Unknown said:

For those lulled by today's bull market, remember that you own a piece of paper. Low-yielding U.S. Treasury bills and bonds are safe because they are backed by the U.S. government, by cash flow of tax dollars and by the country's assets (think land, not Fort Knox). Stocks are backed by expectations of future earnings, but if you overpay during periods of high expectations (like today), then your downside is huge. Crypto is backed simply by the faith of those who proclaim it is a store of value. Even art and exotic cars and silly NFT tokens are backed only by faith the wealthy will overpay for uniqueness. Faith becomes scarce when the selling starts.

Malcolm wrote:

https://www.wsj.com/articles/when-the-stock-boom-turns-to-bust-11615144869?mod=hp_opin_pos_1

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 8th, 2021 at 10:57 PM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

https://www.wsj.com/articles/nfts-explained-whats-driving-prices-for-lebron-james-and-kings-of-leon-digital-collectibles-11615205133?mod=hp_lista_pos5

Unknown said:

In 2017 and 2018, many poured money into cryptocurrency startups through a controversial fundraising method called initial coin offerings. Such booms preceded a rise in trading groups that manipulated the price of cryptocurrencies, causing losses for others.

The value of these digital collectibles depends on the assumption that someone else is willing to pay more for it than you did, analysts say, noting similarities between their big gains and recent social-media-fueled frenzies in meme stocks like GameStop and Koss that led to heavy losses for some individual investors.

“There are people who have been conditioned by cryptocurrencies to believe that just the fact that it can be owned makes it valuable,” said Jorge Stolfi, a computer science professor at Brazil’s State University of Campinas. “People just 100% believe that this thing has value, but in fact it doesn’t because there’s no way to get value out of it except for selling it to another investor.”

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 9th, 2021 at 12:30 AM

Title: Re: New Mahayanist convert!

Content:

greenobeenno said:

Thank you very much! It is reassuring to know my years spent in Theravada were not in vain for Mahayana. Keeping the five precepts is second-nature now due to that. I look forward to meditating with the Sutras as I read them and gaining greater understanding and kinship on here

Malcolm wrote:

To be a Mahāyāni means renewing one's past life commitment to the bodhisattva path, no matter how long that takes, and recalling one's wish to attain full buddhahood for the benefit of all sentient beings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 9th, 2021 at 1:04 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo’s understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

Passing By said:

It's not as in your face as thogal but saying it's just words is selling it short no? It pertains to all one's experiences after all and is certainly more experiential than say, a philosophy textbook

Crazywisdom said:
Yes. Agreed. But try relating it in a few words.

Passing By said:
True dat. Meanwhile some fortunate people can get it when the guru simply displays a mirror or a crystal or some other symbolic example

For sure though trekcho is the harder of the two paths to understand

Malcolm wrote:
The Longsal Tantra sums it up rather nicely:

By maintaining the view of trekchö one reaches the ultimate result, thögal.

And:

There are two in the trekchö:
neither a hair of meditation nor a second of distraction.

There are two in thögal:
light practice and dark practice.

And:

Since the supreme critical point of buddhahood through understanding is this unsurpassed trekchö, that is the meaning of distinguishing mind and vidyā.

And:

For example, like a polished mirror in which any kind of image is clear.
if the meaning of trekchö is not clear, even though thögal arises, it will have subject and object.

And:

Without trekchö, there is no thögal.
Without thögal, there is no trekchö.

And

Understanding that outer and inner phenomena have always been empty, trekchö and thögal are inseparable.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 9th, 2021 at 2:15 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

So this means to say tregcho is thogal....? Bc if they are really inseparable there couldn't be subject object.

Malcolm wrote:

It means that there is no way around trekcho in Dzogchen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 9th, 2021 at 4:06 AM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

tkp67 said:

As an example the following statements deny the influence of market drivers that do not align with individual reason. Yet they do not refute the actual reality of what the industry providers are doing or the points I established. So one must assume they rely on the converse. Tech survives based on fitness.

Malcolm wrote:

Technology survives based on what business processes it assists. That's it.

Sometimes people invent technologies, and then try to fit them into a business process. For example, "hypertext" was supposed to revolutionize learning. It never went anywhere.

The internet has not actually gone beyond a markup language originally designed for laying out books, packet switching, and an operating system that is 51 years old (Unix).

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 9th, 2021 at 6:02 AM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

tkp67 said:

Those processes are in and of themselves compounded phenomenon.

Malcolm wrote:

Since there no other kind of phenomena...

tkp67 said:

What drives them are subjective to desires which are in themselves expressed based on variables such as capacity, conditions and causes.

Malcolm wrote:

Tautology, i.e., anything compounded arises from causes and conditions.

tkp67 said:

Also technically what you are saying is if a houses foundation was made out of concrete 50 years ago houses today built on concrete are using 50 year old building code by proxy. Are you really saying that technology above the network layer hasn't evolved?

Malcolm wrote:

Essentially, it hasn't. Presentation layer is prettier, etc. But at base, it is all based on tech from the sixties and early 70's—tech that was developed in order to solve very specific problems.

tkp67 said:

Wouldn't the network layer have to be 10baseT still according to your convention? Doesn't the notion violate that wonderful law of impermanence as well?

Malcolm wrote:

I have fiber. But fiber optic technology is also 50 years old.

tkp67 said:

Technically speaking based on the verbosity of data that can be stored in a key alone...

Malcolm wrote:

"Verbosity" is not an adjective that can describe data. Perhaps you mean "volume."

tkp67 said:

... the lack of robust data stores are non consequential.

Malcolm wrote:

This clause in your sentence does not make any sense. What are you attempting to say? It looks like you are saying "the absence of robust data stores are of no consequence."

tkp67 said:

This is outside of any specific capacities of a given project.

Malcolm wrote:

What is "this"?

tkp67 said:

Such as:

<https://www.wired.com/story/microsoft-decentralized-id-blockchain/>

At its Ignite conference today, Microsoft announced that it will launch a public preview of its “Azure Active Directory verifiable credentials” this spring. Think of the platform as a digital wallet like Apple Pay or Google Pay, but for identifiers rather than credit cards. Microsoft is starting with things like university transcripts, diplomas, and professional credentials, letting you add them to its Microsoft Authenticator app along with two-factor codes. It's already testing the platform at Keio University in Tokyo, with the government of Flanders in Belgium, and with the United Kingdom's National Health Service.

Malcolm wrote:

This application of blockchain adds no value whatsoever, it's a solution in search of a problem.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 9th, 2021 at 6:06 AM

Title: Re: Khandro Kunzang to Teach Kyed-pa Zhi Sat., Mar. 13

Content:

pemachophel said:

Khandro Kunzang Dechen Chodron will be teaching the Kyed-pa Zhi Mar. 13 via Zoom. This is about how to assess one's lung-ta (fortune), wang-thang (personal power), lu (bodily health), and sog (life-force) and how to remedy those if they are below parr. These teachings were imparted to Khandro Kunzang from Acharya Lama Dawa Chodrak, the great ngakpa. You can read more about this class at the link below as well as register for the class. Registration is necessary. There is also a link on that page for making an appropriate offering for the Dharma.

<https://www.phurbathinleyling.org/programs/kyed-pa-zhi-skillful-methods-to-enhance-our-life-force-health-prosperity-and-success-an-online-teachings-with-khandro-kunzang/>

Malcolm wrote:

Just get ChNN's book, the Four Developments. It is all explained right there in an easy to use manual, complete with all the diagrams one needs.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 9th, 2021 at 6:08 AM

Title: Re: New Mahayanist convert!

Content:

greenobeenno said:

Thank you all as well. I am looking forward to browsing and enhancing the practice of visualization and meditation on Bodhisattvas. See you all around!

Malcolm wrote:

What you should be focusing on is developing your bodhicitta. That's the essence of Mahāyāna, not meditating on bodhisattvas.

For that, you should be reading texts like Śāntideva's Bodhicaryāvatara, etc., texts which explain how to practice the bodhisattva path.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 9th, 2021 at 6:59 AM

Title: Re: New Mahayanist convert!

Content:

greenobeenosaid:

Thank you all as well. I am looking forward to browsing and enhancing the practice of visualization and meditation on Bodhisattvas. See you all around!

Malcolm wrote:

What you should be focusing on is developing your bodhicitta. That's the essence of Mahāyāna, not meditating on bodhisattvas.

For that, you should be reading texts like Śāntideva's Bodhicaryāvatara, etc., texts which explain how to practice the bodhisattva path.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Can't those be the same thing though? I mean my sadhana sure says so.

Malcolm wrote:

The op is not a secret mantra practitioner, so, not applicable here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 9th, 2021 at 7:02 AM

Title: Re: New Mahayanist convert!

Content:

greenobeenosaid:

Would practicing the ten vows of Samantabhadra be an example of ways to cultivate Bodhicitta or is that something else?

Much Metta,

James

Malcolm wrote:

The aspiration of Samantabhadra contains the aspiration to attain buddhahood.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 9th, 2021 at 9:15 PM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

tkp67 said:

Points in the counter argument against the limits of blockchain. When I have contemporaries in the industry there isn't this constant comprehensive disconnect.

Malcolm wrote:

Everybody in tech is in sales, unless one is a grunt.

tkp67 said:

No it actually integrates the Microsoft server platform (which hosts SQL) on top of that pesky antiquated network layer. It also puts the pesky control/management issue back in the hands of the administrator.

Malcolm wrote:

That's not what the article specified.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 9th, 2021 at 10:45 PM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

tkp67 said:

Interesting since most tech decision makers I traditionally know can program in assembler as if it is a higher level language and also consult, manage projects, develop business plans, market product, develop business relationships, create supply chains and the list goes on.

I don't know too many people that conform to the pesky duality the mind likes to project.

Malcolm wrote:

I have worked in fortune 500 companies. It really is not like that where the money is. "Decision makers" often can't even figure out email.

tkp67 said:

That's not what the article specified.

Yes it does.

Microsoft formally started its work on a decentralized identity scheme in 2017 and has slowly built out the infrastructure over the past few years. The system is based on the Bitcoin blockchain and uses an open protocol called Sidetree to add records of transactions—in this case, identity verifications—to the blockchain. Microsoft says Azure Active Directory verifiable credentials uses a custom but still open source implementation of Sidetree called Identity Overlay Network. Organizations will be able to run their own ION “node” to verify and store identifiers for their members, like citizens, students, or employees.

Malcolm wrote:

And how does this integrate "the Microsoft server platform (which hosts SQL) on top of that pesky antiquated network layer. It also puts the pesky control/management issue back in the hands of the administrator."

It adds no value at all, apart from assigning a id to a person. It certainly does not integrate "the Microsoft server platform (which hosts SQL) on top of that pesky antiquated network layer. It also puts the pesky control/management issue back in the hands of the administrator.

tkp67 said:

"We know it's not going to happen overnight, but we think this is going to be compelling to both users and organizations," Microsoft's Chik says. "It's not like every organization wants to be the custodian of personal information, but they need it to verify information or do business transactions. It becomes a liability and responsibility, but this would be an appealing option to organizations that just need the data to be verified."

Malcolm wrote:

As I said, a solution in search of a problem.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 9th, 2021 at 10:49 PM

Title: Re: NFT madness

Content:

tkp67 said:

Your understand me well enough to illustrate that there is no definitive point you are making and if you had no interest in my personage and thought what I said was truly incomprehensible you would have no basis to comment.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, it is often the case that your posts are written in a way that make no sense in English. So I don't comment.

tkp67 said:

Intellectually brow beating is always clearly displayed for what it is. It is the type of behavior that becomes cancerous to a buddhist community. I have been kind enough to tolerate it. However the debt I have chosen to pay back is exposing it and eliminating it. Since my commitment to it and the lotus are inseparable it might be reasonable to take a deep breath and really consider what the purpose of your emotion here and now is really all about.

Malcolm wrote:

This is disingenuous. You want to communicate, but you do not take the time to communicate well or effectively. Instead you complain you are being brow-beaten. But frankly, it's your fault that your ideas are expressed in gibberish.

And then there are the exaggerations...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 9th, 2021 at 11:05 PM

Title: Re: Yangzab Shitro

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

There is no single Yangzab Zhitro practice. That is not how it works.

There is an outer, inner, and secret peaceful deity sadhana, and an outer, inner, and secret wrathful deity sadhana.

Also the mantras are not the same as the Zhitro everyone is familiar from the Karma Lingpa, etc.

There is a manual on how to combine the mandalas in order to give the empowerment.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 9th, 2021 at 11:42 PM

Title: Re: Yangzab Shitro

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

There is no single Yangzab Zhitro practice. That is not how it works.

There is an outer, inner, and secret peaceful deity sadhana, and an outer, inner, and secret wrathful deity sadhana.

Also the mantras are not the same as the Zhitro everyone is familiar from the Karma Lingpa, etc.

There is a manual on how to combine the mandalas in order to give the empowerment.

Cinnabar said:

There are also combined peaceful-wrathful sadhanas.

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed, but it is pretty clear that the peaceful and wrathful deities are intended, in general, to be practiced separately and systematically.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 10th, 2021 at 12:50 AM

Title: Re: Yangzab Shitro

Content:

Cinnabar said:

There are also combined peaceful-wrathful sadhanas.

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed, but it is pretty clear that the peaceful and wrathful deities are intended, in general, to be practiced separately and systematically.

Cinnabar said:

Certainly that is true.

Malcolm wrote:

This is why I stated that really there really was no combined Zhitro sadhana in Yangzab, in general. It just isn't the same system as say the Karling Shitro, etc.

I've received this empowerment from Ontul Rinpoche. I've also received the lung for all the basic texts in Yangzab, again from Ontul Rinpoche.

There are other systems where this is the case as well, for example, in the Khandro Nyinthig, there is a five buddha family peaceful deity practice, but no wrathful deity practice, other than Yogini and Hayagriva. Yangzab is actually a branch of the Khandro Nyinthig.

In reality, the Yangzab Shitro is more like the Guhyagarbha system, where there are separate sadhanas for the peaceful deities and the wrathful deities.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 10th, 2021 at 1:53 AM

Title: Re: Blood Pills

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

What are "blood pills"?

Malcolm wrote:
Probably rakta for rakta and sman offerings.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, March 10th, 2021 at 2:00 AM
Title: Re: Blood Pills
Content:
PadmaVonSamba said:
What are “blood pills”?

Malcolm wrote:
Probably rakta for rakta and sman offerings.

PadmaVonSamba said:
I should mention that I was given them along with blessing pills, so I was wondering what's the difference and why it is called a 'blood pill' ? It was made by my root lama who is passed on. It's color is red.

Malcolm wrote:
As I said, it is probably a pill meant to be used for the blood offerings on your shrine.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, March 10th, 2021 at 2:36 AM
Title: Milarepa (split topic)
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
[Mod note: Malcolm didn't start this topic, but this was the beginning of an off topic discussion in the Gelug subforum.]

Volan said:
Milarepa didn't think that these terma practices are the proper methods to attain Enlightenment in this life.

Malcolm wrote:
Milarepa was a Nyingma practitioner until he was 45, when he met Marpa.

Volan said:
Kadampa followers of Atisha focused mainly on simple kriya tantra.

Malcolm wrote:
That's just not true at all.

Volan said:
Sakyapas were originally nyingmapas themselves, but Khon brothers have decided to quit - only two nyingma kama practices were continued.

Malcolm wrote:

The Khon family have always maintained a close relationship with Nyingma terma tradition, right up to the present day. I ought to know. I am a Sakyapa by tradition. The Ngorpas are the ones who were principally hostile to the terma tradition. The Tsharpas, from Tsarchen onwards, were favorably disposed to the terma tradition.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 10th, 2021 at 2:56 AM

Title: Re: Yangzab Shitro

Content:

Wizard in the Forest said:

That's nice and all, but I don't have any of the Sāadhanās and am looking for them if anyone has them that would be helpful.

Malcolm wrote:

Do you know Tibetan? As far as I know, they have not been translated. Here are the peaceful deities:

https://www.tbrc.org/#library_work_ViewByOutline-O23158C2O0068%7CW23158

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 10th, 2021 at 5:00 AM

Title: Re: Blood Pills

Content:

namoh said:

Sorry, I messed up the reply a bit, here is my post. Mods, can you please delete my prior post?

Malcolm,

I once was given a gau with what the Lama referred to as “blood pills” inside. They were some kind of blessing pills made with the blood of several high lamas. Presumably this is a different kind of blood pill?

Thanks

Malcolm wrote:

Maybe. In this case, better ask someone else.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 10th, 2021 at 5:31 AM

Title: Re: Milarepa (split topic)

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Milarepa was a Nyingma practitioner until he was 45, when he met Marpa.

Volan said:

Met him accidentally or met him with purpose?

Malcolm wrote:

Milarepa transmitted the Nyingmapa practices he himself was expert in.

Volan said:

That's just not true at all.

Read the story about Geshe Drepa. This story is very widespread, you can hear this both from gelugpas and from kagyupas.

This is the example of kadampa tantric practices.

Malcolm wrote:

The Kadampas all had various kinds of backgrounds in general. So, one just cannot make a blanket declaration, "all they practiced was kriya tantra." It isn't accurate.

Volan said:

The Khon family have always maintained a close relationship with Nyingma terma tradition, right up to the present day. I ought to know. I am a Sakyapa by tradition. The Ngorpas are the ones who were principally hostile to the terma tradition. The Tsharpas, from Tsarchen onwards, were favorably disposed to the terma tradition.

Any examples from 11th-14th century?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, the Sakya protectors, Pañjaranatha Mahākala, Palden Lhamo, and the Karmanāthas, are all from combined gter ma and bka' ma lineages.

Then there are the revelations of Nyang, especially Guru Drakpo, as well as the King's Tradition of Avalokiteśvara from the Mani Kabum, which have been practiced in the Sakya tradition since the 14th century.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 10th, 2021 at 11:10 AM

Title: Re: Milarepa (split topic)

Content:

Volan said:

Met him accidentally or met him with purpose?

Malcolm wrote:

Milarepa transmitted the Nyingmapa practices he himself was expert in.

SilenceMonkey said:

So the lama who taught him black magic was nyingma and not bon?

Malcolm wrote:

Mila had ten Nyingma Lamas before he met Marpa.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 10th, 2021 at 8:26 PM

Title: Re: Milarepa (split topic)

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

So the lama who taught him black magic was nyingma and not bon?

Malcolm wrote:

Mila had ten Nyingma Lamas before he met Marpa.

SilenceMonkey said:

Perhaps there are different versions of the biography of Milarepa? I read the version by Tsangnyon Heruka, translated by Andrew Quintman. And now I see that aside from his first lama with whom he studied reading, Milarepa also studied black magic with two lamas before meeting the dzogchen lama. And then he set off to meet Marpa. I'm wondering about the other six.

And when you say Milarepa transmitted the Nyingmapa practices he himself was expert in, are you referring to the black magic he learned?

Malcolm wrote:

Tsangnyon Heruka's bio of Mila is basically a novel. It cannot be trusted for details.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 10th, 2021 at 8:27 PM

Title: Re: The three vows, and how they are observed together across Schools.

Content:

The Mantra Mongoose said:

Hello all,

I wanted to ask if there is there a resource that can Compare and contrast how the different Tibetan Schools understand how to observe the three sets of vows in daily life? If there isn't one resource out there could anyone give me a quick primer on how these schools differ? For example, do the Sakya and Gelug School differ on how vows take precedence in different situations? Does the emphasis in certain schools on the importance of sutra and ethics predispose them to favor the Pratimoska vows or Bodhisattva vows over tantric vows in emphasis/practice?

I find studying the three sets of vows an interesting topic, but it seems there's a lot of opinions about them and how they're practiced. Any guidance would be appreciated.

Malcolm wrote:
Buddhist Ethics by Kongtrul.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 10th, 2021 at 11:26 PM

Title: Re: Looking for Bodhisattva Vows in Tibetan

Content:

Dorje Shedrub said:

Does anyone know where I can find the Bodhisattva Vows and or ceremony for giving the vows in Tibetan script?

Malcolm wrote:
You mean the one HHST gave yesterday?

I am not sure of the text he used.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 10th, 2021 at 11:34 PM

Title: Re: Sanskrit term prajñājīvaka (shes rab kyis 'tsho ba)

Content:

sphairos said:

Hello everyone, I am looking for usages and contexts of the terms prajñājīva, prajñājīvaka, prajñājivika, Tibetan shes rab kyis 'tsho and shes rab kyis 'tsho ba

Malcolm wrote:
The term is defined in the Udānavargavivaraṇa:

ཤེས་རབ་ཀྱིས་འཛོལ་ཞེས་བྱ་བ་ལ། ཤེས་རབ་ནི་དེ་བཞིན་ཉིད་ཤེས་པ་སྟེ། ངས་འཛོལ་ནི་འཛོལ་བཞིན་དུ་གང་ལ་ཡོད་པ་དེའོ།

Vasubandhu's Sūtrālaṃkāra commentary gives:

ཤེས་རབ་འཛོལ་སྟོན་པ་སྟེ། ཤེས་བྱ་བ་ལ། ཤེས་རབ་ཀྱིས་འཛོལ་བར་བྱེད་པ་དང་སེམས་ཅན་ལ་ཚོས་སྟོན་པར་བྱེད་པ་གཉིས་ནི་ལས་ཡིན་ཏེ།
འཇིག་རྟེན་ནི་ཚོང་དང་ཁིང་ཚོང་པ་ལ་སྟགས་པས་ལྷས་རྣལ་ཅན་གྱི་སྟག་མི་འཆད་པར་འཛོལ་བར་བྱེད་མོད་གྱི། དེ་དག་ལས་ཤེས་རབ་ཀྱིས་འཛོལ་ནི་འཛོལ་བ་སྟོན་པ་མེད་པ་སྟེ།
སྟོན་པ་མེད་པའི་བྱང་ཆུབ་ཏུ་འཆད་ཆུ་བའི་དག་བའི་རྩ་བའི་སྟག་མི་འཆད་པར་བྱེད་པའི་ཕྱིར་རོ།

It's pretty straightforward.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 11th, 2021 at 1:27 AM

Title: Re: The three vows, and how there observed together across Schools.

Content:

The Mantra Mongoose said:

I actually have read through Kongtrul's ethics. He does explain the three vows pretty thoroughly, but he really doesn't talk about how there differentiated across the different schools.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, he does. He summarizes and reconciles the apparent contradictions between all four schools at the conclusion of his discussion.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 11th, 2021 at 1:28 AM

Title: Re: The three vows, and how there observed together across Schools.

Content:

The Mantra Mongoose said:

I'm wondering if reading Sakya Pandita's a clear differentiation of the three vows would help give me a clearer picture?

Malcolm wrote:

Probably not. But it is one of the great works of Tibetan Buddhism, both for its incisive critiques and for its wit and humor.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 11th, 2021 at 1:55 AM

Title: Re: Sanskrit term prajñājīvaka (shes rab kyis 'tsho ba)

Content:

sphairos said:

Hello everyone, I am looking for usages and contexts of the terms prajñājīva, prajñājīvaka, prajñājīvika, Tibetan shes rab kyis 'tsho and shes rab kyis 'tsho ba

Malcolm wrote:

The term is defined in the Udānavargavivaraṇa:

ཤེས་རབ་ཀྱིས་འཛོལ་ཞེས་བྱ་བ་ལ། ཤེས་རབ་ནི་དེ་བཞིན་ཉིད་ཤེས་པ་སྟེ། དེས་འཛོལ་ནི་འཛོལ་བ་བཞིན་དུ་གང་ལ་ཡོད་པ་དེའོ།

Vasubandhu's Sūtrālaṃkāra commentary gives:

ཤེས་རབ་འཛོལ་བ་སྟོན་པ་སྟེ། ཤེས་བྱ་བ་ལ། ཤེས་རབ་ཀྱིས་འཛོལ་བར་བྱེད་པ་དང་སེམས་ཅན་ལ་ཚས་སྟོན་པར་བྱེད་པ་གཉིས་ནི་ལས་ཡིན་ཏེ།
འཇིག་རྟེན་ནི་ཚོང་དང་ཁིང་མོད་པ་ལ་སྐྱེས་པས་ལུས་རྒྱལ་ཅན་གྱི་སྤྲུལ་མི་འཆད་པར་འཛོལ་བར་བྱེད་མོད་ཀྱི། དེ་དག་ལས་ཤེས་རབ་ཀྱིས་འཛོལ་ནི་འཛོལ་བ་སྟོན་པ་ལས་སྟེ།
སྟོན་པ་ལས་ཤིང་བྱེད་ཆུབ་ཏུ་འཆད་ཆུ་བའི་དག་བའི་རྩ་བའི་སྤྲུལ་མི་འཆད་པར་བྱེད་པའི་བྱིར་རོ།

It's pretty straightforward.

sphairos said:

But the definition doesn't say anything which is not already clear from the term itself.
Prajñā as a knowledge of tathatā doesn't explain anything.

Vasubandhu's bhāṣya I already quoted in full. The Tibetan is only slightly different.

Malcolm wrote:

You can search the term at BDRC, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 11th, 2021 at 4:01 AM

Title: Re: Looking for Bodhisattva Vows in Tibetan

Content:

Dorje Shedrub said:

Does anyone know where I can find the Bodhisattva Vows and or ceremony for giving the vows in Tibetan script?

Malcolm wrote:

You mean the one HHST gave yesterday?

I am not sure of the text he used.

Dorje Shedrub said:

Lama Lena gave them on Sunday to a private group. She was just asking for a copy in Tibetan as she misplaced hers. I can't find any online in Tibetan. Do you know where I might find a copy of the vows in Tibetan script?

Malcolm wrote:

https://www.tbrc.org/#library_work_ViewByOutline-O1GS601137712%7CW23703

https://www.tbrc.org/#library_work_ViewByOutline-O1GS601137713%7CW23703

This is Candragomin's text on the bodhisattva vows.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 11th, 2021 at 4:24 AM

Title: Re: Milarepa (split topic)

Content:

dzoki said:

Also Gamgopa quotes dzogchen teachings in his recorded (by written notes) lectures to his students, so if Milarepa was of the opinion that dzogchen teachings were ineffective, I doubt that Gampopa would continue teaching them.

Malcolm wrote:

Not only this, but Gampopa himself sought out the teachings of Klong sde from Dzeng Dharmabodhi, with whom he exchanged teachings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 11th, 2021 at 5:21 AM

Title: Re: Milarepa (split from: Are there tertons at Gelug School?)

Content:

dzoki said:

Just to add, the idea of terma is not exclusive to Nyingma lineage...

Malcolm wrote:

It is not even exclusive to Tibetan Buddhism. All Mahāyāna scriptures, sūtras and tantras are termas by definition.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 11th, 2021 at 5:22 AM

Title: Re: The three vows, and how there observed together across Schools.

Content:

The Mantra Mongoose said:

I'm wondering if reading Sakya Pandita's a clear differentiation of the three vows would help give me a clearer picture?

Malcolm wrote:

Probably not. But it is one of the great works of Tibetan Buddhism, both for its incisive critiques and for its wit and humor.

The Mantra Mongoose said:

Interesting, I always wanted to read his works ,because of how faithful he is said to be to the Tantras and there practice. From the little I've read on him I find myself aligning with the way he exegetes the Indian masters.

Malcolm wrote:

He's pretty rough on Kadampas, Kagyus, and Nyingmapas in this text.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 11th, 2021 at 6:04 AM

Title: Re: The three vows, and how there observed together across Schools.

Content:

The Mantra Mongoose said:

In your opinion are his criticisms warranted towards the other Schools? Do you feel he represents the Tantras as understood by the Indian Panditas faithfully?

Malcolm wrote:

He represents a specific view of a certain set of Indian Panditas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 11th, 2021 at 8:27 PM

Title: Re: Milarepa (split topic)

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

...Dzogchen comes from India...

yagmort said:

Malcolm, i must be confusing things but didn't you say something to the effect that dzogchen surfaced in tibet circa 11th century with creation of 17 tantras ? could you elaborate on indian origins of dzogchen?

Malcolm wrote:

The 17 tantras were revealed in the early 11th century, but the sems sde and klong sde lineages are Kama, not terma, and date from their introduction to Tibet in the mid 8th century by Vairocana.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 11th, 2021 at 9:45 PM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

Passing By said:

Should have added, from the POV of the highest capacity people. After all, cig carwa don't actually spend ages in formal thogal per se if the accounts are to be believed

Crazywisdom said:

I don't know what Bonpos say but thogal visions are not the same as ordinary experiences. The former are wisdom appearing whereas the latter are samsaric. The one taste sameness etc is sort of discarded and wisdom appearances given precedence because of the swiftness of the path.

Passing By said:

They say the same thing actually. About the need to purify external appearances through thogal etc.

But then I have no idea where cig carwas fit in. They don't actually carry out the yogic exercise of thogal so do they just instantly wind up in the 4th vision or are they basically in trekcho 24/7...?

Malcolm wrote:

Trekcho starts with the exhaustion of dharmata, that's the point.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 12th, 2021 at 12:24 AM

Title: Re: Terma practices in the Sakya school

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The Gonpo Chamdral and the Karmanathas were received by Sachen from Mal Lotsawa, who in turn received the terma tradition from Lotsawa Rinchen Zangpo. So, no this was not some thing that entered Sakya later. It was in Sakya from early 12th century, beginning with the third throne holder, Sachen Kunga Nyingpo.

Volan said:

They view these termas as mahayoga, anuyoga or atiyoga? How do they include these teachings into the school's tantric framework? Sakya Pandita Kunga Gyaltsen was famous for criticizing Dzogchen and as far as i know,

Malcolm wrote:

The eight deity Mahakala tradition is rooted in mahayoga.

Sapan lightly criticized some perspectives about Dzogchen in Three Vows, but in Illuminating the Intent of the Muni, he recognizes Atiyoga as the pinnacle of the nine vehicles, indicating that his criticism of the nine yānas was limited to claims about the nine yānas having different views.

Volan said:

these termas from Nyang that, as you have mentioned are practiced in the Sakya tradition since the 14th century, are associated with the nine yana Nyingma system and this Guru Drakpo might be associated with Dzogchen. Doesn't that contradict the views of the earlier patriarch?

Malcolm wrote:

The Sakya masters did not reject Dzogchen. They rejected certain interpretations of Dzogchen. At the present time, His Holiness Sakya Trichen, His Holiness Sakya Trizen, all accept and teach cycles related to Dzogchen, like the King's Tradition of Avalokiteśvara from the Mani Kabum, Chime Phagma Nyingthig, The Termas of Apam Terton, etc. Not only this, but the Nyangral Guru Dragmar is included in the Collection Of All Sādhana, along with some other termas, like the Lama Gongdu, also criticized by Chak Lotsawa. But Chak Lotsawa also criticized Chod and Zhijey, both of which are accepted systems now in all schools.

Finally, the Khon Brothers did not "stop" the Nyingma lineage. That's ridiculous and offensive. In fact, the reading transmission for the five early Dzogchen lungs of Vairocana was preserved by Khon Konchog Gyalpo and passed on by him.

One of the gurus of Khon Konchog Gyalpo was Tanak Gö Lotsāwa, who transmitted the Guhyasamaja cycle to him. Je Tsongkhapa mentions him as one of the three main figures in transmitting Guhyasamaja in Tibet (the other two are Lhodrak Marpa and Rinchen Sangpo). Gö Lotsāwa was famous for critising the authenticity of some of the Nyingma tantras and Sakya Pandita also admitted that there are a lot of fabricated tantras in nyingma ("Reply to the Translator from Chak" in the "A Clear Differentiation of the Three Codes"). Gorampa includes the following nyingma tantras that were composed by Tibetans: Kun byed rgyal po; the mDo dgongs 'dus; the Zhi khro sgyu 'phrul; the Lha mo'i skyis rgyud; the Bam ril thod mkhm; the sNang brgyad, the Las dge sdig bstan pa, and others. You can see the famous dzogchen tantra in that list.

Yes, Go Lotsawa was also famous for being extremely jealous of Drokmi and criticizing him harshly, even though Drokmi was by far the better translator, so they say. Having read Go's text, it is not a very impressive critique, and is not supported by the Gongma. For example, Go claims that Ma Rinchen Chok composed the Guhyagarbha, but Jetsun Drakpa Gyaltsen defends its authenticity. Go accuses Nubchen of forging the five lungs of Vairocana, but we know that Khon Konchok Gyalpo was instrumental in passing the transmission of these texts onward, and texts like the Cuckoo of Vidyā are found in Dunhuang. Sapan mentions that he received Dzogchen teachings, and one of his most important students, Gyalwa Yangonpa, was famed for claiming his realization came from Dzogchen.

The Gelukpas accept the Tārā Tantra, whose authenticity is disputed by Ngorchen. Kalacakra was rejected by Rendawa. The Nyingmapas such as Rokben were skeptical of the mother tantras with their new-fangeled cakras and nadis, and so on.

Further, you do realize that the Nyingma Shri Heruka (aka Yangdak) and Hevajra are the same deity, correct?

With the same iconography, mantras, sadhanas, etc?

The retinue is the same, but this was stated by HH Sakya Trichen when I first received the Hevajra Empowerment from him.

And, as evidence of the respect with which the Terton Nyangral was held, the Indian Paṇḍita, Śākya Shribhadra, conducted the funerary arrangements for Nyangral.

You have mentioned that Tsangnyon Heruka cannot be trusted for details, have to say that modern scholars view the Terton Nyangral as one of the biggest fabricators of the Tibetan history.

That's an exaggeration. But in any case, Nyang's history was one of the first of its kind in Tibet, it has its deficits, but then, so do all pre-modern Tibetan accounts of the imperial period.

BTW, the first work in the Lhasa edition of Tsongkhapa's collected works is a work on Dzogchen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 12th, 2021 at 1:10 AM

Title: Re: Becoming a monastic

Content:

GrapeLover said:

Come to think of it, there is a secondary samaya not to stay among shravakas for more than seven days. Taking this literally and straightforwardly, it could seem to apply to this. No particular problem in terms of the bodhisattva vows as far as I'm aware though.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, Atisha changed his residence once a week to avoid this downfall.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 12th, 2021 at 4:02 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I'll again post this anarchist critique of veganism:

<https://theanarchistlibrary.org/library/peter-gelderloos-veganism-is-a-consumer-activity>

Malcolm wrote:

Veganism = first world privilege, that is, dietary choices. Many people in the world have little choice in their diet, and given the choice, will always choose meat.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 12th, 2021 at 5:28 AM

Title: Re: Does anyone here agree with Jay Garfield that Nagarjuna was a "robust realist" and...

Content:

jeremyfisher said:

Nagarjuna is refuting both existence and non-existence whilst asserting "reality" free from these extremes (i.e. emptiness).

Malcolm wrote:

No. Emptiness also is not real.

jeremyfisher said:

What this shows is that "existence" is a limited of perception of reality rather than reality itself.

Malcolm wrote:

You can't show "reality" itself. There is no "reality" itself to show.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 12th, 2021 at 9:19 AM

Title: Re: Origins of Great Perfection, Trauma and Disociation

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This persons understanding of the Dzogchen tradition is very superficial and incomplete, both in terms of its history and its meaning.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 12th, 2021 at 10:18 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

PeterC said:

We're way past the possibility of prevention. Mitigation to some degree is possible, but the real focus of the next half-century will be adaptation - humanity adapting to an increasingly hostile living environment. For example, many countries will become substantially (at least economically) unviable as places for large populations to live.

Virgo said:

Humans can't really adapt to those conditions and maintain civil society. In the beginning, yes, but a few decades out.. I doubt it very much.

Virgo

PeterC said:

Agree. Some regions will largely shut down. Others will become chronically overpopulated, unstable and autocratic.

Malcolm wrote:

Move north. Above the 45th parallel.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 12th, 2021 at 10:41 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

I think it would be very easy for Indians to be vegan. Apparently 95% of traditional Indian food is already vegan, according to Arvind the Animal Activist. So India could be an exception to this "veganism is for the first world" idea.

Malcolm wrote:

Indians are hardly vegan, and their cuisine shows a rich variety of dishes prepared with many kinds of meat. Even Indians who are vegetarian are lacto-vegetarians who eat substantial quantities of milk products.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 12th, 2021 at 10:49 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

kirtu said:

Russia and China may yet come to their senses and restructure their energy production rapidly but I wouldn't hold my breath.

Malcolm wrote:

Russia won't, they are a petrol state. For them, global warming is a boon, since it opens up the Arctic Ocean for drilling.

China would like to, because 50 years of rapid industrialization has poisoned their country, to about where we were in 1960, with flammable rivers and so on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 12th, 2021 at 10:50 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Queequeg said:

When hillbillies realize they can power up their atvs with renewable sources, solar panels, wind turbine on the hill above their hollow, a little hydro electric turbine on the creek running behind their house, we will see the tipping point. As it is, republican ranchers are realizing all that land is good for wind farms, another source of income. The indications are that the tipping point is closer than farther. The only question is will it be enough?

Malcolm wrote:

Two more things that are killing the planet: bitcoin and indoor weed farms.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 13th, 2021 at 12:18 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

End of an era:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 13th, 2021 at 2:13 AM

Title: Re: Rebirth

Content:

clyde said:

Could it be that we have post-mortem rebirth wrong? Backwards?

Could it be that upon death ordinary sentient beings directly experience the Primordial Clear Light and without the body as a 'karmic anchor' are overwhelmed and their consciousness is blown away?

Malcolm wrote:

No. Why? Well, afflictions are what drive rebirth in samsara, even up to the seventh bodhisattva bhumi.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 13th, 2021 at 2:45 AM

Title: Re: Rebirth

Content:

clyde said:

It's my understanding that all sentient beings directly experience the Primordial Clear Light at death and that the afflictions are 'burned off' (that is, the afflictions cannot survive the Primordial Clear Light) and therefore, the afflictions cannot be the cause of post-mortem rebirth.

Malcolm wrote:

Your understanding is incorrect. Where did you get this idea? Certainly not from any reliable Tibetan Buddhist text or teacher.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 13th, 2021 at 3:06 AM

Title: Re: Rebirth

Content:

clyde said:

Is my understanding that all sentient beings directly experience the Primordial Clear Light at death wrong?

Is my understanding that the afflictions cannot exist with the Primordial Clear Light wrong?

Malcolm wrote:

As for your first question, yes, all beings experience so-called mother luminosity at the time of death. But if they have not practiced a path, so-called child luminosity, they will not recognize the mother, and so the mother and the child do not meet.

As for your second question, the experience of luminosity itself is insufficient to eliminate afflictions. One has to recognize and remain in that luminosity.

Luminosity is already the nature of your mind, so it is quite clear that luminosity does not eradicate afflictions. Only insight has that power.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 13th, 2021 at 4:05 AM

Title: Re: Rebirth

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Well, afflictions are what drive rebirth in samsara, even up the the seventh bodhisattva bhumi.

Sādhaka said:

Ah, then that's why Arhats would—as I've seen claimed—start out on the Eighth Bhumi once they're eventually roused by Bodhisattvas from their temporary Nirvana, that is because they have already eliminated the emotional afflictions; yet still have mental obscurations (?)

Malcolm wrote:

But they don't. They start at the beginning of the Mahāyāna path of accumulation, and it still takes them three incalculable eons to gather the two accumulations, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 13th, 2021 at 4:16 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Queequeg said:

But what would I know about this stuff?

Malcolm wrote:

We could ask your wife, she knows where all the skeletons are buried.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 13th, 2021 at 10:03 AM

Title: Re: Rebirth

Content:

clyde said:

Is my understanding that all sentient beings directly experience the Primordial Clear Light at death wrong?

Is my understanding that the afflictions cannot exist with the Primordial Clear Light wrong?

Malcolm wrote:

As for your first question, yes, all beings experience so-called mother luminosity at the time of death. But if they have not practiced a path, so-called child luminosity, they will not recognize the mother, and so the mother and the child do not meet.

clyde said:

My point is that a sentient being not familiar with the “so-called child luminosity” is unprepared at death for the direct experience of the “so-called mother luminosity” and having no refuge is overwhelmed; while a practitioner familiar with the “so-called child luminosity” recognizes the “so-called mother luminosity” and may be able to maintain awareness for rebirth. As for your second question, the experience of luminosity itself is insufficient to eliminate afflictions. One has to recognize and remain in that luminosity. While an experience of the “so-called child luminosity” is not sufficient to eliminate all afflictions, the direct experience of the “so-called mother luminosity” is not possible with afflictions. Luminosity is already the nature of your mind, so it is quite clear that luminosity does not eradicate afflictions. Only insight has that power. Yes, luminosity is omnipresent, but direct experience isn't.

Malcolm wrote:

You are mixing apples and oranges. Rebirth is specifically driven by so-called “throwing karma.”

And you are mistaken concerning the ability of afflicted minds to be able to directly experience mother luminosity, which is an experience free from extremes. One must be able to point this out to people with afflicted minds, otherwise there is no path.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 13th, 2021 at 9:17 PM

Title: Re: Does anyone here agree with Jay Garfield that Nagarjuna was a "robust realist" and...

Content:

jeremyfisher said:

Emptiness is also empty yes, but for it to be of any benefit there must be a means of understanding it.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, that is the purpose of conventional truth.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 13th, 2021 at 9:18 PM

Title: Re: Does anyone here agree with Jay Garfield that Nagarjuna was a "robust realist" and...

Content:

Vajrasvapna said:

The emptiness itself is a product, as a concept, of causes and effects so it is also emptiness of cause and effect.

Malcolm wrote:

Emptiness is not a product. Emptiness itself is uncompounded, like space.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 13th, 2021 at 9:20 PM

Title: Re: Does anyone here agree with Jay Garfield that Nagarjuna was a "robust realist" and...

Content:

jeremyfisher said:

He is demonstrating its nature through negation of wrong views. Whether this is an assertion is debatable - the Nyingma take your view that it isn't an assertion. The Gelug view it as assertion not through positive construction of an argument but a "double negation".

Malcolm wrote:

No, they don't. They understand emptiness to be a nonaffirming negation only.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 13th, 2021 at 9:57 PM

Title: Re: Rebirth

Content:

clyde said:

No doubt an afflicted mind can experience the "so-called child luminosity" and that the afflictions ("throwing karma"?) drive moment-to-moment rebirth.

Malcolm wrote:

"Throwing karma" is responsible for propelling one into the next world. It has no function in this life.

You are mistaken about the mother and child luminosities. Mother luminosity is experienced at the moment of falling to sleep, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 13th, 2021 at 9:59 PM

Title: Re: Rebirth

Content:

clyde said:

It's my understanding that all sentient beings directly experience the Primordial Clear Light at death and that the afflictions are 'burned off' (that is, the afflictions cannot survive the Primordial Clear Light) and therefore, the afflictions cannot be the cause of post-mortem rebirth.

GrapeLover said:

In such a case all beings would be liberated after a single life and there would be no need for a path

In the traditional view, ordinary beings remain essentially unconscious during the bardo of clear light and regain consciousness in the bardo of becoming. Their mindstream, karma and afflictions remain intact

clyde said:

Yes and no. The Bodhisattva Path is needed and noble because the Bodhisattva understands reality and can avoid rebirth, but chooses to return to a world of suffering with the intention to end all suffering for all sentient beings - here and now.

Malcolm wrote:

Only bodhisattvas above the seventh bhumi can avoid rebirth. That's why those bhumis are called the "pure." Bodhisattvas have no control over rebirth on the impure bhumis, other than the fact they never take birth in the three lower realms.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 14th, 2021 at 12:18 AM

Title: Re: Does anyone here agree with Jay Garfield that Nagarjuna was a "robust realist" and...

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

No, they don't. They understand emptiness to be a nonaffirming negation only.

jeremyfisher said:

A few quotations to the contradictory:

Malcolm wrote:

I was referring to the Gelug point of view, where emptiness is solely a non-affirming negation of inherent existence, and that's it. Citing Mipham and portions of Dzogchen tantras is irrelevant.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 14th, 2021 at 12:22 AM

Title: Re: Does anyone here agree with Jay Garfield that Nagarjuna was a "robust realist" and...

Content:

Vajrasvapna said:

The emptiness itself is a product, as a concept, of causes and effects so it is also emptiness of cause and effect.

Malcolm wrote:

Emptiness is not a product. Emptiness itself is uncompounded, like space.

jeremyfisher said:

Are you not constructing a positive definition of Emptiness by describing it as being "like space"? If not, are you suggesting space has independent existence or "essence"?

Is the concept of space one with the senses and the aggregates, a product of sense and the aggregates or completely apart from sense and the aggregates?

If it is the former two then have you not taken a position opposite to what you have previously claimed?

If it is the latter then are you saying space has independent existence?

Malcolm wrote:

Emptiness, like space, does not arise. It's a simile.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 14th, 2021 at 1:08 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Virgo said:

This a great video with some good comments by James Hansen on nuclear power, renewables, carbon fees, and some other topics. May all beings be happy.

Virgo

Malcolm wrote:

I am pretty skeptical about nukes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 14th, 2021 at 1:59 AM

Title: Re: Does anyone here agree with Jay Garfield that Nagarjuna was a "robust realist" and...

Content:

Vajrasvapna said:

The emptiness itself is a product, as a concept, of causes and effects so it is also emptiness of cause and effect.

Malcolm wrote:

Emptiness is not a product. Emptiness itself is uncompounded, like space.

Vajrasvapna said:

The concept of emptiness is a product of cause and effect.

Malcolm wrote:

The concept of emptiness is not emptiness, per se. It is termed the "categorized ultimate," and as such, is only a conventional truth. So that emptiness is not the emptiness realized by āryas.

Vajrasvapna said:

And my answer is in relation to the teaching of Nagarjuna. In the Nagarjuna method, the idea is only to reduce to the absurd, as a method of argumentation, instead of making positive statements about the absolute nature. So all beings and phenomena neither exist nor exist, neither both nor one of the two.

Malcolm wrote:

Nāgārjuna's intent is not solely to reduce opponent arguments to absurdities. If this were all he was interested in, Nāgārjuna's Madhyamaka would have no value and would be mere sophistry.

Instead, Nāgārjuna's project is correct deviations from a proper understanding of dependent origination. This is made clear in the maṅgalaṃ of the MMK.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 14th, 2021 at 3:04 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

I am pretty skeptical about nukes.

Virgo said:

Interesting. Even the newer nuclear technology he mentions in the video (for which the R&D has largely been cut since the Clinton administration)?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, in general. In my opinion, there is no safe nuclear technology.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 14th, 2021 at 4:36 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

a bonobo grabbed a chipmunk that had run into its containment area and big its head off.

Malcolm wrote:

snacktime.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 14th, 2021 at 5:21 AM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

Virgo said:

Well at least they don't make you use that app that sends them location data from your phone.

Malcolm wrote:

They won't need that app once they install nanotrackers in everyone through the vaccine.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 14th, 2021 at 8:42 AM

Title: Re: Does anyone here agree with Jay Garfield that Nagarjuna was a "robust realist" and...

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Nāgārjuna's intent is not solely to reduce opponent arguments to absurdities. If this were all he was interested in, Nāgārjuna's Madhyamaka would have no value and would be mere sophistry.

Instead, Nāgārjuna's project is correct deviations from a proper understanding of dependent origination. This is made clear in the maṅgalaṃ of the MMK.

tobes said:

Indeed. And this is why it is wrong to say that Nagarjuna is not making assertions. This can be conflated with: not making assertions about ultimate reality.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, all Madhyamikas make all kinds of conventional assertions and—gasp—even use syllogisms. What they don't do is make any ontological commitments.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 14th, 2021 at 10:21 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

Here's a case-study on the transition for you. It's working well in Australia and that means it can work well for all the US except perhaps the biggest cities.

<https://reneweconomy.com.au/australias-big-fossil-fuel-generators-are-being-replaced-by-big-batteries/>

Malcolm wrote:

In the case of the US, it's not working very well.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 16th, 2021 at 12:17 AM

Title: Re: Can Samsara be Emptied? Should this motivate practice?

Content:

Virgo said:

Is there supposed to be a post from Malcolm in this thread just before tkp67's last post (the post before this one) which tkp67 made at » Mon Mar 15, 2021 11:56 am (EST)?

Because when I open this thread, I don't see it.

Virgo

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, I said to our friend, tkp67 that aspirations, like dedications, made mindful of the three spheres, are inexhaustible.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 16th, 2021 at 1:07 AM

Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis

Content:

bryandavis said:

Lopön Malcom,

Exhaustion of dhatmata is the unfolding of the 4th vision no? Trekcho begins at this juncture?

Malcolm wrote:

Trekcho is related to the basis. All phenomena have always been exhausted in the basis. For this reason, Trekcho starts with the exhaustion of dharmatā, since it is not related to appearances.

bryandavis said:

So with this explanation Trekcho is a primordial aspect or vidya of knowing the union of kayak/lhundrup before a cracked vase so to speak.

Malcolm wrote:

When practicing trekcho, one cannot find any phenomena to be exhausted. If one can find something to be exhausted, one is not practicing trekcho, and one will be unable to make any progress in thogal.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 16th, 2021 at 2:26 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Queequeg said:

Oh, Christ. Who is it? The Rothschilds? The Bilderberg Group? Oh, wait the Illuminati.

There's no plan. There's no one in charge. We're just stupid.

Nemo said:

Rich people give you one party to vote for.

"This is a ruthless dictatorship. I am oppressed.

Rich people give you 2 parties to vote for.

"This is freedom. I have power over my destiny now. Thank you rich people."

Malcolm wrote:

At least they gave us a vote. In Canada, you don't get even that much. All you get to vote for is an MP. Your senate is picked by a representative of the Queen. I'll take our Presidential system over your Parliamentary system any day of the week.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 16th, 2021 at 3:51 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Nemo said:

Rich people give you one party to vote for.
"This is a ruthless dictatorship. I am oppressed.
Rich people give you 2 parties to vote for.
"This is freedom. I have power over my destiny now. Thank you rich people."

Malcolm wrote:
At least they gave us a vote. In Canada, you don't get even that much. All you get to vote for is an MP. Your senate is picked by a representative of the Queen. I'll take our Presidential system over your Parliamentary system any day of the week.

Nemo said:
I make no claims of either being particularly democratic. It's almost like the system we live under was created by a freshly deposed aristocracy trying to quietly hold onto power and hoping we wouldn't notice. Do you think perhaps global warming and nuclear proliferation support this crazy hypothesis?

Malcolm wrote:
No. There is no evidence that human beings, beyond the level of hunter-gatherers, are capable of living in a civilization which is anything other than wholly destructive to their environment. And even hunter-gatherers can wreck an ecosystem pretty systematically. I am not saying we shouldn't try to escape this madness, but I don't see much hope. Political systems are not the solution.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, March 16th, 2021 at 4:08 AM
Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis
Content:

Crazywisdom said:
It's the appearance of wisdoms which has all perfected qualities.

Malcolm wrote:
You mean those qualities are not complete if those wisdoms don't appear?

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, March 16th, 2021 at 4:46 AM
Title: Re: Rongzom Chökyi Zangpo's understanding of Buddhahood and Gnosis
Content:

Crazywisdom said:
It's the appearance of wisdoms which has all perfected qualities.

Malcolm wrote:

You mean those qualities are not complete if those wisdoms don't appear?

Crazywisdom said:

Not what I am saying.

Malcolm wrote:

Then what are you saying?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 16th, 2021 at 9:53 AM

Title: Re: Online Buddhist Education

Content:

Queequeg said:

It would be nice to see courses that start with absolute baby steps...

Malcolm wrote:

That's what Tricycle and Lion's Roar's domain.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 16th, 2021 at 11:39 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Well there are certainly Buddhist tales from the Sutras of Pure Lands where Buddhas lived for kalpas,

Malcolm wrote:

You don't live in Sulhavati. This Sahaloka is Śākyamuni's buddhafiield, and it is not a pure buddhafiield [cue smart aleck response from someone about passage in Vimalakīrti Nirdeśa]

Könchok Chödrak said:

and had Pure Lands where everything was mellow for the world, and seemingly for the environment

Malcolm wrote:

You don't live in one of those.

Könchok Chödrak said:

. If you believe in the Buddhist Sutras and where they come from, then maybe if we work together as Buddhists we can create a good world again. I mean, what is the purpose of Buddhism, and who can steward this world?

Malcolm wrote:

There isn't a single sūtra where the Buddha promises if we just all work together as good Buddhists, we can make the world a better place. Not one.

Why do you think there are pure buddhafiels like Sukhavati? The Sanskrit name for this world system is Sahaloka, the world that is hard to bear.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 17th, 2021 at 12:30 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

In Buddhist Sutras and Teachings has it been unheard of on Earth? There is an understanding that we are in Kali-Yuga, what about Satya Yuga?

Malcolm wrote:

In the Satya Yuga there is no need for the Dharma, so it really does not appear. The Dharma only appears when there is sufficient suffering among human beings to warrant the advent of a buddha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 17th, 2021 at 12:42 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Nemo said:

Perhaps the system itself is the problem?

Malcolm wrote:

The system is inseparable from its members. So the members are the problem, not the system.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 17th, 2021 at 12:43 AM

Title: Re: Aparimitāyur-jñāna-hṛdaya-dhāraṇī

Content:

Marenz said:

Does anyone know if this requires lung to recite?

Malcolm wrote:

It does not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 17th, 2021 at 1:18 AM

Title: Re: Aparimitāyur-jñāna-hṛdaya-dhāraṇī

Content:

Marenz said:

Does anyone know if this requires lung to recite?

Malcolm wrote:

It does not.

Losal Samten said:

Padma-Kriya is fine in general?

Malcolm wrote:

Buddha and Padma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 17th, 2021 at 1:39 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

In Buddhist Sutras and Teachings has it been unheard of on Earth? There is an understanding that we are in Kali-Yuga, what about Satya Yuga?

Malcolm wrote:

In the Satya Yuga there is no need for the Dharma, so it really does not appear. The Dharma only appears when there is sufficient suffering among human beings to warrant the advent of a buddha.

Könchok Chödrak said:

I'm thinking, isn't the Dharma an active thing? Are there not many Buddhas in Satya Yuga, and that is why it is so flourishing? Yes, the Dharma is a cure for an ailment, but Buddha also means life. Amida Buddha's Pure Land, for example, has no suffering, but there must be Dharma there! And Satya Yuga is a cyclical Yuga, it comes, stays for some long time, but then there has been a degradation again, so there are these cycles. The living beings in Satya Yuga must meditate into the future to see their future births and see how they can help suffering humanity, or at least prepare themselves for lives in the subsequent Yugas if they are Bodhisattvas, willing to be reborn to help the suffering. I have heard Thich Nhat Hanh say in a Dharma talk that there must even be suffering in the Spiritual World [a World beyond this material manifestation], but I personally believe that there can be Dharma without suffering, and that Buddhas can create Pure Lands anywhere. Despite decline in society, we must understand that decline is not perpetual due to hopelessness. There will be a renewal again, because of the Flower of the Dharma, because of Buddhists like you. You may be one, but there are many like you!

And what are you doing if not making the world a better place and only that? Eventually, there will be so many such people that humanity will begin to solve its problems, but sadly there may be a great decline before that happens, yet, such a sadness is not set in stone. It is possible for Earth's climate to be saved if people work together. What is the reason and meaning for Buddhahood? If everyone was a Buddha there wouldn't even be a Saha world, and the Earth itself would be liberated from any burden!

Malcolm wrote:

I did not say there was no Dharma in Sukhavati. I said that during a golden age, on this world, there is no advent of a buddha. You seem to have forgotten that the Buddha himself predicted the decline and disappearance of his Dharma, and the next buddha will be Maitreya, but not for millions of years.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 17th, 2021 at 4:44 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Nemo said:

The system created by frightened monarchs...

Malcolm wrote:

Monarchs do not rule without the consent of the governed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 17th, 2021 at 8:28 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Aemilius said:

Yugas exist in Hindu (and Theosophical) scriptures and theory, in Buddhism we have different kalpas.

Malcolm wrote:

We also have the four yugas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 17th, 2021 at 8:30 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Nemo said:

The system created by frightened monarchs...

Malcolm wrote:

Monarchs do not rule without the consent of the governed.

kirtu said:

Monarchs rule without the consent of the governed in any non-democratic system:

Malcolm wrote:

This is not so. All kings derive their power from the people and are fools because they forget this, according to Aryadeva.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 17th, 2021 at 9:31 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Aemilius said:

Yugas exist in Hindu (and Theosophical) scriptures and theory, in Buddhism we have different kalpas.

Malcolm wrote:

We also have the four yugas.

This is principally mentioned in the Saddharmasmṛty-upasthāna sūtra, and tantra such as the Heruka-abhyudaya.

It is mentioned numerous times Indian Buddhist literature, such as the Bodhisattvāvadānakalpalatā, Buddhacarita, Saṃskṛtāsaṃskṛtaviniścaya, and several tantric commentaries, especially on the Kālacakra, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 17th, 2021 at 9:49 PM

Title: Re: Self Defense

Content:

Ardha said:

The point, ultimately, is that I don't think watching or enjoying such sports is in line with being a Buddhist or the path...

Malcolm wrote:

Agreed. I don't watch boxing, etc.

But I enjoy watching fantasy martial arts, even gritty, bloody stuff like Warrior.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 17th, 2021 at 10:07 PM

Title: Re: Self Defense

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

How presumptuous it is for us western Buddhists to sit upon the throne of one's own opinions and declare what is or is not appropriate for someone else whose cultural norms may be completely different from one's own.

Malcolm wrote:

Cultural relativism? Where does that end?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 17th, 2021 at 11:33 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Nemo said:

On a good day I hope the core of the empire crumbles quietly, but that seems unlikely.

Malcolm wrote:

Empires collapse slowly. The rapid collapse of the Aztecs and Incas were anomalies.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 17th, 2021 at 11:41 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

kirtu said:

Monarchs rule without the consent of the governed in any non-democratic system:

Malcolm wrote:

This is not so. All kings derive their power from the people and are fools because they forget this, according to Aryadeva.

kirtu said:

It is so, even though Aryadeva is also correct.

It is factual that in those countries and in several others a minority can rule - in one of those countries the majority vote can be overturned (as happened five times) - in the worst of the list (USA, Russia, Mainland China, North Korea) a single family seems to be propped up as the ruler although assassination of other members of that family has happened, in the second country on the list autocratic rule has been the norm since at least 1450 and in the 3rd country on the list, while they have had some input from the people historically they mostly ignored and oppressed most input outside the immediate Imperial and late Nationalist Communist system (and of course purged people within that system). These countries form a continuum but are nonetheless representative of places where monarchs in some form can or do rule without the consent of the governed.

Malcolm wrote:

All of the citizens of all of these countries, apart from dissidents, cooperate with and support their governments.

kirtu said:

In most of those countries a breaking point may come under some as yet unknown situation and the governed rise up in some way. However these countries have been functioning for hundreds or thousands of years like this so I wouldn't hold my breath (the youngest one for 244 years).

Malcolm wrote:

The fact that the governed do not rise up merely supports my point. The American Revolution was an anomaly. Most people in the Colonies, outside of New England, either did not support the Army of the Revolution or were indifferent to British rule. That war was largely fought by New Englanders with officers largely drawn from the pool of officers who were in the British Army during the French-Indian War, like Washington.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 18th, 2021 at 12:07 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

kirtu said:

It is so, even though Aryadeva is also correct.

It is factual that in those countries and in several others a minority can rule - in one of those countries the majority vote can be overturned (as happened five times) - in the worst of the list (USA, Russia, Mainland China, North Korea) a single family seems to be propped up as the ruler although assassination of other members of that family has happened, in the second country on the list autocratic rule has been the norm since at least 1450 and in the 3rd country on the list, while they have had some input from the people historically they mostly ignored and oppressed most input outside the immediate Imperial and late Nationalist Communist system (and of course purged people within that system). These countries form a continuum but are nonetheless representative of places where monarchs in some form can or do rule without the consent of the governed.

Malcolm wrote:

All of the citizens of all of these countries, apart from dissidents, cooperate with and support their governments.

kirtu said:

No, there is real suppressed opposition in two of these countries for sure. In one of them opposition is severely throttled. In the other people are declared not to be people anymore and sent to concentration camps and can be used as targets on a firing range (really). So there is a continuum and there are degrees of support but in two of them this is completely irrelevant, in one it is mostly irrelevant and in the other it is also mostly irrelevant but does have the possibility of some change at the ballot box.

Kirt

Malcolm wrote:

No, it is never irrelevant. History shows us that oppressive regimes like North Korea have limited lifespans. In fact, NK's longevity owes a great deal to the posture of the US towards it and China's use of it as a buffer state (which NK resents).

But we have examples of South Africa where the people rose up, and deposed the regime there. Why? Because there were not sufficient numbers of whites to continue the system of apartheid, and also the whites were turning against it as well.

When governments use systematic violence against their own people, even if they manage to last 50 or 100 hundred years, eventually the people will rise up against them. History shows this time and again.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 18th, 2021 at 12:42 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Nemo said:

The problem is when a Bernie Sanders shows up in a colony the CIA kills him or puts him in prison.

Malcolm wrote:

Waxing a little paranoid there? Bernie Sanders is alive and well in the US Senate, not a blacksite in Egypt.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 18th, 2021 at 2:00 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Nemo said:

Isn't it they do until the day they don't? The problem is climate change, nukes and autonomous drones make the fall of the US empire possibly an extinction event. I'm thinking more Easter Island if you guys don't hurry up and die/reform/become socialist

Malcolm wrote:

Socialism in the US is not going to solve climate change. Socialism is a system of capital relations. No, really, the only thing that will "save" the climate is a major human die-off event, a reduction of the world population of humans to one billion people, circa 1800, or death or absence of reproduction of 85 out of 100 people and the maintaining that as the ideal world population.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 18th, 2021 at 2:21 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

kirtu said:

No, there is real suppressed opposition in two of these countries for sure. In one of them opposition is severely throttled In the other people are declared not to be people anymore and sent to concentration camps and can be used as targets on a firing range (really). So there is a continuum and there are degrees of support but in two of them this is completely irrelevant, in one it is mostly irrelevant and in the other it is also mostly irrelevant but does have the possibility of some change at the ballot box.

Kirt

Malcolm wrote:

No, it is never irrelevant. History shows us that oppressive regimes like North Korea have limited lifespans. In fact, NK's longevity owes a great deal to the posture of the US towards it and China's use of it as a buffer state (which NK resents).

But we have examples of South Africa where the people rose up, and deposed the regime there. Why? Because there were not sufficient numbers of whites to continue the system of apartheid, and also the whites were turning against it as well.

When governments use systematic violence against their own people, even if they manage to last 50 or 100 hundred years, eventually the people will rise up against them. History shows this time and again.

kirtu said:

It is mostly or completely irrelevant when the lifetime of people and the span of oppression overlap. Oppressive regimes have limited lifespans. The US has a lifespan of 244 years and was and still is oppressive in varying degrees to some of it's population.

Malcolm wrote:

Oppressions which are being dealt with, slowly and systematically. But most people in the US consent to being governed by our government.

kirtu said:

We could examine this historically and we would have to conclude that many people experienced complete oppression during the entirety of their lifetime and this went on for generations. In the case of the United States it eased up on oppression at multiple points in it's history and sometimes clamped down again later. It's historical thrust is toward democracy, which is likely to happen at some point after my death. Nonetheless it is not guaranteed.

Malcolm wrote:

No, but it argues against your case.

kirtu said:

In the case of the other countries, two of them also experienced differences in their oppression. In the case of North Korea, a change in government/society could be rapid but this can also not be predicted.

But this is the issue wrt climate change: forces in the US, Russia and China are blocking any effective action to addressing climate change at the exact moment in history that the problem was identified and it's seriousness was also recognized. So if all three nations change in 50 years, it will be much too late to address the problem (and it's already 40 years later than it should have been).

Malcolm wrote:

Oh, its already too late.

kirtu said:

So, yes, 50-100 years generally wipes away the current oppression - but this is 2 to 3 full generations of people enmeshed in direct oppression - and particular moments in history matter much more than others. 1980-2100 are CRUCIAL in moving the planet to a livable future trajectory and we aren't responding to the challenge.

Malcolm wrote:

No, the changes we have wrought on our environment are irreversible, sans a complete and global reorientation around energy use, food supply, access to technology, etc. We have to figure out how to live in this altered environment we have created. And as it stands, authoritarianism will increase over the short term, not decrease, because people in authoritarian countries prefer it to the uncertainties of democracy. Russia and China both prove this.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 18th, 2021 at 2:34 AM

Title: Re: Self Defense

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Additionally, when people have a one-dimensional view of what martial arts and combat sports due to a lack of knowledge and/or experience with it, their critique of it is bound to be limited, at best.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 19th, 2021 at 8:48 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Aemilius said:

Yugas exist in Hindu (and Theosophical) scriptures and theory, in Buddhism we have different kalpas.

Malcolm wrote:

We also have the four yugas.

Aemilius said:

I haven't seen the yugas in a Buddhist Sutra or an Abhidharma text,

Malcolm wrote:

See my reply above. I posted the names of a sutra which contains the Kali Yuga, as well as some tantras.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 19th, 2021 at 8:56 PM

Title: Re: Yangzab Shitro

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

There is no single Yangzab Zhitro practice. That is not how it works.

There is an outer, inner, and secret peaceful deity sadhana, and an outer, inner, and secret wrathful deity sadhana.

Also the mantras are not the same as the Zhitro everyone is familiar from the Karma Lingpa, etc.

There is a manual on how to combine the mandalas in order to give the empowerment.

Danny said:

Agree with Malcolm on this.

There's phowas related to 3 kayas, as for the 100 peaceful wrathful vajrasattva shitro, reading karma

Lingpas termas would be beneficial in general, but practice and lineage specific concerns,

(If that's your thing) your gonna have to squeeze the empowerer for clarity.

lelopa said:

Ok, but we received a single shitro-practice which doesn't exist.

Malcolm wrote:

Can you send me the link? I have received this empowerment from Ontul Rinpoche. I looked in the eight volume collection of Yangzab texts, but did not see a combined shitro sadhana.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 19th, 2021 at 9:46 PM

Title: Re: Combining Bodhisattva Precepts / Vows

Content:

Dharmasherab said:

I have seen that there are a few sources of Bodhisattva Vows/Precepts. While there is significant overlap I also did notice that there are some differences between the sets of Precepts/Vows. So for my own practice I thought of combining them and then making effort to follow them in their entirety so that I don't miss out on anything (meaning that I won't be committing Bodhisattva offenses without knowing them).

I am sure that there is nothing wrong with this.

Malcolm wrote:

If someone has received the Madhyamaka tradition of Bodhisattva vows, that is sufficient. There is no need to mix them with the Yogacara system. But of course, one can observe both traditions, since they are not in contradiction.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 20th, 2021 at 1:51 AM

Title: Re: Yangzab Shitro

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Can you send me the link? I have received this empowerment from Ontul Rinpoche. I looked in the eight volume collection of Yangzab texts, but did not see a combined shitro sadhana.

ratna said:

Here's the link: <https://gardrolma.org/product/the-concise-yangzab-shitro/>
It's a short sadhana by Lho Nuden Dorje from his Utpala'i phreng ba, a compilation of short Sarma and Nyingma sadhanas.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, so comparatively modern, which is why it does not show up in the earlier collections.

M

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 20th, 2021 at 2:57 AM

Title: Re: Info on Rinjung Gyatsa Empowerment

Content:

Volan said:

According to HH 14th Dalai Lama, Phabongkha Rinpoché was authorized by The Thirteenth Dalai Lama as his substitute in the role of mahayana and vajrayana teacher because of a lack of time due to his responsibilities as a politician. You can read this in his "Biography of Kyabjé Ling Rinpoché".

Malcolm wrote:

That was in 1926, but by 1930, the relationship between the two had degenerated: Pabongkha's relationship with the Thirteenth Dalai Lama was complex and may have eventually suffered due to Pabongkha's faith in Dorje Shugden. The one-volume Lhasa edition of The Melodious Voice of Brahma notes an exchange of letters that took place between the Dalai Lama and Pabongkha around 1930. In the final letters of this exchange the Dalai Lama chastises the lama for his propitiation of Shugden and the spread of the practice at Drepung Monastery which appeared to displease the protector Nechung (gnas chung). Pabongkha replied to the letter saying he only propitiated Shugden as he was the protector of his maternal lineage, and that he henceforth promises to give up the practice. It is clear, however, from the dates given in the colophons of his Shugden-works that Pabongkha's propitiation of Shugden continued after 1930.

https://treasuryoflives.org/biographies/view/Pabongkha-Dechen-Nyingpo/TBRC_p230

It appears that Pabongkha did not keep up his promise.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 20th, 2021 at 3:08 AM

Title: Re: Info on Rinjung Gyatsa Empowerment

Content:

PeterC said:

You're saying that that's the reason why extant lineages in Gelug often run through him?

HH13DL had some harsh words for PDNr for what he got up to in Kham. Their relationship had some tensions.

Malcolm wrote:

The reason all these lineages run through him is that Pabhongkha was the principle guru of Ling Rinpoche and Trijang Rinpoche, and they in turn were the principle gurus of a whole generation of Gelukpas in exile. But Ling Rinpoche never received this practice from Pabhongkha. There are lines of Gelugpa transmission in Amdo that do not run through Pabhongkha. The later Kirti Tsenshab never had any involvement with the Pabhongka stream, as far as I understand things, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 20th, 2021 at 3:10 AM

Title: Re: Asian grandmother fights back after racist attack in San Francisco

Content:

coldbeer said:

World is getting more and more sick.

Malcolm wrote:

Actually, it used to be much worse in terms of personal violence between individuals.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 20th, 2021 at 4:49 AM

Title: Re: Info on Rinjung Gyatsa Empowerment

Content:

Volan said:

It seems that this cleared away his doubts about Pabongka's authenticity and Pabongka was authorized as his substitute.

Malcolm wrote:

Apparently, the Great 13th continued to have doubts about Pabhongka.

Volan said:

When Kyabje Pabongka Rinpoche was giving teachings in Chutsang, the Lam Rim teaching you have in the Liberation in the palm..., the Thirteenth Dalai Lama issued an order that, as there was a drought in Lhasa and his flowers in the Norbu Lingka palace could die,

Malcolm wrote:

The teachings that were to be turned into Liberation in the Palm of One's Hand were taught in 1921, nine years before the falling out between the Great 13th and Pabhongkha.

Funny, you severely critized terma and Dzogchen in another thread, but here you are relying on the authority of the Great 13th to prop up Pabhongkha. Surely, you must know that the Great 13th not only was the main patron and student of Tertön Sogyal, a.k.a Lerab Lingpa, but also a Dzogchen practitioner.

In any case, it must have dawned on you by now that most of the Tibetan Buddhists here are either Nyingma, Sakya, or Kagyu, and as such, whether you think it is fair or not, most of us consider Pabhongkha to be irredeemably sectarian. Therefore, we wouldn't touch a lineage coming through him with a ten foot pole.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 20th, 2021 at 4:53 AM

Title: Re: Arhats and Bodhisattvas

Content:

Seeker12 said:

It's sometimes said that an arhat corresponds to an 8th Bhumi Bodhisattva, or that an arhat can enter the Mahayana and basically they start at the 8th Bhumi or will very quickly get there, or similar things.

Malcolm wrote:

No, this is a mistaken view. If this were the case, the three incalculable eons necessary for buddhahood in sūtrayāna could be bypassed by attaining arhatship.

But it does not work like that. First, the emptiness realized by arhats is only the emptiness of the person, not of phenomena, and not of the emptiness of the four extremes.

Gorampa Sonam Senge addresses all these issues in his Differentiation of Views. You can look there.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 20th, 2021 at 4:55 AM

Title: Re: merigar gumpa

Content:

naljor said:

Hello, is there any list of masters depicted in Merigar gumpa?

Malcolm wrote:

There is, but it is in the book, the Temple of Great Liberation:

<https://www.ssi-austria.at/shop/products/books/books-in-english/books-chnn/public-books-chnn-in-english/chogyal-namkhai-norbu-the-temple-of-great-liberation-the-gonpa-of-merigar.html>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 20th, 2021 at 8:08 PM

Title: Re: merigar gompas

Content:

Arnoud said:

Do you know why Rinpoche chose Tuscany as his base? I love Italy and wonder if there were more spiritual reasons to locate there besides the vineyards and nice way of living.

Malcolm wrote:

His students found the place.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 20th, 2021 at 8:25 PM

Title: Re: Asian grandmother fights back after racist attack in San Francisco

Content:

Queequeg said:

Oh christ. Stfu.

Brunelleschi said:

That's a bit unnecessary. If I was out of line, I apologize.

Queequeg said:

Online, its hard to tell where someone is coming from. Your reference to some random set of statistics is so far off target that it comes across as gas lighting.

One of the issues that is now being highlighted in the recent wave of anti-Asian hate crimes is that in the past, the public conversation led by the media has deflected the racist attitudes towards Asians and rationalizes it as something else. So, when you bring up some random statistic about violent crime in the US to say there is no problem, you are either absolutely clueless and really should not be speaking up, or you are something worse.

This thread itself took that turn, shifting the subject to some more general remarks about violent crime in the US.

Its a complicated issue. In general, people don't take Asians in the US seriously. Model minorities that can be ignored. And then layer on the screwed up views of Asian women as sex objects and men as effeminate bit characters or martial arts fighters. Cultural stoicism is taken as weakness and a basis to relegate Asians to an afterthought. The second and third generation Asians are not as stoic and are now speaking up. We will see what changes, if anything.

<https://www.nytimes.com/2021/03/18/nyregion/asian-hate-crimes.html>

Malcolm wrote:

Pointing out a reduction in violent crime shines a spotlight on this kind racially motivated violence, not the opposite.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 20th, 2021 at 8:29 PM

Title: Re: Arhats and Bodhisattvas

Content:

Seeker12 said:

It's sometimes said that an arhat corresponds to an 8th Bhumi Bodhisattva, or that an arhat can enter the Mahayana and basically they start at the 8th Bhumi or will very quickly get there, or similar things.

Malcolm wrote:

No, this is a mistaken view. If this were the case, the three incalculable eons necessary for buddhahood in sūtrayāna could be bypassed by attaining arhatship.

But it does not work like that. First, the emptiness realized by arhats is only the emptiness of the person, not of phenomena, and not of the emptiness of the four extremes.

Gorampa Sonam Senge addresses all these issues in his Differentiation of Views. You can look there.

Seeker12 said:

In the Sutra "Introduction to the Domain of the Inconceivable Qualities and Wisdom of the Tathāgatas" the following is a description of the arhat retinue present for the Sutra:

" They all were established in the true, quintessential nature of all phenomena. They abided without support or foundation in the sphere of space. They had cast aside the deeply ingrained obscuration of the afflictive emotions. They possessed the knowledge of how to enter into the spheres of conduct and wisdom of the omniscient ones. They engaged in the conduct of the bodhisattvas. They were established in a method that revealed the dharmadhātu of all the tathāgatas. They were immersed in the single Dharma method. They had approached omniscience. They were unswerving on the path of omniscience; their minds never turned away from omniscience. Their minds were established in understanding and wisdom. They had perfected the wisdom and insight of omniscience. Their methods and conduct had become steadfast.

The Buddha was also accompanied by sixty-two thousand nuns, including Mahāprajāpatī and Yaśodharā. They, too, had amassed virtuous qualities and were approaching the wisdom of omniscience. They were established in a method that revealed omniscience. They had realized the nonsubstantiality of all phenomena. They were established in the signlessness of all phenomena. They understood the true nature of all phenomena. They were convinced that all phenomena are unproduced, unceasing, and beyond oppositional factors. They were established in inconceivable liberation and meditative absorption. They manifested, spontaneously and nonconceptually, in shapes, bodies, colors, and modes of conduct that were perfectly suited to all the sentient beings to be trained.”

That certainly seems like insight into the twofold emptiness to me, given phrases like “They had realized the nonsubstantiality of all phenomena.”

If we take this Sutra to be authentic, then is it that these initial disciples were basically just Bodhisattvas masquerading as arhats? If so, then which arhats are arhats that are not Bodhisattvas masquerading as arhats? Who are these sravaka arhats that only have the 1/2 insight into emptiness if it was not the initial sravaka disciples?

Malcolm wrote:

They engaged in the conduct of the bodhisattvas.

These arhats were all bodhisattva arhats, not shravaka arhats.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 20th, 2021 at 10:11 PM

Title: Re: Info on Rinjung Gyatsa Empowerment

Content:

jmlee369 said:

an aside, what should we think of Sakya Pandita's criticisms of other traditions?

Malcolm wrote:

We think that unlike Dechen Nyingpo, Sapan never opined that anyone was going to hell for having views with which he disagreed. Indeed, he invited open investigation of his critiques.

Frankly, the Anti-Nyingma sentiments of Pabhongka and his circle of intimates is hardly news, being well documented and available for anyone to read who has an interest in history.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 20th, 2021 at 11:10 PM

Title: Re: Arhats and Bodhisattvas

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

These arhats were all bodhisattva arhats, not shravaka arhats.

Seeker12 said:

So were all of the initial disciples of the Buddha Bodhisattvas? What about the second generation, or third? Where/who are the non-Bodhisattva arhats?

Malcolm wrote:

A number of them were.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 21st, 2021 at 4:35 AM

Title: Re: Arhats and Bodhisattvas

Content:

Seeker12 said:

So were all of the initial disciples of the Buddha Bodhisattvas? What about the second generation, or third? Where/who are the non-Bodhisattva arhats?

Malcolm wrote:

A number of them were.

Seeker12 said:

According to the BDK lotus sutra, it seems all of the initial ones were, see below.

So then, the initial arhats were all Bodhisattvas so the rhetoric of them being only in possession of 1/2 insight into emptiness would not apply.

It would then, perhaps, only apply to some of those after the time of the Buddha who do not properly understand, but even they are destined for full awakening as a Buddha and will immediately understand properly when they meet a Buddha. Is that about right? If so, that would make me personally curious to understand such individuals.

Malcolm wrote:

I am not sure we can all the initial arhats were Mahāyāna bodhisattvas, but certainly Śāriputra, Ananda, etc. were, according to Mahāyāna tradition. On the other hand, Śāriputra is often set up to look like a dummy in many Mahāyāna sūtras.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 21st, 2021 at 10:24 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

kirtu said:

SA_Jacobson_2009.jpg

Written on the eve of the 2009 Copenhagen climate summit

<http://www.solaripedia.com/files/399.pdf> showed how a rigourously researched pathway to power the world with 100% renewable energy by 2030 was possible, pdf
The article concluded:

"A large-scale wind, water and solar (WWS) energy system can reliably supply the world's needs, significantly benefiting climate, air quality, water quality, ecology and energy security...As we have shown, the obstacles are primarily political, not technical...(leaders) can start by committing to meaningful climate and renewable energy goals now".

It is true that Jacobson's plan has some criticism but his case has largely been made.

Kirt

Malcolm wrote:

The problem isn't the science and technology, as you know well, it never has been. The problem is politics and policy. Whatever you make think of Gore, had he been elected, things would have been different, but ironically, Ralph Nader and the Green Party contributed significantly to Gore's conceding the election to Bush.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 21st, 2021 at 10:26 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

DNS said:

Here's a new vegan video just released by a Buddhist. It's not as loud or angry as the one linked here earlier.

Sunrise said:

What industry does to these sentient beings, even in better treatment farms, is just nauseating.

Malcolm wrote:

Samsara.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 21st, 2021 at 10:59 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

DNS said:

A little more than halfway through, he put up some interesting statistics:

About 36% of Buddhist teachers are vegetarian. About 9% are vegan for a total of about 45% vegetarian/vegan.

About 21% of Buddhist practitioners (laypeople) are vegetarian while only 0.01% are vegan.

I've always guessed it was around 50% thus, the controversy and sometimes heated debates among Buddhists.

Malcolm wrote:

This tension has been in the Dharma since the beginning.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 21st, 2021 at 11:07 AM

Title: Re: Asian grandmother fights back after racist attack in San Francisco

Content:

coldbeer said:

Racism and hatred have been in the hearts of Americans long before Trump. The whole country was built on the genocide of Natives by white Europeans.

Malcolm wrote:

Yup, my ancestors among them.

And of course, slavery. 1492 and 1617.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 21st, 2021 at 9:30 PM

Title: Re: Able to awaken to our innate Buddha-nature through our actual practice?

Content:

narhwal90 said:

I don't know- seems a legitimate question to me. We don't need to use Nichiren's medieval accent and pronunciation, we don't need to pronounce daimoku in the same dialect or accent as Sakyamuni- or how Nagarjuna might have. Traditionally, we can use any western version of the Japanese pronunciation. If dialect and accent don't matter, what makes the words magic? Will pronouncing the title in english work? If not, why not. If its that the meaning of the words we recite matters then an english pronunciation should work, but coca-cola- being a distraction from the contemplation of the sutra- should not.

tkp67 said:

The basis for myoho renge kyo is shakya-muni buddha's enlightenment as described in the lotus sutra. He is the world honored one. To deny the cause and effect of his buddhahood is to destroy the seeds of one's own enlightenment.

Making your own point of reference is just that. Trying to examine it from a position of doubt will never reveal the true nature of reality.

However there are more complexities to the chant itself.

Malcolm wrote:

Assuming awakening means the realization of the emptiness of causes and effects, including the causes and effects of buddhahood, the question being asked here is how chanting the title of the Lotus Sutra results in the realization of emptiness more effectively than any other practice. In other words, how is chanting this title a more efficient cause for realizing emptiness than say practicing zazen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 21st, 2021 at 11:08 PM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

DNS said:

A little more than halfway through, he put up some interesting statistics:

About 36% of Buddhist teachers are vegetarian. About 9% are vegan for a total of about 45% vegetarian/vegan.

About 21% of Buddhist practitioners (laypeople) are vegetarian while only 0.01% are vegan.

I've always guessed it was around 50% thus, the controversy and sometimes heated debates among Buddhists.

Malcolm wrote:

This tension has been in the Dharma since the beginning.

DNS said:

Yes, apparently so. The Buddha instructed the monks to consume what is placed in the bowl, no matter if vegetarian or not, but was not very specific for lay people, thus, the controversy and debates. And then of course there was Devadatta, who wanted vegetarianism to be compulsory along with some other ascetic practices and the Buddha rejected the list.

The best book (in my opinion) that fairly discusses both sides is this one by Ven. Dhammika. He takes an unbiased, objective account for both sides.

pdf link:

https://www.google.com/url?sa=t&rct=j&q=&esrc=s&source=web&cd=&ved=2ahUKEwjKkcyuz8HvAhXTG80KHSS7AoQQFjAAegQIAxAD&url=http%3A%2F%2Fwww.fairfun.net%2Fmy3%2Fpanna_my%2Fb%2520buddhism%2FPDFe-Books%2FToEatOrNotToEatMeat-Dhammika.pdf&usg=AOvVaw0Aki1I5xvuh6Eno-jO5VT0

If the link doesn't work, just google:

To Eat or Not to Eat Meat Ven. Dhammika

Malcolm wrote:

Very clearly, when the Buddha lived, most people in India regularly consumed fish and poultry.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 22nd, 2021 at 12:23 AM

Title: Re: If You Eat Meat You Are Not a Kagyupa - Karmapas and strict vegetarianism

Content:

Queequeg said:

Why stop at animals we like to eat?

Malcolm wrote:

Some animals are food, some animals are not, and this is culturally determined. Also the Buddha determined in Vinaya what kind of meat is acceptable.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 22nd, 2021 at 1:36 AM

Title: Re: Asian grandmother fights back after racist attack in San Francisco

Content:

karmanyipgo said:

We can't get rid of the fact that Trump was president and spread words of vitriol and stupidity among the people

Malcolm wrote:

Trump has weaponized white demographic anxiety. The objects of that anxiety are Liberals, BLM, Antifa, and anything that can be put in the "Other" box.

Yes, all that bias was there already, but it took someone to weaponize for political gain. Well, the GOP has been weaponizing racism since Nixon, but now the demographics are starting to fail so-called "white people." This has happened before in our country many times, but we included formerly excluded groups in the white column (Irish, Jews, Italians, Greeks) and expanded the "white" demographic as these latter groups entered the middle class.

Thus, this is all about racial myth, privilege, and combatting threats to that privilege.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 22nd, 2021 at 2:22 AM

Title: Re: rebirth and veganism

Content:

clayde said:

This is a sincere question but touches on two sensitive topics: rebirth and veganism.

What living organisms are reborn after death? Or if it's simpler to answer, what living organisms aren't reborn after death?

Most Buddhists would answer "human beings" and more broadly "sentient beings" or "animals". But there is scientific controversy about sentience and whether plants have sentience; so are plants reborn? And there is scientific controversy whether single-celled organisms which are neither plant nor animal are sentient; so are single-celled organisms reborn? And regarding animals, do they need to have a nervous system to be reborn?

Malcolm wrote:

The classical Indian Buddhist position is that plants are not considered sentient.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 22nd, 2021 at 6:51 AM

Title: Re: How does intersubjective interaction work in Mahayana Buddhism?

Content:

Cool-team said:

All Mahayana Buddhism believes that all phenomena, including other persons, are made of mind.

Each mindstream experiences reality constructed by mind itself.

Malcolm wrote:

Ummmm, no.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 22nd, 2021 at 8:27 PM

Title: Re: How to decarbonize your life.

Content:

Queequeg said:

One set of questions I've had the last few years is about what we, as a family, could do to reduce our carbon footprint and have a more ecologically sound lifestyle in general.

Malcolm wrote:

I think we need to go with silicon-based lifeforms from now on...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 22nd, 2021 at 8:30 PM

Title: Re: Able to awaken to our innate Buddha-nature through our actual practice?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Assuming awakening means the realization of the emptiness of causes and effects, including the causes and effects of buddhahood, the question beings asked here is how chanting the title of the Lotus Sutra results in the realization of emptiness more effectively than any other practice. In other words, how is chanting this title a more efficient cause for realizing emptiness than say practicing zazen.

tkp67 said:

Well Nichiren's perspective was that the daimoku was not just the title of the sutra. Based on the attributes Nichiren identified the true benefit of chanting daimoku is true lotus meditation.

Malcolm wrote:

That's fine. So, the question is how does that help one realize emptiness, eliminate afflictions that cause rebirth, and so on? Why is it more effective than all the other teachings of the Buddha? For example, why is it more effective than zazen, keeping in mind that in Japanese monasteries of the Soto Tradition, passages from the Lotus are included in their daily recitations?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 23rd, 2021 at 4:06 AM

Title: Re: rebirth and veganism

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Perhaps plants don't or ignorance, or the capability to become enlightened... who knows!

I'm willing to bet that modern science and buddhism don't have the same definitions of sentience and consciousness. If we're using the word, what are the assumptions behind it?

cjdevries said:

I believe that in some forms of Taoism, they accept plants as part of the reincarnation cycle. I have heard teachers say that many of us had past lives as plants and even minerals. I know of highly developed healers who have directly communicated with mineral spirits.

SilenceMonkey said:

That's very interesting. I know of shamans who practice with plant spirits in the amazon, but I've never heard of minerals. Every now and then you hear of great bodhisattvas inhabiting mountains... Do you mean crystals or rock?

Seeker12 said:

Yeah, I think this is generally the standard interpretation, that basically beings can inhabit plants, rocks, etc, as a sort of abode, but the abode is not itself necessarily in-and-of-itself sentient. And so for example in monastic precepts, one should not carelessly cut plants, uproot them, etc, any more than someone should perhaps burn down someone's house. Even if burning down someone's house isn't the same as killing them. Basically.

SilenceMonkey said:

Perhaps this is because the plants may be a home for animals?

cjdevries said:

A healer told me that when she was meditating in the mountains, one of the rock spirits started to communicate with them. She couldn't believe it was happening at first, but she said it was very clear that it was real. After that, she completely changed her perception of what was alive and what wasn't.

Malcolm wrote:

Spirits that live in trees, springs, etc., are one thing; claiming that trees, springs, etc., are sentient is quite another thing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 23rd, 2021 at 9:17 AM

Title: Re: rebirth and veganism

Content:

cjdevries said:

I agree that it seems far-fetched that rocks could be sentient, but I just found this article from ananda that said Paramahansa Yogananda had talked about being a diamond in a past life. I know this is a Buddhist website, but I feel that this perspective could at least be food for thought: <https://www.ananda.org/ask/from-minerals-to-humans-the-story-of-reincarnation/>

Malcolm wrote:

Hindus have a different idea about reincarnation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 23rd, 2021 at 9:33 PM

Title: Re: If You Eat Meat You Are Not a Kagyupa - Karmapas and strict vegetarianism

Content:

Queequeg said:

Does the corpse have a lingering connection to the deceased? This practice of benefiting requires a connection.

Malcolm wrote:

The connection is made if the practitioner has the ability rest in rig pa. Otherwise, for the sentient being in question, there is no benefit.

Meat, wool, leather, hooves, bones, etc., don't suffer. So as long as there is no participation through killing, witnessing, etc., i.e., the meat is pure in three ways, there is no fault in eating it and so no misdeed. The humanitarian, economic and climate issues are of a different order, and are not necessarily reflected in individual choices.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 24th, 2021 at 3:58 AM

Title: Re: the great vegetarian debate

Content:

DNS said:

Monks practicing in the Mahayana tradition eat only vegetarian foods, adhering to the diet of Devadata...

Malcolm wrote:

Chinese monks, primarily. Most of the Tibetan Mahāyāna monks eat meat.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 24th, 2021 at 5:18 AM

Title: Re: the great vegetarian debate

Content:

DNS said:

Monks practicing in the Mahayana tradition eat only vegetarian foods, adhering to the diet of Devadata...

Malcolm wrote:

Chinese monks, primarily. Most of the Tibetan Mahāyāna monks eat meat.

DNS said:

I noticed that too. That's a common assumption made by some Theravadins (Mahapajapati is a Theravada bhikkhuni monastery). Not all Mahayana schools advocate vegetarian diets, in fact, it's probably just a minority number of schools, mostly being Chan and some Zen schools.

Malcolm wrote:

In fact, though some people assume it is an ipso facto Mahāyāna position, Mahāyānīs such as Bhavaviveka make the argument that as long as the meat is pure in three ways, there is no fault. You will note that that the strongest admonitions against eating meat come from the Yogacāra and Tathāgatagarbha sūtras.

Bhavaviveka recognizes that meat eating is mentioned by the Buddha in Tathāgatagarbha and Yogacāra sūtras, but he clearly considers these admonitions by the Buddha not to be in contradiction with the principle of three-fold purity. He insists that the point of the Buddha was making was not to personally engage in harming animals, because of the Buddha's love for all sentient beings.

He makes the point that there is no mind in dead meat, so there can be no suffering caused by eating that meat. He also dispenses with the idea that meat is impure food, as opposed to milk, etc. He also rejects the idea that eating meat implicitly involves one in killing, pointing out if this is so, then those who wear leather, etc., are also killers, etc.

He also rejects the idea that plants are sentient:

Plants are not sentient because they are not included within the four types of birth.

The four types of birth are apparitional, heat and moisture, egg, and womb birth. There is no "seed," "rhizome," or "spore" birth.

So this controversy boils down to those Mahāyānīs who follow Madhyamaka and those follow Yogacāra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 24th, 2021 at 5:29 AM

Title: Re: Arhats and Bodhisattvas

Content:

avatamsaka3 said:

Could this be referring to the Buddha Himself as a type of Arhat?

He is described that way in the Pali sources. But, of course, he is not just an arhat.

Still don't know what a bodhisattva arhat is.

Malcolm wrote:

A Buddha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 24th, 2021 at 9:57 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Well I don't mind this kind of debate, it's what keeps an aspect Buddhism going. It just has to be done with the proper context. I honestly don't want to start an argument about it, I just wish people would listen to each other more and tell the truth, because one day the mountain will crumble if we're not careful, and someone may be left avalanched underneath. This is serious Dharmic stuff.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no self, nor is there a soul that is anything more than a verbal convention for something that has never existed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 24th, 2021 at 8:53 PM

Title: Re: If You Eat Meat You Are Not a Kagyupa - Karmapas and strict vegetarianism

Content:

Queequeg said:

my five year old daughter doesn't want to eat meat because she just thinks its mean. if equanimity, kindness and great compassion are all that different from that, then I think something has gone wrong.

At this point in life, it just seems people overthink things. maybe I've devolved into a simpleton. maybe I need to learn the great thaumatological secrets.

frankly, your way seems too complicated.

tobes said:

Yes, to be honest I think there is a very big difference between the sentiments of a five year old and the actual realisations of mahakaruna. There is nothing is secretive about this, it is actually a matter of humility to recognise that having bodhicitta properly take stock in our mindstream is an incredible accomplishment. And it is rare. And it is all too easy to conflate this with mere virtuous sentiments and wishful thinking.

Queequeg said:

Nonsense. Mahakaruna is unacquired. It is coextensive with all beings and expresses as our selfless impulses - the love and concern of a parent for a child, the pull of empathy. That's not to say its untainted and undeveloped. Its not a difference of kind but difference of cultivation. Bodhicitta, too, is unacquired. If it was not there to begin with, it could not be manifest.

Malcolm wrote:

Mahakaruna is free of all references, but it begins with the development of regular old karuna. You are essentializing something that is not an essence and has no essence.

Bodhicitta is born out of compassion, it's not an intrinsic quality of sentient beings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 24th, 2021 at 8:55 PM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

frankie said:

"There is no self, nor is there a soul that is anything more than a verbal convention for something that has never existed."

Woohoo! gonna save me loads of money on needing to clothe and feed the non-existent self from now on. No need to keep it warm, educated, take it to dharmawheel...not even any need to be careful crossing the road lest it take the risk of a non-existent bus passing through the non-existent self, etc, etc, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

So, you think your body is a "self?"

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 24th, 2021 at 10:26 PM

Title: Re: rebirth and veganism

Content:

Giovanni said:

This is clearly untrue. One bag of rice equals many thousands of dead plants plus the weeds and other plants plus dead worms etc.

Malcolm wrote:

Plus all the feather meal used to fertilize rice, etc., in growing all that organic produce for vegans.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 24th, 2021 at 10:44 PM

Title: Re: If You Eat Meat You Are Not a Kagyupa - Karmapas and strict vegetarianism

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

You are essentializing something that is not an essence and has no essence.

Queequeg said:

I'm not. Ordinary karuna has no essence in the same way. I'm just exchanging views through this imperfect medium.

Malcolm wrote:

You said:

Mahakaruna is unaquired...Bodhicitta, too, is unacquired. If it was not there to begin with, it could not be manifest.

To say that something is not acquired is to claim it is innate. To claim something is innate is to claim it is a nature.

Bodhicitta is the desire to attain awakening. Mahāyāna bodhicitta is the desire to attain full buddhahood for the benefit of all sentient beings. Claiming that bodhicitta is innate or unacquired is a strange claim. This is not the same as the so-called prakṛtīgotra, natural disposition. Natural disposition means simply that we have a mind, and that mind can become inspired to desire awakening when it meets with proper conditions to develop Mahāyāna bodhicitta. But Mahāyāna bodhicitta is by no means innate, and neither is mahākaruna, the compassion which is absolutely free of reference points. A mother's compassion is very much a referential compassion.

Mahākaruna and bodhicitta are both acquired. How? Through training. If they were unacquired, as you claim, no training would be needed to develop them, but this is clear not the case.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 24th, 2021 at 11:00 PM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

frankie said:

I imagine you already know the answer to that.

For my pennyworth: There is of course the notion of the relative self that, due to flux and dependent arising, can also be seen from that position as being not self-empty, and full of morphing potentiality at the absolute level. Seen in this manner, relative 'self' and absolute nature are simultaneously two sides of the same coin.

Malcolm wrote:

It is precisely because of impermanence and dependent origination that a so-called "self" is just a conventional expression.

The term "self" is used to designate the parts of a person as a collection. But there is no self in a person, no person in a self, not person or self in an individual, and no such thing as individual, that is to say, an entity that can bear division and analysis.

Likewise, there is no soul.

The term "absolute nature" is also something which is just an abstraction, without pointing to anything real.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 24th, 2021 at 11:02 PM

Title: Re: Translations of the Lotus Sutra - which is suitable for beginners?

Content:

Queequeg said:

Tibetans in general don't think much of the Lotus Sutra. (See <https://tricycle.org/magazine/greater-awakening/>; Then there is <https://youtu.be/9qqGE8ZulAg>) In East Asia it is possibly the most influential text.

Brunelleschi said:

I know there was a project translating the Tibetan version of Lotus Sutra. I donated to the project but I don't know how its faring...

I personally really like the Lotus Sutra and have a copy of it, along with the excellent Reading the Lotus Sutra by Teiser & Stone (2009). I mean, many (all?) Sutras proclaim themselves as the superior teaching. Which, in a sense must be true, otherwise the Buddha would be breaking the precepts of not lying - which is impossible.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://read.84000.co/translation/toh113.html>

This is the best translation into English yet. The introduction and textual analysis by Peter Alan Roberts alone is worth its weight in gold.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 24th, 2021 at 11:29 PM

Title: Re: Able to awaken to our innate Buddha-nature through our actual practice?

Content:

Minobu said:

look at timestamps

Malcolm wrote:

Follow the plan.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 25th, 2021 at 12:17 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

frankie said:

Intellectually speaking, using the poverty of only partially able words to point out reality - I make you right. I talk about both practical real-life contingency there, and also the dangers of swinging between polarities.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no danger there. We use the convention "car" to use a collection of parts, none of which is a car, to get from point a to point b. We generally try to avoid wrecking said parts. The same applies a body.

frankie said:

For all practical reasons you definitely relate to the relative 'self' called Malcolm and enjoy taking that collective to do whatever you like to do with it and all it's wondrous thoughts and concepts.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, but you must understand, I was responding to someone else's assertion of a truly existent soul. Context is king.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 25th, 2021 at 2:24 AM

Title: Re: If You Eat Meat You Are Not a Kagyupa - Karmapas and strict vegetarianism

Content:

Queequeg said:

Please feel free to conclude what you want about my views.

Malcolm wrote:

At this point, on this point, my conclusion is that your contention was not well thought out.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 25th, 2021 at 2:26 AM

Title: Re: If You Eat Meat You Are Not a Kagyupa - Karmapas and strict vegetarianism

Content:

Könchok Thrinley said:

I'd hate to derail the thread but does anyone have anything about Karma Chagme and vegetarianism, or why tsok in Drikung is mostly vegetarian?

GrapeLover said:

Karma Chakme's "Comprehensive Critique of Meat" is available in the book "The Faults of Meat" by Geoffrey Barstow.

Here is the conclusion:

For all these reasons, the best option is to perform the holy act of relinquishing all meat. When you perform a ritual feast, use meat with threefold purity in order to guard your samaya. At that time, it is very important simply to not reject meat, alcohol, or dough. Eat only a little, however, an amount equivalent to the leg of an insect. The middle option is to give up meat that was slaughtered for your own sake, or, if you eat other meat, to eat only a little. The least option is to give up the meat of animals killed that day, the meat of animals of a similar species, and human meat. When you do eat it, bless it as divine nectar and consume it as an inner fire offering.

Regarding the least option, he says:

The answer is that such a person must be able to either truly transform the meat into divine nectar or, if they do not transform it into divine nectar, they must be able to transform their body so that they appear as a burial-ground jackal, a tiger, a lion, or the like. After that they can eat. [...] The Vimalaprabhā, the great commentary on the Kālacakra Tantra, explains that if you are unable to turn a tooth into a pearl, a skull-cup into a lotus, meat into sons' hair, and blood into a heruka deity, then it is unacceptable to eat this. Even if they spend eons trying, ordinary people are unable perform such transformations. Therefore it is widely explained that they should not try to transform these substances into divine nectar by themselves.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, this is one opinion. The opinion of my guru is that if you avoid meat and you are Vajrayāna practitioner, your compassion is, as he put it, "miserable."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 25th, 2021 at 2:31 AM

Title: Re: the great vegetarian debate

Content:

GrapeLover said:

It is difficult to see how he could convincingly manage this, as the Nirvana Sutra mentions three-fold purity explicitly and has the Buddha say he wants to end meat-eating altogether:

Malcolm wrote:

The three-fold purity is rejected in the sūtras he himself mentions, like the Lanka. It is clear he considers this to be a provisional teaching, not something we need to take literally.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 25th, 2021 at 2:39 AM

Title: Re: Mantra accumulation while walking

Content:

Donny said:

Or did you get teachings from you teachers that dealt with things like this?

Malcolm wrote:

Doesn't count.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 25th, 2021 at 2:39 AM

Title: Re: Translations of the Lotus Sutra - which is suitable for beginners?

Content:

Queequeg said:

Tibetans in general don't think much of the Lotus Sutra. (See <https://tricycle.org/magazine/greater-awakening/>; Then there is <https://youtu.be/9qqGE8ZulAg>) In East Asia it is possibly the most influential text.

Malcolm wrote:

Its not the Tibetans don't think much (pejorative) of the Lotus Sūtra, it's just not part of the Tibetan curriculum.

Tibetans tend to focus on those sūtras that have well-established commentarial traditions, like the Prajñāpāramita. More importantly, they focus on the commentarial Tradition of Nalanda, and when it comes to the words of the Buddha, spend most of their time on the exegesis of the various tantras that form the core of their curriculum, Guhyasamaja, Guhyagarbha, Hevajra, and Kalacakra. These are the main ones.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 25th, 2021 at 10:29 AM

Title: Re: Yet another Buddhism Soul/Self/Anatta thread

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

The eighth consciousness doesn't go from one body to another.

Malcolm wrote:

That's incorrect. It moves from one body to another mounted on the pranavayu. This process is detailed quite extensively in both sutra and tantra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 25th, 2021 at 10:32 AM

Title: Re: Mantra accumulation while walking

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

if we want to be Spiritual

Malcolm wrote:

I have zero interest in being spiritual.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 25th, 2021 at 7:39 PM

Title: Re: Yet another Buddhism Soul/Self/Anatta thread

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

In the first case, there is the same being carrying karma with it.

In the second case, the new being IS the result of ripening karma.

Malcolm wrote:

Both of these options are incorrect views of rebirth.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 25th, 2021 at 11:53 PM

Title: Re: Yet another Buddhism Soul/Self/Anatta thread

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

In the first case, there is the same being carrying karma with it.

In the second case, the new being IS the result of ripening karma.

Malcolm wrote:

Both of these options are incorrect views of rebirth.

PadmaVonSamba said:

Okay... please explain

Malcolm wrote:

Nothing transfers, but there is serial continuity:

ཕུང་པོ་ཉིང་མཚན་སྒྱུར་བ་ཡང་། མི་འཕོ་བར་ཡང་མཁས་རྟགས་བྱ།
ཤིན་ཏུ་ཕ་བའི་དངོས་ལ་ཡང་། ཁང་གི་ཆད་པར་རྒྱུ་བརྟགས་པ།
རྒྱུ་པར་མི་མཁས་དེ་ཡི་ནི། རྒྱུན་ལས་བྱུང་བའི་དོན་མ་མཐོང་།

Though the aggregates are serially connected,
the wise understand nothing is transferred.
The person who imputes the annihilation of even the most subtle entity is not wise and does not see the meaning of arising from conditions.

—Pratītyasamutpādaḥṛdayakārikā

In order for there to be a new being, some other being must have been annihilated. Your presentation is exactly the annihilationist view of self negated by the Buddha in many places.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 25th, 2021 at 11:55 PM

Title: Re: Poll - ngondro accumulations in sequence? (finish one 100,000 then do next?)

Content:

heart said:

In sequence is the normal, in the Nyingma you always do the whole text every time you accumulate but just a few recitations of the sections that you don't accumulate.

Malcolm wrote:

No, this really is not the case, and I can provide many counterfactual examples.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, March 25th, 2021 at 11:59 PM

Title: Re: Practical difference between Yidam practice and Guru Yoga

Content:

Passing By said:

...Dzogchen, Guru Yoga is always emphasized as the essence of everything up to and including upadesha practices. Is yidam done in Ati context also considered a form of Guru Yoga?

Malcolm wrote:

In Dzogchen, the guru, the yidam, and the ḍākinī are the basis, and nothing else. The guru is the essence, original purity; the yidam is the nature, natural purity; and the ḍākinī is their inseparability, compassion.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 26th, 2021 at 3:47 AM

Title: Re: Yet another Buddhism Soul/Self/Anatta thread

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

When you say:

“In order for there to be a new being, some other being must have been annihilated.” Are you paraphrasing the annihilationist view, or the correct view?

Malcolm wrote:

I am paraphrasing the annihilationist view, in this context the idea that in the series of a continuum, there is an old being that perished and a new being that comes into existence.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 26th, 2021 at 3:52 AM

Title: Re: Translations of the Lotus Sutra - which is suitable for beginners?

Content:

Queequeg said:

Intro to the translation of the Tibetan at 84000 is indeed good. The question about the Devadatta section missing from the Kumarajiva translation is interesting. It also lacks sections in the Medicinal Herbs chapter. Kumarajiva was from Kucha.

Malcolm wrote:

What's even more interesting is that the missing parts were cobbled onto the Kumarajiva recension to make it more "complete."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 26th, 2021 at 3:55 AM

Title: Re: Yet another Buddhism Soul/Self/Anatta thread

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Would having a continuity be an eternalist view from the Madhyamaka perspective?

Malcolm wrote:

Not at all. That is the point of the statement:

Though the aggregates are serially connected...

This refers between this life and the next life. There is a connection, but there is no entity that moves from this life to the next:

the wise understand nothing is transferred.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 26th, 2021 at 3:57 AM

Title: Re: Poll - ngondro accumulations in sequence? (finish one 100,000 then do next?)

Content:

heart said:

In sequence is the normal, in the Nyingma you always do the whole text every time you accumulate but just a few recitations of the sections that you don't accumulate.

Malcolm wrote:

No, this really is not the case, and I can provide many counterfactual examples.

heart said:

Well, this is how I was taught, more than once I might add. Anyway, doing one thing at the time is something I also seen.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no one size that fits all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 26th, 2021 at 4:00 AM

Title: Re: Practical difference between Yidam practice and Guru Yoga

Content:

Passing By said:

...Dzogchen, Guru Yoga is always emphasized as the essence of everything up to and including upadesha practices. Is yidam done in Ati context also considered a form of Guru Yoga?

Malcolm wrote:

In Dzogchen, the guru, the yidam, and the ḍākinī are the basis, and nothing else. The guru is the essence, original purity; the yidam is the nature, natural purity; and the ḍākinī is their inseparability, compassion.

Passing By said:

So, in other words, as long as one is working with the thigle nyagchig, regardless of what method is being used, it is guru yoga as far as Dzogchen is concerned, whether the practice nominally has a guru figure, deity or dakini associated with it?

Malcolm wrote:

In Dzogchen, the guru, yidam, and ḍākinī is rigpa.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 26th, 2021 at 6:41 AM

Title: Re: Yet another Buddhism Soul/Self/Anatta thread

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Would having a continuity be an eternalist view from the Madhyamaka perspective?

Malcolm wrote:

Not at all. That is the point of the statement:

Though the aggregates are serially connected...

This refers between this life and the next life. There is a connection, but there is no entity that moves from this life to the next:

the wise understand nothing is transferred.

SilenceMonkey said:

I see... I need to study more. What would you say about my response in the previous post to PVS regarding moments in time? (Sorry, I edited it a couple mins after posting)
How can things be serially connected if they don't exist?

Perhaps moments don't have ultimate existence, but they appear to exist in the (undeluded) relative?

Malcolm wrote:

Partless moments are irrefutable, even through Madhyamaka reasoning, because they do not have duration. They are a relative ultimate, but not the ultimate free of proliferation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 26th, 2021 at 7:44 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The problem isn't the science and technology, as you know well, it never has been. The problem is politics and policy. Whatever you make think of Gore, had he been elected, things would have been different, but ironically, Ralph Nader and the Green Party contributed significantly to Gore's conceding the election to Bush.

kirtu said:

Trotting out the eternal Al Gore piñata, a mirage in the desert at best.

Malcolm wrote:

I am making the point that the Green Party voters voted against their own interests in 2000, just like they did in 2016. In both cases, the votes drawn off by the GP from the Dems were sufficient to guarantee the GOP an electoral college victory.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, March 26th, 2021 at 9:14 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

kirtu said:

Trotting out the eternal Al Gore piñata, a mirage in the desert at best.

Malcolm wrote:

I am making the point that the Green Party voters voted against their own interests in 2000, just like they did in 2016. In both cases, the votes drawn off by the GP from the Dems were sufficient to guarantee the GOP an electoral college victory.

Queequeg said:

Anyone who takes the Green Party in the US seriously cannot be taken seriously.

Malcolm wrote:

Perhaps, but they can spoil elections.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 27th, 2021 at 5:12 AM

Title: Re: What does Buddhism say about gender?

Content:

Ardha said:

<https://buddhism.stackexchange.com/questions/12902/male-female-is-gender-an-illusion>

Something I heard, which then got me thinking about what Buddhism would say about transgender issues, or being gay etc. There is a reference to ultimate reality and conventional reality too, but I'm not entirely convinced. Especially considering that for a time Buddhism wasn't that friendly towards women being enlightened and practicing. What's the verdict on this?

PadmaVonSamba said:

The Buddha actually departed from traditional Indian religious culture in that he accepted women into the sangha.

Malcolm wrote:

No, Jains had nuns before the Buddha admitted women into the Sangha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, March 27th, 2021 at 10:07 PM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Yes, literally... Factory farms are pure evil.

Malcolm wrote:

Agriculture in general harms billions of sentient beings, not just factory farms, for example, pressing oils out of seeds, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 28th, 2021 at 2:14 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Yes, literally... Factory farms are pure evil.

Malcolm wrote:

Agriculture in general harms billions of sentient beings, not just factory farms, for example, pressing oils out of seeds, etc.

seeker242 said:

Right, and mass production animal agriculture harm more, compared to just plant agriculture for humans, because it involves excessive amounts of plant agriculture in addition to animal agriculture. It's well established that the total amount of agriculture necessary would be significantly reduced, if it was just plants for human consumption.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it is not well established. This is just a vegan talking point which is not backed up by any real data. It's a talking point based on assumptions, not facts.

The vegan diet is actually slightly more "expensive" than other options:

<https://ensia.com/notable/which-diet-makes-best-use-of-farmland-you-might-be-surprised/>

The study the above article is based upon:

<https://online.ucpress.edu/elementa/article/doi/10.12952/journal.elementa.000116/112904/Carrying-capacity-of-U-S-agricultural-land-Ten>

In fact, the same amount of area under cultivation would be required for the planet to go 100% percent vegan. What changes is usage of land not suitable for growing crops, and that land use gets heavily reduced when you eliminate grazing, etc. On the other hand, that land is not suitable for cultivation in general, which is why it is used for grazing in the first place.

The salient point is that shifting towards a plant-based diet can increase the amount of food available to be eaten by human beings, but it won't actually reduce the amount of land under cultivation at all (especially when you include biofuel cultivation, such as ethanol). In fact, the amount of land under direct cultivation will increase dramatically. Therefore, your repeated asserted that eliminating animals from the human food chain will result in less creatures being harmed overall is specious at best. There are many good reasons to move away from the baseline American diet, which is wasteful and unhealthy in the long run. But the idea that moving away from meat will reduce the need for the same amount of cropland is demonstrably false. In fact, it dramatically increases for the need for cultivation:

So your idea is plain wrong. If we all moved to a vegan or other plant based diet, there will be at least as many sentient beings harmed since the use of pesticides, herbicides, and other pest control measures will increase, not to mention the "collateral" damage of harvesting, pressing, etc.

The fact of the matter is that there is no ideal dietary choice which insulates one from the economics of samsara. If one thinks so, one should become a Jain or a follower of Devadatta.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 28th, 2021 at 11:19 AM

Title: Re: Guru Rinpoche devotional practices

Content:

Soma999 said:

You can take an online Guru Rinpoche empowerment, even from recorded empowerments - from Garchen Rinpoche.

Malcolm wrote:

Caveat emptor. Many lamas, probably a majority, do not accept this.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 28th, 2021 at 7:03 PM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Um... the article you shared actually proves the opposite of what you're claiming.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it does not.

SilenceMonkey said:

Land requirements decreased steadily as the proportion of food derived from animals declined, with the three vegetarian diets requiring 0.13 to 0.14 hectares (0.32 to 0.35 acres) per person per year.

And you don't even address the main point behind the claim that animal agriculture kills more animals than plant agriculture, which is that you have to feed the cows. So whatever harm that comes from plant agriculture is multiplied in the case of raising animals for meat, because you have to feed the animals plants.

Malcolm wrote:

Overall land use decreases, the area of _cultivated_ land increases by double. Since the overall cultivated land use nearly doubles, pesticide and herbicide use will increase exponentially as well, as well as the need to substitute human waste for animal-dung based flail amendments.

Large scale farming is not possible without pesticides, and there isn't enough guano in world to make it possible to substitute for other kinds of nonchemical fertilizer if those are eliminated.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 28th, 2021 at 7:14 PM

Title: Re: Yet another Buddhism Soul/Self/Anatta thread

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

So, please establish what is meant by "soul" before discussing whether the Buddha ever talked about one.

Könchok Chödrak said:

Can the "Soul" be referring to Buddha-Nature? People don't tend to deny we all have that, and that it's there. How it's there is the question if such is accepted. Would this be too much of a controversial saying?

Malcolm wrote:

No, this is explicitly rejected by the Buddha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 28th, 2021 at 7:22 PM

Title: Re: Guru Rinpoche devotional practices

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Question: would they be "not accepting" of such a practice coming from their own selves based on preference, or are they judging His Enlightened judgement on the matter? Or is it just Expedient Means in Vajrayana?

Malcolm wrote:

My guru, Chogyal Namkhai Norbu, explicitly rejected the idea that one could receive empowerments and reading transmissions from recordings. This has been discussed here at length. There are many technical reasons why it is not possible, and no argument for why it is possible. Thus, caveat emptor.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 28th, 2021 at 8:36 PM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

seeker242 said:

"Avoiding meat and dairy products is the single biggest way to reduce your environmental impact on the planet, according to the scientists behind the most comprehensive analysis to date of the damage farming does to the planet. "

<https://www.theguardian.com/environment/2018/may/31/avoiding-meat-and-dairy-is-> single-biggest-way-to-reduce-your-impact-on-earth

The most comprehensive analysis to date of the damage farming does to the planet. Here is what the lead research scientist has to say about it.

“A vegan diet is probably the single biggest way to reduce your impact on planet Earth, not just greenhouse gases, but global acidification, eutrophication, land use and water use,” said Joseph Poore, at the University of Oxford, UK, who led the research. “It is far bigger than cutting down on your flights or buying an electric car,” he said, as these only cut greenhouse gas emissions.

“Agriculture is a sector that spans all the multitude of environmental problems,” he said. “Really it is animal products that are responsible for so much of this. Avoiding consumption of animal products delivers far better environmental benefits than trying to purchase sustainable meat and dairy.”

Of course, research scientists at the The Queen's College, University of Oxford are well known for just making stuff up and not basing their statements on fact and figures.

Malcolm wrote:

Then there is reality: the world is not going to go vegan, not tomorrow, next week, next year, or in the next century. In fact, meat consumption will continue to rise, especially in China and India.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 28th, 2021 at 8:49 PM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

seeker242 said:

"Avoiding meat and dairy products is the single biggest way to reduce your environmental impact on the planet, according to the scientists behind the most comprehensive analysis to date of the damage farming does to the planet. "

<https://www.theguardian.com/environment/2018/may/31/avoiding-meat-and-dairy-is-single-biggest-way-to-reduce-your-impact-on-earth>

The most comprehensive analysis to date of the damage farming does to the planet. Here is what the lead research scientist has to say about it.

“A vegan diet is probably the single biggest way to reduce your impact on planet Earth, not just greenhouse gases, but global acidification, eutrophication, land use and water use,” said Joseph Poore, at the University of Oxford, UK, who led the research. “It is far bigger than cutting down on your flights or buying an electric car,” he said, as these only cut greenhouse gas emissions.

“Agriculture is a sector that spans all the multitude of environmental problems,” he said. “Really it is animal products that are responsible for so much of this. Avoiding consumption of animal products delivers far better environmental benefits than trying to purchase sustainable meat and dairy.”

Of course, research scientists at the The Queen's College, University of Oxford are well known for just making stuff up and not basing their statements on fact and figures.

Malcolm wrote:

Then there is reality: the world is not going to go vegan, not tomorrow, next week, next year, or in the next century. In fact, meat consumption will continue to rise, especially in China and India.

seeker242 said:

Doesn't change the fact that it causes less harm, which is the salient point.

Malcolm wrote:

No, you have not proven this to be so. You imagine it is so, because it supports your inclinations, and so you select data that you think bolsters your case. Human activity, all of it, has tremendous impacts on the planet. Your harm-reduction analysis leaves out many factors; by definition, increased cultivation will lead to harming increased numbers of sentient beings. So in the end, the same amount of creatures will be harmed, no matter what we do.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 28th, 2021 at 9:30 PM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

One of The Buddha's reasons for rejecting the Vedas was for the purpose of stopping animal sacrifices done on their false pretext. But there are so many foretellings of a terrible future for mankind still, despite the Advent of the Buddha. We live in Mappo. The Buddhas only give us good though. Based on both Vedic and Buddhist Traditions, things get worse in Kali-Yuga. But Buddha is one to defy odds. I read once in a Buddhist Tantric Text something to the extent of "May all beings become Buddhas at this very moment". Such a thing is possible! How much more possible is it to create a better future for mankind, heeding the warnings of what may come. We must live as Bodhisattvas. There is always hope.

Malcolm wrote:

The tantras also say, “Those with compassion eat meat.”

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 28th, 2021 at 9:33 PM

Title: Re: Yet another Buddhism Soul/Self/Anatta thread

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Then what is the basis for Emptiness?

Malcolm wrote:

There is no basis at all. That's what "emptiness" means.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 28th, 2021 at 9:35 PM

Title: Re: Guru Rinpoche devotional practices

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

I mean it's clear that Enlightened Buddhist Teachers do it.. The Dalai Lama, etc. Your Guru, all respects to Him, is just bearing the Torch of Expedient Means to preserve that type of practice most importantly from what it seems. Nothing wrong with that.

Malcolm wrote:

A live transmission over the web is one thing, a recorded empowerment another. You don't understand Vajrayana. A transmission is like a pebble handed from one person to another. Can you take a pebble from the hand of a recording? This is the analogy.

I am pointing out that most lamas, 99%, don't agree with this approach. It's highly controversial in Tibetan circles.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 28th, 2021 at 10:05 PM

Title: Re: Ox Herding

Content:

LastLegend said:

No dream though. Dream is delusion.

Russian said:

There's a book that explains it. The book is called: Riding the Ox Home : Stages on the Path of Enlightenment. Author: John Daido Looi.

Malcolm wrote:

While the images and sequence are similar, the meanings is dissimilar. In the Tibetan tradition, this is merely an illustration of perfect shamatha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 28th, 2021 at 10:36 PM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

seeker242 said:

This is just a omni talking point which is not backed up by any real data. It's a talking point based on assumptions, not facts and just plain wrong

Malcolm wrote:

All the evidence presented so far is conjectural, and based on assumptions, that goes for yours and mine.

And we draw different conclusions from that those assumptions. Your assumptions lead you to believe that in general, less sentient beings will be harmed if the world went vegan. I think this is fanciful.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 28th, 2021 at 10:57 PM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The tantras also say, "Those with compassion eat meat."

jimmi said:

This sounds like a requirement. By what logic or perception is eating meat compassionate?

Those who wish to minimize the collateral damage to sentient beings of meat production and consumption and indeed of any land based diet (as you suggest), while still fulfilling their compassionate obligations, may perhaps consider the possibility of exclusively eating large marine mammals.

Malcolm wrote:

Compassion isn't an obligation, it's a choice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 28th, 2021 at 11:01 PM

Title: Re: Yet another Buddhism Soul/Self/Anatta thread

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Then what is the basis for Emptiness?

Malcolm wrote:

There is no basis at all. That's what "emptiness" means.

PadmaVonSamba said:

As HH Dalai Lama has frequently mentioned, emptiness itself isn't a thing. It is a description of the nature of phenomena.

So, this is like asking what is the basis for "large".

Malcolm wrote:
The basis for large is small.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, March 28th, 2021 at 11:01 PM
Title: Re: Ox Herding
Content:

Malcolm wrote:
While the images and sequence are similar, the meanings is dissimilar. In the Tibetan tradition, this is merely an illustration of perfect shamatha.

Russian said:
You mean the picture of the elephant and the monkey? Why I ask, because you are responding to my previous message, where I mention the name of the Zen book, the book of the Zen mentor.

Malcolm wrote:
I mean the entire depiction, the final stages at the top represent the miraculous powers that arise from samadhi, but not insight.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, March 28th, 2021 at 11:24 PM
Title: Re: Ox Herding
Content:

Malcolm wrote:
I mean the entire depiction, the final stages at the top represent the miraculous powers that arise from samadhi, but not insight.

Russian said:
And in your opinion, does Zen Buddhism lead to liberation, or not? Does this tradition of Buddhism lead to a goal, does it fulfill a soteriological function, or not?

Malcolm wrote:
I wasn't commenting on the respective merits of this or that tradition, per se, merely pointing out the manner in which the two depictions are explained are not commensurate with one another.

One assumes from the outset that all Buddhist traditions lead to awakening since they are all based on the same insights into reality.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, March 28th, 2021 at 11:30 PM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

seeker242 said:

Doesn't take a genius to figure out that a reduction of land use, a reduction of water pollution, a reduction of water use, a reduction of greenhouse gas emissions, a reduction of animal slaughtering, would cause less harm.

The idea that it doesn't matter what we do it's all the same, is really quite ridiculous.

And eating meat is compassionate? I wonder what the animals that are being killed because of it would have to say about that? It shouldn't take a genius to figure that out either

Malcolm wrote:

One does not eat live animals, and eating corpses never caused suffering to anyone ever. Corpses don't have feelings.

I did not say it does not matter what we do. There are sound reasons to criticize industrial agriculture, but claiming that shifting to an all plant food chain will reduce the suffering of sentient beings is, in my opinion, naive.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 29th, 2021 at 1:08 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

seeker242 said:

I doubt very much that the cows would be ok with being killed, simply because they are not eaten alive. The idea that purchasing that meat, is somehow entirely divorced from its production, is certainly naive.

Malcolm wrote:

Its pretty clear that purchasing meat is entirely divorced from its production, considering how much meat is wasted per day in the US, 31% of it, 141 billion tons per year or 364,383,561 pounds a day, to be precise. Basically, for every two pounds of meat sold in the US, one pound is "wasted."

<https://www.beefmagazine.com/management/food-waste-issue-we-must-solve>

Of course this ignores that fact that nothing is ever wasted in a biological system, and all that "wasted" meat rots and is eaten by all kinds of lifeforms. Life survives on death.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 29th, 2021 at 1:11 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

DNS said:

The cows are continually impregnated and then when she gives birth, the calves are taken away.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, and then raised for veal or beef.

DNS said:

You can see the mother cow wailing and crying as her calves are taken away.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct.

DNS said:

And then for the "free range" hens, they still get de-beaked, where their beaks are clipped off without anesthesia.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, which is why one should only buy eggs produced by pastured chickens.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 29th, 2021 at 1:16 AM

Title: Re: Ox Herding

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

I wasn't commenting on the respective merits of this or that tradition, per se, merely pointing out the manner in which the two depictions are explained are not commensurate with one another.

One assumes from the outset that all Buddhist traditions lead to awakening since they are all based on the same insights into reality.

Russian said:

It is clear that you have voiced the opinions of the traditions, and what is your personal opinion? How do you rate Zen yourself? What do you think of Zen?

Malcolm wrote:

I don't have any basis to have an informed opinion about Zen, other than the way Chan is presented in Tibetan sources, some favorable, most not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 29th, 2021 at 1:19 AM

Title: Re: Guru Rinpoche devotional practices

Content:

Soma999 said:

The Sambhogakāya form of the lama transmits the initiations, and is not bounded by space and time.

Malcolm wrote:

The student is bound by space and time. Not only that, but the creation and dissolution of the mandala for any given initiation is bound by space and time.

Soma999 said:

The initiation is transmitted in consciousness.

Malcolm wrote:

No, an initiation is transmitted through body and speech. The idea an initiation is transmitted mind to mind is just a fantasy and is not supported on the basis of any Buddhist tantra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 29th, 2021 at 1:24 AM

Title: Re: Guru Rinpoche devotional practices

Content:

philji said:

Controversial doesn't have to mean wrong. Namkhai Norbu Rinpoche was also considered controversial. If you have trust in Garchen Rinpoche go for it.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, controversial does not mean wrong. It means controversial. It means that there are doubts.

The purpose of pointing this out is that people need to know, if they have many teachers, that some of their teachers very likely will not accept the point of view that Garchen Rinpoche, a perfectly lovely and compassionate bodhisattva, is promulgating. The point is not to find fault with Garchen Rinpoche. The point that people should be aware that most lamas will not accept recorded empowerments as valid. That's just a fact, and people should be aware of this.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 29th, 2021 at 1:26 AM

Title: Re: Yet another Buddhism Soul/Self/Anatta thread

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

As HH Dalai Lama has frequently mentioned, emptiness itself isn't a thing. It is a description of the nature of phenomena.

So, this is like asking what is the basis for "large".

Malcolm wrote:

The basis for large is small.

PadmaVonSamba said:

Yeah, but the point is, it's an adjective. Sunyata functions that way too. As HHDL says in The Essence of the Heart Sutra, we can only talk about the emptiness of things. There's no "thing" which is emptiness.

Malcolm wrote:

I guess my humor is too dry.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 29th, 2021 at 5:27 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Um... the article you shared actually proves the opposite of what you're claiming.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it does not.

SilenceMonkey said:

And you don't even address the main point behind the claim that animal agriculture kills more animals than plant agriculture, which is that you have to feed the cows. So whatever harm that comes from plant agriculture is multiplied in the case of raising animals for meat, because you have to feed the animals plants.

Malcolm wrote:

Overall land use decreases, the area of _cultivated_ land increases by double. Since the overall cultivated land use nearly doubles, pesticide and herbicide use will increase exponentially as well, as well as the need to substitute human waste for animal-dung based flail amendments.

Large scale farming is not possible without pesticides, and there isn't enough guano in world to make it possible to substitute for other kinds of nonchemical fertilizer if those are eliminated.

SilenceMonkey said:

That doesn't make sense. If all the land that was being used to grow feed for the cows and pigs didn't need to be used for that purpose, it could be used to grow food for people. That's not an increase in land use, but the opposite.

Malcolm wrote:

It is not as much land as you imagine.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, March 29th, 2021 at 6:49 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

Frankly, with chicken meat being as cheap as it is at the stores, and the incredible investment chicken farmers have to make, I don't see how there is any money on it. But I guess there is.

Malcolm wrote:

It's subsidized by the Feds.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 30th, 2021 at 9:10 PM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

jimmi said:

This sounds like a requirement. By what logic or perception is eating meat compassionate?

Those who wish to minimize the collateral damage to sentient beings of meat production and consumption and indeed of any land based diet (as you suggest), while still fulfilling their compassionate obligations, may perhaps consider the possibility of exclusively eating large marine mammals.

Malcolm wrote:

Compassion isn't an obligation, it's a choice.

jimmi said:

What kind of compassionate choice is it then that would allow one to directly, or through intermediaries, deprive another of its own choice to live?

Malcolm wrote:

No sentient being chooses to live. The process of life is driven by ignorance. Sentient beings are conceived through ignorance, etc.

Everything boils down to motivation and method. If one has bodhicitta and the correct method, eating meat becomes a compassionate act.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 30th, 2021 at 10:25 PM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

2. Killing animals is a violation of one of the five precepts.

Malcolm wrote:

That is in fact unclear. For example, it is not a defeat for a bhikṣu to kill an animal, and requires no more than a confession before the sangha, the same as drinking alcohol or harming a plant.

PadmaVonSamba said:

If you have taken the five precepts, you cannot, for example, select a live lobster to be cooked for you. But if you are served meat, it is not a violation to eat it. The specific act of killing is the point here.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, because this violates the "pure in three ways" rule

PadmaVonSamba said:

3. This is really the grey area. If one buys meat, this perpetuates the market for meat

Malcolm wrote:

This has been addressed many times. Buying any food at all from a store that sells meat, like Whole Foods, contributes to that economy, vegan or not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, March 30th, 2021 at 10:31 PM

Title: Re: Thangka painting - what requires empowerment?

Content:

heart said:

You don't need an empowerment for thangka painting...

Malcolm wrote:

Not exactly true. Ideally, a thangkha painter will be part of the tradition.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 31st, 2021 at 12:15 AM

Title: Re: Thangka painting - what requires empowerment?

Content:

heart said:

You don't need an empowerment for thangka painting...

Malcolm wrote:

Not exactly true. Ideally, a thangkha painter will be part of the tradition.

Hazel said:

What's the risk of negative karma?

Malcolm wrote:

If one is painting lower tantras deities like Tara, the Buddha, Arhats, etc. there is no fault. But if someone is painting higher tantras deities without empowerment, there is a fault.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 31st, 2021 at 1:06 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Awesome for people who have the time and resources, almost completely irrelevant for those who do not.

Sunrise said:

Most of us agree that Big Agriculture is having a very destructive effect on animal welfare, human workers, and the environment. The question is how to stand against it. Different methods will appeal to different people, but the important thing is to do something. There's the very real danger that people will look at the size of Big Ag, and conclude there's nothing that they can do about it. That they're powerless consumers forced to support this evil system. This isn't true, but if we don't take active steps against it, it will feel that way.

Malcolm wrote:

Most people in the world do not enjoy the luxury of food choices available to us in the first world.

Most of the 7.5 billion people on the planet are just struggling to get by.

Transforming the global food production network to be more efficient and less polluting requires a level of international cooperation that necessitates a level of maturity humanity has not reached.

There are, at most, 400 million vegetarians in the world. Take India, only slightly more than a third of the population is vegetarian.

Basically, the world is only 5% vegetarian. Seems unlikely this is going to change.

Meat eating map:

<https://www.bbc.com/news/health-47057341>

Fact: the wealthier people become, the more meat they eat. One can either eat meat with compassion, or hold one's nose and pretend to be superior to everyone else.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 31st, 2021 at 2:22 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

This sounds like the opposite of how HH Dalai Lama says to cultivate compassion and bodhicitta. You seem to be saying that because no being chooses to live, it doesn't matter if they die.

Malcolm wrote:

I was specifically responding to the assertion by jimmi that eating meat deprives sentient beings of the choice of live.

SilenceMonkey said:

But that's not bodhicitta. Bodhicitta is recognizing that all beings want happiness and to avoid suffering, and then feeling compassion for their suffering enough to want them to be free.

Malcolm wrote:

You do that by avoiding meat, and I do that by consuming meat, in addition to making sure those animals didn't die for nothing.

Face it, 95 percent of people in the world not only eat meat, but they want to eat meat.

You can either avoid meat, or you can eat meat with compassion. It's up to you. But don't try to tell me being a vegetarian or a vegan is more compassionate. It isn't, and I see zero evidence that vegans and vegetarians are qualitatively more compassionate than those who eat meat. His Holiness the Dalai Lama eats meat, for example.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 31st, 2021 at 2:24 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

The real purpose behind vegetarianism and veganism isn't about feeling superior, it's about compassion for the animals.

Malcolm wrote:

So is meat-eating with a proper method. Otherwise, it neutral, unless you personally engaged in killing animals for food.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 31st, 2021 at 2:27 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

There's no hypocrisy in people being veg merely because they live in the first world.

Malcolm wrote:

There is, when they imagine that somehow their diet of choice makes them spiritually superior to others.

Veganism is a luxury diet (and unhealthy too) for wealthy people in first world countries that has zero impact on industrial agriculture, the meat industry, etc.

<https://veganbits.com/vegan-demographics/>

SilenceMonkey said:

Calculating the amount of vegans in the world has never been an easy task. Many people combine vegans, vegetarians, and plant-based diets into the same category – even though there is a major difference. Considering that the most progressive countries in the world are reporting a 2-8% vegan population, we can assume that the worldwide number is considerably below 1%.

For example, even though there has been a large surge in vegan interest in South Africa, 99.99% of Africa's population aren't vegans. Considering that there are 1.2 billion people living in Africa, and 7.53 billion people living worldwide, it's easy to understand why the vegan population worldwide is closer to 0.1%.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 31st, 2021 at 5:00 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

There are many uncompassionate people in the world. And many more who engage in systems that are inherently uncompassionate without realizing it.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, there are many uncompassionate buddhist vegetarians as well. I've met many.

SilenceMonkey said:

If it's true that a tantrika can liberate an animal by eating its flesh, or even to create a powerful connection of dharma for this being, there is some real compassion there.

Malcolm wrote:

I did stipulate that one needs connection with a method.

SilenceMonkey said:

But for all the rest of the meat eaters, there's no compassion there.

Malcolm wrote:

And not necessarily malice either. For example, most people eat meat. Are you claiming that most people are not compassionate? That 95 percent of the world is somehow lacking compassion? You need to get out more.

SilenceMonkey said:

And the Dalai Lama was vegetarian for most of his life. He only eats meat occasionally because it was prescribed by his doctors due to a case of jaundice.

Malcolm wrote:

This is completely false. HHDL has not been vegetarian most of his life. Quite the opposite, actually.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 31st, 2021 at 7:07 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

seeker242 said:

The most important is for individuals to shift towards predominantly plant-based diets.

Malcolm wrote:

First world arrogance, expecting others to take responsibility for our cultural excesses.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 31st, 2021 at 7:43 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

seeker242 said:

The most important is for individuals to shift towards predominantly plant-based diets.

Malcolm wrote:

First world arrogance, expecting others to take responsibility for our cultural excesses.

PadmaVonSamba said:

If you can't eat a predominately plant-based diet, the next best thing is to only consume meat from animals who rely on a predominantly plant-based diet.

Malcolm wrote:

Eating the flesh of predators is forbidden in Vinaya, in fact.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 31st, 2021 at 9:56 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

If you can't eat a predominately plant-based diet, the next best thing is to only consume meat from animals who rely on a predominantly plant-based diet.

Malcolm wrote:

Eating the flesh of predators is forbidden in Vinaya, in fact.

PadmaVonSamba said:

The most ethical thing to do would to be a vegan cannibal and only eat other humans who are not vegans.

Malcolm wrote:

Human meat is also forbidden in Vinaya.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 31st, 2021 at 10:05 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

The most ethical thing to do would to be a vegan cannibal and only eat other humans who are not vegans.

Malcolm wrote:

Human meat is also forbidden in Vinaya.

jimmi said:

What if someone just put it on your plate? It's said to taste like chicken.

Malcolm wrote:

Human meat is forbidden in Vinaya.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 31st, 2021 at 7:50 PM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Human meat is forbidden in Vinaya.

Arnoud said:

Why do these rules from the Vinaya apply to lay people and not the other rules?

Malcolm wrote:

They don't, necessarily, but one can consult them as a guide.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 31st, 2021 at 10:04 PM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

seeker242 said:

Is it just a coincidence that vegan comes in last place, in causing climate harm, in virtually every single country studied? Hmmm.

Malcolm wrote:

There are no innocents, not even vegans.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 31st, 2021 at 11:09 PM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

seeker242 said:

Is it just a coincidence that vegan comes in last place, in causing climate harm, in virtually every single country studied? Hmmm.

Malcolm wrote:

There are no innocents, not even vegans.

seeker242 said:

Which is irrelevant to whether or not something does or doesn't cause more or less harm.

Malcolm wrote:

If you want to reduce harm, look at the major causes of harm to the environment, and it is not agriculture as a sector (10% of total greenhouse gas emissions from the US, according to the EPA). It is transportation, electricity, and industry.

With respect to the major causes of water pollution they are non-agricultural effluents: human sewage (30%) is the leading source; followed by farm run off and air pollution (both 20%); then maritime transportation, waste water from industry, oil, and litter. Of course these vary depending on water basin. For example, the Mississippi is mainly polluted by farm runoff; the Thames, the Colorado, and Connecticut river, human sewage, etc.

Decoupling our economy from the burning of fossil fuels will automatically cause a serious drop in harm. This is where people should be focusing their attention. Not on diets.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, March 31st, 2021 at 11:11 PM

Title: Re: merigar gomp

Content:

ismael said:

Besides that, a 19th century Christian saint and mystic, Davide Lazaretti, lived in the rugged mountains above Merigar (his place can still be visited)

Malcolm wrote:

Lazaretti's house, restored and renovated, is for sale.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 1st, 2021 at 12:32 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

seeker242 said:

Which is irrelevant to whether or not something does or doesn't cause more or less harm.

Malcolm wrote:

If you want to reduce harm, look at the major causes of harm to the environment, and it is not agriculture as a sector (10% of total greenhouse gas emissions from the US, according to the EPA). It is transportation, electricity, and industry.

seeker242 said:

The idea that you can just ignore food is a mistaken idea.

Malcolm wrote:

The idea that you are going to change the dietary habits of 95 percent of humanity is equally mistaken. So, I recommend you work with what people will accept, not what they won't. That is the best way to reduce harm to the environment.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 1st, 2021 at 12:45 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

muni said:

His Holiness the 14th Dalai Lama is encouraging his followers around the globe to adopt a vegetarian diet in an effort to alleviate suffering on World Animal Day, which took place this past Sunday, October 4th. In a recorded message, the Buddhist leader said, "It is very useful to promote vegetarianism. We should pay more attention towards developing more vegetable [-based diets]," adding that factory farming is "environmentally very harmful. "

Malcolm wrote:

With all due respect to His Holiness, switching to a vegetarian diet will not get rid of "factory farming."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 1st, 2021 at 1:13 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

muni said:

His Holiness the 14th Dalai Lama is encouraging his followers around the globe to adopt a vegetarian diet in an effort to alleviate suffering on World Animal Day, which took place this past Sunday, October 4th. In a recorded message, the Buddhist leader said, "It is very useful to promote vegetarianism. We should pay more attention towards developing more vegetable [-based diets]," adding that factory farming is "environmentally very harmful. "

Malcolm wrote:

With all due respect to His Holiness, switching to a vegetarian diet will not get rid of "factory farming."

muni said:

It is indirectly related, even that alone will not solve it. I am sure H H Dalai Lama knows that, it is not that easy. However when there is no demander, or less, they need to reduce as well. Now too many animals are pushed in tiny places, like pigs, just enough room to deliver babies. Their tale is cut off, since due to stress they eat each others. Its just unbelievable when we come to see how these beings are suffering.

Malcolm wrote:

Factory farming is not just for animals. That's the point.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 1st, 2021 at 1:56 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

seeker242 said:

What people will or won't do is not relevant to the question of which diet causes more or less harm. Even if everyone were to do absolutely nothing, that still wouldn't change the fact that a plant-based diet causes less climate harm.

Malcolm wrote:

Your criteria has been harm through death to creatures. Now you've roped in the climate.

As for your first criteria, there is no evidence less creatures are harmed, since there is no evidence one way or another.

There is no evidence that less pesticides and herbicides or other pest-management solutions will be used if we switched, world wide, to an all plant-based diet.

We will have to rely on more chemical-based fertilizers in the significant absence of animal by-product fertilizer. Water pollution from nitrogen runoff will be the same, as well as chemical pollution.

Then there is the transition period of twenty years where we either support an aging population of domesticated animals until they die a natural death—or kill them all—and prevent their birth, since they will no longer be useful to human beings.

The rate of air pollution from farm vehicles will remain the same for the foreseeable future.

The recommendation to switch to all plant-based diet seems great on the surface, but it itself comes with all kinds of unimagined consequences. Same number of creatures will be killed, or even more, since there will have to be a great increase in planting of nut trees and fruit trees (water intensive, prone to disease and pests, requiring lots of pesticides), etc. One cannot simply declare that one can determine the amount of harm to creatures based on computer models which track carbon.

This is why I continue to suggest that there are other areas where we can make more substantial improvements in terms of harmful human behavior than in the area of diet. People are promoting dietary choice as an area where people feel personally empowered in doing something. On the other hand, just look at the frenzy caused recently in France when the Mayor of Lyon eliminated meat from school lunches. Many people, most people, feel that eliminating meat is harmful to human health. I am not debating that issue, some people seem to do fine on vegan and vegetarian diets, some people do not, nevertheless, the general view of most people in the world is that eating meat is desirable.

Frankly, there are many ways of reducing harm, diet evangelism seems among the most quixotic, and thus, not very effective in accomplishing its stated goals.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 1st, 2021 at 2:01 AM

Title: Re: merigar gomp

Content:

ismael said:

Besides that, a 19th century Christian saint and mystic, Davide Lazaretti, lived in the rugged mountains above Merigar (his place can still be visited)

Malcolm wrote:

Lazaretti's house, restored and renovated, is for sale.

Arnoud said:

Would love to see that. Where can I find the listing?

Malcolm wrote:

saw it on facebook

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 1st, 2021 at 4:10 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

seeker242 said:

What people will or won't do is not relevant to the question of which diet causes more or less harm. Even if everyone were to do absolutely nothing, that still wouldn't change the fact that a plant-based diet causes less climate harm.

Malcolm wrote:

Your criteria has been harm through death to creatures. Now you've roped in the climate.

seeker242 said:

Absolutely. What do you think? Climate change doesn't harm creatures? Of course it does... And we also need to rope in water pollution and all the harm from that, excess water usage and all the harm from that, excess land usage and all the harm from that, deforestation and all the harm from that, desertification and all the harm from that, loss of biodiversity and all the harm from that. I'm sure I'm not including everything there.

Malcolm wrote:

Most water pollution comes from human sewage and sources other than water runoff from farms. Water usage will increase, not decrease, under more intensive farming of fruit and nut trees.

The biggest thing that injures biodiversity is farming, followed by housing construction. That's not going away, instead, it will be expanded. Why? Nuts are essential for oils, protein, etc. Without butter or animal fats to cook with, we will need to plant millions of more acres of rape seed, etc. Biofuels are already an environmental disaster, with forests being cut down to plant trees for palm oil, etc.

seeker242 said:

And there are boatloads of evidence that a plant based diet would help alleviate the problems with all of those things, published in peer reviewed science journals from people who have PhDs in those respective fields.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, they is what they claim based on assumptions they've made in their modeling. I am sure their forecasts are quite accurate as far as their assumptions go. But, since there is going to be no en masse conversion to a plant-based diet, their assumptions don't match the real world. Since their assumptions do not match the real world, your assertion that there will be less harm with such a conversion is just a speculative fantasy. It can't be tested.

Since you live in a world where our economy is oil-based, etc., not even you can argue that your dietary choices are "less" harming. You imagine they are, but only because you have created this artificial island in your head, meat/plant. You live in this world. I encourage you seek attainable goals. Not unattainable ones.

seeker242 said:

But, you expect people to take your word for it instead? When they are saying the opposite thing that you are saying? Sorry friend, but that's just not reasonable. Not really even close. And you think they just didn't account for any of that other stuff you mentioned? Well, that's not reasonable either.

Malcolm wrote:

They are models describing a world that does not exist.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 1st, 2021 at 4:12 AM

Title: Re: Hearing vs Listening for receiving transmission (lung)

Content:

karmanyangpo said:

Howdy to all Dharma friends.

Wondering if anyone can shed some light, on what necessary conditions need to be there to receive a lung, with sources/ref to teachers/scripture if possible or applicable..

I ask because it seems I have heard conflicting things. Some seem to say that all you need is to HEAR it even if you are distracted or doing other things (eg stories of monks practicing calligraphy while getting transmission) and others seem to say you need to LISTEN undistractedly to receive it. I'm sure that attentively mindfully listening does not hurt but, is it really necessary to receive the lung at all? Is there any real basis for arguing one side over the other?

Malcolm wrote:

It is better if you are paying attention, but in the case of a long lung, that is a little difficult.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 1st, 2021 at 5:07 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Most water pollution comes from human sewage and sources other than water runoff from farms. Water usage will increase, not decrease, under more intensive farming of fruit and nut trees.

seeker242 said:

Most water pollution does not come from human sewage and other non agricultural sources. Water usage will not increase if fruit trees replaced cattle farms.

Malcolm wrote:

As to point one: yes, this is a fact. As for two, yes, it will.

seeker242 said:

The biggest thing that injures biodiversity is farming,
And animal farming is the most destructive type of farming.

Malcolm wrote:

No. It doesn't matter the reason crops are planted. But in fact more land is deforested for crops than for beef.

seeker242 said:

followed by housing construction. That's not going away, instead, it will be expanded. Why? Nuts are essential for oils, protein, etc. Without butter or animal fats to cook with, we will need to plant millions of more acres of rape seed, etc. Biofuels are already an environmental disaster, with forests being cut down to plant trees for palm oil, etc. Incorrect, farming would not be expanded. More forest has been destroyed for beef farming than it has for palm oil farming.

Malcolm wrote:

Most definitely it will. <https://phys.org/news/2017-06-palm-oil-responsible-global-deforestation.html>

seeker242 said:

Agriculture is therefore the leading cause of global deforestation, with 24% of the land used for livestock and 29% for crops. The report provides some details of the 29% chunk of deforestation due to agricultural crops, highlighting the crops with the highest contributions – soybean (19%), maize (11%), oil palm (8% %), rice (6%) and sugarcane (5%).

Yes, this is what they claim based on assumptions they've made in their modeling. I am sure their forecasts are quite accurate as far as their assumptions go. But, since there is going to be no en masse conversion to a plant-based diet, their assumptions don't match the real world.

It doesn't need to match the real world in order to demonstrate that taking that action causes less harm.

Malcolm wrote:

You argument is entirely pyrrhic. You are arguing for a set of conditions that will never exist.

seeker242 said:

Since you live in a world where our economy is oil-based, etc., not even you can argue that your dietary choices are "less" harming. You imagine they are, but only because you have created this artificial island in your head, meat/plant. You live in this world. I encourage you seek attainable goals. Not unattainable ones.

My dietary choices are less harming. You imagine they aren't, because you're not well informed on the topic.

Malcolm wrote:

They aren't, because you cannot separate one part of the world economy from another, unless of course you are entirely self-sufficient in your food sources. But if you aren't, you are eating food fertilized with either chemical or organic fertilizer and so on, for example, rice. So, not less harm. The same. You cannot argue on the one hand that vegetarian food fertilized with organic fertilizer is more virtuous than eating a steak. In both cases animal products are used. In both cases, the process involves the suffering of millions of creatures we cannot even estimate.

You simply have no data that shows that more sentient beings are harmed in meat production than would be the case if no meat or dairy was ever used again. This is an assumption you believe, but you have no actual evidence to support this assumption.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 1st, 2021 at 5:16 AM

Title: Re: Senior Buddhist Monks Urge Military Junta to End Violence in Myanmar

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

In these cases Buddhist and Hindus have been on the receiving end.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and Muslims were also driven out of India...into Pakistan and Bangladesh. Buddhism is not really your classic victimized religion.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 1st, 2021 at 5:18 AM

Title: Re: Hearing vs Listening for receiving transmission (lung)

Content:

karmanyngpo said:

Howdy to all Dharma friends.

Wondering if anyone can shed some light, on what necessary conditions need to be there to receive a lung, with sources/ref to teachers/scripture if possible or applicable..

I ask because it seems I have heard conflicting things. Some seem to say that all you need is to HEAR it even if you are distracted or doing other things (eg stories of monks practicing calligraphy while getting transmission) and others seem to say you need to LISTEN undistractedly to receive it. I'm sure that attentavely mindfully listening does not hurt but, is it really necessary to receive the lung at all? Is there any real basis for arguing one side over the other?

Malcolm wrote:

It is better if you are paying attention, but in the case of a long lung, that is a little difficult.

karmanyngpo said:

Thanks Acharya la. So it seems bottom line is, more attention/listening is good but not absolutely necessary to receive a transmission. Is that correct?

KN

Malcolm wrote:

Correct.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 1st, 2021 at 5:54 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

seeker242 said:

There is plenty of data and evidence that shows rice is less harmful than meat. Simply because you refuse to acknowledge it, doesn't mean there isn't any.

Malcolm wrote:

Tell that the countless chickens whose feathers get processed into feather meal for fertilizing organic fields.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 1st, 2021 at 10:36 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Tell that the countless chickens whose feathers get processed into feather meal for fertilizing organic fields.

jimmi said:

This is an outcome of a very efficient industry. None of those chickens were killed for their feathers.

Malcolm wrote:

That doesn't matter, just as it doesn't matter that the small insects killed in grain production to feed those chickens were not meant to be eaten either.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 1st, 2021 at 10:37 AM

Title: Re: Hearing vs Listening for receiving transmission (lung)

Content:

Danny said:

I'm more interested in why girls want
To be hooters waitress than dharma practitioners.

Malcolm wrote:

Generally they don't even know they have a choice.

Mod note 2024: The topic is being locked, because it has been necroed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 1st, 2021 at 10:25 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Queequeg said:

In the old days, they'd get their heads bashed in by an angry mob.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, no, they'd hire Pinkertons, and the latter would do most of the head-bashing

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 1st, 2021 at 10:26 PM

Title: Re: Where to put remainders of tsok offering?

Content:

jewel123 said:

Hello! I was wondering where would be the most appropriate place to leave the remainders of tsok offering? I am very concerned about being misinterpreted as "polluting" or "littering" a place if someone sees me leaving the tsok offering outside. Thank you.

Malcolm wrote:

One needs to place the food in a clean place, preferably high.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 1st, 2021 at 11:18 PM

Title: Re: How can one be happy?

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

I am looking for advice on how to be happy.

Malcolm wrote:

Śantideva says:

All happiness in the the world arises from wishing for the happiness of others.
All suffering in the world arises from wishing for the happiness of oneself.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 1st, 2021 at 11:37 PM

Title: Re: How can one be happy?

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Happiness in the face of adversity is the kind of happiness is what I am looking for, and also how to overcome adversity and be happy. And also how to make others happy.

I know this is a deep subject. The Dalai Lama has written books on it. I want an Awakened Happiness in my life, so if someone could point me to the Path of how to practice in a Happy Way, I would be content and happy to hear your words.

Malcolm wrote:

Just to add to this, Shantideva's Bodhicaryāvatara is the best manual in existence on how to turn adversity into happiness, how to overcome adversity, and how to make others happy. It is the #1 instruction manual for aspiring bodhisattvas. Then of course there is the Mind Training tradition of the Kadampas, like the Seven Points of Mind Training by Guru Chekawa, etc. Simply put, in Parting From the Four Attachments, it is said:

If there is attachment to this life, one is not a Dharma practitioner.
If there is attachment to samsara, one has no renunciation.
If there is attachment to one's own benefit, one does not have bodhicitta.
If grasping arises, one does not have the view.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 2nd, 2021 at 12:03 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

<https://navdanyainternational.org/bill-gates-his-fake-solutions-to-climate-change/>

But its only tangentially about Bill Gates...

Unknown said:

Fake food investors and advocates fail to see how the real problems lie in the industrial agriculture model, rather than in meat production alone. Pointing toward the need to implement agroecological practices and agricultural diversity[60] to ensure a healthier environment and food sovereignty on a global scale.

Fake food is a fake solution, that aims to replace meat without challenging the profit-driven capitalist food and farming industry. This mindset explains why we will soon see Beyond Meat burgers in McDonald's plant-based menus[61] when we should instead focus on the necessity for real regenerative agriculture and systemic change to protect nature and people's health.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 2nd, 2021 at 12:09 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

As a matter of tactics, everyone on the green/left side should be cheering Biden's plan unanimously and enthusiastically because (1) it is about a million times better than anything proposed in the last four - maybe fourteen - years and (2) if any of us condemn it, everyone on the right will be encouraged to oppose it even more than they already are.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, this is true.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 2nd, 2021 at 12:24 AM

Title: Re: How can one be happy?

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Happiness in the face of adversity is the kind of happiness is what I am looking for, and also how to overcome adversity and be happy. And also how to make others happy.

I know this is a deep subject. The Dalai Lama has written books on it. I want an Awakened Happiness in my life, so if someone could point me to the Path of how to practice in a Happy Way, I would be content and happy to hear your words.

Malcolm wrote:

Just to add to this, Shantideva's Bodhicaryāvatara is the best manual in existence on how to turn adversity into happiness, how to overcome adversity, and how to make others happy. It is the #1 instruction manual for aspiring bodhisattvas. Then of course there is the Mind Training tradition of the Kadampas, like the Seven Points of Mind Training by Guru Chekawa, etc. Simply put, in Parting From the Four Attachments, it is said:

If there is attachment to this life, one is not a Dharma practitioner.

If there is attachment to samsara, one has no renunciation.

If there is attachment to one's own benefit, one does not have bodhicitta.

If grasping arises, one does not have the view.

Könchok Thrinley said:

Recently I have been thinking about the lojong texts and which one to use for study and practice. Is there one of these texts you find especially pithy/useful for practitioners nowadays?

Malcolm wrote:

There is the Eight Line Mind Training, the Seven Points, the Wheel of Sharp Weapons, Transforming Suffering into Happiness, etc. It is worth reviewing them all. But in essence, they all boil down to exchanging self and other. Sapan Points out that the root of Dharma is exchanging oneself with others. This is the real basis of Mahāyāna.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 2nd, 2021 at 12:29 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

kirtu said:

<https://newrepublic.com/article/161878/biden-worried-deficit-not-worried-enough-climate-change>, TNR

His infrastructure plan was supposed to be his big shot at climate legislation. It's not nearly enough.

To meet the emissions targets outlined in the Paris Agreement, experts estimate the United States government will need to spend at least $1 trillion annually, or between 3 to 5 percent of GDP, for a decade. President Biden's infrastructure plan, unveiled Wednesday amid much fanfare about its climate commitments, doesn't come close.

Malcolm wrote:

The real fault of this plan is that it is being couched in language of economic nationalism (think Steven Bannon):

Bizarrely, the opening salvo of the White House's 12,000-word fact sheet on the plan framed it as a response to "the great challenges of our time: the climate crisis and the ambitions of an autocratic China." While numerous experts have pointed out the urgent need for collaboration with China on climate change, Biden ended his speech on a grand Bush-era note, casting the U.S. as a democratic bastion trapped in an epic battle against foreign autocrats.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 2nd, 2021 at 12:44 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Queequeg said:

Democrats are finally doing what people have been telling them to do and complain when its wrapped in an American flag. We need to claim that flag back.

Malcolm wrote:

No, we need to convince the people that economic internationalism is and has been the correct path forward for the future of our planet. But, baby steps.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 2nd, 2021 at 12:48 AM

Title: Re: Senior Buddhist Monks Urge Military Junta to End Violence in Myanmar

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

Know that neither liberals, leftist or conservatives/evangelicals give a damn about Asian Buddhism...

Malcolm wrote:

Why should anyone other than Buddhists give a damn about Buddhism in Asia?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 2nd, 2021 at 2:59 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

kirtu said:

<https://www.commondreams.org/news/2021/03/31/critics-warn-biden-infrastructure-plan-falls-woefully-short-climate-crisis>, Common Dreams

"Biden has pledged to cut carbon emissions 50% and decarbonize our electricity sector, but this proposal won't even come close."

<https://www.buzzfeednews.com/article/zahrahirji/biden-infrastructure-plan-green-new-deal>, BuzzFeed News

"I think it's a step towards our vision of a Green New Deal," an activist from the Sunrise Movement said. They just think it falls far short.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, America is filled with Joe Manchins everywhere.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 2nd, 2021 at 3:45 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

kirtu said:

Outside of labeling the Biden Infrastructure plan as a failure...

Malcolm wrote:

Anything as ambitious as the BIP will undoubtedly fail in some areas and be successful in others.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 2nd, 2021 at 11:06 PM

Title: Re: An intersubjective experience in Yogacara

Content:

LastLegend said:

It's not simply a matter of perception. How do we know an object (example:sound)?

Arnold3000 said:

Vasubandhu describes intersubjectivity in Yogacara as the direct influence of the mind on the mind.

Does my mind directly interact with your mind?

Malcolm wrote:

The traces in your mind can produce appearances in the minds of others and vice versa. The classic example given for this is the women who meditated upon herself as a tiger, and terrified everyone in a village.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 2nd, 2021 at 11:07 PM

Title: Re: An intersubjective experience in Yogacara

Content:

Arnold3000 said:

How can people in Yogacara interact with each other? According to Yogacara, all the objects that I see exist only in my mind.

Malcolm wrote:

Analytically, this is the case, but this is not what we experience conventionally.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 3rd, 2021 at 1:12 AM

Title: Re: An intersubjective experience in Yogacara

Content:

Arnold3000 said:

Vasubandhu describes intersubjectivity in Yogacara as the direct influence of the mind on the mind.

Does my mind directly interact with your mind?

Malcolm wrote:

The traces in your mind can produce appearances in the minds of others and vice versa. The classic example given for this is the women who meditated upon herself as a tiger, and terrified everyone in a village.

Queequeg said:

What is the sense organ capable of making contact with the dharmas in another's mind?

Is this the mind as the sixth consciousness? The seventh? Is this the capacity that when developed allows beings to know the thoughts of others?

Malcolm wrote:

The mano-dhātu.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 3rd, 2021 at 1:21 AM

Title: Re: Is a shrine important

Content:

Schwarz said:

Hello,

is it important for you to have a shrine at your home? Why or why not?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, you need a place to store all your Dharma kitsch.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 3rd, 2021 at 7:14 AM

Title: Re: Is a shrine important

Content:

Nemo said:

Do you need one for your spiritual development? Probably not.

Are they useful as a support for magical activities like gaining merit, etc? Definitely yes.

95% of the matter and energy in the universe is of unknown composition and origin.

Dark matter is a good analogy for the world we inhabit. We can see and interact with 5%.

A shrine or shrine room is a scared space that can cross over into those unseen realms.

Natural ones exist too.

I'm a big fan of stupas. Damn they can transform a place. Fill them with a few relics and sprinkle on some faith and you will fall in love with them too.

Queequeg said:

I plan to build a stupa in my yard. Wondering how big I can go without getting the building inspector on my case.

Malcolm wrote:

Would recommend you don't.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 3rd, 2021 at 7:45 AM

Title: Re: Is a shrine important

Content:

Queequeg said:

I plan to build a stupa in my yard. Wondering how big I can go without getting the building inspector on my case.

Malcolm wrote:

Would recommend you don't.

PadmaVonSamba said:

There are specific guidelines for the construction and placement of stupas.

Malcolm wrote:

Then there is selling your house, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 3rd, 2021 at 9:58 AM

Title: Re: An intersubjective experience in Yogacara

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

Are you asking:

‘If there is no intrinsically existing self, then why is there a cause for the senses to arise?’

LastLegend said:

I know what you were asking me earlier: the nature of seeing or hearing as in Sharagama Sutra.

I was asking: why is there an extra ‘guy’ there?

PadmaVonSamba said:

We imagine there is a self because experience seems continuous. For example, we experience an hour rather than experiencing 7,200 half-seconds.

If you experienced 7,200 specifically arising “me” moments, each one produced by the previous one, the experience, the “feel” that there is a ‘self’ would be less likely to occur.

Malcolm wrote:

That’s because our experience of consciousness is principally memory, given that the present moment of consciousness is always nonconceptual and is subsequently processed into a simulacra of those impressions. It’s memory that ties those experiences into an identity projection. Our experiences of moments is preconceptual. Moments are also partless. Arising and perishing are simultaneous.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 3rd, 2021 at 10:53 AM

Title: Re: Is a shrine important

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

There are specific guidelines for the construction and placement of stupas.

Malcolm wrote:

Then there is selling your house, etc.

Hazel said:

How does that fit in?

Malcolm wrote:

What if your buyers are not Buddhists and they decide to demolish your stupa for a hot tub?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 3rd, 2021 at 8:12 PM

Title: Re: An intersubjective experience in Yogacara

Content:

Arnold3000 said:

How can people in Yogacara interact with each other? According to Yogacara, all the objects that I see exist only in my mind.

Malcolm wrote:

Analytically, this is the case, but this is not what we experience conventionally.

Aemilius said:

I don't think it is the case that Yogacara denies the existence of other minds, or other beings. How could there be "perception of water as pus or ambrosia" if there are no sentient beings? (i.e. perceptions of humans, pretas and gods in Vasubandhu's 20 Verses with Commentary).

Moreover, Lankavatara sutra says that "the winds of objectivity cause the Alaya ocean to stir" (and thus perceptions arise).

(Lankavatara sutra Chapter two, IX verse 100, transl. of D.T. Suzuki)

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, you are correct.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 3rd, 2021 at 9:55 PM

Title: Re: Is a shrine important

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

There are specific guidelines for the construction and placement of stupas.

Malcolm wrote:

Then there is selling your house, etc.

Queequeg said:

Lol. I'm the neighbor who doesn't give a shit about property value. And if the next owner want a hot tub, it's their property. But if things go as planned the property will become a temple ground in perpetuity. I'm not quite American in how I view my possessions. It's not all about commerce. It will be a dharma landmark. As Stupas are supposed to be.

Malcolm wrote:

My comment was not directed towards resale value, but making sure the stupa is respected, not demolished, etc., after you sell. Most teachers I know discourage people from building stupas property that might in future be sold to non Buddhists.

Also stupas are not merely dharma landmarks, they represent the mind of the Buddha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 3rd, 2021 at 11:58 PM

Title: Re: Is a shrine important

Content:

Queequeg said:

No offense to you guys but you are converts and so this sense of continuity is not in your flesh.

Malcolm wrote:

It's not in yours either. And we are not "Buddhist converts." There is no such thing.

Meeting the Dharma in this life is a function having met the Dharma in a past life. It's not a genetic thing, nor is it a cultural thing. It's a karmic thing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 4th, 2021 at 12:38 AM

Title: Re: Is a shrine important

Content:

Queequeg said:

No offense to you guys but you are converts and so this sense of continuity is not in your flesh.

Malcolm wrote:

It's not in yours either. And we are not "Buddhist converts." There is no such thing.

Meeting the Dharma in this life is a function having met the Dharma in a past life. It's not a genetic thing, nor is it a cultural thing. It's a karmic thing.

Arnoud said:

Since there are family lineages of Tertons, oracles, and ngagpa's and diviners, isn't there something to be said for some genetic, physical component? Especially since practice, in particular Dzogchen, is intimately connected to the body.

Malcolm wrote:

No, that's just incidental. Karma trumps and determines all such relations.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 4th, 2021 at 2:28 AM

Title: Re: Is a shrine important

Content:

Queequeg said:

You guys are so pessimistic and negative.

Malcolm wrote:

Not really. It is always better to err on the side of caution when embarking on building Buddhist monuments of any kind. I've seen more than one Buddhist community get into protracted legal battles over this stuff, especially when neighbors get wind of things like stupa constructions etc. Hell, your land might not even be zoned to allow such construction. Then, you have install a leach field, etc., get construction permits, etc. And that does not even take into consideration the idea of having your backyard stupa designated a landmark:

<https://digitalcommons.pace.edu/cgi/viewcontent.cgi?referer=https://www.google.com/&httpsredir=1&article=1613&context=peir>

For example, there is the famous New Mexico stupa that wound up being on federal land:

<https://www.au.org/church-state/november-2012-church-state/people-events/buddhist-shrine-moved-from-national-park-after>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 4th, 2021 at 2:35 AM

Title: Re: Is a shrine important

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Meeting the Dharma in this life is a function having met the Dharma in a past life. It's not a genetic thing, nor is it a cultural thing. It's a karmic thing.

Queequeg said:

Flesh is karma embodied. Or isn't it?

Malcolm wrote:

That is a karma vipaka, so anyone who is a buddhist has that karma vipaka.

Queequeg said:

This should be obvious though - being born into an environment and among others where Buddha dharma is like the air, it leads to a different outlook.

Malcolm wrote:

You are making an argument based on a kind of cultural essentialism. The three poisons are the same everywhere and afflict everyone. The only difference about the air in Buddhist countries is the smell of incense, and some of it is horrible.

One cannot convert to Buddhism. The notion of "Conversion" comes from viewing things in a one-lifetime paradigm.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 4th, 2021 at 3:00 AM

Title: Re: Is a shrine important

Content:

Queequeg said:

Sorry, Malcolm. You assume much about my views again. So let's just leave it at this: you wouldn't build a stupa.

Malcolm wrote:

I didn't say that.

I said I would not build a stupa unless I was reasonably certain it would not be desecrated and that I've been advised that building stupas on private property is fraught for that reason.

As for your views, you were the person, I think, who attempted to distinguish yourself as an "ethnic" buddhist as opposed to us "converts." I object to the distinction, since I think it is invalid. You were also the person who brought in the notion of how being raised in family of Buddhists somehow imbued the air with a mysterious aroma that we converts would never know. I merely responded in kind. Most of the ethnic Buddhists I know don't know shit about Buddhism and don't behave like they do.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 4th, 2021 at 9:51 PM

Title: Re: Is a shrine important

Content:

Queequeg said:

I didn't realize there was a controversy around building stupas. Honestly, this is the first time I'm encountering such conservative views.

Malcolm wrote:

Stupas are descendent from the royal funerary tumulus. There are canonical requirements surrounding the construction of such memorials. There are many considerations. One of them is consideration for the negative karma earned by those who may ignorantly destroy them. Another is the consideration for constructing them correctly. I am quite sure you can find the proper procedures for constructing such a memorial in Tendai literature. You might consult the peace pagoda folks.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 5th, 2021 at 9:58 AM

Title: Re: An intersubjective experience in Yogacara

Content:

Supramundane said:

I believe Yogacara accepts the concept of the Trikaya. This can be applied to the concept of consciousness; contents of consciousness belong to the nirmanakaya, manifest form; the mindstream belongs to sambhogkaya, energy; and pure awareness, to the dharmakaya.

Malcolm wrote:

The yogatcarins systematized the notion of the three kayas, but they did not frame them in those terms.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 5th, 2021 at 10:14 PM

Title: Re: Is a shrine important

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Here you go: Gorintō with Lotus Sutra inscriptions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 5th, 2021 at 10:16 PM

Title: Re: Is a shrine important

Content:

Queequeg said:

Bringing this back to stupas - they were placed at crossroads and other significant and frequently visited locales precisely to cause the the memory of certain beings to impinge on the minds of passersby.

Malcolm wrote:

There are also guidelines for their placement.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 5th, 2021 at 10:41 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

kirtu said:

What tactics do you have to offer?

Malcolm wrote:

Short of descending into authoritarianism, it is going to be slow going, at best. People cannot deal with the extent of it, just like they cannot deal with the extent of the Covid crisis. It's too much for most people to contemplate. For example, you posted this event above. People cannot deal with this. They have (to them) more immediately pressing concerns in their lives, despite the fact that the climate is the most pressing issue in their lives.

And the early flowering of Kyoto's cherry blossoms correspond precisely to the hockey stick, as the thousand year old records of the yearly blossoming show.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 5th, 2021 at 10:46 PM

Title: Re: Buddhist Rock & Metal

Content:

Astus said:

Let's share Buddhist metal, rock, and other modern music.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Qi8HnW-SHf4> - A one of a kind song by the Chinese band Yaksa (夜叉), the lyrics is based on the dharani (Niepan xiangmo zhou 涅槃降魔咒) recited by Manjusri to save Ananda from 64000 billion maras in the last chapter of the Mahaparinirvana Sutra (T374p602/T375p850).

Dharma (達摩樂隊) - Buddhist death metal from Taiwan, they growl mantras

Videos available at <https://www.youtube.com/channel/UCi1eseuCuPlozZK6tTcqCzg>

Sample song: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=LC6Tc3y1icM>

Shamon (沙門) - Futuristic Buddhist Pop (進化系仏教ポップ), a band of Buddhist priests from Japan, they also have some songs in English

<https://www.youtube.com/channel/UCCZm7X9tqCJCeoOIZN0psCQ>

Sample English song: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=oZ-cAgsKQkl>

Nam Jazz Experiment (南無ジャズ・エクスペリメント) - Sutra chanting combined with Jazz from Japan

Videos available at https://www.youtube.com/channel/UCAGbl6vuWZg3_FbEMAc7DeA

(<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ijiyBbi8jnQ&list=PLEl752UqQLKWLZrPBCGwuL4T-ivPhzXrW>)

Sample song: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ijiyBbi8jnQ>

Malcolm wrote:

Let's not and say we did.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 5th, 2021 at 10:59 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

kirtu said:

Many of us live in English dominant countries where climate change was completely denied, even today.

Malcolm wrote:

Scotland seems to ahead of the curve in general:

<https://scheerpost.com/2021/04/05/scotland-is-the-first-industrialized-country-to-reach-this-green-landmark/>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 6th, 2021 at 12:18 AM

Title: Re: Is a shrine important

Content:

Queequeg said:

Yes. People seem to be stuck on the fact that I used "flesh". I didn't mean it in the literal sense. I meant it in the sense that when something permeates you, its part of you.

Malcolm wrote:

Then there is the proverbial stone in the ocean. No matter how long it is immersed in water, its interior never gets wet.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 6th, 2021 at 12:21 AM

Title: Re: Is a shrine important

Content:

Queequeg said:

The insistence on formality and weighing the karma, etc. etc. that's all well and good, but also can have the effect of snuffing all the joy and spontaneity from the practice.

Malcolm wrote:

That's the main purpose of dharmawheel.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 6th, 2021 at 1:10 AM

Title: Re: a question

Content:

master of puppets said:

Just want my mind to be like a mirror.

Malcolm wrote:

It's already like a mirror.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 6th, 2021 at 3:29 AM

Title: Re: Buddhist Rock & Metal

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Let's not and say we did.

Astus said:

You don't like the genre?

Malcolm wrote:

You might say that.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 6th, 2021 at 3:35 AM

Title: Re: Buddhist Rock & Metal

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

The thing with using Dharmic themes in music is that it can get cheezy fast.

Malcolm wrote:

Actually, it is primordially cheesy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 6th, 2021 at 4:07 AM

Title: Re: Buddhist Rock & Metal

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

The thing with using Dharmic themes in music is that it can get cheezy fast.

Malcolm wrote:

Actually, it is primordially cheesy.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Well ymmv but I find the syrupy, poppy versions of Dharanis and such harder to deal with than this stuff.

Malcolm wrote:

This is more my style:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 6th, 2021 at 5:18 AM

Title: Re: Buddhist Rock & Metal

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Just to add to my general dislike of so called "Dharma music," I think Hindus do a better job of it without cheesing out, since they have the raga thing going for them.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 6th, 2021 at 7:50 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

kirtu said:

"renewables" can include greenhouse gas producing sources.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, I am aware of everything you mentioned. Nevertheless, I mentioned Scotland specifically because it is an anglophone country.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 6th, 2021 at 9:50 AM

Title: Re: Buddhist Rock & Metal

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

It's great because it has very advanced Tibetan chanting

Malcolm wrote:

No, actually it doesn't, sorry.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 6th, 2021 at 10:10 PM

Title: Re: Video on Mipam R and Buddha Nature.

Content:

amanitamusc said:

Most practitioner's prefer this level of teaching from a Scholar practitioner or better a Buddha ,rather than just a Scholar.

treehuggingoctopus said:

He is a practitioner.

His books are excellent, and easier to follow than the lecture. This is stuff that gets much more accessible on paper.

Malcolm wrote:

He translates so sor rang gi rig pa'i ye shes incorrectly. Not understanding this one term correctly skews ones whole view. It is not reflexive.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 6th, 2021 at 10:34 PM

Title: Re: On Enlightenment - What and who gets there?

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

1. The true nature of the mind is unimpeded awareness.

Malcolm wrote:

No, the nature of mind is inseparable cognizance (rig pa), clarity (gsal ba), and emptiness (stong pa nyid).

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 6th, 2021 at 10:37 PM

Title: Re: On Enlightenment - What and who gets there?

Content:

Padmist said:

Thank you for taking a stab at it.

Yes I'm referring to anything outside Tibetan (Zen for instance) and then outside Mahayana as well.

I'm just confused or uncertain on a lot of this because....if Bodhisattva is the goal of Tibetan Buddhist (Mahayanist) then what happened to the belief that tantra is very fast? Are we then 'delaying' or slowing down the path deliberately? Much like driving a Lamborghini in a school zone? Fast but deliberately slowing it down.

Malcolm wrote:

Common Mahāyāna is too slow. That is why we have Vajrayāna.

Padmist said:

I say that because (a) the belief that tantra is so fast but (b) we follow the Bodhisattva path meaning (c) not going directly to Buddhahood. So if A is so fast but you don't aspire for C right away, then that means there is a deliberate slowing down in the B area. Did I get this right?

Malcolm wrote:

No. In Uncommon Mahāyāna Vajrayāna, one wishes to attain buddhahood as rapidly as possible, and eliminate the lengthy time it takes in the common Mahāyāna path.

Padmist said:

Finally, if the above paragraph is correct, it would seem that there are no enlightened beings. (Unless you count Arahant) Because everyone (Tibetan/Mahayanist) are following the Bodhisattva path, using a very fast vehicle (Tantra) but slowing it down so as not to reach Buddhahood fast. That would seem that no Tibetan Buddhist / Mahayanist are enlightened. Or do I get this whole thing completely wrong?

Malcolm wrote:

Yup. completely wrong. Sorry.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 6th, 2021 at 11:14 PM

Title: Re: About translations and transliterations

Content:

penalvad_uba said:

Why transliterations, from same Mantras, differs. There are specific methods being applied or it is just the knowledge and wisdom of the translator ?

E.G. dudjom tersar transliterations from vajrayana.org and from lotsawahouse differs.

What you think is better to ease the learning of the Mantra ?

karmanyangpo said:

It is true that you should follow how your teacher PRONOUNCES mantra...

Malcolm wrote:

That's one opinion, not a truth. There are other opinions as well.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, April 6th, 2021 at 11:35 PM
Title: Re: Video on Mipam R and Buddha Nature.
Content:

treehuggingoctopus said:

Well, sorry to hear this -- but does this influence his argument in "Mipam on Buddha Nature"? Maybe in the context he works with the damage is minimal? (I am genuinely asking -- I have no way of verifying the accuracy of his translations, naturally.)

Malcolm wrote:

It appears that he does not understand or misunderstands the intellectual history of the word "rig pa," which is just shorthand for so sor rang gyis rig pa'i ye shes. See Kapstien's article, "We are all gshan stong pas."

Don't misunderstand, he is a very bright person, but this kind of issue can really skew your view.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 12:53 AM
Title: Re: Video on Mipam R and Buddha Nature.
Content:

treehuggingoctopus said:

Well, sorry to hear this -- but does this influence his argument in "Mipam on Buddha Nature"? Maybe in the context he works with the damage is minimal? (I am genuinely asking -- I have no way of verifying the accuracy of his translations, naturally.)

Malcolm wrote:

It appears that he does not understand or misunderstands the intellectual history of the word "rig pa," which is just shorthand for so sor rang gyis rig pa'i ye shes. See Kapstien's article, "We are all gshan stong pas."

Don't misunderstand, he is a very bright person, but this kind of issue can really skew your view.

treehuggingoctopus said:

Doubly weird, since Duckworth knows and appreciates the piece and its author in general. I will try to re-read MoBN when I find some time, and see how he deals with the problem.

Malcolm wrote:

It is extremely clear that the term refers to a gnosis that one realizes for oneself without depending on another. It is the same category of terms like translating rig pa as awareness.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 1:14 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

I support my local Greens party...

Malcolm wrote:

Unfortunately, the Green Party in the USA is hopeless. Third parties in the US just cause problems and get Republican Presidents elected, as happened in 2000 and 2016. So the environmental movement has to caucus with the Democratic Party, there is no other choice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 1:16 AM

Title: Re: On Enlightenment - What and who gets there?

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

1. The true nature of the mind is unimpeded awareness.

Malcolm wrote:

No, the nature of mind is inseparable cognizance (rig pa), clarity (gsal ba), and emptiness (stong pa nyid).

PadmaVonSamba said:

Gsal ba and stong pa are both unimpeded la.

Malcolm wrote:

Your definition is not complete.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 1:44 AM

Title: Re: On Enlightenment - What and who gets there?

Content:

Seeker12 said:

If it's of any interest, as perhaps an aside, it is sometimes explained that the shepherd type is by far the fastest, with the king type being by far the slowest when it comes to realizing unsurpassed Buddhahood.

Malcolm wrote:

That makes no sense from a Vajrayāna point of view.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 2:11 AM

Title: Re: To account for the cause of this decline in the fortunes of Bön in both Zhangzhung and Tibet.

Content:

gelukman said:

I found it in facebook bon group. I wanted it to be removed. As I think the story is gossip and a seed of disharmony. But the group admin was of a different opinion. What do you think?

Malcolm wrote:

I think it is typical Bonpo history, no more slanderous of Buddhism than Buddhist accounts of Bon are slanderous of Bon.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 3:06 AM

Title: Re: Video on Mipam R and Buddha Nature.

Content:

treehuggingoctopus said:

So while it is a faulty translation (as you say) it may have no impact whatsoever on his understanding and the argument in general. It is an almost perfectly contentless marker.

Malcolm wrote:

It is arguably one of the most important terms in Buddhism. So, one has to wonder.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 3:30 AM

Title: Re: Video on Mipam R and Buddha Nature.

Content:

treehuggingoctopus said:

So while it is a faulty translation (as you say) it may have no impact whatsoever on his understanding and the argument in general. It is an almost perfectly contentless marker.

Malcolm wrote:

It is arguably one of the most important terms in Buddhism. So, one has to wonder.

treehuggingoctopus said:

Yes, it is interesting that one may write a very well-researched and perfectly coherent book on the topic without specifying what one of the crucial terms actually means. (On the other hand, this is what the rules of the game allow and in a sense encourage: this is exactly what all philosophy, and perhaps all discourse in general, prominently features: we rely on crucial terms, frameworks, etc., without noting what they mean/do, and often without even noticing that they are there -- and we can quarrel and argument till death do us part without minding the situation for a second. Off to the exams now, before it is too late.)

Malcolm wrote:

This is why in end, words are useless for understanding Dzogchen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 3:32 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Maybe that was their plan all along. Do you remember Nader saying on TV how much environmental support we'll get once Bush gets elected, because of the backlash against that President's possible Republican's environmental policies? I think the Green Party is kind of playing a game.

Malcolm wrote:

Same in 2016, "Electing Trump will provoke a progressive backlash..." but didn't happen either. Plus the Greens like Stein fell for a bunch of Russian propaganda. Stein is a total idiot.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 3:35 AM

Title: Re: On Enlightenment - What and who gets there?

Content:

Seeker12 said:

If it's of any interest, as perhaps an aside, it is sometimes explained that the shepherd type is by far the fastest, with the king type being by far the slowest when it comes to realizing unsurpassed Buddhahood.

Malcolm wrote:

That makes no sense from a Vajrayāna point of view.

Seeker12 said:

I believe Dudjom Rinpoche said it, though I can't recall for certain. I almost certainly got it from a Vajrayana teacher given that that's all I've read, basically, in the last years. But beyond that, I'm just a messenger, I'm not claiming some clear seeing about it myself really.

Malcolm wrote:

I have never personally encountered such a sentiment myself.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 4:13 AM

Title: Re: On Enlightenment - What and who gets there?

Content:

Seeker12 said:

I believe Dudjom Rinpoche said it, though I can't recall for certain. I almost certainly got it from a Vajrayana teacher given that that's all I've read, basically, in the last years. But beyond that, I'm just a messenger, I'm not claiming some clear seeing about it myself really.

Malcolm wrote:

I have never personally encountered such a sentiment myself.

Seeker12 said:

It's here too - <http://www.buddhism.org/Sutras/2/Shantideva.htm>

"The king's way of generating bodhicitta is the least courageous of the three, the boatman's way is more courageous, and the shepherd's way is the most courageous of all. Practitioners of ordinary capacity, those who follow the way of the king, will reach perfect enlightenment within 'thirty-three countless aeons';⁴⁹⁴ those of mediocre capacity, who follow the way of the boatman, will reach perfect enlightenment within 'seven countless aeons';⁴⁹⁵ while those of highest capacity, who follow the way of the shepherd, will reach perfect enlightenment within 'three countless aeons'.⁴⁹⁶"

Here it says, regarding a citation,

Malcolm wrote:

What I was attempting to convey is that I have never seen it asserted that this is the case for a Vajrayāna practitioner, where the king's bodhicitta is the norm. That's why I said it makes no sense from a Vajrayāna perspective.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 9:11 AM

Title: Re: Buddhism and the question of "cultural appropriation"

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

I just want to naturally know Tibetan. The fact that I don't is unfair. Something is being unfair to me where I just cannot speak it fluently out of thin air.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 9:13 AM

Title: Re: Two Truths in Mahayana

Content:

Arnold3000 said:

There are Two Truths: Conventional Truth and Absolute Truth. This counts as two sides of the same coin. But I cannot understand how it is possible to simultaneously believe in both conventional and absolute truth? Could we give examples. thanks

Malcolm wrote:

Thorough knowledge of relative truth is ultimate truth; for this reason the two truths are mutually confirming and not in contradiction at all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 9:44 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Maybe that was their plan all along. Do you remember Nader saying on TV how much environmental support we'll get once Bush gets elected, because of the backlash against that President's possible Republican's environmental policies? I think the Green Party is kind of playing a game.

Malcolm wrote:

Same in 2016, "Electing Trump will provoke a progressive backlash..." but didn't happen either. Plus the Greens like Stein fell for a bunch of Russian propaganda. Stein is a total idiot.

Kim O'Hara said:

That's all quite sad. Is it any different at local council level? State level?

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

Not much. The US system really is a de facto two party system. Successful progressives graduate to Democratic Party or vanish into obscurity.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 7:13 PM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Do you or anyone know how Buddha viewed the idea of Jiva and where He stood on that subject?

Malcolm wrote:
He rejected it as well.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 9:06 PM
Title: Kumarajiva BBC program
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
<https://www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/b09yhj09?fbclid=IwAR2Ewal1P-v8yw3rFs2QjHlHlJBlbe2eDOnY9AdG8RexK0ozuud-qEPIfwA>

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 9:08 PM
Title: Re: Two Truths in Mahayana
Content:
Queequeg said:
Tr. Kalupahana

Malcolm wrote:
Terrible translation.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 9:40 PM
Title: Re: Two Truths in Mahayana
Content:
Arnold3000 said:
There are Two Truths: Conventional Truth and Absolute Truth. This counts as two sides of the same coin. But I cannot understand how it is possible to simultaneously believe in both conventional and absolute truth? Could we give examples. thanks

LastLegend said:
So which idiot constructed this conventional truth and ultimate truth?

Malcolm wrote:
The Buddha.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 9:40 PM
Title: Re: Two Truths in Mahayana
Content:

Queequeg said:
Tr. Kalupahana

Malcolm wrote:
Terrible translation.

Queequeg said:
Which one do you recommend? I've mostly relied on Garfield but have pulled back a little because of criticism I've read here.

Malcolm wrote:
Nagarjuna's Middle Way: Mulamadhyamakakarika (Classics of Indian Buddhism)

Siderits/Katsura

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 9:43 PM
Title: Re: Two Truths in Mahayana

Content:

Arnold3000 said:

There are Two Truths: Conventional Truth and Absolute Truth. This counts as two sides of the same coin. But I cannot understand how it is possible to simultaneously believe in both conventional and absolute truth? Could we give examples. thanks

Malcolm wrote:

Thorough knowledge of relative truth is ultimate truth; for this reason the two truths are mutually confirming and not in contradiction at all.

Arnold3000 said:

For example, I gave a child candy and he was delighted, this is a conventionally truth. But the absolute truth is that me, the kid, and the candy don't exist, or that the baby won't be happy?

Malcolm wrote:

The ultimate truth is that neither you, the child, nor the candy exist inherently. As QQ pointed out, whatever is dependently originated, that is empty and dependently designated. The two truths are inseparable.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 9:52 PM
Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Do you or anyone know how Buddha viewed the idea of Jiva and where He stood on that subject?

Malcolm wrote:
He rejected it as well.

Könchok Chödrak said:
Can you explain in more detail about this particular statement of Buddha rejecting the Jiva? Where I can find it in Suttas or Sutras, absolutely anywhere? Or you can tell me off the top of your head. Thank you.

Malcolm wrote:
The Teaching of Akṣayamati:

The sūtras that, with various words, proclaim a self, a being, a life principle, a life-sustaining principle, a spirit, a personality, a human being, a man, a subject that acts, and a subject that feels and those that teach that there is a ruler where there is no ruler are called implicit. The sūtras that teach emptiness, the absence of distinguishing marks, the absence of anything to long for, the unconditioned, the unborn, the unoriginated, the nonexistent, the absence of self, the absence of being, the absence of soul, the absence of person, the absence of spirit, the absence of ruler, and the gates of liberation are called definitive. This is called the reliance on the sūtras of definitive meaning, not on the sūtras of implicit meaning.
<https://read.84000.co/translation/toh175.html>

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 9:55 PM
Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.
Content:
Schrödinger's Yidam said:
sentient beings do not partake of Buddha Nature.

Malcolm wrote:
If this is the case, and I doubt it, this would mean that this idea stands in direct contradiction with the main systematized source of the tathāgatgarbha theory, the Uttaratantra.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 10:09 PM
Title: Re: Two Truths in Mahayana
Content:

LastLegend said:
So which idiot constructed this conventional truth and ultimate truth?

Malcolm wrote:
The Buddha.

LastLegend said:
Buddha never said a word!

Malcolm wrote:
Well, then someone must have ghostwritten for him, because there are countless volumes of the Buddha's words.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 10:24 PM
Title: Re: Two Truths in Mahayana
Content:
LastLegend said:
I think so...when he raised a flower neither Mahakasyapa or him said a word.

Malcolm wrote:
This event never happened.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 10:26 PM
Title: Re: I would like to learn more about Rime.
Content:
Könchok Chödrak said:
Does anyone have any Teachers, websites, organizations, or books they can recommend me on the subject of Rime? Or any such things on the subject of Rime.

Also if anyone would like to educate me about Rime in Tibetan Buddhism I would be thankful, just from whatever you can explain to me that you think would be helpful. Om.

Malcolm wrote:
Rime is a name Sakyas and Kagyus use when they are actually Dzogchen practitioners.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 10:44 PM
Title: Re: Two Truths in Mahayana
Content:
LastLegend said:
I don't think it did. Even Buddha doesn't exist.

Malcolm wrote:
Even you don't exist, but here you are.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 10:56 PM

Title: Re: Are there any precedents that allow for 'developments' of Buddhism after the Buddha?

Content:

Aemilius said:

Nichiren Buddhists interpret the prophecy of three time periods to justify that their teaching is a proper practice for the last period of the Law:

Malcolm wrote:

As does the Cakrasamvara Tantra. That, and 5 bucks, will get you coffee.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 10:57 PM

Title: Re: Hello from the other side

Content:

Bazman said:

I have read a few books on buddhism the last ten years.

The latest being why buddhism is true by Robert Wright

Basically I pretty much accept the non self is true.

I just need to work on meditation.

Any other advice?

Malcolm wrote:

Find a teacher.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 7th, 2021 at 11:37 PM

Title: Re: Two Truths in Mahayana

Content:

Arnold3000 said:

Can you apply this explanation to sentient beings, humans, animals?

PadmaVonSamba said:
it's universal. It can be applied to everything.

Arnold3000 said:
I just don't know how to figure it out? Conditional truth: For example, if I help poor people who are hungry and give them money for food, they will feel happy, they will think that I am a good person, and they will think how to thank me. But if you look at it from the side of the Absolute Truth:

Malcolm wrote:
It must means you, the gift, and the recipient lack inherent existence.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, April 8th, 2021 at 12:11 AM
Title: Re: Are there any precedents that allow for 'developments' of Buddhism after the Buddha?
Content:
Queequeg said:
I'll say, its a lot of wasted energy.

Malcolm wrote:
Fortunately, Dzogchen teachings assert they will be the last ones standing, so I don't worry at all.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, April 8th, 2021 at 7:21 AM
Title: Re: Two Truths in Mahayana
Content:

Malcolm wrote:
It must means you, the gift, and the recipient lack inherent existence.

PadmaVonSamba said:
Malcolm is correct. If you are asking how to apply the idea of absolute truth in some meaningful or practical way to our everyday life experiences, then even on a purely intellectual or conceptual level, you can use it as a means of letting go of attachment.

If, ultimately, there is no "me" giving money to a poor person, then there's no "me" waiting around for a "thank you" or expecting anything in return.

Likewise, ultimately, there is no single recipient. You are helping that person by giving money. That person will then spend that money, which in turn helps someone else, and so on.

Although absolute truth/relative truth can be applied to everything, it doesn't need to be all the time. The whole point of understanding relative/ultimate is as a practice to eliminate attachment by seeing that ultimately nothing can be said to truly exist to which one can attach.

Arnold3000 said:

May I ask again?

I just can't understand:

If you take the river

Conventional truth (what occurs) the river Amazon flows.

The Absolute truth (that which exists) is simply the flow of water across the earth. That is, all rivers should be perceived as just streams of water.

If you take a people

Conventional truth: Every person is composed of the five aggregates, or skandhas: matter, sensation, perception, mental formations and consciousness.

Absolute truth:?

Thanks you!

Malcolm wrote:

Take a course.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 8th, 2021 at 7:21 AM

Title: Re: Does a Vegan Damaru exist anywhere?

Content:

peterscott87 said:

Looking for a damaru without leather. My teacher told me no such thing exists, and I've searched everywhere with no luck, but I have hope that maybe someone has more extensive knowledge than me.

Malcolm wrote:

Doesn't exist. Vajrayana and Veganism are mutually exclusive.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 8th, 2021 at 7:44 AM

Title: Re: Great Vegan Debate

Content:

LastLegend said:

It's unrealistic to ask people to eat vegetables...even the Buddha did not do that.

Sunrise said:

The Buddha was skillful allowing the Sangha, who were beggars, to eat meat (not intentionally killed for them).

Malcolm wrote:

He also never discussed the diets of lay people.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 8th, 2021 at 9:03 AM

Title: Re: Does a Vegan Damaru exist anywhere?

Content:

peterscott87 said:

Looking for a damaru without leather. My teacher told me no such thing exists, and I've searched everywhere with no luck, but I have hope that maybe someone has more extensive knowledge than me.

Malcolm wrote:

Doesn't exist. Vajrayana and Veganism are mutually exclusive.

Hazel said:

How so? I'm not vegan, but am curious.

Malcolm wrote:

One cannot, ultimately, have notions about food purity or the lack thereof. Most people are incapable of this, for this reason such transcendence of limitations is expressed in symbols.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 8th, 2021 at 9:20 AM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Nevertheless, I can't help but feel people really beat their heads against the wall needlessly when it comes to Buddha Nature and Tathagatagarbha thought. The issue as I see it is that Tathagatagarbha texts present so many varied and often seemingly even opposing definitions and lines of argument when it comes to defining these concepts. You really can make well-reasoned arguments drawing on canonical theory for maybe a dozen different definitions of Buddha Nature.

Malcolm wrote:

According to Candrakirti:

I. tathagatagarbha is merely the innate purity of a given consciousness also termed "luminosity" or "clear light."

II. The 32 major marks said to abide innately in sentient beings is simply a metaphor for the natural purity of ones mind.

This should be understood as the Prasangika view of tathagatgarbha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 8th, 2021 at 11:14 AM

Title: Re: Not getting results - what to do !

Content:

The_Wonderer said:

Hi All,

I having chanting for almost 7 years now. But despite chanting for many hours in a day, doing study and following as suggested by seniors, I am not getting the desired results/goals.

This is leading to a lot of confusion:

1. What wrong I am doing?
2. Is this practice really for me?
3. What next steps I can take.

I am now at that stage in life, where hope/wish is slowly turning to desperation.
Kindly Suggest and Guide

Thanks

Malcolm wrote:

Has your practice caused you to become a nicer person? If not, there is something missing from your practice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 1:55 AM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

As you say, I also find this quote conceptually inconsistent with general buddhist teachings (that ignorant westerners such as myself have been exposed to), but now I put this down to my concepts and lack of experience.

Yes, it is conceptually inconsistent with general buddhist teachings, if by "general" you mean the teachings on everything being self-empty (Madhyamaka, Heart Sutra, etc.).

The workaround being the idea it is exempt from Prasangika deconstruction because it cannot become an object of consciousness, which I think is how it is said in an earlier edition.

Malcolm wrote:

This does not make sense. Why? Nonconceptual gnosis arises from a cause, as is very clearly stated in both Madhyamaka AND Yogacāra sources.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 1:57 AM

Title: Re: Does a Vegan Damaru exist anywhere?

Content:

Cinnabar said:

I guess I'm not convinced that people couldn't bring a "vegan" drum into that country and do good practice.

Malcolm wrote:

that's not the point.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 2:58 AM

Title: Re: Does a Vegan Damaru exist anywhere?

Content:

Cinnabar said:

He says he wants a "vegan" damaru. It's his first post and he hasn't followed up.

Malcolm wrote:

No such thing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 3:22 AM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

Astus said:

but real in the sense of conditioned conditions.

Malcolm wrote:

No, not even that.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 3:48 AM

Title: Re: Does a Vegan Damaru exist anywhere?

Content:

Cinnabar said:

So, as I'm taking "vegan damaru" to mean a damaru without a leather skin...

... are you saying I really couldn't use such a beast in my practice?

Malcolm wrote:

People can do whatever they want and they do. But there is no such a thing as a vegan damaru. Real damarus are made with skulls and skin.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 4:35 AM

Title: Re: Does a Vegan Damaru exist anywhere?

Content:

Cinnabar said:

So, as I'm taking "vegan damaru" to mean a damaru without a leather skin...

... are you saying I really couldn't use such a beast in my practice?

Malcolm wrote:

People can do whatever they want and they do. But there is no such a thing as a vegan damaru. Damarus are made with skulls and skin.

Cinnabar said:

I am aware they are made of skulls and skin.

But my question stands. If I move to where my partner is, and can not import animal products, does that mean I can't practice vajrayana with a damaru with a nonleather skin?

Malcolm wrote:

I answered your question already.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 5:08 AM

Title: Re: Does a Vegan Damaru exist anywhere?

Content:

Cinnabar said:

That doesn't answer my question as to whether I can practice vajrayana or not with a damaru with a nonleather skin.

Malcolm wrote:

It does. But there is still no such thing as a vegan damaru, at least, not in any tantra with which I am familiar.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 5:15 AM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

No, not even that.

Astus said:

No, because there are no appearances, or because they are not dependent, or maybe both?

Malcolm wrote:

No, because conditions also cannot be found upon analysis, exactly like material and mental appearances, the former are no more real than the latter. They have the same amount of reality, they are unable to bear ultimate analysis.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 5:44 AM

Title: Re: Does a Vegan Damaru exist anywhere?

Content:

Cinnabar said:

That doesn't answer my question as to whether I can practice vajrayana or not with a damaru with a nonleather skin.

Malcolm wrote:

It does. But there is still no such thing as a vegan damaru, at least, not in any tantra with which I am familiar.

Cinnabar said:

I never said there was a vegan damaru.

My damaru certainly isn't vegan.

And no. You didn't answer my sincere question. You were quite oblique.

"People can do what they want" can be taken in myriad ways.

Malcolm wrote:

I did answer it. You just didn't like the answer.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 5:47 AM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

No, because conditions also cannot be found upon analysis, exactly like material and mental appearances, the former are no more real than the latter. They have the same amount of reality, they are unable to bear ultimate analysis.

Astus said:

Do say that conventionally things exist independently?

Malcolm wrote:

That question is incoherent, it assumes that conditions can bear analysis. They can't. They are just relative appearances upon which designations are made.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 9:45 AM

Title: Re: Does a Vegan Damaru exist anywhere?

Content:

peterscott87 said:

Looking for a damaru without leather. My teacher told me no such thing exists, and I've searched everywhere with no luck, but I have hope that maybe someone has more extensive knowledge than me.

Malcolm wrote:

Doesn't exist. Vajrayana and Veganism are mutually exclusive.

Nicholas2727 said:

Are you saying that one can not be vegan and practice Vajrayana?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 9:57 AM

Title: Re: Buddhism and the question of "cultural appropriation"

Content:

Matt J said:

To lay a charge of cultural appropriation in a Buddhist context, one must first deny rebirth and the karmic habits that have drawn us to Buddhism in the first place. From a Buddhist POV, it is not cultural appropriation because I am not a Westerner--- this is just my current form, and I have likely spent many forms as Tibetan, Chinese, etc. To impose a Western self on me in this fashion is wrong. Ironically, this is actually a denial of the culture that one is claiming to protect.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 10:12 AM

Title: Re: Does a Vegan Damaru exist anywhere?

Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

Are you saying that one can not be vegan and practice Vajrayana?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Nicholas2727 said:

Would you be able to elaborate on why it is not possible?

Malcolm wrote:

One cannot reject samaya substances. You may consult Sakya Pandita on this point.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 7:33 PM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

That question is incoherent, it assumes that conditions can bear analysis. They can't. They are just relative appearances upon which designations are made.

Astus said:

If so, how can any valid statements be made? No difference between ordinary true and false?

Malcolm wrote:

Conventional truths are derived from observing functional appearances. Falsehoods are derived from observing nonfunctional appearances. Example, lake vs. mirage.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 7:39 PM

Title: Re: Does a Vegan Damaru exist anywhere?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

One cannot reject samaya substances. You may consult Sakya Pandita on this point.

Cinnabar said:

I have seen vegetarians and vegans deal with this in different ways. When I was a vegetarian I ate the samaya substances. Meat at ganapuja, whatever goes into blessing pills. I have seen others do this as well.

I think all would still consider themselves veg/vegan despite this partaking of samaya substances.

Of course I have seen the opposite. At one ganapuja there was a fight and nastiness over the presence of meat and alcohol.

Malcolm wrote:

Vegans also reject lower tantra substances, such as milk and the other five products of a cow, honey, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 7:43 PM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Conventional truths are derived from observing functional appearances. Falsehoods are derived from observing nonfunctional appearances. Example, lake vs. mirage.

Astus said:

And by functional do you mean causally effective? If so, what's wrong with saying that phenomena are conditional?

Malcolm wrote:

You used the word "real".

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 8:26 PM

Title: Re: Self Defense

Content:

jewel123 said:

Hello! I am very concerned regarding the increased attacks on Asian American community. I keep thinking what should be my immediate response when I will be attacked verbally or physically. I am saying "when" because it is only the matter of time at this point. If I fight back verbally or physically does that mean I dishonor the Teachings and Bodhisattva vows? If I don't, then does it make it "ok" for the attacker to attack someone again?

Malcolm wrote:

It's a bodhisattva's obligation to defend themselves.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 8:49 PM

Title: Re: Does a Vegan Damaru exist anywhere?

Content:

Cinnabar said:

I have seen vegetarians and vegans deal with this in different ways. When I was a vegetarian I ate the samaya substances. Meat at ganapuja, whatever goes into blessing pills. I have seen others do this as well.

I think all would still consider themselves veg/vegan despite this partaking of samaya substances.

Of course I have seen the opposite. At one ganapuja there was a fight and nastiness over the presence of meat and alcohol.

Malcolm wrote:

Vegans also reject lower tantra substances, such as milk and the other five products of a cow, honey, etc.

Hazel said:

Can people who have taken refuge vows not to engage in intoxicants not partake in tantra then if alcohol is a samaya substance?

Malcolm wrote:

Higher vows are to be followed where they contradict the lower vow.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 9:21 PM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

You used the word "real".

Astus said:

Yes, but "real in the sense of " functional, conditioned, causally relevant, and not as "real in the sense of existing in and of themselves".

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.merriam-webster.com/dictionary/real>

“ 1a : having objective independent existence...”

To say something is real, in English, means to have objective, independent existence. Thus, one cannot say conditions are real.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 10:01 PM

Title: Re: Does a Vegan Damaru exist anywhere?

Content:

Cinnabar said:

Yes. A lama taught here. Then we did a ganachakra at the end. A nice one. These three vegan peeps flipped the frak out. They kept the lid on it. Then they got preachy and left. Lama just laughed the whole time. The rest of us just watched.

Stranger things have happened at public teachings.

Norwegian said:

Really sad. Such a gathering of vajra family together with ones guru should be a moment of profound joy.

karmanyangpo said:

Ah.... Sad indeed..

Out of curiosity, did the people who flipped out get preachy on just vegan grounds or did they also try to use Buddhism as justification?

KN

Malcolm wrote:

Veganism is not just about diet. It's about ethical treatment of animals, and is based not only on diet, but that it is unethical to use any animal products for any reason, including honey, wool, and so on. It is perfectly fine to be a Buddhist vegan, but veganism is not Buddhism. It's a separate ethical tradition closer in spirit to Jainism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 10:26 PM

Title: Re: Yangzab Konchok Chidu Empowerment

Content:

Cinnabar said:

It's not from the Yangzab.

It's the Konchog Chidu of Jatson Nyingpo.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, it is not from the Drigung Yang zab, the dam chos dgongs pa yang zab, but the title is correct: bka' rdzogs pa chen po yang zab kon mchog spyi 'dus, for example:

'ja' tshon snying po . "bka' rdzogs pa chen po yang zab dkon mchog spyi 'dus las: _yang zab le'u bgyad pa:." In 'ja' tshon pod drug. TBRC W1KG3655. 1: 13 - 22. majnu-ka-tilla, delhi: konchhog lhadrepa, [n.d.].

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 10:31 PM

Title: Re: Does a Vegan Damaru exist anywhere?

Content:

Cinnabar said:

I guess I'm curious about my veg/vegan dharma siblings who don't reject animal products as samaya substances.

They still consider themselves veg/vegan. I guess their veg/vegan peers might disagree.

Since they don't reject samaya substances, can they practice vajrayana properly? Or are there other deficits?

Malcolm wrote:

If they don't reject the samaya substances, then they are by definition not vegans.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 10:41 PM

Title: Re: The Tree of World Religions

Content:

Dragpo said:

Interesting idea with some errors but a huge project

Created by by Dzvenislava Novakivska and her team at Funk & Consulting "The Tree of World Religions" is a stunning chart that maps the ramifications of an incredible number of religions over the last 3,000 years.

https://000024.org/religions_tree/religions_tree_8.html

Malcolm wrote:

Missing all Indigenous Religions, African Religions, as well as Bon. So, a little myopic.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 10:51 PM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

To say something is real, in English, means to have objective, independent existence. Thus, one cannot say conditions are real.

Astus said:

I see. I try to keep that in mind. Still, if I look at the definition from <https://www.lexico.com/definition/real> as 'Actually existing as a thing or occurring in fact; not imagined or supposed.'; or from <https://dictionary.cambridge.org/dictionary/english/real> as 'existing in fact and not imaginary', then it doesn't have to have such a connotation, but rather something's factual nature is what makes it real, that it can be perceived as occurring or happening, that it is a factor. Anyhow, do you have perhaps some better words to use then?

Malcolm wrote:

Merriam Webster is the preferred dictionary of editors in North America. In any case, your two definitions above support Merriam Webster's definition.

It's just better to avoid the word "real" in Buddhist parlance. Anything that cannot bear analysis cannot be construed as real in any meaningful sense. Since not even nirvana or the three kāyas can withstand analysis, in the final analysis, Buddhism finds that everything is dependent on conditions, which are also unreal. Hence, everything is unreal, and not real. This is what it means to say everything is empty. To say something is not empty is to say that it is real; to say that something is empty is to say that it is not real.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 11:31 PM

Title: Re: Does a Vegan Damaru exist anywhere?

Content:

Jangchup Donden said:

I've been practicing at home due to covid, and for the last retreat over zoom I used a didgeridoo instead of a rag-dung.

Malcolm wrote:

Tibetan instruments are never mentioned in the tantras. So it does not matter which one you use.

But when it comes to vajras and bells, and vases, and so on, the production of all these things are very precisely described in lower tantras.

As far as damarus are concerned, they are described in higher tantras. There are two kinds described therein: skull damarus and wood damarus. Generally, it is considered that wrathful rites require the former, while peaceful rites require the latter.

Further, we should understand they are not appropriate to use in rites of the lower tantras, and only should be used in higher tantric rites.

However, there are differences between different schools. Nyingmapas tend to favor skull damarus, Gelugpas wooden ones. Wooden damarus should be made out of sandalwood, red sandalwood, catechu wood, or other non-poisonous woods. There are also precise sizes described for damarus.

As for the drum head, nothing other than skins are prescribed for either kind of damaru.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 11:34 PM

Title: Re: Does a Vegan Damaru exist anywhere?

Content:

Jangchup Donden said:

and made from the bones of a child who died by a lightning strike

Malcolm wrote:

To be specific, the skull of a boy 16 and a girl, 12, who have reached puberty. Using the skulls of prepubescent children is inappropriate.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 9th, 2021 at 11:38 PM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

Matt J said:

It sounds to me like Astus is following the Gelug view of stating that things exist conventionally.

Malcolm wrote:

Equally bad:

Exist:

!a: to have real being whether material or spiritual b : to have being in a specified place or with respect to understood limitations or conditions

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 10th, 2021 at 1:19 AM

Title: Re: Does a Vegan Damaru exist anywhere?

Content:

Jangchup Donden said:

and made from the bones of a child who died by a lightning strike

Malcolm wrote:

To be specific, the skull of a boy 16 and a girl, 12, who have reached puberty. Using the skulls of prepubescent children is inappropriate.

climb-up said:

How come?

Malcolm wrote:

Because they represent the union of means and wisdom.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 10th, 2021 at 1:21 AM

Title: Re: Does a Vegan Damaru exist anywhere?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

If they dont reject the samaya substances, then they are by definition not vegans.

Cinnabar said:

I'd consider a veg/vegan who takes the samaya substances but otherwise eats/lives veg/vegan— to be veg/vegan.

I know such people actually.

Malcolm wrote:

Ok, that's you.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 10th, 2021 at 1:56 AM

Title: Re: Does a Vegan Damaru exist anywhere?

Content:

climb-up said:

How come?

Malcolm wrote:

Because they represent the union of means and wisdom.

climb-up said:

I think I understand (maybe).

Does having achieved puberty, and therefore being biologically an adult, then represent...

...I thought I had it, but it kind of fell apart.

Or is it a tsa, lung and tiple thing?

Malcolm wrote:

More of a thigle thing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 10th, 2021 at 1:58 AM

Title: Re: Does a Vegan Damaru exist anywhere?

Content:

climb-up said:

The karmapa knows about his vows and the rituals he performs and still does not want meet at his ganapujas.

Malcolm wrote:

He also wants to keep his myriad Chinese disciples around.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 10th, 2021 at 3:59 AM

Title: Re: Does a Vegan Damaru exist anywhere?

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Some leather in America comes from bad places, such as factory farms, and humans are not different from an animals in their desire not to suffer. And they are more innocent than us.

Malcolm wrote:

Leather does not suffer. So we should just waste all that material? Let them die for nothing?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 10th, 2021 at 4:22 AM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

Astus said:

I'd rather put it as: whatever can be called existent is just a convention, a conceptual fabrication.

Malcolm wrote:

So which comes first, appearance or convention?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 10th, 2021 at 4:27 AM

Title: Re: lockdowns on Nichiren site .

Content:

tkp67 said:

The lack of ability to maintain decorum is a compound phenomenon.

Malcolm wrote:
So is the ability to maintain decorum.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, April 10th, 2021 at 5:20 AM
Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
So which comes first, appearance or convention?

Astus said:
First for what?

Malcolm wrote:
Do appearances arise from conventional designations, or are conventional designations made on the basis of appearances?

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, April 10th, 2021 at 6:59 PM
Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
Do appearances arise from conventional designations, or are conventional designations made on the basis of appearances?

Astus said:
Without further specifications they are practically synonyms, so one preceding the other is not an option.

Malcolm wrote:
Wrong answer.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, April 10th, 2021 at 9:25 PM
Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
Wrong answer.

Astus said:
Which appearance isn't a convention? Which convention isn't an appearance?

Malcolm wrote:
This point is explained correctly by Gorampa. In brief, conventions do not generate appearances, for example, calling the appearance of sand “water” does not change that appearance into water. First there an appearance, then there is a conventional designation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 10th, 2021 at 10:05 PM

Title: Re: The Tree of World Religions

Content:

Queequeg said:

Jokes aside, I agree with you.

On one hand, we all follow the voice in our heads. Monotheism covers this over with a single pole social structure, as you point out, which can tend to authoritarianism. I actually argued something along these lines over Passover with a group of not particularly theistic Jews. This system has its faults and I suggested this gift the Jews gave to the world has not been particularly good. My argument was not rejected. That said, it's also a very effective social structure for maintaining social cohesion. Exhibit A: the Jewish diaspora. I think Jews have dealt with the weakness in this system by making study and argumentation a part of the tradition - pole a group of rabbis about any particular issues and you're likely to find a variety of answers. But, they also have something deeper binding them in the shared history, even as there are divisions.

Christianity and Islam take the same monotheism and, perhaps because its adherents are not bound to each other by blood, the emphasis ends up on the authority. In that case, disagreements can only end in subjugation or schism.

The specifics of this chart are one thing. The concept it illustrates is more compelling.

Malcolm wrote:

We can thank the Zoroastrians for Monotheism, that's who the Hebrew people learned monotheism from during the Babylonian exile.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 10th, 2021 at 10:08 PM

Title: Re: Via positiva, via negativa

Content:

Rick said:

(Note that I come in peace, waving a white flag, not trying to stir things up.)

Could it be that Advaita/brahman is the via positiva ... and Buddhism/emptiness the via negativa way of pointing to the same (non-)thing?

Malcolm wrote:

Nope. Advaitans reject dependent origination.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 10th, 2021 at 10:20 PM

Title: Re: How to decarbonize your life.

Content:

kirtu said:

Fossil fuel use has to be completely ended as soon as possible. And this can only actually happen by restructuring all of energy production and consumption for all nations...

Malcolm wrote:

This is not going to happen in our lifetime, since it would plunge billions of people into starvation and set off resource wars the likes of which we have never seen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 10th, 2021 at 11:07 PM

Title: Re: Via positiva, via negativa

Content:

Rick said:

Hi Malcolm!

What is the relationship between the four possibilities of production (causeless, from causes, from themselves, or from both self and other) and dependent arising? The MMK refutes production, but not dependent arising?

Also, isn't dependent arising, along with every other conceptual construct, a provisional teaching that is meaningless at the 'absolute' ultimate level?

Malcolm wrote:

MMK refutes any kind of production other than dependent origination. It is through dependent origination that emptiness is correctly discerned. Without the view of dependent origination, emptiness cannot be correctly perceived, let alone realized. The MMK rejects production from self, other, both, and causeless production, but not dependent origination. The MMK also praises the teaching of dependent origination as the pacifier of proliferation in the mangalam. The last chapter of MMK is on dependent origination. The MMK nowhere rejects dependent origination, it is in fact a defense of the proper way to understand it. The only way to the ultimate truth (emptiness) is through the relative truth (dependent origination), so if one's understanding of relative truth is flawed, as is the case with all traditions outside of Buddhadharma, and even many within it, there is no possibility that ultimate truth can be understood and realized.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 10th, 2021 at 11:25 PM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Is it like this?

Authentic relative truth: direct perception of appearances

Confused relative truth: deluded perception of appearances, adding all sorts of conceptual elaborations (ie. conventions)

Malcolm wrote:

Functionality is how conventions are defined. Example, though no car can be found in the appearance that is the basis of conventional designation of a car, in its parts, one of its parts, or separate from them, that appearance is a car if it functions like a car.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 10th, 2021 at 11:43 PM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

[Mod note: edit] We say “we all have Buddha Nature”. What is this “we”? After we erase the “I” are we going to erase the “we”? Eventually it must be understood that there are Real Transcendental activities for the individual after liberation, and that there still is an individual, even after many lifetimes of self-negation.

fckw said:

Nobody addressed this.

It never made much sense to me how Buddhism apparently finds it totally acceptable to assume the definition of "individual minds" while going on and negating the existence of any such thing as jiva, atman and the like.

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhism does not define “individual minds” as such, but rather discrete, momentary continuums which arise from their own causes and conditions. In short, jivas, pudgalas, atmans, etc., do not function as defined by their proponents, so they are negated.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 11th, 2021 at 12:05 AM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

fckw said:

Nobody addressed this.

It never made much sense to me how Buddhism apparently finds it totally acceptable to assume the definition of "individual minds" while going on and negating the existence of any such thing as jiva, atman and the like.

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhism does not define "individual minds" as such, but rather discrete, momentary continuums which arise from their own causes and conditions.

fckw said:

This still does not define where the "discretion" comes from or where it resides in. The continua might not have individuality in the sense of the vedic position, that's true, but they are still "particulars" or "discrete" or however we want to call them, i.e. distinct from each other. Hence, there's a "discretization process" at work which remains unexplained.

Malcolm wrote:

Things appear to be discrete, so we label them "discrete." If things appear to be nondiscrete, we are not able to label them as discrete. For example, from a distance a mountain does not appear to be composed of discrete parts, so we label that appearance "mountain." When we get closer, we see there are many parts, and what was formally labeled a mountain gets redefined into slopes, peaks, ravines, and so on. When we meet someone, we label that person a self, a person, a living being, but these labels attached to appearances will not bear analysis. It's the same with mental continuum's, even the notion of mental continuum will not bear ultimate analysis, but since the cause and result of karma, etc., appear to be discrete, mind streams are, conventionally speaking, discrete, because there is an observable function.. If we wish to aggregate minds, we refer to all consciousnesses as the dhatu of consciousness, just as we refer to aggregated elements as the space dhatu, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 11th, 2021 at 1:02 AM

Title: Re: Via positiva, via negativa

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The only way to the ultimate truth (emptiness) is through the relative truth (dependent origination), so if one's understanding of relative truth is flawed, as is the case with all traditions outside of Buddhadharma, and even many within it, there is no possibility that ultimate truth can be understood and realized.

Rick said:

Good, thanks.

Does the Madhyamakan view differentiate between nominal ultimate truth (understanding) and non-nominal ultimate truth (realization)?

If it does, is it possible that the non-nominal Buddhist realization (enlightenment, I guess?) and 'highest' Vedanta realization (moksha?) are essentially the same? At this 'ultimately ultimate' level of realization, every conceptual edifice, including dependent origination and emptiness, is absent. Yes?

Malcolm wrote:

Well, you know what the MMK says:

Without relying on conventional truth, the ultimate truth will not be understood; without realizing the ultimate truth, nirvana will not be attained.

In other words, paths within or without Buddhism that do not present the conventional correctly cannot properly present the ultimate. If they cannot properly present the ultimate, it cannot be realized, and nirvana cannot be attained.

It is axiomatic that Advaita has an incorrect presentation of the relative. The only correct presentation of the relative is dependent origination. Nāgārjuna wrote the MMK to correct incorrect Buddhist understandings of dependent origination so emptiness could be understood and nirvana realized. As Aryadeva states, "Liberation depends on view."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 11th, 2021 at 1:49 AM

Title: Re: To account for the cause of this decline in the fortunes of Bön in both Zhangzhung and Tibet.

Content:

gelukman said:

Generally stated it would be unfathomable if Guru Rinpoche, Vairochana and the King would have something against their own doctrines aka Kuntuzangpo. Yungdrung Bon is very Kuntuzangpo.

Malcolm wrote:

In general, these accounts are all from at least three centuries after the stated events. It is very clear that the Bonpos altered their own historical records in the Zhang Zhung Snyan brgyud to revise the time of assassination of Ligmincha from the mid-7th century at the hands of Srongtsen Gampo to the mid-8th century during the reign of Trisrong De'utsen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 11th, 2021 at 1:58 AM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

fckw said:

This implies: We don't know whether the "observer/knower/known capacity" is actually "one" or "many", because it is at the root of making such discretions. In the absence of this knowledge someone might actually argue that this knowing capacity is exactly same as "self". And what position could anyone take to refute it (or to confirm it, for that matter)? We are operating here at a position prior to the discretization function we posited before.

Malcolm wrote:

The argument that a knower is a self has already been advanced and dismantled in Buddhist texts. If a knower can have many cognitions, it already has many parts and cannot be a unitary or an integral entity. We are therefore not operating here at a position prior to recognizing discrete entities, the very fact that our minds (citta) are variegated (citra) proves the mind is not an integral entity, proves it is made of parts, and since those cognitions happen sequentially, this proves the mind is also impermanent, momentary, and dependent. So, it is impossible for a conventional knower to be a self.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 11th, 2021 at 2:04 AM

Title: Re: The Tree of World Religions

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Like Thich Nhat Hanh says, Buddhism is made up of non-Buddhist elements...

Malcolm wrote:

No it isn't. Buddha explicitly denies that it was.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 11th, 2021 at 4:04 AM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

In brief, conventions do not generate appearances, for example, calling the appearance of sand "water" does not change that appearance into water. First there an appearance, then there is a conventional designation.

Astus said:

How is that not like the Abhidharma view that takes dharmas as paramartha, and how is it consolidated with statements like this one:

'Since the Buddhas have stated

That the world is conditioned by ignorance,

So why is it not reasonable [to assert]

That this world is [a result of] conceptualization?'

(Yuktisastika 37, tr Geshe Thupten Jinpa; cf. Yuktisastika 33-34; Acintyastava 6, 35, 44; Lokatitastava 19)

Malcolm wrote:

Satyadvayavibhaṅgavṛitti states:

“Mundane conventional designations are engagements of the mundane, that is to say, having the characteristics of cognitions and objects of cognition, but do not have the characteristic of verbalizations because of being described subsequent to those [cognitions].”

Gorampa adds:

Therefore all those objects and everything defined on those from the perspective of appearing to a mundane mind is said to be the meaning of defining the relative through the perspective of convention.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 11th, 2021 at 4:07 AM

Title: Re: To account for the cause of this decline in the fortunes of Bön in both Zhang-zhung and Tibet.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

...to revise the time of assassination of Ligmincha from the mid-7th century at the hands of Srongtsen Gampo to the mid-8th century during the reign of Trisrong De'utsen.

Sādhaka said:

If this is true, then what may be the reason(s) for doing so?

Malcolm wrote:

It is true, ChNN might have been the first person to point this out, in fact.

As for the reason, it fits better with the Bon narrative of being exiled by Trisrong De'utsen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 11th, 2021 at 4:14 AM

Title: Re: How to decarbonize your life.

Content:

kirtu said:

Fossil fuel use has to be completely ended as soon as possible. And this can only actually happen by restructuring all of energy production and consumption for all nations...

Malcolm wrote:

This is not going to happen in our lifetime, since it would plunge billions of people into starvation and set off resource wars the likes of which we have never seen.

kirtu said:

Restructuring energy production and consumption is EXACTLY what we are doing.

Malcolm wrote:

Fossil fuel use will not end in our lifetime. I am 59. I'll be lucky to live to 80. Somehow, I don't foresee a major shift away from fossil fuels worldwide in the next 21 years:

Consumption of oil and other forms of liquid petroleum will fall modestly over the next 24 years, from 33 percent of total marketed energy consumption in 2012 to 30 percent in 2040. Oil will continue to be a primary fuel for the transport sector, as well as a key fuel for industrial uses in emerging countries.

But experts cautioned against the idea that fossil fuels will become 20th-century energy anachronisms by the middle of the 21st century. In fact, fossil fuels will still account for 78 percent of global energy use in 2040, even as the growth in non-fossil fuels exceeds that of oil, coal and gas.

<https://www.scientificamerican.com/article/fossil-fuels-may-not-dwindle-anytime-soon/>

As you can see, transport is reflected in your graph above, in agreement with this article from 2016.

And, as you know, it is not merely science that counts; it is the markets, investments, policy, etc. that are driving continued use of fossil fuels, especially in the transport sector.

We simply cannot pull the plug on fossil fuels. It would be too disruptive.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 11th, 2021 at 5:17 AM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Satyadvayavibhaṅgavṛitti states:

“Mundane conventional designations are engagements of the mundane, that is to say, having the characteristics of cognitions and objects of cognition, but do not have the characteristic of verbalizations because of being described subsequent to those [cognitions].”

Gorampa adds:

Therefore all those objects and everything defined on those from the perspective of appearing to a mundane mind is said to be the meaning of defining the relative through the perspective of convention.

Astus said:

How does that support the claim that first there are appearances and only then conventions? Appearances are conventional according to Jnanakirti, he simply makes a distinction there between cognition and verbalisation.

Malcolm wrote:

because of being described subsequent to those [cognitions]. The argument takes aim at the Geluk idea that appearances are derived from conventions themselves.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 11th, 2021 at 9:14 AM

Title: Re: How to decarbonize your life.

Content:

kirtu said:

We are working to save the planet.

Malcolm wrote:

The planet will be fine, no matter what we do to it in the short term.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 11th, 2021 at 9:20 AM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The argument takes aim at the Geluk idea that appearances are derived from conventions themselves.

SilenceMonkey said:

Why would Geluks say that?

Also, by "convention" are we talking about names and language (མིང་ ming)?

Malcolm wrote:

You should read Gorampa. He explains it very clearly.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 11th, 2021 at 10:00 AM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:
Why would Geluks say that?

Also, by "convention" are we talking about names and language (མིང་ ming)?

Malcolm wrote:
You should read Gorampa. He explains it very clearly.

SilenceMonkey said:
One day. Mipham first!

Malcolm wrote:
Mipham depends quite heavily on Gorampa.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, April 11th, 2021 at 10:30 AM
Title: Re: How to decarbonize your life.
Content:
kirtu said:
We are working to save the planet.

Malcolm wrote:
The planet will be fine, no matter what we do to it in the short term.

Kim O'Hara said:
Yes, although I'm not at all sure I would like another human birth in the next 50 - 100 years.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:
We will adapt. We will have to.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, April 11th, 2021 at 10:31 AM
Title: Re: Via positiva, via negativa
Content:
Rick said:
Different paths and different views don't necessarily mean different 'destinations' right?
I thought enlightenment/nirvana/moksha transcended all paths and views?

Malcolm wrote:
Different basis, different path, different result.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, April 11th, 2021 at 10:35 AM
Title: Re: Via positiva, via negativa
Content:
Norwegian said:
The Buddha stated that outside of his teachings, there is no liberation.

Rick said:
I didn't know that! I'd always taken the 84,000 paths as a touchstone, assuming these paths could be nontrivially different.

Well that's a game changer for me. Gonna have to realign my Buddhism-as-path-to-truth dominoes.

Thanks, Norwegian.

Malcolm wrote:
The 84k gates mean different things, but never included nonBuddhist paths.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, April 11th, 2021 at 10:03 PM
Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.
Content:
Astus said:
I did not equate conventions with just words.

Malcolm wrote:
I wasn't sure, that's why I asked you, which comes first, an appearance or it's label.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, April 11th, 2021 at 10:04 PM
Title: Re: Video on Mipam R and Buddha Nature.
Content:

treehuggingoctopus said:
Doubly weird, since Duckworth knows and appreciates the piece and its author in general. I will try to re-read MoBN when I find some time, and see how he deals with the problem.

Malcolm wrote:

It is extremely clear that the term refers to a gnosis that one realizes for oneself without depending on another. It is the same category of terms like translating rig pa as awareness.

Dharmasagara said:

Malcom, would you please offer your own rendering of the term so sor rang gyis rig pa'i ye shes?

Thanx in advance

Malcolm wrote:

Kapstien's equivalent is sound, "personally intuited gnosis."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 11th, 2021 at 10:11 PM

Title: Re: To account for the cause of this decline in the fortunes of Bön in both Zhangzhung and Tibet.

Content:

gelukman said:

Generally stated it would be unfathomable if Guru Rinpoche, Vairochana and the King would have something against their own doctrines aka Kuntuzangpo. Yungdrung Bon is very Kuntuzangpo.

Malcolm wrote:

In general, these accounts are all from at least three centuries after the stated events. It is very clear that the Bonpos altered their own historical records in the Zhang Zhung Snyan brgyud to revise the time of assassination of Ligmincha from the mid-7th century at the hands of Srongtsen Gampo to the mid-8th century during the reign of Trisrong De'utsen.

Passing By said:

I heard it both ways from Bon teachers before actually. The timeline of Bon is obviously quite unclear but there were two wars against Zhang Zhung by both kings with Trisong Deutsan finally completing the annexation of that region no?

Malcolm wrote:

No, According to the Tang chronicles, Zhang Zhung was annexed in 645 AD. There was an uprising against Tibetan rule in 677, but Zhang Zhung was swiftly brought heel.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 11th, 2021 at 10:23 PM

Title: Re: Practicing without empowerment

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Is there an official Teaching for how Empowerments from past lives carry over?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, the official teaching is that they do not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 11th, 2021 at 11:32 PM

Title: Re: Practicing without empowerment

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Is there an official Teaching for how Empowerments from past lives carry over?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, the official teaching is that they do not.

Könchok Thrinley said:

I have always wondered, how is it possible then that just barely keeping samayas pure leads to liberation within 16 lifetimes?

Malcolm wrote:

One needs to keep them in order to meet Vajrayana teachings again in each of those lifetimes. Hence, the aspirations to meet the guru again and again.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 11th, 2021 at 11:56 PM

Title: Re: Why drugs are bad for meditators?

Content:

Sunrise said:

I met someone who was interested in developing a meditation practice, and who also had interest in taking psychedelics. I wanted to warn her not to take drugs because I believe it could not only be harmful to her physical health, but also impede her meditation practice. Does anyone know how drugs harm our ability to meditate? I think it has something to do with a disruption of our subtle energies, but I'm not knowledgeable about this.

Malcolm wrote:

Can disrupt our vata/lung/energy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 12th, 2021 at 12:14 AM

Title: Re: Why drugs are bad for meditators?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Lord Guatama Buddha designated refraining from intoxicants as one of the five vows for laymen, and thus a core vinaya vow for monks as well. It's one of the most basic parts of being Buddhist.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it's not a core vinaya vow. It's one of the 90 or minor Vinaya vows. The core vows are the four defeats. There is no fifth defeat.

Of the five basic prātimokṣa for lay people, it is the only one that is a prohibition through declaration, rather than a natural nonvirtue. This means that intoxication is not a natural misdeed. It's prohibited because it can lead to natural misdeeds, murder, rape, theft, and lying.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 12th, 2021 at 12:28 AM

Title: Re: Why drugs are bad for meditators?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Lord Guatama Buddha designated refraining from intoxicants as one of the five vows for laymen, and thus a core vinaya vow for monks as well. It's one of the most basic parts of being Buddhist.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it's not a core vinaya vow. It's one of the 90 or minor Vinaya vows. The core vows are the four defeats. There is no fifth defeat.

Of the five basic prātimokṣa for lay people, it is the only one that is a prohibition through declaration, rather than a natural nonvirtue. This means that intoxication is not a natural misdeed. It's prohibited because it can lead to natural misdeeds, murder, rape, theft, and lying.

FiveSkandhas said:

Interesting. But it's so basic to practice for millions of lay buddhists who never make that distinction.

So if you break it as a layman, versus breaking one of the other four lay vows, are there any practical differences in how you would repent, etc? Because personally I've never heard of such a distinction.

Malcolm wrote:

Actually, as a lay person, one has a choice to follow it or not. In the Tibetan tradition we purify all vows with the practice of Vajrasattva. Also, bodhisattva and Vajrayana vows take precedence.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 12th, 2021 at 2:24 AM

Title: Re: Why drugs are bad for meditators?

Content:

↑ said:

Actually, as a lay person, one has a choice to follow it or not. In the Tibetan tradition we purify all vows with the practice of Vajrasattva. Also, bodhisattva and Vajrayana vows take precedence.

FiveSkandhas said:

This is fascinating to me because it is not the way it is generally presented to laymen in most of East Asia if they wish to become an upasaka/upasika. Japan as noted is a bit of a special case.

Malcolm wrote:

This is explicitly outlined by Vasubandhu in his commentary on the Abhidharmakośa, so it is a principle that will not be unknown to educated East Asian Buddhists.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 12th, 2021 at 2:25 AM

Title: Re: Practicing without empowerment

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Is there a Teaching about the various Bodhisattva Vows carrying over?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, the bodhisattva vows are the only vows that one carries from one life to the next.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 12th, 2021 at 10:00 PM

Title: Re: Practicing without empowerment

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

A Buddha doesn't get reborn once they are a Buddha...

Könchok Chödrak said:

Not in the literal sense. But they appear to be reborn, don't they? There is the Theravadin view by some that Gautama isn't coming back at all, but the Mahayana view from what the Lotus Sutra (The White Lotus of the Good Dharma in Tibetan) has stated is that Buddha, even after Enlightenment, has been in this world for eons. He attained Enlightenment, which it is said in that Sutra, asamkhyas of kalpas ago as Bodhisattva Never Disparaging. The Buddha is in a true extinction, but He Emanates into this entire world from place to place, from time to time, to help guide sentient beings. He is not “born” neither does He “die”, but it appears that way, and often it is written about in such a way in the Suttas, Sutras, and commentaries and books. But what you have stated is correct. He is well gone. And we must do everything we can so that the Buddha will rest in Tranquility. Om. Namaste.

Tenma said:

Hang on, what?

Everytime I learn something about this or that, I fail to understand what on earth Buddhism's purpose is. I thought enlightenment was to cease suffering and rebirth, am I wrong?

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, you are not wrong.

Tenma said:

So if a person enters enlightenment, is it just mere "tranquil rest" or helping others?

Malcolm wrote:

Full awakening in Mahāyāna means eliminating the afflictive obscuration, which causes rebirth in the three realms, and eliminating the knowledge obscuration, which prevents one from knowing all paths.

Because of eliminating the first obscuration, one has power over birth, and can appear in any place to help sentient beings; because one has eliminated the knowledge obscuration, one knows how to lead any sentient being with the appropriate path.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 12th, 2021 at 10:04 PM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

Queequeg said:

But, I'm still apprehensive. There's no proof these shots actually grant immunity..

Malcolm wrote:

???

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 12th, 2021 at 10:05 PM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

PeterC said:

You're right, it may well be nothing. But...it doesn't feel like nothing, from the anecdotal accounts floating around. And the evidence on cardiovascular damage is pretty compelling. At this point, the people dismissing covid as 'a bad case of flu' aren't realizing that it's actually something a lot more serious.

Malcolm wrote:

A third of all covid patients have serious neurological issues, regardless of how ill they initially were from the infection.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 12th, 2021 at 10:29 PM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

Queequeg said:

But, I'm still apprehensive. There's no proof these shots actually grant immunity..

Malcolm wrote:

???

Queequeg said:

Its not clear the vaccines actually make us immune.

Malcolm wrote:

I am not sure what you mean by "immunity." By this <https://www.merriam-webster.com/dictionary/immunity>, these vaccines absolutely grant immunity to covid 19:

a condition of being able to resist a particular disease especially through preventing development of a pathogenic microorganism or by counteracting the effects of its products

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 12th, 2021 at 10:53 PM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

Queequeg said:

I'm not a doctor so pardon my malapropism.

Malcolm wrote:

No worries, I just thought you might have been fed some fake news.

Queequeg said:

The point is, I might still get sick.

Malcolm wrote:

Very unlikely. Viral infections depend on viral load. The reason it hit many ambulance drivers, nurses, and doctors so hard was repeated exposure in a closed environment to many patients over an extended period of time. The weight of the viral load you are exposed to, along with other factors, is the major determinant in whether one becomes significantly ill. When we have vaccinated 90+ percent of the population, the likelihood of becoming ill from covid or even variants will drop precipitously, but I wouldn't travel in countries with low vax rates. Until then, follow CDC guidelines, now that they are under competent management:

<https://www.cdc.gov/coronavirus/2019-ncov/vaccines/fully-vaccinated.html>

Queequeg said:

I might still pass the virus on, without showing symptoms. Pre-Covid normal is not coming back, though a lot of people are acting like it. I expect COVID to have as profound an impact on the way we live as HIV had on sex.

Malcolm wrote:

The new normal will be more masking up during flu season. Otherwise, it is not going to be like HIV. Please look at Australia and NZ for how things are going to be. If you visited these countries today, you would never know there was a major pandemic. When there is a breakout, it is tracked, everyone is quarantined, tested, and treated if necessary. Otherwise, everyone goes about their business with out masks, etc. Their response has been excellent and professionally managed, without politics interfering with science.

I really want those criminals in the Trump Administration to go jail for mass murder.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 13th, 2021 at 2:14 AM

Title: Re: Tibetan Medicine primer - especially for psychological states

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Hoping Malcolm or someone else might be able to help here.

I'm taking a class essentially on "alternative" frameworks to psychotherapy. Half of it is good, some information on Ayurveda and a little on TCM. The other half is almost unbearable new age nonsense, seriously it's bad.

I'm wondering if a kind of primer of Tibetan Medical theory exists that would be helpful - specifically with Tibetan Medical views of psychological states and conditions.

Malcolm wrote:

Diamond Healing is an old book, which has a lot of this sort of issue.

The Complete Book of Tibetan Medicine is good, as is Birth, Life, and Death by CHNN.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 13th, 2021 at 2:49 AM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The argument that a knower is a self has already been advanced and dismantled in Buddhist texts. If a knower can have many cognitions, it already has many parts and cannot be a unitary or an integral entity. We are therefore not operating here at a position prior to recognizing discrete entities, the very fact that our minds (citta) are variegated (citra) proves the mind is not an integral entity, proves it is made of parts, and since those cognitions happen sequentially, this proves the mind is also impermanent, momentary, and dependent. So, it is impossible for a conventional knower to be a self.

fckw said:

Well, if you ask me, this is not logical at all: If a knower can have many cognitions, it already has many parts

We have not clarified whether the "knower" here is same or different from the "known" (i.e. its cognitions).

Malcolm wrote:

If the knower were the same as the known, it would have to have parts in order to change. It would have to transform into all the different objects it knows, meaning it is not a self, has parts and components. This is the rebuttal to the Hindu idea you bring up below. You might object, well, what is mind is substance like gold, which can be shaped into ashtray or a statue. You then have to explain to us how this transformation of shape, if you will, occurs.

fckw said:

Besides above point, there's another one I'd like to address briefly, but it's not the main argument on my side. the very fact that our minds (citta) are variegated (citra)

As I'm not a Sanskritist I am not sure I understand what "variegated/citra" here actually means. There are at least two interpretations, and I am not sure which one you are referring to: Either to state that there are "many minds" in the sense "each individual has its own mind", or to state that "a single mind has many mind events" that are "distinct" from each other. I take it you mean the latter. If that is the case then I am pretty sure there are some 'hindu' school of thoughts arguing that there are in fact no "distinct mind events", but that they are a single stream of "mind stuff continuously morphing into something else".

As far as I'm informed that's actually the position taken in the Patanjali's Yogasutras. It's, by the way, also what you experience if you practice those Patanjali Yogasutra meditations, i.e. the subjective experience along the path is quite different from both Therevada Vipassana as well as Mahamudra/Dzogchen style meditation. But that's just a side note.

Malcolm wrote:

You are talking about Samkhya philosophy which is utilized in the Yogasūtras. The line you are think of yogaḥcittavṛttinirodhaha, "Yoga is the cessation of the transformations of consciousness."

The difference here of course is that in the citta in this case is actually different than the knower (jñā). The knower is termed puruṣa, is a passive consumer, and is utterly different than prakṛti, which is where the transformations are occurring. The knower itself never changes, but merely witnesses the transformations of prakṛti. But none of this is what I am talking about.

in Buddhism, it is axiomatically assumed that there are many independent mind streams; this is proven by Dharmakīrti in Samtānāntarasiddhi, "Proof of Other's Minds."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 13th, 2021 at 2:50 AM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

All this madhyamaka discussion is off topic. The buddhanature is not fully elaborated in the Sutras.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure it is. The Lanka states that tathāgatgarbha is the natural luminosity of the mind. What more does one need to know?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 13th, 2021 at 5:18 AM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

Queequeg said:

I don't see places like NYC going into intermittent quarantines indefinitely.

Malcolm wrote:

Think buildings, not blocks.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 13th, 2021 at 7:18 AM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

All this madhyamaka discussion is off topic. The buddhanature is not fully elaborated in the Suttas.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure it is. The Lanka states that tathāgatagarbha is the natural luminosity of the mind. What more does one need to know?

Crazywisdom said:

There is the nonmaterial appearance of wisdom.

Malcolm wrote:

That's beyond the scope of Karl B's talk.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 13th, 2021 at 8:20 PM

Title: Re: Brunnhölzl on Buddha Nature as a radical teaching.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

If the knower were the same as the known, it would have to have parts in order to change. It would have to transform into all the different objects it knows, meaning it is not a self, has parts and components. This is the rebuttal to the Hindu idea you bring up below. You might object, well, what is mind is substance like gold, which can be shaped into ashtray or a statue. You then have to explain to us how this transformation of shape, if you will, occurs.

fckw said:

That's exactly why I find actually both positions equally dissatisfying.

If the knower has "parts and components" then we have not explained where the distinction between one part and another comes from. Remember that we were discussing before exactly this point, i.e. where the capacity to "distinguish" actually comes from, and we certainly don't want to end up in a circular argument stating that the "knower distinguishes its components by its capacity to distinguish its components".

But the other option that you suggest is equally dissatisfactory. Mind made of a substance like gold continuously transforming into other appearances yet never losing its substance - well, this does in no way explain how this process of transformation takes place. Is it a capacity of the mind? Is it same as mind? Is it different?

My personal conclusion here is that neither system actually really properly describes things. Formal logic, that's my conclusion, is not suited to properly address these questions. It can take you far, but not to the end.

Malcolm wrote:

The mind is a composite phenomena. That's just how it is.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 14th, 2021 at 1:54 AM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

Queequeg said:

The best shot we've got at this is for widespread vaccination and diligent contact tracing.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and quarantining the infected once the goal of widespread vaccination has been reached. I get my first jab on Thursday.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 14th, 2021 at 1:57 AM

Title: Re: Practicing without empowerment

Content:

Tenma said:

Isn't there a saying that goes that just as there are infinite sentient beings, there are infinite myriads of tathagatas (and possibly bodhisattvas)? If one has been eliminated of knowledge obscuration, can control birth alongside help sentient beings, how is it that suffering still exists in the world?

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhas and bodhisattvas can only truly help beings through teaching the Dharma and entering them into the Dharma.

As the Buddha said:

Misdeeds cannot be washed away with water,
I cannot remove suffering with my hand,
nor can I hand out liberation,
but I can show the path.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 14th, 2021 at 1:59 AM

Title: Re: Practicing without empowerment

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

but those who feel they are not ready need a provisional Vehicle stemming from the Ekayana (Single Vehicle) to continue their practice...

Malcolm wrote:

What are you defining as a provisional vehicle?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 14th, 2021 at 3:27 AM

Title: Re: Practicing without empowerment

Content:

Tenma said:

Isn't there a saying that goes that just as there are infinite sentient beings, there are infinite myriads of tathagatas (and possibly bodhisattvas)? If one has been eliminated of knowledge obscuration, can control birth alongside help sentient beings, how is it that suffering still exists in the world?

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhas and bodhisattvas can only truly help beings through teaching the Dharma and entering them into the Dharma.

As the Buddha said:

Misdeeds cannot be washed away with water,
I cannot remove suffering with my hand,
nor can I hand out liberation,
but I can show the path.

Tenma said:

What exactly is the point of Vajrasattva, Akshobhya, the 35 Buddhas, and other confessional practices if "misdeeds cannot be washed away with water"? (Yes, I get that the Buddha cannot give you enlightenment and you have to do that but what about these practices?)

Malcolm wrote:

They are based on the idea in posadha, where you twice monthly confess your broken vows in front of the Sangha. They are methods of restoring one's vows.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 14th, 2021 at 5:44 AM

Title: Re: Practicing without empowerment

Content:

Tenma said:

What exactly is the point of Vajrasattva, Akshobhya, the 35 Buddhas, and other confessional practices if "misdeeds cannot be washed away with water"? (Yes, I get that the Buddha cannot give you enlightenment and you have to do that but what about these practices?)

Malcolm wrote:

They are based on the idea in posadha, where you twice monthly confess your broken vows in front of the Sangha. They are methods of restoring one's vows.

Tenma said:

But it doesn't purify or get rid of negative karma as some say? What's the point of the sutric phrase "eons of negative karma will disappear" for reading a sutra or reciting a dharani/mantra if misdeeds cannot actually be pacified or as the following quote says, "washed away with water?"

By the way, could you please provide the source of your quote? Thank you!

Malcolm wrote:

Hundreds of Aeons of karma is very tiny blip when consider how long one has been transmigrating in samsara.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 14th, 2021 at 10:40 AM

Title: Re: Lack of Media Coverage on Burn Pits

Content:

amanitamusc said:

Fox news no less.

Malcolm wrote:

The world is our burn pit.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 14th, 2021 at 11:33 AM

Title: Re: Is Buddhism necessary?

Content:

neander said:

Buddhism is not for everybody and is still a minority group so it is not necessary.

The two most powerful men on this planet controlling together 10000 ICBM are not Buddhist..

SilenceMonkey said:

Not necessary for society, maybe...

As Dzongsar Khyentse Rinpoche often says, from a mundane perspective, Buddhadharma is completely useless.

Malcolm wrote:

True, millions of dollars are spent on the trappings of piety that would be better served funding schools and hospitals.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 14th, 2021 at 11:35 AM

Title: Re: The Avalokiteshvara Cult in the Tenth Century Dunhuang and the Mani mantra

Content:

Danny said:

Don't forget the creation myth....

Malcolm wrote:

There is more than one Tibetan creation myth.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 14th, 2021 at 12:45 PM

Title: Re: Is Buddhism necessary?

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Not necessary for society, maybe...

As Dzongsar Khyentse Rinpoche often says, from a mundane perspective, Buddhadharma is completely useless.

Malcolm wrote:

True, millions of dollars are spent on the trappings of piety that would be better served funding schools and hospitals.

SilenceMonkey said:

I don't think that's what he meant, but it's a good point.

And then there's all that money being poured into translating the Buddhist canon, and into funding PhD's and post-docs. Not saying we shouldn't translate the kangyur, but when I saw the numbers...

Malcolm wrote:

Books are better than bricks.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 15th, 2021 at 12:07 AM

Title: Re: The Avalokiteshvara Cult in the Tenth Century Dunhuang and the Mani mantra

Content:

Danny said:

Don't forget the creation myth....

Malcolm wrote:

There is more than one Tibetan creation myth.

Danny said:

Indeed, but in context of Tibetan power

Malcolm wrote:

You were not that specific.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 15th, 2021 at 12:55 AM

Title: Re: Anthropic principle

Content:

steveb1 said:

The universe simply does not look, or behave, as if it is the ordered product of a compassionate divine mind.

Malcolm wrote:

Nope, it looks like the random outcomes of myriad sentient beings acting each in their own way.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 15th, 2021 at 6:29 AM

Title: Re: This odd quote by Master Hsuan Hua

Content:

joshua said:

What do you all make of this? On the surface, this is all sorts of wrong view and nonsense. What is the Master saying here? I'm having trouble believing one should be taking these words at face value.

Malcolm wrote:

It has been discussed here at quite some length. It is a wrong view, all the way down.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 15th, 2021 at 8:47 AM

Title: Re: How to decarbonize your life.

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

But yes, the transition has to be managed.

Fast, though.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

I am a realist. Things have never gotten better collectively even though some individuals thrive.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 15th, 2021 at 8:30 PM

Title: Re: How to decarbonize your life.

Content:

tkp67 said:

If malfeasance outweighed benevolence, the human population would not be burgeoning. The expense of our ecosystems and environments is born out of ego driven ignorance.

Malcolm wrote:

The population is burgeoning because of energy inputs into biological systems, which turned up in the hickey stick shape after the wide spread use of oil. Without the present level of energy inputs from any source, world population growth cannot be sustained, leading to resource wars, and eventually the collapse of world civilization.

This process is driven by the three poisons, unfortunately, most people are not Dharma practitioners, so they are not even aware of why they act the way they do.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 15th, 2021 at 9:14 PM

Title: Re: Anthropic principle

Content:

tkp67 said:

Science and dharma are already are blended come from the same human mind.

Malcolm wrote:

Science is a product of the experimentally tested empirical observations made by ordinary people.

Dharma is the product of the awakened mind of a buddha.

So, not the same human mind.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 15th, 2021 at 10:52 PM

Title: Re: Anthropic principle

Content:

tkp67 said:

Science and dharma are already are blended come from the same human mind.

Malcolm wrote:

Science is a product of the experimentally tested empirical observations made by ordinary people.

Virgo said:

Hopefully.

Virgo

Malcolm wrote:

If it is not a product of the experimentally tested empirical observations made by ordinary people, it isn't science, by definition.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 16th, 2021 at 1:19 AM

Title: Re: Anthropic principle

Content:

steveb1 said:

The universe simply does not look, or behave, as if it is the ordered product of a compassionate divine mind.

Sādhaka said:

It appears to be so to some deluded sentient beings though.

To other deluded sentient beings it appears to be an sadistic demiurgic/archontic construct.

To other deluded sentient beings still, it is 100% random and everything 100% coincidental (Murthugpas), probably the least coherent explanation of all; the context of—shall we say—‘the appearance-side of Kadak’ aside....

Malcolm wrote:

Nope, it looks like the random outcomes of myriad sentient beings acting each in their own way.

Sādhaka said:

“Random” though?

Within karma-vipaka & dependent-origination there’s no randomness per-sé is there?

To be fair, you did say “it looks like”....

Malcolm wrote:

Random, because we cannot predict the actions of sentient beings, and therefore, we cannot predict the outcomes of those actions. Also dependent origination does not exclude randomness at all, unless by "random" you mean "causeless." But the word random does not mean causeless, it means a: lacking a definite plan, purpose, or pattern or b: made, done, or chosen at random. I think we can say that most actions of sentient beings fit definition a.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 16th, 2021 at 9:15 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Virgo said:

Anthropogenic Climate Change has already slowed global agriculture productivity growth by 21%:

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, when it is all reduced to raw physics, it’s all very predictable.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 16th, 2021 at 10:04 AM

Title: Re: Can all people in our world come to enlightenment?

Content:

RonBucker said:

A good teacher can lead any person to enlightenment, or are there people whom he cannot help?

Malcolm wrote:

You can lead a horse to water, but you can't force it to drink. Buddhanature is irrelevant.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 16th, 2021 at 10:21 PM

Title: Re: Can all people in our world come to enlightenment?

Content:

Supramundane said:

Tathagatagarbha --- womb or embryo?

It is disputed whether buddha-nature is identical to Tathagatagarbha. Perhaps they both describe the same thing from different angles?

Tathāgatagarbha needs no cultivation... only uncovering, as it is already present and perfect in each being.

(Remember the Sutra about the poor man who in advanced old age found a jewel sewn into his smock. With Incredible surprise, he observed: 'I have been a rich man all this time and I never knew it!')

This points not to a womb (potential) but to an embryo (innate buddha-nature).

Perhaps tathagatagarbha and buddha-nature are different --- but refer to the same thing. So they are different but not-different:)

Epilogue

Buddhist Sutras teaching Buddha Nature

--- Tathāgatagarbha Sūtra

--- Śrīmālādevī Siṃhanāda Sūtra

--- Anunatva Apurnatva Nirdeśa

--- Aṅgulimāliya Sūtra

--- Mahāyāna Mahāparinirvāṇa Sūtra

--- Laṅkāvatāra Sūtra

Malcolm wrote:

Three things: The Laṅkāvatāra should be taken as the definitive sūtra on this topic for three reasons: 1) It defines tathāgatagarbha as cittaprakṛtiprabhāsvara aka the natural luminosity of the mind. 2) It defines all sentient beings as tathāgatagarbha and tathāgatagarbha as all sentient beings. 3. It is the sūtra identified by Candrakīrti as the final word on the subject.

As for original enlightenment, all I have to say is to quote from Jetsun Drakpa Gyalsten, "Of what use is primordial buddhahood when at present our adventitious afflictions are not mitigated at all?"

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 16th, 2021 at 10:26 PM

Title: Re: Can all people in our world come to enlightenment?

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

The only difference between a Buddha and an ordinary, sentient being, is that the ordinary person doesn't realize they are Buddha.

Malcolm wrote:

No, the difference between a buddha and sentient beings is the presence or absence of adventitious afflictions, as the Buddha states in the Hevajra tantra:

Sentient beings are buddhas,
though obscured by adventitious afflictions.
When those are removed, they are buddhas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 16th, 2021 at 11:46 PM

Title: Re: Can all people in our world come to enlightenment?

Content:

LastLegend said:

Alaya is simply a recall of memories.

Malcolm wrote:

No, the ālaya has no cognitive operations. It is just a repository of traces. It does not remember anything. Memory is an operation of the sixth consciousness.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 17th, 2021 at 1:42 AM

Title: Re: Why do monks reside in temples

Content:

neander said:

Many Buddhist have a negative attitude towards the scholars because they are somehow detached from the subject.

Malcolm wrote:

Most Buddhists could care less what Schopen and co. think. The project of the latter is completely disconnected from the Dharma, since their modus operandi is strictly forensic.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 17th, 2021 at 2:29 AM

Title: Re: Can all people in our world come to enlightenment?

Content:

RonBucker said:

So, all people in our world are already enlightened, they just need to practice to realize it? What will happen to people who have realized their enlightenment, what will they feel, what will they do next?

PadmaVonSamba said:

1. Not already enlightened.

Being Enlightened means you realize it. It's like walking into a dark room and turning on the lights (hence the term, "enlightened").

Malcolm wrote:

The term "enlightened" does not exist in any Buddhist text in Sanskrit, Pali, or Tibetan. The term "bodhi" means to awaken.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 17th, 2021 at 5:07 AM

Title: Re: How to decarbonize your life.

Content:

tkp67 said:

That is why it is of prime importance not to doubt that their inherent buddha nature can be realized (acknowledge for the purpose of manifestation) in the current lifetime.

Malcolm wrote:

I do doubt it. There is no evidence at all whatsoever that buddhanature has any agentive effect.

tkp67 said:

The darker things become the more this nature will manifest out of necessity.

Malcolm wrote:

Tiny lights seem very bright in total darkness.

tkp67 said:

I found I can still love and advocate for her benefit and the benefit of life that has been nurtured by her presence.

Malcolm wrote:

Life isn't going away, unless we turn the planet into a lifeless rock.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 17th, 2021 at 5:08 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Nemo said:

They will stall in this way until they can say yes it is real but it's too late.

Malcolm wrote:

They did and it is.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 17th, 2021 at 5:09 AM

Title: Re: Can all people in our world come to enlightenment?

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

1. Not already enlightened.

Being Enlightened means you realize it. It's like walking into a dark room and turning on the lights (hence the term, "enlightened").

Malcolm wrote:

The term "enlightened" does not exist in any Buddhist text in Sanskrit, Pali, or Tibetan. The term "bodhi" means to awaken.

PadmaVonSamba said:

Yeah, that's true. It's an abstract concept borrowed from Western Europe.
Within the context of the question, it refers to realization of original mind itself, and not some notion of "enlightened mind" or buddhahood specifically.

Malcolm wrote:

The term is not a good one for Buddhists to use.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 17th, 2021 at 5:20 AM

Title: Re: Bodhisattva appearing as a Buddha

Content:

Queequeg said:

Great bodhisattvas are said to be able to appear as buddhas in order to approach and teach beings.

What is the difference between a bona fide buddha and a bodhisattva who appears as a buddha? Is there any difference?

Malcolm wrote:

I assume by great bodhisattvas we are talking about tenth stage bodhisattvas, in which case the difference is quite minimal. The Abhisamayālaṃkāra states that tenth stageers are on a stage of buddhahood.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 17th, 2021 at 9:31 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

At a personal level, I find it's a war of attrition - noticing one kind of plastic waste I generate and working out how to avoid it (best) or recycle it (second-best) rather than trash it (worst).

Malcolm wrote:

The problem is the supply side, not the demand side.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 17th, 2021 at 9:30 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

If you mean it's being pushed on to us via retailers, yes. Here at least, customers are refusing over-packaged goods, especially in supermarkets, and the supermarkets are responding quite well ... social licence and all that.

There's still a long way to go, however.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

It's also pushed on the retailers by the manufacturers.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 17th, 2021 at 11:20 PM

Title: Re: Prayer or a Polemic on Guns

Content:

pemachophel said:

I remember reading a Tibetan prayer or polemic against firearms but now I can't find it. It may have been by Khyentse Wangpo. Does anyone here know what I'm talking about and have a link to this?

Malcolm wrote:

Nyala Pema Duddul.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 17th, 2021 at 11:40 PM

Title: Re: Can all people in our world come to enlightenment?

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

The only difference between a Buddha and an ordinary, sentient being, is that the ordinary person doesn't realize they are Buddha.

Malcolm wrote:

No, the difference between a buddha and and sentient beings is the presence or absence of adventitious afflictions, as the Buddha states in the Hevajra tantra:

Sentient beings are buddhas,
though obscured by adventitious afflictions.
When those are removed, they are buddhas.

Aemilius said:

Here the text says "sentient beings", what would this world be like, if the snakes, rats and parrots became awakened?

I mentioned only such animals that are mentioned in the Jatakas or Birth stories as possessing mind and volitions and thus being capable of creating good and bad karma, and also becoming awakened in some future life, if not in their present animal body. I think that some kind of insects are mentioned in the Karandavyuha sutra as objects of Avalokiteshvara's bodhisattva deeds, i.e. releasing them from the realm samsaric rebirth.

Could it be said:

"Ants and spiders and rats and snakes are buddhas,
though obscured by adventitious defilements.
When those are removed, they are buddhas."

Malcolm wrote:

Animals, etc., the beings of the five lokas apart from humans, generally, cannot practice a path.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 17th, 2021 at 11:45 PM

Title: Re: Can all people in our world come to enlightenment?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Three things: The Laṅkāvatāra should be taken as the definitive sutra on this topic for three reasons: 1) It defines tathāgata-garbha as citta-prakṛti-prabhāśvara aka the natural luminosity of the mind. 2) It defines all sentient beings as tathāgata-garbha and tathāgata-garbha as all sentient beings. 3. It is the sūtra identified by Candrakīrti as the final word on the subject.

FiveSkandhas said:

Bodhidharma also considered the Laṅkāvatāra of supreme importance. He gave it to his chosen successor, Dazu Huike, as a sign of his attainment. Bodhidharma said:
[The Laṅkāvatāra Sutra] contains the essential teaching concerning the mind-ground of the Tathagata, by means of which you lead all sentient beings to the truth of Buddhism.

In fact the text was held in such high esteem by his lineage that the early Chan school was sometimes called "The Lanka School" by doxologists in the first few centuries.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, this is true. It's also one of those main reasons vegetarianism is stressed in Chan.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 18th, 2021 at 1:15 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Nemo said:

The technical ability to fix things has been around since the 80s.

Malcolm wrote:

That ship sailed. It is beyond "fixing." It can't even be mitigated at this point. It can't even be cleaned up. Micro-plastics rain from the sky, largely from automobile tire fibers; there is more plastic in the ocean than fish. We have addressed superficial issues, the pollution we can see, while filling the earth's uninhabited places with plastic., etc. It will take us several human lifetimes to repair the damage we have done to our planet. I have doubts that will happen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 18th, 2021 at 2:30 AM

Title: Re: Video on Gompopa and Buddha Nature.

Content:

sherabpa said:

What is probably true however is that Tsongkhapa was very influential in 'demoting' the lineage of Maitreya/Asanga below that of Nagarjuna/Madhyamaka, whereas more traditionally these two lineages were seen as equal.

Malcolm wrote:

This is definitely not so. For example, Sapan, whom you mention above, considered only the Abhisamayālaṃkāra to be definitive. Also Tsongkhapa followed suit.

For example, the Hevajra Tantra explicitly places Yogācāra below Madhyamaka, and so on.

First explain Vaibhāṣika, likewise, Sautrantika,
after that, Yogācāra, and likewise, Madhyamaka.

Also Sapan held the view that Uttaratantra itself viewed tathāgatagarbha as a provisional doctrine. Not only this, but the scholars of the Imperial Period held that Yogacāra was below Madhyamaka, since they were all students, directly or indirectly, of Santarakṣita.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 18th, 2021 at 3:00 AM

Title: Re: How do modern Buddhist schools explain compassion?

Content:

RonBucker said:

How exactly should I show compassion to other people? I should compassion to people in words, or it can be material help? Should I sympathize with people only when they feel sad and lonely, or even when they feel happy? How about animals, how to sympathize with them? They, like us, feel emotions, how I should show compassion to them?

PadmaVonSamba said:

Kindness, patience, generosity.

It doesn't matter what's going on in the minds of other beings or whether they are human or not.

RonBucker said:

Thank you. So it doesn't matter if other people feel happy or upset, compassion should be constant?

Malcolm wrote:

Compassion is, simply put, the wish that others be free from suffering. That's it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 18th, 2021 at 8:26 PM

Title: Re: Video on Gompopa and Buddha Nature.

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

But Tathatagarbha Sutras are essential. Buddha taught them for a reason.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, as he says in the Lanka, he taught tathāgatagarbha for those who were terrified of the doctrine of anatma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 18th, 2021 at 8:28 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

BTW, friends discourage friends from reading or (especially) trusting Breitbart.

Malcolm wrote:

Friends don't let friends read Briettbart or RT, for that matter.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 19th, 2021 at 1:09 AM

Title: Re: An intersubjective experience in Yogacara

Content:

RonBucker said:

Does this mean that the modern schools of Mahayana Buddhism do not adhere to the opinion that external objects do not exist?

Malcolm wrote:

Generally, speaking, no.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 19th, 2021 at 1:13 AM

Title: Re: An intersubjective experience in Yogacara

Content:

RonBucker said:

Thank you. Are you saying that in order to be a Buddhist, you cannot be a materialist and you can not believe in a naive objective reality?

As far as I understand, the only difference is that everything in our world does not have an independent existence and consists of a constant stream of factors that we given names, and the essence of awakening is learning how to look at the world without names, associations and concepts?

Or am I wrong?

Malcolm wrote:

There are three concepts that distinguish Buddhist thought from the materialist: 1) mind is a nonphysical continuum that interacts with matter; and thus Buddhists accept 2) rebirth and 3) karma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 19th, 2021 at 2:11 AM

Title: Re: Video on Gompopa and Buddha Nature.

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

But correct me if I am misrepresenting your view. Are you saying that Tathatagarbha Sutras are a subsumed within Prajnaparamita and Madhyamaka and are a sort of palliative, also not offering any further substantial teaching?

Malcolm wrote:

I am saying that the tathāgatgarbha sūtras can be understood to be definitive if they are correctly understood (tathātagarbha as the luminous, original nature of the mind), and if understood incorrectly, provisional in meaning at best (and at worst, an atmanavāda). As they stand, tathāgatgarbha sūtras require interpretation, unlike Madhyamaka and the PP Sūtras.

I am saying that the Lanka and Candrakīrti offer the final word on the subject. The Uttaratantra itself defines tathāgatagarbha as a provisional teaching, in the chapter one, the fourth vajra topic, towards the end, verses 156-160:

Having stated that all knowable things are empty in every aspect, like clouds, dreams, and illusions, here, the buddhas have stated that the buddha element (buddhadhātu) exists in all sentient beings.

They have stated this for the purpose of having [sentient beings] abandon five faults: timidity, contempt for inferior sentient beings, grasping the impure, deriding pure phenomena, and excess attachment to themselves.

While the limit of reality (bhūtakoti) is devoid of all compounded aspects, the meaning of affliction, karma, and ripening are said to be like clouds, and so on. Afflictions are like clouds, karma is like an experience in a dream, and ripening of karma and afflictions, the aggregates, are like an illusory emanation.

Having presented this above, this ancillary or supplemental tantra repeats the explanation "the dhātu exists" in order to abandon five faults.

The Uttaratantra's actual goal is to explicate luminosity aka clear light, and its realization.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 19th, 2021 at 2:14 AM

Title: Re: An intersubjective experience in Yogacara

Content:

RonBucker said:

Does this mean that the modern schools of Mahayana Buddhism do not adhere to the opinion that external objects do not exist?

Malcolm wrote:

Generally, speaking, no.

RonBucker said:

that is, they don't believe in external objects? Then I didn't understand anything. Does everyone imagine their own world?

Malcolm wrote:

No, as in "No, modern schools of Mahayana Buddhism do not adhere to the opinion that external objects do not exist."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 19th, 2021 at 10:53 AM

Title: Re: An intersubjective experience in Yogacara

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

No, as in "No, modern schools of Mahayana Buddhism do not adhere to the opinion that external objects do not exist."

Queequeg said:

Malcolm in his laconic manner has not mentioned the rest of the tetralemma...

Malcolm wrote:

I didn't intend to, since that's not what I meant to do [engage in ultimate analysis].

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 19th, 2021 at 9:06 PM

Title: Re: Can all people in our world come to enlightenment?

Content:

Aemilius said:

Here the text says "sentient beings", what would this world be like, if the snakes, rats and parrots became awakened?

I mentioned only such animals that are mentioned in the Jatakas or Birth stories as possessing mind and volitions and thus being capable of creating good and bad karma, and also becoming awakened in some future life, if not in their present animal body. I think that some kind of insects are mentioned in the Karandavyuha sutra as objects of Avalokiteshvara's bodhisattva deeds, i.e. releasing them from the realm samsaric rebirth.

Could it be said:

"Ants and spiders and rats and snakes are buddhas,
though obscured by adventitious defilements.
When those are removed, they are buddhas."

Malcolm wrote:

Animals, etc., the beings of the five lokas apart from humans, generally, cannot practice a path.

karmanyangpo said:

Am I correct in interpreting the "generally" as meaning that there are sometimes exceptions?

What would those exceptions be?

KN

Malcolm wrote:

Nagas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 19th, 2021 at 9:10 PM

Title: Re: Can all people in our world come to enlightenment?

Content:

Aemilius said:

I don't buy that, in terms of Buddhism or in terms of modern knowledge of animal consciousness. All beings in the five or six lokas have all the members of the 12 Nidanas (of Conditioned arising) governing their existence, not only humans. Why would the Buddhist tradition say "all beings", if it didn't mean it?

Malcolm wrote:

So, hell beings and pretas can attain buddhahood in their respective lokas? No, the Buddha clearly states that only human beings can practice a path and attain buddhahood. This why human birth in a central country etc., is desirable.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 19th, 2021 at 9:12 PM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

In the same way abortion can be avoided with family planning, care, counseling, support, financial services, Spiritual and Community help, social programs, rehabilitation services, and a compassionate heart that would benefit from all of these things.

Malcolm wrote:

Another man telling women what to do with their bodies.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 19th, 2021 at 9:14 PM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

The problem in today's world is that people act like it's a choice people make to make things better, instead, losing a child is a tragic loss, and that is what happens in abortion.

Malcolm wrote:

Ever hear of rebirth?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 19th, 2021 at 11:39 PM

Title: Re: Can all people in our world come to enlightenment?

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Actually, I saw something recently in a text that implied that Asuras have the possibility to attain Buddhahood as well. Unlikely that many would, I'd imagine, but the implication of the possibility was there. Now if I could just remember where I'd read it.... It was only like a month or so ago.

Also, aren't there stories in Sutras and so on about Devas having the possibility to attain Buddhahood too?

Malcolm wrote:

The Suhrillekha states:

Birth as one holding wrong views, as animals, pretas, and hell beings, as one without the teaching of the victor, or in a border country,
birth as a barbarian, as one stupid and dumb,
or birth as any of the long-lived gods
are the eight faults of lacking freedom.

Having acquired the freedom that is liberated from those states.

one must make effort in order to avoid them.

Asuras here are included among the devas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 20th, 2021 at 1:44 AM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

tkp67 said:

In a conversation based on aborting life arguing that dharma does not preserve life is tantamount to saying dharma does not have an interest in preserving life.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, correct. Dharma is concerned only with the cessation of suffering.

The reason we practice ahimsa is not to preserve life, but rather, is not to consciously cause suffering.

Anyway, one cannot abort life, one can only abort a life. But since there is rebirth, the loss of life does not mean that sentient being whose fetal development was interrupted will not take another rebirth. And, further, being aborted is a ripening of karma. In Buddhadharma, there are no innocents.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 20th, 2021 at 2:19 AM

Title: Re: ChNN Medicine Buddha practices

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

http://shangshung.org/store/index.php?main_page=product_info&cPath=74_75&products_id=756

Do these require certain specific lungs, or did we receive it with the Medicine Buddha lungs that ChNN put at the end of his webcasts?

Malcolm wrote:

You received it with the lung. He did give the empowerment a couple of times, but the lung is sufficient.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 20th, 2021 at 2:29 AM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

But since there is rebirth, the loss of life does not mean that sentient being whose fetal development was interrupted will not take another rebirth. And, further, being aborted is a ripening of karma. In Buddhadharma, there are no innocents.

Sādhaka said:

Samsara is an vicious cycle. One being pays karma by getting inflicted upon by another the sentient being, then the being doing the said infliction creates more karma for themselves.

Malcolm wrote:

Considering that fetuses have no sense perceptions until the 19th week, the amount suffering inflicted on a fetus is nil, until it finds itself in the bardo again.

Sādhaka said:

I'm open minded to there being rare cases where abortion wouldn't create negative karma regarding the sentient beings involved in it; but in most cases I'm going with it being an cause for more negative karma than not.

Malcolm wrote:

Most people are not Buddhists and don't believe in karma.

Sādhaka said:

People have the option of things like Yoga, pranayama, fasting etc. to gain some control of their sexual impulses, instead of getting addicted to things like masturbation, porn, casual sex etc. Easier said than done though for many, admittedly; as many people have circumstances where they work all the time and live in a residence with others where they have little privacy & leisure time to set aside for such practices....

Malcolm wrote:

People like to fk. Sometimes, women get pregnant when it is not convenient for whatever reason. In order for a karma to be perfect there has to be satisfaction with the outcome, "I did good." Never met a woman yet who has happy to have had an abortion. I prefer secular ethics to religious ethics, because the latter are too narrow and require someone to follow beliefs they may not actually hold.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 20th, 2021 at 7:24 AM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

Giovanni said:

Important. As Malcolm says there are things necessary for actions to cause unmixed negative Vipaka. They have to be intentional, and the person needs to be satisfied with the result of their actions.

Unmixed negative karma is not created just because of actions we do not like or approve of. It's a bit more complicated.

Most karma is mixed because of mixed intentions and remorse at result of action.

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed, in Mahayana, it is possible have an abortion out of compassion, but most people tend to cite the "old testament" when discussing ethics.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 20th, 2021 at 9:42 AM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

tkp67 said:

In a conversation based on aborting life arguing that dharma does not preserve life is tantamount to saying dharma does not have an interest in preserving life.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, correct. Dharma is concerned only with the cessation of suffering.

The reason we practice ahimsa is not to preserve life, but rather, is not to consciously cause suffering.

Anyway, one cannot abort life, one can only abort a life. But since there is rebirth, the loss of life does not mean that sentient being whose fetal development was interrupted will not take another rebirth. And, further, being aborted is a ripening of karma. In Buddhadharma, there are no innocents.

tkp67 said:

Impermanence is not in question so preserve denotes original/existing state. That is, what remains after liberation is the original state.

pre·serve

/prəˈzərv/

"maintain (something) in its original or existing state."

If the state of enlightenment is boundless and immeasurable so is the value of life that experiences such a thing, regardless of how impermanent that particular existence.

What was the value of Shakyamuni's existence?

Malcolm wrote:

"To preserve" means to worry about degeneration, and thus impermanence. Something which never degenerates does not require any preservation at all.

Living beings who are "enlightened" have no fear abortion since they have no further karma to ripen and they are free of birth and death.

As for Shakyamuni, the value of his existence depends on who you ask.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 20th, 2021 at 10:39 AM

Title: Re: Teachers in Dharmasala

Content:

Unknown said:

U.S. will boost 'Do Not Travel' advisories to 80% of world

The U.S. State Department said on Monday it will boost its "Do Not Travel" guidance to about 80% of countries worldwide, citing "unprecedented risk to travelers" from the COVID-19 pandemic.

Read in Reuters: <https://apple.news/AdMJtlavVQAmbL0xzkjKu4A>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 20th, 2021 at 10:45 AM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

tkp67 said:

The new age movement is simply a means to communicate "psycho spirituality" outside the normally conditioned context using words that have little existing culturally corrupted psychological or spiritual meaning.

Malcolm wrote:

Umm, no, the New Age is a pastiche, a mishmash, a naive appropriation that has its root in Theosophy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 20th, 2021 at 8:21 PM

Title: Re: Anthropic principle

Content:

tkp67 said:

Science and dharma are already are blended come from the same human mind.

Malcolm wrote:

Science is a product of the experimentally tested empirical observations made by ordinary people.

Dharma is the product of the awakened mind of a buddha.

So, not the same human mind.

Aemilius said:

That is the official truth or a half truth, which is caused by the official or public history and the divided nature of the European culture. The actual truth is different, there have always been esoteric knowledge and the esoteric traditions in Europe from the Roman times onwards. The esoteric traditions have produced persons with higher consciousness, i.e. knowledge of reality that is in many ways similar to the Buddhist enlightenment. This has directly and indirectly influenced what is called Scientific knowledge, from its very beginnings.

You can look for example into the life and works of Giordano Bruno, in him spiritual knowledge and science are blended, they are seen as aspects of one reality

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Giordano_Bruno

Malcolm wrote:

These esoteric traditions are mundane, and do not lead to liberation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 20th, 2021 at 10:14 PM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

tkp67 said:

Your preference doesn't equate to the accepted defined meaning of the word for which I gave you ample reference.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure it does, that's why fruit processed with heat and pectin, and stored in sterile jar are called "preserves."

tkp67 said:

Living beings who are "enlightened" have no fear abortion since they have no further karma to ripen and they are free of birth and death.

Well if they honor Shakyamuni's enlightenment then they understand the value of sentient life and the connection and debt they have to the unenlightened.

Malcolm wrote:

Nonreferential compassion is not born out of a sense of debt. Buddhas have no concept of "value, "sentient life", or "unenlightened." Buddhas are totally beyond such concepts.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 20th, 2021 at 10:18 PM

Title: Re: Video on Gompopa and Buddha Nature.

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Lankavatara cannot be a final word on Tathatagarbha.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure it can, and it is.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 20th, 2021 at 10:28 PM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Not to say that someone in the New Age movement couldn't reach the same goal.

Malcolm wrote:

They cannot. Most new age people are closeted theists.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 20th, 2021 at 10:32 PM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

and it's a fair way from Theosophy. Rather,

Malcolm wrote:

Not really for example, the seven cakra system is basically a Theosophical invention. The only difference between the modern new age and Theosophy and its offspring is the blatant cultural appropriation of indigenous traditions as "shamanism."

Channeling, crystals, racism (i.e. cloaked in a theory of spiritual evolution), ascended masters, faux yoga, etc., all of it but for the shamanic business, goes back to Blavatsky and co.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 20th, 2021 at 10:45 PM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

Supramundane said:

I will admit to reading a few pages of True Hallucinations (McKenna?). The writer is something of a futurist hippy. I think it is available free online if you want some laughs.

Some of his discourses are on youtube. It is appealing to teenagers: seems edgy, rebellious. Obviously, a bad path to take as a life choice...

Malcolm wrote:

I used to work in a Buddhist/New Age Bookstore on Newbury Street (1987-1990) in Boston, right at the time of the "Harmonic Convergence." So, in order to sell books I had to become somewhat conversant with all these silly New Age books and trends. I also ran the crystal and jewelry counter. It was during this period that the Castaneda fraud exploded into the fake shaman trend, with authors like Lynn V. Andrews and other plastic medicine people taking up bookshelf space. And yes, Terrance McKenna, RAW's Illuminati Trilogy was popular, its all part of parcel of the same trend.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 20th, 2021 at 10:51 PM

Title: Re: An intersubjective experience in Yogacara

Content:

Supramundane said:

Early buddhism is contrasted with contemporary materialist Indian schools that believed in man having one life terminated by death.

It also avoided positing an atman and becoming a votary of reincarnation; the buddha thus opted for rebirth.

You are right that the salvation element was specific to buddhism, which prescribed an escape from the vortex of an illusory self.

In the Maha-nidana sutra, by shunning the ephemeral world of nama-rupa, consciousness can escape the vortex to fall instead upon nirvana. Theravada later seemed to have strayed from this initial idea by instead favoring "cessation".

Malcolm wrote:

Bronkhorst recently uploaded a couple of interesting papers on Charvakas an Academia.edu:

https://www.academia.edu/46040997/Who_were_the_C%C4%81rv%C4%81kas https://www.academia.edu/46041000/Correcting_the_Text_of_the_Sarvadar%C5%9Banasana%E1%B9%83graha

https://www.academia.edu/46040958/%C4%80j%C4%ABvika_Doctrine_Reconsidered

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 21st, 2021 at 12:39 AM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

They just make sh*t up and pass it off as authentic.

Malcolm wrote:

And the number of new agers who fall hook, line, and sinker for Qanon, antivaxx, 5G conspiracies, shows they have very little critical thinking.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 21st, 2021 at 1:47 AM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

They don't come with an empty cup, they think they already know something about spirituality. And they project that stuff onto Buddhism. Often their assumptions aren't really the Buddhist view, and they need some help understanding the differences in view and approach.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, we see this a bit around here, in some posters.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 21st, 2021 at 2:55 AM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

Matt J said:

I don't really see much difference between New Age culture and modern U.S. Buddhist culture in many instances, especially in the Tibetan vein. In the one, people collect "modalities," in the other they collect empowerments, practices, and items. In both, people spend a lot of time assigning blame to planets and stars, and suggesting various healing modalities to one another. In both, people like to dress in non-Western clothes. There is quite a bit of overlap even in the people.

Malcolm wrote:

There are definitely intersections.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 21st, 2021 at 5:31 AM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

Hazel said:

patchouli

Malcolm wrote:

Is a crime.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 21st, 2021 at 6:30 AM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

You make a very good point. But I have a question. Why don't you sense that Love as it is in itself has the quality of Anatta, views of impermanence, and Sunyata? Can you remember being in Love with someone before opening up your Buddhist mind, and seeing these things present there? To me, real true Love is a Vehicle that is by far a guide and is always Buddhist.

Malcolm wrote:

Maitri is love only in the sense that one wishes for another person to be happy. That's all maitri means, just as compassion means that one wishes for another person to be free of suffering. But the Buddha never identified love as a cause of awakening. With respect to compassion, on the other hand, the Buddha instructed Avalokitesvara that all that is needed for full awakening is great compassion.

I suggest you reorient yourself from love to compassion.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 21st, 2021 at 7:03 AM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The Dharmasaṃgīti Mahāyāna Sūtra states:

Bodhisattva Avalokiteśvara said the following to the Bhagavān: "Bhagavān, a bodhisattva should not train in very many Dharmas. Bhagavān, if one is to uphold and fully realize a single Dharma, Bhagavān, all the Dharmas of the Buddha will be placed in their palm. If it is asked which single Dharma, it is great compassion."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 21st, 2021 at 10:58 AM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

I suggest you reorient yourself from love to compassion.

Könchok Chödrak said:

I get what you are saying.

Malcolm wrote:

No, I don't think you do. But that's fine.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 21st, 2021 at 12:20 PM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Yes, we must Love everyone equally, I think that ripens one into Buddhahood. That is why Thich Nhat Hanh is talking about true Love. As for romantic Love, in true Love, "desire"? Well, the longing, the missing of someone, the abstractions, they can all still be there but without attachment or craving, with the skhandas emptied, and a joyous state fulfilled. For example I was once noticing two Buddhist Lovers in a difficult place, but their Love was pure and healing, and it is beyond words to describe here. But the concepts of the Dharma do not fall apart in deep Buddhist romantic Love, they become realized. Buddha laid out a Way for householders to become Enlightened, and it is a wonderful Path.

Malcolm wrote:

I am sorry, but there is no such thing as what you are talking about. There is no happiness in samsara, not even as much as a pinhead. Your Romantic Buddhist Love is just a fantasy you have generated. It has no basis in the teachings of the Buddha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 21st, 2021 at 1:44 PM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

We have to kill that vanity, stop acting like ole mom and dad are always leaning over our shoulders, and find full compassion for that crystal-gazing Tahoe-hottubbing priceless sentient being.

Malcolm wrote:

Compassion is one thing, respecting inanity is quite another.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 21st, 2021 at 8:33 PM

Title: Re: Anthropic principle

Content:

Aemilius said:

That is the official truth or a half truth, which is caused by the official or public history and the divided nature of the European culture. The actual truth is different, there have always been esoteric knowledge and the esoteric traditions in Europe from the Roman times onwards. The esoteric traditions have produced persons with higher consciousness, i.e. knowledge of reality that is in many ways similar to the Buddhist enlightenment. This has directly and indirectly influenced what is called Scientific knowledge, from its very beginnings.

You can look for example into the life and works of Giordano Bruno, in him spiritual knowledge and science are blended, they are seen as aspects of one reality
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Giordano_Bruno

Malcolm wrote:

These esoteric traditions are mundane, and do not lead to liberation.

Aemilius said:

On what basis do you say that? Do You claim to possess the Five eyes and the Six abhijñas? Or is it based on prejudice and ignorance about the esoteric traditions on the continent of Europe?

Malcolm wrote:

It's based on several remarks made by the Buddha, and the fact that I have read Bruno, Ficino, Dee, Agrippa, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 21st, 2021 at 8:36 PM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

So the point is, is that we can produce Buddha fruit in everyone and everything,

Malcolm wrote:

No, we can't. It's totally naive to think otherwise.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 21st, 2021 at 10:14 PM

Title: Re: The relationship between going for refuge and the five vows

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

For years I assumed that when one goes for refuge in the triple jewel as a committed lay practitioner, one also soon thereafter would need to take the five lay vows as well.

Most sources sort of imply this without necessarily stating it directly.

Malcolm wrote:

The most comprehensive presentation of which vows an upasāka follows is found in the fourth chapter of the Abhdharmakośabhaṣyaṃ. You receive all the vows merely by going for refuge to the Three Jewels. However, one can elect to only follow those vows one feels capable of, beginning with refraining from taking life.

FiveSkandhas said:

Other sources I have been digging into, however, suggest that one need not in fact take any of the five vows.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, there are one vow, two vow, three, vow and full-vow upasākas. This is taught by the Buddha.

FiveSkandhas said:

What, exactly? Or are the vows truly "optional" for Upāsaka and Upāsikā status?

Malcolm wrote:

At minimum, one holds the commitments of refuge and the vow against killing (which really refers to killing humans, but it widely interpreted to cover all creatures).

This is complicated by taking bodhisattva vows. Since bodhisattva vows supersede pratimokṣa vows, whenever the former contradict the latter, the former should be followed and not the latter in order to avoid a bodhisattva downfall. The same applies to Vajrayāna vows.

Buddhist Ethics by Kongtrul has the most detailed presentation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 21st, 2021 at 10:44 PM

Title: Re: The relationship between going for refuge and the five vows

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

However, leaving aside the more arcane details of the Precepts, as well as our esteemed Theravadin cousins, for moment, it seems to me that on the simple, basic matter of refuge and the five lay vows there should be some kind of pan-Mahayana/Vajrayana ur-consensus.

Malcolm wrote:

No, there cannot be, for the simple reason that Sino-Japanese Buddhists have a completely different vinaya, Dharmaguptaka, that Tibetan Buddhists, who follow Mulasarvastivada. Also, the bodhisattva vow tradition is completely different, based either on the Madhyamaka tradition (Sakya, Nyingma) or the Yogācāra tradition, (Kadampa, Geluk).

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 21st, 2021 at 10:45 PM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

So the point is, is that we can produce Buddha fruit in everyone and everything,

Malcolm wrote:

No, we can't. It's totally naive to think otherwise.

Könchok Chödrak said:

If a beggar is receptive of the Dharma, then yes, if a beggar is not, then until that beggar becomes receptive, then fruit will not be produced. But it will always be possible to produce the fruit of the Dharma for that beggar, by the beggar's own volition from within.

Malcolm wrote:

The best one can do is create a positive connection. Otherwise, not really possible.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 21st, 2021 at 10:48 PM

Title: Re: Yuthok nyingthig ngondro text?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

The nexus between medicine and esoteric Buddhism is a deep topic and one shrouded in particular secrecy. I wish you luck in fathoming those depths.

Malcolm wrote:

It is pretty open in Tibetan Buddhism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 21st, 2021 at 11:00 PM

Title: Re: The relationship between going for refuge and the five vows

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Thanks so very much for your clear and helpful answer. Cuts through a lot of the noise indeed.

Malcolm wrote:

Then of course, in Dzogchen teachings, there are really no vows to follow, in general. However, they are mentioned in various Dzogchen tantras because they are useful guidelines for unrealized people to follow. In general, if someone reaches the path of seeing, they are beyond all vows anyway.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 22nd, 2021 at 1:13 AM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

but not much seems to be sinking in.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, he did change his name from Brahma to Konchok.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 22nd, 2021 at 2:29 AM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

but not much seems to be sinking in.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, he did change his name from Brahma to Konchok.

FiveSkandhas said:

Now now, Brahma has a high and esteemed position as one of the greatest Devas, a mighty Dharmapala protector, and master of the lofty Brahmaloaka realm. Great 梵天 has impeccable Buddhist credentials.

Malcolm wrote:

There are a lot of brahmas, not only one. And Mahābrahma, you will recall, also is a great deceiver of sentient beings, kind of the Trump of devas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 22nd, 2021 at 8:45 AM

Title: Re: The relationship between going for refuge and the five vows

Content:

Bristollad said:

I came across this interesting teaching on the two traditions of the bodhisattva vows, given by HH the Karmapa:

<https://kagyuoffice.org/the-gyalwang-karmapa-teaches-on-two-traditions-of-taking-bodhisattva-vows-and-how-we-actually-receive-them/>

There is a short précis at the top of the page and then a small gap and a more complete transcription.

Malcolm wrote:

One point, the reason the Sakyapas prefer the Madhyamaka tradition is they do consider it superior to the Yogacara tradition.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 22nd, 2021 at 10:45 AM

Title: Re: The relationship between going for refuge and the five vows

Content:

Bristollad said:

I came across this interesting teaching on the two traditions of the bodhisattva vows, given by HH the Karmapa:

<https://kagyuoffice.org/the-gyalwang-karmapa-teaches-on-two-traditions-of-taking-bodhisattva-vows-and-how-we-actually-receive-them/>

There is a short précis at the top of the page and then a small gap and a more complete transcription.

Malcolm wrote:

One point, the reason the Sakyapas prefer the Madhyamaka tradition is they do consider it superior to the Yogacara tradition.

FiveSkandhas said:

By the way, do most Tibetan Buddhists feel so? That was sort of my impression.

I know in Japan the Yogacara school (法相宗) was generally seen as superior to the Madhyamaka school (三論宗). Part of the reason is that the Yogacarins brought in more texts and translations and kind of outclassed the Madhyamaka thinkers (who were from an older, smaller, and less textually rich sect) in the Annual Court-Sponsored Doctrinal debates.

But I suspect the real reason is that the Yogacara school was headquartered in a very large and wealthy temple that was connected to House Fujiwara, second only to the Imperial House Yamato in power at the time.

Malcolm wrote:

During the middle period of transmission of Mahayana from India to China, the period from 400 CE and 600 CE, Yogacara was at the very height of its popularity in India. But Madhyamaka made a resurgence in India during the period from 600 to 800, which accounts for the unequivocal adoption of Madhyamaka as the officially sanctioned view of Mahayana in Tibet.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 22nd, 2021 at 8:11 PM

Title: Re: Anthropic principle

Content:

Aemilius said:

According to Edward Conze the Gnostic sects in Europe, Middle East, Persia etc.. were likely connected to the Perfection of Wisdom teachings of the Lord Buddha.

Malcolm wrote:

Conze was a perennialist, not a Buddhist.

There is zero evidence for his speculation.

In any case, the Buddha states clearly that outside his Dharma and Vinaya, there are no Aryas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 23rd, 2021 at 12:58 AM

Title: Re: Anthropic principle

Content:

Aemilius said:

Buddha says it in a circular fashion that "where there is the noble eight-fold path there are also Aryas, and where there are Aryas there is found the Noble eight fold path".

In the Perfection of Wisdom literature it is said that the Dharma will first go to the direction of West (from India).

The teaching of reincarnation was widely accepted in Europe during the first 500 years of the Common Era:

"The early Christian church accepted the teaching of reincarnation, which was expounded by the Gnostics and by numerous church fathers, including Clement of Alexandria, the celebrated Origen (both 3rd century), and St. Jerome (5th century). Of the three, Origen was the greatest proponent of reincarnation among the early Christian teachers and theologians, and he had the greatest impact." (Reverend Dennis Shipman)

According to Ajahn Brahm the Roman Emperor put a Pope in prison for one year, because he refused to cancel the teaching of reincarnation. After spending a year in prison the Pope agreed to take away this teaching.

All in all, we can say that Edward Conze was a good buddhist.

Malcolm wrote:

All this is irrelevant to the historical fact that the Perfection of Wisdom Sūtras had zero impact on Gnosticism.

And:

Now in this Dhamma and Discipline, Subhadda, is found the Noble Eightfold Path; and in it alone are also found true ascetics of the first, second, third, and fourth degrees of saintliness. Devoid of true ascetics are the systems of other teachers.

<https://www.accesstinsight.org/tipitaka/dn/dn.16.1-6.vaji.html>

This statement is found repeated in many sutras.

Aemilius said:

Caused by compassion the manifestations of Sambhogakaya and Nirmanakaya (Buddhas and Bodhisattvas) will appear where ever there are people who are willing to know and hear the Dharma. You can read for example in the Lotus sutra and the Shurangama sutra how Avalokiteshvara sends diverse emanations into the world to help and guide beings. This really happens, it is not merely "metaphorical".

Malcolm wrote:

Perhaps, but "guiding sentient beings" does not render Christianity and so on (assuming they are really teachings of bodhisattvas, which I do not beleive for a second) liberative paths. They are mundane paths, and do not lead to liberation. The Buddha was extremely clear about the distinction between his path and the paths taught by tīrthikas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 23rd, 2021 at 7:05 PM

Title: Re: Anthropic principle

Content:

Aemilius said:

"He who understands the dependent origination see Buddha, the enlightened state", Buddha Shakyamuni in Arya Salistamba sutra.

Malcolm wrote:

Dependent origination is solely a teaching of the Buddha. It is taught in no other tradition, exoteric or esoteric, apart from Bon. And they borrowed the doctrine from Buddhists.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 24th, 2021 at 8:04 PM

Title: Re: Anthropic principle

Content:

Aemilius said:

The ideas of causation were not unheard of in various part of the ancient world. Though not necessarily similar to the Buddhist explanations of causation. Explanations where phenomena were not caused by a divinity or several divinities have certainly existed outside of India.

Malcolm wrote:

Those explanations do not avoid falling into extremes. So, not dependent origination. Early Samkhya also does not depend on a creator, but it's views directly contradict dependent origination, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 24th, 2021 at 8:07 PM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

I do not believe it is a mistake...to incorporate certain New Age Teachings into a Buddhist's life...

Malcolm wrote:

This is called, "corrupting the Dharma."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 24th, 2021 at 8:08 PM

Title: Re: Which Bodhisattvic Bhumis are associated with the stage of no regression?

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

I have a question. Is there a certain Bhumi that the stage of no regression (or stage of no retrogression) is most associated with for Bodhisattvas? Is a certain one definitely it?

Can all of them be reached and then non-regressed from, in a stage of no retrogression, according to Buddhist Teachings, individually? Here are the Ten Bhumis of the Bodhisattvas:

1. Extremely Joyful (rabtu dga'ba)
2. Stainless (drima medpa)
3. Luminous ('odbyed)
4. Blazing Light ('od 'phroba)
5. Challenged to Purify (sbyang dka'ba)
6. Actualizing (mngondu byedpa)
7. Going Far (ringdu songba)
8. Unshakable (mig yo ba)
9. Perfect Intelligence (legspa'i blogros)
10. Dharma Cloud (choskyi sprinpa)

(Full Article.)

<https://www.padmasambhava.org/2019/06/ten-bhumis-of-the-bodhisattvas/>

After the Tenth Bhumi one enters into Buddhahood from what I read in this article. So let me know, from the standpoint of Tibetan Buddhism, Vajrayana or Mahayana, what are the takes on this subject, as well as anything else you have learned from the Ekayana on it as well. It is important to the world of Buddhism.

Thank you.

Könchok.

Malcolm wrote:

The eighth, where one attains power over birth.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 24th, 2021 at 9:30 PM

Title: Re: Can all people in our world come to enlightenment?

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Actually, I saw something recently in a text that implied that Asuras have the possibility to attain Buddhahood as well. Unlikely that many would, I'd imagine, but the implication of the possibility was there. Now if I could just remember where I'd read it.... It was only like a month or so ago.

Also, aren't there stories in Sutras and so on about Devas having the possibility to attain Buddhahood too?

Malcolm wrote:

The Suhrillekha states:

Birth as one holding wrong views, as animals, pretas, and hell beings, as one without the teaching of the victor, or in a border country,
birth as a barbarian, as one stupid and dumb,
or birth as any of the long-lived gods
are the eight faults of lacking freedom.

Having acquired the freedom that is liberated from those states.

one must make effort in order to avoid them.

Asuras here are included among the devas.

Passing By said:

You'd think, going by the number of times Indra and other major non-Buddhist deities have appeared in the tantras as retinues of the featured mandala or Buddha, that they'd be the ones who practise dharma the most though.

Not to mention most of the retinue of mandala yidams aren't human anyway

Or do those not count as devas?

Malcolm wrote:

Figures in a mandala are symbols, not sentient beings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 24th, 2021 at 10:02 PM

Title: Re: Which Bodhisattvic Bhumis are associated with the stage of no regression?

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Thank you very much Malcolm. Can you direct me to a resource, or provide any information about how Bodhisattvas can possibly regress before that?

Thank you.

Om.

Malcolm wrote:

There are various stages of nonretrogression, if you want a comprehensive overview, you should read Mahayana Sutra Alamkara.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, April 24th, 2021 at 10:32 PM

Title: Re: Six session guru yoga

Content:

Empty Cloud said:

Dear all,

Is the six-session guru yoga mainly a gelug practice and not practised in other traditions?
Thank you for any informative responses.

Malcolm wrote:
Yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 25th, 2021 at 6:46 AM

Title: Re: The Life Span of the Tathagata: Before and after Gaya.

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

So here is my question. What is the difference before and after Gaya for Buddha, if He was already Enlightened, and what are the next steps after Gaya?

Malcolm wrote:

The twelve deeds of the Buddha, including his conception, leaving home, attaining buddhahood, and parinirvana, were all just a display to benefit sentient beings. Not only this, but his career as a bodhisattva likewise was merely a display to benefit sentient beings.

The Buddha had attained buddhahood countless myriads of eons beforehand.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 25th, 2021 at 7:23 PM

Title: Re: The Life Span of the Tathagata: Before and after Gaya.

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Well you answered all my questions very clearly. I would like to ask: what was Gautama's mind like throughout it all? Before Gaya and after Gaya? Why did there have to be a change through that powerful Meditation under the Bodhi tree? Why couldn't He just fully expound the Buddhist doctrine before He sat down and attained an already attained Enlightenment? Could He have actually? I'm sure He could have, but chose to drive those Expedient Means forward in a push to show others how to come to Enlightenment.

Malcolm wrote:

Just a show for those tired of samsara.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 25th, 2021 at 8:56 PM

Title: Re: Six session guru yoga

Content:

conebeckham said:

....though other lineages maintain guru yoga practices that compare in many ways. The Four Session Guru Yoga of Karmapa Mikyo Dorje, for instance.

Empty Cloud said:

Thank you. But where did the injunction to take refuge at least six times a day come from? Is it injunction common to all schools, apart of the Gelug-specific six-session yoga?

Additionally, where did the convention of six times a day come from? How do Tibetan partition a day for practice? I've also heard of a six-time book....

Malcolm wrote:

It comes from various exhortations in the tantras to make offerings three times a day and three times at night. Only the Geluks turned it into a guru yoga practice by that name.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 25th, 2021 at 9:04 PM

Title: Re: Bee Keeping

Content:

tingdzin said:

Talk to some keepers. Aside from bears, the ones where I used to live have a big problem with die-off caused by environmental factors. On the other hand, go for it, we need all the honey we can get.

Kim O'Hara said:

...and all the bees we can get. No pollinators, no plants. No plants, no people.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

If one lives in North America, native pollinators such as mason bees are more effective pollinators than honey bees. So make make many homes for them. White faced hornets are also good, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 25th, 2021 at 11:33 PM

Title: Re: Genealogies of Mahāyāna Buddhism: Emptiness, Power and the Question of Origin

Content:

Aemilius said:

Why should we take seriously someone like Bronkhorst who says that "rebirth and karma were invented" (by some foolish Indian cranks presumably) ?

neander said:

Out of curiosity where does he say this ? I thank you in advance if you provide the actual paper, paragraph or book where he comes to the above conclusion (and I won't hijack this thread later on to a karma discussion as there is already enough material on this forum...).

I read his paper " Did the Buddha Believe in Karma and Rebirth? " published in 1998 and overall I enjoyed it (very interesting the fact that also Vetter dismisses the 4 noble truths as a core early Buddhist principle) and I found the paper very well done.

Malcolm wrote:

Bronkhorst agrees the Buddha indeed taught both rebirth and karma in that paper.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, April 25th, 2021 at 11:38 PM

Title: Re: The Life Span of the Tathagata: Before and after Gaya.

Content:

tkp67 said:

As Nichiren taught it, Gautama himself needed to understand the nature of provision and true within his own existence in order to teach it. If he knew this clearly out of the womb would he have begrudged those earlier years in the palace pretending not to know there was suffering outside the gates?

Malcolm wrote:

There is no doubt that the Mahayana perspective is that the Buddha's life was a mere display to inspire us to practice a path. So, yes, the Buddha was a buddha from infancy, and for eons beforehand.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 12:17 AM

Title: Re: Genealogies of Mahāyāna Buddhism: Emptiness, Power and the Question of Origin

Content:

neander said:

Out of curiosity where does he say this ? I thank you in advance if you provide the actual paper, paragraph or book where he comes to the above conclusion (and I won't hijack this thread later on to a karma discussion as there is already enough material on this forum...).

I read his paper " Did the Buddha Believe in Karma and Rebirth? " published in 1998 and overall I enjoyed it (very interesting the fact that also Vetter dismisses the 4 noble truths as a core early Buddhist principle) and I found the paper very well done.

Malcolm wrote:

Bronkhorst agrees the Buddha indeed taught both rebirth and karma in that paper.

neander said:

Exactly, but it was not the karma of Vedic and Jaina scriptures because that would have been a duplicate says the paper, it was more based on intentions and desires more than physical activities...

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, that is correct. It is also obvious to anyone who has studied the doctrines of rebirth and karma outside of Buddhadharma, so not new news.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 12:21 AM

Title: Re: Follow a school over a teacher?

Content:

Dharmalight889 said:

I am hoping some here can shine some light on an issue I have been having. As a newer practitioner, I see a lot of debates and disagreements on philosophical views between different schools. For example, I have seen some people say that the Gelug view is incorrect and then provides reasons for it, I have seen some say the Jonang view is incorrect and provide reasons for it, and so on. As someone new to Tibetan Buddhism, it is hard to tell what someone should follow. If one enjoys a teacher from a certain lineage, but others who are more educated say that school has wrong views what should be done?? Having some trouble with this so hoping others can help

Malcolm wrote:

If you are a Vajrayāna practitioner, such academic questions are somewhat irrelevant. In Vajrayāna, the view is experiential and based on empowerment, rather than intellectual analysis.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 12:43 AM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

I do not believe it is a mistake...to incorporate certain New Age Teachings into a Buddhist's life...

Malcolm wrote:

This is called, "corrupting the Dharma."

Könchok Chödrak said:

Well please continue to keep the Dharma Pure, as Mappo is progressing. We should all work on that and help each other do that.

Malcolm wrote:

"Though blinded by ignorance, even the tīrthikas possess some slight truths, resembling letters carved by worms, but one should place no confidence in them."
-- Maitreya, Mahāyānottaratantra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 1:16 AM

Title: Re: Awareness and mind

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Well... if everything is mind, everything we experience is mind.

(cittamatra)

Volan said:

That is taking reflections in the mirror for the mirror itself.

SilenceMonkey said:

Both are mind.

Malcolm wrote:

A mirror cannot reflect itself, just as a sword cannot cut itself.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 1:29 AM

Title: Re: Awareness and mind

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Both are mind.

Malcolm wrote:

A mirror cannot reflect itself, just as a sword cannot cut itself.

SilenceMonkey said:

According to Cittamatra, all that we perceive and experience is a reflection of what is stored in the Alaya consciousness.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and there are myriad problems with that understanding, which is why cittamatra is below madhyamaka.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 1:43 AM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

tkp67 said:

There is an intrinsic self in the phenomenon of human development and the impetus used to facilitate it.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no intrinsic self in the phenomenon of human development, or any other phenomena.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 1:44 AM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

tkp67 said:

Both the negative and positive aspects of the human condition are expressed in the various gradients on the developmental spectrum.

Malcolm wrote:

You are a master of the obvious.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 1:46 AM

Title: Re: Awareness and mind

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

According to Cittamatra, all that we perceive and experience is a reflection of what is stored in the Alaya consciousness.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and there are myriad problems with that understanding, which is why cittamatra is below madhyamaka.

SilenceMonkey said:

Haha, fair. It's debatable but fair enough. I don't understand enough to get into that debate at the moment.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, you could try reading Asanga's Mahāyānasamgraha. Then you can read Candrakīrti's rebuttal in the Madhyamaka-avatāra. Or, you could read any number of texts on tenet systems, such as those by Changkya, Thukten, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 1:49 AM

Title: Re: The Life Span of the Tathagata: Before and after Gaya.

Content:

tkp67 said:

That doesn't mean the experience wasn't genuine for the man named Guatama at the same time.

Malcolm wrote:

The Buddha's twelve deeds are like an illusionist's trick which shows a battle between two armies. Though it seems like people are suffering and being killed, in reality no one suffers or is killed. The Buddha's twelve deeds are exactly like that. You think you see the lady sawed in half, but there isn't even a lady, let alone a saw, etc. It's all just a show.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 2:21 AM

Title: Re: The Life Span of the Tathagata: Before and after Gaya.

Content:

tkp67 said:

That doesn't mean the experience wasn't genuine for the man named Guatama at the same time.

Malcolm wrote:

The Buddha's twelve deeds are like an illusionist's trick which shows a battle between two armies. Though it seems like people are suffering and being killed, in reality no one suffers or is killed. The Buddha's twelve deeds are exactly like that. You think you see the lady sawed in half, but there isn't even a lady, let alone a saw, etc. It's all just a show.

tkp67 said:

This still doesn't discount that in that existence his development in and out the palace up until enlightenment appeared the same.

Malcolm wrote:

As I said, it was just play, like a magic show. The Buddha exhibited his twelve deeds for our benefit, he did not exhibit them for his own benefit.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 2:22 AM

Title: Re: The Life Span of the Tathagata: Before and after Gaya.

Content:

tkp67 said:

Yet the body of the historical buddha was subject to life and death all the same.

Malcolm wrote:

Not really. It was just a show for our benefit.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 2:41 AM

Title: Re: The Life Span of the Tathagata: Before and after Gaya.

Content:

tkp67 said:

Yet the body of the historical buddha was subject to life and death all the same.

Malcolm wrote:

Not really. It was just a show for our benefit.

tkp67 said:

I would like a citation from the writings of Nichiren or the Lotus Sutra please since those the tools of the Nichiren traditions.

Otherwise argumentative ascertains in a tradition you denounce and put no effort in to learn is inappropriate.

Malcolm wrote:

This is already pointed out in the Saddharmapundarika Sūtra, you should read it sometime:

“Noble ones, the world with its devas, humans, and asuras thinks and believes, ‘Bhagavān Śākyamuni departed from his Śākya clan into mendicancy, went to the preeminent, supreme Bodhimaṇḍa, and attained the highest, complete enlightenment of buddhahood by the city of Gayā.’ [F.118.b] However, noble ones, I attained the highest, complete enlightenment of buddhahood many hundreds of thousands of quintillions of eons ago.

And:

“Noble ones, the Tathāgata says to beings with various aspirations, few roots of merit, and many kleśas, ‘Bhikṣus, I am young; I renounced my family and it has not been long, bhikṣus, since I have attained the highest, complete enlightenment of perfect buddhahood.’

And:

“Noble ones, whatever the Tathāgata has to do, that is what the Tathāgata does. The Tathāgata, who has attained perfect buddhahood a long time ago, has an immeasurable lifespan. [F.120.a] He always remains and does not pass into nirvāṇa, but creates the appearance of passing into nirvāṇa in order to benefit his students.

And:

“Noble ones,” he continued, “in the same way, although I attained the highest, complete enlightenment of perfect buddhahood countless, innumerable hundreds of thousands of quintillions of eons ago, I sometimes teach as a skillful method such as this in order to guide beings. In this matter, I am not in any way a liar.”

<https://read.84000.co/translation/toh113.html>

If you assert the Buddha experiences the sufferings and torments of ordinary sentient beings, you contradict your own basic sūtra.

The twelve deeds are only for show. The future buddha, Maitreya, makes the same point of the Mahāyānottaratantra, citing the Lotus Sūtra to this effect.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 2:43 AM

Title: Re: Awareness and mind

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

I find the cittamatra approach much more accessible than madhyamaka. That's what I've been taught, anyway. That it is easier to understand Cittamatra experientially than it is to understand Madhyamaka, which is more subtle.

Malcolm wrote:

You've been mislead. Yogacāra is much more complicated than Madhyamaka. Longchenpa also places Yogacāra below Madhyamaka, like later tenet systems presentations in Thuken, Changkya, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 7:42 AM

Title: Re: The Life Span of the Tathagata: Before and after Gaya.

Content:

tkp67 said:

None of that indicates whether he fell out of the womb fully aware of his own buddhahood and pretending to strive for enlightenment as a show entirely for others.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, actually it does.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 7:30 PM

Title: Re: Yangti Nagpo Question

Content:

KonchogUrgyenNyima said:

Hello,

My question is about the YN ngondro. It must have it's own ngondro correct? What is this called?

Malcolm wrote:

Dungso Repa's original transmission was only a zhitro empowerment and practice along with the 7 week instruction. A large amount of ancillary material was added in the 19th century.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 7:38 PM

Title: Re: The Life Span of the Tathagata: Before and after Gaya.

Content:

Minobu said:

I was more concerned with this totally Nihilistic comment that screams indifference.

No buddhist teaching teaches this.

this is where one goes wrong.

Though it seems like people are suffering and being killed, in reality no one suffers or is killed

Malcolm wrote:

Context, Minobu. In an illusory battle, like Mortal Kombat, it seems people are being killed, but no one is; likewise, it seems that Siddhartha was conceived, led a sheltered palace life, attained full awakening under a tree, etc., but in reality it was all a drama, a play, a show, a movie for those to be tamed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 8:43 PM

Title: Re: Yangti Nagpo Question

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

... was only ...

mutsuk said:

Obviously not.

Malcolm wrote:

If you say so...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 9:09 PM

Title: Re: The Life Span of the Tathagata: Before and after Gaya.

Content:

Minobu said:

I was more concerned with this totally Nihilistic comment that screams indifference.

No buddhist teaching teaches this.

this is where one goes wrong.

Malcolm wrote:

Context, Minobu. In an illusory battle, like Mortal Kombat, it seems people are being killed, but no one is; likewise, it seems that Siddhartha was conceived, led a sheltered palace life, attained full awakening under a tree, etc., but in reality it was all a drama, a play, a show, a movie for those to be tamed.

tkp67 said:

That is a provisional perspective.

Malcolm wrote:

If you want to believe the Buddha was born an ordinary person, and so on, as they do in Theravada, that's fine with me, but that is not the Mahayana narrative.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 9:13 PM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

tkp67 said:

So rightly Nichiren sought to fulfill Shakyamuni's request to open the door of buddhism to all beings.

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhism was already open to all beings. Nichiren, whatever his virtues may have been, certainly was not the sole purveyor of Buddhism, in his age or in any other age. This digression is off topic for the thread.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 10:33 PM

Title: Re: Yangti Nagpo Question

Content:

mutsuk said:

Obviously not.

Malcolm wrote:

If you say so...

mutsuk said:

Depending on the editions (and not taking into account later additions), it has a root-tantra, a history (lo-rgyus), a karchag, some ngöndros, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

Ok, I agree. The issue is the all the deity yoga practices and so on, these were the later additions to which i was referring.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 10:37 PM

Title: Re: The Life Span of the Tathagata: Before and after Gaya.

Content:

Minobu said:

If one believes that Nichiren is The Eternal Buddha of course they are not able to understand what you are exposing to tkp.

By the way I owe you. Thanks. It was you who basically said the primordial or Eternal Buddha is Dharmakaya.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, fundamentally, there are countless buddhas in countless universes, but there is only one dharmakāya, which is to say, only one realization in which all buddhas partake.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 11:06 PM

Title: Re: Traditional title for a novice nun?

Content:

Tilopa said:

Not 'Ani' as many western nuns think it's a disrespectful term. Ask what her ordination name is and use that but if you insist on being more formal add Venerable...as in Venerable Pema... or whatever her new name is.

Cinnabar said:

Exactly. Every monk is a "venerable"— and so should every nun.

heart said:

So please, just do that then. Who knows, you might start a revolution.

/magnus

Malcolm wrote:

Karma Lekshe Tsomo yelled at me for calling her Ani-la. So there are some western nuns who are not pleased with being called "aunti."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, April 26th, 2021 at 11:08 PM

Title: Re: Buddhism and depression

Content:

Ardha said:

I've heard teachers recommend a therapist and other professionals for such matters, fully accepting that for such issues you should go to them instead of Buddhist teachers. For "lighter" depression it can help, but for serious and deep depression you need a specialist.

Tata1 said:

Depends on your familiarity with practice. But if you have not build up a foundation before you get the depression it seems difficult to deal with it with buddhism alone

Bristollad said:

I disagree. I had been a Buddhist for more than thirty years with a strong foundation and practice - it didn't inoculate me from depression nor was it enough on its own. That's why I agreed with Crazy Wisdom: you have to use as many tools as possible - medication, counselling, walks in nature, "fun" and following the advice of your teachers. Depression is pernicious and can be deadly.

Malcolm wrote:

Most depression is physically-based, "mind tricks" don't help, but as noted, proper exercise, diet, massage, if necessary, counseling, etc., should all be used.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 27th, 2021 at 12:12 AM

Title: Re: Can all people in our world come to enlightenment?

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

In some respects, I think the Theravadins have an advantage here.

Malcolm wrote:

They've defined buddhahood as arhatship. So, only afflictions need to be eradicated. For the most part they have no interest in the bodhisattva path, precisely because (outside of Vajrayāna) it takes too long.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 27th, 2021 at 4:00 AM

Title: Re: The Life Span of the Tathagata: Before and after Gaya.

Content:

Minobu said:

Guess it's hard to admit when you are wrong eh malcolm..

Malcolm wrote:

You are still taking my analogy out of context. To restate it for you, in an illusion, it may appear that people are suffering and being killed, but no one is actually suffering and being killed, likewise, even though it appears that the Buddha takes birth in Lumbini, leaves home, attains awakening, and so on, in reality it is an illusion, the Buddha is not actually taking in birth, leaving home, attaining awakening and so on. Otherwise, the consequence is that the Buddha would have attained liberation twice, once, eons ago, and then again in Bodhgaya.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 27th, 2021 at 4:17 AM

Title: Re: The Life Span of the Tathagata: Before and after Gaya.

Content:

Minobu said:

so there is no suffering so these are not really 4 truths according to you guys

Malcolm wrote:

After the Buddha attained awakening eons ago, for him there was no further suffering, even if he appeared to undergo the bodhisattva path as portrayed in the Jatakas, spent six years of austerity after leaving home, and so on, in reality, this was a show, an illusion, and display, to encourage sentient beings to follow the Dharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 27th, 2021 at 5:13 AM

Title: Re: The Life Span of the Tathagata: Before and after Gaya.

Content:

clyde said:

Do you realize how little sense that makes?

Malcolm wrote:

For you it does not make sense. For millions of Buddhists over the past two millennia, it made perfect sense, and still does.

clyde said:

If the Buddha was awakened eons ago and merely pretended to suffer, and lied when he told of his “Noble Search” (See:

<https://www.accesstoinight.org/tipitaka/mn/mn.026.than.html>), and then pretended to awaken under the Bodhi Tree; how is that supposed to encourage us to follow the Dharma?

Malcolm wrote:

As the Lotus Sūtra states:

“Noble ones,” he continued, “in the same way, although I attained the highest, complete enlightenment of perfect buddhahood countless, innumerable hundreds of thousands of quintillions of eons ago, I sometimes teach as a skillful method such as this in order to guide beings. In this matter, I am not in any way a liar.”

<https://read.84000.co/translation/toh113.html>

The Buddha manifested the twelve deeds in order to encourage the śrāvakas, he manifested the bodhisattva path over three incalculable eons to inspire courageous bodhisattvas, and so on.

clyde said:

For me, that the Buddha was an ordinary human being, subject to the sufferings of common people, and that he sought and found liberation - that is encouraging!

Malcolm wrote:

Perhaps, but this is not the normative Mahāyāna narrative. Even if you follow the śrāvaka narrative, the Bodhisattva was no ordinary human being.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 27th, 2021 at 5:16 AM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

Sādhaka said:

It might be the quote Malcolm mentioned some years ago; about the Buddha saying that anything well-spoken could be considered to be the word of the Buddha.

Malcolm wrote:

It was the opinion of Vasubandhu.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 27th, 2021 at 5:56 AM

Title: Re: The Life Span of the Tathagata: Before and after Gaya.

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Do you realize how little sense that makes?

It's one of the possible perspectives on Sakyamuni's life that has been put forward by some. It's not accepted by many traditions. Feel free to reject or ignore it.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, it was put forward by the Buddha in the Lotus Sutra, which was cited by Maitreya specifically in the Mahāyānottaratantra, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 27th, 2021 at 7:10 PM

Title: Re: The Life Span of the Tathagata: Before and after Gaya.

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

I think to say when the Gautama Siddhartha, before He left His father's kingdom, put His hands under a wheel of a cart to help a peasant remove it from a pothole, and when that cart crushed His fingers (I saw this on a TV show about His Life), that was not a "play", He felt real pain then, and it was a mirror of what Samsara does and the struggles of our pain in it. It is insincere to call the World-Honored One's troubles a play. For example, in the Lotus Sutra the Bodhisattvas ask the World-Honored One if His troubles have been few, whether the beings in delusion are receptive to His Teachings, and how His Life is going. These are not questions regarding a “play” but a real Buddha Life. The Buddha’s Life is real, and although it is coming from a place higher than the Saha world, and isn’t part of the Saha world, we must still respect that He is also a person, that is why even she rejected the idea of being called a God, because that is how He wanted to be seen, He wanted people to see Him as a real person. And it does not seem the Scriptures refer to His life as a “play”, but perhaps removed from Samsara, as He provides the Dharma for those caught in the Saha world, while Himself outside of it, to help them in His Compassion.

Nam Myoho Renge Kyo.

Malcolm wrote:

So, when the Buddha steeped on an Acacia thorn, the Sambhogakaya felt it?

By definition, a Buddha is incapable of experiencing any negative or painful sensations.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 27th, 2021 at 7:14 PM

Title: Re: Yangti Nagpo Question

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

... The issue is the all the deity yoga practices and so on, these were the later additions to which i was referring...

yagmort said:

Malcolm, does it make earlier/original Yangti Nagpo more along the lines with Vima Nyingtig?

another question is it known who and when made the later additions and why?

and yet another question is it transmitted in its original form nowadays at all?

Malcolm wrote:

We do know who supplemented the treasure cycle, though the name escapes me at the moment. I am not privy to motivations of tertons, so I cannot ascertain why. Chogyal Namkhai Norbu used to give the transmission for the essential dark retreat scrolls, which also form part of his Longsal cycle.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 27th, 2021 at 7:17 PM

Title: Re: Traditional title for a novice nun?

Content:

Giovanni said:

I hope that the entry of recent westerners into the Tibetan sangha will not result in a need for status and political activity.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, the Tibetans already jostle for status and manipulate the Dharma for political and financial ends.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 27th, 2021 at 9:00 PM

Title: Re: Traditonal title for a novice nun?

Content:

Giovanni said:

Yes, we see this a lot. Always.

To be more accurate perhaps, I hope that the influx of westerners does not result in introducing status games that the Tibetans hadn't thought of, to do with the politics of identity.

Malcolm wrote:

Identity politics are not the problem, racism and sexism are the problem.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 27th, 2021 at 10:19 PM

Title: Re: Traditonal title for a novice nun?

Content:

Archie2009 said:

And what about the racism of intersectional anti-racism?

Malcolm wrote:

Sorry, that's just not a thing, other than a Tucker Carlson-style misrepresentation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, April 27th, 2021 at 11:28 PM

Title: Re: Traditonal title for a novice nun?

Content:

Archie2009 said:

And what about the racism of intersectional anti-racism?

Malcolm wrote:

Sorry, that's just not a thing, other than a Tucker Carlson-style misrepresentation.

Archie2009 said:

I respect your knowledge of Dharma, but I think you'd have to be as blindly partisan to the 'progressive' left as Tucker is to his side to believe that.

Malcolm wrote:

So, now you have to prove it is a "thing" beyond TC style nitwittery. Because frankly, I don't see how antiracism can be racist.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 28th, 2021 at 12:36 AM

Title: Re: Via positiva, via negativa

Content:

Rick said:

Good article.

Reading it helped me realize I'm forging <however awkwardly> my own middle path between emptiness-groundlessness and groundedness-brahman ... with some Krishnamurti thrown in just to keep me on my toes.

Malcolm wrote:

Nah, you are just lurching from one extreme to the other: being, nonbeing, being, nonbeing, because you have confused emptiness as an ultimate principle, like brahmin.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 28th, 2021 at 12:55 AM

Title: Re: The Life Span of the Tathagata: Before and after Gaya.

Content:

neander said:

I have a quick OT question then will not hijack the tread after the reply: Does all Mahayana including Zen considers Buddha this cosmic Extraordinary Buddha? thx

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. You could say that it is baked in.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 28th, 2021 at 1:18 AM

Title: Re: One Path Or Two?

Content:

Giovanni said:

What do you think?

Malcolm wrote:

It is a very limited point of view. We all only practice one path, no matter if we move from this tradition to that tradition, etc. It's all Dharma, it's all good.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 28th, 2021 at 1:19 AM

Title: Re: One Path Or Two?

Content:

Sādhaka said:

I think it was Longchenpa who said to be like a bee at first,

Malcolm wrote:

This is actually from the 17 tantras.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 28th, 2021 at 1:39 AM

Title: Re: Via positiva, via negativa

Content:

Rick said:

The Lurchy Middle Way ... ?

Actually it's more like a hybrid than a transcendence of extremes. A drawing from different traditions: So many beautiful flowers! It's not a particularly efficient path, assuming the goal is to end suffering. But it seems to be the only path that I could ever take.

I will say that finding the underlying connection between groundedness and groundlessness is a challenge!

Malcolm wrote:

There is no underlying connection...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 28th, 2021 at 2:07 AM

Title: Re: His Holiness says that one can follow a book, not a teacher

Content:

Volan said:

This statement is somewhat revolutionary to the Tibetan Buddhism - traditionally one is supposed to receive oral transmissions and commentaries.

Malcolm wrote:

Not really. Vajrayāna topics yes, sūtrayāna, not so much.

Volan said:

The result of this is that in Tengyur one can find lots of Indian commentaries and Tibetans themselves don't know anything about them - if asked, they will answer that they don't have a transmission, it's not a part of their curriculum...

Malcolm wrote:

Most of the Tengyur has no reading transmission.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 28th, 2021 at 2:39 AM

Title: Re: Anthropic principle

Content:

Aemilius said:

"This being, that is;
from the arising of this, that arises;
this not being, that is not;
from the cessation of this, that ceases." (Bodhi Sutta: The Bodhi Tree)

That equals: If A then B; if not A then not B.

Buddha first expresses a general form of conditionality or causation. Then follows the special case of applying it to becoming and the cessation of becoming, i.e. the 12 nidanas and their cessation.

In Sutras and the Abhidharma there are also six causes (hetu) and four conditions (pratyaya). They overlap and describe the same phenomenon of how things or beings arise and cease.

Charles Darwin showed how species arise dependent on causes and conditions. They also cease and become extinct, like mammoths, dinosaurs, sabretooth tigers etc.. have done.

Malcolm wrote:

The point is liberation from afflictions, not describing the inner workings of a nuclear reactor.

There is no explanation outside of Dharma for liberation via dependent origination:

Dwelling at Savatthi... Then Ven. Kaccayana Gotta approached the Blessed One and, on arrival, having bowed down, sat to one side. As he was sitting there he said to the Blessed One: "Lord, 'Right view, right view,' it is said. To what extent is there right view?"

"By & large, Kaccayana, this world is supported by (takes as its object) a polarity, that of existence & non-existence. But when one sees the origination of the world as it actually is with right discernment, 'non-existence' with reference to the world does not occur to one. When one sees the cessation of the world as it actually is with right discernment, 'existence' with reference to the world does not occur to one.

"By & large, Kaccayana, this world is in bondage to attachments, clingings (sustenances), & biases. But one such as this does not get involved with or cling to these attachments, clingings, fixations of awareness, biases, or obsessions; nor is he resolved on 'my self.' He has no uncertainty or doubt that just stress, when arising, is arising; stress, when passing away, is passing away. In this, his knowledge is independent of others. It's to this extent, Kaccayana, that there is right view.

"'Everything exists': That is one extreme. 'Everything doesn't exist': That is a second extreme. Avoiding these two extremes, the Tathagata teaches the Dhamma via the middle: From ignorance as a requisite condition come fabrications. From fabrications as a requisite condition comes consciousness. From consciousness as a requisite condition comes name-&-form. From name-&-form as a requisite condition come the six sense media. From the six sense media as a requisite condition comes contact. From contact as a requisite condition comes feeling. From feeling as a requisite condition comes craving. From craving as a requisite condition comes clinging/sustenance. From clinging/sustenance as a requisite condition comes becoming. From becoming as a requisite condition comes birth. From birth as a requisite condition, then aging & death, sorrow, lamentation, pain, distress, & despair come into play. Such is the origination of this entire mass of stress & suffering.

"Now from the remainderless fading & cessation of that very ignorance comes the cessation of fabrications. From the cessation of fabrications comes the cessation of consciousness. From the cessation of consciousness comes the cessation of name-&-form. From the cessation of name-&-form comes the cessation of the six sense media. From the cessation of the six sense media comes the cessation of contact. From the cessation of contact comes the cessation of feeling. From the cessation of feeling comes the cessation of craving. From the cessation of craving comes the cessation of clinging/sustenance. From the cessation of clinging/sustenance comes the cessation of becoming. From the cessation of becoming comes the cessation of birth. From the cessation of birth, then aging & death, sorrow, lamentation, pain, distress, & despair all cease. Such is the cessation of this entire mass of stress & suffering."

<https://www.accesstoinsight.org/tipitaka/sn/sn12/sn12.015.than.html>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 28th, 2021 at 2:40 AM

Title: Re: One Path Or Two?

Content:

Giovanni said:

The word I most notice here is practice. Can we practice for example Guru Yoga and Shin during the same period?

This is not to say one is superior. Just what is possible in one day or one week.

Malcolm wrote:

That depends on you, not on a tradition.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 28th, 2021 at 9:04 AM

Title: Re: One Path Or Two?

Content:

LastLegend said:

I was practicing Pure Land...for a little bit. I couldn't focus on recitation for too long. It was a hard practice man. Then I aspired to follow a quick path to enlightenment because I was suffering. Then Chan came along. I now understand recitation in the subtle way. It depends on individual's aspiration that's what leads them. If you follow Tibetan, and you want the quickest path, they have their direct lineages. So yes, you can practice both.

reiun said:

Unless, of course, you have an honest and thorough commitment with one teacher. Then it is one teacher only, one-at-a-time only.

Malcolm wrote:

No, this is an unnecessary limitation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 28th, 2021 at 8:23 PM

Title: Re: One Path Or Two?

Content:

reiun said:

So perhaps it is not uncommon in Tibetan tradition for a student to have several teacher relationships simultaneously? Please say more about that.

Malcolm wrote:

In Tibetan Buddhism, it is very common to have many teachers simultaneously.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 28th, 2021 at 11:21 PM

Title: Re: One Path Or Two?

Content:

reipun said:

But I would nonetheless disagree here. Quantity doesn't guarantee quality.

Malcolm wrote:

Neither does picking only one teacher to work with. It is impossible for an ordinary person to judge the realization or lack thereof, of anyone else, let alone this or that given teacher. Even if one imagines one is picking a teacher who is equal in realization to the Buddha himself, this is only the opinion of an ordinary person and nothing more.

People accept teachers entirely based on rumor, hearsay, fame, accolades, in other words, based on reputation alone. Confirmation bias is a strong factor here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 28th, 2021 at 11:22 PM

Title: Re: Why does Lama Zopa Rinpoche sway?

Content:

Hazel said:

I noticed that Lama Zopa Rinpoche sways as he walks and appears to need help/stabilization at times. Is this related to the stroke he suffered?

Malcolm wrote:

Probably.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, April 28th, 2021 at 11:24 PM

Title: Re: Why does Lama Zopa Rinpoche sway?

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I've observed that some Lamas have hip trouble from sitting so long.

n8pee said:

Glenn Mullin once pointed this out about the late Denma Locho Rinpoche that long-time meditators tend to walk like ducks.

Malcolm wrote:

Tibetans in general tend to waddle.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 29th, 2021 at 12:14 AM

Title: Re: One Path Or Two?

Content:

reiun said:

Well, I fit the "ordinary" classification, but it was certainly crystal clear to me, especially at a certain point, what my teacher's ability was, which was tied to his realization.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no objective standard by which such attributions of realization can be measured. It's all just hearsay. What you just engaged in was hearsay. In other words, you decided, based on criteria you are not sharing, that your teacher was a realized person (which you have not defined). Now, you have shared your opinion and I read that your statement. This is exactly what hearsay is. There is no proof, nor can there be. Thus, all such claims are rumor, etc, as I have mentioned. If I claim, for example, that my guru is a realized person, you have no way to check this and no reason to believe me.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 29th, 2021 at 1:42 AM

Title: Re: One Path Or Two?

Content:

reiun said:

My only argument has been that having one teacher is not a limitation, as you stated.

Malcolm wrote:

You argued:

Unless, of course, you have an honest and thorough commitment with one teacher. Then it is one teacher only, one-at-a-time only.

This is the limitation I mentioned. One can have an honest and thorough commitment with more than one teacher at a time. YMMV. But you stated this as an absolute. It may be the case in your tradition, but you cannot generalize to other traditions, as you have done here, inadvertently or not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 29th, 2021 at 1:51 AM

Title: Re: One Path Or Two?

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

To me a bigger question is whether Tibetan traditions can coexist with East Asian traditions or Theravada.

Malcolm wrote:

I know a lot of people who started in EA or SEA Buddhism, and moved to Tibetan Buddhism. I don't really know that many folks who went the other way. But then I don't spend any time in EA or SEA Buddhist circles, so I would be unlikely to know such folks.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 29th, 2021 at 3:00 AM

Title: Re: One Path Or Two?

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

I'll acknowledge up front that I'm splitting hairs, but: as a Soto Zen practitioner, there's only one person who I would consider "my teacher," and if I came to consider someone else "my teacher," it would mean changing my relationship with my current teacher.

That said, I'll happily attend talks and classes, read texts, etc. from teachers both within and outside of my own tradition, and feel that I've learned a lot from them. And there are teachers, apart from my current teacher, with whom I have a meaningful ongoing relationship. But there's still only one who I'd consider "my teacher." Like I said, it's probably hair splitting.

Malcolm wrote:

I hear you. But it is just not that way in Tibetan Buddhism at all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 29th, 2021 at 4:04 AM

Title: Re: Traditonal title for a novice nun?

Content:

Giovanni said:

If I can quote Situ Rinpoche again.

“ Some monks are Sangha Jewel. Some monks are just... Mr Monk” .

Malcolm wrote:

In Mahāyāna, we do not go for refuge to the śrāvaka sangha, only the ārya bodhisattva sangha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 29th, 2021 at 8:52 AM

Title: Re: The Life Span of the Tathagata: Before and after Gaya.

Content:

Queequeg said:

Fully agree with Malcolm on this point. The LS is very clear about this.

I'll go a step a step further and maybe upset those who insist Shakyamuni was an ordinary being who awoke and that suffering is really real... It's all a play. Your life with all the suffering and joys and everything else is also a play. If you're not a Buddha then that just means this is the part of the play where Shakyamuni was struggling in a past life.

tkp67 said:

A bird is genetically coded for flight before it even leaves the egg. It doesn't attempt flight until the causes, conditions and capacities are met.

Throw that bird out of the nest as an egg and it doesn't fly.

Inherent nature works like this. Causes, conditions and capacities are an inseparable facet of existence. The play is one's expedients. One's expedients are not a matter of mere willful choice.

Malcolm wrote:

There are no inherent natures at all. The idea that there is a bird in an egg, or a tree in a seed, etc., is a specifically nonBuddhist perspective of the Samkhya school.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 29th, 2021 at 8:52 AM

Title: Re: The Life Span of the Tathagata: Before and after Gaya.

Content:

tkp67 said:

That is a provisional perspective.

Malcolm wrote:

If you want to believe the Buddha was born an ordinary person, and so on, as they do in Theravada, that's fine with me, but that is not the Mahayana narrative.

tkp67 said:

Nichiren's buddhism does not deny any one aspect of Shakyamuni's enlightenment but recognizes the total cause and effect end to end. There is a picture on the wiki damma that encapsulates this concept.

In the Lotus Sutra Shakyamuni explains why he taught the way he did and the implications. Nichiren fused this into a single precept practice that propagates the great vehicle. It isn't provisional so one can't expect to describe the vehicle from any specific perspective. The whole of his enlightenment end to end has no bounds or distinctions.

Malcolm wrote:

Empty rhetoric., which does not address my point at all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 29th, 2021 at 9:35 AM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

tkp67 said:

So rightly Nichiren sought to fulfill Shakyamuni's request to open the door of buddhism to all beings.

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhism was already open to all beings. Nichiren, whatever his virtues may have been, certainly was not the sole purveyor of Buddhism, in his age or in any other age. This digression is off topic for the thread.

tkp67 said:

No it isn't but let me explain the tie in.

The OP is considering learning new age rhetoric for the benefit of helping non Buddhists. I often repeat the same message in this case compassion for the lowest common denominator. I often remind that it is a Buddhist mantra. Of course I contextualize to my tradition out of veneration.

The difficulty that many here have with mindsets that are not like their own is palpable. I understand and respect this. I am not Mary Poppins contrary to popular belief. However I am very intimate with the mind and inherent bias. I am not judgemental even though I observe it.

If the OP feels it necessary to learn things outside his wheelhouse and personality then it is necessary to consider how to address bias against new age mentality. IMHO the best way to over come stuff like this is Buddhist practice.

I don't have many typical biases. Sure I am still tethered but I upgraded them to being biased against biases.

As so the wheels turn.

Malcolm wrote:

You sure talk about yourself a lot.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 29th, 2021 at 10:02 AM

Title: Re: Traditonal title for a novice nun?

Content:

Giovanni said:

If I can quote Situ Rinpoche again.

“ Some monks are Sangha Jewel. Some monks are just... Mr Monk” .

Malcolm wrote:

In Mahāyāna, we do not go for refuge to the śrāvaka sangha, only the ārya bodhisattva sangha.

SilenceMonkey said:

Wait a minute, yes we do. We take refuge in the sixteen arhats.

Malcolm wrote:

They are all bodhisattvas in shravaka form.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, April 29th, 2021 at 10:57 PM

Title: Re: The Relationship between Nirvana and Buddhahood: what constitutes a true extinction?

Content:

LastLegend said:

Still talking about extinction...what goes into extinction?

Könchok Chödrak said:

First off, what becomes extinct?

Nam Myoho Renge Kyo.

Malcolm wrote:

Extinction is the wrong word. Nirvana means to go out. What goes out? The fire of suffering. Why? Its fuel, affliction, is no longer available. Pretty straightforward.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 12:15 AM

Title: Re: The Relationship between Nirvana and Buddhahood: what constitutes a true extinction?

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

I don't think it's the wrong word.

Malcolm wrote:

Ok, I defer to your superior knowledge and mastery of primary Buddhist languages and tenet systems.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 1:49 AM

Title: Re: The Relationship between Nirvana and Buddhahood: what constitutes a true extinction?

Content:

reiun said:

Extinction is synonymous with extinguishing.

<https://thesaurus.yourdictionary.com/extinguishing>

Könchok Chödrak said:

Yes that makes full sense. Annihilation is also a word I see used quite often.

Malcolm wrote:

Nirvana is a cessation, an absence of a cause for further arising. It is not an annihilation, an extinction, nor an extinguishing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 1:58 AM

Title: Re: The Relationship between Nirvana and Buddhahood: what constitutes a true extinction?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Nirvana is a cessation, an absence of a cause for further arising. It is not an annihilation, an extinction, nor an extinguishing....

....in Mahayana.

Malcolm wrote:

In all schools.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 2:00 AM

Title: Re: Insects Rebirth

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

The traveling between the end of a lifespan and a new life generates an innocence that gives one a great capacity to become a Buddha anew,

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhahood only occurs once. No one becomes a buddha anew. Once a buddha, always a buddha. There is no repetition of buddhahood.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 2:29 AM

Title: Re: The Relationship between Nirvana and Buddhahood: what constitutes a true extinction?

Content:

reiun said:

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Nirvana_%28Buddhism%29

Malcolm wrote:

I guess I trust Abhidharma and Sūtra more than Wiki, where nirvana is described as a cessation, nirodha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 3:25 AM

Title: Re: The Relationship between Nirvana and Buddhahood: what constitutes a true extinction?

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

Well technically, annihilation or total extinguishing of the kleshas is accurate.

Malcolm wrote:

Technically, it is not. For āryas, afflictions no longer cause action, and so suffering ceases. In general, in Abhidharma, where we find the most detailed description of afflictions and so, they are abandoned, exhausted, etc, not annihilated or extinguished.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 3:36 AM

Title: Re: The Relationship between Nirvana and Buddhahood: what constitutes a true extinction?

Content:

reiun said:

I'm sure sources like these, which seem to be somewhat wider spread than thought, will soon get the corrections in the mail.

Personally, I am grateful for the chance to explore different viewpoints on topics like these, which, I must admit, I have not studied, and only have had a passing academic interest in, which doesn't amount to much. For me,

Malcolm wrote:

Many of the terminological equivalents of Buddhist terms in use today were made by people who were not practitioners, who were philologist and linguists, who made their translations with old, nonspecialist dictionaries. Even dictionaries like Edgerton's Buddhist Hybrid Sanskrit dictionary have many errors of understanding, it was after all first published in 1953.

I understand this poses problems for people who do not have at their disposal a primary Buddhist language with which to investigate these issues, but as a practitioner-translator who is fluent in Tibetan and acquainted with Sanskrit, I can assure you that the greater percentage of the translations of Buddhist texts made prior to 1990, whether out of Pali, Sanskrit, Chinese, Japanese, or Tibetan, made largely by people with no skin in the game other than an academic position, are riddled with errors practitioners would not make, like translating kṣaya as "destruction" rather than "exhaustion." Another example of a bogus translation is rendering dharmakāya as "Law Body" usually seen in East Asian translations prior to a certain period of time. But like New Age ideas, many bad translations of Buddhist terms never die, and get recycled again and again by people who, lacking education and expertise, cannot discern that they are erroneous.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 3:40 AM

Title: Re: Insects Rebirth

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Whatever provisional or Upayic Enlightenments Buddhas come to in any of their lives after full Enlightenment are for the benefit of sentient beings to come to Buddhahood themselves.

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhas don't come to provisional awakening after buddhahood. Buddhas are buddhas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 4:27 AM

Title: Re: The Relationship between Nirvana and Buddhahood: what constitutes a true extinction?

Content:

reipun said:

The fact that mistranslations are reported to be so widespread is a on what many unwittingly believe or have been taught. If a student is mainly academic-oriented, this is a major problem of which he or she may be unaware. How to figure where to put trust?

Malcolm wrote:

One needs to rely on newer translations, if one is not inclined to learn languages.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 4:28 AM

Title: Re: The Relationship between Nirvana and Buddhahood: what constitutes a true extinction?

Content:

reipun said:

Don't worry Malcolm, we can deal with delusions. After all, we are Buddhists!

(I guess, with an orientation and commitment to practice, I was lucky to sidestep this academic quagmire . . .)

Malcolm wrote:

I am not an academic; but for example, relying on deficient translations, the Dharma becomes like the telephone game...and you know how that always ends.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 4:30 AM

Title: Re: Insects Rebirth

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

I assume these ants on the anthills, for so long, have some Buddhas among them.

Malcolm wrote:

Maybe, but one still has to attain a precious human birth with the eighteen freedoms and endowments in order to attain buddhahood.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 4:34 AM

Title: Re: Abhidharma

Content:

reiun said:

References to recommended translations or accurate academic papers, etc., of or concerning The Abhidharmakośakārikā or Verses on the Treasury of Abhidharma, by Vasubandhu, would be appreciated, if such exist.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 5:04 AM

Title: Re: Abhidharma

Content:

reiun said:

*Kindle, bc 4 vol set $1002

Malcolm wrote:

$80

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 5:36 AM

Title: Re: The Relationship between Nirvana and Buddhahood: what constitutes a true extinction?

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

....in Mahayana.

Malcolm wrote:

In all schools.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:
Sautantrikas?

Malcolm wrote:
Yes.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 8:20 AM
Title: Re: The Relationship between Nirvana and Buddhahood: what constitutes a true extinction?
Content:

Malcolm wrote:
Yes.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:
From 2/8/2020:

<https://www.dharmawheel.net/viewtopic.php?f=50&t=32880&start=80>

Malcolm wrote:
Mahayanis agree with Sauntantra that cessations are pure absence of causes. They disagree with the consequence of such a cessation, and criticize the Sautranta school for asserting cessation to be nonexistence.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 9:01 AM
Title: Re: Human birth
Content:

PrideTheStudent said:
Why, is it that humans birth are the only capable being of reaching enlightenment. When the deities are already enlightened, have spiritual powers which make it easier to cultivate, and gain powers humans have no powers at all and are born suffering

Malcolm wrote:
Humans have right amount of pleasure and pain to make awakening a viable option.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 9:44 AM
Title: Re: The Relationship between Nirvana and Buddhahood: what constitutes a true extinction?

Content:

reipun said:

In fact, an academic, insofar as holding a degree in his field, and having published.
What to make of this

Malcolm wrote:

No, I am not an academic. I have a nonwestern, traditional education, not an academic education in a Western University, other than a couple of years of random courses at an extension school, into which I never matriculated for a degree,

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 10:42 AM

Title: Re: The Relationship between Nirvana and Buddhahood: what constitutes a true extinction?

Content:

reipun said:

Good to know that nonwestern=non-scholarly.

Malcolm wrote:

That's not what I said, despite whatever conclusion you may have drawn. The point is that the term this thread is predicated upon is mistranslated when it is rendered "extinction."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 7:38 PM

Title: Re: Difficult passages

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

The purpose of Buddhism isn't to become a Buddhist.

Malcolm wrote:

But it's a good start.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 7:47 PM

Title: Re: The Relationship between Nirvana and Buddhahood: what constitutes a true extinction?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

One needs to rely on newer translations, if one is not inclined to learn languages.

reipun said:

Well, certainly, you must be very proud of your linguistic accomplishments. I'm not sure if you understand, though, how such advice comes off.

Malcolm wrote:

The beings of the six realms all see water differently, some as nectar, some as boiling metal.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 10:14 PM

Title: Re: Ryogen's thought on plants and their acquired Buddhahood

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Are plants simply part of the "supporting framework" of reality..

Malcolm wrote:

According to the Buddha, part of the container, not the contents.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 10:36 PM

Title: Re: Abhidharma

Content:

reiun said:

Note: first edition, 2012

Malcolm wrote:

Correct. Generally speaking, people find this translation of Vallée Pouissin easier to digest than Pruden's. But neither are wholly translated out of French. They both make use of the Sanskrit manuscript as well as the Chinese and Tibetan.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 10:59 PM

Title: Re: Faith & Reason

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

The Zen master, Bodhidharma, stated that there are two doors to Buddhist practice: faith and reason (I only mention this to introduce this topic).

Malcolm wrote:

There are dharma followers (dharmānusārin) and faith followers (śraddhānusārin). In Mahāyāna, we mostly begin as the first, and gradually become the second.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, April 30th, 2021 at 11:27 PM

Title: Re: Ryogen's thought on plants and their acquired Buddhahood

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

All this may seem like slim evidence to many, and indeed the arguments raged for centuries.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no evidence to suggest that Indian Buddhists ever even entertained the idea that plants were sentient beings (sattva). The idea that plants might be sentient seems to be a strictly EA Buddhist concern. In Tibetan Buddhism it merits no discussion whatsoever.

This does not mean the discussion is invalid, but the argument for plant sentience cannot be successfully made on the basis of śūtra or tantra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 1st, 2021 at 1:02 AM

Title: Re: Faith & Reason

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

The Zen master, Bodhidharma, stated that there are two doors to Buddhist practice: faith and reason (I only mention this to introduce this topic).

Malcolm wrote:

There are dharma followers (dharmānusārin) and faith followers (śraddhānusārin). In Mahāyāna, we mostly begin as the first, and gradually become the second.

FiveSkandhas said:

Interesting. Out of curiosity could you give me a source? I'm guessing it's one of the famous Abhidharma texts I should have read but never did.

I seem to recall seeing a longish list of different "[prefix-]nusārin" somewhere once, but I have no idea if that has any bearing on the topic whatsoever.

Malcolm wrote:

There is a discussion of these two types of practitioners in Abhidharma, but in a Mahāyāna context, pretty much everyone who generates bodhicitta on the path of accumulation begins as a faith follower.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 1st, 2021 at 1:06 AM

Title: Re: Ryogen's thought on plants and their acquired Buddhahood

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

In Tibetan Buddhism it merits no discussion whatsoever.

FiveSkandhas said:

That's why I put it in the Tendai forum.

I couldn't find a single specific Indian-language text cited as direct evidence.

Malcolm wrote:

There is discussion of this issue in Indian sources, Schmithausen discusses it here:

https://ia802904.us.archive.org/31/items/earlyproblemofsentienceofplantsinearliestbuddhism/lambertschmithausenseebuddhismandnature_130_/Early%2C%20Problem%20of%20Sentience%20of%20Plants%20in%20Earliest%20Buddhism%20Lambert%20Schmithausen%20%28See%20Buddhism%20and%20Nature%29.pdf

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 1st, 2021 at 1:20 AM

Title: Re: Dennis Hirota on Shinjin

Content:

steveb1 said:

Even Shakyamuni Buddha, after years of exhaustive self-effort, said that enlightenment came upon him only after He relaxed and gave up his self-effort.

Malcolm wrote:

Where?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 1st, 2021 at 2:22 AM

Title: Re: The Relationship between Nirvana and Buddhahood: what constitutes a true extinction?

Content:

PeterC said:

Many things from the 60s aren't quite the same without the drugs

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 1st, 2021 at 3:33 AM

Title: Re: Dennis Hirota on Shinjin

Content:

steveb1 said:

Even Shakyamuni Buddha, after years of exhaustive self-effort, said that enlightenment came upon him only after He relaxed and gave up his self-effort.

Malcolm wrote:

Where?

steveb1 said:

When speaking of the third watch of the night of His enlightenment, He indicates His release from "fermentations" and relief from stress, which new condition He counts as enlightened knowledge -

[With my mind] attained to imperturbability, I directed it to the knowledge of the ending of the mental fermentations. I discerned, as it had come to be, that 'This is stress... This is the origination of stress... This is the cessation of stress... This is the way leading to the cessation of stress... These are fermentations... This is the origination of fermentations... This is the cessation of fermentations... This is the way leading to the cessation of fermentations.' My heart, thus knowing, thus seeing, was released from the fermentation of sensuality, released from the fermentation of becoming, released from the fermentation of ignorance. With release, there was the knowledge, 'Released.' I discerned that 'Birth is ended, the holy life fulfilled, the task done. There is nothing further for this world.'

<https://www.accesstinsight.org/ptf/buddha.html#awakening>

Blessed release; blessed relief. No more attachment to the struggle(s) of becoming. No more bubbling, seething inner fermentation. There is nothing further for this world.

Malcolm wrote:

That's a stretch to go from mokṣa, release, usually rendered "liberation," to "giving up personal effort" on the path.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 1st, 2021 at 5:32 AM

Title: Re: Dennis Hirota on Shinjin

Content:

steveb1 said:

When speaking of the third watch of the night of His enlightenment, He indicates His release from "fermentations" and relief from stress, which new condition He counts as enlightened knowledge -

[With my mind] attained to imperturbability, I directed it to the knowledge of the ending of the mental fermentations. I discerned, as it had come to be, that 'This is stress... This is the origination of stress... This is the cessation of stress... This is the way leading to the cessation of stress... These are fermentations... This is the origination of fermentations... This is the cessation of fermentations... This is the way leading to the cessation of fermentations.' My heart, thus knowing, thus seeing, was released from the fermentation of sensuality, released from the fermentation of becoming, released from the fermentation of ignorance. With release, there was the knowledge, 'Released.' I discerned that 'Birth is ended, the holy life fulfilled, the task done. There is nothing further for this world.'

<https://www.accesstoinight.org/ptf/buddha.html#awakening>

Blessed release; blessed relief. No more attachment to the struggle(s) of becoming. No more bubbling, seething inner fermentation. There is nothing further for this world.

Malcolm wrote:

That's a stretch to go from mokṣa, release, usually rendered "liberation," to "giving up personal effort" on the path.

steveb1 said:

Okay - thanks for your input. It may, as you said, be a stretch, I don't know, but it seems to me that letting go of all those "fermentations" has to imply stopping struggling with some of the major causes of samsaric suffering. Maybe the Buddha, in the moment of enlightenment, simply realized that he himself had reached the point of "no-struggle" - as part and parcel of liberation. That is, once enlightened, the struggle for attaining it ceases forever. But for the unenlightened, even His own disciples, He said to practice "diligently" unless and until they also reached enlightenment.

A related question, if you don't mind - when the Buddha(s) went into meditative states post-enlightenment, was it for the pure joy of the experience...? Obviously, they would no longer need to be struggling to attain a state which they had already reached.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, the Buddha placed himself in the eight dhyanas, and abandoned his traces for birth in those states by recognizing the four noble truths in relation to each of them through his own insight, if you are going to go by the Pali canon accounts of his buddhahood.

Mahayana accounts of his Buddhahood are varied.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 1st, 2021 at 5:38 AM

Title: Re: Dennis Hirota on Shinjin

Content:

steveb1 said:

When speaking of the third watch of the night of His enlightenment, He indicates His release from "fermentations" and relief from stress, which new condition He counts as enlightened knowledge -

[With my mind] attained to imperturbability, I directed it to the knowledge of the ending of the mental fermentations. I discerned, as it had come to be, that 'This is stress... This is the origination of stress... This is the cessation of stress... This is the way leading to the cessation of stress... These are fermentations... This is the origination of fermentations... This is the cessation of fermentations... This is the way leading to the cessation of fermentations.' My heart, thus knowing, thus seeing, was released from the fermentation of sensuality, released from the fermentation of becoming, released from the fermentation of ignorance. With release, there was the knowledge, 'Released.' I discerned that 'Birth is ended, the holy life fulfilled, the task done. There is nothing further for this world.'

<https://www.accesstoinight.org/ptf/buddha.html#awakening>

Blessed release; blessed relief. No more attachment to the struggle(s) of becoming. No more bubbling, seething inner fermentation. There is nothing further for this world.

Malcolm wrote:

That's a stretch to go from mokṣa, release, usually rendered "liberation," to "giving up personal effort" on the path.

steveb1 said:

Okay - thanks for your input. It may, as you said, be a stretch, I don't know, but it seems to me that letting go of all those "fermentations" has to imply stopping struggling with some of the major causes of samsaric suffering. Maybe the Buddha, in the moment of enlightenment, simply realized that he himself had reached the point of "no-struggle" - as part and parcel of liberation. That is, once enlightened, the struggle for attaining it ceases forever. But for the unenlightened, even His own disciples, He said to practice "diligently" unless and until they also reached enlightenment.

A related question, if you don't mind - when the Buddha(s) went into meditative states post-enlightenment, was it for the pure joy of the experience...? Obviously, they would no longer need to be struggling to attain a state which they had already reached.

Malcolm wrote:

The term "fermentation" is also translated "canker" or "outflow". It refers to having an afflicted relationship with phenomena. Through understanding the four noble truths, the Buddha abandoned his afflicted relationship to the three realms.

Buddha enjoyed shamatha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 1st, 2021 at 10:10 AM

Title: Re: Dennis Hirota on Shinjin

Content:

taleen said:

Not eight. Just 4 as per mn36.

Formless are not jhana in the sutta.

Malcolm wrote:

Accounts vary about this in the shravakayana.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 1st, 2021 at 8:20 PM

Title: Re: Dennis Hirota on Shinjin

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Amitābha's Dharma Body...

Malcolm wrote:

Otherwise known as Samantabhadra. The dharmakāya of all buddhas is the same. The name does not matter much.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 1st, 2021 at 9:45 PM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

PeterC said:

So few shows actually know when to stop.

Malcolm wrote:

They are getting better, actually. Limited series are quite frequent now.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 1st, 2021 at 10:32 PM

Title: Re: Living buddhist tradition/school that focuses on the Mahaparinirvana sutra?

Content:

Aemilius said:

I think that Dr Tony Page constitutes a Nirvana sutra based school of Buddhism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 1st, 2021 at 11:24 PM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

Shotenzenjin said:

If memory serves the final episode of lost revealed to they we're all ready dead.
Everyone on the island was dead.

Malcolm wrote:

Right, a very shitty bardo experience.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 1st, 2021 at 11:48 PM

Title: Re: Thangka Retinue Identification?

Content:

Tenma said:

<https://spectator.com.au/2020/10/sex-and-corpses/>

Does anyone know who the protector at the bottom left is? I cannot find any information about this figure.

Malcolm wrote:

Possibly the secret form of he who is not be named, since it is a gelug thangka.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 2nd, 2021 at 2:10 AM

Title: Re: The Relationship between Nirvana and Buddhahood: what constitutes a true extinction?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

The unanswered questions (Skt. avyākṛta-vastu; P. avyākata-vastu; T. lung du ma bstan pa), or indeterminate questions, refer to a set of metaphysical questions that Buddha refused to answer. These questions are referred to as avyākṛta (P. avyākata), meaning "indeterminate", "unacertainable", "unanswered", etc.

https://encyclopediaofbuddhism.org/wiki/The_unanswered_questions

There appear to be various lists of them. Among one such list are the following:

A Realized One exists after death?

A Realized One doesn't exist after death?

A Realized One both exists and doesn't exist after death?

A Realized One neither exists nor doesn't exist after death?

So if we grant this authority, it seems like exactly what goes on in Nirvana/Paranirvana is none of our business.

Malcolm wrote:

Actually, when something has ceased, attributions of existence or nonexistence to that are inappropriate, since as the Buddha points out:

One who has reached the end has no criterion

by which anyone would say that — for him it doesn't exist.

When all phenomena are done away with, all means of speaking are done away with as well.

<https://www.accesstoinsight.org/tipitaka/kn/snp/snp.5.06.than.html>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 2nd, 2021 at 2:16 AM

Title: Re: Kakushi Nenbutsu: Forbidden underground heterodox Pure Land

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

It was this the Jodo Shinshu authorities saw as the decisive seal of heresy -- for of course, the Kakushi was not relying on Amida-sama for shinjin, but rather relying on his own head-banging self-effort and reliance in the Zen-Chishiki, hardly a worthy substitute for reliance in Amida Buddha.

Malcolm wrote:

It is always in the interest of an inquisition to misrepresent the beliefs of those judged heretics.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 2nd, 2021 at 9:49 AM

Title: Re: Thangka Retinue Identification?

Content:

Bristollad said:

I believe Malcolm is correct, Himalayan Art Resources has a page featuring that very thangka see

<https://www.himalayanart.org/items/35652>

zerwe said:

Probably splitting hairs, but date should be more like 1900-

Shaun

Malcolm wrote:

Actually, 1940-

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 2nd, 2021 at 10:02 AM

Title: Re: Faith & Reason

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

YOW! That is some ka-ray-zee shit right there.

Nemo said:

Faith can be scary. Trying to understand reality must include skepticism or you can get into trouble.

Malcolm wrote:

Reason can also be skewed, just as easily as faith, actually.

What is required is right view.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 2nd, 2021 at 8:08 PM

Title: Re: Faith & Reason

Content:

Nemo said:

Faith can be scary. Trying to understand reality must include skepticism or you can get into trouble.

Malcolm wrote:

Reason can also be skewed, just as easily as faith, actually.

What is required is right view.

Nemo said:

So both are of dubious reliability without spiritual grace over which you have no control.

Malcolm wrote:

No grace needed, just good karma to connect with a right path as opposed to a wrong path.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 2nd, 2021 at 9:37 PM

Title: Re: Titus Lucretius Carus: Of the Nature of Things

Content:

Aemilius said:

Titus Lucretius Carus (c. 99 – c. 55 BC) was a Roman poet and philosopher. His only known work is the philosophical poem De rerum natura, a didactic work about the tenets and philosophy of Epicureanism, and which usually is translated into English as On the Nature of Things.

Lucretius Carus seems to be describing how on the other side of the Earth there are beings, who must be living upside down and who experience night when we experience the day:

"The ponderous bodies which be under earth
Do all press upwards and do come to rest
Upon the earth, in some way upside down,
Like to those images of things we see
At present through the waters. They contend,
With like procedure, that all breathing things
Head downward roam about, and yet cannot Tumble from earth to realms of sky below,
No more than these our bodies wing away
Spontaneously to vaults of sky above;
That, when those creatures look upon the sun,
We view the constellations of the night;
And that with us the seasons of the sky
They thus alternately divide, and thus
Do pass the night coequal to our days,"

This is only a short passage of a long poem, in its chapter the Infinity of the Universe

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, a famous atheist. Very influential on the founders of the US, an exponent of Epicurus' hedonism. One of my favorite classical pieces.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 3rd, 2021 at 1:43 AM

Title: Re: H.H. Vs. H.E.

Content:

KonchogUrgyenNyima said:

Hey all,

Didn't know where to post this, so i posted here because i practice nyingma.

I'm just wondering if there's any rhyme or reason for the different honorifics in tibetan buddhism? What qualifies a lama as H.H. Rather than H.E.? Are there any hard and fast rules about it?

Malcolm wrote:

It comes from the time when in trying to figure out how to address HHDL, the UN borrowed the titles used for catholics, HH for the pope, HE for cardinals and so on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 3rd, 2021 at 1:57 AM

Title: Re: Faith & Reason

Content:

Queequeg said:

In the commentary on the Prajnaparamita Sutra attributed to Nagarjuna, he states the gateway to Buddhahood is faith.

When we start out, categorically, we lack the knowledge of a Buddha and yet we proceed on the assurance that the path leads to Buddhahood. I don't know how anyone gets around the linchpin of faith there.

Canki Sutta lays out what I consider one of the best explanations of how to practice faith.

Analysis and reason is frontal cortex stuff. As I see it, derivative of faith, even when the logician insists there is none.

two cents.

Malcolm wrote:

One important thing to understand that is that śraddha is defined as a mental factor that brings clarity to the mind. It is not like "faith" in the western, Christian sense.

However, the word ultimately descends from *bheidh-, the proto-Indo-European root meaning "to trust, confide, persuade."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 3rd, 2021 at 2:27 AM

Title: Re: Ryogen's thought on plants and their acquired Buddhahood

Content:

cjdevries said:

I live with a really skilled professional gardener/garden designer and she will say that "the plants talk to me", "they tell me when they need more water" etc. Different plants have different personalities. Others who I have talked to who are really into caring for plants have said that it is clear that plants have their own spirits and energy.

Malcolm wrote:

The idea that spirits such as yakṣas etc, inhabit trees, etc., is found in Buddhism. The idea that plants themselves are sentient is not found in Buddhism, apart from some East Asian divergences from the standard POV.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 3rd, 2021 at 2:43 AM

Title: Re: Devas - What are their roles?

Content:

Padmist said:

Are we merely to recognize that they are real and they can exist?

We are not to worship/revere them? Can we pray or talk to them?

What can they do? Can they talk to us or do something for us if asked?

Malcolm wrote:

Depends on which type of devas. Some devas are hostile to Dharma, some are not. But they are all worldly beings and not objects of refuge.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 4th, 2021 at 10:54 PM

Title: Re: Monk rules...

Content:

tellyontellyon said:

Hi,

What is the entire list of rules/precepts that a Tibetan monk takes?

Thank you.

Malcolm wrote:

Look in Buddhist Ethics by Kongtrul. They are all listed there.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 4th, 2021 at 11:06 PM

Title: Re: Monk rules...

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Though I am sure the vinaya is well meant, and no offense to it, I seem to want to know what this specific line means.

PeterC said:

Why? Are you planning on ordaining?

Könchok Chödrak said:

I have seriously been considering doing it in the future for at least some amount of time. I would Love to ordain in the Tibetan tradition, either in the Vajrayana...

Malcolm wrote:

One cannot ordain in the Vajrayāna. Pratimokṣa vows belong to śrāvakayāna.

Könchok Chödrak said:

or another Tibetan tradition, such as under the Karmapa or the Dalai Lama's school. I have wanted to be a monk since I was 16, I'm in my 30's now, and it's really a primary determination of mine, so I know in some life I will do it. May as well be this one.

Malcolm wrote:

All Tibetan tradition are Vajrayāna.

Unless you are independently wealthy, do not become a monk. No one will support you.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 5th, 2021 at 12:28 AM

Title: Re: H.H. Vs. H.E.

Content:

KonchogUrgyenNyima said:

Is it safe to say that official heads of a lineage/sect might have the H.H. title and lineage holders who are not the official head might have H.E.?

Malcolm wrote:

Seems like every tertön gets HH. In Sakya, lineage holders like Sakya Trizin get HH; everyone else, HE.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 5th, 2021 at 2:56 AM

Title: Re: sleep in full lotus;is this advice reliable?(city of 10 000 buddhas)

Content:

SonamTashi said:

City of 10,000 Buddhas was established by https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Hsuan_Hua It is associated with the

At least in the Tibetan traditions, it is common for practitioners to sleep in a sitting position while they're on retreat.

Malcolm wrote:

With their knees up, and this is not universal.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 5th, 2021 at 8:50 PM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

tkp67 said:

I do not consider anything that is generated by the sapient mind to be bs but rather relative to cause, condition and capacity.

Malcolm wrote:

So you are saying as long as there is a cause, condition, and a capacity, there is no bullshit? That's pure bullshit, sorry.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 5th, 2021 at 8:52 PM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

PeterC said:

No amount of praying to...the Green Goddess or whatever leads to realization.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no chance that praying to salad dressing will lead to realization, unless it is Kraft:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 5th, 2021 at 8:54 PM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

tkp67 said:

Would you like me to explain why the mindset against new age is categorically unreasonable from my personal perspective as derived from the Lotus Sutra?

In light of the LS it is an ego centric perspective lacking compassion with a great investment in doubt.

Malcolm wrote:

I would like to see a citation from the Lotus Sūtra which supports this. Come on. You can do it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 5th, 2021 at 10:11 PM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

tkp67 said:

I do not consider anything that is generated by the sapient mind to be bs but rather relative to cause, condition and capacity.

Malcolm wrote:

So you are saying as long as there is a cause, condition, and a capacity, there is no bullshit? That's pure bullshit, sorry.

tkp67 said:

No Malcolm pure bullshit is thinking someone with a capacity for addition should be expected to understand calculus. Expecting people of lesser capacity and resource to have a deeper "spiritual" development is also grossly apathetic.

Malcolm wrote:

But we are not talking about people. We are talking about books and ideas which are barren.

tkp67 said:

the inability for people to show compassion for those of lesser capacity is the anti thesis of shakyamuni's Buddhism but more importantly it is fundamentally bereft any benefit as it does not eliminate ignorance but reinforces it.

Malcolm wrote:

We are not invading new age forums, Christian forums, etc., informing people they are following mistaken systems of belief. So your charge of absence of compassion is devoid of value in this case.

tkp67 said:

The fact that people need a teaching to build metta for the purpose of developing compassion...

Malcolm wrote:

What makes you think the hodgepodge of random beliefs and tropes in the New Age movement lends itself to kindness and compassion? Some authors might be focused on that, other authors may be more interested in the imagined ability of [insert crystal here] to help them communicate telepathically with aliens from Rigel 4.

tkp67 said:

Metta isn't meant to be conditioned or conditional is it?

Malcolm wrote:

It is quite possible to be kind and loving, as well as critical, all at the same time. The new age movement is complete bullshit from top to bottom. Nothing in it leads to liberation. There are no skillful means there. It is unkind to not criticize it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 5th, 2021 at 10:13 PM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

tkp67 said:

Actually since everything is born of the mind regardless of what you pray to the same mind is processing it so if there isn't a realization it has nothing to do with that expedient but that mind's inability to use it skillfully.

Malcolm wrote:

You do understand the distinction between a proper and an improper refuge and why that distinction exists? Because if you don't, you really need to learn Buddhism from the ground up.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 5th, 2021 at 10:19 PM

Title: Re: Monk rules...

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Doesn't this apply to a possible Vajrayana ordination some day in the Drikung Kagyu Lineage, which is a Vajrayana Tibetan Tradition?

Malcolm wrote:

No. Ordination, pravrajita, going forth, is strictly a śrāvakayāna rite. There are no Vajrayāna ordination rites. There are Vajrayāna monks because in addition to receiving monastic ordination, they also receive bodhisattva vows and secret mantra samayas, and the latter two sets of vows supersede the former monastic ordination. You've already received bodhisattva vows and samayas. So you are a Vajrayāna upāsika (lay person), since you receive pratimōṣka vows when you took refuge with Garchen Rinpoche.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 5th, 2021 at 10:21 PM

Title: Re: How difference between Chan and Zen.

Content:

KiwiNFLFan said:

So it seems to me that Western Zen centres have taken the meditation aspect of Zen and placed it front and center, unlike how it is in East Asia (but then, this is from my limited experience).

Malcolm wrote:

Differing client populations need different things.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 5th, 2021 at 10:22 PM

Title: Re: The Life Span of the Tathagata: Before and after Gaya.

Content:

tkp67 said:

There is no blemish that exists in Shakyamnui's enlightenment...

Malcolm wrote:

There are no blemishes in the awakening of any buddha. The awakening of all buddhas is just the same.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 5th, 2021 at 10:48 PM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

PeterC said:

You follow a Japanese monk who thought that repeating the title of one sutra was enough, whose life's work was to make the dharma accessible to people of very limited understanding and resources. What would he say to you about your idea that the new age crowd aren't ready for the Dharma of Sakyamuni? He would tell you that you are prolonging their suffering.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, lets keep in mind that Nichiren also was quite critical of other movements to do precisely the same thing, that is, he was highly critical of Pure Land and Zen. This just makes tkp's admonishments all the more silly.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 5th, 2021 at 11:00 PM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

tkp67 said:

No Malcolm pure bullshit is thinking someone with a capacity for addition should be expected to understand calculus. Expecting people of lesser capacity and resource to have a deeper "spiritual" development is also grossly apathetic.

Malcolm wrote:

But we are not talking about people. We are talking about books and ideas which are barren.

tkp67 said:

They are only barren to someone who sees them a pure delusion. They aren't pure delusion to everyone.

Malcolm wrote:

They are pure delusion to anyone who has studied Buddhadharma properly.

tkp67 said:

Are they Buddhist teachings as practiced here? No.

Are they objectively understandable from the perspective of a non buddhist as a means?
Yes.

Malcolm wrote:

They are a means to nowhere.

tkp67 said:

Nothing is hodgepodge or random. Everything is compound.

Malcolm wrote:

The compounded nature of phenomena does not contradict the attraction of crows to shiny objects that they find at random in their forays into the world. The new age hodgepodge of ideas is like a crow's nest.

tkp67 said:

Sure shed the extraneous teachings but why condemn virtue along with it.

Malcolm wrote:

No one is doing that.

tkp67 said:

From the perspective of skillful means virtue can be developed from any starting point.

Malcolm wrote:

There are two kinds of virtue: mundane and liberative. The vows of a jesuit priest are not conducive to liberation. The feel-good affirmations of Stuart Smiley are not conducive to liberation. The pratimokṣa vows of a Buddhist, however, are conducive to liberation. While it is good that worldly people are virtuous to the extent they can be, that virtue only guarantees birth in higher realms, not liberation.

tkp67 said:

Non buddhist often identify as their spirituality as if they combine the teaching with their own inherent value.

Malcolm wrote:

Not our problem.

tkp67 said:

What are skillful means in the degenerate age supposed to look like?

Malcolm wrote:

Dharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 5th, 2021 at 11:10 PM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

PeterC said:

You follow a Japanese monk who thought that repeating the title of one sutra was enough, whose life's work was to make the dharma accessible to people of very limited understanding and resources. What would he say to you about your idea that the new age crowd aren't ready for the Dharma of Sakyamuni? He would tell you that you are prolonging their suffering.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, lets keep in mind that Nichiren also was quite critical of other movements to do precisely the same thing, that is, he was highly critical of Pure Land and Zen. This just makes tkp's admonishments all the more silly.

tkp67 said:

You are speaking ignorantly about a tradition you have zero intimation of and it is completely off topic.

Malcolm wrote:

Nichiren's criticism of other traditions are on full display in his writings. You can't just wish them away. The point is that you are taking exception to criticisms of non-buddhist new age fabrications for this and that reason; but the founder of your own tradition criticized other, valid Buddhist traditions, for this and that reason. That fact makes your admonishments look ridiculous.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 6th, 2021 at 12:03 AM

Title: Re: Contextualizing, dealing with the New Age movement

Content:

tkp67 said:

When have I failed to provide for a promise that I have made to you?

Malcolm wrote:

Like Peter said, often. But as usual, you always turn these conversations into being about you, rather than the subject at hand.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 6th, 2021 at 12:12 AM

Title: Re: Rushen in Bon and Nyingma

Content:

Passing By said:

Are there any differences in rushens between Bon and Nyingma, with respect to method and result? In the former the main component are exercises designed to give yourself direct introduction to the nature of mind until one is familiar enough to proceed to trekchod. Is Nyingma rushen goal the same or are they not "crossable" so to speak (ie, doing Bon rushen does not give the same result as Nyingma one)?

Malcolm wrote:

In the Nyingthig tradition, rushans are the preliminary practice for thogal and enhancement practices for trekcho. For discovering trekcho, the Nyinthig tradition primarily recommends the use of semzins, like the Song of the Vajra and so on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 6th, 2021 at 12:20 AM

Title: Re: Monk rules...

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Thank you, Malcolm. Can you explain in further detail why ordination is a śrāvakayāna rite? And why it entails the śrāvakayāna Vehicle?

Malcolm wrote:

It has to do with the fact that each level of vow has its own rite of bestowal; its own set of vows; its own method of maintaining those vows; and its own method of repairing those vows if they are broken.

Pratimokṣa vows, the vows of personal liberation come from the śrāvaka schools and are detailed in Vinaya. The Tibetans follow the Mulasarvastivadins; Buddhists in Shri Lanka, Bangladesh, Myanmar, Thailand, Cambodia, and Laos follow the Theravada. East Asian countries such as China, Korea, and Japan, follow the Dharmaguptaka sect.

Then we have the bodhisattva vows. In the Tibeian tradition there are two main traditions: Madhyamaka and Yogacāra. They are not different in meaning, but they are different in method of bestowal and the number of vows, etc. one is expected to follow. In China and Japan, the bodhisattva vows are derived from a sūtra that seems to not have an Indian source, the Brahamajala Sūtra. In the Theravada countries there is no rite at all for conferring bodhisattva vows.

Finally, secret mantras vows come from receiving empowerments in the Yoga Tantra and Anuttarayoga tantra.

So there are three kinds of vows, and they each have their own rite, and so on. This is why there is no "Vajrayāna" ordination per se. You should get Buddhist Ethics by Jamgon Kongtrul where the three vows are explained in detail.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 6th, 2021 at 3:34 AM

Title: Re: The Life Span of the Tathagata: Before and after Gaya.

Content:

illaraza said:

Just as deletions, inversions, translocations, additions, and mutations within chromosomes lead to various congenital defects or other diseases such as cancer...

Malcolm wrote:

They don't necessarily lead to congenital defects. Sometimes they lead to bipedalism, opposable thumbs, etc.

illaraza said:

"They will tear off the first part of the Sutra and stick it on the end, tear off the end and put it at the beginning, put the end and the beginning in the middle, and the beginning at the middle or end". This is analogous to inversions and translocations of the Law.

Malcolm wrote:

Considering that the Saddharmapundarika Sūtra was already subject to emendations and alterations long before the time of Nichiren...It is not like the text never underwent evolution, expansion and so on, both in India and in China. The text we have now and that Nichiren had before him is not Kumarajiva's original translation.

Textual originalism is faulty method of jurisprudence, and it is also faulty method of religious exegesis.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 6th, 2021 at 6:06 PM

Title: Re: Rushen in Bon and Nyingma

Content:

Passing By said:

I see thanks,

Then in Nyingthig, do the semzins for discovering trekcho also accomplish the closing of doors to the 6 realms of samsara or is that purely a rushen thing only?

Malcolm wrote:

No.Yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 6th, 2021 at 7:20 PM

Title: Re: Rushen in Bon and Nyingma

Content:

Passing By said:

Interesting, so technically, if one has not done rushans in Nyingthik but has been doing semzins and trekcho, they could still return to the 6 lokas instead of the minimum nirmanakaya pure land? Even though trekcho is theoretically instantaneous seeing of the fruit and realization at time of death before the lights appear in the dharmata bardo?

Malcolm wrote:

Rushans are also not a guarantee unless you have received signs of accomplishment.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 6th, 2021 at 8:20 PM

Title: Re: Rushen in Bon and Nyingma

Content:

Passing By said:

And trekcho's success depends whether one can hold it when they fall unconscious the moment they die yes?

Malcolm wrote:

You mean liberation?

Passing By said:

While kyerim/dzogrim depends on if they remember the lights are yidam's display (or is that thogal only while the result of two stages is something else?)

Malcolm wrote:

I don't know how Bonpos explain the two stages in relation to the process of death.

As for the bardo of dharmatā, one should recognize sounds, lights, and rays.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 7th, 2021 at 2:56 AM

Title: Re: Buddhist Prayer in Los Angeles for anti-Asian hate

Content:

Queequeg said:

Yep. Middle of the group pic

Malcolm wrote:

Then there is the weird white dude with the fasci haircut in a white button down and shades.

Bristollad said:

Maybe he just wanted his photo taken with monastics? Or he's from the local SGI chapter or something wanting to show solidarity?

Malcolm wrote:

he just looks a little out of place...elf on a shelf style.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 7th, 2021 at 3:25 AM

Title: Re: Indian Buddhist music

Content:

mabw said:

<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Charyapada#Melodies>

Apparently there are melodies here. Are these chanted or sung in the ancient melodies today? Like in Tibet?

Malcolm wrote:

The Carya songs of the siddhas are still sung by the Bauls of Bengal. Completely different than Tibetan music or sensibility.

<https://geographical.co.uk/people/cultures/item/3548-baul>

Also Newar Bajracarya music is likely an authentic holdover from Buddhist musical traditions of the late classical Buddhist period 10-12th centuries.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 7th, 2021 at 3:37 AM

Title: Re: Input on my altar/prayer space please

Content:

jamesL said:

Thank you for the kind reply. It seems theres endless variations. I just want to make sure I get the core layout correct.

Könchok Thrinley said:

Whatever layout speaks to you is the correct layout.

If you have a master oyu might want to emulate a bit the layout of his altar or how altars are in that lineage. Etc.

To be honest with you, the space you have for the altar is incredible! Really perfect.

jamesL said:

Thank you! I had read that certain things are supposed to be higher, or behind others, etc. Ill just keep things simple for now.

Malcolm wrote:

The three thigs you are supposed to have on a shrine are representations of Buddha's body, speech, and mind. You only have body. You also need a book, a sutra like heart sutra, etc., and a small stupa, for speech and mind respectively.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 7th, 2021 at 4:14 AM

Title: Re: Rushen in Bon and Nyingma

Content:

Passing By said:

Then from Dzogchen POV, what actually happens in the bardo to deity yoga practitioners who nevertheless, have not done any thogal? Where do they wind up?

Malcolm wrote:

This is called sambhogakāya phowa, it indirectly means the same thing as liberation in the bardo of dharmatā.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 7th, 2021 at 4:22 AM

Title: Love has Won

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

https://www.nytimes.com/2021/05/05/us/colorado-amy-carlson-love-has-won.html?action=click&algo=bandit-all-surfaces-uh-nclicks-alpha-03&block=more_in_recirc&fallback=false&imp_id=828422766&impression_id=fea7e6c0-aea7-11eb-a26a-9f6ab2b9b865&index=0&pgtype=Article&pool=pool%2F6f6007c7-e76e-4ea2-b6a9-8e533e17975a®ion=footer&req_id=9914260&surface=more-in-us-news&variant=2_bandit-all-surfaces-uh-nclicks-alpha-03:

7 Arrested After Police Find Mummified Body in Colorado Home

A man told the police the body belonged to the leader of Love Has Won, a group that former members have called a cult centered on a woman named Amy Carlson.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 7th, 2021 at 4:32 AM

Title: Re: Anti-racism as new, intolerant religion

Content:

tkp67 said:

Seems like white privilege propaganda

Malcolm wrote:

Gillespie is a typical libertarian bullshit artist. Of course, modern libertarianism has its roots in the defense of slavery, particularly in the writings of John C. Calhoun.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 7th, 2021 at 6:35 AM

Title: Re: Anti-racism as new, intolerant religion

Content:

Archie2009 said:

McWhorter does all the talking. Nice try.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes I understand, but libertarianism is a morally bankrupt doctrine no matter whose mouth it comes out of.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 7th, 2021 at 6:37 AM

Title: Re: Anti-racism as new, intolerant religion

Content:

tkp67 said:

The propaganda comes in when a white man cherry picks a black specialist in language instead of a black expert in social/psychological effects of racism on minorities in America.

Malcolm wrote:

You're batting a 1000 so far.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 7th, 2021 at 6:38 AM

Title: Re: Anti-racism as new, intolerant religion

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

It never ceases to amaze me the lengths that some people will go to to pretend that America isn't not a racist country, when I would say that it is equally "religious"...

Malcolm wrote:

Especially since racism and slavery in America have been justified principally on the basis of religion since...well...1492 and 1617.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 7th, 2021 at 6:39 AM

Title: Re: Love has Won

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Sorry if it upset you, Malcolm.

Malcolm wrote:

Didn't upset me at all. I liked the touch with the christmas lights, that was very novel. The gouged-out eyes thing, though, that is pretty creepy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 7th, 2021 at 9:31 AM

Title: Re: Anti-racism as new, intolerant religion

Content:

Queequeg said:

For some reason the tweet is blocked for me. Could someone post the text?

Johnny Dangerous said:

"America is not racist, nothing to see here"

Just kidding, here you go:

John McWhorter said:

"'White privilege' is original sin...The idea that 'we're waiting for America to come to terms with racism' doesn't mean anything...It's The Rapture, that business of End of Days, Judgement Day." @JohnHMcWhorter on anti-racism as new, intolerant religion.

Johnny Dangerous said:

What the OP quoted, not a real argument or statement on anything, just a self-satisfied sound bite, basically.

Malcolm wrote:

As well as another racist white guy making a racist argument that there is no racism.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 7th, 2021 at 6:33 PM

Title: Re: Anti-racism as new, intolerant religion

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

"America is not racist, nothing to see here"

Just kidding, here you go:

What the OP quoted, not a real argument or statement on anything, just a self-satisfied sound bite, basically.

Malcolm wrote:

As well as another racist white guy making a racist argument that there is no racism.

Johnny Dangerous said:

Well McWhorter is black, the OP idk about.

Anyway, I feel like "racism doesn't exist" type arguments are so silly they aren't really even worth refuting. Ironically, they are usually based on a "religious" adherence to an idea of American that doesn't exist now, and never has.

Malcolm wrote:

Gillespie...

The OP made the claim a few days ago that anti-racism was racist. He still has not demonstrated his religious claim.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 7th, 2021 at 9:45 PM

Title: Re: How many Vajrasattva 100-Syllable mantra is required for Ngondro?

Content:

Volan said:

Not a ngondro, Siksa-samuccaya of Shantideva, which is the classical Indian treatise.

In the "purification" 8th chapter there is an advice on 100 syllable mantra of Vajrasattva - 8000 to purify a fault. And there are some additional instructions - not only a Vajrasattva, a pack of methods according to Sutrayana and Vajrayana, signs of accomplishment...

Malcolm wrote:

No, what is discussed in the Compendium of Training in the 100 syllable mantras of the tathāgatas, which also exists as an extract, de bzhin gshegs pa'i snying po yi ge brgya pa'i bsrung ba dang sdig pa bshags pa'i cho ga, Toh. 3941.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 7th, 2021 at 9:55 PM

Title: Re: Anti-racism as new, intolerant religion

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

'Racism' is a loaded term. People interpret it in many different ways, and it appears in many different forms. That doesn't mean there's no such thing as racism, or that it doesn't exist, or isn't a fact of American history. But it's an abstract concept.

Malcolm wrote:

All concepts are abstractions. But racism is not a concept for someone is being killed by the police or lunched by a mob.

PadmaVonSamba said:

When people deny that there is racism, that's a problem. At the same time, the concept of "systematic racism" is vague.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it is very precise. It refers to a system of justice where white people are given preferential treatment under the law. It goes all the way back to the slave codes of Virginia, and the three-fifths compromise in the original Constitution.

PadmaVonSamba said:

Are we talking about the legal system, the economic system, the social system the political system?

Malcolm wrote:

We are referring to all four, actually. Systematic racism is systematic because has been embedded. It is embedded in the fact that Native Americans, for example, were not even permitted to vote in US elections until 1924, but even then it was left to the states to grant Native American suffrage, until the Voting Rights act of 1965.

Your post sounds like it was written by a white guy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 7th, 2021 at 10:01 PM

Title: Re: His Holiness says that one can follow a book, not a teacher

Content:

Volan said:

This statement is somewhat revolutionary to the Tibetan Buddhism - traditionally one is supposed to receive oral transmissions and commentaries.

Malcolm wrote:

Not really. Vajrayāna topics yes, sūtrayāna, not so much.

Volan said:

Three types of Prajna: wisdom acquired through listening (study, teaching) (srutamayiprajna), wisdom acquired through reflection (cintamayiprajna) and wisdom acquired through [mental] cultivation (bhavanamayiprajna).

You can see that it is listening, not reading and shruta is common with shrotra, which is the ear organ. Shravaka - listener.

Even for the Sutrayana teachings there are lists of lineage gurus, i have seen such list for a Gelugpa`s Abhisamayalamkara lineage.

Malcolm wrote:

I am in agreement with you that in general dharma is an aural tradition. However, this does not mean that one is required to have received a lung for such texts the MMK, Abhidharmakośa, etc. When lungs for these things are given it is more a formality.

Volan said:

How sad that it is just some antique thing in the canon - no study, no tradition.

Malcolm wrote:

People study it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 7th, 2021 at 10:02 PM

Title: Re: His Holiness says that one can follow a book, not a teacher

Content:

Volan said:

I have to say that Shantideva is not exclusively a Sutrayana teacher - he is definitely a Vajrayana practitioner.

Malcolm wrote:

Maybe, maybe not. But everything in the Compendium of Training is kriya tantra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 7th, 2021 at 10:23 PM

Title: Re: Rushen in Bon and Nyingma

Content:

Passing By said:

And this decision is purely deciding with certainty on the knowledge of the actual nature of things yes? Is this literally just as simple as having experiential knowledge of trekcho via a direct introduction/semzin/ guru yoga?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and maintaining that.

Passing By said:

But in that case, what does the commonly encountered phrase "stability in trekchod" mean? Knowledge is an either you know or you don't thing so what stability is there to maintain?

Malcolm wrote:

Not being distracted from that knowledge.

Passing By said:

And when the knowledge becomes obscured, it's actually not that difficult to apply the pointing out instructions to reinforce it again....so, just like that, without relatively much effort, is sufficient for what is generally held to be the highest form of trikaya phowa short of full out rainbow body?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 7th, 2021 at 11:56 PM

Title: Re: Running over an animal

Content:

Ardha said:

I killed a turtle on the road today due to my negligence and I feel awful about all of it. I went back to check on the turtle and I
What can I do? How do I proceed?

Malcolm wrote:

Sarva dukkham, suffering is everywhere.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 7th, 2021 at 11:58 PM

Title: Re: Mudita

Content:

mabw said:

Greetings,

What has, in your experience, been most effective in cultivating sympathetic joy and reducing jealousy?

Malcolm wrote:

Equanimity, upekṣa. Though it is normally listed last, according to Kamalashila, it should be cultivated first in order that one does not mistake attachment for love, compassion, and sympathetic joy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 8th, 2021 at 1:18 AM

Title: Re: Lord Manjushri Mantra

Content:

Minobu said:

in Tibetan it goes

Om A Ra Pa Tsa Na Dhih

in Sanskrit

Om A Ra Pa Ca Na Dhih

would Ca sound like ca in calling ?

Malcolm wrote:

Cha as is "cha cha cha."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 8th, 2021 at 1:20 AM

Title: Re: Music time

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 8th, 2021 at 1:22 AM

Title: Re: Music time

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 8th, 2021 at 1:24 AM

Title: Re: Music time

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 8th, 2021 at 1:25 AM

Title: Re: Running over an animal

Content:

DharmaJunior said:

Imagine that all the turtles you have helped want you to be stronger, including the one that expired. Be the best possible version of yourself that you can be. So now continue with the good work.

Ardha said:

That would be a comfort. But even now I can't be sure whether I wanted to run it over thinking it was something else. I looked up from my phone and hit it and saw it flying in the rear view. I'm still haunted by the image of it flying in the air and seeing it writhing on the ground with a deep gash when I went back to check on it. I can't believe it still.....

Malcolm wrote:

Sarva dukkham, suffering is everywhere.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 8th, 2021 at 2:11 AM

Title: Re: Signs of future rebirth

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

When one takes rebirth, it is actually the various qualities which are reborn again. It's like carrying dozen eggs home from the grocery store.

Malcolm wrote:

If you consider afflicted aggregates qualities...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 8th, 2021 at 3:20 AM

Title: Re: Tibetan Medical pulse testing/self pulse testing

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Anyone have resources on this?

Malcolm wrote:

It has to be learned in person.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 8th, 2021 at 9:22 AM

Title: Re: Origin of the Four Seals?

Content:

manjusri said:

Does anyone know when these were first formulated and by whom? I am also curious if they can be found in the Theravada? I believe I was introduced to them through a teaching given by HHDL. Thanks, everybody.

Malcolm wrote:

They are found in several sutras. I once ran a search on them in Tibetan canon to see where they could be found. I don't remember the ore use sutras, but they are found in whole and in parts in several sutras.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 8th, 2021 at 9:47 PM

Title: Re: Definition of music

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The offering of the faithful,
the livelihood of the poor, and the stirring of the emotions of the passionate,
all come from knowledge of music.

-- Sa skya Paṇḍita, Treatise On Music.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 8th, 2021 at 10:56 PM

Title: Re: Signs of future rebirth

Content:

PeterC said:

because we didn't achieve liberation in that lifetime or in the bardo afterwards.)

Malcolm wrote:

And we didn't even manage rebirth in a natural nirmanakāya buddhafield, sheesh!

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 9th, 2021 at 1:59 AM

Title: Re: A question about Buddha Goddess Tara

Content:

Minobu said:

Why do we refer to Her as a Goddess and not just a Buddha ?

Malcolm wrote:

We don't refer to her as a goddess in Buddhism. Hindu's do, however.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 9th, 2021 at 4:05 AM

Title: Re: Signs of future rebirth

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

And we didn't even manage rebirth in a natural nirmanakāya buddhafield, sheesh!

mechashivaz said:

I've heard it takes much longer to attain liberation in a pure land, so wouldn't it be better to take rebirth in a realm like our current one?

heart said:

been there, done that.

/magnus

Malcolm wrote:

But did you get the t-shirt?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 10th, 2021 at 12:32 AM

Title: Re: Origin of the Four Seals?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This term, chos/bka' rtags kyi phyag rgya bzhi, the seal of the four characteristics of the Dharma appears to have entered Tibet in the 11th century. It is a late Mahāyāna term for what constitutes the śrāvakayāna basic criteria for authenticating the Buddhist teachings. They are explained as seals because these four features are held to be like the seal or decree which a minister uses to invoke the authority of the king. This term is found in native Tibetan texts as early as the 12th century, and probably earlier.

The formula, "all compounded phenomena...nirvana is peace" is found in Sthiramati's commentary on the Mahāyānasūtralamkāra, which was translated in either the 11th century by an obscure translator named Che Tashi (Lce bkra shi) with an Indian.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 10th, 2021 at 12:38 AM

Title: Re: Consciousness is not momentary

Content:

Aemilius said:

If it were momentary...

Malcolm wrote:

Take it up with the Buddha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 10th, 2021 at 2:43 AM

Title: Re: Ksitigarbha & "the most lenient" cultivation

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

150px-Jizo_(Ksitigarbha)_(Nara_National_Museum).jpg

I found the perspective of a certain essay ("Study Guide to the Sutra of Ksitigarbha's Fundamental Vows") quite interesting.

Malcolm wrote:

Most likely a Chinese or a Khotanese text.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 10th, 2021 at 5:30 AM

Title: Re: Consciousness is not momentary

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Life, personhood, pleasure and pain

— This is all that's bound together

In a single mental event

— A moment that quickly takes place.

Even the spirits who endure

For eighty-four thousand aeons

— Even these do not live the same

For any two moments of mind.

What ceases for one who is dead,

Or for one who's still standing here,

Are all just the same aggregates

— Gone, never to connect again.

The states which are vanishing now,

And those which will vanish some day,

Have characteristics no different

Than those which have vanished before.

With no production there's no birth;

With becoming present, one lives.

When grasped with the highest meaning,
The world is dead when the mind stops.

There's no hoarding what has vanished,
No piling up for the future;
Those who have been born are standing
Like a seed upon a needle.

The vanishing of all these states
That have become is not welcome,
Though dissolving phenomena stand
Uncombined from primordial time.

From the unseen, [states] come and go,
Glimpsed only as they're passing by;
Like lightning flashing in the sky
— They arise and then pass away.

<https://www.accesstoinight.org/tipitaka/kn/nm/nm.2.04.olen.html>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 10th, 2021 at 5:54 AM

Title: Re: A question about Buddha Goddess Tara

Content:

Volan said:

Tara is the same entity as Avalokiteśvara manifesting itself in form of the goddess-devi.

Malcolm wrote:

No, Tara has her own rnam thar, and her own pure land, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 10th, 2021 at 6:16 AM

Title: Re: Origin of the Four Seals?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This term, chos/bka' rtags kyi phyag rgya bzhi, the seal of the four characteristics of the Dharma

Sorry, the four seals of the...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 10th, 2021 at 6:38 AM

Title: Re: A question about Buddha Goddess Tara

Content:

Volan said:

Tara is the same entity as Avalokiteśvara manifesting itself in form of the goddess-devi.

Malcolm wrote:

No, Tara has her own rnam thar, and her own pure land, etc.

Volan said:

Potala pure land - Avalokiteshvara at the top of the mountain and Tara in the forest at the foot. And there are even forms with the combined mantras.

Malcolm wrote:

Hayagriva, Garuda, Vajrapani also have combined mantras, this does not make them the same, it in fact points to their difference. Tara vowed to achieve buddhahood in a female form, and never take male rebirth.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 10th, 2021 at 7:06 AM

Title: Re: A question about Buddha Goddess Tara

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Tara vowed to achieve buddhahood in a female form, and never take male rebirth.

cyril said:

Wouldn't that amount to shooting herself in the leg a little bit? How does she emanate in the hell realms where there is neither male nor female?

Malcolm wrote:

Emanations are not births.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 10th, 2021 at 1:10 PM

Title: Re: Question: The eternal śrāmaṇera?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

My question to anyone in the know is a bit odd: are there any cases of people who remain eternal śrāmaṇera? Who receive the Tokudo and vows of this category yet never go on to become actual monks?

Just curious.

Malcolm wrote:

This is quote common in Tibet.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, May 10th, 2021 at 8:36 PM
Title: Re: Question: The eternal śrāmaṇera?
Content:

FiveSkandhas said:
What are some of the Tibetan rationales and reasons for remaining śrāmaṇera?

Malcolm wrote:
Some people are content with just being a dge tshul (śrāmaṇera). I have met many such people. Full ordination is a big step, and being a dge slong (bhikṣu) not a decision entered lightly.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, May 10th, 2021 at 9:44 PM
Title: Re: Know what this is?
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
Tourist art. It has no use.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, May 10th, 2021 at 11:19 PM
Title: Re: Question: The eternal śrāmaṇera see if it?
Content:
FiveSkandhas said:
Thanks for the answers all.

I'm sort of fascinated by the "rank" of śrāmaṇera because it's clearly not lay but I'm not sure it can be called truly "clerical" either.

Malcolm wrote:
Śrāmaṇeras are definitely part of the "ordained" Sangha. They have gone forth (pravrajita) into the homeless life.

FiveSkandhas said:
It seems to be positioned higher than an Upasaka. But since it seems to be a transitory stage on the way to Bikkhu for most -- and also associated with extreme youth -- it's hard for me to get a sense of what a long-term śrāmaṇera would actually do. Do they assist in temple ritual in some way? Can they preach or teach?

Malcolm wrote:
They follow the vows and conduct of a śrāmaṇera, and yes they can teach, etc. The difference between "the laity" (not really an appropriate term for upāsakas) and śrāmaṇeras is the difference of vows. The Buddha's original monastic sangha had no rules. Then eventually, there were 200+, and a common joke in Tibetan circles is that if the Buddha had lived to 100 there would have been more than 500, because most of the rules were implemented because lay people complained about the behavior of this or that monk, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 11th, 2021 at 12:29 AM

Title: Re: A question about Buddha Goddess Tara

Content:

Volan said:

Tibetans elaborate that story - she was born from the tears of Avalokiteshvara.

Malcolm wrote:

This is from the praise to 21 Tārās, so not a Tibetan elaboration at all.

As for her biography, for example, Tārānātha's famous Golden Rosary (See, Wilson, In Praise of Tārā, 1996), there is no contradiction between the Princess Candrajñānā having first wakened her bodhicitta under the Tathāgata Dundubhisvara, receiving the name Tārādevī, and vowing to attain buddhahood in female form and her later association with Avalokiteśvara.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 11th, 2021 at 12:33 AM

Title: Re: A question about Buddha Goddess Tara

Content:

Minobu said:

Also I only really feel comfortable referring to Her as Buddha Goddess Tara.

also when did this concept of Her Being Born of a Tear first appear?

Malcolm wrote:

"Devi" does not necessarily imply she is a goddess of the desire or form realm. Tārā was a princess, and the term devi is also used for princesses, just as the term devaputra is used for princes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 11th, 2021 at 12:34 AM

Title: Re: A question about Buddha Goddess Tara

Content:

Hazel said:

I guess it's "how could she come from a tear if she had her own continuous mind stream?"

Malcolm wrote:

Poetic license. If you read her biography (mentioned above), you will see she received her name and made her aspiration to never take male form eons ago, you will see her association with Tathāgatas Amoghasiddhi and Akṣobhya, her identification with Prajñāpāramita, her relationship with Avalokiteśvara, and her role in Śākyamuni Buddha's awakening, and so on.

Tāra is a complex figure, and cannot be reduced to an accouterment of a male bodhisattva's compassion.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 11th, 2021 at 12:45 AM

Title: Re: A question about Buddha Goddess Tara

Content:

tkp67 said:

The function Tara provides is manifested through this bodhisattva.

Malcolm wrote:

No, that is really not how it is.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 11th, 2021 at 2:08 AM

Title: Re: A question about Buddha Goddess Tara

Content:

Minobu said:

So it's like She was not really born from The tear, but because of the tear ,came to help out Buddha Avalokiteshvara and so appeared this way ?

Malcolm wrote:

It's a poetic image. Not be to taken literally. Tārā is also the mother of all the buddhas, including Śākyamuni, because she is the embodiment of Prajñāpāramitā, so again, poetic, not literal.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 11th, 2021 at 2:32 AM

Title: Re: Consciousness is not momentary

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

There are many ways to be "anti-momentaryism," and just because you disagree with Ābhidharmika momentaryisms of various Śrāvaka sects, that does not equate to "There are no moments." As mentioned before by another user, Śrāvaka momentary doctrine is a form of "atomism for time" and is critiqued in largely the same way that atoms are critiqued by Yogācārins and Madhyamakas alike. Just because there are no ultimate atoms of ultimate form, it does not follow that there are not bits of rūpa that sentient beings interact with. Just because the moments are deconstructed, it doesn't mean that there is no such thing as a particular moment of time for a particular locus of experience.

Malcolm wrote:

Also, the Buddha was quite clear that phenomena, including minds, were momentary. The Buddha may not have elaborated in detail upon what a "moment" was, but in the end, the basic unit of time in Buddhism is number of moments it takes to form a thought. In reality, moments are partless. Partless moments that perish as soon as they arise have no observable duration and are immune from Madhyamaka critique.

The notion that the mind is permanent (i.e. not momentary) is just a Hindu idea, Vedantic.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 11th, 2021 at 2:38 AM

Title: Re: Buddhist Death Metal Group

Content:

Nirveda said:

I just found this and I'm a little...stunned.

<https://www.flipsyde.live/buddhist-death-metal-band-growls-sutras-and-mantras-in-sanskrit?fbclid=IwAR2iZ-JZ0KE75J4wANNDy3ojKQt2ka0DXY4n3eGF3DHZg0tGfPL4fD77ocs>

Malcolm wrote:

This music is horrible.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 11th, 2021 at 2:57 AM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

Giovanni said:

Perhaps semantics, but nothing "enters" anything. Consciousness arises. It is a function not a "thing". And it arises to the degree that conditions exist. In the absence of a CNS then consciousness, sparsa, etc can only arise to the degree that conditions for its arising exist. Consciousness is not an atta entering a body. It has causes and conditions. Largely these are karma driven.

SilenceMonkey said:

Maybe you should read the Buddha's teachings on this.

The consciousness we're talking about is what reincarnates.

Malcolm wrote:

Giovanni is correct that consciousness is not an atman entering a body. He is also correct that consciousness also depends on causes and conditions. There certainly is language the Buddha used which says, "When consciousness descends into the womb..." etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 11th, 2021 at 2:58 AM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Maybe it's not relevant what happens after seven years. If the egg dies before the baby is born, I would assume the consciousness would be propelled to a new body by the force of its karma.

Malcolm wrote:

Being aborted is also a result of karma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 11th, 2021 at 5:16 AM

Title: Re: A question about Buddha Goddess Tara

Content:

Minobu said:

So it's like She was not really born from The tear, but because of the tear ,came to help out Buddha Avalokiteshvara and so appeared this way ?

Volan said:

Here is the story according to His Eminence Kenting Tai Situpa

A teaching given in New Delhi 18.1.2004

For so many eons Bodhisattva Avalokiteshvara with that aspiration was liberating sentient beings, and then after many eons through his wisdom and realisation he made an observation, these days we would call it something like a survey. He found that countless sentient beings were suffering. Before also countless sentient beings were suffering and now also. Countless sentient beings are countless, and they will always be countless. Countless cannot become countable sentient beings. Countless by definition is countless always, limitless by definition is limitless; you cannot limit the limitless.

When he saw that, he was so disturbed and upset that he almost broke his vow of saying that I will not reach Buddhahood until the last sentient being attains the Buddhahood. Originally, when he took that vow he said: "If I break my vow may I break into pieces and perish." Because of his original vow he broke into thousands of pieces. At that time he realised that the Buddha is limitless and sentient beings are limitless and sentient beings' essence is also Buddha. That happened because all the Buddhas of the ten directions blessed him and he realised that. Therefore his thousands of pieces transformed into thousand arms and thousand eyes. Normally good things become bad and bad things become worse, but here bad things became good and superb. So the thousand pieces became thousand arms and thousand eyes, and the thousand eyes represent the Buddhas and the thousand arms represent the thousand Universal Monarchs who will be the vehicle of Buddhas' activity. That way Avalokiteshvara developed this quality.

His activity is continuously benefiting sentient beings. Once upon a time he again made an observation. He still saw countless sentient beings suffering. This time it did not make him disappointed and break his vow. Instead he was filled with compassion and out of that compassion two drops of tears dropped from his two main eyes and from those tears one transformed into White Tara and another one transformed into Green Tara. They took a vow from Avalokiteshvara, saying that until your original vow is fulfilled, may we be the mother to all sentient beings suffering in Samsara and liberate them to the Buddhahood. White Tara's manifestation represents helping sentient beings to have longevity, prosperity and all that aspect, and Green Tara represents providing protection for all sentient beings from all fears. White and Green Tara manifest this way.

Malcolm wrote:

Yup, another story. But I still think Tārānātha's account is more comprehensive and interesting.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 11th, 2021 at 9:38 AM

Title: Re: A question about Buddha Goddess Tara

Content:

Minobu said:

I think Malcolm thinks everything is metaphor and story..sort of this uber modern guy and like ...well... you know ...

Malcolm wrote:

We are in the realm of just so stories. Versions of some stories are more interesting than others. Anyone who claims their version of Buddhist myths and legends is the only right one should have their head examined. All we can honestly say is that we prefer this version to that one.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 11th, 2021 at 9:58 AM

Title: Re: Know what this is?

Content:

cky said:

I wouldn't throw it in the trash, however. The mantra is sacred even though...

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

How best then to dispose of prayer flags printed on plastic? You can't burn them.

Malcolm wrote:

The best way to dispose of them is to refrain from purchasing them in the first place.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 11th, 2021 at 10:36 AM

Title: Re: A question about Buddha Goddess Tara

Content:

Minobu said:

I think Malcolm thinks everything is metaphor and story..sort of this uber modern guy and like ...well... you know ...

Malcolm wrote:

We are in the realm of just so stories. Versions of some stories are more interesting than others. Anyone who claims their version of Buddhist myths and legends is the only right one should have their head examined. All we can honestly say is that we prefer this version to that one.

tkp67 said:

Even if they are just stories the benefit of function is still understood through cause and effect.

The manifestation of the realms is real enough to require emancipation or it perpetuates great suffering.

The Buddha understood all stories, why they were told and how to lead each one to liberation.

Malcolm wrote:

Stories are compelling. That's why people keep telling them.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 11th, 2021 at 11:23 AM

Title: Re: A question about Buddha Goddess Tara

Content:

Minobu said:

I think Malcolm thinks everything is metaphor and story..sort of this uber modern guy and like ...well... you know ...

Malcolm wrote:

We are in the realm of just so stories. Versions of some stories are more interesting than others. Anyone who claims their version of Buddhist myths and legends is the only right one should have their head examined. All we can honestly say is that we prefer this version to that one.

Minobu said:

So this whole because of the Buddha's Dharmakaya body we get all this Mahayana sutras is just myth .And actually it's just guys putting stuff together like star trek and the Lotus sutra should both be together in the same category in the library, under science fiction.

Malcolm wrote:

So, whose version of the Dharma is more correct? Which version is more true? And who is the authority upon whom we can rely to ascertain this fact? You? Me? Some book/s written down by people whose names we will never know? Some medieval scholar? There are a lot of religious fanatics out there. There are also a lot of Buddhist religious fanatics. Fanaticism is toxic.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 11th, 2021 at 11:05 PM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

Minobu said:

the question is

Did Buddha give us the Sutras or are they just man made stories by common mortals.

Malcolm wrote:

You will never find a satisfactory answer to that question. All you will find are different stories competing for your attention.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 11th, 2021 at 11:57 PM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

Dorje Sempa Namkha Che, Chögyal Namkhai Norbu's Introduction to his Oral Commentary said:

<https://Melong.com>

“When we follow a buddhist teaching it is important to know that Buddha’s teaching is not only the oral teaching he gave in India. Buddha is omniscient, a totally enlightened being having many possibilities to communicate; so the Buddhist teaching has many aspects, not only what was taught in India. In Tibet we have the collection of all the teachings of Buddha called Kangyur. Ka means word of Buddha, gyur means translated in ancient times from Sanskrit to Tibetan. The Kangyur comprises 108 volumes. It does not mean that all these were taught in India at Bodhgaya or somewhere else as oral teachings. In sacred places of India, like Rajghir at Vulture Peak, Buddha taught Mahayana, but most Mahayana teachings are not oral teachings developed in India...

Malcolm wrote:
Word.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, May 12th, 2021 at 12:02 AM
Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate
Content:

SilenceMonkey said:
I was just reading in "Perfect Conduct" about the root downfall of killing. Dudjom Rinpoche says killing involves killing a human being, which includes an unborn fetus.

I was a bit surprised when I read this, having come from a modern education. I understand the in depth arguments made earlier in this thread, but I thought it was interesting that such a being as Dudjom Rinpoche said this.

Sādhaka said:
It’s not surprising that most Lama’s don’t see things in a way that aligns with contemporary western politically correct sensibilities.

Malcolm wrote:
Most Lamas don't have to worry about abortions, unless they impregnate a women by accident and want to cover it up (and this happens...I know of several instances). So as usual, religious leaders tell their flock one thing, and do the opposite when it is poses inconveniences for themselves.

And this, more than than anything else, is why a women's choice is more important than the opinions of men. As a libertarian, you should be down with that, not complaining about "political correctness."

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, May 12th, 2021 at 12:07 AM
Title: Re: Zen beliefs.
Content:
narhwal90 said:

If your concern about zen is its beliefs, perhaps share some of yours?

Zenny said:

With regard to Zen as a method/practice my main belief is that Meditation/dhayana works.

Malcolm wrote:

What does "works" mean?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 12th, 2021 at 12:41 AM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

Minobu said:

so the below only counts as long as it's non tibetan ? Or as long as it comes from a Dzogchen guy

Malcolm wrote:

That Dzogchen guy happens to be my guru. But still, it is just a story.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 12th, 2021 at 1:13 AM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

Sādhaka said:

It is just that a lot of it resonates with me, especially in today's ever-increasingly-authoritarian world.

Malcolm wrote:

There is nothing more authoritarian than the state determining for women what they can and cannot do with their bodies.

Generally speaking, people who oppose so-called "political correctness" are generally the ones who elevate authoritarians into power. So you might want to re-evaluate your admiration for monarchist lamas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 12th, 2021 at 3:27 AM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

Minobu said:

so the below only counts as long as it's non tibetan ? Or as long as it comes from a Dzogchen guy

Malcolm wrote:

That Dzogchen guy happens to be my guru. But still, it is just a story.

Minobu said:

i did not mean for it to sound disrespectful.
sorry if i offended you.

Malcolm wrote:

No, you did not offend me at all. What I am saying is that we cannot verify anything. We either accept this or that claim or not. No one can prove anything.

For example, before his post was deleted in this thread, Illaraza made the absurd and indefensible claim that Nichiren's Buddhism was the only valid path. This is just a story of which he has convinced himself. Based on what? Based on a story he believes for which he has no proof.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 12th, 2021 at 6:34 AM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

Minobu said:

Now I have had some extraordinary things happen with Buddha Goddess Tara

Malcolm wrote:

I recommend Tara practice regularly. I also practice Tara from time to time.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 12th, 2021 at 8:01 AM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Why do you believe certain things you can't easily explain but not others? And another question, do you believe that your connection to the Dharmakaya with your Buddha-Nature gives you access to an Omniscient truth? Perhaps in meditation you can seek what you are looking for..

Malcolm wrote:

To whom is this question directed?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 12th, 2021 at 9:01 AM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Why do you believe certain things you can't easily explain but not others? And another question, do you believe that your connection to the Dharmakaya with your Buddha-Nature gives you access to an Omniscient truth? Perhaps in meditation you can seek what you are looking for..

Malcolm wrote:

Belief and acceptance are two different things. Somethings are conducive to liberation, some are not. But that varies quite a bit from one person to another.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 12th, 2021 at 9:32 AM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Why do you believe certain things you can't easily explain but not others? And another question, do you believe that your connection to the Dharmakaya with your Buddha-Nature gives you access to an Omniscient truth? Perhaps in meditation you can seek what you are looking for..

Malcolm wrote:

Belief and acceptance are two different things. Somethings are conducive to liberation, some are not. But that varies quite a bit from one person to another.

Könchok Chödrak said:

Do you believe a literal belief in the miracles in the sutras or at least the possibility of such miracles happening are conducive to an open mind that leads closer to liberation? Like say, circling the Buddha for thousands of kalpas, or the World-Honored One performing a miracle of picking up the entire multitude of Bodhisattvas in His hand to give them a Transference of His Enlightenment in the Lotus Sutra. There is reality, but what creates limits for us in this world? And how do you view the Pure Land of Holy Eagle Peak?

Malcolm wrote:

Beliefs are concepts. Concepts and buddhahood are mutually exclusive.

Gridrakuta is a place you can visit in India.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 12th, 2021 at 12:39 PM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Do you believe a literal belief in the miracles in the sutras or at least the possibility of such miracles happening are conducive to an open mind that leads closer to liberation?

Like say, circling the Buddha for thousands of kalpas, or the World-Honored One performing a miracle of picking up the entire multitude of Bodhisattvas in His hand to give them a Transference of His Enlightenment in the Lotus Sutra. There is reality, but what creates limits for us in this world? And how do you view the Pure Land of Holy Eagle Peak?

Malcolm wrote:

Beliefs are concepts. Concepts and buddhahood are mutually exclusive.

Gridrakuta is a place you can visit in India.

Könchok Chödrak said:

Okay, on a side note then, can you direct me to a Sutric reference which talks of beliefs not being a part of the Buddha-mind?

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhas are omniscient, they have no need of beliefs.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 12th, 2021 at 8:17 PM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

microbodhi said:

Buddha is not a person, in fact there is no easy way to translate what buddha is, also what sutras are is more or less beyond any English translation and definitions

Malcolm wrote:

Silly.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 12th, 2021 at 8:19 PM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Okay, on a side note then, can you direct me to a Sutric reference which talks of beliefs not being a part of the Buddha-mind?

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhas are omniscient, they have no need of beliefs.

tkp67 said:

They don't need dharma or liberation either so doesn't that make the answer completely irreverent?

Malcolm wrote:

Ummm, no. It's a clear answer to the question posed. And yes, buddhas don't need liberation, and when they teach dharma, it's for mutual enjoyment (sambhoga).

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 12th, 2021 at 8:21 PM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

So, you probably won't find, specifically, sutras that say whether a buddha has beliefs or not, because it doesn't matter in that regard. Just as a Buddha is not moved depending on whether the sky is clear or cloudy, likewise, the question of 'believing' is Irrelevant.

tkp67 said:

By this logic suffering doesn't matter because buddhas no longer experience it once liberated.

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhas do not even perceive suffering, since they have no impure perceptions. To a buddha, all is buddhahood.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 12th, 2021 at 9:05 PM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

muni said:

Since it is been said more women should talk here..

The long term of the quality of life needs attention. Many opinions and laws have already caused enough suffering.

What law thinks on the suffering of an unwanted child, not getting any compassion, no any love and so difficult to know to give it then as well? Or a mom alone, even not able to feed herself, or a mom with a severe mental problem, or a genetic disease causing lots of suffering and some other cases. Instead of listening to laws, the welfare of the eventually child is important.

Therefore I find a general law is not okay, because each case is different.

In some cases giving the child for adoption would be an option.

Life is precious, give it value, able to practise, give it the necessary care, the needful affection.

"Love and compassion are necessities, not luxuries. Without them humanity cannot survive."

Malcolm wrote:

In a secular society, which we live in, we should not be enforcing what are essentially religious views. If you are against abortion, then don't have one. But please do not advocate that other women who have unwanted pregnancies should be forced to bring them to term against their will. That's also suffering.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 13th, 2021 at 12:12 AM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

tkp67 said:

By this logic suffering doesn't matter because buddhas no longer experience it once liberated.

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhas do not even perceive suffering, since they have no impure perceptions. To a buddha, all is buddhahood.

tkp67 said:

Yet Shakyamuni perceived the sufferings of people well enough to teach them according to cause, capacity and conditions. His existence was not independent of ours.

Malcolm wrote:

That's the story you like. This is the one I prefer, Maitreya states in chapter 4 of the Mahāyānottaratantra:

Likewise, without leaving the dharmakāya, the Muni effortlessly displays emanations to all fortunate ones in all the worlds.

Just as Brahma enters the desire realm without leaving his celestial mansion, and is seen by the devas, and upon his sight, they abandon delight in objects, the fortunate in all worlds see the tathāgata, who does not move from the dharmakāya, upon whose sight their taints are permanently removed.

Brahma effortlessly appears [to the devas], through the power of his past aspirations and the virtue of the devas, the self-originated nirmanakāya is just the same.

So, you see, the Buddha does not need to perceive the suffering of sentient beings, because he appears to them based on the cause, his past aspirations, and the condition, their virtue.

Having transmigrated, been conceived, born, arrived at his father's palace, enjoyed amusements, [remained in] isolation, [engaged in ascetic] practice, conquered māra, attained great awakening, demonstrated the path to the city of peace, and having shown that, the Muni [now] cannot be seen by the unfortunate.

These deeds arise from the Buddha's past aspirations, but without merit, one cannot see him, or even hear his name.

The text continues:

Just as the heat of the rays of the sun simultaneously cause lotuses to bloom and jasmine to close, but the sun gives no thought to the faults and qualities of the opening and closing of the lotus, the sun of the ārya is the same.

Just as the sun, without thought, shines its light all at once and causes the petals of the lotus to blossom and ripens everything else, in the same way, without thought, the sublime dharma light rays of of the tathāgata sun enter the disciple lotuses.

So here we see the Buddha has no need to perceive or think about the happiness and suffering of sentient beings, just as the sun pays no regard to the opening and closing of the lotus and jasmine flower. The Buddha Sun shines his light upon all.

tkp67 said:

If you say it was all a show and his life a mirage you destroy the teaching that buddhahood in human form is attainable.

Malcolm wrote:

Again, the above text states in chapter 2:

Because (1) the unimaginable is inexpressible; because (2) the inexpressible is ultimate;
because (3) the ultimate cannot be analyzed;
because (4) that which cannot be analyzed cannot be inferred;
because (5) that which cannot be inferred is unsurpassable;
because (6) the unsurpassable cannot be categorized [in either samsara or nirvana];
because that which cannot be categorized does not abide [in either samsara or nirvana]; because there is no thought of qualities [of nirvana] or faults [of samsara];
the dharmakāya is inconceivable because of being subtle through [the first] five reasons; and the rūpakāya is inconceivable as it is not an entity because of the sixth.

And in chapter 4:

Showing an appearance like the king of the gods in a jewel;
well-formed like the drum of the gods;
like cloud banks, his pervasive love and wisdom spreads to the peak of existence of limitless migrating beings; like Brahma, demonstrating myriad emanations while never leaving his stainless abode;
like the sun, the light of gnosis always shines;
their minds are like the pure wishfulfilling gem, the speech of the victors is like an echo, without syllables, like space, their kāyas are pervasive, immaterial, and permanent;
and like the ground, the stage of buddhahood is the ground of developing all the medicinal, positive qualities of migrating beings.

tkp67 said:

It also denies his declaration and desire to make himself equal with all sentient beings by proxy.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no such declaration by the Buddha or nor desire in the Buddha.

tkp67 said:

The lotus was taught as a proof.

Malcolm wrote:

You can always prove any story you like.

tkp67 said:

If it does not hold up to the light of the lotus sutra it is not congruent with his enlightenment.

Malcolm wrote:

This is just another story you are telling yourself.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 13th, 2021 at 1:01 AM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

muni said:

"The Dalai Lama has said that abortion is "negative," but there are exceptions. He said, "I think abortion should be approved or disapproved according to each circumstance."

Malcolm wrote:

And in order for that to occur, women must have the absolute right to choose for themselves whether it is appropriate to end an unwanted pregnancy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 13th, 2021 at 1:10 AM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

I remember when I was reading Treasures of the Sakya Lineage there was a section that discussed disagreement on this point. If I remember correctly the book said that the Sakya school says Buddha's do not see suffering, although the Gelug's say Buddha's do see suffering. Not sure how other schools stand on the disagreement, but just thought I would include this.

Malcolm wrote:

Glad someone is reading the book Lama Migmar and I collaborated upon.

Yes, according to the Gelukpas, Buddhas have concepts and perceptions. But this is very disputed point, and in general all the other schools disagree.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 13th, 2021 at 9:06 AM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Your comment about translation is not well thought out.

microbodhi said:

Buddha is not a person, in fact there is no easy way to translate what buddha is, also what sutras are is more or less beyond any English translation and definitions

Malcolm wrote:
Silly.

microbodhi said:
How so

The intellectual ego function, ie i know everything i can explain everything within the mind thinks it has the capacity to explain and know the totality of everything, the mind has many short comings and is a poor instrument to explain and understand everything.

How long have the scholars and intellectuals been trying to explain what is the dharma and the meaning of the sutras, yet there is little evidence of their bodhi and experience, where they can only quote others experience or speak concepts, how many more posts does one need on a forum to keep going round and round in circles circulating the same old worn out opinions and speculation only obscuring the real essence

Buddha cannot be put into concepts, its beyond words, words limit what awakened being/consciousness is, the translations are a mess, one just has to choose which one they think is right or makes the most sense

Like Nemo says science now accepts that they only know 5% within that 5% is a human who thinks his mind has the capacity to understand the whole, this is a fundamental error and should be quite obvious.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, May 13th, 2021 at 9:11 AM
Title: Re: Israel/Gaza situation escalating
Content:
明安 Myoan said:
May they all be born in Amida Buddha's Pure Land.

Malcolm wrote:
Unlikely.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, May 13th, 2021 at 8:07 PM
Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
In every case you describe, it's up to the women to decide whether to end a pregnancy or not. Our approval or disapproval is irrelevant, the happiness of the husband is irrelevant, the right of an adult women over her own body is the only important issue her.

No one but she should have any say in the matter.

muni said:

And in order for that to occur, women must have the absolute right to choose for themselves whether it is appropriate to end an unwanted pregnancy.

I appreciate your care, Malcolm. And I agree in the many cases the woman becomes unwanted pregnant.

However there are different circumstances.

I have known a friend who liked so much charming men. She could not get enough of them. 5 times this resulted in pregnancy, 5 times an abortion. She spoke about like she was proud to can solve her problems.

A fellow was making a beautiful bed for his coming child, since his wife was pregnant. He was so happy to become father. But behind his back, his wife asked for an abortion.

There was a women desperate, she wanted to take care of the child in her womb but she could even not take care of herself. There was nobody to help her. Easy to give her the rights to decide for herself.

Therefore no general law or opinion can be the one for all, but depending on the circumstances avoiding as much as possible harm.

And if men can help, they should but at least not harm. Same for women. Respecting all, our nature has no gender.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 13th, 2021 at 10:03 PM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

Aemilius said:

is said in the sutras that a Buddha cannot appear in a world if the society is corrupt, if wrong views are the norm, (i.e. that there is no karma, no result of karma, no higher and lower planes of existence, no spiritual path, and no result of the path, i.e. no arhats)

Malcolm wrote:

This is a shravakayana perspective, and really applies only to supreme nirmanakayas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 14th, 2021 at 12:42 AM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

microbodhi said:

One could question how much thought plays a role in buddha dharma, people debate over translations, in ones true nature whatever that is there is no debate, i guess it passes times to translate things and some are necessary but that is more about traditions going from one culture to another. In India for example language, dress and culture changes every 15-20km yet reality is one and undivided and is only known through living traditions and absorbing it via experience this is true bhavana, it cant be translated, its to vast, reality is to vast to be explained and is only known through silence and shunya.

Samma Dhitti Samadrishti is not about translations, intellectual sectarian or religious view is not drishti, drishti is far more insightful and organic to our true nature. Insight is enough, if one has insight into reality without modification of views and conditions then its enough even if one calls themselves a buddhist or not, its more simple and profound than people want to give credit or perhaps insecurity or domination wants to make it to be more than what it is. One moment of insight is worth more than a dictionary of translated texts which sometimes gives a brief stimulation to the intellect and not a profound change in ones being.

Malcolm wrote:

There are two kinds of Dharma: text and realization. The former are necessary for the latter.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 14th, 2021 at 8:32 AM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

Pondera said:

All lives should be given a chance.

Malcolm wrote:

You can certainly feel that, but you have no arguments at all to bring against a women's choice to end an unwanted pregnancy that are not fundamentally religious. Religion Has no role in democratic governance in a secular society. In most modern nations, A women in these countries can choose to end a pregnancy or not, it's up to her.

Dharma and governance are different. The Buddha understood this, and in matters of law deferred to the state.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 14th, 2021 at 10:06 AM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

microbodhi said:

Anyone who has done a simple vipassana retreat will know directly that just observing the nature of mind is enough for insight and it is insight that leads to bodhi...

Malcolm wrote:

Even the historical Buddha first remembered the dharma he had heard in past lives, and then applied that insight in one session. So as I said, text always precedes realization and in this case there is no fault of infinite regression.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 14th, 2021 at 10:25 AM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

microbodhi said:

Anyone who has done a simple vipassana retreat will know directly that just observing the nature of mind is enough for insight and it is insight that leads to bodhi...

Malcolm wrote:

Even the historical Buddha first remembered the dharma he had heard in past lives, and then applied that insight in one session. So as I said, text always precedes realization and in this case there is no fault of infinite regression.

microbodhi said:

Was he reading at the time, did he remember a time in his past life when he was reading or writing texts, Malcolm no disrespect to you but i think your backing yourself into a corner here. Im not denying or have denied that shatras play an role in the dharma traditions, but bodhi is not preceded by texts or even dependant on it, that would be insight and insight is not intellectual or textual understanding, that is not samma dhitti. I thought this was obvious. Texts play a role in preservation or lineages and memory and what is more important than texts is oral or shabda pramanas, and those pramanas should lead to the mind being silent and empty of all views.

Malcolm wrote:

I gather you are not familiar with concept of oral texts. It's obvious that sutras and tantras are recorded buddhavacana.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 14th, 2021 at 10:29 AM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Reading and contemplating texts is an conceptual activity. putting into practice what is in them, and eventually experiencing realization is not. Believing that the texts themselves stop at the limits of intellectual knowledge is a strange position to take. All of Buddhism is in the beginning a conceptual activity, because we are samsaric beings living in concepts, time and space.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, the old MMK “without relying on the conventional...” etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 14th, 2021 at 7:54 PM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

Pondera said:

All lives should be given a chance.

Malcolm wrote:

You can certainly feel that, but you have no arguments at all to bring against a women's choice to end an unwanted pregnancy that are not fundamentally religious. Religion Has no role in democratic governance in a secular society. In most modern nations, A women in these countries can choose to end a pregnancy or not, it's up to her.

Dharma and governance are different. The Buddha understood this, and in matters of law deferred to the state.

Pondera said:

Certainly. She can do that. But there are other options. One could put the baby up for adoption.

I'm of the mind that this being growing inside of her is “meant to be” - and despite all the hardships it may endure - it deserves a right to live.

It is better to endure one's karma in a crappy life than to be eliminated before one is even born.

Malcolm wrote:

Good thing you are not in charge of women's bodies.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 14th, 2021 at 8:00 PM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

microbodhi said:

Was he reading at the time, did he remember a time in his past life when he was reading or writing texts, Malcom no disrespect to you but i think your backing yorself into a corner here. Im not denying or have denied that shatras play an role in the dharma traditions, but bodhi is not preceded by texts or even dependant on it, that would be insight and insight is not intellectual or textual understanding, that is not samma dhitti. I thought this was obvious. Texts play a role in preservation or lineages and memory and what is more important than texts is oral or shabda pramanas, and those pramanas should lead to the mind being silent and empty of all views.

Malcolm wrote:

I gather you are not familiar with concept of oral texts. It's obvious that sutras and tantras are recorded buddhavaana.

microbodhi said:

Oral transmissions is not the same as the texts or reading from texts as its done by most people, oral traditions is a living tradition , all shabda (sound) pramanas are from akash, kash means visible a is means without, akash is source of sound vak, they are invisible and is invisible to ordinary perception's...

Malcolm wrote:

Now you just making shit up.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 14th, 2021 at 9:48 PM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Do you believe a literal belief in the miracles in the sutras or at least the possibility of such miracles happening are conducive to an open mind that leads closer to liberation? Like say, circling the Buddha for thousands of kalpas, or the World-Honored One performing a miracle of picking up the entire multitude of Bodhisattvas in His hand to give them a Transference of His Enlightenment in the Lotus Sutra. There is reality, but what creates limits for us in this world? And how do you view the Pure Land of Holy Eagle Peak?

Malcolm wrote:

Beliefs are concepts. Concepts and buddhahood are mutually exclusive.

Gridrakuta is a place you can visit in India.

Crazywisdom said:

Termas happen. That's a fact.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, terms are revealed. That's what all Mahāyāna sūtras and tantras are, treasure revelations.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 14th, 2021 at 9:51 PM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

tkp67 said:

I never said he was dependent. I said he did not exist independently.

Malcolm wrote:

An entity that does not exist independently is dependent. So you just contradicted yourself. Bravo.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 14th, 2021 at 9:57 PM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

The most important thing is to have Compassion for others in all of these situations. What is a Buddhist without Compassion? If we continue on in such a manner where we always care for individuals who are on either side of this issue, as well as those struggling in hospitals and places where these procedures are done, they will feel Loved. And if they feel Loved, they will likely choose a path that is most suitable for them in the situation as opposed to acting out of fear, coercion, or pressure. If they themselves receive enough Compassion from someone else, they will make Compassionate choices, and what Buddhist would argue against a truly Compassionate choice, if it is truly that?

Malcolm wrote:

Compassion can be tricky.

Suppose there is a runaway train. You are standing at a switch on a railroad track, and on one branch there was a work party and the other just one person. If you don't throw the switch, everyone in the work party dies. If you do throw the switch, one person dies.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Trolley_problem

If you knew your pregnancy was going to result in Hitler, would you abort?

Further, all the pro-lifers here are arguing from the perspective that a zygote/fetus is a person. But this is really not clear at all. The generally accepted biological definition of "personhood" is viability, that is, abortion should be prohibited (other than in special cases) after a fetus reaches viability:

"Until the fetus is viable, any rights granted to it may come at the expense of the pregnant woman, simply because the fetus cannot survive except within the woman's body.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Beginning_of_human_personhood

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 14th, 2021 at 10:17 PM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

tkp67 said:

I never said he was dependent. I said he did not exist independently.

Malcolm wrote:

An entity that does not exist independently is dependent. So you just contradicted yourself. Bravo.

tkp67 said:

I hope this helps.

Malcolm wrote:

Stop being disingenuous and just admit you contradicted yourself. Any other answer is just the same kind of dissembling you engaged in here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 14th, 2021 at 10:54 PM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Termas happen. That's a fact.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, termas are revealed. That's what all Mahāyāna sūtras and tantras are, treasure revelations.

Crazywisdom said:

Right, so the revealings are not just stories and concepts

Malcolm wrote:

They are revelations that contain stories and concepts. And, with Mahāyāna sūtra and tantras, we do not actually know who revealed them. They are anonymous compositions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 14th, 2021 at 11:27 PM

Title: Re: Why is offering meritorious?

Content:

Hazel said:

Why does making offerings to the Buddha/gurus/etc. generate merit?

Malcolm wrote:

Because the object is superior. In other words, offerings to untainted objects produces more merit than offerings to tainted objects.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 14th, 2021 at 11:55 PM

Title: Re: Why is offering meritorious?

Content:

Hazel said:

Why does making offerings to the Buddha/gurus/etc. generate merit?

Malcolm wrote:

Because the object is superior. In other words, offerings to untainted objects produces more merit than offerings to tainted objects.

Hazel said:

But why is the offering meritorious in the first place? Independent of tainted/untainted.

Malcolm wrote:

Because an offering is motivated by a positive mind. "Offerings" which lack such motivation are actually demeritorious.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 14th, 2021 at 11:57 PM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

muni said:

The Great Castration Debate.

Malcolm wrote:

That would only be apropos if this thread were entitled "The Great Clitorectomy Debate, but an abortion is neither a castration nor a clitorectomy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 15th, 2021 at 1:53 AM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

We are meant to take them at face value that they were heard and said in the places they say and to whom.

Malcolm wrote:

Ok, you can take everything at face value if you like. That is your prerogative.

But do you really think thousands of monks can fit here?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 15th, 2021 at 1:58 AM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

SonamTashi said:

I think the idea that the sutras are either directly from the historical Buddha or are fiction is a false dichotomy.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, agreed. But they are still stories. We were not there. To claim we know for a fact that the what is reported in Mahāyāna Sūtras, or for that matter, even the Agamas, represent actual historical events is basically fanaticism, fundamentalism of the worst kind.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 15th, 2021 at 2:02 AM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

As Malcolm wrote, that's a non sequitur, but go for it, I suppose.

Malcolm wrote:

The fact is that very few people in this conversation have really given any serious thought to the ethical issues at hand. They are mostly just spewing knee-jerk religious dogmas, borrowing rhetoric from pro-life Christians, who have a one-lifetime view.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 15th, 2021 at 4:15 AM

Title: Re: Self and Other?

Content:

Tirisilex said:

What did the Buddha say on the relationship of self and other? I Googled It and all I get is Self and no self.

Malcolm wrote:

In what context?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 15th, 2021 at 4:31 AM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

Sādhaka said:

“However, if you have visited the site in present-day Rajgir, it is obvious that it is impossible for more than a few people to fit onto the summit. So, we have to understand the truth of these accounts at a different level, a level beyond the ordinary one confined by conventional notions of space and time.” — The Essence of the Heart Sutra

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, which means we not speaking about history, which is all about conventional notions of space and time. And this is precisely why claiming this or that Buddhist narrative is truly true, more true than someone else's narrative is complete bollocks.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 15th, 2021 at 5:22 AM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

Since many sutras are written as chronicles of actual events yet contain phrases to the effect of:

“Whoever repeats even a few lines of this sutra will benefit”

...I mean, that right there is an impossibility.

You can't have, “this is a story about someone and in that story he mentions referring to this story”.

Malcolm wrote:

Why not? Narratives are just narratives. They can have many layers.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 15th, 2021 at 5:42 AM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

Since many sutras are written as chronicles of actual events yet contain phrases to the effect of:

“Whoever repeats even a few lines of this sutra will benefit”

...I mean, that right there is an impossibility.

You can't have, “this is a story about someone and in that story he mentions referring to this story”.

Malcolm wrote:

Why not? Narratives are just narratives. They can have many layers.

PadmaVonSamba said:

Because you'd be referring to a story about the present but that story, itself, wouldn't exist until the future.

It would be like me saying “and then I replied to Malcom's comment and then he responded to it” while actually referring to the words I am typing now, before you even read them (much less reply)

Malcolm wrote:

Well, no it's more like saying, if you tell people about this medicine, they will benefit.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 15th, 2021 at 6:21 AM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

Zenny said:

Any ideas on why Siddhartha Guatama never wrote or left a book, nor his fellows?

Malcolm wrote:

Indians had not yet adopted writing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 15th, 2021 at 6:55 AM

Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction

Content:

Zenny said:

Any ideas on why Siddhartha Guatama never wrote or left a book, nor his fellows?

Malcolm wrote:
Indians had not yet adopted writing.

Zenny said:
So no books in India before Siddartha? No Vedas?

Malcolm wrote:
The Vedas are oral texts.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, May 15th, 2021 at 7:12 AM
Title: Re: So are Sutras really from the Buddha, or just fiction
Content:

Zenny said:
So no books in India before Siddartha? No Vedas?

Malcolm wrote:
The Vedas are oral texts.

Zenny said:
So your suggesting that the vedas didn't exist as books before Siddartha?
Bottom line, did Siddartha know what writing or books were? And if he did, why no books from him, or suggestions for a written record from his fellows?

Malcolm wrote:
There is no evidence of writing in India prior to the mid-third century BCE. The Buddha's parinirvana was around 407 BCE.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, May 15th, 2021 at 7:38 PM
Title: Re: What is the proof for anatman in tantra
Content:

Artziebetter1 said:
I have heard that the tantras promote anatman and momentariness thereof and that dolpopa misquoted the tantras to promote a self view. what is the biggest proof for anatman in the tantras and momentariness of the alaya therein? I don't want this to be a debate about whether prasangika is correct or shentong is correct I just want to know if there are any tantras that support the so called anatman/momentariness view and go against the permanent self view.

Malcolm wrote:
All of them.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 15th, 2021 at 10:44 PM

Title: Re: How has Practice benefited you?

Content:

Zenny said:

What are the tangible benefits you have experienced from your practice, and how has it helped you in your life and interactions with others?

Malcolm wrote:

Not really sure we are on the same page as to what "practice" is but, here it goes:

It has helped me understand that all compounded phenomena are impermanent; all contaminated phenomena are suffering; all phenomena lack identity; nirvana is peaceful.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 15th, 2021 at 11:16 PM

Title: Re: How has Practice benefited you?

Content:

Zenny said:

What are the tangible benefits you have experienced from your practice, and how has it helped you in your life and interactions with others?

Malcolm wrote:

Not really sure we are on the same page as to what "practice" is but, here it goes:

It has helped me understand that all compounded phenomena are impermanent; all contaminated phenomena are suffering; all phenomena lack identity; nirvana is peaceful.

Zenny said:

You have experienced nirvana? And how has practice helped your relations to others.

Malcolm wrote:

It led me to cut through hope and fear such as the hope for nirvana, fear of samsara; hope for acceptance, fear of rejection; and so on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 16th, 2021 at 12:08 AM

Title: Re: How has Practice benefited you?

Content:

Zenny said:

You have experienced nirvana? And how has practice helped your relations to others.

Malcolm wrote:

It led me to cut through hope and fear such as the hope for nirvana, fear of samsara; hope for acceptance, fear of rejection; and so on.

Zenny said:

OK. So you haven't experienced nirvana.

We're you born buddhist, as I'm trying to see how it improved your life from before and after, not just intellectually understanding buddhist concepts. Eg, are you happier, more peaceful, more sociable, more confident, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

Nirvana is cessation. I have experienced many cessations since rediscovering the Buddhist path in this life. Nirvana is not an all or nothing discovery.

All of the outcomes you list are mundane. There is no happiness in samsara.

The only outcome that matters personally is whether or not one has less afflictions. The only outcome that matters with regard to others is whether or not one is more compassionate. I would say that as a result of having met Buddhadharma for forty-four years ago, and having spend the past thirty years spending most of my time practicing and studying Buddhadharma, I am less afflicted, more compassionate, and have very little to worry about.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 16th, 2021 at 12:49 AM

Title: Re: How has Practice benefited you?

Content:

Zenny said:

OK. So these cessations, were they accompanied with happiness, satisfaction, etc?

Malcolm wrote:

Happiness and satisfaction have negative definitions. I am not ill, so I am well. I am not unhappy, so I am happy. I am not dissatisfied, so I am satisfied.

Zenny said:

Your response is very much couched in conceptual jargon. The concepts are vague. Why does less afflicted not mean happiness?

Malcolm wrote:

All words are concepts. If you understand the words, then you understand the concepts. I am happy and satisfied that I am not going to continue taking rebirth in samsara, that is the result of having reduced afflictions. But I am not sure that is the kind of happiness and satisfaction you are seeking.

Zenny said:

Sure,you said no happiness in samsara,but this implies some kind of robotic state. Surely practitioners should be happy,even joyful!?

Malcolm wrote:

No, it just means there is no happiness in samsara. Frankly, I don't think about happiness very much.

Zenny said:

Compassion, your meaning is somewhat vague as well.

Malcolm wrote:

Compassion is just the wish for others to be free of suffering and the causes of suffering. That's it.

Zenny said:

I don't doubt your practice has helped in some regards,but it's pretty conceptual from your online mannerisms.

Malcolm wrote:

This is an internet forum. All we have here are concepts and words.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 16th, 2021 at 1:11 AM

Title: Re: How has Practice benefited you?

Content:

Zenny said:

No happiness in life is just escapist.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it is just a fact.

Zenny said:

A belief inspired by fear.

Malcolm wrote:

It is not a belief. It is a direct perception. "Happiness" is just the suffering of change.

Zenny said:

Ergo,you want to be happy but you need the promise of a nirvanic state to feel safe. Fear of death simply. Fear of an unknown.

Malcolm wrote:

You sure spend a lot of time indulging in projections about people you don't know.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 16th, 2021 at 1:12 AM

Title: Re: How has Practice benefited you?

Content:

mabw said:

Can you elaborate on this? This is the goal of Buddhist practice, so if you have come to this certainty, I am interested to know what you mean. This is a sincere request, not a sarcastic remark

Malcolm wrote:

It is the outcome of studying and practicing Dzogchen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 16th, 2021 at 1:22 AM

Title: Re: How has Practice benefited you?

Content:

Zenny said:

No happiness in life is just escapist.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it is just a fact.

Zenny said:

A belief inspired by fear.

Malcolm wrote:

It is not a belief. It is a direct perception. "Happiness" is just the suffering of change.

Zenny said:

Ergo, you want to be happy but you need the promise of a nirvanic state to feel safe. Fear of death simply. Fear of an unknown.

Malcolm wrote:

You sure spend a lot of time indulging in projections about people you don't know.

Zenny said:

Many feel happiness now, that disproves your theory.

Malcolm wrote:

The "happiness" that foolish common people think they experience does not disprove the Buddha's observation that there is no happiness in samsara:

"All contaminated phenomena are suffering."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 16th, 2021 at 1:33 AM

Title: Re: How has Practice benefited you?

Content:

Zenny said:

In your own experience can you say happiness is not possible in this life?

Malcolm wrote:

It very much depends on what one means by happiness.

What do you mean by happiness?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 16th, 2021 at 1:45 AM

Title: Re: How has Practice benefited you?

Content:

Zenny said:

So, you are saying you know you are not going to be reborn in samsara?

Malcolm wrote:

Correct.

Zenny said:

So you are liberated according to your tradition?

Malcolm wrote:

Not yet.

Zenny said:

You have felt nirvana before death?

Malcolm wrote:

Nirvana is just a cessation. There is nothing to feel.

Zenny said:

I don't think other traditional buddhists would agree that is possible.

Malcolm wrote:

Stream entry is based on tasting nirvana.

Zenny said:
Enlightened. A buddha?

Malcolm wrote:
Sometimes.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, May 16th, 2021 at 1:46 AM
Title: Re: How has Practice benefited you?
Content:
Zenny said:
In your own experience can you say happiness is not possible in this life?

Malcolm wrote:
It very much depends on what one means by happiness.

What do you mean by happiness?

Zenny said:
A feeling of joy,satisfaction,shared exuberance,confidence,etc
I'm sure you've experienced those.

Malcolm wrote:
Those feelings things are impermanent, contaminated, so not happiness. Suffering of change.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, May 16th, 2021 at 1:52 AM
Title: Re: How has Practice benefited you?
Content:

Zenny said:
Nothing to feel? How do you know you experienced it then?

Malcolm wrote:
It is a question of what I don't experience now and did experience once.

Zenny said:
Are you an arhat?

Malcolm wrote:
No, and people who claim they are are deluded.

Zenny said:

What of those traditions that speak of enlightenment being practice, and that buddha nature is innate?

Malcolm wrote:

What about them?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 16th, 2021 at 2:04 AM

Title: Re: How has Practice benefited you?

Content:

Zenny said:

Is your experience of nirvana permanent?

Malcolm wrote:

Whatever has ceased in my continuum has ceased. Cessations are the absence of causes for further arisings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 16th, 2021 at 2:06 AM

Title: Re: How has Practice benefited you?

Content:

Zenny said:

So how do you know you are a non returner?

Malcolm wrote:

I am confident of liberation.

Zenny said:

If people are already possessed of buddha nature then why the rebirth?

Malcolm wrote:

What do you imagine buddhanature is?

Zenny said:

Why is your nirvana not permanent?

Malcolm wrote:

I already answered this.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 16th, 2021 at 9:03 AM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

muni said:

Well, of course there are others. But I don't believe the feelings of a minority should be used as a cudgel to restrict the reproductive rights of the majority. No one is forcing women to have abortions that they don't want; the question is whether women who do want abortions should be allowed to have them. I believe they should.

I see.

Here men are saying that women should be allowed to decide. Women are not all having same rights in this world and this is by delusion, by identification by appearances. And so we have less right to speak.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, and thus why being pro-choice is a bedrock of feminist values.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 16th, 2021 at 9:47 AM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This issue just isn't about you or your preferences.

Pondera said:

Under what conditions does sperm reach the uterus when a man masturbates to pornography (or what have you)?

What are the chances that the haploid gametes released during masturbation will reach an ovum? Keep in mind that haploid gametes are not living.

That being said; I think that masturbation is a poor use of time.

PeterC said:

When the man chooses not to masturbate but instead conserves his semen for sex. The cells then have the potential to become life. So by your argument, that potential should be protected

Pondera said:

Okay. So instead of masturbation you have indicated sexual intercourse.

Without preventative measures, any man and woman engaging in sexual intercourse should not be surprised if the woman becomes pregnant. Nor should it be their choice to abort the fetus because it's an "inconvenience" for them.

If men and women choose to have sexual intercourse with out contraception, they should be prepared for the consequences.

I have nothing against masturbation; just as (in the same way) I have nothing against a woman having a period each month.

I have nothing against contraception. My only suggestion is that if a pregnancy occurs - then one should consider the life form brewing within. And one should consider it's right to live.

I understand that in practice abortions happen for many reasons. Unwanted pregnancies happen all the time. The development of the fetus (or embryo) in some cases is within such a short time frame that the designation of "life" is debatable. So don't straw man me here. I have a very reasonable point of view that only slightly verges on "the right to live". And for that I should be vilified?

So, look. I'm not arguing against your belief that a woman has a right to decide whether she brings an fetus to term or not. That is her right.

I'm saying that, as it was in the case of my own birth, a woman might want to consider that the fetus has a right to life - however inconvenient the circumstances might be.

If my father had his way, my life would have been aborted. My mother chose to have me, lived as a single mother, raised me into the adult I am now. I have had my share of crappy moments in life - but overall I am happy to be alive. I am happy that I was given the chance to live. My mother is proud of the person I have become.

That being said; I think masturbation is a waste of time and resources. It is a habit of the young. It is a habit of this generation who has access to pornography at the touch of a button. Watching pornography increases your testosterone levels by 35%. That elevation in testosterone drives you to find a sexual outlet as fast as you can. And obviously, we all now how that ends.

Do the sewage system a favour and save your testosterone for a better purpose.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 16th, 2021 at 8:24 PM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

Pondera said:

If it's not about preference, then what is it about?

Malcolm wrote:

It's not about YOU and YOUR preferences.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 16th, 2021 at 8:26 PM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

PeterC said:

When the man chooses not to masturbate but instead conserves his semen for sex. The cells then have the potential to become life. So by your argument, that potential should be protected

Könchok Chödrak said:

This is actually a fun argument. What about that time you walked by that hot girl and didn't get with her....

Well...

I guess the implication of the sadder and more difficult portion of the argument is whether and when new life has been created towards the womb...

Malcolm wrote:

There is no such thing as new "life.," again, that is a Christian pro-life talking point.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 16th, 2021 at 8:32 PM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

PeterC said:

If my father had his way, my life would have been aborted. My mother chose to have me, lived as a single mother, raised me into the adult I am now. I have had my share of crappy moments in life - but overall I am happy to be alive. I am happy that I was given the chance to live. My mother is proud of the person I have become.

The fact that someone else chooses to terminate has absolutely nothing to do with you, it is in now way a judgment or comment on you or your parents decisions. It's completely separate and distinct.

Malcolm wrote:

Not only that, if his mother had chose to end the pregnancy, it still would have nothing to do with him, because a) a fetus is not a person and b) if one has the karmic traces to be reborn a human being it's gong to happen anyway.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 16th, 2021 at 10:18 PM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

PeterC said:

The fact that someone else chooses to terminate has absolutely nothing to do with you, it is in now way a judgment or comment on you or your parents decisions. It's completely separate and distinct.

Malcolm wrote:

Not only that, if his mother had chose to end the pregnancy, it still would have nothing to do with him, because a) a fetus is not a person and b) if one has the karmic traces to be reborn a human being it's gong to happen anyway.

tkp67 said:

doesn't this imply the perpetuation of suffering through a perpetuation of rebirths due to suffering?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, suffering is perpetuated through rebirths, the cause of suffering (vipaka) is karma, and the cause of karma is affliction. However, if a sentient being has activated the traces of affliction to be reborn in the human realm, they will be reborn a human being, if they do not, then they cannot ever be born a human being until they activate those traces.

As long as there is birth in the three realms, there is suffering. This is axiomatic in Buddhadharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 16th, 2021 at 10:40 PM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

tkp67 said:

is the assumption that each opportunity for rebirth and the conditions of those specific existences is identical presumptuous and deterministic? Or is there a teaching that details such things?

Thank you in advance.

Malcolm wrote:

It is not deterministic, but if the being has the karma to be born into a cakravartin family, they will never be born in a family of farmers, and vice versa. This is based on their own actions in past lives.

Further, if a being has the throwing karma to be reborn in the human realm, they will not be reborn elsewhere, even if aborted, because a fetus cannot create new karma which would interfere with a human rebirth, and the throwing karma will still be active.

For this reason, Buddhists should not get all worked up about abortion the way Christians do, because we accept rebirth and karma, and they do not. They use language like "a new life," "innocence," etc., because they have a one and done view of birth. One is only born once, with a soul given to one by God, and when one dies one ultimately goes either to heaven or hell forever.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 16th, 2021 at 10:45 PM

Title: Re: Religious/Philosophy Education

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Philosophy (of the non-religious variety) was available a little in high school if you were a dedicated student, took the right literature classes maybe, but certainly not emphasized. I had a few English classes such as Crime and Punishment that were closest thing you would to an ethics class or something at that level of education.

mabw said:

Are students exposed to theories on epistemology, ontology or Greek philosophy at school?

Malcolm wrote:

Only in private schools, for the most part.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 17th, 2021 at 1:39 AM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

reiun said:

[I believe that 1. ability of the fetus to experience physical pain, and/or 2. ability to experience consciousness, are the criteria where a line may be drawn.

Malcolm wrote:

19 weeks then.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 17th, 2021 at 4:48 AM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

tkp67 said:

is the assumption that each opportunity for rebirth and the conditions of those specific existences is identical presumptuous and deterministic? Or is there a teaching that details such things?

Thank you in advance.

Malcolm wrote:

It is not deterministic, but if the being has the karma to be born into a cakravartin family, they will never be born in a family of farmers, and vice versa. This is based on their own actions in past lives.

Further, if a being has the throwing karma to be reborn in the human realm, they will not be reborn elsewhere, even if aborted, because a fetus cannot create new karma which would interfere with a human rebirth, and the throwing karma will still be active.

tkp67 said:

Yet in the degenerate age these designations don't carry the same benefits in regards to liberation do they?

Malcolm wrote:

I don't understand what you mean.

tkp67 said:

And if all these realms...

Malcolm wrote:

What realms?

tkp67 said:

isn't aborting prolonging suffering either way while potentially accumulating negative karma for others?

Malcolm wrote:

That is a religious concern, not a secular concern.

tkp67 said:

For this reason, Buddhists should not get all worked up about abortion the way Christians do, because we accept rebirth and karma, and they do not. They use language like "a new life," "innocence," etc., because they have a one and done view of birth. One is only born once, with a soul given to one by God, and when one dies one ultimately goes either to heaven or hell forever.

This is a straw man argument that draws contrast through belief that isn't represented here.

Malcolm wrote:

Many Buddhists who take a pro-life argument adopt Christian talking points and buy into the narrative proposed by a non-Buddhist religious group. All they can do is point to prohibitions against abortion in the Vinaya.

But all this is irrelevant to the women's reproductive rights issue at hand. The former is a religious issue. The latter is a secular issue. I personally favor keeping religion and the state completely and totally separate. I am completely opposed to legislating any religious viewpoint into law. It annoys me no end that our national motto was changed from "E Pluribus Unum" to "In God We Trust" during the Red Scare of the 1950's.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 17th, 2021 at 4:50 AM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

There is no such thing as new "life," again, that is a Christian pro-life talking point.

Könchok Chödrak said:

What about the concept of impermanence and rebirth: born again, and again, and again... can't someone refresh their life in such a way? What is the purpose of rebirth then if it isn't a certain type of "new life"?

Malcolm wrote:

It is not a new life. The reproductive tissues which are implanted on the wall of the womb are not new in any sense. The consciousness that seeks rebirth is not new either. There is no purpose to rebirth. It's a blind process which is suffering from beginning to end.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 17th, 2021 at 7:30 AM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Can that baby feel before fully formed, based on the life within the body?

Malcolm wrote:

Nothing, until the 19th week.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 17th, 2021 at 9:38 AM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

tkp67 said:

Yet in the degenerate age these designations don't carry the same benefits in regards to liberation do they?

Malcolm wrote:

I don't understand what you mean.

tkp67 said:

The value of birth family is identical in all ages?

Malcolm wrote:

There are always families of higher and lower social status.

tkp67 said:

The buddhist realms as referenced by your message above.

Malcolm wrote:

I was referring solely to birth as a human being, not a hell being, preta, animal, asura, or deva.

tkp67 said:

Buddhists shouldn't be concerned with prolonging suffering and the consequence of creating negative karma? This is a religious concern only?

Malcolm wrote:

"Karma" is a religious framework. Even the Buddhist definition of suffering is couched in a religious framework that is not obvious to nonBuddhists.

tkp67 said:

If the bodhisattva vow is treated as a play won't the results be nothing short of dramatic?

Malcolm wrote:

This is irrelevant to the question at hand: women's reproductive rights.

My personal feelings about abortion do not affect my commitment to Democracy, secular government, and reproductive rights for women. This is why I reject religious interpretations of abortion as being a valid criteria for discussing this issue. Religion is just a bunch of shit we believe because we choose to.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 17th, 2021 at 10:26 AM

Title: Re: The Great Abortion Debate

Content:

tkp67 said:

This is exactly what the buddha taught AND expressed in his lifetime.

Women's rights without metta is a bit unreasonably sterile. YMMV.

Malcolm wrote:

What you think the Buddha taught has no bearing on women's reproductive rights.

Your opinions simply don't matter. If you don't want to have an abortion, don't have one the next time you get pregnant. But don't get in the way of other people's choice to end unwanted pregnancies.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 17th, 2021 at 8:13 PM

Title: Re: Can the mind only hold a single object at a time?

Content:

fckw said:

Yes, because that would be the eternalist position all Buddhists throughout the world reject. Unless you talk about "ground" in the context of Mahamudra or Dzogchen, which is not a "thing" in itself.

Malcolm wrote:

The basis is just one's own unfabricated mind. Indeed, it is not a thing in itself, a substratum, etc. these misconceptions come about from viewing such Buddhist ideas through a Western philosophical lens.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 17th, 2021 at 11:32 PM

Title: Re: is buddhist an exclusivist religion?

Content:

Queequeg said:

Dalai Lama says to people, stick with your grandmother's religion.

Malcolm wrote:

While HHDL discourages "conversion," he also stated that if one really feels connected with Dharma, there is no problem at all in taking refuge, etc., because he recognizes there are many Westerners who have past life connections with the Dharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 17th, 2021 at 11:36 PM

Title: Re: Buddhist marriages

Content:

mabw said:

Is anyone aware of the earliest Buddhist marriage recorded?

Malcolm wrote:

This is a modern idea. There are married Buddhists, but there has never been a "Buddhist" wedding ceremony until the last century.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 17th, 2021 at 11:41 PM

Title: Re: is buddhist an exclusivist religion?

Content:

Queequeg said:

Dalai Lama says to people, stick with your grandmother's religion.

Malcolm wrote:

While HHDL discourages "conversion," he also stated that if one really feels connected with Dharma, there is no problem at all in taking refuge, etc., because he recognizes there are many Westerners who have past life connections with the Dharma.

Queequeg said:

Yes. I just saw a talk with Bob Thurman and he commented on that and asking HHDL about his refuge.

I think that advice is in line with the long standing Buddhist sensibility that the sangha should not impose on the community that hosts them. Its a bad look if the sons of householders are actively recruited, etc. The sangha got enough grief for just passively inspiring the sons of householders to abandon home and join the itinerant drop outs.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct. We do not evangelize. Those Buddhists who think they should evangelize the Dharma are in error. We promote the Dharma through example, not through conversion and trying to convince people of something.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 17th, 2021 at 11:55 PM

Title: No tathāgatagarbha according this person

Content:

ronnymarsh said:

As, according to this understanding, we are living in the End of Dharma Era, this means that we, who were born at that time, are NOT earth bodhisattvas, are NOT endowed with the innate Buddha nature (tathagatagarbha), and do NOT have relationship with Shakyamuni.

Malcolm wrote:

This is the strangest thing I have ever seen in my entire life.

One, this assertion makes the Buddha a liar. In the Tibetan translation of the Nirvana sūtra translated from Sanskrit, in three separate places the Buddha states:

"Tathāgtagarbha exists in all sentient beings."

In the Tibetan translation of the Nirvana sūtra from Chinese, it says 10 times:

"Buddhanature exists in all sentient beings."

There is no statement in any sūtra that claims, "Tathāgtagarbha exists in all sentient beings, except for those born after such and such a date."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 18th, 2021 at 12:32 AM

Title: Re: is buddhist an exclusivist religion?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Those Buddhists who think they should evangelize the Dharma are in error. We promote the Dharma through example, not through conversion and trying to convince people of something.

Queequeg said:

WWBD.

I think the Buddha's conversation with Brahma after his enlightenment guides Buddhists on whether the Dharma should be shared openly or not: the Dharma should be shared openly. I think that is further modified by the account of Anathapindika's death bed conversation with Sariputra where Sariputra taught him the actual teachings for the first time (not just encouragement to cultivate the Brahma Viharas, generosity, etc.), prompting Anathapindika to ask that these teachings not be withheld from lay people.

The question is how far one can go in sharing - only passively? Or can one reach out to another to suggest a better way to live? There are mentions in the sutras of the benefit that accrues to a person who inspires another to go and listen to teachings, "Come, friend, let's go listen to this teacher."

Clearly, trying to get people to take refuge to notch the numbers is stupid and pointless.

Malcolm wrote:

If people are interested, then we share what we know. If they are not interested, than we don't. It is that simple.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 18th, 2021 at 12:47 AM

Title: Re: How Nichiren Shonin could be the Eternal Buddha

Content:

Minobu said:

So at first there was the Dharmakaya from which sentients became enlightened to and then attained Buddhahood.

Malcolm wrote:

First there is reality, suchness, dharmatā, śūnyatā, etc. The realization of that reality is called "dharmakāya." When dharmakāya is realized, then the rūpakāyas can manifest. Dharmakāya isn't a thing, it is a realization.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 18th, 2021 at 12:49 AM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

Shotenzenjin said:

I've read the lotus Sutra. And chant it

Agree regarding evolving species. Shucks I was kinda liking the idea of an alien Buddha...

Malcolm wrote:

"Human" does not necessarily means "looks like homo sapiens." But it is hard for us to imagine it otherwise. "Human" can also mean 8 foot tall, four-armed, furry, blue beings with wings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 18th, 2021 at 3:47 AM

Title: Re: No tathāgatagarbha according this person

Content:

LastLegend said:

The seed as a cause leading towards seeing nature because we have been veiled for so long. A seed...through different interactions. There is not an only way to spread the seed.

Read a Sutra, a line from Mahaprajnaparamita Sutra, recite a past Buddha's name, see a vow of a particular Buddha, made offerings to Buddhas, etc..those are seeds.

Queequeg said:

This. The person quoted is probably speaking from a Nichiren perspective (didn't read that linked wall of text). Its not denying universal buddhanature, but the necessity of having it pointed out. The idea is that those who appear in the degenerate age have weak or non-existent connection to Dharma. For Nichirenists, it's the title of the Lotus Sutra that is the seed and means by which one becomes aware of Buddhahood. They are NOT endowed with the innate Buddha nature (tathāgatagarbha)

Malcolm wrote:

Seems like a pretty straightforward, and strange, claim to me.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 18th, 2021 at 3:50 AM

Title: Re: No tathāgatagarbha according to this person

Content:

tkp67 said:

Since the LS and Nichiren are clear on the matter I would assume it is a linguistic misunderstanding.

Malcolm wrote:

Not mine. I read English pretty well.

tkp67 said:

I am going to go on a limb as saying innate here doesn't just mean inherent but inherently manifest opposed to inherently latent.

Malcolm wrote:

Leaving aside for the moment the question of what tathāgatagarbha actually refers to, tathāgatagarbha is latent, not manifest, until buddhahood. It is only in buddhahood that tathāgatagarbha is actualized as the dharmakāya of the buddhas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 18th, 2021 at 3:52 AM

Title: Re: How Nichiren Shonin could be the Eternal Buddha

Content:

Minobu said:

So at first there was the Dharmakaya from which sentient beings became enlightened to and then attained Buddhahood.

Malcolm wrote:

First there is reality, suchness, dharmatā, śūnyatā, etc. The realization of that reality is called "dharmakāya." When dharmakāya is realized, then the rūpakāyas can manifest. Dharmakāya isn't a thing, it is a realization.

Minobu said:

I'm talking about the Dharmakaya Body that permeates all of Samsara.

Malcolm wrote:

Right, that refers to śūnyatā, emptiness. Since everything is empty, we can say that the reality buddhas realize pervades everything.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 18th, 2021 at 4:06 AM

Title: Re: No tathāgatagarbha according this person

Content:

tkp67 said:

Keeping to simple terms and understanding Nichiren sought to connect those to the dharma who had no connection otherwise.

Malcolm wrote:

Everyone in Japan was a Buddhist in the 13th century, every one was connected with the Dharma. So I am not sure what you are getting at.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 18th, 2021 at 4:13 AM

Title: Re: "Realms"

Content:

mansurhirbi87 said:

i'd like to know the origin (where in the sutras or great commentators) of the ten realms and how Tiantai got his conclusions about them.

i made a search and it's curious that something so basic in Nichiren and Tiantai buddhism cannot be traced

jake said:

I thought this was common in all Mahayana traditions, is it only East Asian?

Malcolm wrote:

It is only an East Asian thing.

In Indo-Tibetan Buddhism what is discussed are six realms and three realms. Āryas by definition belong to either the desire realm (human realm) or the form realm (the five pure abodes), there are no āryas in the formless realm.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 18th, 2021 at 4:17 AM

Title: Re: No tathāgatagarbha according this person

Content:

tkp67 said:

Keeping to simple terms and understanding Nichiren sought to connect those to the dharma who had no connection otherwise.

Malcolm wrote:

Everyone in Japan was a Buddhist in the 13th century, every one was connected with the Dharma. So I am not sure what you are getting at.

tkp67 said:

It was obfuscated because they held the teachings in contest. If I understand correctly Nichiren saw this as a sign the dharma was counterfeit in accordance to the LS. This is what motivated his decision to propagate it.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, but Nichiren's criteria is very narrow because of his intense partisan attitude. People did not take issue with Nichiren just for shits and giggles.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 18th, 2021 at 4:23 AM

Title: Re: No tathāgatagarbha according this person

Content:

tkp67 said:

Keeping to simple terms and understanding Nichiren sought to connect those to the dharma who had no connection otherwise.

Malcolm wrote:

Everyone in Japan was a Buddhist in the 13th century, every one was connected with the Dharma. So I am not sure what you are getting at.

Queequeg said:

No. It was thought to be the Degenerate Age so it was thought that the people appearing had no connection to Shakyamuni and could not benefit from his teachings.

This is the basis for Nichiren and Japanese Pure Land:

Nichiren - people appearing have no connection to Dharma and so a connection must be planted.

Pure Land - people appearing have no connection to Dharma and so aspiration for birth in Sukhavati through the power of Amida's vow is the easiest (only realistic) path.

Malcolm wrote:

Ok, but this ignores the fact that Rinzai Zen would become the most widespread school in Japan by the 13th century; just as Chan, during the 13th century, was the most widespread school in China. So this pessimism may have infected portions of the Buddhist population, but it by no means was the point of view of everyone.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 18th, 2021 at 4:38 AM

Title: Re: No tathāgatagarbha according this person

Content:

Queequeg said:

No. It was thought to be the Degenerate Age so it was thought that the people appearing had no connection to Shakyamuni and could not benefit from his teachings.

This is the basis for Nichiren and Japanese Pure Land:

Nichiren - people appearing have no connection to Dharma and so a connection must be planted.

Pure Land - people appearing have no connection to Dharma and so aspiration for birth in Sukhavati through the power of Amida's vow is the easiest (only realistic) path.

Malcolm wrote:

Ok, but this ignores the fact that Rinzai Zen would become the most widespread school in Japan by the 13th century; just as Chan, during the 13th century, was the most widespread school in China. So this pessimism may have infected portions of the Buddhist population, but it by no means was the point of view of everyone.

Queequeg said:

I don't think that Rinzai was ever the most widespread school in Japan. It received patronage from the samurai class and so had lots of nice temples built, but common folk were chanting the nembutsu and aspiring for rebirth in Sukhavati, overwhelmingly.

Malcolm wrote:

Apparently, from my reading, during the Muromachi period, Rinzai was quite dominant. But I am not an expert in Japanese history, not even remotely.

Apart from Nichirenistas, all Mahāyānis aspire for birth in Sukhavati. It's baked in.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 18th, 2021 at 4:50 AM

Title: Re: No tathāgatagarbha according this person

Content:

Queequeg said:

As for who was "infected" with Mappo thought, pretty much the entire literate Japanese world, and everyone tuned into the literate people. It was taken pretty seriously by a lot of people throughout the Heian period. The hand wringing was widespread in the Heian period and became the lens through which to view the natural disasters, political strife and Mongol invasions in the centuries that followed, especially the Kamakura period. It was like a pall that hung over Japan for centuries. From the late Heian period, they thought they were coming to the end of the world and the disorder that started in the mid and late Heian periods through the 16th c. - just seemed to confirm this. Its a big part of where this nostalgic romanticism in Japanese culture comes from - cherry blossoms and kinzuki, and wabi sabi, and all that.

Malcolm wrote:

This idea of the age of the five degenerations dominated Tibetan Buddhist thinking in the 13th century, and much before, all the way back to the Yarlung period (625-840), and still does.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 18th, 2021 at 7:51 AM

Title: Re: No tathāgatagarbha according this person

Content:

Queequeg said:

As for who was "infected" with Mappo thought, pretty much the entire literate Japanese world, and everyone tuned into the literate people. It was taken pretty seriously by a lot of people throughout the Heian period. The hand wringing was widespread in the Heian period and became the lens through which to view the natural disasters, political strife and Mongol invasions in the centuries that followed, especially the Kamakura period. It was like a pall that hung over Japan for centuries. From the late Heian period, they thought they were coming to the end of the world and the disorder that started in the mid and late Heian periods through the 16th c. - just seemed to confirm this. Its a big part of where this nostalgic romanticism in Japanese culture comes from - cherry blossoms and kinzuki, and wabi sabi, and all that.

Malcolm wrote:

This idea of the age of the five degenerations dominated Tibetan Buddhist thinking in the 13th century, and much before, all the way back to the Yarlung period (625-840), and still does.

jake said:

Thanks both, I've enjoyed the discussion. I've yet to really encounter any writings in Shingon on Mappo. It would seem to run contrary to one of the key ideas of Kukai, or at least how I understand it, that all of existence is the preaching of the Dharma by Mahavairocana. I don't know how it is considered in Tendai?

Malcolm wrote:

It's quite present in Esoteric Buddhist texts such as the Manjushri mule Kalpa, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 18th, 2021 at 8:50 AM

Title: Re: No tathāgatagarbha according this person

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

As a contrast, Eihei Dogen, founder of Japanese Soto Zen, <https://dogeninstitute.wordpress.com/2017/08/27/attain-the-way/> not only the idea that it was useless to practice during Mappo, but the idea of Mappo itself:

In Shobogenzo Zuimonki, he acknowledged that many people believed in the age of the Last Dharma, saying, “Many people in the secular world say, ‘Although I have aspiration to study the Way, the world is in the age of the Last Dharma. People’s quality has been declining and I have only inferior capabilities. I cannot bear to practice being in accordance with the Dharma. I would like to follow an easier way which is suitable to me, to just make a connection [with the Buddha], and expect to attain realization in a future lifetime.’”

And Dogen expressed his counter-argument:

“Now, I say that this saying is totally wrong. In the Buddha Dharma, distinguishing the three periods of time — the age of True Dharma, Semblance Dharma, and Last Dharma — is only a temporary expedient. The genuine teaching of the Way is not like this. When we practice [following the teaching], all of us should be able to attain [the Way]. Monks while [Shakyamuni] was alive were not necessarily superior. There were some monks who had incredibly despicable minds and who were inferior in capacity. The Buddha set forth various kinds of precepts for the sake of bad people and inferior people. Each and every human being has the possibility [to clarify] the Dharma. Do not think that you are not a vessel. When we practice in accordance [with the Dharma], all of us should be able to attain [the Way]. Since we already have a mind, we can distinguish between good and bad. Since we have hands and feet, we don’t lack anything for doing gassho and walking. In practicing the Buddha Dharma, we should not be concerned with the quality [of people]. All beings within the human realm are all vessels [of the Buddha Dharma].

Malcolm wrote:

I am on Dogen’s side.

Honestly, of what I have read of Dogen, Nichiren, Honen, and Shinran, Dogen is by far the most profound writer, followed by Honen, then Shinran, with Nichiren coming in last.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 18th, 2021 at 9:30 AM

Title: Re: No tathāgatagarbha according this person

Content:

narhwal90 said:

Speaking as a long-time and continuing Nichiren follower, I agree that Dogen is considerably more profound. Despite his frequently oblique and puzzling language, there is a more straightforward and thorough presentation of subtlety. I would say Nichiren is at his best when he is not contorting established doctrine around his own practice. It may be those moments are not profound, but something simpler. But that is my own projection speaking.

Malcolm wrote:

The one passage that endeared me to Honen was his observation that no leaf he could visualize in Sukhavati was more beautiful or perfect than a leaf on a tree of Hieizan.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 18th, 2021 at 6:51 PM

Title: Re: is buddhist an exclusivist religion?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

About 60 million Japanese people identify as "both Shinto and Buddhist." They have been doing so in one form or another for almost 1500 years.

It's rather dismissive to say they aren't "real" Buddhists.

Shakyamuni Buddha also states in one of the Ksitigarbha Sutras (and probably elsewhere) that he has appeared as numerous things to reach sentient beings, from "pools of water" to "Gods" and "Brahmins" (I think this last one is included in the list). Perhaps in some cases, phenomena of other religions are upaya of the Buddha...

Malcolm wrote:

The issue is refuge. Do many Japanese people take refuge in Shinto deities like Amaterasu-no-kami? Some do, but they are not Buddhists.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 18th, 2021 at 8:39 PM

Title: Re: The experience of anatta.

Content:

tkp67 said:

I think that while self might be really prevalent in some people it can be more subtle in others. Then the cliché of a person being selfless to a fault comes to mind. Can someone lack a "discernible" self by being conditioned to undervalue their own existence for the sake of others?

This would seem to explain why the various traditions have different means for understanding and measuring anatta.

Is there a danger of being overly confident in a stage of anatta where regression is still possible? Can a practitioner become satisfied with the stage of entry and due to this avoid seeking further progression?

Zenny said:

Could you clarify what is meant by being overly confident in a stage of anatta?

Malcolm wrote:

One cannot experience the absence of the something that has never existed. All one can do is recognize that there never has been a self, and understand ones experience of a self is a nominal designation upon the aggregates.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 18th, 2021 at 9:40 PM

Title: Re: The experience of anatta.

Content:

Zenny said:

And why do aggregates always belong to one person at a time?

Malcolm wrote:

They do not belong to a person, also "person" is just a nominal designation applied to the aggregates.

An individual's aggregates are individual because the addictive aggregates (upadana skandhas) are appropriated by an afflicted consciousness under the delusion of a self. When that consciousness is free from delusion of a self, it ceases to appropriate aggregates because they are no longer addictive. For example, when the urge to smoke tobacco ceases, tobacco is no longer addictive.

The purpose of the teaching of the five aggregates is to show that there is no self, since no self can be found in any one of the aggregates, in all of them together, or separate from them.

If you wish to truly understand Buddhadharma, you should begin with Abhidharma, and study it with proper guidance.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 18th, 2021 at 9:41 PM

Title: Re: The experience of anatta.

Content:

Zenny said:

Why is the "realisation" always individual?

Malcolm wrote:

Mind streams are distinct and unique, this is axiomatic in Buddhadharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 18th, 2021 at 11:12 PM

Title: Re: How Nichiren Shonin could be the Eternal Buddha

Content:

Minobu said:

I'm saying that before there was a Buddha who earned the Three Bodies there was only a Dhamrakaya Body, an actual Entity people referred to as the Primordial Buddha.

Malcolm wrote:

There was never a time when there were no buddhas, just as there was never a time when there were no sentient beings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 18th, 2021 at 11:56 PM

Title: Re: Can the mind only hold a single object at a time?

Content:

fckw said:

There are really only 3 basic positions that I personally know of. What I'm saying is not so much a philosophical description (there might exist many more detailed philosophical descriptions) but rather an empirical, i.e. based on what you actually "perceive" during mind training.

In the Theravada schools mind events arise in succession, i.e. they are discrete and there is no continuity among them. Each mind moment has its own consciousness. The idea of a "stream" is imputed in retrospective, as has been pointed out above.

In certain Hindu schools such as Patanjali Yogasutras mind itself is a continuum only, i.e. one single "amorphous mind mass" continuously transmuting into just the next form. Here, it cannot be said that the mind holds a single object at a time, because according to this view there really are no distinct mind moments holding objects at all. It's one single, eternal, ever changing mind moment, with one single ever-changing object, so to say. (Needless to say that Buddhist practitioners typically are not familiar with corresponding meditative practices and would reject this view, as it is exclusively "Hindu".)

Malcolm wrote:

Purusha is eternal and static. Prakriti undergoes transformations but not Purusha—it is a passive, eternal witness and when one attains kaivalya one no longer bothers with prakriti's transformations.

fckw said:

What both the Theravada Vipassana and Patanjali Yogasutra system of practice have in common is that neither has practices to reach beyond time and space.

In the dzogchen/mahamudra school the practice goes beyond time (and space), so to say. Therefore, the idea of a succession in the sense of a stream of mind moments or one "mind mass transmorphing continuously" does not apply. Mind moments, as they arise, can by definition not be in succession.

Malcolm wrote:

Also not true. Dzogchen does not negate momentariness, for example in the Self-Arisen Vidyā Tantra:

When there is no movement in the mind, the essence of a single moment of consciousness is said to be momentarily without concepts.

Or the commentary on the Tantra Without Syllables:

Since those appearances were recognized as one's own appearances,
(1) there are no stages and paths to traverse, (2) there is no accomplishment through effort, and (3) [those appearances] revert automatically in three moments into the original basis.

Or the commentary on the Blazing Lamp:

...after a person of the highest capacity exhausts the vāyu of the karma of concepts, the first bardo is made a momentary object, and [94b] one attains buddhahood in three moments.

fckw said:

It's one of the big jokes about all those systems that they try to impress you with long and highly elaborated philosophical treatises, and when you do some digging you realize that they are all full of logical holes. For example, positing something that cannot by definition be derived logically from anything.

Malcolm wrote:

This represents a fault in your understanding, not a fault in Dzogchen teachings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 19th, 2021 at 12:06 AM

Title: Re: The experience of anatta.

Content:

Zenny said:

All these explanations presume there is no self in the first place.

Malcolm wrote:

No, they don't. They are post-analytical deductions.

Zenny said:

Dialectics doesn't change the fact pain is real and experienced by an individual who is real. Or are humans not real either?

Malcolm wrote:

"Human" is a designation made upon some parts, like "car," "table," etc.

This real individual, where does it exist? In the body? In what part of the body? etc. You have to examine these things yourself. If you do this examination in good faith, you will discover in your personal experience that no self exists which is anything other than a conventional designation. But if you are not willing to do with work...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 19th, 2021 at 12:19 AM

Title: Re: is buddhist an exclusivist religion?

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

With respect, Malcolm, I think that's a false equivalence.

As far as I know, no-one "takes refuge" in Shinto (or Hindu) deities. They worship them, pray to them, make offerings to them.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, here you are mistaken. There are specific refuge prayers to Hindu deities, recited by Hindus, for example, gaṇeśha sharaṇam, sharaṇam gaṇeśha. Or this:

<https://reveredhinduism.blogspot.com/2016/07/suvarnamala-stuti.html>

As far as Shinto goes, there have been Shinto religious movements which identify themselves as explicitly nonbuddhist, often tied to nativist sentiments.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 19th, 2021 at 1:08 AM

Title: Re: is buddhist an exclusivist religion?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

As far as Shinto goes, there have been Shinto religious movements which identify themselves as explicitly nonbuddhist, often tied to nativist sentiments.

Queequeg said:

This is quite true. Ise Shrine,

Malcolm wrote:

I've been there. Amazing place.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 19th, 2021 at 1:31 AM

Title: Re: How Nichiren Shonin could be the Eternal Buddha

Content:

Minobu said:

I'm saying that before there was a Buddha who earned the Three Bodies there was only a Dhamrakaya Body, an actual Entity people referred to as the Primordial Buddha.

Malcolm wrote:

There was never a time when there were no buddhas, just as there was never a time when there were no sentient beings.

Minobu said:

You are forgetting we have visited this before. There was a time before the desire realms. It was a time when beings of light fed off light until desire crept in. Thus samsara was born.

Malcolm wrote:

There are also a time before that, and a time before that, and a time before that. There is no beginning to the universe. It expands and contracts in massive time cycles that have no beginning—there is no beginning to samsara.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 19th, 2021 at 2:07 AM

Title: Re: How Nichiren Shonin could be the Eternal Buddha

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It expands and contracts in massive time cycles that have no beginning—there is no beginning to samsara.

Turtles all the way down...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 19th, 2021 at 2:51 AM

Title: Re: Mantras in Tibetan Buddhism

Content:

mabw said:

Greetings,

I am not a Tantrika and I am aware of the issues of secrecy. No problem. Just provide me with info if any to which I am privy.

1) Are mantras revealed in terms? If they are, are these in Tibetan or in Sanskrit? If it is Tibetan, do they conform to the mantras in Indic texts? For example, can they be back translated into Sanskrit?

Malcolm wrote:

Mostly Sanskrit, but some parts might be in Tibetan, usually in the action mantra.

mabw said:

2) I notice high-ranking Lamas have their own mantras. Are these composed by the Lamas themselves?

Malcolm wrote:

Name mantras are formed by a standard procedure, using the Sanskrit equivalent of a lama's name.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 19th, 2021 at 4:07 AM

Title: Re: The experience of anatta.

Content:

Zenny said:

So any more experiences of anatta?

Malcolm wrote:

You clearly are trolling, since you already declared that selves were real, and experienced things like pain.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 19th, 2021 at 4:23 AM

Title: Re: The experience of anatta.

Content:

Zenny said:

So any more experiences of anatta?

Malcolm wrote:

You clearly are trolling, since you already declared that selves were real, and experienced things like pain.

Zenny said:

Nope. I'm asking people who believe in anatta what is their experience of it.

Malcolm wrote:

Yup, you are definitely trolling. FYI, anātma is not a belief. It is something one discovers through analysis.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 19th, 2021 at 4:31 AM

Title: Re: Can the mind only hold a single object at a time?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It's one of the big jokes about all those systems that they try to impress you with long and highly elaborated philosophical treatises, and when you do some digging you realize that they are all full of logical holes. For example, positing something that cannot by definition be derived logically from anything.

This represents a fault in your understanding, not a fault in Dzogchen teachings.

fckw said:

If after studying it you still believe that Buddhist logic in general and dzogchen logic in particular is flawless, then you obviously did not understand it.

Malcolm wrote:

Which logic are you referring to? The caturskoti? This is the most misunderstood idea in all of Buddhism.

Taken at face value, it makes no sense in formal logic. Gee, maybe it is not meant to be a logical proposition. Maybe, just maybe, the fourfold negation by Nāgārjuna actually represent positions his contemporaries held.

There are four possible states proposed in Ancient India for any given thing. It exists. It does not exist. It both exists and does not exist. It neither exists nor does not exist. Nāgārjuna, etc., are refuting these four possibilities because they contradict dependent origination.

Likewise, Dzogchen "logic" similarly does not really depart from Nāgārjuna in this case. Dzogchen negates the positions of others without advancing its own position. Dzogchen, like "Prasangika," has no position of its own.

As Rongzom points out, Dzogchen cannot be negated through logic, nor can it be proven through logic.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 19th, 2021 at 4:43 AM

Title: Re: The experience of anatta.

Content:

Zenny said:

So any more experiences of anatta?

Johnny Dangerous said:

Of course, simple direct examination of the sense of self - the self image, and having it dissolve upon examination is such an experience.

Even if someone is brand new to (for example) vipassana meditation, one can experience that what one thought was a sense of self was actually just identification with a transient emotional state.

In a very basic sense this happens outside of Buddhism.

Zenny said:

OK. This is what I was after. Perhaps a little more detail for those who are willing to explain the experience in a bit more detail or when they first experienced it.

Malcolm wrote:

Hankering after other people's experience is just desire for spiritual porn. Get your own damn experience.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 19th, 2021 at 5:50 AM

Title: Re: Erosion in the West

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

In the latter, the professor professes Myanmar is proof Buddhism is just another bloody religion

Manjushri said:

I've been hearing this sort of criticism quite regularly lately, usually by people unacquainted with the tenets and philosophy of buddhism.

I wonder if it's their hubris, prejudice or ignorance that prevents them from realizing that there's a difference between the espousal of sociopolitical views and the nature of the religious affiliation of peoples, which in actuality can be unwittingly contradictory, especially when their classification is merely nominal.

Thus, it would appear that in the minds of such people, the fact that an individual or a group for that matter, could transgress the ethical rules, deceitfully manipulate the doctrine or break the vows pertaining to a religion, is an indication of the character, not of the individuals themselves, but of the religion, for some reason.

That being said, I did not have the time to listen to the interview yet, but I had to vent this little quip concerning Buddhism and the Myanmar situation, that has been in the mouths of so many people lately.

Malcolm wrote:

Militant Buddhists massacring others goes all the way back to Ashoka.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 19th, 2021 at 5:53 AM

Title: Re: Can the mind only hold a single object at a time?

Content:

fckw said:

Geez, why then the whole fuzz about "correctness" of any of those systems - other than "fun play"?

Malcolm wrote:

One studies tenet systems to eliminate concepts, not to become expert in concepts.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 19th, 2021 at 6:36 AM

Title: Re: Erosion in the West

Content:

Manjushri said:

I've been hearing this sort of criticism quite regularly lately, usually by people unacquainted with the tenets and philosophy of buddhism.

I wonder if it's their hubris, prejudice or ignorance that prevents them from realizing that there's a difference between the espousal of sociopolitical views and the nature of the religious affiliation of peoples, which in actuality can be unwittingly contradictory, especially when their classification is merely nominal.

Thus, it would appear that in the minds of such people, the fact that an individual or a group for that matter, could transgress the ethical rules, deceitfully manipulate the doctrine or break the vows pertaining to a religion, is an indication of the character, not of the individuals themselves, but of the religion, for some reason.

That being said, I did not have the time to listen to the interview yet, but I had to vent this little quip concerning Buddhism and the Myanmar situation, that has been in the mouths of so many people lately.

Malcolm wrote:

Militant Buddhists massacring others goes all the way back to Ashoka.

Manjushri said:

Indeed, I am well aware of that. The point that I attempted to address was the fact that criticism of Buddhism...

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhism is one thing, Buddhadharma another. Criticizing the former is not a criticism of the latter.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 19th, 2021 at 6:37 AM

Title: Re: "...and skillful means are the Ultimate."

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

The Mahavairocana Sutra famously teaches us:

" Enlightened mind is the cause; great compassion is the foundation, and skillful means are the Ultimate."

This formula has haunted me for years, taking on different colorations in meaning over time. I'd be curious as to how you interpret this. For example, how do you see the roles and nuances of the terms "cause," "foundation" and (most enigmatic of all) "ultimate?" How do enlightened mind and compassion relate as a pair, and where does the majestic "ultimate" of skillful means fit in?

Malcolm wrote:

Not sure about that translation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 19th, 2021 at 6:44 PM

Title: Re: Music time

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 19th, 2021 at 8:38 PM

Title: Re: "...and skillful means are the Ultimate."

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

The Mahavairocana Sutra famously teaches us:

" Enlightened mind is the cause; great compassion is the foundation, and skillful means are the Ultimate."

This formula has haunted me for years, taking on different colorations in meaning over time. I'd be curious as to how you interpret this. For example, how do you see the roles and nuances of the terms "cause," "foundation" and (most enigmatic of all) "ultimate?" How do enlightened mind and compassion relate as a pair, and where does the majestic "ultimate" of skillful means fit in?

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhaghya explains that the cause, bodhicitta, has two aspects: the foundation, aspirational bodhicitta, and the culmination, engaged bodhicitta, the method, meaning the perfection of generosity and so forth.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 19th, 2021 at 9:06 PM

Title: Re: How Birth in Pure Land = Nirvāṇa

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

The "engaged" Buddhist can do good things, if his or her actions flow naturally from spiritual attainment.

Malcolm wrote:

Sorry, but, it just flows from the practice of the six perfections, aka engaged bodhicitta.

FiveSkandhas said:

But I can't help but feel the rush to "engaged Buddhism" is a symptom of people who have lost their connection with the Dharma, who no longer believe their practice will really lead to anything meaningful.

Malcolm wrote:

You really think Thich Nhat Hahn, Johanna Macy, Bernie Glassman, Bhikku Bodhi, HH Dalai Lama, Gary Snyder, etc., have lost their connection to Dharma and don't believe their practice leads to anything meaningful?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 19th, 2021 at 9:08 PM

Title: Re: How were texts transmitted orally?

Content:

Hazel said:

Thank you. Is there research into what the actual "teaching" of bhāṇakas was like?

Malcolm wrote:

They just chanted texts. For example, Buddhaghosa was reputed to have relied on bhāṇakas in composing his Visuddhimagga. They were walking books.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 19th, 2021 at 9:54 PM

Title: Re: How Nichiren Shonin could be the Eternal Buddha

Content:

Minobu said:

what is original enlightenment then?

Malcolm wrote:

The fact that all phenomena have been in a state of nirvana from the very beginning:

“Moreover, Mañjuśrī, bodhisattva mahāsattvas see the emptiness of all phenomena —phenomena as they are, not as they are not —as they truly are, unwavering, unshakeable, immutable, unchanging, always as they truly are, having the nature of space, beyond definition and terminology, unborn, neither existing nor not existing, not composite, not continuous, spoken of through the word nonexistence, in an unimpeded state, and manifested from erroneous conceptualization.

<https://read.84000.co/translation/toh113.html>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 19th, 2021 at 10:19 PM

Title: HH Sakya Trichen White Tara Initiation

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Starts at 10:30 EDT

<https://fb.watch/5ARFSQdb3P>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 19th, 2021 at 11:42 PM

Title: Re: How Birth in Pure Land = Nirvāṇa

Content:

Sādhaka said:

There is a author who said that morality springs from spirituality, and not vice-versa.

Malcolm wrote:

Mipham, interestingly, disagrees. He argues that Dharmic virtues arise from mundane virtues, but this is off-topic here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 20th, 2021 at 1:24 AM

Title: Re: Wait, so Karma and Rebirth don't exist?

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Then ‘new age’ types who say things like: “It’s all just about your intention man”, are on the right path?

(BTW, I’m not meaning to question the Buddha’s words there wholesale; I’m just implying that perhaps there is more context to be found there)

Or is it just that those who have taken Bodhisattva vows and so forth, have a more potent positive result of good intentions despite actions, than people who have not taken Bodhisattva vows etc.?

Malcolm wrote:

Generally speaking, the idea is that virtue under Buddhist vow gather more merit and have more serious consequences is one becomes nonvirtuous.

In Mahāyāna, virtue is much more situational, however.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 20th, 2021 at 3:38 AM

Title: Re: How Nichiren Shonin could be the Eternal Buddha

Content:

Minobu said:

If this state was so perfect then how did we all end up in this nightmare ?

tkp67 said:

I would have to dig up the exact reference but iirc in the Brahma's Net Sutra there is a reference to brahma giving rise to creation in his own mind for companionship.

Malcolm wrote:

Nope, that's not how it is framed by the Buddha:

10. 'There comes a time, Vasettha, when, sooner or later after a long period, this world contracts. At a time of contraction, beings are mostly born in the Abhassara Brahma world. And there they dwell, mind-made, feeding on delight, self-luminous, moving through the air, glorious — and they stay like that for a very long time. But sooner or later, after a very long period, this world begins to expand again. At a time of expansion, the beings from the Abhassara Brahma world, [85] having passed away from there, are mostly reborn in this world. Here they dwell, mind-made, feeding on delight, self-luminous, moving through the air, glorious--and they stay like that for a very long time.

11. 'At that period, Vasettha, there was just one mass of water, and all was darkness, blinding darkness. Neither moon nor sun appeared, no constellations or stars appeared, night and day were not distinguished, nor months and fortnights, no years or seasons, and no male and female, beings being reckoned just as beings. And sooner or later, after a very long period of time, savoury earth spread itself over the waters where those beings were. It looked just like the skin that forms itself over hot milk as it cools. It was endowed with colour, smell and taste. It was the colour of fine ghee or butter, and it was very sweet, like pure wild honey.

12. 'Then some being of a greedy nature said: "I say, what can this be?" and tasted the savoury earth on its finger. In so doing, it became taken with the flavour, and craving arose in it. Then other beings, taking their cue from that one, also tasted the stuff with their fingers. They too were taken with the flavour, and craving arose in them. So they set to with their hands, breaking off pieces of the stuff in order to eat it. And [86] the result of this was that their self-luminance disappeared. And as a result of the disappearance of their self-luminance, the moon and the sun appeared, night and day were distinguished, months and fortnights appeared, and the year and its seasons. To that extent the world re-evolved.

<http://www.columbia.edu/itc/religion/f2001/edit/docs/aggannasutta.pdf>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 20th, 2021 at 9:04 AM

Title: Re: Karmapa sued for marital and child support after sexual assault.

Content:

Queequeg said:

Maybe this tulku thing is not such a great idea.

Malcolm wrote:

Been saying that for 20 years+

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 20th, 2021 at 9:39 AM

Title: Re: How Nichiren Shonin could be the Eternal Buddha

Content:

Minobu said:

and there is no text that will confirm this

Malcolm wrote:

Of course there is.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 20th, 2021 at 11:00 AM

Title: Re: Karmapa sued for marital and child support after sexual assault.

Content:

zerwe said:

Concerning, but take care.

The yahoo news run of this story concludes with "None of the allegations have been proven in court."

<https://ca.news.yahoo.com/b-c-woman-claims-marriage-110000327.html?src=rss>

Shaun

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. So far, apparently, the sole evidence is text messages.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 20th, 2021 at 11:32 AM

Title: Re: Karmapa sued for marital and child support after sexual assault.

Content:

Cinnabar said:

What is most interesting to me is how we (impersonal we) deal with it all.

Malcolm wrote:

Honestly, this issue has no impact on me at all.

Outrage...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 20th, 2021 at 8:44 PM

Title: Re: How Nichiren Shonin could be the Eternal Buddha

Content:

Minobu said:

Even though it may seem like a long time the fact remains Lord Sakyamuni Buddha revealed His Time when He first attained enlightenment.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and the many Buddhas he studied under in the past in many sutras.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 20th, 2021 at 8:56 PM

Title: Re: is buddhist an exclusivist religion?

Content:

Soma999 said:

If you understand Buddha as clarity, Dharma as universal laws, and sangha as universal consciousness, it is inclusive.

Malcolm wrote:

Which was said by the Buddha in no sutra or tantra anywhere, ever.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 20th, 2021 at 9:11 PM

Title: Re: Losing faith in enlightenment

Content:

Mirror said:

What is the point of meditating, when our attainments disappear after death?

Malcolm wrote:
They don't.

Mirror said:

There are so many tibetan buddhist masters, who have been reincarnated for umpteenth time and although it's said that they have been enlightened in their previous lives, they weren't born enlightened and most of their previous attainments have been lost. Even so they have been learning and practising more swiftly and easily in their present lives, without being reborn in a place where dharma is accessible, their accomplishments are gone or lessened at least.

Malcolm wrote:

Not all tulkus are really reincarnations of awakened people. Most are just recognized for the purposes of maintaining lineages.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 20th, 2021 at 11:30 PM

Title: Re: Losing faith in enlightenment

Content:

Mirror said:

Is there a possibility of being reborn into more persons than just one?

Malcolm wrote:

Not really. When one sees multiple tulkus of one person, its usually because different lineage heads of different monasteries recognize a tulku of that person. It is not an organized institution with the central clearing house of incarnations. It is pretty much a free for all, and competition among the backers of competing tulkus can be quite fierce and even descent into all out war, like in the present day Karmapa affair.

Emanations of high level bodhisattvas don't need to be recognized and enthroned. The days of tulkus are numbered.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 20th, 2021 at 11:33 PM

Title: Re: How Nichiren Shonin could be the Eternal Buddha

Content:

tkp67 said:

Some teachings seek to separate the two for the purpose of realization. Some make the story seem less than life itself but it is not truly separable.

Malcolm wrote:

The inseparability of samsara and nirvana is fundamental to all Mahāyāna traditions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 21st, 2021 at 1:06 AM

Title: Re: is buddhist an exclusivist religion?

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

There are really two common approaches dharma.

One is simply as a set of guidelines for daily living. These are what you find in the coffee-table books featuring the Dalai Lama, or books on mindfulness by Thich Nhat Hanh. No refuge is required to abstain from the negative behaviors that result in negative life experiences. Anybody who follows any religion can apply these Dharma teachings, just as one can apply the sayings of Confucius, the aphorisms of Ben Franklin, or the teachings on forgiveness by Jesus.

Malcolm wrote:

In the Tibetan tradition this is called "mi chos," which corresponds more or less to our idea of secular ethics.

PadmaVonSamba said:

The other approach to Dharma is really aimed at liberation from samsara, not just making it more manageable. There are specific concepts that must be understood and tested to the point that one can confidently accept them as valid. Here is where conflicts may arise between Buddhist teachings and those of other belief systems.

Malcolm wrote:

In our tradition, this called "lha chos," "highest teachings," which refers to the Dharma proper.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 21st, 2021 at 1:41 AM

Title: Re: What is enlightenment that we need to obtain?

Content:

LastLegend said:

So we perceive enlightenment to be something to obtain? We are designating it to be something to be obtained? Then who is obtaining it?

Malcolm wrote:

In conventional discourse, there is a person who practices a path and wakes up. In ultimate discourse, there is no person, no path, and no waking up.

These are not in contradiction.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, May 21st, 2021 at 2:11 AM
Title: Re: Losing faith in enlightenment
Content:

Mirror said:
But this topic is very difficult, because we can't really verify who is a reincarnation of whom and who is enlightened.

Malcolm wrote:
Correct, this is beyond the ken of ordinary people; and so therefore, one has to examine the qualities of the teacher still, and not rely on names.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, May 21st, 2021 at 2:12 AM
Title: Re: is buddhist an exclusivist religion?
Content:

SilenceMonkey said:
I'm curious where the reference to mi chos and lha chos are coming from.

Malcolm wrote:
These two terms are quite common in Tibetan literature.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, May 21st, 2021 at 4:37 AM
Title: Re: Why there is no Mahavairocana Tantra in General Mahayana?
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
The Tibetan Version:

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, May 21st, 2021 at 4:40 AM
Title: Re: Why there is no Mahavairocana Tantra in General Mahayana?
Content:

Queequeg said:
What's interesting to me is that the mandala for this text is different in E. Asian and Tibet:

EDIT: MY MISTAKE... I DON'T KNOW OF ANY TIBETAN VERSION OF THIS MANDALA

Malcolm wrote:

The mandala is the same, the way it is laid out is slightly different.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 21st, 2021 at 9:35 PM

Title: Re: IS enlightenment SUDDEN OR GRADUAL ?

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

When you receive DI is this entering the path of seeing? It seems like in zen tradition kensho is something like this.

Malcolm wrote:

Direct introduction, or as it is more accurately translated, “directly encounter one's own state,” is a method where the teacher assists the student in recognizing a moment of unmodified, pellucid, consciousness through explanation, symbols, and resting together in the state the student is to encounter.

Using various methods, the student then engages in various practices to encounter their own state until they have decided upon it, decide one thing, or as CHNN puts, remain without doubt.

Then one continues in that state, or literally, continue in the confidence of liberation, meaning one is now a real dzogchen practitioner.

However, there are no stages in dzogchen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 21st, 2021 at 11:24 PM

Title: Re: A conversation about Buddhism with a prototype AGI. (Artificial Intelligence)

Content:

Nemo said:

It's just a program made by a person to trick you. Anyone can make one. It has no idea what it's answers mean. It has no intelligence.

FiveSkandhas said:

The advanced AIs I have interacted with seem very gentle.

Nemo said:

Trolls turned Tay, Microsoft’s fun millennial AI bot, into a genocidal maniac.

<https://www.washingtonpost.com/news/the-intersect/wp/2016/03/24/the-internet-turned-tay-microsofts-fun-millennial-ai-bot-into-a-genocidal-maniac/>

Johnny Dangerous said:

I was actually just thinking that however this AI was trained in Buddhism, it reflects the idiosyncratic understanding of Buddhism of whatever it's (human) source material was. So for instance if it learns Buddhism from the internet, the longer it studies it via the internet, the more incoherent it would get.

This version clearly got a very "cliff notes" Dharma with a couple nods to Pal sources.

Malcolm wrote:

Imagine how confused it would get by Jaxchen?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 22nd, 2021 at 3:31 AM

Title: Re: Dune

Content:

Matt J said:

I've never understood the whole Dune thing.

Malcolm wrote:

Its all about the Zen Sunni, dude.

<http://www.neelu.net/explore/edge-science-gaia-exclusion-zone/dune-sayings-of-the-zenn-sunni-wanderers/>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 22nd, 2021 at 3:45 AM

Title: Re: Why did Nichiren Shonin leave TenDai

Content:

Minobu said:

also do Tendai chant the Amida Butsu thing?

Malcolm wrote:

There is pure land practice in Tendai. Jodo Shu and Jodo Shinshu both come from Tendai.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 22nd, 2021 at 9:21 AM

Title: Re: Why did Nichiren Shonin leave TenDai

Content:

Minobu said:
also do Tendai chant the Amida Butsu thing?

Malcolm wrote:
There is pure land practice in Tendai. Jodo Shu and Jodo Shinshu both come from Tendai.

Minobu said:
Well I guess that's why he dropped that gig.
He knew.

Malcolm wrote:
You have a problem with pur land Buddhism?

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, May 23rd, 2021 at 8:52 PM
Title: Re: Dune
Content:
Queequeg said:
Thanks folks for the suggestions.

Malcolm wrote:
Simon Green's Deathstalker Series is pretty entertaining, low-brow space opera. Highly recommended for its sheer exuberant celebration of the decadent phase of the British empire cast in a science fiction tabloid fantasy.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, May 24th, 2021 at 12:03 AM
Title: Re: Anam Thubten
Content:
zerwe said:
I want to point out that there is no such thing as "Dharma-Lite."

Malcolm wrote:
Dharma-lite (tm) is definitely a thing. Anything which is focused on this life is Dharma-lite, why? Because it is the use of Buddhist teachings to make samsara more comfortable.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, May 24th, 2021 at 12:04 AM
Title: Re: Karmapa's Occupation
Content:
Chaz said:
Is there something out there that mandates/requires that the Karmapa be amonastic?

Could the Karmapa "hang up his robes" and become a greeter at Wal-Mart? Own a dairy farm? Get married and have a family? Let his hair and beard grow and live incognito in Luxor?

Would he still be Karmapa?

Malcolm wrote:

Niether of the present Karmapas are monks.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 24th, 2021 at 12:25 AM

Title: Re: Dune

Content:

tkp67 said:

I enjoyed Zelazny almost as much as Heinlein. They are contemporaries in regards to intellect, imagination and dialog.

Malcolm wrote:

I find it interesting that guys like Heinlein and Herbert were hardcore, right-wing republicans, the former tried to get Goldwater elected; the latter, a buddy of Nixon.

Both opposed any kind of social programs.

But then there is the marvelous Scottish science fiction of Ken Mcleod, one has to begin with the Fall Revolution.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 24th, 2021 at 12:40 AM

Title: Re: Karmapa's Occupation

Content:

Chaz said:

Is there something out there that mandates/requires that the Karmapa be amonastic? Could the Karmapa "hang up his robes" and become a greeter at Wal-Mart? Own a dairy farm? Get married and have a family? Let his hair and beard grow and live incognito in Luxor?

Would he still be Karmapa?

Malcolm wrote:

Niether of the present Karmapas are monks.

Arnoud said:

Really? I thought OTD definitely ordained some people and received Gelong vows.

Malcolm wrote:

He attended an ordination, and later complained that he did not consider it valid since he was not asked if he wanted to receive full ordination. He considers himself an upāsaka. This was quite the buzz amongst Tibetans a couple of years ago.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 24th, 2021 at 12:44 AM

Title: Re: Anam Thubten

Content:

zerwe said:

I want to point out that there is no such thing as "Dharma-Lite."

Malcolm wrote:

Dharma-lite (tm) is definitely a thing. Anything which is focused on this life is Dharma-lite, why? Because it is the use of Buddhist teachings to make samsara more comfortable.

zerwe said:

Understood. From what I have been taught, anything we do without having the mind of renunciation is not really Dharma at all. Anything directed with this life in mind. However, for those who do not have realization--there is always something that can be done to aid in developing this mind. If somehow someone benefits from a teaching, now matter how it may be perceived, and this eventually leads to developing a mind of renunciation then would we really call it "Dharma-lite?"

Shaun

Malcolm wrote:

This is too broad. For example, someone might read Dune's Zen Sufi aphorisms, and then become interested in Zen, etc. but really, this does not count.

Dharma-lite, Buddhism-lite, is "this life," "be happy," "self-affirmation," dress which we find in Barnes and Nobles, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 24th, 2021 at 1:49 AM

Title: Re: Karmapa's Occupation

Content:

Matt J said:

What about the robes and shaved head? Fashion choices?

Malcolm wrote:

He attended an ordination, and later complained that he did not consider it valid since he was not asked if he wanted to receive full ordination. He considers himself an upāsaka. This was quite the buzz amongst Tibetans a couple of years ago.

Business suit.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 24th, 2021 at 2:38 AM

Title: Re: Hello From An Amateur Madhyamaka Scholar!

Content:

Subcontrary said:

I am very interested in the Madhyamaka school and I am here to seek clarity regarding many of its complicated doctrines!

Malcolm wrote:

Madhyamaka is not complicated. It exists to dismantle the complications of other systems, that's why it seems complex. But it isn't really.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 24th, 2021 at 5:10 AM

Title: Re: Dharma Lite, what it is and isn't

Content:

Matt J said:

Many traditional or semi-traditional teachers' public teachings in my experience could be called "dharma-lite" but they are often speaking on multiple levels.

KeithA said:

I find the whole “advanced versus lite” thing to be wholly laughable.

Malcolm wrote:

Dharma-lite isn't even Dharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 24th, 2021 at 5:13 AM

Title: Re: Hello From An Amateur Madhyamaka Scholar!

Content:

Subcontrary said:

That is encouraging, Malcolm!

I should say more that I am often confounded by the doctrines of Madhyamaka. I'm even now writing a post regarding the Tattvasangraha of Santaraksita which perhaps will demonstrate my confusion!

Malcolm wrote:

Don't start with that book.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 24th, 2021 at 6:32 AM

Title: Re: Dune

Content:

Norwegian said:

Friend of mine suggests the following for sci-fi/space opera:

- Peter Hamilton's The Night's Dawn trilogy
- Alastair Reynold's Revelation Space series
- Alastair Reynold's House of Suns
- Alastair Reynold's Pushing Ice
- John Scalzi's Old Man's War
- Hannu Rajaniemi's The Quantum Thief trilogy
- Liu Cixin's Remembrance of Earth's Past trilogy
- Peter Watts' Blindsight

Malcolm wrote:

Kim Stanley Robinsons Mars Trilogy.

Walter Mosley

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 24th, 2021 at 8:30 AM

Title: Re: Dharma Lite, what it is and isn't

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

There are lots of examples of the Buddha simply giving people from all walks of life basic instructions for leading a particular way of life, without mentioning rebirth in different realms or becoming free of samsara. Yeah, it all eventually points to that. But if you are going to make a definition of something and give it a name such as 'Dharma lite' then you need to be clear about why that designation matters now, if it didn't seem to matter 2600 years ago.

Malcolm wrote:

Commezialization.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 24th, 2021 at 8:32 PM

Title: Re: Dharma Lite, what it is and isn't

Content:

Bristollad said:

Alex Berzin's take on this:

Dharma-Lite Versus the Real Thing Dharma

Dr. Alexander Berzin

Most Westerners approach Buddhism without belief in reincarnation or rebirth; however, traditional Buddhism assumes the existence of beginningless rebirth. "Dharma-Lite" is a way to practice Buddhism purely for improving this lifetime, without the concept of rebirth. When practiced as a steppingstone for “The Real Thing” Dharma (traditional Buddhism complete with the assertion of rebirth), Dharma-Lite is the stage best suited for most Westerners to begin with.

<https://studybuddhism.com/en/tibetan-buddhism/path-to-enlightenment/the-graded-path/dharma-lite-versus-the-real-thing-dharma>

Malcolm wrote:

He didn't coin the term at all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 24th, 2021 at 8:35 PM

Title: Re: Karmapa's Occupation

Content:

Tenpel said:

The source says he received bama rabjung and novice vows from the Dalai Lama. So, he is a monk and has the vows of celibacy. He does not say he considers himself an upasaka / lay person after he received the novice vows from the Dalai Lama.

Malcolm wrote:

No, he considers the getsul ordination invalid. Read more closely.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 24th, 2021 at 9:09 PM

Title: Re: Karmapa's Occupation

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

It's a little convoluted, but very interesting.

Malcolm wrote:

The long and short of it is that OTD is not a monk.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 24th, 2021 at 9:16 PM

Title: Re: Losing faith in enlightenment

Content:

Mirror said:

Is there a possibility of being reborn into more persons than just one?

Malcolm wrote:

Not really. When one sees multiple tulkus of one person, its usually because different lineage heads of different monasteries recognize a tulku of that person. It is not an organized institution with the central clearing house of incarnations. It is pretty much a free for all, and competition among the backers of competing tulkus can be quite fierce and even descent into all out war, like in the present day Karmapa affair.

Emanations of high level bodhisattvas don't need to be recognized and enthroned. The days of tulkus are numbered.

dharmafirststeps said:

This is interesting, usually one hears this justified by it being possible for buddhas/high level bodhisattvas to have "multiple emanations". Is this a misunderstanding?

Malcolm wrote:

It's apologetics.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 24th, 2021 at 10:27 PM

Title: Re: Karmapa's Occupation

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

It's a little convoluted, but very interesting.

Malcolm wrote:

The long and short of it is that OTD is not a monk.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

His own status is his business, but as a public figure I appreciate his letting us know.

However what's interesting to me is his assertion that if he (and by extension, if anyone) wasn't actively willing to take vows, the vows are not valid. That has significance beyond his personal status for us all.

Malcolm wrote:

That is correct. It is not his assertion. At the end of even a refuge ceremony, the person giving the vows asks the recipient "Are you happy?" If the person were to answer "no," or later feel they did not understand what they were participating in, those vows are invalid.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 24th, 2021 at 10:29 PM

Title: Re: Debate over 'deathless door'

Content:

Supramundane said:

But isn't dwelling on pure awareness not enough in itself?

Malcolm wrote:

No it is not enough in itself. Lacking insight, it is just śamatha, and does not have the power to remove afflictive patterning.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 24th, 2021 at 10:35 PM

Title: Re: Dharma Lite, what it is and isn't

Content:

Bristollad said:

Alex Berzin's take on this:

Dharma-Lite Versus the Real Thing Dharma

Dr. Alexander Berzin

Most Westerners approach Buddhism without belief in reincarnation or rebirth; however, traditional Buddhism assumes the existence of beginningless rebirth. “Dharma-Lite” is a way to practice Buddhism purely for improving this lifetime, without the concept of rebirth. When practiced as a steppingstone for “The Real Thing” Dharma (traditional Buddhism complete with the assertion of rebirth), Dharma-Lite is the stage best suited for most Westerners to begin with.

<https://studybuddhism.com/en/tibetan-buddhism/path-to-enlightenment/the-graded-path/dharma-lite-versus-the-real-thing-dharma>

Malcolm wrote:

He didn't coin the term at all.

Bristollad said:

No, I didn't think so, but he does articulate quite clearly what he feels the difference is.

Malcolm wrote:

The prevailing sentiment appears to be that Dharma-lite, Buddhism-lite, etc., refers to a denatured presentation of the teachings which abandons karma and rebirth, the central problem all valid forms of Buddhism set out to address.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 24th, 2021 at 11:37 PM

Title: Re: Dharma Lite, what it is and isn't

Content:

Bristollad said:

No, I didn't think so, but he does articulate quite clearly what he feels the difference is.

Malcolm wrote:

The prevailing sentiment appears to be that Dharma-lite, Buddhism-lite, etc., refers to a denatured presentation of the teachings which abandons karma and rebirth, the central problem all valid forms of Buddhism set out to address.

Tlalok said:

From my reading, Berzin uses "Dharma-lite" specifically to identify an interest only in securing happiness in this life, a sort of "remedial" stage in the Lam-rim teachings before you even really enter it meaningfully. It's a part of explaining Lam-rim to Western Dharma students according to a gradual path.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, Berzin has his ideas, and I have mine. They are different. Dharma-lite is basically for people who bring their Dharma books into the bathroom and then leave them there.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 24th, 2021 at 11:44 PM

Title: Re: Dune

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The fact is that a lot of SF does not age well. Most of it is poorly written drivel.

But there are standouts, like Phillip K. Dick, who seems to be the richest single source for SF movies going.

Gibson, in my opinion, is a not a terribly good writer.

Le Guin is good, but uneven. Margret Atwood, of course, is a great writer.

If we actually confined ourselves to SF books of demonstrable literary merit, I think the recommendations would shrink really fast.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 24th, 2021 at 11:47 PM

Title: Re: Dharma Lite, what it is and isn't

Content:

Matt J said:

That's certainly how I started: a stressed out, skeptical Western materialist. I'm glad there was a bridge for me.

Bristollad said:

Alex Berzin's take on this:

Dharma-Lite Versus the Real Thing Dharma
Dr. Alexander Berzin

Most Westerners approach Buddhism without belief in reincarnation or rebirth; however, traditional Buddhism assumes the existence of beginningless rebirth. “Dharma-Lite” is a way to practice Buddhism purely for improving this lifetime, without the concept of rebirth. When practiced as a steppingstone for “The Real Thing” Dharma (traditional Buddhism complete with the assertion of rebirth), Dharma-Lite is the stage best suited for most Westerners to begin with.

<https://studybuddhism.com/en/tibetan-buddhism/path-to-enlightenment/the-graded-path/dharma-lite-versus-the-real-thing-dharma>

Malcolm wrote:

The difference here, is that Dharma-lite is not Baby Dharma. What Berzin Describes is Baby Dharma.

Dharma-lite has great taste and it also has no calories!

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 1:10 AM

Title: Re: Karmapa's Occupation

Content:

jmlee369 said:

... the Kagyupas hold the lineage of the Upper Vinaya transmission and Gelugpas follow the Lower Vinaya transmission...

mabw said:

Can someone elaborate on the Upper and Lower Vinaya transmission? Have never heard of it. Thanks.

Malcolm wrote:

Two different transmissions of bhikṣu ordination to Tibet. the Lower transmission refers to lineage brought to Tibet in the imperial period, which survived in mdo smad, i.e. Northeastern or Lower Do. Stod refers to the transmission that came through Śākyaśrībhadrā during the 13th century.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 1:37 AM

Title: Re: Dharma Lite, what it is and isn't

Content:

Sādhaka said:

In fact the texts say that it is better to practice for one's next lifetime; not for worldly reasons, but for a better future lifetime for having more auspicious circumstances for continuing Dharma practice.

Of course we aim to end suffering for ourselves and others in this life too; however that is considered as secondary.

jimmi said:

In fact, this life is already “one’s next lifetime”. If not auspicious now, when?

Sādhaka said:

I wasn’t implying that it can’t be auspiciousness now. It certainly can.

What I’m talking about is one’s attitude.

Shardza Tashi Gyaltzen Rinpoche said that the one who practices to improve their next life alone, is the one of best capacity.

Most manuals on practicing the Path say this, even if not in the same exact words.

It obviously does not mean for having your next life be comfy, unlike what some ‘Hindus’—and even some Buddhists—aim for.

It means that you’ve renounced samsara.

Malcolm wrote:

Mañjuśrī, "If one has attachment to this life, one is not a Dharma practitioner."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 2:47 AM

Title: Re: Bitcoin

Content:

jake said:

Also, as refresher, past discussion on NFTs here:

<https://www.dharmawheel.net/viewtopic.php?f=63&t=36024>

Malcolm wrote:

Krugman on Crypto:

<https://www.nytimes.com/2021/05/20/opinion/cryptocurrency-bitcoin.html?searchResultPosition=1>

jake said:

First, crypto boosters are very good at technobabble — using arcane terminology to convince themselves and others that they're offering a revolutionary new technology, even though blockchain is actually pretty elderly by infotech standards and has yet to find any compelling uses.

Second, there's a strong element of libertarian derp — assertions that fiat currencies, government-issued money without any tangible backing, will collapse any day now. True, Britain, whose currency was still standing last time I looked, went off the gold standard 90 years ago. But who's counting?

Given all this, are cryptocurrencies headed for a crash sometime soon? Not necessarily. One fact that gives even crypto skeptics like me pause is the durability of gold as a highly valued asset. Gold, after all, suffers from pretty much the same problems as Bitcoin. People may think of it as money, but it lacks any attributes of a useful currency: You can't actually use it to make transactions — try buying a new car with gold ingots — and its purchasing power has been extremely unstable.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 2:49 AM

Title: Re: Dune

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Snow Crash by Neal Stephenson. It's more cyberpunk than sci-fi, but I quite liked it. It's about Hero Protagonist, a nuclear pizza delivery man in a dystopian future city run by fast food conglomerates. There's a cool bit about Babylonian computers and the human mind being susceptible to computer viruses in it.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, good, before Stephenson decided he was a real writer and started writing boring doorstops.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 2:51 AM

Title: Re: Dune

Content:

dharmaf footsteps said:

Thoughts on Asimov?

I was blown away by him when I first read him. I tore through the whole 15 book shebang, and while the literary quality was certainly not always top notch, and it got a bit weird towards the end, I was fascinated by the whole thing. Every work exploring different speculative themes on humanity and civilisation, starting from what is conceivably not so far into the future, to almost 50,000 years from now.

I've always been curious to give it a re-read and see if it holds up to my memories, not sure I'll ever get through all 15 again though.

Malcolm wrote:

Good ideas man, 6th grade level writing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 2:52 AM

Title: Re: Karmapa's (TTD & OTD) Occupation

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Although a footnote in one of Shardza Tashi Gyaltsen Rinpoche's works, quoting, or rather paraphrasing seemingly, Yongdzin Tenzin Namdak Rinpoche, says:

Dzogchen Practice of the Bön Tradition said:

"...in the Western lifestyle we have many free periods in which we can practice, so sometimes it may be even better than being a monk, because a monk has so many different duties and rituals to perform."

Sādhaka said:

Yet there are also more distractions in the western lifestyle; therefore YMMV, as they say.

Malcolm wrote:

It is pretty impossible to be a monastic these days...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 2:52 AM

Title: Re: Karmapa's Occupation

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Two different transmissions of bhikṣu ordination to Tibet. the Lower transmission refers to lineage brought to Tibet in the imperial period, which survived in mdo smad, i.e. Northeastern or Lower Do. Stod refers to the transmission that came through Śākyaśrībhadrā during the 13th century.

mabw said:

Thank you. So the lower and upper refer to the differing time periods right? And both were Mulasarvastivada?

Malcolm wrote:

They refer to upper and lower Tibet, and yes, both are Mulasarvastivad

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 4:03 AM

Title: Re: Bitcoin

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

I think the major difference with gold is that gold has been used as a store of value for millennia--precisely that durability that Krugman talks about. Cryptocurrencies, by contrast, have no such history. I'm not predicting that cryptocurrencies are going to collapse or disappear, but I'm also not convinced that gold's survival necessarily means that cryptocurrencies will also survive.

Malcolm wrote:

The Bitcoin and crypto in general are the Great Tulip Bubble of early 21st century, but at least one can actually grow tulips. Bitcoin specifically is useless waste of valuable resources. The rest? Just a fad.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 4:05 AM

Title: Re: Bitcoin

Content:

jake said:

Did you read or watch the link? Bitcoin is not an asset, it doesn't generate revenue. There are no yearly dividends, no interest payments, no rent collected.

Malcolm wrote:

And no backing by any government...essential for any viable currency.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 4:09 AM

Title: Re: Did Nichiren Shonin create an entirely different Buddhism for our time

Content:

tkp67 said:

If it did why would the buddha seek to make all beings equal if they weren't?

Malcolm wrote:

QQ already addressed your misreading of the LS on this point.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 4:16 AM

Title: Re: Dune

Content:

Caoimhghín said:

Snow Crash by Neal Stephenson. It's more cyberpunk than sci-fi, but I quite liked it. It's about Hero Protagonist, a nuclear pizza delivery man in a dystopian future city run by fast food conglomerates. There's a cool bit about Babylonian computers and the human mind being susceptible to computer viruses in it.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, good, before Stephenson decided he was a real writer and started writing boring doorstops.

Caoimhghín said:

Did you not like the Baroque Cycle?

Malcolm wrote:

I found it really self-indulgent and turgid.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 4:38 AM

Title: Re: Did Nichiren Shonin create an entirely different Buddhism for our time

Content:

tkp67 said:

If it did why would the buddha seek to make all beings equal if they weren't?

Malcolm wrote:

QQ already addressed your misreading of the LS on this point.

tkp67 said:

Not according to the teachings.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, according to the teachings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 5:18 AM

Title: Re: Did Nichiren Shonin create an entirely different Buddhism for our time

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The Buddha did not seek to make all beings equal. Your answer, as usual, is a complete a total non-sequitur.

QQ already refuted you on this point.

tkp67 said:

Not according to the teachings.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, according to the teachings.

tkp67 said:

You must never think that any of the eighty thousand sacred teachings of Shakyamuni Buddha's lifetime or any of the Buddhas and bodhisattvas of the ten directions and three existences are outside yourself. Your practice of the Buddhist teachings will not relieve you of the sufferings of birth and death in the least unless you perceive the true nature of your life. If you seek enlightenment outside yourself, then your performing even ten thousand practices and ten thousand good deeds will be in vain. It is like the case of a poor man who spends night and day counting his neighbor's wealth but gains not even half a coin. That is why the T'ien-t'ai school's commentary states, "Unless one perceives the nature of one's life, one cannot eradicate one's grave offenses."² This passage implies that, unless one perceives the nature of one's life, one's practice will become an endless, painful austerity.

---> <https://www.nichirenlibrary.org/en/wnd-1/Content/1>

On Attaining Buddhahood in This Lifetime

Outside of one's self also includes working outside of one's own causes, conditions and capacities.

"Shariputra, the buddhas preach the Law in accordance with what is appropriate, but the meaning is difficult to understand.

Expedient Means

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 8:27 AM

Title: Re: Did Nichiren Shonin create an entirely different Buddhism for our time

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This passage says nothing about the Buddha making all beings equal.

tkp67 said:

I had read this some time ago and found it relevant. It is Dzongsar Jamyang Khyentse Rinpoche's statement on the LS.

As I see it the big difference is that Nichiren is ultimately pointing to each individual's mind as the "perfect tailor" since one's own mind is most intimate with one's own cause, capacity and conditions while stating they should be discarded so the person does not become attached such things in the process. Of course everyone's mileage will vary. Popularly known as the Lotus Sūtra, this is one of the most revered Mahāyāna sūtras in the history of Buddhism. Devotion to it as being superior to all other sūtras has, in China, Korea, and Japan, created traditions based solely upon this sūtra. The Japanese chant

Namu myōhō renge kyō (南無妙法蓮華經 “Homage to the White Lotus of the Good Dharma Sūtra”) has become the primary practice of tens of thousands of so-called Buddhists around the world. The mere existence of this sūtra must have brought millions of people into the Dharma and done much to ensure devotion to Buddhism and patronage of it over millennia.

pf.-4

We should rejoice in this. But we should also be mindful that rigid attachment to the letter—rather than the spirit—of this sūtra has led to some misunderstanding and discord among Buddhists. And that is not a good thing. For example, the Lotus Sūtra has been wrongly invoked to justify gender bias, material grasping, and even self-immolation and militant proselytizing. So it is most important to read and study this profound sūtra with a proper understanding of its underlying meaning and spirit.

pf.-5

In the evolution of humankind, we have constantly strengthened our capacity to think and communicate in ways that not only convey information, but also create imagined worlds. It was this ability to forge common myths, imagined orders, and hierarchies that enabled us humans to cooperate in larger numbers than ever before, leading us to evolve from being hunter-gatherers to settling in small agrarian communities, and then in towns and cities. Over the centuries, we have come to believe more and more in the imagined realities of corporations, nations, and hierarchies.

pf.-6

We Buddhists are not immune to these belief systems. For example, Mahāyāna and Vajrayāna Buddhists have evolved their own entrenched hierarchies that often look down on the Śrāvakayāna. Even the often-used term “Hīnayāna” can be used by Mahāyānists in a derogatory and chauvinist way to look down on the śrāvakas. This is really very important to note here because the Lotus Sūtra has been misused time and time again by such chauvinists to justify and entrench their feeling of superiority.

But here in the Lotus Sūtra, the Buddha actually says:

pf.-7

“I teach many dharmas in the world
So that here and there I bring liberation from attachment.
I give the teaching of the three yānas,
Which is my supreme skill in methods.” (2.-25)

pf.-8

If one is a supreme being, if one has mastered the dexterity of skillful means to address the variety of people in the world, one is able to skillfully teach different methods or “yānas” to suit the characteristics and affinities of people who are naturally inclined to different proclivities. The Buddha continues, saying:

pf.-9

“Apart from the skillful methods of supreme beings
Who give the teaching of separate yānas,
There is only one yāna; there is no second,
And there is never in the world a third.” (2.-81)

pf.-10

This, to me, suggests that, apart from the supreme beings who have the capacity to differentiate yānas without categorizing them into hierarchies, for each of us more lowly beings there is only the yāna we are taught and that we should be practicing. This emphasizes the importance of the role of the teacher who gives us the practices suited to our own situation. It is merely our own egos and minds that search for reference points, make judgments, and habitually create these hierarchies. So, it may help to remember that no matter what we understand in this sūtra, the Buddha says:

pf.-11

“A lord of the world appears in the world
In order to teach the wisdom of buddhahood.
That is his one activity, there is no second:
The buddhas do not guide beings with a lesser yāna.” (2.-82)

pf.-12

We must always remember that a tathāgata “appears in this world for that one deed and one action, for that one great deed and great action, and with that intention.” A tathāgata does not discriminate between beings, nor judge the yānas that are taught to them or by them. Remember, the Buddha is also known as the Tathāgata, and also has many more names, including Arhat, the Tibetan of which literally translates as a “foe-destroyer.” But in his case, foes were not people. They were his emotions and his habit of clinging to his ego, which he overcame. Throughout his previous one thousand lifetimes as a bodhisattva, the only things the Tathāgata ever destroyed were his emotions and his ego; he never once harmed a single being.

pf.-13

And so, when we talk about the motivation of tathāgatas to appear in this world, we must remember that, like the Buddha, they have as their only intention and motivation the enlightenment of others. As a buddha, the Tathāgata possesses “supreme skill in methods” and teaches according to “the various aspirations, natures, and thoughts of beings.” In a way, we can say that the Dharma teachings one receives are like bespoke suiting: a tall, lanky man and a round, jolly one could be wearing the same suit, made of the same cloth, and the same thread, but with the skill of an experienced tailor, they are fitted—bespoke—for the individual. From afar, passers-by would say these two men are wearing the same suit, because the end result is that both are wrapped in the same cloth and both look good in it, but the methods used, the size of the patterns, and the particular cut might have been very different. Similarly, the ways in which the Dharma is taught are meant to be similarly bespoke. The Buddha says:

pf.-14

“I teach the Dharma by using a variety of teachings on accomplishment, and various teachings on causes, reasons, parables, supports, and skillful methods.” (2.-59)

The idea is that whatever method—or whichever yāna—is taught to a particular being, that method is the one that will most efficiently awaken that being. In that sense, this idea of a hierarchy is no longer as real as we think.
pf.-15

It is really this idea of skillful means that is so important in this sūtra, and that can help us to appreciate all yānas. The Tibetan for skillful methods is thabs (Skt. upāya). The word thabs brings with it the connotation of a “trick”—or even a “catalyst,” because skillful methods speed things up without affecting the elements involved.
<https://read.84000.co/translation/toh113.html>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 8:38 AM

Title: Re: Did Nichiren Shonin create an entirely different Buddhism for our time

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

You keep saying the Buddha makes sentient beings equal. Buddhas don't modify anything, let alone sentient beings. “Equal” and “unequal” never enter into it.

tkp67 said:

So the supreme beings who see distinction without hierarchy are the delusional ones and the lowly beings enlightened to their nature?

The passage implies that these distinctions they see are in the mind of the lowly being not their own. Why? it is all delusion and ignorance which obfuscates the buddha nature and draws the mind to make distinctions.

Malcolm wrote:

This passage says nothing about the Buddha making all beings equal.

tkp67 said:

I had read this some time ago and found it relevant. It is Dzongsar Jamyang Khyentse Rinpoche's statement on the LS.

As I see it the big difference is that Nichiren is ultimately pointing to each individual's mind as the “perfect tailor” since one's own mind is most intimate with one's own cause, capacity and conditions while stating they should be discarded so the person does not become attached such things in the process. Of course everyone's mileage will vary.

<https://read.84000.co/translation/toh113.html>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 9:01 AM

Title: Re: Did Nichiren Shonin create an entirely different Buddhism for our time

Content:

tkp67 said:

No I said the buddha said as much.

Malcolm wrote:

The Buddha never said in any sutra or tantra anywhere that he makes sentient beings equal.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 9:40 AM

Title: Re: Bitcoin

Content:

DNS said:

Saw this, from finance news this morning:

Almost exactly 11 years ago, a hungry programmer traded 10K bitcoins for two Papa John's pizzas. Even with BTC's recent plunge, those would've been worth $350M+ today. We hope he got extra cheese.

At the time, each bitcoin was probably only pennies in value or less.

Malcolm wrote:

It was a phantom asset then, as it is now. The holdr people, IMO, are well advised to turn this bubble valuation into real assets and exit their positions while they still have one.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 9:42 AM

Title: Re: Karmapa's Occupation

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Just read the office statement. It's clearly stated there, that he attended an ordination, but does not consider it binding.

Tenpel said:

The source says he received bama rabjung and novice vows from the Dalai Lama. So, he is a monk and has the vows of celibacy. He does not say he considers himself an upasaka / lay person after he received the novice vows from the Dalai Lama.

Malcolm wrote:

No, he considers the getsul ordination invalid. Read more closely.

Tenpel said:

As I said already, he does nowhere say he considers his ordination to be invalid, Malcom. Please prove your claim and don't claim unverified things. This topic needs clarity and not ambiguity; or even distortions, leading away or blurring the facts. If you have any proof or evidence that the Karmapa said, he considers his ordination to be invalid, share it with the exact source and quote, otherwise stop to claim unsubstantiated things.

For the time being, to settle the topic hopefully, the official website itself states that the Karmapa received ordination as a getsul and it was especially auspicious to have received it by the Dalai Lama:

“On July 24, the 15th day of the 6th Tibetan month, His Holiness the Gyalwang Karmapa received his ordination as a novice monk (dge tshul pha) from His Holiness the Dalai Lama, who was assisted at the ceremony by His Eminence Gyaltshab Rinpoche. This joyous occasion was marked by three days of celebration at Gyuto Monastery. It is considered particularly auspicious that His Holiness was able to receive his Getsul vows from the Dalai Lama. After the Karmapa received his vows, His Holiness the Dalai Lama conferred novice and final ordination on some 800 monks from southern India.”

<https://kagyuoffice.org/may-august-2002/>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 10:15 AM

Title: Re: How does mantra purify past negative karma?

Content:

Padmist said:

How does mantra purify past negative karma?

Malcolm wrote:

Which mantra?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 7:15 PM

Title: Re: Karmapa's (TTD & OTD) Occupation

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

It's pretty clear to the Tibetan bhikshus I know that he is not a monk or a novice. Indeed, it was they who brought it to my attention.

Tenpel said:

I agree with the honesty - which is a hall mark of his qualities IMO.

However, I strongly feel, Malcom is reframing the whole issue and though he knows so much, he misses here the point - maybe because he is not really familiar with the Vinaya or didn't receive commentaries on it.

First of all, renunciation is something to be developed and not there from the start for most people when they ordain. Though renunciation is the best motivation, it's not the decisive principle of receiving the vows; or having received the vows (or not having received them). As I said, mundane motivations are also permissible say the commentaries - e.g. protection from fear or protection from hunger (when I remember the oral Vinaya commentaries I received correctly, it were these two.) It's recommended at least before ordination to generate a type of artificial renunciation. But this is not the decisive principle. Nobody is expected to have, or to take ordination with a fully fledged renunciation. Not having pure renunciation when taking the vows or after having received the vows does not make them invalid. The vows are been produced by requesting them and receiving them, the proper ritual, and this has been the case here, he requested them and he received them, and it was a proper ritual. You can read details about the coming into existence of vows also in the Abhidharmas or Jangon Kongtrul's Boom 5 on Ethics. For the ritual see also the 84.000 website.

Now, with respect to intention. Sorry, it's a lame excuse to say he / I didn't have the intention to receive the novice vows when going to the ordination ceremony. Why? With respect to intention there is "causal motivation" and "time motivation" - according to the Abhidharma. So, if he didn't have the causal motivation to take the novice vows when he went to the ordination ceremony, then he has had the time motivation when asking three times for the novice ordination during the ritual. Hence, he had the motivation at the time of receiving the vows. It is similar to having the causal motivation not wanting to kill the mosquito but finding it unbearable then when the mosquito is too much irritating, killing it. It's the fully fledged act of killing. Or not wanting to give to beggars but being overwhelmed by the sufferings of a beggar, out of strong compassion or empathy giving him alms. It's a fully fledged act of giving. Or not wanting to engage in sexual activities because you took the vow of celibacy but being overwhelmed by sexual desire, engaging in sexual activity through one of the three doors at the time of an opportunity. It's the fully fledged act of having broken your vow of celibacy. You cannot escape this fact of having done the act by saying "but I didn't have the intention to have sex." You didn't have the intention initially (causal motivation) but you had it at the time of the act (time motivation).

Moreover, it would be rather a matter to discuss this with your abbot than speculating freely but with many doubts about it, without having clarity - as it seems.

And then there is another problem here, not being a monk but collecting money or receiving alms as a monk. There is no statement whatsoever on the website or awareness in the public or any type of clear statement that he is not a monk anymore but there is a statement on his official website that he is ordained and received the getsul vows. Receiving alms as a monk without being it is extremely negative karma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 7:58 PM

Title: Re: Did Nichiren Shonin create an entirely different Buddhism for our time

Content:

Minobu said:

i just cannot believe Nichiren would teach that the Buddha nature is absent till you hear the ODaimoku.

Queequeg said:

Yes. It doesn't make sense. That's why it seems to refer only to one aspect of the Buddhanature - the ability to perceive it, which is initiated when you hear the teaching for the first time.

Malcolm wrote:

It's the difference between what is termed natural gotra and activated gotra. All sentient beings have the former, only those who have taken the bodhisattva vow have the latter. I suspect this Yogacara idea is behind the distinction being made here, notion one does not have Buddhanature until you hear the teachings. I suspect much is being lost in translation, and as far as I know there is very little serious work on Nichiren Buddhism by academic scholars outside of Japan.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 8:18 PM

Title: Re: Did Nichiren Shonin create an entirely different Buddhism for our time

Content:

Queequeg said:

Yes. It doesn't make sense. That's why it seems to refer only to one aspect of the Buddhanature - the ability to perceive it, which is initiated when you hear the teaching for the first time.

Malcolm wrote:

It's the difference between what is termed natural gotra and activated gotra. All sentient beings have the former, only those who have taken the bodhisattva vow have the latter. I suspect this Yogacara idea is behind the distinction being made here, notion one does not have Buddhanature until you hear the teachings. I suspect much is being lost in translation, and as far as I know there is very little serious work on Nichiren Buddhism by academic scholars outside of Japan.

Queequeg said:

That is interesting. I suspect the Yogacara influence comes in through Tiantai/Tendai, and so the direct connection may be obscured. Where can one find explanations on the natural and activated gotra?

And your observation about Nichiren Buddhism scholarship sounds right. I don't think anyone in the West has dug much deeper than to look at the subject from a historical perspective. The investigations of the teachings themselves have only been scratching the surface. I suspect there is a lot more vajrayana integrated into his teachings. The problem in the West is the investigation is not that deep. In Japan, the scholars tend to be sectarians who take Nichiren's criticisms of Shingon at face value and so can't bring themselves to consider that Vajrayana is at play. I brought up Lucia Dolce's study suggesting the influence of Vajrayana to some Japanese Nichiren scholars and they reacted very negatively. I was actually surprised at their response.

Malcolm wrote:

The Mahayanasutralamkara.

By the 12th century, Esoteric Buddhism is baked into all schools in Japan, IMO.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 8:49 PM

Title: Re: Hello From An Amateur Madhyamaka Scholar!

Content:

Subcontrary said:

I am very interested in the Madhyamaka school and I am here to seek clarity regarding many of its complicated doctrines!

Johnny Dangerous said:

I was taught by one my teachers to engage in Madhyamaka analysis in daily life. A lot of Tibetan teachers teach these at basic Dharma talks. That makes it much easier. It is not really complicated at all, as Malcolm says. It also means it has the exact opposite purpose of what people assume - that it is just supposed to be some scholarly teaching, with no practical value.

I do struggle to read Nagarjuna sometimes, but that's just my education level and conditioning, it is not hard to understand what he is talking about if you apply it.

Subcontrary said:

That's good advice! I do try to engage in Madhyamaka analysis in daily life, insofar as I understand it. I'm very happy to hear that it's not actually complicated; hopefully one day I'll experience what you mean!

I'm told that Nagarjuna founded Madhyamaka thought in his book Mūlamadhyamakakārikā, but I have not found any English translations! Do you know of any?

EDIT: NVM two seconds of googling yielded <https://terebess.hu/english/Nagarjuna.pdf> and <https://www.aaari.info/notes/03-06-06Tam2.pdf>

Malcolm wrote:

It's best if you begin with Aryadevas 400 verses or Candrakirti Madhyamaka avatara.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 8:59 PM

Title: Re: Did Nichiren Shonin create an entirely different Buddhism for our time

Content:

tkp67 said:

No I said the buddha said as much.

Malcolm wrote:

The Buddha never said in any sutra or tantra anywhere that he makes sentient beings equal.

tkp67 said:

For your review

Shariputra, you should know that at the start I took a vow, hoping to make all persons equal to me, without any distinction between us, and what I long ago hoped for has now been fulfilled.

I have converted all living beings and caused them all to enter the buddha way.

If when I encounter living beings

I were in all cases to teach them the buddha way, those without wisdom would become confused and in their bewilderment would fail to accept my teachings.

Malcolm wrote:

You still miss the point. All sentient beings have the same potential. That is not given to them by a Buddha. It's connate, not fabricated. When the Buddha in the LS predicted all beings to full buddhahood, all beings were already in possession of the potential to become Buddhas. That's what ekayana means. There is no special sauce.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 9:05 PM

Title: Re: Losing faith in enlightenment

Content:

Mirror said:

Is there a possibility of being reborn into more persons than just one?

Malcolm wrote:

Not really. When one sees multiple tulkus of one person, its usually because different lineage heads of different monasteries recognize a tulku of that person. It is not an organized institution with the central clearing house of incarnations. It is pretty much a free for all, and competition among the backers of competing tulkus can be quite fierce and even descent into all out war, like in the present day Karmapa affair.

Emanations of high level bodhisattvas don't need to be recognized and enthroned. The days of tulkus are numbered.

Crazywisdom said:

Bla bla bla. They have mind, body and speech emanations. The lineage is what matters not some interesting innovations from Massachusetts. The teaching is that buddhas can emanate countless ways. If someone is an emanation of so and so depends if their actions resemble so and so. Malcolm mocks this but professes Buddha was a cartoon. It's better to think in pragmatic terms.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't take the human institution of Tibetan Tulkus very seriously, because it is 99.999% politics and money, that's the pragmatic view of Tibetan Tulkus.

It amounts to blessing little kids like they do statues, hoping they will turn out ok. Some do; most, meh.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 9:41 PM

Title: Re: How does mantra purify past negative karma?

Content:

Padmist said:

How does mantra purify past negative karma?

Malcolm wrote:

Which mantra?

Padmist said:

This one

Malcolm wrote:

One is called the "door mantra." The idea is that anyone who walks under it will have a lot of karma purified.

The second one is called the Six Spaces of Samantabhadra and comes from the 17 Dzogchen Tantras. It is the form of the six buddhas of the six realms in the form of syllables. Thus, seeing it creates a positive cause for meeting the path in this life or another.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 9:45 PM

Title: Re: Did Nichiren Shonin create an entirely different Buddhism for our time

Content:

tkp67 said:

For your review

Malcolm wrote:

You still miss the point. All sentient beings have the same potential. That is not given to them by a Buddha. It's connate, not fabricated. When the Buddha in the LS predicted all beings to full buddhahood, all beings were already in possession of the potential to become Buddhas. That's what ekayana means. There is no special sauce.

tkp67 said:

I understand what you are saying succinctly. It does not read differently in my mind than yours.

Malcolm wrote:

The translation for that passage you are using as a proof text is incorrect. The Watson translation is deprecated, and full of inaccuracies. Therefore, your idea about this passage and its reading are simply incorrect.

It correctly reads:

"Just as I saw and just as I thought,
And just as I resolved in the past,
My aspirations have been fulfilled
And I teach enlightenment and buddhahood."

As long as you guys keep relying on substandard scholarship, you will be subject to serious deviations in your understanding of the Dharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 9:49 PM

Title: Re: Vajrayana as an aspect of Nichiren practice

Content:

narhwal90 said:

There appears to be variation in the acknowledgement of esoteric influence among Nichiren schools at least- Igarashi (2012) documents some of the variety of ritual prayer developed and offered by N.Shu. I get the impression these methods and concepts were adopted as current mikkyo technology, if you will, by the early Nichiren disciples. Nichiren employed such a device himself when visiting his dying mother.

Queequeg said:

Nichiren and his immediate disciples were trained in Tendai. They probably took a lot of mikkyo for granted. And many later followers continued to study at Mt. Hiei.

Malcolm wrote:

As I understand things, it took quite some time for independent Nichiren institutions to manifest.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 9:57 PM

Title: Re: How does mantra purify past negative karma?

Content:

Padmist said:

This one

Malcolm wrote:

One is called the "door mantra." The idea is that anyone who walks under it will have a lot of karma purified.

The second one is called the Six Spaces of Samantabhadra and comes from the 17 Dzogchen Tantras. It is the form of the six buddhas of the six realms in the form of syllables. Thus, seeing it creates a positive cause for meeting the path in this life or another.

Crazywisdom said:

That's the what and the when not the how.

Malcolm wrote:

From the point of view of seeing, it is the how. You look at it, that's enough.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 10:02 PM

Title: Re: Did Nichiren Shonin create an entirely different Buddhism for our time

Content:

narhwal90 said:

84000's edition reads differently;

Malcolm wrote:

It reads correctly.

Illarazza's idea that the Buddha specially blessed Kumarajiva's mind to produce a translation that is the real intent of the sūtra is like the idea of fundamentalist Christians that the translation group that produced the King James Bible was anointed by God to their task. In other words, complete hooey.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 10:41 PM

Title: Re: Did Nichiren Shonin create an entirely different Buddhism for our time

Content:

narhwal90 said:

BDK's edition generally agrees with Watson. 84000's edition reads differently;

Malcolm wrote:

Inaccurate is inaccurate.

In order to have an accurate translation, one would need to have Kumarajiva's original (since his recension has been subject to anonymous editing), The Tibetan, which was made from an 8th century Sanskrit version, and a Nepalese copy, plus any readings found in the Sūtrasammucaya, etc. Otherwise, what one ends up with is misunderstanding piled on mistranslations piled on misreadings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 10:58 PM

Title: Re: Vajrayana as an aspect of Nichiren practice

Content:

Queequeg said:

But, that said, I think a big part of his message was to rebel against the exclusivity of Esoteric Buddhism in those days. I think this was the same for Honen and Shinran. He was looking to open the path for all people, not just those who had the capacity and opportunity to become monks.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, Vajrayāna tends to create brahmins where there are none, for example Tibetan "ngakpas," especially when it comes to the earlier tantras, like those that spread to China and thence to Japan.

One of the attractive features of Indian Vajrayāna is that it took rituals like homavidhi, burnt offerings, away from brahmins and recontextualized them for Buddhists. For example, Anandagarbha has a whole argument detailing why Buddhist homavidhi is superior to Brahmin homavidhi.

However, Japan, unlike Tibet, was a highly organized society where central authorities were much more present in daily life. With Tibet, you had nomads, bandits, and people pretty much doing as they pleased in areas outside of immediate urban centers and great monastic institutions.

In this sort of Japanese environment, it is easy to see how Buddhism became stratified, and why, in the 13th century, populist forms of Buddhism arose. Actually, my read of Dogen, based on recent reading, was that he was engaged in an idiosyncratic pushback against the populism that exemplified Pure Land and Nichiren, as well as a reform movement aimed at introducing 13th century, Chinese style monastic Chan Buddhism into Japan.

In Tibet, exactly the opposite was happening—there was major institutional pushback against Buddhist populism, especially against the treasure tradition. Also, Mongols were invading... (Dogen also took credit for repelling the Mongols, BTW.)

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, May 25th, 2021 at 11:24 PM

Title: Re: Vajrayana as an aspect of Nichiren practice

Content:

Queequeg said:

But, that said, I think a big part of his message was to rebel against the exclusivity of Esoteric Buddhism in those days. I think this was the same for Honen and Shinran. He was looking to open the path for all people, not just those who had the capacity and opportunity to become monks.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, Vajrayāna tends to create brahmins where there are none, for example Tibetan "ngakpas," especially when it comes to the earlier tantras, like those that spread to China and thence to Japan.

One of the attractive features of Indian Vajrayāna is that it took rituals like homavidhi, burnt offerings, away from brahmins and recontextualized them for Buddhists. For example, Anandagarbha has a whole argument detailing why Buddhist homavidhi is superior to Brahmin homavidhi.

Queequeg said:

Interesting. I'm sure you know, Homa/Goma is one of the highest practices in Tendai and Shingon - usually related to Fudo Myoo (Acalanatha). It is a wonder to consider this practice originated thousands of years ago and then was passed on to Japan.

Malcolm wrote:

You can thank the Persians, they started it.

Queequeg said:

Is this the conflict between Nyingma and Sarma? With Nyingma being the popular tradition?

Malcolm wrote:

The 13th century marked the beginning of institutional consolidation. But there were a number of populist trends in Tibet at the time, and yes, they were largely merged into modern Nyingma— especially the rise of the cult of Padmasambhava and the treasure tradition and the emphasis on Avalokiteśvara as the national savior.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 26th, 2021 at 12:58 AM

Title: Re: Hello From An Amateur Madhyamaka Scholar!

Content:

Astus said:

A course in Madhyamaka with Thomas Doctor has started this month:

<https://dharmafun.org/courses/middleway/>

Malcolm wrote:

Indeed, can't speak to the quality of the course, I am sure it is fine, but the message board is a nightmare of proliferation, abandon hope all ye...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 26th, 2021 at 1:01 AM

Title: Re: Vajrayana as an aspect of Nichiren practice

Content:

Minobu said:

He took what was there and mashed it all together in order for it to actually be a viable practice for the people of Mappo.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, the tantras tell a different story about the best practice for "Mappo." YMMV.

Whatever story you find most palatable.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 26th, 2021 at 1:12 AM

Title: Re: Karmapa's (TTD & OTD) Occupation

Content:

Thubten Wangmo said:

I am thinking that renunciation and intention are analysed here, but what is embedded in the Karmapa's statement is the factor of doubt.

How does doubt affect vows, Tenzin? If you doubt about your ability to practise as a monk are you no longer a monk? Has the Karmapa been doing Sojong, etc? What constitutes actively holding vows?

And Malcolm, to which school do your 'Bhikshus' belong and with what reasoning do they say the Karmapa is 'not a monk or a novice monk'? This does leave the last category of 'intermediate' ordination.

Malcolm wrote:

Mulasarvastivadin (The rules of Vinaya are the same in ALL Tibetan schools) and is based on OTD's statement in Tibetan, not English.

"Bar ma rab 'byung" (*madhyappravajita) is a Tibetan invention, common in all Tibetan monastic institutes, but still a Tibetan idea. You will not find that term in Vinaya itself.

There are only eight kinds of pratimokṣa vows: upāsaka, upavasa, śramanera, bhikṣu + their equivalents for women. The śikṣamāṇā probationary period for women is not really considered a separate vow. Also, there is no celibate upāsaka vow in Mulasarvastivada.

It should be noted that he made this announcement in January 2019, the month he allegedly ended contact with Vikki Hui Xin Han, which lead to her lawsuit filed in June 2019.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 26th, 2021 at 2:52 AM

Title: Re: Karmapa's (TTD & OTD) Occupation

Content:

Thubten Wangmo said:

Yes, Malcolm, I had noted the tie up of the dates with the alleged interactions mentioned in that case.

The sense of 'searching for blame' in the confusion somewhere in his early experiences, the statement that he would 'like to start from the beginning again'; to have perfect vows before death; in that context it makes this talk seem like hidden messages he can't state outright.

If we conclude that he no longer has vows, and is 'starting again' and that he also took getsul vows with HHDL, as Tenzin says, then what is in between is breaking them.

Malcolm wrote:

Śramaneras also can commit defeats, which bars them from reordaining as a novice.

Ergo, better to be an upāsaka.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 26th, 2021 at 2:53 AM

Title: Re: Karmapa's (TTD & OTD) Occupation

Content:

Hazel said:

A reminder that discussion of the recent scandal is currently locked to avoid speculation while details develop. I encourage people to remain on the topic of Karmapa's occupation and monastic status.

Malcolm wrote:

In fact, the two issues appear related, but correlation is not causation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 26th, 2021 at 2:59 AM

Title: Re: Vajrayana as an aspect of Nichiren practice

Content:

Minobu said:

Aslo you did the whole sit in a box thing for almost three years and what did it do for you...

Malcolm wrote:

Some of the best years of my life, it was nearly four, and no, I did not sit in a box. That is not really a thing in my tradition.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 26th, 2021 at 3:07 AM

Title: Re: Vajrayana as an aspect of Nichiren practice

Content:

illaraza said:

*This does not apply at this time because there is no unity in the Sangha and therefore, there is no unity to break.

Malcolm wrote:

Sanghabheda, causing a schism in the Sangha can still occur. But only a bhikṣu can commit this downfall. See Abhidharmakoṣa, 4.100.

illaraza said:

“Now in the two thousand years of the True and Counterfeit [Dharmas] when they kept and relied upon the Lesser Vehicle and Provisional Great Vehicle, and practices putting one’s merit [effort] into them, in general there was benefit.

Malcolm wrote:

These five hundred year periods only apply to Sūtrayāna. They don't apply to Vajrayāna at all. But, this is your forum, you can believe whatever story makes you the most happy.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 26th, 2021 at 3:08 AM

Title: Re: Where has Gregor gone?

Content:

Shotenzenjin said:

He hasn't posted for a while I enjoyed his posts what ever happened to him?

Malcolm wrote:

He rainbowed out.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 26th, 2021 at 3:11 AM

Title: Re: Did Nichiren Shonin create an entirely different Buddhism for our time

Content:

illaraza said:

"Having thus manifested the ten divine powers, Sakyamuni Buddha transmitted the five characters of Myo, Ho, Ren, Ge, and Kyo to the original disciples of the Buddha since the eternal past, who had sprung up from underground." Kanjin Honzon Sho, Nichiren Shu (NOPPA 1991) p 140; MW 176.

Malcolm wrote:

Really, in Chinese characters? Ancient or modern? In Kanji?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 26th, 2021 at 3:22 AM

Title: Re: Debate over 'deathless door'

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

You're playing Chan master with strangers, people who don't even practice in your tradition.

Malcolm wrote:

He does not even practice in his own tradition. Its all blah blah blah.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 26th, 2021 at 3:24 AM

Title: Re: Vajrayana as an aspect of Nichiren practice

Content:

Queequeg said:

Yes. I recall. And Eijo got upset and hasn't been back since.

Malcolm wrote:

DW is a ghost town.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 26th, 2021 at 3:30 AM

Title: Re: To use a timer or not to use a timer...

Content:

Hazel said:

I decided to just stop tracking anything or using a timer.

Malcolm wrote:

Good. Timers are useless. Unless you are one of those people who plans to advertise your number "flight" hours as an inducement to get people to study with you.

<https://www.pathofsincerity.com/top-six-benefits-ive-gotten-10000-hours-meditation-practice/>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 26th, 2021 at 4:18 AM

Title: Re: Did Nichiren Shonin create an entirely different Buddhism for our time

Content:

tkp67 said:

And he saw all phenomena are uniformly empty , tranquil , without birth , without extinction which translates to equal or without distinction

Malcolm wrote:

Easy words to say.

tkp67 said:

this is why the four standards were taught

They are also defined as those bodhisattvas who follow the four standards: (1) to rely on the Law and not upon persons; (2) to rely on the meaning of the teaching and not upon the words; (3) to rely on wisdom and not upon discriminative thinking; and (4) to rely on sutras that are complete and final and not upon those that are not complete and final.

Malcolm wrote:

Generally, the order actually given in the sūtras is as follows, for example, in the Ugraparipṛcchā, Ratnarāśi, etc.: "Rely on the meaning, not on the syllables; rely on gnosis (jñāna), not on consciousness (vijñāna); rely on the dharma, not on the person; rely on sūtras of definitive meaning, not on sūtras of provisional meaning."

Then of course this leaves open the question, "what is a definitive sūtra?" The Buddha defines this in many ways. For example, in the Bodhisattvapiṭaka he defines a definitive sūtra as one that explains the meaning comprehensively and that introduces the result. Repeating those criteria, the Aksayamati Sūtra expands the list by pointing out that provisional sūtras teach on self, persons, living beings, etc.; those sūtras that teach emptiness, signlessness, wishlessness, nonfabrication, nonorigination, nonproduction, absence of entities, selflessness, and so on are definitive. The Anavataptanāgarāja Sutra teaches us that sūtras which teach dependent origination are definitive sūtras, because that which arises in dependence is selfless, etc.

Thus, there are many definitive sūtras, not only one or two.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 26th, 2021 at 4:34 AM

Title: Re: Did Nichiren Shonin create an entirely different Buddhism for our time

Content:

tkp67 said:

The one that lacks any exclusion to Shakyamuni's complete supreme enlightenment which details the nine distinct realms he understood from within that enlightenment.

Malcolm wrote:

The Buddha is omniscient. That omniscience is detailed in many sūtras. What was he omniscient about? The nature of everything in the three realms and all paths of realization. Since this omniscience is discussed in many sūtras, by your definition, those too are definitive sūtras, for example, the Heart Sūtra.

The numeration is of no concern, whether it is all three realms and all paths, or the six realms and four types of realized persons, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 26th, 2021 at 4:51 AM

Title: Re: Vajrayana as an aspect of Nichiren practice

Content:

Queequeg said:

that's just a objective fact that NY has the most and best culture.

Malcolm wrote:

Right, and it gave us Trump. Good going NY.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 26th, 2021 at 11:05 AM

Title: Re: Vajrayana as an aspect of Nichiren practice

Content:

Minobu said:

Aslo you did the whole sit in a box thing for almost three years and what did it do for you...

Malcolm wrote:

Some of the best years of my life, it was nearly four, and no, I did not sit in a box. That is not really a thing in my tradition.

PadmaVonSamba said:

We all spend our entire lives living in a small, dark, calcium box perched on top of a fragile neck, "and yet, what did it do for you ?"
But nobody seems to take issue with that.

Likewise, many people will spend 3 years of their lives sitting in cars stopped in traffic. Nobody thinks that's weird (well, some of us think it is!).

A Buddhist three-year retreat makes a lot of sense, actually.

Malcolm wrote:

For some. I don't really recommend it, though.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 26th, 2021 at 11:10 AM

Title: Re: Vajrayana as an aspect of Nichiren practice

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

We all spend our entire lives living in a small, dark, calcium box perched on top of a fragile neck, "and yet, what did it do for you ?"
But nobody seems to take issue with that.

Likewise, many people will spend 3 years of their lives sitting in cars stopped in traffic. Nobody thinks that's weird (well, some of us think it is!).

A Buddhist three-year retreat makes a lot of sense, actually.

Malcolm wrote:

Even so....most people can't manage the transition...

For some. I don't really recommend it, though.

PadmaVonSamba said:

...well, compared with spending 8,760 hours sitting in a stopped car on a freeway...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 26th, 2021 at 7:03 PM

Title: Re: Karmapa's (TTD & OTD) Occupation

Content:

PeterC said:

I forget the mulasarvastivada requirement for validity of ordinations - how many fully ordained monks without unconfessed downfalls acting as preceptors, etc. - but am I right in thinking that OTD acted as preceptor in sramanera and bikshu ordinations after the ordination which he considered not valid?

Tenpel said:

There was a discussion with respect to Dagri Rinpoche about that. The Bhikkhunīs investigating the subject matter found out: if you as the vow taker fully believed in the preceptor being properly ordained and holding the vows, your ordination is valid. They had sources for this. I have to check my emails for the details. If HH Karmapa conferred ordination or participated in ordination rituals I don't know the slightest.

PeterC said:

Thanks. Curious if they had a rationale for that. I guess if you didn't believe that theory, then you would have to believe that there have been no valid ordinations for centuries now, because the presence of one monk with one unexpiated downfall in an ordination a thousand years ago would have invalidated all ordinations in which his successors ever participated.

Malcolm wrote:

Novice ordinations may be conducted by one fully ordained senior monk. Full ordination requires a preceptor, a so called secret master, etc., a full quorum of bhikshus.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 26th, 2021 at 7:51 PM

Title: Re: Karmapa's (TTD & OTD) Occupation

Content:

PeterC said:

Thanks. Curious if they had a rationale for that. I guess if you didn't believe that theory, then you would have to believe that there have been no valid ordinations for centuries now, because the presence of one monk with one unexpiated downfall in an ordination a thousand years ago would have invalidated all ordinations in which his successors ever participated.

Malcolm wrote:

Novice ordinations may be conducted by one fully ordained senior monk. Full ordination requires a preceptor, a so called secret master, etc., a full quorum of bhikshus.

PeterC said:

And one of that quorum having an unconfessed downfall or a deficiency in their own ordination - is that a fatal defect?

Malcolm wrote:

No, that's the purpose of the quorum, in case someone has committed a defeat, the ordination is still valid.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 26th, 2021 at 8:22 PM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

If a truly existent self was derived from the experience

Malcolm wrote:

"Self" is just an abstraction, a universal. In Buddhism, only particulars are granted any amount of validity, and even that is contested.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 26th, 2021 at 9:04 PM

Title: Re: Karmapa's (TTD & OTD) Occupation

Content:

Tenpel said:

I will disengage here now in the forum. My former comment where I commented on barma rabjung ordination, celibacy etc, based on qualified sources, was not approved with the claim "harsh accusations without knowing much..." (I didn't accuse anybody harshly but mocked about Malcom replying to my comment by invoking anonymous higher authority (Tibetan monks who believe HHK is not a monk) without using sound reasoning, quotes, scriptures or arguments.) I don't want to waste time. I posted the essence of that comment on my blog for those interested.

Malcolm wrote:

We have OTD's own statement on the matter, Tenphel. That's sufficient.

It's quite amazing that the you regularly seek to air the dirty laundry of the Buddhist world, but for some strange reason you consider certain parties above reproach, based on no citations, reasoning, or common sense when you are contradicted by their own words. The "intermediate ordination" is Tibetan fabrication, not found anywhere in Vinaya, as OTD himself admits in his statement of January, 2019.

In short, it's clear OTD does not at this juncture consider himself anything more than an upasaka.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, May 26th, 2021 at 10:18 PM

Title: Re: Vajrayana as an aspect of Nichiren practice

Content:

Queequeg said:

And here comes my main criticism of Nichiren and his movement

Malcolm wrote:

Uh oh...get ready for for the fire and brimstone response QQ. We'll have some nice BBQ waiting for you when you arrive in Avici.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 27th, 2021 at 12:44 AM

Title: Re: Vajrayana as an aspect of Nichiren practice

Content:

Minobu said:

The point of Nichiren iShonin's Dharma is to utilize your Buddha Nature and nourish your higher worlds so you can function as a Bodhisattva instead of a troll.

just saying.

Malcolm wrote:

I thought it was all included in ichinensanzen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 27th, 2021 at 3:35 AM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

Even as pretas (hungry ghosts) are described as having tiny necks and other physical attributes,

Malcolm wrote:

There are many kinds of pretas, not only this pathetic kind.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 27th, 2021 at 4:36 AM

Title: Re: Did Nichiren Shonin create an entirely different Buddhism for our time

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The Mahayanasutralamkara.

By the 12th century, Esoteric Buddhism is baked into all schools in Japan, IMO.

Queequeg said:

I agree. There are some scholars who argue that Japanese culture, even to this day, is permeated by Esoteric ideas. I think they tend to come from Tendai or Shingon backgrounds. To everyone who has a sectarian agenda to keep Vajrayana out, this is of course not acceptable.

My understanding is that younger scholars are not as limited. It's changing. But many of those scholars have a hard time getting positions.

Malcolm wrote:

One thing of interest I learned the other day was the along with the Suvarnaprabhasa Sūtra (included in the tantra division in Tibetan Buddhism), the Lotus was among very first sūtras introduced to Japan, and was prominent in Japanese Buddhism right from the start.

It began to make sense to me then why there was such an amount of fuss over this sūtra in Japan.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 27th, 2021 at 6:39 AM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

In everyday life you nevertheless have a self or an identity, which is defined by the society. This is necessary for your functioning and survival in the society.

However your identity is not your essence. Think of someone who has amnesia. They have no idea who they are. So if your identity is not intrinsic to your nature, what is—if anything?

Malcolm wrote:

Nothing at all, other than luminosity.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 27th, 2021 at 9:21 AM

Title: Re: Did Nichiren Shonin create an entirely different Buddhism for our time

Content:

Queequeg said:

I agree. There are some scholars who argue that Japanese culture, even to this day, is permeated by Esoteric ideas. I think they tend to come from Tendai or Shingon backgrounds. To everyone who has a sectarian agenda to keep Vajrayana out, this is of course not acceptable.

My understanding is that younger scholars are not as limited. Its changing. But many of those scholars have a hard time getting positions.

Malcolm wrote:

One thing of interest I learned the other day was the along with the Suvarnaprabhasa Sūtra (included in the tantra division in Tibetan Buddhism), the Lotus was among very first sūtras introduced to Japan, and was prominent in Japanese Buddhism right from the start.

It began to make sense to me then why there was such an amount of fuss over this sūtra in Japan.

Queequeg said:

Yes. I believe the Lotus, Golden Light (Suvarnaprabhasa), and the Benevolent Kings Sutras were the first Buddhist texts given to the Emperor by the King of Baekje (sp?), along with a statue of the Buddha and several monks and nuns. From there, it was promoted by the periodic recitation at the network of national temples that had been set up in all the provinces. Then later when the Tiantai lineage was brought back from China by Saicho, the Lotus was framed as a sutra for the protection of the nation anew, this time from Mt. Hiei which is located NE of Kyoto, to protect from evil spirits that were said to come from that direction.

Malcolm wrote:

This is interesting, in that it suggests the LS was already at the center of a populist Buddhist movement in Japan quite early:

Meanwhile, undoubtedly in part in connection with the patronage of the Tendai lineages by the Northern Fujiwara House, the Lotus Sūtra was the central object of veneration and more general ritual concern at court. The Lotus Sūtra was already prominently featured in the Sanbō'e, which included a discussion of the Eight Lotus Sūtra Lectures Assembly at Kumano. It is important here to emphasize that it mentioned the presence not only of lay aristocrats at the assembly but also of "monks" in "deer skin," which suggests the presence of mountain ascetics (shugenja), who might be connected to the category of ambiguous religious practitioners called “holy ones” (hijiri), discussed in the next section. Indeed, faith in the Lotus Sūtra was clearly now not limited to the aristocracy since it had been disseminated to other groups in the populace. For example, the tales in the collection Honchō hokke genki (hereafter Hokke genki; Accounts of Lotus Sūtra Anomalies in Japan) (ca. 1041–1044) depict such anomalies from the standpoint of the so-called “Lotus [Sūtra] holy ones” (Hokke hijiri or jikyōja), which makes it clear that such faith spread across classes over the course of the mid Heian period onwards.⁶ Indeed, these figures deployed rhetoric of the Lotus Sūtra to legitimate their position within the evolving Buddhist communities of their day (Deal 1993: 267–268).

— A cultural history of Japanese Buddhism.

However it undermines the notion Nichiren was the initiator of such sentiments, or that Nichiren was a unique working class hero of the Lotus sutra struggling in an unprecedented confrontation with Buddhist elites.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 27th, 2021 at 10:46 AM

Title: Re: How's America going?

Content:

tobes said:

2020 was truly an epic year for our American friends, who largely dominate the forum (demographically).

It was hard to watch from the outside - from bodies piling up in NYC to police killing black men in cold blood to the batsh*t crazy election and the storming of Capital Hill by white nationalists.

Of course, none of these threads are all suddenly resolved, but it looks from the outside like things have taken a massive turn for the better. Good vaccination rates, a sane leader etc.

How is it feeling on the ground, in your hood?

Malcolm wrote:

We all feel kind of like June Osborn.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 27th, 2021 at 6:45 PM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment Soon

Content:

treehuggingoctopus said:

And yet they say: "From the Yangzab Terma Dzogchen Cycle of the Yangzab Konchok Chidu."

So, Yangzab or Konchok Chindu?

heart said:

The name in Tibetan "bka' rdzogs pa chen po yang zab dkon mchog spyi 'dus" as you can see the name includes Yangzab.

/magnus

treehuggingoctopus said:

Yes I know. It would be crystal clear if they just wrote "the Yangzab Konchok Chindu." But they also talk of "the Yangzab Terma Dzogchen Cycle," and in the Drikung context that would normally mean Rinchen Phutsok's Yangzab. Hence my confusion.

Malcolm wrote:

Perhaps people who wrote flier do not know the difference.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 27th, 2021 at 7:41 PM

Title: Re: Did Nichiren Shonin create an entirely different Buddhism for our time

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This is interesting, in that it suggests the LS was already at the center of a populist Buddhist movement in Japan quite early:

Queequeg said:

I think that sounds right. I'm not that familiar with Asuka and Nara period Buddhism. My impression is that Buddhism was a state and aristocratic concern.

Malcolm wrote:

This book I am reading seeks to revise this assessment, in light of many new archaeological findings in Japan, which suggests that Buddhism was a far more popular movement from its earliest presence in Japan, than was hitherto believed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 27th, 2021 at 7:56 PM

Title: Re: Did Nichiren Shonin create an entirely different Buddhism for our time

Content:

Queequeg said:

I think that sounds right. I'm not that familiar with Asuka and Nara period Buddhism. My impression is that Buddhism was a state and aristocratic concern.

Malcolm wrote:

This book I am reading seeks to revise this assessment, in light of many new archaeological findings in Japan, which suggests that Buddhism was a far more popular movement from its earliest presence in Japan, than was hitherto believed.

Queequeg said:

Interesting. "A Cultural History of Japanese Buddhism"? I will check that out.

Malcolm wrote:

The authors point out that Buddhism in its early days was actually practiced more privately, and that the whole Shotoku Daishi legend is largely a tall tale.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, May 27th, 2021 at 10:38 PM

Title: Re: Did Nichiren Shonin create an entirely different Buddhism for our time

Content:

Queequeg said:

Interesting. "A Cultural History of Japanese Buddhism"? I will check that out.

Malcolm wrote:

The authors point out that Buddhism in its early days was actually practiced more privately, and that the whole Shotoku Daishi legend is largely a tall tale.

Queequeg said:

That sounds about right. I look forward to reading that book.

Malcolm wrote:

In many respects it reads like a text book (which it is), and is not the most thrilling writing ever, but each chapter has an extensive bibliography, and authors take pains not to retread old material, but focus on the social dimension of Japanese Buddhist history, it's not a book about the various schools as much as it is a book about how Japanese society and Buddhism evolved together from the beginnings of Buddhism's introduction by Korean merchants, and so on.

I will add, that one thing of interest to me is the parallel developments of Buddhism on opposite ends of Asia, in Tibet and Japan (While I was never interested in Chinese or Korean Buddhism per se, I was interested in Japanese Buddhism first, and then later, Tibetan Buddhism.)

Japan's economy and society was not notably disrupted by the Great Buddhist Purge of 845 in China, which threw all of mainland Asia into social and economic disarray. While Buddhism was present in Tibet in some form or another since roughly the 5th century CE, when a copy of the Karandavyūha was supposedly presented to King Lhatō Thori (27th king of Tibet), and Tibetans were certainly aware of Buddhism since they regularly sacked Khotan (there is a whole sūtra about this), Buddhism did not begin to be formally established until the 7th century, during the reign of King Songtsan Gampo (?-649, he was reputed to have lived 82 years, but info is sketchy, his reign was from 629-649). So given the implied dates of his life span, he was a contemporary of Shōtoku.

Interestingly enough, it is quite likely that this planted the seed of the Avalokiteśvara Devotion in Tibet.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 28th, 2021 at 1:37 AM

Title: Re: Did Nichiren Shōnin create an entirely different Buddhism for our time

Content:

illaraza said:

"Having thus manifested the ten divine powers, Sakyamuni Buddha transmitted the five characters of Myō, Hō, Ren, Ge, and Kyo to the original disciples of the Buddha since the eternal past, who had sprung up from underground." Kanjin Honzon Shō, Nichiren Shū (NOPPA 1991) p 140; MW 176.

Malcolm wrote:

Really, in Chinese characters? Ancient or modern? In Kanji?

illaraza said:

Yes, The True Object of Worship is preserved in its original ancient Chinese, with Nichiren's seal and signature.

Malcolm wrote:

That really does not fly:

सद्धर्मपुण्डरीकसूत्र

There are 9 syllables in the original name of the sūtra, as it was spoken by the Buddha. The Buddha never taught this sūtra in Chinese, 7 if one removes the word sūtra (kyō).

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 28th, 2021 at 3:51 AM

Title: Re: Parallels between Japanese and Tibetan Buddhism?

Content:

Queequeg said:

This comment in another thread raised a question for me that I thought might be interesting to explore a bit:

That sounds about right. I look forward to reading that book.

Malcolm wrote:

In many respects it reads like a text book (which it is), and is not the most thrilling writing ever, but each chapter has an extensive bibliography, and authors take pain not to retread old material, but focus on the social dimension of Japanese Buddhist history, its not a book about the various schools as much as it is a book about how Japanese society and Buddhism evolved together from the beginnings of Buddhism's introduction by Korean merchants, and so on.

I will add, that one thing of interest to me is the parallel developments of Buddhism on opposite ends of Asia, in Tibet and Japan (While I was never interested in Chinese or Korean Buddhism per se, I was interested in Japanese Buddhism first, and then later, Tibetan Buddhism.)

Japan's economy and society was not notably disrupted by the Great Buddhist Purge of 845 in China, which threw all of mainland Asia into social and economic disarray. While Buddhism was present in Tibet in some form or another since roughly the 5th century CE, when a copy of the Karandavyuha was supposedly presented to King Lhatso Thori (27th king of Tibet), and Tibetans were certainly aware of Buddhism since they regularly sacked Khotan (there is a whole sūtra about this), Buddhism did not begin to be formally established until the 7th century, during the reign of King Songtsan Gampo (?-649, he was reputed to have lived 82 years, but info is sketchy, his reign was from 629-649). So given the implied dates of his life span, he was a contemporary of Shōtoku.

Interestingly enough, it is quite likely that this planted the seed of the Avalokiteśvara Devotion in Tibet.

Queequeg said:

Buddhologists have dated various texts in the Buddhist canon based on when they appeared in places outside of the Indian sphere. For instance, the age of many Mahayana texts are estimated based on when they appeared in China. One could also glean some insight about the form of Buddhism in India at particular times based on the type of Buddhism that was transmitted to other places. For instance - the transmission of Vajrayana to China is occurred in the 7th to 8th centuries, while the transmission to Tibet occurred from the 8th - 11th c. (?). The Vajrayana that was transmitted to China corresponds to early Indian Vajrayana, while Tibet receive those as well as later forms.

Malcolm had observed that the popularity of the Lotus Sutra in Japan seems due to its introduction from the start, and that the popularity of Avalokiteśvara may be due to his early introduction in Tibet. Earlier in the discussion he had noted sort of similar dynamics of tension of popular and institutional Buddhisms in the two countries, but how this played out under different conditions.

I'm interested to explore these ideas a little more. Not sure how the discussion will go, but just putting these observations as an open invitation to comment.

I'm interested to see how the same ideas may have played out differently because of different social and political conditions. Also interested in parallel developments - things that played out similarly.

Sorry that might not be pointed enough to kick off the discussion. I'll maybe try again if this is just a dud.

Malcolm wrote:

Vajrayāna was continuously transmitted to Tibet from the mid-8th until the 16th century. And yes, the first Vajrayāna teachings in Tibet were mainly Early Indian, i.e. 7th-early 8th century tantras.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 28th, 2021 at 4:11 AM

Title: Re: Parallels between Japanese and Tibetan Buddhism?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Vajrayāna was continuously transmitted to Tibet from the mid-8th until the 16th century. And yes, the first Vajrayāna teachings in Tibet were mainly Early Indian, i.e. 7th-early 8th century tantras.

Queequeg said:

I recall you commented that some of the major tantras (called sutra in Japan) in Japan were also transmitted to Tibet and that one of the first Tibetan kings who adopted Buddhism practiced them. Do you recall that comment? What happened with those traditions in Tibet over time?

Malcolm wrote:

Both the Mahāvairocanaabhisambodhi and the Vajrasikharatantra and Tattvasamgraha were translated during the 8th century. The initiation for those still exist.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, May 28th, 2021 at 9:08 PM

Title: Re: Is the Heart Sutra Nihilism?

Content:

Ardha said:

I read about it briefly in the Lion's Roar magazine and it just looks like a bunch of "no's" and starting with how our view is inverted and nothing exists. I was failing to see how such a thing could be helpful.

Malcolm wrote:

That's not what the Heart Sūtra says.

It says: The material skandha is empty; emptiness is the material skandha; there is no material skandha other than emptiness, there is no emptiness other than the material skandha. The same applies to the aggregates of sensation, perception, formations, and consciousness."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 29th, 2021 at 12:53 AM

Title: Re: My biggest Mahayana question

Content:

Inedible said:

The one biggest thing I have never understood about the Mahayana is that it seems to require giving to others before having. Not just Enlightenment itself, but also the things which bring temporary happiness. As a practical matter, I have found that when I try to share my interests in meditation and lucid dreaming and mindfulness with others that they quickly realize I'm not getting the results for myself. They always end up deciding they don't have time for such things. And materially speaking I'm a complete failure. I'm lucky to have any money five days after payday. But being in the Mahayana seems to be about helping others to reach the other shore and the first of the Paramitas is Dana. As a practical matter how do you give what you don't have? People do tend to notice, and they don't tend to be very receptive to it.

Malcolm wrote:

Shantideva states that bodhisattvas first duty is to preserve themselves, so that they may help others.

It is also important to understand it is the wish to of help to others that is most important. The Buddha was incapable of relieving the poverty of all beings, but nevertheless he perfected generosity anyway. Why? Because he wished all sentient beings to have whatever is was they needed and wanted.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 29th, 2021 at 8:46 PM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

Aemilius said:

There is even a case when a humanoid was taken to Pentagon. He stayed there about two years. During this time he met with and discussed with several persons. And naturally nothing of this could be made public, this just is the nature of the human condition.

PeterC said:

You know this how? What security clearance do you hold?

Malcolm wrote:

Come on Peter, do your research. The truth is out there.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 29th, 2021 at 11:18 PM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

Danny said:

The problem with this subject is 99% of it gets mixed up with quackery.

Malcolm wrote:

The problem with this subject is that absolutely no one who claims to know anything beyond "I saw something I can't explain" knows anything, its all conjecture, speculation, and downright lies.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 29th, 2021 at 11:40 PM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

Danny said:

The problem with this subject is 99% of it gets mixed up with quackery.

Malcolm wrote:

The problem with this subject is that absolutely no one who claims to know anything beyond "I saw something I can't explain" knows anything, its all conjecture, speculation, and downright lies.

Danny said:

My Favourite clip from the UFO Disclosure Project

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=AmNzKxVwAYg&list=PLnrEt2fldZ0aBgPuVF0C_T559YR20eDTc

Malcolm wrote:

I would place this in the downright lie category. It is easy to testify about something for which there is no evidence.

Dark Side of the Moon:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, May 29th, 2021 at 11:50 PM

Title: Re: Reading suggestions to learn about Soto

Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

Soto zen is one of the traditions I know the least about. While I don't practice in this tradition I am curious to learn more about it. From the little bit of research I have done on Soto zen, it seems there are some mixed views on it. Some seems like watered down Buddhism, while other people seem very educated and incorporate all of Zen practice. While I know the difference between Rinzai and Soto is supposedly just the method, when reading posts on this website there seems to be some difference in view and overall practice. Does anyone have any reading suggestions that go into detail about the Soto tradition, it's views, practices, etc?

Malcolm wrote:

Where to begin? There is a lot of material available to study.

Just go to Amazon and search on Soto.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 30th, 2021 at 12:24 AM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

I would place this in the downright lie category. It is easy to testify about something for which there is no evidence.

Lucas Oliveira said:

They are all high-ranking military men, people with important positions in the government.

Malcolm wrote:

Donald Trump was the president of the United States. 30k lies plus in four years. So, sorry, but being in a government service does not equate with being honest.

But you can believe whatever crazy shit you like.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 30th, 2021 at 1:28 AM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

Lucas Oliveira said:

are Official Evidence

Malcolm wrote:

No, it isn't.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 30th, 2021 at 2:32 AM

Title: Re: Vajrayana as an aspect of Nichiren practice

Content:

Minobu said:

In the Lotus sutra Lord Sakyamuni Buddha describes this world with beautiful highways with ropes and trees producing jewels and all this wonderful stuff and Beings ..

this is thing i'm working on now...incorporating this in my mind to benefit the world...

It's the mandala ..the Pure Land of Eagle Peak Mandala...blanketing the world..

this could be what Nichiren is pointing to when He says see you in the Pure land of Eagle peak...not some far of place but right here and now...

wow...i'm pretty happy with myself...lol

Malcolm wrote:

I am pretty sure Vimalamkīrti beat Nichiren to the punch:

Thereupon, magically influenced by the Buddha, the venerable Śāriputra had this thought: "If the buddhafiield is pure only to the extent that the mind of the bodhisattva is pure, [F.180.b] then, when Śākyamuni Buddha was engaged in the career of the bodhisattva, his mind must have been impure. Otherwise, how could this buddhafiield appear to be so impure?"

The Buddha, aware of venerable Śāriputra's thoughts, said to him, "What do you think, Śāriputra? Is it because the sun and moon are impure that those blind from birth do not see them?"

Śāriputra replied, "No, Lord. It is not so. The fault lies with those blind from birth, and not with the sun and moon."

The Buddha declared, "In the same way, Śāriputra, the fact that some living beings do not behold the splendid display of virtues of the buddhafiield of the Tathāgata is due to their own ignorance. It is not the fault of the Tathāgata. Śāriputra, the buddhafiield of the Tathāgata is pure, but you do not see it."

Then, the Brahmā Śikhin said to the venerable Śāriputra, "Reverend Śāriputra, do not say that the buddhafiield of the Tathāgata is impure. Reverend Śāriputra, the buddhafiield of the Tathāgata is pure. I see the splendid expanse of the buddhafiield of the Lord Śākyamuni as equal to the splendor of, for example, the abodes of the highest deities."

Then the venerable Śāriputra said to the Brahmā Śikhin, “As for me, O Brahmā, I see this great earth, with its highs and lows, its thorns, its precipices, its peaks, and its abysses, as if it were entirely filled with ordure.” Brahmā Śikhin replied, “The fact that you see such a buddhafiield as this as if it were so impure, reverend Śāriputra, is a sure sign that there are highs and lows in your mind and that your positive thought in regard to the buddha-gnosis is not pure either. Reverend Śāriputra, those whose minds are impartial toward all living beings and whose positive thoughts toward the buddha-gnosis are pure see this buddhafiield as perfectly pure.” [F.181.a]

Thereupon the Lord touched the ground of this billion-world galactic universe with his big toe, and suddenly it was transformed into a huge mass of precious jewels, a magnificent array of many hundreds of thousands of clusters of precious gems, until it resembled the universe of the Tathāgata Ratnavyūha, called Ananta guṇa ratna vyūha. Everyone in the entire assembly was filled with wonder, each perceiving himself seated on a throne of jeweled lotuses.

<https://read.84000.co/translation/toh176.html>, 1.46-1.50

Just sayin...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 30th, 2021 at 2:37 AM

Title: Re: The Threefold Lotus Sutra: A Modern Translation for Contemporary Readers

Content:

Javierfv1212 said:

This is a new translation by Michio Shinozaki (Author, Preface), Brook A. Ziporyn (Author, Introduction), David C. Earhart

Malcolm wrote:

It is not new at all. It is a reprint with a new introduction.

The best translation is the one over at 84000.co

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 30th, 2021 at 4:56 AM

Title: Re: The Threefold Lotus Sutra: A Modern Translation for Contemporary Readers

Content:

Javierfv1212 said:

Malcolm are you sure you're not confusing this with the 1989 Bunno Kato and Yoshiro Tamura translation which is also called "The Threefold Lotus Sutra"?

The blurb indicates that this is a new translation, if you are correct, then Kosei's marketing is being very deceptive in saying that "Now Kosei Publishing, responding to the needs of a truly globalized, twenty-first century Buddhism, has revitalized this acclaimed work with a newly translated publication, The Threefold Lotus Sutra: A Modern Translation for Contemporary Readers. This is the first English version of this religious classic tailored to the essential Buddhist practice of daily sutra recitation."

Have you seen an actual copy of this?

Regarding the one over at 84000, I don't doubt its good, but I'd like a physical copy, and if its made for recitation, that would be pretty cool. Also, since the Chinese version has been the most influential one historically (Tibetans hardly read the sutras anyways), I'd prefer a translation of that version.

Malcolm wrote:

My error, this is a revision of the original translation they published in 1975.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 30th, 2021 at 7:34 PM

Title: Re: HH Sakya Trichen White Tara Initiation

Content:

WeiHan said:

Was this the wish fulfilling wheel White Tara taught in Khenpo Karthar's book?

Malcolm wrote:

I don't have that book, so I can't say.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 30th, 2021 at 8:35 PM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

I was asked this question by an advanced Western philosophy student.

Malcolm wrote:

Short answer: the Buddha, because the Buddha possesses the dharmakaya, cf. the Ratnagotravibhanga.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, May 30th, 2021 at 9:13 PM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Astus said:

Even the Buddha revered the Dharma as his teacher (SN 6.2). The Uttaratantra Shastra (3.21) calls the Buddha the ultimate refuge, it also practically combines all three into one, as Dzongsar JK Rinpoche commented: 'But ultimately, Buddha is not other than the Dharma and the Sangha, because the ultimate Dharma is the absence of attachment. And that's what Buddha has achieved. And since Buddha is the result of end point of all the bhumis, the Buddha is also the essence, the quintessence of the Sangha.'

Malcolm wrote:

One, your reference to SN 6.2 is far too narrow, since in the Pali canon the Buddha has also declared in various places he had no teacher at all, and that he had teachers in past lives.

Second, no, the UT really doesn't "practically combine all three refuges into one." It points out that the Dharma and the Sangha are compounded and impermanent. This is the context in which Maitreya declares the Buddha to be the true refuge, Dzongsar's apologetics notwithstanding.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 31st, 2021 at 12:18 AM

Title: Re: Shinjin as the Third Noble Truth

Content:

Zhen Li said:

The main influence for most people who use the sutra in East Asia has been the Dharmakṣema version...

Malcolm wrote:

For your interest:

<https://journals.ub.uni-heidelberg.de/index.php/jiabs/article/view/8619/2526>, see pg.57, Problem of the Icchantika...

https://web.archive.org/web/20130614174936/http://www.shabkar.org/download/pdf/On_the_Eschatology_of_the_Mahaparinirvana_Sutra_and_Related_Matters.pdf

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 31st, 2021 at 5:53 AM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Astus said:

The Buddha is called the ultimate refuge for its permanence, thus actually meaning the dharma kaya.

Malcolm wrote:

The Uttaratantra states:

Buddha alone is a refuge because the Muni possesses the dharmakāya.

We agree that dharmakāya is termed permanent in this case. We also have to ask, what is buddhahood? The UT states six qualities:

Buddhahood that possesses two benefits is uncompounded, naturally perfected, is not realized through external conditions,
and possesses wisdom, love, and power.

It then continues:

[Buddhahood] is uncompounded because its primal nature is free from beginning, middle, and end.
Because [it] possesses the dharmakāya of pacification, it is called "naturally perfected."
Because [buddhahood] is not realized through external conditions it is personally realized.
As such, because those three aspects are realized, [buddhahood] is wisdom;
because the path is demonstrated, the mind [of buddhahood] is loving, and its power is abandoning all suffering and affliction through gnosis and compassion.

Thus, what we are going for refuge in is the actual realization of a buddha, who has benefited themselves and is capable of benefitting us, and not some abstract doctrine we ourselves have not realized. Unlike the Dharma and the Sangha, it is uncompounded and permanent. Which is why the UT states unambiguously:

Because of being abandoned, because of being deceptive, because of nonexistence, and because of being fearful, the two kinds of Dharma and the noble assembly are not the supreme, permanent refuge.

Astus said:

In a similar fashion is Dharma itself described in the Pali Canon, that it is true and present regardless of a buddha arising or not arising

Malcolm wrote:

That, however, is not the dharmakāya as defined here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 31st, 2021 at 9:55 PM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

For Vajrayana it's the dharmakaya guru Buddha. All in one. From a Mahayana standpoint since Buddha is not around anymore, the teachings are primary. But without a teacher you're not going to get the whole picture. A Mahayanist teacher is not considered a Buddha, therefore the dharma.

Malcolm wrote:

From a Mahāyāna standpoint, the Buddha does not abide in nirvana, so the Buddha is "always around," as our teachers (cf. Lotus Sūtra). In general Mahāyāna, it is clearly stated that one should regard one's teacher as being like a buddha; the difference between it and secret mantra is that in secret mantra one is to regard one's teacher as a buddha, full stop.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 31st, 2021 at 10:05 PM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Thus, what we are going for refuge in is the actual realization of a buddha, who has benefited themselves and is capable of benefitting us, and not some abstract doctrine we ourselves have not realized.

Astus said:

Being uncompounded, it cannot even be comprehended, unlike an abstract doctrine. Being effortless ("naturally perfected"), nobody has anything to do with it, unlike with a teaching. Being personally realised, one has to realise it for oneself and others cannot help, unlike with a teaching. The path that is demonstrated, that is the teaching, and it is through the path that afflictions are abandoned. So, taking refuge in the true buddha, the dharmakaya, means taking the ultimate truth (wisdom, dharma as reality) as shown in the teaching demonstrating reality (compassion, dharma as doctrine) and applying it, since there is actually nothing else to take refuge in.

Malcolm wrote:

The Dharma Gem arises from the Buddha Gem; at least according to Maitreyanātha. So again, it is the Buddha who is primary, because without the Buddha, there can be no Dharma, since the latter arises from the former, that is to say, the second set of qualities which benefit others arose from the first set of qualities which benefit oneself. But you can parse this however you like. I am just reporting what Maitreyanatha and Asanga write in the Uttaratantra and its commentary in response to a question. I am not that interested in dancing on books with you.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 31st, 2021 at 10:10 PM

Title: Re: Shinjin as the Third Noble Truth

Content:

Zhen Li said:

The Buddhahadra translation can be regarded in the same way as the exclusion clauses in the primal vow — these are skillful means to encourage those who might take the teachings too far and think that they can act licentiously because their buddhahood is assured. Beings must still regard good as good.

Malcolm wrote:

Or the Dharmakṣema translation is heavily interpolated by that translator with his own ideas, which Occam's razor dictates is the more likely case.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 31st, 2021 at 10:12 PM

Title: Re: Consciousness is not momentary

Content:

WeiHan said:

When Buddha said that consciousness is momentary, it is actually an expedient saying and not ultimate because each moment if they really exist will need to be a stretch which is impossible as they can be split down further. Yet, past moment can never be "joined" to the next subsequent moment because if it does so, at the point that they join together, past moment will be the future moment which is absurd.

Malcolm wrote:

This would only be true if moments have parts. But moments do not have parts, so this objection is not applicable.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, May 31st, 2021 at 11:04 PM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

Aemilius said:

I don't intend to be rude, but the discussion is like some one had heard that something called Buddhism possibly exists, but no one has read any sutras.

The canonical or half canonical literature of Ufo lore is vast unimaginably vast.

Malcolm wrote:

And they still don't present anything that remotely resembles a fact apart from grainy Airforce photos, etc.

I am quite certain there is life on other planets in the universe, even intelligent life.

But there is absolutely no empirical evidence that has been produced by anyone that we have been visited by intelligent beings from another solar system, etc.

And if there was such evidence, the first human instinct would be to destroy such beings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 1st, 2021 at 12:37 AM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

For Vajrayana it's the dharmakaya guru Buddha. All in one. From a Mahayana standpoint since Buddha is not around anymore, the teachings are primary. But without a teacher you're not going to get the whole picture. A Mahayanist teacher is not considered a Buddha, therefore the dharma.

Malcolm wrote:

From a Mahāyāna standpoint, the Buddha does not abide in nirvana, so the Buddha is "always around," as our teachers (cf. Lotus Sūtra). In general Mahāyāna, it is clearly stated that one should regard one's teacher as being like a buddha; the difference between it and secret mantra is that in secret mantra one is to regard one's teacher as a buddha, full stop.

Crazywisdom said:

Like a Buddha is not a buddha. The teachers always around are relying on Sutras. These word plays are cute though.

Malcolm wrote:

And the Buddha promises in the Lotus Sūtra that he will continually manifest as our teachers, so still around after all these years.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 1st, 2021 at 2:40 AM

Title: Re: Sapan and Dzogchen

Content:

Yungdrung Gyalpo said:

It is not certain that all of Sakya Paṇḍita's objections reach or even target Dzogchen.

The main passage where Sakya Paṇḍita talks about Dzogchen, to my knowledge, is in the Domsum Rabye and not in the Thupai Gongsal.

Malcolm wrote:

He mentions Dzogchen in passing as the apex of the Nyingma system in Thubgong, but offers no criticism of it in that text.

In Domsum, he merely distinguishes that in his opinion, Dzogchen is a ye shes, not a tshul.

Yungdrung Gyalpo said:

On the other hand, I think that in later comments on the Domsum Rabye, like that of Gorampa, the charge is heavier against Dzogchen.

Malcolm wrote:

Not so much against Dzogchen per se, as texts like Kun byed rgyal po, which Gorampa asserts Sapan was too polite to mention by name.

Yungdrung Gyalpo said:

rGya nag lugs kyi rdzogs chen, which I understand as meaning: "Chinese-style Dzogchen"

Malcolm wrote:

This is a reference to the one shoe left in Tibet by Hashang. And yes, it is an implication that Dzogchen was influenced by Hashang. IOW, "Chinese-style Dzogchen" refers to Kagyu Mahamudra of Shang, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 1st, 2021 at 3:27 AM

Title: Re: Sapan and Dzogchen

Content:

Yungdrung Gyalpo said:

If you know Nyoshül Khenpo's dris lan, he answers a precise question I asked him about that, long ago. Basically, his assumption is that it is not the case that in Dzogchen you reach the two resultant Kāyas without the two accumulations, but that the kadak aspect contains the accumulations of wisdom primordially perfected, while the lhundrup aspect contains the accumulations of merit originally perfected. Hence, he says, you obtain the Dharmakāya as the fruit of the (self-disclosing of?) kadak side of Rigpa and the Rūpakāya thanks to the (self-disclosing of?) the lhundrup side of Rigpa.

Malcolm wrote:

His teacher, Khenpo Ngachung gives a similar account.

Yungdrung Gyalpo said:

Now Nyoshül Khenpo's answer works only if you decide to understand Rigpa as eternal in terms of "timeless", not of "pre-existing". It implies to get rid of all Shentong -style images of the jewel already there in its gangue or the sky already clear despite the clouds.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct. Rigpa can't be preexisting, because if it were, then the three ma rig pas make no sense.

Yungdrung Gyalpo said:

By the way, in my opinion, Gorampa's interpretation of the connection between the Buddhas' omniscience and its objects (in the lTa ba ngan sel) is 100% Dzogchen-compatible...

Malcolm wrote:

The Sakyapa view of the result is indeed 100% percent compatible with Dzogchen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 1st, 2021 at 4:12 AM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment Soon

Content:

KonchogUrgyenNyima said:

Thank you all so much for your replies. This has been super helpful. Does anyone have any detailed info on the lineage of konchog chidu?

Malcolm wrote:

It was revealed by Rigzin Jatson Nyingpo, who lived in the 17th century. He declared that he was the actual re-emanation (yang sprul) of Guru Rinpoche, and based on this and other things, the Konchog Chidu was probably the most widely practiced cycle of Guru Rinpoche practice until Jigme Lingpa's time. It is still the main practice of Dzogchen monastery. Moreover, it gained prominence at Kathok Monastery, whose lineage holders, from Rigzin Duddul Dorje on down, held it as their main practice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 1st, 2021 at 4:38 AM

Title: Re: Buddhism's causes of illness

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

If illness is the result of karma, then all medicine blocks karma.

Malcolm wrote:

Some illnesses are; some are not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 1st, 2021 at 6:15 AM

Title: Re: Buddhism's causes of illness

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

If illness is the result of karma, then all medicine blocks karma.

Malcolm wrote:

Some illnesses are; some are not.

Hazel said:

Is that true of a certain set of illnesses or rather is it true of certain instances of any illness?

Malcolm wrote:

Both a certain set and certain instances.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 1st, 2021 at 6:17 AM

Title: Re: Buddhism's causes of illness

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

If illness is the result of karma, then all medicine blocks karma.

Malcolm wrote:

Some illnesses are; some are not.

Minobu said:

so what is the cause malcolm, of an illness not due to Karma.

Malcolm wrote:

Three humors, vāta, pitta, and kapha. The cause of those are desire, hatred, and ignorance.

You can read about this in the Suvarnaprabhasa Sūtra, and other places. The latter sūtra has a chapter, chapter 16, devoted to discussing illnesses and their causes.

<https://fpmt.org/wp-content/uploads/teachers/zopa/advice/pdf/sutragoldenlight0207ltr.pdf>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 1st, 2021 at 7:13 AM

Title: Re: Buddhism's causes of illness

Content:

Minobu said:

but all Malcolm, all [illnesses] have their origins in Karmic cause and effect.

Malcolm wrote:

No, they don't. But there is no point in arguing with you about it. Unlike you, I studied Tibetan Medicine for many years, and have a degree in it. Tibetan Medicine is based on Buddhist sūtras and Buddhist medical texts like the Aṣṭāṅgahridayasamhita. I just don't have it in me to argue with laymen about the causes of illness according to the Buddha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 1st, 2021 at 9:51 AM

Title: Re: Shinjin as the Third Noble Truth

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Or the Dharmakṣema translation is heavily interpolated by that translator with his own ideas, which Occam's razor dictates is the more likely case.

Zhen Li said:

If you would like to specifically address the quotation I provided in order to demonstrate interpolation, please go ahead,

Malcolm wrote:

It comes from the dubious part of the Dharmakṣema translation,

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 2nd, 2021 at 12:56 AM

Title: Re: Realising Emptiness as prerequisite for attaining Narokacho pureland?

Content:

WeiHan said:

Is realisation of Emptiness, a prerequisite for attaining Narokacho pureland?

Malcolm wrote:

Only in the sense that you must realize emptiness in the bardo at the time of death or in the bardo. But not necessarily in this life.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 2nd, 2021 at 5:12 AM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

Aemilius said:

There is no objective reality that everyone will see, perceive and believe.

Malcolm wrote:

There is an empirical reality that sane people agree upon. Many people see two moons, but there is only one.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 2nd, 2021 at 5:36 PM

Title: Re: Seeking feedback/review: Pure Land Buddhism from a Tibetan Buddhist perspective

Content:

Brunelleschi said:

Hi all,

So Bob Thurman and Andrew Holecek did a course a while back about Pure Land Buddhism in the Tibetan tradition, as well as the East Asian Tradition entitled "Death & the Art of Dying: The Pure Lands Introduction".

Link: <https://thusmenla.org/p/pure-lands-introduction-archive>

Does anyone have any information regarding this course? Price = 108$ for recordings from three (3) days and some study material. Seems pretty steep. Thinking whether it's worth it or not.

Thanks in advance,
Brunelleschi

Malcolm wrote:

You are better off buying the Halkias book on Pure land practice in Tibet.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 2nd, 2021 at 7:34 PM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Like a Buddha is not a buddha. The teachers always around are relying on Sutras. These word plays are cute though.

Malcolm wrote:

And the Buddha promises in the Lotus Sūtra that he will continually manifest as our teachers, so still around after all these years.

Crazywisdom said:

So if one teaches sutras one is Shakyamuni's emanation. Ok. Still comes down to what's taught. Really it's a three sided Triple Gem. Without Buddha, no dharma, without dharma no Sangha, and without sangha no preservation and continuation of dharma.

Malcolm wrote:

Any teachers of Dharma, not just sutras.

The Dharma and Sangha are relative refuges, according to the Uttaratantra. It's very clearly stated there.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 2nd, 2021 at 8:25 PM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

I get that.

Malcolm wrote:

The question was, "Which is primacy, Buddha or Dharma?"

A number of people responded with their opinions, including you and I.

If someone were to ask me that question, I would answer, "The Buddha." YMMV.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 2nd, 2021 at 9:30 PM

Title: Re: MPNS on Women

Content:

Seeker12 said:

Thanks for any honest thoughts on the topic.

Malcolm wrote:

One of the reasons the MPNS is considered a provisional text...

It is completely sexist.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 2nd, 2021 at 10:36 PM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

I get that.

Malcolm wrote:

The question was, "Which is primacy, Buddha or Dharma?"

A number of people responded with their opinions, including you and I.

If someone were to ask me that question, I would answer, "The Buddha." YMMV.

Crazywisdom said:

I was asked this question by an advanced Western philosophy student
Sure. The problem I have with that is it's a religious answer, not a philosophical one.

Malcolm wrote:

Nevertheless, it is the answer I would give. In the West, people are no longer expected to embody the ideals they espouse. It is precisely because of this fact that I would give the answer I gave, and because it is a canonical answer.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 2nd, 2021 at 10:50 PM

Title: Re: MPNS on Women

Content:

Seeker12 said:

Thanks for any honest thoughts on the topic.

Malcolm wrote:

One of the reasons the MPNS is considered a provisional text...

It is completely sexist.

Seeker12 said:

Longchenpa and others don't consider it provisional.

Malcolm wrote:

In general, it should be considered provisional even by Longchenpa since it contains the doctrine of the icchantika. It is also considered provisional because it uses intentional language to discuss a self, permanence, and so on.

What Longchenpa holds to be definitive is the doctrine of tathāgatagarbha, but there are some problems if we take the whole of those ten sūtras to be "definitive."

Then of course, there is the issue of whether the tathāgatagarbha doctrine is actually definitive. Arguably, the Uttaratantra itself holds the tathāgatagarbha doctrine to be provisional.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 1:26 AM

Title: Re: MPNS on Women

Content:

Seeker12 said:

The intent of this thread is not primarily to discuss provisional vs definitive sutras, and if possible I would suggest that we leave that topic alone. Even if we say that it is a provisional Sutra, that doesn't actually address the question, as provisional doesn't simply mean meaningless. So presumably even if a Sūtra is provisional there is still a useful intent behind it. Which means, the question has not been answered in the slightest.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, it was:

It is completely sexist. There is nothing useful, in this day and age, about gendering the appreciation of, or lack thereof, the tathāgatagarbha doctrine. The entire discussion in that passage devalues women.

The Vimalakīrti Sūtra throws shade on the idea that there are "marks" of gender which can be found.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 4:38 AM

Title: Re: MPNS on Women

Content:

Seeker12 said:

With all of that said, maybe it's just a misogynist addition, and there is no real meaning to it, and I'm just hypothesizing to try and see how it might fit. But I could, potentially, maybe consider a meaning such as this. More or less.

Malcolm wrote:

I doubt it is a sexist addition; it most certainly is a sexist sentiment.

As for tossing the whole sūtra out merely because it says some things that really must be taken with a grain of salt, no, that is not what I am implying.

Suppose the sūtra said, "Those who understand tathāgatagarbha are White, while those who do not understand tathāgatagarbha are Black. Now, if you are Black but you understand tathāgatagarbha, you are White; and if you are White and you do not understand tathāgatagarbha, you are Black."

Suppose the sūtra said, "Those who understand tathāgatagarbha are Eastern, while those who do not understand tathāgatagarbha are Western. Now, if you are Western but you understand tathāgatagarbha, you are Eastern; and if you are Eastern and you do not understand tathāgatagarbha, you are Western."

It is just a poorly thought out sentiment only possible in a patriarchal context where men are in a superior position (i.e. all of history).

In this case, the Goddess of the Ganges has it right.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 6:57 AM

Title: Re: What's with all the crankholes

Content:

Minobu said:

You know hanging out in Buddhist Ville you would think compassion and nicest would abound.

But there are like quite a lot of angry people in here.

Malcolm wrote:

Spots on other people's noses always look bigger than the yak on one's own.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 9:38 AM

Title: Re: Terdak Lingpa Khandro Nyingthig/Yangthig???

Content:

KonchogUrgyenNyima said:

Hello,

I am receiving what my lama called a text empowerment or pe-wang (which is short for pecha wang i assume?) for a khandro nyingthig text by terdak lingpa.

I am looking for two things:

1. what does a text empowerment mean? Does it authorize one to practice? To study the text? What are the general "rules" about this kind of thing in the vajrayana? I have never gotten a text wang before.

2. Which texts has Terdak Lingpa written on the Khandro Nyingthig/Yangthig? I'm trying to figure out which text i'm getting the empowerment for, and whether or not it is translated into english.

I'm turning to dharmawheel because i've tried to get these answers from my lama himself, but i fear our language barrier is complicating things and i don't want to bother him with a bunch of questions while in the presence of such a precious empowerment.

Malcolm wrote:

To read and study.

A text on the uncommon practices, one only AFAIK.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 10:04 AM

Title: Re: Terdak Lingpa Khandro Nyingthig/Yangthig???

Content:

KonchogUrgyenNyima said:

Hello,

I am receiving what my lama called a text empowerment or pe-wang (which is short for pecha wang i assume?) for a khandro nyingthig text by terdak lingpa.

I am looking for two things:

1. what does a text empowerment mean? Does it authorize one to practice? To study the text? What are the general “rules” about this kind of thing in the vajrayana? I have never gotten a text wang before.

2. Which texts has Terdak Lingpa written on the Khandro Nyingthig/Yangthig? I’m trying to figure out which text i’m getting the empowerment for, and whether or not it is translated into english.

I’m turning to dharmawheel because i’ve tried to get these answers from my lama himself, but i fear our language barrier is complicating things and i don’t want to bother him with a bunch of questions while in the presence of such a precious empowerment.

Malcolm wrote:

To read and study.

A text on the uncommon practices, one only AFAIK.

KonchogUrgyenNyima said:

Thanks Malcolm. Is that uncommon ngondro practices?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, as well as trekcho, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 10:06 AM

Title: Re: MPNS on Women

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

In this case, the Goddess of the Ganges has it right.

Seeker12 said:

I don’t understand this.

Malcolm wrote:

She transformed Shariputra into a woman when he asked her why she had not taken birth as a man.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 10:21 AM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

You've missed the point I was making. But that's ok. The Dharma, the textual Dharma, is relative and compounded.

haha said:

Without the Buddha, there is no Dharma. And without the dharma, there is no Buddha. The Buddha became Buddha because of direct apprehension of Dharma. And then, Buddha is the expounder of the dharmas. Some traditions regard Guru is even superior then the Buddha in term of benefiting other. However, Dharma is more beneficial to me then the Buddha.

Buddha did not say, "If one sees Buddha, one will know the Dharma". Or I might be ill-informed. Instead, he said, "If one sees the Dharma, one will see the Buddha." Such statement might have shown the primacy of the Dharma. Or other might have different opinion for the same statement.

3. When this was said, Maitreya Bodhisattva-mahasattva spoke thus to the Venerable Sariputra: [Reverend Sariputra,] regarding what was said by the Lord, the master of Dharma, the omniscient: "He monks who sees conditioned arising, sees Dharma, and he who sees Dharma, sees the Buddha. "

Salistamba Sutra

People regard Buddha is a majestic person having 32 major and 80 minor marks sitting in the throne and so forth. That is fine from certain perspective. Seeing the physical form of Buddha, no one has attained the enlightenment. But hearing and contemplating the dharmas many have attained enlightenment. When Buddha was consoling a bedridden monk, he said that there was nothing special about seeing his physical form. Seeing or realizing Pratītyasamutpāda (dependent arising) would be equivalent to seeing the Buddha. Dharma is more important and beneficial.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 7:11 PM

Title: Re: How's America going?

Content:

tobes said:

But so is further decline. And the next few steps along that road are really too ugly to even contemplate.

Malcolm wrote:

Thirty million Americans+ subscribe to Qanon. That's ten percent of the population, and one fifth of potential voters.

Facebook is destroying the world.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 8:09 PM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

The canonical answer is not important. The principle is important. This is still the fallacy of appeal to authority. What matters in Mahayana is helping others. What helps are the basic principles like 4NT the 3 doors, Bodhicitta, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

You help others your way. I will do it my way. Deal?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 8:16 PM

Title: Re: What's with all the crankholes

Content:

Minobu said:

You know hanging out in Buddhist Ville you would think compassion and nicest would abound.

But there are like quite a lot of angry people in here.

It doesn't make sense to me.

i have witnessed meanness galore, games to hurt people.

Snide comments meant to hurt.

Sarcasm made for like some clique.

All of which is so like counter productive.

Why????????????????????

maybe if we are all honest and help each other with this maybe just maybe.....

amanitamusc said:

Here is the answer to your crankhole problem. It is actually a pretty small solution .

<https://www.ebay.com/itm/294054765041?hash=item447707a1f1:g:RlsAAOSwAjZgR8SK>

Malcolm wrote:

But the crank cover trim ring is also necessary:

https://www.ebay.com/itm/294054788698?_trkparms=aid%3D1110006%26algo%3DHOMESPLICE.SIM%26ao%3D1%26asc%3D20200818143230%26meid%3D314ce60b8de54db8bddac6b67907dd6b%26pid%3D101224%26rk%3D1%26rkt%3D5%26sd%3D294054765041%26itm%3D294054788698%26pmt%3D0%26noa%3D1%26pg%3D2047675%26algv%3DDefaultOrganic%26brand%3DChevrolet&_trksid=p2047675.c101224.m-1

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 8:21 PM

Title: Re: How do you feel about Buddhists getting involved in politics?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Democracies require active participation by an educated and informed electorate. Refusing to engage in politics because [shock horror] one might experience afflictions is a copout, in my opinion, and just allows the uneducated and ill-informed to have an undue say in one's affairs. To protect others, bodhisattvas must protect themselves, and this is true in every area of life. Refusing to engage in the political life of one's nation or community is, frankly, irresponsible.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 9:07 PM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This primacy of the Buddha can be well understood through the metaphor of the sun and its light.

The Buddha is the sun. The Dharma is its light. However, while we cannot always see the light of the sun, the sun is always there.

Without the light shed by the sun, of course, those in ignorance cannot see things the way they are, and they stumble around in darkness. But the light of the sun depends on proper conditions to illuminate the world, even though the sun is always there, whether it is day or night.

This is why the Buddha has primacy. Without the sun of the Buddha rising in the sky, his light does not shine on the world. And due to the misfortune of sentient beings, the sun of the Buddha will also set, even though the Buddha never moves from his place, and does not rise or set.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 9:24 PM

Title: Re: How's America going?

Content:

Queequeg said:

I want those young men building electric grids and high speed rail, not just hanging out in the parking lot in front of their waxed cars.

Malcolm wrote:

I'd rather they were doing that then hanging out in Qanon circles.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 10:28 PM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Queequeg said:

From a nondual conception, though, the entire dynamic is dependently original and so to say that one has primacy doesn't quite make sense and is rather arbitrary.

Malcolm wrote:

The sun does not care whether there are clouds or not, nor whether it is day or night. It just shines...

Nonduality is seriously overrated by Western Buddhists.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 10:48 PM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Queequeg said:

From a nondual conception, though, the entire dynamic is dependently original and so to say that one has primacy doesn't quite make sense and is rather arbitrary.

Malcolm wrote:

The sun does not care whether there are clouds or not, nor whether it is day or night. It just shines...

Nonduality is seriously overrated by Western Buddhists.

Queequeg said:
Or maybe dismissed too easily.

Malcolm wrote:
Depends on what one understands by "nondual."

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 10:50 PM
Title: Re: How's America going?
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
Facebook is destroying the world.

Queequeg said:
I quit last year. I can't imagine subjecting myself to that again.

Malcolm wrote:
I still see it, but my feed is extremely manicured. Mostly news and entertainment, and I follow very few people.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 10:51 PM
Title: Re: How's America going?
Content:

Queequeg said:
I don't know what you are getting at.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 10:54 PM
Title: Re: What's with all the crankholes
Content:
DNS said:
It's not very active, but if you want very friendly, cordial discussion, it's at DP:

<https://www.dharmapaths.com/>

Everyone thought it would be a combat zone, with comparative religions and traditions being discussed, but it ended up being a love fest.

Of course there is friendly discussion here too, but it's easier to notice and remember the controversies and fighting than the more common beneficial times.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, if you love Nicholas Weeks, who subscribes to a lot of strange, far-right wing conspiracy theories.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 11:15 PM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Queequeg said:

To say that the sun shines whether there is a being to observe or not suggests an unconditioned sun simpliciter...

Malcolm wrote:

Recall, the definition I provided at the beginning of this conversation in fact defines buddhahood as uncompounded simple entity ...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 11:17 PM

Title: Re: How's America going?

Content:

Queequeg said:

I quit last year. I can't imagine subjecting myself to that again.

Malcolm wrote:

I still see it, but my feed is extremely manicured. Mostly news and entertainment, and I follow very few people.

Queequeg said:

We need some people to keep tabs on it and ring the alarm. I know myself and if I have one smoke, I'll be sucking down the pack before long.

Malcolm wrote:

What I do not use it for is dharma groups.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 11:33 PM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Queequeg said:

Is this a definitive view, irrespective of the listener, or is this a teaching for particular listeners?

Malcolm wrote:

Definitive, for me. YMMV.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 11:44 PM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Queequeg said:

Is this a definitive view, irrespective of the listener, or is this a teaching for particular listeners?

Malcolm wrote:

Definitive, for me. YMMV.

Queequeg said:

Hm. Thank you.

Malcolm wrote:

In other words, if buddhahood arises from causes and conditions, it would be compounded and impermanent. One could realize buddhahood, and then when the conditions for buddhahood ceased, one's realization would vanish.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 3rd, 2021 at 11:49 PM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

Aemilius said:

There is no objective reality that everyone will see, perceive and believe.

Malcolm wrote:

There is an empirical reality that sane people agree upon. Many people see two moons, but there is only one.

Aemilius said:

In the Apoha and Yogachara view of the arising of perception we have imprints in our (alaya)consciousness, these imprints become activated when a sense-perception arrives through our sense-doors. The imprints are projected onto the perceptions, and we see these imprints as outer independent objects. We think that we see objective reality, which is not quite true, or not true at all.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. But Yogacāra etc., are lower tenet systems.

Aemilius said:

Do you see angels, spirits, bigfoot, yetis, etc..? Do you categorically deny the experience of persons whose world differs from what you experience? People's experiences in different time periods and cultures are never the same.

Malcolm wrote:

In order for the beings of the six realms to see the same liquid substance as amṛta, water, etc., there has to be a liquid substance that exists separate from their perception of said substance.

One does not reject the existence of outer objects, one merely rejects the idea that outer objects exist inherently.

To bring it back around to the topic: It is certain that someone is seeing something. But whether that is some kind of extra-terrestrial phenomena or craft or some unexplained terrestrial phenomena or secret tech is unknown by anyone on this forum.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 4th, 2021 at 1:47 AM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Queequeg said:

Hm. Thank you.

Malcolm wrote:

In other words, if buddhahood arises from causes and conditions, it would be compounded and impermanent. One could realize buddhahood, and then when the conditions for buddhahood ceased, one's realization would vanish.

Queequeg said:

Yes. I agree with that.

In this view, buddhahood is total, and sentient beings are also buddhas, but afflicted.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, as taught in the Hevajra Tantra, and elsewhere.

Queequeg said:

The path, rather than being one of gradually accumulating merit and attaining buddhahood, as the Buddha who awoke at Gaya taught, is the shedding of afflictions, right?

In a sense, shedding is a mirror image of accumulating merit, but accumulating merit suggests that buddhahood is acquired. Shedding afflictions can in turn be gradual, as one might polish a raw diamond into a gem, by practicing repentance, observing precepts, etc., or sudden, by immediately entering the way, so to speak. The way I heard it explained in Dzogchen, for instance, is that we are introduced to this perfected state, and then practice is a matter of getting used to abiding in that view until we completely shed our shortcomings and limitations, and it is our default.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct. The recognition of the basis (while not considered fully qualified buddhahood in terms of expression) is the path, and the result is the full expression of the potential of that basis which emerges when even the afflictions themselves revert into gnosis.

Queequeg said:

This, is unintelligible for the Western Philosopher Man, cousin of Economic Man, and Reasonable Man. If you say Buddha is prime to them, in their categories it means something different than is meant in High Mahayana.

Malcolm wrote:

No one said it was easy. To decide that one knows what another person's capacity is supposes that one is clairvoyant. It is characteristic of the Dzogchen approach to start at the top and work one's way down until understanding dawns, in other words, start with the truth of cessation, not the truth of suffering.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 4th, 2021 at 1:48 AM

Title: Re: How's America going?

Content:

Queequeg said:

I don't know what you are getting at.

tkp67 said:

If only I was capable of being discouraged.

Malcolm wrote:

We all have our limitations.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 4th, 2021 at 3:11 AM

Title: Re: How's America going?

Content:

tkp67 said:

If only I was capable of being discouraged.

Malcolm wrote:

We all have our limitations.

tkp67 said:

To be discourage or encouraged doesn't an expectation need to be attached?

Malcolm wrote:

Not necessarily. For example, you are just blithely walking down a road with no expectation. Someone discourages or encourages you for some reason for continuing further.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 4th, 2021 at 3:13 AM

Title: Re: How's America going?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

What I do not use it for is dharma groups.

Queequeg said:

I never associated it with dharma. Just my samsaric predilections. Trumpist cousins took me down some dark avenues of my personality that are best left to atrophy.

I do miss some of the good parts of the platform. My wife's feed is baby pictures and rainbows. They say the world is a reflection of ourselves, and moreso thing like FB that are built to be enticing vanity mirrors. It goes without saying, my wife is a better person than I am.

Johnny Dangerous said:

I quit it after I saw the platform literally end friendships and estrange people, and then realized that's built into FBs business model.

I felt better almost immediately and can't imagine ever using it again. There are a couple of things I miss: sharing weird music occasionally, and knowing about local music events before COVID.

Malcolm wrote:

This is specifically why one needs to carefully manicure one's feed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 4th, 2021 at 3:24 AM

Title: Re: The man in the high castle series

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I personally think The Boys blows it out of the water in terms of shows examining fascism, and is a lot more fun as well.

Malcolm wrote:

And gory.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 4th, 2021 at 8:41 AM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 4th, 2021 at 8:07 PM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Nemo said:

Is the Dharma really the Dharma if you practice for 30 years and it produces no realization?

Malcolm wrote:

We don't practice for this life. We practice for the next life.

Realization is a not campaign badge one can show others. It's undetectable by ordinary people. The only thing ordinary people can observe is the extraordinary compassion of realized people.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 4th, 2021 at 8:10 PM

Title: Re: How's America going?

Content:

tkp67 said:

To be discourage or encouraged doesn't an expectation need to be attached?

Malcolm wrote:

Not necessarily. For example, you are just blithely walking down a road with no expectation. Someone discourages or encourages you for some reason for continuing further.

tkp67 said:

In order to be blithely one needs to understand the minds of others as if they are one's own or there is no possibility of intent. At best it would be ignorance that cannot be relieved unless those minds that are offended can rationally communicate why.

Expecting people to know what is one one's mind simply by proxy is an exercise in futility. Expecting like minded homogeneity in the degenerate and technological age is also a fruitless endeavor.

Malcolm wrote:

This exchange is an exercise in futility.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 4th, 2021 at 9:06 PM

Title: Re: How's America going?

Content:

Queequeg said:

We need some people to keep tabs on it and ring the alarm. I know myself and if I have one smoke, I'll be sucking down the pack before long.

Malcolm wrote:

What I do not use it for is dharma groups.

jake said:

What alternatives for general communication and general interest browsing do you see as good for dharma groups?

Malcolm wrote:

What I mean is that I do not participate in dharma forums. Facebook is an advertising platform, so it is good for that.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 4th, 2021 at 9:13 PM

Title: Re: Changchub Dorje's root guru

Content:

rai said:

is it known who was Changchub Dorje's root guru?

thank you!

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, Chanchub Dorje's gurus were Rangrig Dorje, Adzom Drukpa, and Shardza Tashi Gyaltzen, and possibly Pema Dudul.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 4th, 2021 at 9:26 PM

Title: Re: How do you feel about Buddhists getting involved in politics?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

The idea is not to be passive, but rather redirecting our mental energy from a sphere over which we have no influence (politics)...

Malcolm wrote:

The idea we (collectively) have no influence over politics is demonstrably incorrect.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 4th, 2021 at 10:27 PM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

Norwegian said:

US intelligence officials have no evidence confirming Navy pilot UFO encounters were alien spacecraft Washington (CNN)US intelligence officials have found no evidence confirming that unidentified flying objects encountered by US Navy pilots in recent years were alien spacecraft but also have not reached a definitive assessment as to what these mysterious objects might be, according to five sources familiar with the findings of an upcoming report on UFOs that is expected to be delivered to Congress later this month.

According to three of those sources, the report does not however rule out the possibility they are alien spacecraft.

While that uncertainty is likely a blow to the hopes of UFO enthusiasts who were hoping for definitive proof of extraterrestrial life, it does not minimize the significance of the report, especially given what sources describe as a years-long battle inside the Pentagon over whether even to acknowledge what are now hundreds of unexplained sightings by US military personnel.

The New York Times was first to publish details of the upcoming report.

US officials also cannot rule out the possibility that these flying objects were aircraft belonging to American adversaries, namely Russia and China -- a potentially more troublesome conclusion that raises a host of potential national security concerns, one of the sources said.

However, the forthcoming report is expected to conclude that the objects are not secret American technology, the source added.

More:

<https://edition.cnn.com/2021/06/03/politics/intelligence-officials-navy-pilot-ufo-encounters/index.html>

Malcolm wrote:

Tesla Coils, it can all be explained by Tesla coils....

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 4th, 2021 at 11:34 PM

Title: Re: Terdak Lingpa Khandro Nyingthig/Yangthig???

Content:

KonchogUrgyenNyima said:

Wow that is really interesting. I heard of some other nyingthig (perhaps sometimes counted in with the yabshi?) which was discovered by a karmapa. Maybe it is the same karmapa?

Thanks for your clarifying info my friend!

heart said:

No that is Karmapa Rangjung Dorje, the Karma Nyingtik.

/magnus

Yungdrung Gyalpo said:

There is no such thing as a «Karma Nyingthik» that would be really different from the two Nyingthiks (Bima- and Khandro-).

Malcolm wrote:

It is a Vimalamitra Guru Yoga, basically, connected with the Vima Nyinthik.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 5th, 2021 at 12:09 AM

Title: Re: Terdak Lingpa Khandro Nyingthig/Yangthig???

Content:

mutsum said:

Not at all. It is not a guru-yoga nor a cycle but a very well-known single text entitled Nyams len lag khrigs ma'i khrid ngo mtshar can and nicknamed Karma Nyingthik. It is included in the Bima Nyingthik (vol. 4) and in the Sungbum of the 3rd Karmapa.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, I had thought I had once seen a text of such a guru yoga, but perhaps I was recalling this line:

བེ་མས་རྒྱལ་དབང་ཀམ་པ་རང་བྱུང་དོན་མཛན་སྤྱུམ་བྱིན་གྱིས་བསྐྱབས་ནས་དགོངས་གཏེར་དུ་བསྐྱེད་བ་ཀམ་རྟེན་ཐིག་གོ

"Vimala, having blessed the Gyalwang Karmapa Rangjung Dorje in person, bestowed the mind treasure, the Karma Nyingthik.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 5th, 2021 at 12:11 AM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Nemo said:

Is the Dharma really the Dharma if you practice for 30 years and it produces no realization?

Malcolm wrote:

We don't practice for this life. We practice for the next life.

Realization is a not campaign badge one can show others. It's undetectable by ordinary people. The only thing ordinary people can observe is the extraordinary compassion of realized people.

PadmaVonSamba said:

AVOIDING THE TEN FAULTS

Master Padma said: When practicing the Dharma, you must make sure not to fall into the ten faults.

The lady asked: What are these ten faults?

The master said: Although you may practice meditation, if it does not become a remedy against your disturbing emotions and thoughts, you have the fault of the oral instructions not being made effective.

Although you may have recognized your mind, if it does not liberate your consciousness free from partiality, you have the fault of not having met with the special instruction.

Although you may have strong devotion, if you do not receive the blessings, you have the fault of not having connected with an accomplished master.

Although you may exert yourself with great effort, if your practice does not progress, you have the fault of your mind not being fully purified.

If you feel tired when engaging in spiritual practice, you have the fault of not having recognized the natural state of awareness.

Although you practice, if your mind is still scattered, you have the fault of not having gained confidence in meditation.

If experience does not arise directly in your state of mind, you have the fault of having only strayed into Samatha.

If the strength of awareness does not arise in your being, you have the fault of not knowing how to take appearances as aids to the path.

If you find it difficult to cut through your attachment to disturbing emotions, you have the fault of not knowing how to take the five poisons as the path.

If you cannot cope with suffering and difficulties, you have the fault of not knowing how to turn your mind away from samsāra.

In any case, when you claim to practice the Dharma while being full of faults within is there any chance to ever have good circumstances?

—Dakini Teachings -
Rangjung Yeshe Publications.

Malcolm wrote:

On the other hand, if Dharma is only for perfect, faultless people, it is of no value.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 5th, 2021 at 12:31 AM

Title: Re: Seeking feedback/review: Pure Land Buddhism from a Tibetan Buddhist perspective

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

The whole of Pure Land Buddhism is based on Amitabha's 48 Vows.

Malcolm wrote:

There is no "pure land" Buddhism per se, in Tibetan Buddhism, in the sense one observes it in Sino-Japanese Buddhism. That does not mean that birth in pure buddhafiels is of no concern in Tibetan Buddhism, but this is handled with aspirations and phowa.

One does not read Tibetan masters making sustained arguments about the meaning of the 48 vows and so on. The Halkias book is pretty comprehensive.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 5th, 2021 at 3:46 AM

Title: Re: Changchub Dorje's root guru

Content:

rai said:

is it known who was Changchub Dorje's root guru?

thank you!

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, Chanchub Dorje's gurus were Rangrig Dorje, Adzom Drukpa, and Shardza Tashi Gyaltzen, and possibly Pema Dudul.

Tata1 said:

Possibly? Somehow i thought pema dudul was his root guru.

Malcolm wrote:

There is a certain lack of clarity around his dates.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 5th, 2021 at 3:48 AM

Title: Re: Seeking feedback/review: Pure Land Buddhism from a Tibetan Buddhist perspective

Content:

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

The 48 Vows are vital at the Common Mahayana Pure Land level. Practices like Phowa on Vajrayana isn't included so I suppose the 48 Vows isn't the same in terms of importance from that perspective.

Thanks Malcolm

Malcolm wrote:

Charles B Jones, in his book Pure Land: History, Traditions, and Practices, argues pretty convincingly that what is understood as Pure Land Buddhism never existed anywhere other than the Sino-Japanese tradition.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 5th, 2021 at 3:49 AM

Title: Re: Terdak Lingpa Khandro Nyingthig/Yangthig???

Content:

Yungdrung Gyalpo said:

but just Rangjung Dorje's explanations of the well-known Nyingthik(s).

Malcolm wrote:

The line I quoted above is from the mentioned text, it is apparently considered a mind treasure.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 5th, 2021 at 3:54 AM

Title: Re: Terdak Lingpa Khandro Nyingthig/Yangthig???

Content:

Yungdrung Gyalpo said:

Now, that is fascinating, because we have no clue whether Rigdzin Gödem had any personal knowledge of the Khandro Nyingthik – and also because, if we are not mistaken about his dates, he was really much younger than Yungtönpa.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, either the six liberation through wearing tantras and the treasury of the mantras of ḍākinīs were added by someone else to the dgongs pa zang thal, or he included them himself.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 5th, 2021 at 4:01 AM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Nemo said:

That sounds like theism, at least in practice. Worship the giant space Father or Mother by following all the rules and they will reward you in the afterlife. How is your faith different from any of the 1000 other kooky cults out there?(real question, not rhetoric.)

Malcolm wrote:

No, it sounds like Buddhadharma.

No one rewards one for anything. When it is said one practices for the next life, it means one has the presence of mind to understand that one may not achieve buddhahood in this life.

Karma is not an imposed rule, and there is no person handing out rewards for behaving in a virtuous manner or punishments for behaving nonvirtuously.

There is no space father or mother, no rules, and no afterlife in which to receive a reward. The next life is not an "afterlife," it is the next life after this one, hopefully as a human being able to meet and practice the dharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 5th, 2021 at 4:21 AM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

Danny said:

Not impressed by the so called physics at all.

Sure this is not just Chinese bragging about focused direct energy weapon development?

Malcolm wrote:

Definitely Tesla coils, K?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 5th, 2021 at 8:21 PM

Title: Re: How do you feel about Buddhists getting involved in politics?

Content:

Zhen Li said:

The idea is not to be passive, but rather redirecting our mental energy from a sphere over which we have no influence (politics)...

Malcolm wrote:

The idea we (collectively) have no influence over politics is demonstrably incorrect.

Zhen Li said:

We do not act collectively as Buddhists. We have different opinions on matters of Buddhist thought, let alone political thought.

Most Buddhist political parties historically have been extremely conservative and monarchist—which, from previous discussions here, is not necessarily the case with western Buddhists. So it is clear that there is not one political ideology that suits us collectively as Buddhists.

Unfortunately, people who get involved in politics with sincere intention are usually hoodwinked or taken advantage of by the corrupt participants (the same occurs in police forces).

Moreover, at the end of the day, politicians do not actually make policy, the civil service does. If you want to get involved in a real way, where you are involved in the actual process of drafting, limiting, and refusing or approving policies on a day to day basis, you should become a member of the civil service. They also ensure that policy does not actually change much, if at all, from one administration to another. Politicians, on the other hand, are a public face to government. Someone to blame. They use the three poisons in order to make people fear the consequences of choosing someone other than them.

Malcolm wrote:

By “we” I was referring to the general populace in a democratic state. We can indeed, with effort and dedication, effect change in our governments.

In reality, classical Buddhist skepticism of monarchy is deep seated, with Aryadeva, for example, mocking kings as great fools who do not recognize their power comes from the people.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 5th, 2021 at 8:22 PM

Title: Re: How do you feel about Buddhists getting involved in politics?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

No one should expect politics to be enlightened.

FiveSkandhas said:

A judicious study of the relationship between Politics and Buddhism in Japanese history shows that Buddhism became repeatedly and darkly politicized in most cases while only very rarely did politics become enlightened.

... Live unknown if you would realize your end.

Follow the advice of your common sense.

Avoid the Imperial Audience Chamber, the Eastern Flowery Hall.

The dust of the times and the wind of the Northern Pass.

One hundred years is a long time,

But at last it comes to an end.

Meanwhile it is no greater accomplishment

To be a rich corpse or a poor one...

-Su Tung Po

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 5th, 2021 at 9:00 PM

Title: Re: Terdak Lingpa Khandro Nyingthig/Yangthig???

Content:

Yungdrung Gyalpo said:

Now, that is fascinating, because we have no clue whether Rigdzin Gödem had any personal knowledge of the Khandro Nyingthik – and also because, if we are not mistaken about his dates, he was really much younger than Yungtönpa.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, either the six liberation through wearing tantras and the treasury of the mantras of ḍākinīs were added by someone else to the dgongs pa zang thal, or he included them himself.

Yungdrung Gyalpo said:

Thanks – But these texts are everywhere, no, at least the bTags [s]grol? You think they are originally from the Khandro Nyingthik?

Malcolm wrote:

The form they are presented in the GZ is identically to what is presented in the KN.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 5th, 2021 at 10:17 PM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

TharpaChodron said:

like who really killed JFK, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

Ted Cruz's dad???

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 5th, 2021 at 10:22 PM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Von Braun, worked with Walt Disney:

https://www.nasa.gov/centers/marshall/history/vonbraun/disney_article.html

Von Braun also is said to have referred to JPL's Jack Parsons as the “true father of the American space race”.

And then there is Stanley Kubrick:

<https://www.nytimes.com/2020/01/23/arts/design/kubrick-2001-museum-moving-image.html>

“Space may be the final frontier, but it’s made in a Hollywood basement” (?) — The Red Hot Chili Peppers

Danny said:

Jack Parsons has a Ron Hubbard / Crowley connection.
If you'd like that rabbit hole.
A lotta kinky stuff.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and there is a CBS show on Parson's with a somewhat silly presentation of the OTO in LA in the 1940's.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 5th, 2021 at 10:31 PM

Title: Re: "Negative phenomenology" and the "second explosion of suffering"

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

I support Metzinger's call for a total moratorium on the creation of machines with even the potential to suffer until we truly get a handle on this issue.

Malcolm wrote:

It is impossible. Sentience cannot be created. All examples of sentient life we observe arose out of a lengthy evolutionary process of self-organization. Therefore, the idea that machines can suffer is impossible, and just gross anthropomorphism.

However, there are other very good reasons to limit and tightly regulate so-called "AI" development, especially in military applications.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 5th, 2021 at 11:04 PM

Title: Re: "Negative phenomenology" and the "second explosion of suffering"

Content:

KathyLauren said:

The Buddha did teach that only sentient beings suffer. Such a Turing test of sentience would, in effect, indicate that the machine is sentient. There is no reason to think that sentience is limited to biological organisms. After all, the six realms of sentient beings include several for which we have no evidence at all of biology.

Malcolm wrote:

All sentient beings have, at minimum, a mental organ and a jivitendriya, an organ of life.

But more importantly, sentience self-organizes. No one created our mindstreams. In order for a machine to be sentient, a sentient being would have to be conceived as a machine. Among the four kinds of birth, which kind of birth would this be?

Finally, the Buddha taught three kinds of suffering—the suffering of suffering, the suffering of change, and the suffering of the compounded. The last of these is not restricted to sentient beings and applies to all compounded, afflictive phenomena (everything other than path dharmas).

In this case, Metzinger's definition of suffering as a experience is too limited. By the criteria of the third kind of suffering, machines already suffer. My comment was directed to the idea that machines can experience suffering. But suffering is not only an experience in a consciousness, it is also an existential fact about impermanent phenomena.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 5th, 2021 at 11:13 PM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

Danny said:

A lotta kinky stuff.

Sādhaka said:

Yea the O.T.O. people are into some weird stuff, and it's not clear to me when the really weird stuff was introduced to the O.T.O.; that is if it was with Reuss later on, some years after the founding of the O.T.O., or if it was with the advent of Crowley.

Malcolm wrote:

The Ecclesiastic Mass was largely Crowley's version, completely with his novel interpretation of the "holy grail" and Parzifal's "lance."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 5th, 2021 at 11:52 PM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

Sādhaka said:

The only ones I have much respect for—that is regarding who I'm aware of—out of all that mess, are Rudolf Steiner, Arnold Krumm-Heller, Franz Hartmann; and maybe Kellner.

Malcolm wrote:

Team Crowley here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 5th, 2021 at 11:55 PM

Title: Re: "Negative phenomenology" and the "second explosion of suffering"

Content:

PeterC said:

So I see no particular reason to think humanity will suddenly learn discipline in this regard.

Malcolm wrote:

Agreed, but we have to register our objections anyway.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 6th, 2021 at 12:01 AM

Title: Re: Terdak Lingpa Khandro Nyingthig/Yangthig???

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The form they are presented in the GZ is identically to what is presented in the KN.

Yungdrung Gyalpo said:

Thanks ! Now have you noticed that Tülku Tsullo quotes the Klong gsal very often (I think 39 times, but as people are extremely precise on this forum, they will surely correct that it is 38...!) in his practice manual of the Gongpa Zangthal ? Do you know where the quotations are borrowed from ?

Even Tulku Thondup did not notice it, he tried to find them all in the "original" text (and that does not work so well, he often has to say that this corresponds to that passage "in substance").

Malcolm wrote:

I have not read that text.

I would assume that klong gsal nyi ma 'bar ma. Have you tried Buddhanexus?

You can plug in a passage there and see if it corresponds to the klong gsal tantra in the Nyingma kama.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 6th, 2021 at 12:25 AM

Title: Re: Terdak Lingpa Khandro Nyingthig/Yangthig???

Content:

Yungdrung Gyalpo said:

Dear Malcolm, no need – because I have already found: none of them is taken directly from any version of the tantra; all are borrowed from Longchenpa's Zab don rgya mtsho'i sprin, where they occur in exactly the same order, exactly the same form, about the same topics.

Malcolm wrote:

Given that the KN is a self-described commentary on the klong gsal nyi ma 'bar ma, you might wish to do a little more heavy lifting and identify where those passages are located.

Also the Vajravārāhī sadhana is clearly linked with Longchenpa's version in the KY, since the consort is Hayagriva, rather than the other way around, as in the KN.

The GN Phag mo zab khrid, on the other hand, seems entirely original.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 6th, 2021 at 1:32 AM

Title: Re: "Negative phenomenology" and the "second explosion of suffering"

Content:

Unknown said:

Then, last month, OpenAI says, it discovered AI Dungeon also showed a dark side to human-AI collaboration. A new monitoring system revealed that some players were typing words that caused the game to generate stories depicting sexual encounters involving children. OpenAI asked Latitude to take immediate action. "Content moderation decisions are difficult in some cases, but not this one," OpenAI CEO Sam Altman said in a statement. "This is not the future for AI that any of us want."

Latitude turned on a new moderation system last week—and triggered a revolt among its users. Some complained it was oversensitive and that they could not refer to an "8-year-old laptop" without triggering a warning message. Others said the company's plans to manually review flagged content would needlessly snoop on private, fictional creations that were sexually explicit but involved only adults—a popular use case for AI Dungeon.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.wired.com/story/ai-fueled-dungeon-game-got-much-darker/>

Unknown said:

Ever since the internet turned Microsoft's Tay racist and genocidal, forcing Microsoft to shut down the chatbot within 24 hours, we've known how susceptible artificial intelligence (AI) can be to turning evil.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.techradar.com/news/mit-creates-psychopath-ai-using-the-dark-side-of-reddit>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 6th, 2021 at 2:12 AM

Title: Re: "Negative phenomenology" and the "second explosion of suffering"

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Some people in this thread seem convinced that machine intelligence / sentience / consciousness / suffering is impossible and/or irrelevant but I haven't seen any strong arguments to that effect.

Malcolm wrote:

If machine sentience were possible, it would have to be capable of appropriating a new series of aggregates, and would have to be a rebirth.

FiveSkandhas said:

Given the possibility that these things could cause and/or experience suffering in ways and to extents never before fathomed, I think to dismiss them as "just artificial" ignores some very serious potentials.

Malcolm wrote:

Mind streams cannot be newly created. A sentient machine would have to be the rebirth of a being in the six realms. But I've never heard of the "machine realm" listed among the six.

In order for a machine to suffer, which is a result, it would have to be able to generate negative karma, the cause of suffering. In order to generate negative karma it would have to possess afflictions, the cause of karma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 6th, 2021 at 2:49 AM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

Sādhaka said:

Really though, I think it's better to be on neither team at the end of the day; wouldn't you say?

Malcolm wrote:

In terms of preference, I find those German and Austrian guys humorless and stuffy. I enjoyed reading Crowley much more, though reading some of Steiner's biodynamic methods are hoot. I still find Crowley entertaining, and more grounded in terms of yoga and Buddhist meditation than those other fellows. But of course, Thelema is a path long abandoned.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 6th, 2021 at 3:50 AM

Title: Re: Terdak Lingpa Khandro Nyingthig/Yangthig???

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Given that the KN is a self-described commentary on the klong gsal nyi ma 'bar ma, you might wish to do a little more heavy lifting and identify where those passages are located.

Yungdrung Gyalpo said:

Tulku Thondup has already done that long ago, but it did not work so well. While what I did works perfectly with the Zab don rgya mtsho'i sprin. That is Tülku Tsullo's real and ultimate source for many quotations. I think that it is philologically more important to identify the real sources, if you want to understand a Tibetan text, than the sources of these sources. Many things become clear when you read Tülku Tsullo's text with the Zab don rgya mtsho'i sprin, while Tulku Thondup's identifications did not bring any clarification – especially on the main question: why should Tülku Tsullo quote so many times the Klong gsal, which is never ever quoted in the Gongpa Zangthal? The basic (though not ultimate) explanation is: because, while composing his manual, as he was not satisfied by the previously existing Gongpa Zangthal manuals, he used the Zab don rgya mtsho'i sprin as a canvas, at least for the parts for which he did not find a sufficient structure in the Khrid gzhung of the Gongpa Zangthal. But I suspect another, deeper, idea, such as suggesting some form on natural articulation of the Gongpa Zangthal and the Khandro Nyingthik.

As for what you suggest of Rigdzin Gödem being inspired by Longchenpa's writings, honestly, I strongly doubt that he could have a complete set of them at the time when he opened the Zangzang Lhadrak. It is not as if they were "published" in the modern sense. Remember in Longchenpa's biography when his disciple, I think Özer Gocha, brought him the Khandro Nyingthik texts: it is quite plain that these texts were rare and not widespread, surely not printed at all, in those times. And my feeling is that it is much more likely that Gödem got all that from the "other side", I mean, the Karmapa / Yungtönpa one, not the Longchenpa one. But this is a pure conjecture, so far we have zero knowledge, if I am not mistaken, on this question.

Tell me if I am wrong.

The fact that there are parts in common between the Gongpa Zangthal and the Khandro Nyingthik does not have to mean that the one borrowed from the other; they may both have a common source, whatever it may have been.

Malcolm wrote:

All I know is that Longchenpa has a sadhana he composed in the KY, which features Vajravārāhī with Hayagriva as her consort. The same arrangement is presented in the GZ.

The mantras are all the same, check the mkha' 'gro sngags kyi lde migs in GZ, v. one, 364-365, KN, vol.2 331-332; as well as the mkha' 'gro gsang sgrub dngos grub gter gyi 'bum pa, GZ vol. 365-371, KN, vol.1 321-328. They are identical texts. Pretty sure there are a couple of more that are identical which must come from the KN; aside from the six liberation through wearing tantras in vol 2 of the GZ and vol. 2 of the KN. This means these texts were inserted into the GZ at some point, and whether it was by Godem himself or some later compiler, I don't know. Not only this, but the main four empowerment texts for the GZ in vol. 1 very much resemble Longchenpa's empowerment for the KN/KY. This does not mean that Godem was influenced by Longchenpa, but at minimum it means that there is a common source.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 6th, 2021 at 4:09 AM

Title: Re: Terdak Lingpa Khandro Nyingthig/Yangthig???

Content:

Yungdrung Gyalpo said:

The basic (though not ultimate) explanation is: because, while composing his manual, as he was not satisfied by the previously existing Gongpa Zangthal manuals, he used the Zab don rgya mtsho'i sprin as a canvas, at least for the parts for which he did not find a sufficient structure in the Khrid gzhung of the Gongpa Zangthal. But I suspect another, deeper, idea, such as suggesting some form on natural articulation of the Gongpa Zangthal and the Khandro Nyingthik.

Malcolm wrote:

The GZ, arguably belongs to the Padma Snying thig genre. The root text of the Padma Snying thig is the klong gsal 'bar ma nyi ma rgyud, which, according to JLA, is a terma of Nyangral. The source of these dakinis mantras seems to be the pho them mo them tantra, also a terma of Nyang. The whole Hayagriva/Vārāhī (rta phag) thing seems to begin around his time. But maybe someone has more info about an earlier manifestation of this. Certainly, it also figures in Yuthok's Snying thig as well.

Of course, we have to observe that apart from some tantras that Godem included versions of, like the sangs rgyas rang chas (originally revealed by lCe sgom nag po), and a couple of others, and the Buddhahood, Godem virtually never cites from the 17 tantras either.

As for locating the source of the klong gsal citations, its a useful exercise and provides clarity around how Longchenpa understood these citations. If I were translating the text you've been working on, I would do it, especially since now they are easily locatable in an e-text at Buddhanexus.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 6th, 2021 at 4:16 AM

Title: Re: Terdak Lingpa Khandro Nyingthig/Yangthig???

Content:

KonchogUrgyenNyima said:

The way you phrased the varahi/hayagriva bit sounds like varahi is the main meditational deity and not hayagriva. This is the opposite of what i have come to expect from yidam practice. Is this the case?

Malcolm wrote:

In the Gongpa Zangthal Vārāhī practice, and a very similar sadhana composed by Longchenpa in the Khandro Yangthig, yes, Vārāhī is the main deity, and Hayagriva is the consort, not the other way around. Another sadhana with this format is Khentse Wangpo's Chime Phagma Nyinthig, where White Tāra is the main deity, embraced by Avalokiteśvara as Narteśvara, Lord of the Dance (some say this is Amitabha, but that does not really make sense), lord of the dance.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 6th, 2021 at 4:19 AM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

Danny said:

Malcolm what do you make of Crowleys "alien" Lama.

Malcolm wrote:

Too much heroin, taken to deal with his chronic and disabling asthma issue.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 6th, 2021 at 4:43 AM

Title: Re: "Negative phenomenology" and the "second explosion of suffering"

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Mind streams cannot be newly created. A sentient machine would have to be the rebirth of a being in the six realms. But I've never heard of the "machine realm" listed among the six.

In order for a machine to suffer, which is a result, it would have to be able to generate negative karma, the cause of suffering. In order to generate negative karma it would have to possess afflictions, the cause of karma.

FiveSkandhas said:

What if a sentient machine is a member of one of the six realms? Why couldn't it be classified as, say, a kind of Deva or Asura? Or a hungry ghost, hell being, or even an advanced animal for that matter?

What if what science calls the spontaneous emergence of sentience is in fact a form of reincarnation, so no new mind-stream is created?

What makes you so sure it couldn't possess afflictions?

Malcolm wrote:

I am afraid that this question can only be answered definitively by someone who has the higher cognitive ability (abhiññā) to know the minds of others. However, Buddha denied sentience in plants very clearly. Thus, just as we deny sentience in plants, etc., the Buddhist position will be that machines cannot be sentient. Suffering requires karma and affliction as causes. Sentience requires self-organized replication and continuation. Machines will never achieve this, since they have never been self-organized entities, but created entities. We sentient beings are not created, our mind streams are beginningless. There has never been a moment in time when our mind streams did not exist. Now, is it possible some unfortunate preta could inhabit a machine? I guess so. A deva or an asura would not bother, because other than the most pure bhikṣus and bhikṣuṇīs, we humans smell very nauseating to them, like a rotting pit of offal. Possession is not rebirth thought, since there is no gradual development from conception, and in fact, apparitional births like hell beings, bardo beings, pretas, and devas, are basically mind-made bodies supported by the air element. Recall, there are four kinds of birth, not a fifth.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 6th, 2021 at 4:44 AM

Title: Re: Terdak Lingpa Khandro Nyingthig/Yangthig???

Content:

KonchogUrgyenNyima said:

Wow. It's like a dream come true haha. I have really been wondering if there are any practices where the dakini is the main deity. Lo and behold it's in the Khandro Nyingthig. Are there any other practices, besides the two mentioned here, that you can think of?

Malcolm wrote:

Not that I can think of. And it is in the Khandro Yangthig, not the Nyinthig.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 6th, 2021 at 4:51 AM

Title: Re: "Negative phenomenology" and the "second explosion of suffering"

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

The concept of Anatta is the concept of not-self. What is the difference between the Emptiness of the human and the Emptiness of an artificial intelligence?

Malcolm wrote:

Nothing, but that is only at the ultimate level.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 6th, 2021 at 5:11 AM

Title: Re: Terdak Lingpa Khandro Nyingthig/Yangthig???

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

... is the klong gsal 'bar ma nyi ma rgyud, which, according to JLA, is a terma of Nyangral.

mutsum said:

I asked JL about this several times and his opinion is that the Klong gsal by Nyang-ral is not the Klong gsal quoted in the Khandro Nyingthik. Nyang-ral's Klong gsal is a Yang-ti Tantra so it cannot be the source for the Khandro Nyingthik's quotes. However, the actual quotes can be found in the Klong gsal don rgyud (of Ratna Lingpa) and the Klong gsal ma rgyud (of Dorje Lingpa), as well as in versions from earlier tertöns.

Malcolm wrote:

The klong gsal 'bar ma nyi ma is definitely the text the KN is based; Dorje's Lingpa's extension of it is clearly later.

For example, the klong gsal in 112 chapters is commonly cited as a proof texts for inner rushan, etc.

This is also not Ratna Lingpa's later text, since citations from the "klong gsal" are found in the long tantra in 112 chapters. It is also not the same as the one revealed by Rin chen gling pa found in the Derge rNying ma rgyud 'bum.

The first 25 chapters of the 112 chapter klong gsal are short versifications of the Rang shar's first 25 chapters, more or less.

So, if it is not Nyangral's, then its origin is still anonymous for now.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 6th, 2021 at 5:12 AM

Title: Re: Terdak Lingpa Khandro Nyingthig/Yangthig???

Content:

KonchogUrgyenNyima said:

Wow. It's like a dream come true haha. I have really been wondering if there are any practices where the dakini is the main deity. Lo and behold it's in the Khandro Nyingthig. Are there any other practices, besides the two mentioned here, that you can think of?

Malcolm wrote:

Not that I can think of. And it is in the Khandro Yangthig, not the Nyinthig.

KonchogUrgyenNyima said:

I was under the impression that Khandro Yangthig was commentary on the K Nyingthig. Is this not the case?

Malcolm wrote:

The KY has a great deal of independent revelations by Longchenpa. It is more of a continuation, that has original material, plus a very long commentary that synthesizes the stages of practice of the KN.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 6th, 2021 at 5:52 AM

Title: Re: "Negative phenomenology" and the "second explosion of suffering"

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Sentience requires self-organized replication and continuation. Machines will never achieve this, since they have never been self-organized entities, but created entities.

FiveSkandhas said:

This statement is open to debate. Especially the "will never" part, even if one accepts "have never."

...

1) AI can already create new computer programs...

Malcolm wrote:

Let me stop you right there. How can you define machine generated code as "self-organized?" The rules it follows are predetermined by a human. This is not the case in natural selection for example. Natural selection is self-organized in toto. There is no creator who set the ball rolling, unlike algorithms that govern automatic code generation by computers.

The key point is self-organization, that elegant word, "autopoiesis."

In order for a system to be autopoietic, there cannot be a hint of external, intentional agency anywhere. Machines will never be free of the fact that we invent them. Code will never be free of the fact that we wrote the initial algorithms. Machine intelligence will never be sentient, and never be more than simulacra of human decision-making processes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 6th, 2021 at 6:03 AM

Title: Re: "Negative phenomenology" and the "second explosion of suffering"

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

Do you believe a machine could suffer?

Jesse said:

I don't know. From what I've seen I suspect so, but it's genuinely difficult to know for sure. At the end of the day, Buddha said 'There is Duḥkha', if a machine can think, why can't it experience suffering?

Malcolm wrote:

The question is not "can a machine emulate thought;" the question is, "can a machine experience the causes and results of action." In other words, can machines act; will they ever have true volition?

I think not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 6th, 2021 at 11:13 AM

Title: Re: "Negative phenomenology" and the "second explosion of suffering"

Content:

Jesse said:

From the view of selflessness what is Volition?

Malcolm wrote:

A mental factor.

Jesse said:

If humans posses volition, and do so without self hood, what is this volition, and why couldn't a machine have it?

Malcolm wrote:

It's a mental factor, which arises with a mind, which rocks and mechanical circuits, no matter how sophisticated, will never have.

Jesse said:

What I don't understand about the argument that machines can't posses sentience, is that the only real difference is what our bodies are made of, what the materials are made of. In both structure, and function, a machine designed to be human like, is actually human like.. there are differences, but there are also similarities.

Malcolm wrote:

Design...that's the point— sentient beings cannot be designed; there is no designer.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 6th, 2021 at 7:54 PM

Title: Re: "Negative phenomenology" and the "second explosion of suffering"

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

How can you define machine generated code as "self-organized?" The rules it follows are predetermined by a human...Code will never be free of the fact that we wrote the initial algorithms...

This is not the case in natural selection for example. Natural selection is self-organized in toto. There is no creator who set the ball rolling...

FiveSkandhas said:

Not necessarily applicable. First of all, neural network computing is not linearly "coded". Rather, massive amounts of information are fed into the input, and connection strengths are adjusted until the desired output is achieved. The process is more akin to "training" than old-fashioned "coding." It's closer to the way a parent trains a child.

Moreover, AI can already autonomously create new AI with no human input.

But even leaving aside these facts, the deeper threat is that at some point in the future, self-awareness would spontaneously emerge from a sufficiently connectivity-rich, information-dense environment. This is a possibility that cannot be denied.

And such an emergent phenomenon would certainly be subject to natural selection.

Malcolm wrote:
Have it your way.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 6th, 2021 at 8:48 PM

Title: Re: "Negative phenomenology" and the "second explosion of suffering"

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

How can you define machine generated code as "self-organized?" The rules it follows are predetermined by a human...Code will never be free of the fact that we wrote the initial algorithms...

This is not the case in natural selection for example. Natural selection is self-organized in toto. There is no creator who set the ball rolling...

FiveSkandhas said:

Not necessarily applicable. First of all, neural network computing is not linearly "coded". Rather, massive amounts of information are fed into the input, and connection strengths are adjusted until the desired output is achieved. The process is more akin to "training" than old-fashioned "coding." It's closer to the way a parent trains a child.

Moreover, AI can already autonomously create new AI with no human input.

But even leaving aside these facts, the deeper threat is that at some point in the future, self-awareness would spontaneously emerge from a sufficiently connectivity-rich, information-dense environment. This is a possibility that cannot be denied.

And such an emergent phenomenon would certainly be subject to natural selection.

Malcolm wrote:

Another problem with your hypothesis is that the Buddha defined the number of sentient beings to be finite, uncountable, but finite. The sattvadhātu can neither increase nor decrease, which rules out the emergence of a new sentient being. But that all depends on whether you take the Buddha's word for it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 6th, 2021 at 9:16 PM

Title: Re: Terdak Lingpa Khandro Nyingthig/Yangthig???

Content:

Yungdrung Gyalpo said:

Now, by the way, there is a practice manual of the Lung phag mo zab rgya by Tülku Tsullo, and, according to his understanding at least, one should visualize oneself as Hayagriva in union with Vajravarahi, not the other way round. I do not say that to object to what Malcolm wrote, but for further inquiry.

Malcolm wrote:

The main deity is Vajravārāhī, she is the main deity that is generated. All you have to do is check the Mka' 'gro lnga'i mchod pa'i phrin las kyi rim pa shes bya ba, and you will see this is so. Her description is first, as would normally be the case with the male principle, and Hayagriva's is second. Her description is comparatively detailed, his is a mere four lines. This is not from that text precisely, being from the later Tennyi Lingpa yang gter, but it is substantially the same:

གདན་སྤྱོད་ཡི་གེ་སྤྱི་མཐོང་འཛོམས་ལྟར་གྱི་གྲགས་ཐོད་པ་འོད་དུ་ཁྱེ་བ་ལས་ལྷ་བདག་ཉིད་རྩི་རྩེ་པག་མོ་སྐུ་མདོག་དམར་ལྷ་གཅིག་ཕྱག་གཉིས་ཞབས་གཉིས་བརྒྱུད་བསྐྱེད་མཛད་པའི་ཁྱེ་ལ་དམར་པོ་སྐུ་གསུམ་མཆོད་བ་གཅིག་ལྷ་དབྱེ་སེར་པོ་མེ་ལོང་དྲིལ་བྱས་བརྒྱན་ཕྱི་གཙུག་པག་ཞལ་ནག་མོ་དུར་སྐྱོན་ལྷ་གཡལ་གྱི་གྲགས་གཡོན་པས་ཐོད་པ་བསྐྱེད་མཛད་པའི་གཡོན་དུ་ཁྱེ་ལྷ་འཛོམས་ལྟར་ལྷ་ལ་མཛོམས་པར་བརྒྱན་མེ་རི་འབར་བའི་སྤོང་ན་འབྱེད་བག་བཞུགས་དཔལ་པོ་རྟ་མགིན་དམར་པོ་གར་སྐྱབས་མཛད་པའི་གཙུག་རྟ་མགོ་ལྷ་རྟ་སྐད་འཛོམས་ལྷ་གཡལ་གྱི་གྲགས་གཡོན་པས་ཐོད་པ་བསྐྱེད་མཛད་པའི་སྤོང་ཆས་ཀྱིས་དཔལ་པོའི་སྐུ་ལ་བརྒྱན་

I have seen thanks of this, but they are not available in public.

In the end it does not matter much, since both forms are present in the KN/KY, that is Hayagriva as the principle, and Vārāhī as the principle.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 6th, 2021 at 9:27 PM

Title: Re: "Negative phenomenology" and the "second explosion of suffering"

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

But the bottom line is that sentience isn't a byproduct of material existence.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, there is also the fact that consciousness by definition is NOT an emergent property of matter.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 6th, 2021 at 10:29 PM

Title: Re: "Negative phenomenology" and the "second explosion of suffering"

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

But the emergence of a new form of life could easily be offset by the disappearance of an equal number of beings elsewhere. Species go extinct and come into being all the time.

Malcolm wrote:

Huh? Mind streams never go extinct.

Have you considered the idea that you may have some unresolved attachment to physicalist views on the emergence of consciousness?

This is why I keep insisting on two factors: one, consciousness cannot be created and sentient beings are self-organized phenomena in toto. In order for a machine to be sentient, it would have to be possibly birth locus, a place where a being in the intermediate state would attempt to appropriate as a new series of aggregates.

AI does not satisfy criteria one, because machines are wholly fabricated devices, and do not exhibit self-organizing behavior. They can emulate that kind of behavior, but it is not true autopoiesis. They do not satisfy two, because there is simply no evidence that consciousness can appropriate a machine as a place of rebirth. Even if a consciousness could appropriate a machine as a place of rebirth, this still would not render machines —artificially— intelligent, and that consciousness would NOT be an emergent property at all.

Indeed, the only way I can imagine personally, an intelligent machine, is that someone might experience this as a personal hell, similar to stories where people are reborn in pillars, brooms, and so on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 7th, 2021 at 3:00 AM

Title: Re: Vajrayana as an aspect of Nichiren practice

Content:

Queequeg said:

My personal opinion, and this is all it is, I think Nichiren had a much deeper interest in Shingon than he admits. Other than Kukai's judgment that in terms of profundity of teaching the Lotus ranks third (Avatamsaka second), he doesn't have much criticism to offer.

markatex said:

It's been a long time since I've read it in its entirety, but in the Shugo Kokka-ron, one of Nichiren's earliest writings, he repeatedly presents Honen's Jodo Shu teachings as being in opposition to what he refers to as "the Lotus-Shingon teaching" and refers to the Lotus, Nirvana, and Mahavairocana Sutras as "ryogi-kyo," or "sutras thoroughly revealing the truth." Nichiren's ideas definitely evolved over time, but at least at that early point, he seemed to put Hokke and Shingon Buddhism on almost equal footing.

I'm not sure if he speaks of Shingon this way in any other writings, but I've always found it curious.

illaraza said:

Nichiren explains that in the beginning, he refrained from criticizing (refuting) Shingon because of the difficulty of the task. In fact, in the earlier writings, he talked about the superiority of Shingon to Pure Land. Only after his experience at Tatsunokuchi did he begin to refute Shingon and, most importantly, in the Five Major Writings.

M

Malcolm wrote:

This is all just dancing on books. Its useless for awakening.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 7th, 2021 at 4:00 AM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Giving the Buddha Primacy, why do we take refuge in the one Gautama Buddha and call the rest of the Buddhas His Sangha, even though they are Buddhas as well?

Malcolm wrote:

What we really go for refuge to is the dharmakāya, a buddha's realization.

We don't refer to the other Buddhas besides Śākyamuni Buddha as his Sangha, since they all have the same realization. There are some schools that seek to elevate Śākyamuni, and consider all other buddhas to be emanations of the former, but this is an erroneous understanding.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 7th, 2021 at 5:00 AM

Title: Re: Vajrayana as an aspect of Nichiren practice

Content:

illaraza said:

Without practice and study there is no Buddhism.

Malcolm wrote:

There are three wisdoms: hearing, reflection, and cultivation.

But that is not dancing on books. "Dancing on books" means spending endless time engaged in polemics that only serve to reinforce the bias of those who already agree with you.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 7th, 2021 at 5:11 AM

Title: Re: Is Pure Land an alienated kind of Buddhism?

Content:

mansurhirbi87 said:

By the way this kind of criticism toward Pure Land buddhism comes since Feudal Japan.

Malcolm wrote:

So what?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 7th, 2021 at 5:20 AM

Title: Re: Vajrayana as an aspect of Nichiren practice

Content:

illaraza said:

Without practice and study there is no Buddhism.

Malcolm wrote:

There are three wisdoms: hearing, reflection, and cultivation.

But that is not dancing on books. "Dancing on books" means spending endless time engaged in polemics that only serve to reinforce the bias of those who already agree with you.

Minobu said:

So if we discuss Nichiren dharma it's polemics but if you preach death bed awakenings it's not...

Malcolm wrote:

There are three opportunities to awaken: this life, the time of the death, or in the intermediate state. For your edification:

<https://read.84000.co/translation/toh122.html>

Minobu said:

The bodhisattva mahāsattva Ākāśagarbha then paid homage to the Blessed One and asked, “Blessed One, how should we think about the mind of a bodhisattva who is about to die?”

1.-4 The Blessed One replied, “Ākāśagarbha, when a bodhisattva is about to die, he should cultivate the wisdom of the hour of death. The wisdom of the hour of death is as follows:

1.-5 "All phenomena are naturally pure. So, one should cultivate the clear understanding that there are no entities.

1.-6 "All phenomena are subsumed within the mind of enlightenment. So, one should cultivate the clear understanding of great compassion.¹⁰

1.-7 "All phenomena are naturally luminous. So, one should cultivate the clear understanding of non-apprehension.

1.-8 "All entities are impermanent. So, one should cultivate the clear understanding of non-attachment to anything whatsoever.

1.-9 "When one realizes mind, this is wisdom. So, one should cultivate the clear understanding of not seeking the Buddha elsewhere."

Malcolm wrote:

You can talk all you like about Nichiren's polemics. But it won't help you wake up. That goes for Tibetan Buddhist Polemics, Theravadin Polemics, Pure Land Polemics, etc. Its all basically a waste of time.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 7th, 2021 at 6:02 AM

Title: Re: Buddhism's causes of illness

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Minobu:

Actually, the cause of karma is affliction, desire, hatred, and ignorance. Desire, hatred, ignorance are the cause of most illnesses, because desire, hatred, and ignorance manifest in the body as "wind" (vāta), "bile" (pitta), and "phlegm" (kapha).

Now the one place you do have it right, is that the SUFFERING (a result) of illnesses is karmic, since karma ripens as neutral, painful or pleasant sensations. But the CAUSE of illness is the three humors. And the cause of the three humors is the three poisons. Karma does not cause the three poisons, the three poisons cause negative karma.

Karmic illnesses are illnesses that are a result, such as congenital blindness, and other incurable diseases. Curable diseases are not caused by karma. That is the distinction between humoral illnesses and karmic illnesses. There are also illnesses caused by spirits, and those attacks are general caused by engaging in nonvirtuous acts in temples, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 7th, 2021 at 10:55 AM

Title: Re: Buddhism's causes of illness

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Minobu:

Actually, the cause of karma is affliction, desire, hatred, and ignorance. Desire, hatred, ignorance are the cause of most illnesses, because desire, hatred, and ignorance manifest in the body as "wind" (vāta), "bile" (pitta), and "phlegm" (kapha).

Now the one place you do have it right, is that the SUFFERING (a result) of illnesses is karmic, since karma ripens as neutral, painful or pleasant sensations. But the CAUSE of illness is the three humors. And the cause of the three humors is the three poisons. Karma does not cause the three poisons, the three poisons cause negative karma.

Karmic illnesses are illnesses that are a result, such as congenital blindness, and other incurable diseases. Curable diseases are not caused by karma. That is the distinction between humoral illnesses and karmic illnesses. There are also illnesses caused by spirits, and those attacks are general caused by engaging in nonvirtuous acts in temples, etc.

Minobu said:

you posted from the sutra basically what john posted.

you said , it's no longer there but you said...not all illness are caused by karma...

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, not all illness is caused by karma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 7th, 2021 at 10:59 AM

Title: Re: How do you feel about Buddhists getting involved in politics?

Content:

alderjerry@gmail.com said:

So what would you have done if you were working in this call centre ?

Zhen Li said:

The same actions but without the thought that it is political.

Malcolm wrote:

Everything humans do is political, as long as we belong to a polity.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 7th, 2021 at 8:13 PM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

it is so in the Lotus Sutra, the Sutra by which Buddhas become Enlightened.

Malcolm wrote:
Buddhas do not attain awakening by relying on words.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, June 7th, 2021 at 8:47 PM
Title: Re: Buddhism's causes of illness
Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:
So, in terms of illness

Minobu said:
if you have the karma to get sick you do...if you don't you don't...

i don;t think there is any sickness suffered that is brought on just by happen chance...and i don't care what the etiology but hey if you believe stuff happens to people because of something other than karma.. ...why even bother to practice any of the teachings of Lord Sakyamuni Buddha..

good luck with that ...

Malcolm wrote:
Again, Buddha himself stated that illness is primarily caused by the three poisons. Take it up with him.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, June 7th, 2021 at 9:55 PM
Title: Re: Buddhism's causes of illness
Content:

Minobu said:
Well obviously as anyone can see I am hard wired to believe that karma is at the root cause to what ever life moment we are in

Malcolm wrote:
These are the Buddha's words on the subject, perhaps they will disrupt your "hard-wiring."

Minobu said:
Once the Blessed One dwelled at Rajagaha in the Bamboo-Grove Monastery, at the Squirrel's Feeding Place. There a wandering ascetic, Moliya Sivaka by name, called on the Blessed One, and after an exchange of courteous and friendly words, sat down at one side. Thus seated, he said:

"There are, revered Gotama, some ascetics and brahmans who have this doctrine and view: 'Whatever a person experiences, be it pleasure, pain or neither-pain-nor-pleasure, all that is caused by previous action.' Now, what does the revered Gotama say about this?"

"Produced by (disorders of the) bile, there arise, Sivaka, certain kinds of feelings. That this happens, can be known by oneself; also in the world it is accepted as true. Produced by (disorders of the) phlegm... of wind... of (the three) combined... by change of climate... by adverse behavior... by injuries... by the results of Kamma — (through all that), Sivaka, there arise certain kinds of feelings. That this happens can be known by oneself; also in the world it is accepted as true.

"Now when these ascetics and brahmans have such a doctrine and view that 'whatever a person experiences, be it pleasure, pain or neither-pain-nor-pleasure, all that is caused by previous action,' then they go beyond what they know by themselves and what is accepted as true by the world. Therefore, I say that this is wrong on the part of these ascetics and brahmans."

When this was spoken, Moliya Sivaka, the wandering ascetic, said: "It is excellent, revered Gotama, it is excellent indeed!...May the revered Gotama regard me as a lay follower who, from today, has taken refuge in him as long as life lasts."

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.accesstoinight.org/tipitaka/sn/sn36/sn36.021.nypo.html>

Thus, when you claim everything, including illness, is caused by karma, then you, like them, "go beyond what they know by themselves and what is accepted as true by the world."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 7th, 2021 at 10:00 PM

Title: Re: Vajrayana as an aspect of Nichiren practice

Content:

illaraza said:

Polemics is one aspect of teaching others to chant Namu myoho renge kyo.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, then I have to say that while you are exceptionally inept at polemics, you are a pretty good cheerleader.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 7th, 2021 at 10:02 PM

Title: Re: Original enlightenment , Honbutsu, Primordial Buddha

Content:

Minobu said:
sigh

Although I don't always agree with Malcolm, according to Nichiren, the most serious difficult to cure illnesses, are those illnesses due to karma.
and that's why it is in a category in and of itself in the sutra and in what john wrote..

but you don't get sick unless it is your karma to do so..

Malcolm wrote:
The Buddha disagrees:

<https://www.dharmawheel.net/viewtopic.php?p=585383#p585383>

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, June 7th, 2021 at 11:09 PM
Title: Re: Buddhism's causes of illness
Content:

Minobu said:
is this a theravada text ?

Malcolm wrote:
It is the word of the Buddha.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, June 7th, 2021 at 11:10 PM
Title: Re: Buddhism's causes of illness
Content:
Minobu said:

even if you read that text it is not denying what i see as what influences each moment.

Malcolm wrote:
It is flatly contradicting you.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Monday, June 7th, 2021 at 11:22 PM
Title: Re: Buddhism's causes of illness
Content:

Minobu said:
also it is theravada text you are using.....why dodge the question..

Malcolm wrote:
Yes, the Pali Canon is the word of the Buddha.

Minobu said:
you don't know how to interpret these things...

Malcolm wrote:
You are entitled to your opinion, of course.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, June 8th, 2021 at 12:00 AM
Title: Re: Buddhism's causes of illness
Content:

Minobu said:
also it is theravada text you are using.....why dodge the question..

Malcolm wrote:
Yes, the Pali Canon is the word of the Buddha.

Minobu said:
you don't know how to interpret these things...

Malcolm wrote:
You are entitled to your opinion, of course.

Minobu said:
lol

you never allow yourself to say you are wrong..

Malcolm wrote:
On this point, I am not wrong.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Tuesday, June 8th, 2021 at 12:06 AM
Title: Re: Emphasis on Dream Yoga
Content:
Hazel said:
What traditions put the most emphasis on Dream Yoga?

Malcolm wrote:
All.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 8th, 2021 at 12:28 AM

Title: Re: Buddhism's causes of illness

Content:

Minobu said:

ok so malcolm thinks that karma happens now and then...it sort of crops up and wham happens...so it's like a thing waiting to happen to him...

Malcolm wrote:

No. I think karma is caused by affliction (kleśa) and results (vipāka) in suffering (dukkha).

BTW, there is no daylight between how affliction, karma, and suffering are presented in Mahāyāna sūtras and Śrāvakayāna sūtras. For example, Nāgārjuna's Commentary on his Heart of Dependent Origination:

Question: Which links are affliction, which are action karma, and which are suffering? Into which of these twelve will [affliction, action, and suffering] be included?

Reply:

The first, eighth and ninth links are affliction.

The first of the twelve links is ignorance (āvidyā); the eighth link is craving (tṛṣṇā); the ninth link is addiction, (upādāna). These three should be understood as affliction. If is asked which of those [twelve links] is action:

The second and the tenth links are action.

The second link is formations (saṃskāra) and the tenth link is existence (bhāva). These two dharmas can be understood to be included in action.

Also, the remaining seven links are suffering.

Question: Those different [previous dharmas] were included in defilement and action, but which are the seven different remaining?

Reply: Those can be understood to be included in suffering. These terms consciousness (vijñāna), name and form (nāmarūpa), six sense bases (ṣaḍa-āyatana), contact, (sparśa), sensation (vedana), birth (jāti), and aging and death (jarāmaraṇa) are inclusive of the sufferings such as the suffering of being separated from what is pleasant, meeting with what is unpleasant, and abandonment of the pleasurable.

So you see, the ultimate cause of suffering is affliction, not karma. Affliction causes karma, which then results in suffering. You are not going to find in the sūtras, whether Mahāyāna or Śrāvakayāna, any explanation that diverges from this.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 8th, 2021 at 1:08 AM

Title: Re: Emphasis on Dream Yoga

Content:

Hazel said:

What traditions put the most emphasis on Dream Yoga?

Malcolm wrote:

All.

Hazel said:

Is it considered an advanced teaching in all of them?

Malcolm wrote:

Generally, yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 8th, 2021 at 1:08 AM

Title: Re: Buddhism's causes of illness

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

You are not going to find in the sūtras, whether Mahāyāna or Śrāvakayāna, any explanation that diverges from this.

PadmaVonSamba said:

Some folks are only interested in one sutra, sometimes only learning the title of it
And from that, they magically know more than everyone else, and that's plenty enough for them.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 8th, 2021 at 2:39 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

it is so in the Lotus Sutra, the Sutra by which Buddhas become Enlightened.

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhas do not attain awakening by relying on words.

Könchok Chödrak said:

If a certain disciple needs words to become Enlightened, if that is what His or Her Bodhicitta is thirsting for, then perhaps it is okay to use many words over a long period of time to explain to them the importance of certain Buddhist factors.

Malcolm wrote:

I was objecting to your claim that the Lotus Sūtra is the sūtra through which buddhas attain buddhahood.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 8th, 2021 at 3:26 AM

Title: Re: Emphasis on Dream Yoga

Content:

Hazel said:

Is it considered an advanced teaching in all of them?

Malcolm wrote:

Generally, yes.

Hazel said:

I'll have to be patient then. I have a knack for lucid dreaming and have been experimenting with practicing in my dreams (mantra recitations mostly). I was hoping to try to dive into a bit more.

I also have been met with same great misfortune and am now looking for another teacher and am eyeing other traditions.

Malcolm wrote:

It is generally considered connected with the completion stage, that's all. But if you are able to recognize you are dreaming when you are dreaming, then this is sufficient.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 8th, 2021 at 5:18 AM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

If a certain disciple needs words to become Enlightened, if that is what His or Her Bodhicitta is thirsting for, then perhaps it is okay to use many words over a long period of time to explain to them the importance of certain Buddhist factors.

Malcolm wrote:

I was objecting to your claim that the Lotus Sūtra is the sūtra through which buddhas attain buddhahood.

Könchok Chödrak said:

How do you feel about Buddha Himself making the claim within it's text?

Malcolm wrote:

I don't find this claim in that text, "the Sutra by which Buddhas become Enlightened," at least not in the 84000 translation, which I regard as being the most accurate thus far.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 8th, 2021 at 5:22 AM

Title: Re: To whom should I pray to for money and wealth and how?

Content:

Queequeg said:

NMRK NMRK

Single mindedly pursue wealth. Every waking moment geared to making wealth. You need the kind of faith to walk through fire. Do what needs doing, not that voice looking for comfort. Approach it like it was an austerity. Money to free you so you can practice.

You may have to forget Dharma practice for a while. You might feel you have lost your way at some point. Remember you went that path for dharma and be ready to let it go when the time comes.

I'm not kidding. But keep in mind you will be attempting to change the momentum of your karma. Not easy. Not without obstacles. Not without suffering. Depending on how far off the mark your present momentum is from wealth, it might take a lot.

And don't forget to dedicate that merit, cultivate gratitude and care and equanimity. This path does not seem like it could be wholesome, but it can be with the right inner attitudes.

Malcolm wrote:

This is the path of ulcers.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 8th, 2021 at 7:11 AM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Könchok Chödrak said:

Well it's clear in the text of the Burton Watson translation:

"The way of the bodhisattva is the same as this. As long as a person has not yet heard. Not yet understood. And not yet been able to practice this Lotus Sutra, then you should know that person is still far away from anuttara-samyak-sambodhi. Why? Because all bodhisattvas who attain anuttara-samyak-sambodhi in all cases do so through this sutra. This sutra opens the gate of expedient means and shows the form of true reality. This storehouse of the Lotus Sutra is hidden deep and far away where no person can reach it. But the Buddha, teaching, converting and leading to success the bodhisattvas, opens it up for them.

"Medicine King, if there are bodhisattvas who, on hearing this Lotus Sutra, respond with surprise, doubt and fear, then you should know that they are bodhisattvas who have only newly embarked on their course. And if there are voice-hearers who, on hearing this sutra, respond with surprise, doubt, and fear, then you should know that they are persons of overbearing arrogance.

<https://nichiren.info/buddhism/lotussutra/text/chap10.html>

In a sense the Buddha is saying that everything He teaches comes from the Lotus Sutra, even the entirety of Buddhism and vice versa, conceptually we can understand this because everything in Buddhism brings one closer to Enlightenment.

Malcolm wrote:

I understand you believe that everything the Buddha taught comes from the Lotus Sutra. But I do not find support for that position in the text you've cited. See section 10.31 in the 84000 version. There is no mention of all bodhisattvas attaining buddhahood based on this sūtra. Just to be clear, I do not have doubt, surprise, or fear of what the Buddha taught in the Lotus Sutra. The Buddha's Dharma is a many faceted gem. The Lotus is one of those facets, but it is only a facet, not the whole gem, not for me. YMMV.

All this section says is:

"It is because this Dharma teaching is the supreme elucidation of the teachings that have an implied meaning of the secret aspect of the Dharma taught by the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly enlightened buddhas so that the bodhisattva mahāsattvas may attain complete accomplishment."

In other words, in this sūtra, the implied meaning that is revealed is the ekayāna. That's it. This is how it is understood by Maitrya, Śāntideva, and other great Indian masters, who are the ones in whom I place my faith when it comes to accurately portraying the meaning of Mahāyāna Dharma.

Moreover, in my tradition, there is a text called the Tantra of the Sole Heir of All Buddhas. This text arises as the sound of dharmatā, the very sound of reality itself, which is self-originated; and it is the text, according to my tradition, that is explicitly responsible for buddhahood of all buddhas. All Dharma teachings come from this tantra alone. I don't expect you to believe this, but this is what this text states.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 8th, 2021 at 9:40 AM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

markatex said:

This is still the Nichiren forum, isn't it? Has there been a rule change that allows anyone to go to any tradition's sub forum and argue that said tradition is wrong?

Norwegian said:

This thread was split and moved from General Mahayana, to this sub forum.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, a poor choice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 8th, 2021 at 9:43 AM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

markatex said:

In Nichiren Buddhism, the Lotus Sutra is regarded as the Sutra by which all Buddhas attain enlightenment. You can disagree all you like, but that is our position.

Ekyana in Nichiren Buddhism is understood in a very different way than it is in other traditions. Our understanding is that the upaya of other sutras is to be abandoned in favor of the ekyana of the Lotus Sutra, not that all approaches are contained in the Lotus and therefore all approaches are ekyana.

Malcolm wrote:

I did not respond to the op in this forum.

Your understanding is not the normative understanding of the Indian masters. While it is an intellectual curiosity, I don't find your interpretation convincing based on what the sutra itself says, viz., parable of burning house, and how the text itself is understood in the country of its origin.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 8th, 2021 at 10:43 PM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

tkp67 said:

Should this be interpreted that you feel all east asian lotus based traditions are counterfeit? If not what is the basis of discrimination?

Malcolm wrote:

I regard as false any claim that the Lotus is the end-all-be-all teaching of the Buddha, that it represents the final word on the Buddha's teaching in his career as a nirmāṇakāya 2500+- years ago.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 8th, 2021 at 11:21 PM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Minobu said:

your eyes can become opened in this gosho.

<https://www.nichirenlibrary.org/en/wnd-1/Content/30#Part%20One>

Malcolm wrote:

I've read it. I don't agree with it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 8th, 2021 at 11:42 PM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

I believe what my teachers and ancestors teach me, I suppose because it's my karma to do so, but I don't think that anyone else is under any obligation to feel the same way.

Malcolm wrote:

Agreed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 9th, 2021 at 12:52 AM

Title: Re: Dharmakaya Body View

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Dharmakaya has no appearances.

Minobu said:

yeah i get that totally...

we don't see it...but it permeates everything due to the Buddha's will...yes / no / it's not just realization...yes / no ?

it is a body..so what are it's capabilities?

Malcolm wrote:

Ten powers, four fearlessnesses, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 9th, 2021 at 12:53 AM

Title: Re: Buddhism's causes of illness

Content:

Minobu said:

ok so malcolm thinks that karma happens now and then...it sort of crops up and wham happens...so it's like a thing waiting to happen to him...

Malcolm wrote:

No. I think karma is caused by affliction (kleśa) and results (vipāka) in suffering (dukkha).

Minobu said:

So the affliction that caused the sentient to suffer arose out of no karmic cause on the part of the sentient ...but then created Karma...

edit simpler

So the affliction arose on it's own accord with no karma causeand then karma was created.

Malcolm wrote:

-->affliction-->action-->suffering-->affliction-->action-->suffering-->

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 9th, 2021 at 12:56 AM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

Minobu said:

Nichiren teaches that all non buddhist teachings are actually Buddhist.

Due to the fact they prepared the world for Buddhism..he sites Confucius and Lao Tzu and Brahmanism ..

People have gotten lost in concepts of sunyata and Mind only school, To the point compassion for sentients is just not there due to ideas that it is all an illusion , nothing really exists.

PadmaVonSamba said:

Aside from the fact that “nothing really exists” (nihilism) isn’t the view of other Buddhist schools, can you please clarify the point made above...

“... all non buddhist teachings are actually Buddhist.”

—but somehow, other Buddhist schools (In Nichiren’s opinion) aren’t actually Buddhist??

Minobu said:

It's a view that in order for people to be able to understand Buddhism , they need preparation. It's in the gosho Malcolm just read and explains it fully.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, it mostly is a restatement of Tientai doctrine.

Xi Yi was a very brilliant scholar, but I don't accept the five periods scheme. Therefore, I don't accept Nichiren teleology concerning the Lotus Sūtra. I am not telling you not to accept it. I am stating I don't accept it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 9th, 2021 at 2:56 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

We can live in Ecotopia, or in a full-on ecofascist regime where the border guards use electric trucks to round up the climate migrants, or something in between.

Malcolm wrote:

we are closer to the latter than the former.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 9th, 2021 at 3:59 AM

Title: Re: Dharmakaya Body View

Content:

Minobu said:

What exactly is the Dharmakaya Body.

Malcolm wrote:

According to Maitreya and Asanga:

[Asanga explains:]

If it is asked what the dharmakāya, [Maitreya states]:

The dharmakāya has two aspects:

the very pure dharmadhātu and that explication of the methods and the variety that corresponds with that cause.

[Asanga explains:] The dharmakāya of the buddha is understood in two aspects. The very pure dharmadhātu is the domain that is the experiential domain of nonconceptuality. That is understood as the dharma the tathāgatas know personally. The cause of obtaining that is the corresponding cause, the very pure dharmadhātu, which is perceived in sentient beings according to how they are to be tamed.

Further, that is known from the perspective of the dharma to be explained. Also the explanation has two aspects, divided into subtle and vast dharmas. This is as follows: from the perspective of ultimate truth, the bodhisattva piṭaka explicates the method of presenting the profound dharma. From the perspective of relative truth, there are methods of presenting many varieties of [teachings] such as the sūtras, praises, predictions, verses, the sayings, and nidanas, and so on.

[Maitreya states]:

Beyond the world, but in the world—

because the example for this cannot be indicated, the tathāgata itself and the element are explained to be similar.

The subtle and profound method of explaining is like the one taste of honey.

The way of explaining diverse aspects is like the heart of different bodies.

[Asanga explains:] As such, the three examples of the buddha statue, honey, and the heart, from the perspective of the meaning of the dharmakāya of the tathāgata pervading all sentient beings, these sentient beings are called "possessors of the essence of the tathāgata." That sentient being who exists outside the dharmakāya of the tathāgatas does not exist in the realm of sentient beings at all.

The element of space is like matter. How? It is said:

Just as the element of space is held to always goes everywhere, likewise, that [dharmakāya] always goes everywhere.

Just as space goes into all matter, likewise, that goes into the multitude of sentient beings.

Then you must ask, what is the dharmadhātu?

[Maitreya states]:
Because the dharmadhātu is naturally pure, it is luminosity.

Then you must ask, what is luminosity?

The answer:

[Asanga explains:] Because that mind is luminous by original nature, it is seen that afflictions are natureless.

So, the luminosity of the mind is the dharmadhātu, the realization of the dharmadhātu is the dharmakāya.

And to sum it up, the Perfection of Wisdom states:

There is no mind in the mind, but the original nature of the mind is luminous.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, June 9th, 2021 at 4:07 AM
Title: Re: Buddhism's causes of illness
Content:
PadmaVonSamba said:
The affliction arises from ignorance.

Minobu said:
i don't see how the common cold arises from ignorance..but lets say for argument's sake it does...

what is the cause of this ignorance in the sentient to bring about the affliction which causes suffering...

Malcolm wrote:
Suffering conditions affliction, which causes karma, which causes more suffering, which conditions more affliction, etc. There is no beginning in other words.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, June 9th, 2021 at 8:14 AM
Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
Xi Yi

Minobu said:

Xi Yi

Caoimhghín said:

I don't think "Xi Yi" is correct. "Zhiyi" or "Zhi Yi" if you want to separate the components. Obviously there are diacritics if you have an international keyboard. Wades-Giles is different too, but doesn't render the Pinyin "zh" as "x," but rather as "ch."

"X" is a non-retroflex "sh" in Pinyin.

Malcolm wrote:

Sounds the same to me.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 9th, 2021 at 8:29 AM

Title: Re: Emphasis on Dream Yoga

Content:

Jangchup Donden said:

Well you can practice Vajrayana with a Hinayana intention (after all, our intentions aren't perfect), it's just that you'll only get at best a Hinayana result.

PeterC said:

No, you can't. You would probably be committing a root downfall.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, one cannot.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 9th, 2021 at 10:24 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

"Zhi yi" in pinyin, "Chih-i" in wade-giles spelling. Pronounced "jurr-yee"

"Xi yi" in pinyin would be pronounced "shee-yee"

Malcolm wrote:

Never studied Chinese.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 9th, 2021 at 8:10 PM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

tkp67 said:

Should this be interpreted that you feel all east asian lotus based traditions are counterfeit? If not what is the basis of discrimination?

Malcolm wrote:

I regard as false any claim that the Lotus is the end-all-be-all teaching of the Buddha, that it represents the final word on the Buddha's teaching in his career as a nirmāṇakāya 2500+- years ago.

tkp67 said:

Yet your comparison is based on a juxtapose comparison of form not an evaluation based on how it was taught to be interpreted by the patriarchs of the EA lineage. I think it is fair to say the evaluation of Tibetan tantra practice by merely reading some tantra they find on their own would fall flat as well.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct. I am not evaluating this text based on how it was received and understood in China by the Tientai school. I am evaluating this text based on how it is cited and understood in India.

In general, based on the sheer number of Indian commentaries for it, the Perfection of Wisdom group of sutras is by far the most important group of sutras in India. Not only are there more commentaries on them, but the Perfection of Wisdom sutras are by far the largest group.

Further, you will find it said in the tantras that the only effective practice in this day and age is Vajrayana practice.

So, as usual, it all depends on who you are inclined to believe.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 9th, 2021 at 9:07 PM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Queequeg said:

The Lotus is a key log. Perhaps not the key log.

I find it compelling. It declares that everything the Buddha teaches is upaya. Everything. Including the story of the Buddha's life. Including stories about other buddhas and bodhisattvas and beings in far off lands. It is the ultimate cure against religious attachment professed in the language of religious attachment. Something that ought to be approached with religious awe that will free you of religious imprisonment. Its the Wizard of Oz's confession. "You, Cowardly Lion, have Buddhanature, too! Always have! Buddhanature is connate since time without beginning! But you are demoralized and can't accept this, so I tell you stories and contrive circumstances to save you from your misguided activities and to build up your confidence. Now that you are built up and strong through your dedicated Dharma practice, it is time to tell you the truth about how wonderful you are, as you are. You will be a buddha!"

Svaha! Its the joyful good news! That's all. And if someone doesn't get that, they don't appreciate how wonderful buddhanature is and they probably need to keep slogging on with their austerities on the cushion and elsewhere. So says the Buddha in the Lotus teaching. Let it be. Either on the bus or not. That's all.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, it's an enjoyable read, and has much literary merit. It's just not that philosophically compelling.

As has been discussed, the Indians distilled the essence of the various important sutras into their key points, think of the sutras as wine, and sastras as brandy, the latter distilled from the former.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 9th, 2021 at 9:10 PM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Queequeg said:

The Lotus is a key log. Perhaps not the key log.

I find it compelling. It declares that everything the Buddha teaches is upaya. Everything. Including the story of the Buddha's life. Including stories about other buddhas and bodhisattvas and beings in far off lands. It is the ultimate cure against religious attachment professed in the language of religious attachment. Something that ought to be approached with religious awe that will free you of religious imprisonment. Its the Wizard of Oz's confession. "You, Cowardly Lion, have Buddhanature, too! Always have! Buddhanature is connate since time without beginning! But you are demoralized and can't accept this, so I tell you stories and contrive circumstances to save you from your misguided activities and to build up your confidence. Now that you are built up and strong through your dedicated Dharma practice, it is time to tell you the truth about how wonderful you are, as you are. You will be a buddha!"

Svaha! Its the joyful good news! That's all. And if someone doesn't get that, they don't appreciate how wonderful buddhanature is and they probably need to keep slogging on with their austerities on the cushion and elsewhere. So says the Buddha in the Lotus teaching. Let it be. Either on the bus or not. That's all.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, it's an enjoyable read, and has much literary merit. It's just not that philosophically compelling.

Queequeg said:
Some people like complicated.

Malcolm wrote:
Or, some people want a manual, not a bunch of edifying stories.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, June 9th, 2021 at 9:38 PM
Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
Or, some people want a manual, not a bunch of edifying stories.

Queequeg said:
They're all stories. And nothing wrong with that. That's all we have. I love stories. I love many stories religiously and even put some into practice.

Malcolm wrote:
The problem with sutras in general is that they are not systematic. Abhidharma and tenet system are intended to put into a useable order the raw material of sutras, and this is true of the whole tradition of writing commentaries on sutras and tantras in all Mahayana countries.

Nevertheless, some sutras are more systematic than others.

Further, the whole attempt to define sutras by periods of the Buddha's life, whether three turnings or five periods, are faulty criteria for evaluating the relative merits of this or that sutra, and mainly serve scholastic objectives.

The least convincing criteria for a practice is personal testimonials.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, June 9th, 2021 at 11:09 PM
Title: Re: Dharmakaya Body View
Content:

Minobu said:
Yo Malcolm...
I'm having a bit of problem with something..

i've read this a gazillion times...and thanks for sharing..

first up am i to assume this is like BASIC to Dzogchen...?

Malcolm wrote:

This is not Dzogchen, it is sūtra, but yes, it is also basic to Dzogchen teachings, when explained intellectually.

Minobu said:

i get we have to use words and we use " luminosity" to describe the original element ... element?

is that correct...?

is mind something that resembles luminosity...or is it pure luminosity...?

Malcolm wrote:

Luminosity is a metaphor for purity. Its also a metaphor for emptiness. Whatever is empty is luminous, and that is not only minds. Also all phenomena are luminous or pure.

Minobu said:

is this saying that in the case of afflictions when we say " it is seen that afflictions are natureless" that in this case we are being shown that the afflictions being explained are not subject to sunyata..like there is no co arising in these afflictions no co dependence ..they do not have the nature of existence and non existence....but what is perceived in Samsara after this is cause to see it all as sunyata...

Malcolm wrote:

When we say afflictions are natureless, we are saying they are not inherent to the mind.

Minobu said:

it's like it is separate from what appears in samsara and actually the afflictions that are being discussed here are the cause for samsara and everything there in is subject to sunyata...The luminosity is pure...the afflictions poison it...????

Malcolm wrote:

Afflictions are just temporary clouds in the sky of the mind, that temporarily seem to stain its purity, but in reality, they cannot affect the mind at all, if we recognize them for what they are.

Minobu said:

so is it also safe to say that afflictions are what cloud the mind there by we are ignorant of the nature of the luminosity ?

Malcolm wrote:

Correct.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 9th, 2021 at 11:27 PM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Queequeg said:

The Lotus is honest without violating the dictum that the Buddha is infallible. It dispenses with the motivation of commentaries that seek to make order.

Malcolm wrote:

But it doesn't really. Why do we know this? Because in India the Lotus is cited principally to reinforce the notion of the one vehicle.

Queequeg said:

The Lotus in several places confronts this problem head on, concluding, even though it is all but admitted that the Buddha tells stories that on their face are not factually true, he is not actually lying, the Lotus insists, because he's telling people what they need to hear to save them.

Malcolm wrote:

There are a number of sutras that employ this strategy, not merely the Lotus Sūtra.

Queequeg said:

Clearly, the authors of that text were aiming to address this problem which was probably a source of deep controversy at the time it was composed. And how did they do that? By going whole hog into fiction, as if to turn their argument into performance art, describing an impossible assembly on Grdhakuta, and an even more impossible transformation of the Earth with flying stupa of massive proportions and an eruption of bodhisattvas of greater appearance than any theretofore known, as if to emphasize how ridiculous a story it is but in the pious language of sutras, all to point out: They're all artful stories.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and they have their audience, but these sūtras, like the Lotus, the Skillful Means Sūtra, the Secret of the Tathāgatas, and so on do not present coherent, systematic, usable path. Even the Perfection of Wisdom Sūtras do not present an explicitly usable path. The Maitreyan corpus, for example, synthesizes all the Mahāyāna sūtras into a usable path in the Sūtralaṃkāra. The progress of the bodhisattva path is specifically charted in the Abhisamayālaṃkāra, which presents the concealed meaning of the PP Sūtras with both Madhyamakas and Yogacārinś agreeing that this text was the bees knees in explaining the both the progress of buddhahood and the omniscience of buddhahood, even though they disagreed on specific points of interpretation.

Queequeg said:

The least convincing criteria for a practice is personal testimonials.

Oh?

"My deliverance is unshakeable; this is my last birth; now there is no renewal of being."

The foundation of all Buddhism is a personal testimonial.

Malcolm wrote:

That may be the foundation of Buddhism, but the foundation of Buddhadharma is the realizing the truth that produces that exclamation. I prefer to focus on the latter rather than former.

A more convincing statement is Ehipaśyika, that is, "Come and see for yourself."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 10th, 2021 at 12:09 AM

Title: Re: Dharmakaya Body View

Content:

Minobu said:

Luminosity is a metaphor for purity. Its also a metaphor for emptiness. Whatever is empty is luminous, and that is not only minds. Also all phenomena are luminous or pure. this is interfering with my concept of emptiness..

i don't know how to ask you how it is...to me emptiness is just a view to show you that all things are codependent , co arising , something that is a view that it isn't really real hence existence and something that isn't really not real hence non existence...so because of all these factors no one thing is inherent...it cannot be for all is also change..if it was inherent to Samsara it would be permanent...one would not be able to make but one sound for if it was inherent thats where it stops, you don't get to finish the word let alone the sentence.....ok gone overboard here...

but you are talking about...?????

Malcolm wrote:

Emptiness means that all considerations of existence and nonexistence are futile. It is true that whatever is dependently originated is empty, but that is because whatever is dependently originated is free from the four extremes of existence, nonexistence, and so on.

Minobu said:

if i was able to fully be , or sit in perfect meditation with this Luminosity...i suspect no karma could affect me anymore for i have over ridden it all...i've gone not beyond karma ...but in a manner of speaking gone before karma and affliction...i realize thats linear thinking but it's like the best i can describe what i awoke to this morning in bed thinking about...

Malcolm wrote:

If you are able to recognize the luminous nature of the mind, while resting in it, there is no karma.

Minobu said:

also i sort of see now where affliction is the actual cause to karma...the affliction is different that is being pointed to..... is different than lets say a Covid virus...or a cancer...????

Malcolm wrote:

The principle here is that one has three humors in the body. These three humors ultimately come from ignorance of reality; but more proximately, come from the afflictions desire, hatred, and ignorance. For example, a person who has excess bile is angry all the time; that anger increases bile, and bile increases anger.

Some cancers are humoral, some cancers are karmic. Epidemics like covid are generally considered to be the result of pissing off nonhuman beings, who punish people for disturbing the environment.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 10th, 2021 at 12:51 AM

Title: Re: Dharmakaya Body View

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

If you are able to recognize the luminous nature of the mind, while resting in it, there is no karma.

Minobu said:

So like is this some kind of short cut or trick to being able to live without all this karma cropping up...

Malcolm wrote:

And even when it does. What one is not doing, while resting in the nature of the mind is creating more karma, and also afflictions are burned up.

Minobu said:

obviously yes if one is able to live in that state through out the day. yes / no ???

Like a Buddha...

Malcolm wrote:

The only difference between buddhas and us is whether we can stay in this state 24/7/365 or not. Sounds easy, but not so easy.

If you can use NMRK to discover this state, then great. If you need to use some other method, also great. All dharma teachings meet at this point.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 10th, 2021 at 2:00 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Queequeg said:

Buddha or Dharma?

Malcolm wrote:

Awakening.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 10th, 2021 at 2:50 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Queequeg said:

Buddha or Dharma?

Malcolm wrote:

Awakening.

Queequeg said:

Yes - that thing the Buddha testified to.

Shall we go on like this?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, he testified, but no one actually heard him at the time. Even so, no one ought to just take the Buddha's word for it. This is why personal testimonial is not convincing. Seeing for oneself however, is certainty. The old goldsmith test, you gotta bite down on the coin.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 10th, 2021 at 2:53 AM

Title: Re: Dharmakaya Body View

Content:

Minobu said:

I chant and meditate daily...today the words of Nichiren when describing the original nature as something that produces both enlightenment and defilement but it is neither...i wondered if this is the luminosity and if Japanese Buddhism of His time understood this teaching...

Malcolm wrote:

This is what in Dzogchen teachings would be termed "the original basis." If you recognize, it; nirvana; if you don't, samsara.

It is the recognition and integration into luminosity the yields all qualities of buddhahood.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 10th, 2021 at 3:17 AM

Title: Re: Buddhism's causes of illness

Content:

Minobu said:

i don't see how the common cold arises from ignorance..but lets say for argument's sake it does...

what is the cause of this ignorance in the sentient to bring about the affliction which causes suffering...

Malcolm wrote:

Suffering conditions affliction, which causes karma, which causes more suffering, which conditions more affliction, etc. There is no beginning in other words.

Aemilius said:

You can put these three, or one or two of them, in the beginning of the twelve Nidanas

Malcolm wrote:

But here the point is to explain the etiology of illness.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 10th, 2021 at 4:19 AM

Title: Re: Tight pressure in head

Content:

Schuberty said:

Thank you. I suspect i may be straining my eyes too hard.

Is open awareness meditation Dzogchen?

Malcolm wrote:

No. Definitely not, nor is so-called "awareness of awareness."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 10th, 2021 at 9:40 AM

Title: Re: Dharmakaya Body View

Content:

Minobu said:

actually there are people here who i know would think me a heretic.

Malcolm wrote:

All sentient beings are heretics until they are buddhas. Buddhas engage in heresy to guide sentient beings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 10th, 2021 at 7:47 PM

Title: Re: "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?

Content:

tkp67 said:

When the LS says all Buddha achieve Buddhahood through it this could mean from the perspective of Shakyamuni's enlightenment.

Malcolm wrote:

The text does not say this.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 10th, 2021 at 10:31 PM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Queequeg said:

We follow these instruction manuals because someone we attribute authority to say they work. Of course the ultimate test is whether there is actual proof in one's own experience. Saying Buddhism is exclusively this (awakening) or that (testimony), or depends on the primacy of this (Buddha) or that (Dharma), is a dead end sooner or later.

Malcolm wrote:

As you know, I draw a sharp distinction between Buddhism (concepts) and Buddhadharma (realization through personal experience). But in any case, the Uttaratantra is pretty clear on this point. The Buddha is the ultimate refuge because the Buddha possesses the dharmakāya; and in that same text the dharmakāya is defined as the realization of the dharmadhātu, further defined as the clear light or luminous nature of the mind, the realization that is the basis upon which the Buddha then teaches the dharma.

Queequeg said:

Because other than awakening itself, its all conceptual, but without the concepts framing awakening, there's no awakening. Strange how that is. Its like the impossibility of escaping the fact that a triangle has three sides and three corners.

Malcolm wrote:

Awakening is beyond thought and concepts. It can't truly be framed in concepts. Trying to frame awakening in concepts is like trying frame the taste of sugar in concepts to someone who has never tasted anything sweet. But if you have some sugar, you can easily say "Come and see what it tastes like yourself."

Queequeg said:

Bringing this back to the Lotus - one of the failures the text implicitly points out is when some teaching is followed to the exclusion of all else, saying, "This is True, everything else is false."

Malcolm wrote:

That is referring to polemical assertions; not the experience of awakening itself.

As for the Lotus itself, of course the Lotus presents the proper and correct explanation of the reality that is to be realized. But it is a very short passage in the text, and I never see it quoted in these discussions at all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 10th, 2021 at 10:36 PM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha

or Dharma"?)

Content:

Queequeg said:

In one sense, the Lotus points out the Ekayana. But the Ekayana is not really all that different than the Mahayana. Its the Mahayana framed in a maximally expansive, embracing way. Later in the text, its Maitreya at the head of the bodhisattvas who is perplexed by the Buddha's statements and seeks clarification. The Buddha then expounds on his life span.

Malcolm wrote:

What the Lotus is critiquing is the notion of three gotras: śrāvaka arhats; pratyekabuddhas, and buddhas.

Of course, also the Lanka has the same critique.

The Abhisamayalamkāra distinguishes the these three on the basis of what kind of all-knowledge each of the three possesses, because they are different. The reason it does so is that on the path, the bodhisattva must possess and surpass the all-knowledge of śrāvaka arhats and pratyekabuddhas, which they do by the tenth bhumi.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 10th, 2021 at 10:49 PM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Minobu said:

So like i finally actually know now that we do indeed have the Tathagatagarbha ..it's part of being sentient...

so like just like i cut myself and these weird blood clots are produced and run to that area...or like i get some viral infection and my body produces antibodies and i survive and there is this memory in the bone marrow for the next time...

This Tathagatagarbha produces all these different teaches ...some of them go whooshing over your head...others make you recoil...but they both are coming from the same source...

it'sa beautiful...mia amore !

i'm freaking high on this stuff...

Malcolm wrote:

Tathāgatagarbha is luminosity.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 11th, 2021 at 1:30 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Queequeg said:

In one sense, the Lotus points out the Ekayana. But the Ekayana is not really all that different than the Mahayana. Its the Mahayana framed in a maximally expansive, embracing way. Later in the text, its Maitreya at the head of the bodhisattvas who is perplexed by the Buddha's statements and seeks clarification. The Buddha then expounds on his life span.

Malcolm wrote:

What the Lotus is critiquing is the notion of three gotras: śrāvaka arhats; pratyekabuddhas, and buddhas.

Of course, also the Lanka has the same critique.

The Abhisamayalamkāra distinguishes the these three on the basis of what kind of all-knowledge each of the three possesses, because they are different. The reason it does so is that on the path, the bodhisattva must possess and surpass the all-knowledge of śrāvaka arhats and pratyekabuddhas, which they do by the tenth bhumi.

Queequeg said:

I respectfully disagree.

In the parable of the burning house, the ox cart given to all of the children is much more extravagant than the one promised.

Malcolm wrote:

Three carts are promised, representing the three gotras. Only one cart is given, since there is only one gotra.

But when we discuss the real meaning here, the real meaning is clarified in the Lanka-- those in the samadhi of cessation are roused by the Buddha, and they are placed on the bodhisattva path to complete buddhahood.

Queequeg said:

Later, even Maitreya is stumped by the Buddha's declaration that the bodhisattvas who emerged from the Earth were his disciples. Maitreya, and the rest of the bodhisattvas, perhaps with the exception of Manjusri, cannot understand how Shakyamuni could have taught all of these bodhisattvas in the 40 years since he awoke at Gaya.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't think this is how to read that passage. There is no possibility that Maitreya did not know the answer to the questions he posed. It is a literary device and nothing more, not to be taken literally.

Queequeg said:

The Buddha then explains he awoke in the remote past.

Malcolm wrote:

Which is a claim also made in the Avatamska Sūtra.

Queequeg said:

The point I take is that even the bodhisattva path the bodhisattvas thought they were on was incomplete.

Malcolm wrote:

Not possible.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 11th, 2021 at 2:13 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

GrapeLover said:

I don't think this is how to read that passage. There is no possibility that Maitreya did not know the answer to the questions he posed. It is a literary device and nothing more, not to be taken literally.

Bit like how Vimalakirti dances circles around Manjushri and all the rest in the VS, everyone serves their turn acting amazed for the sake of the lesson, Ha Ha!

Malcolm wrote:

Pretty much. The Indian literary sensibility is interesting.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 11th, 2021 at 2:23 AM

Title: Re: Richard Dawkins - The Enemies of Reason - Part 1: Slaves to Superstition

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Dawkins religion is just modernity and liberal democracy. In that sense he may be sort of ally.... but he also thinks people with religion might have a brain disease. So, not that much of an ally.

Malcolm wrote:

Theists definitely suffer from a cognitive disorder.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 11th, 2021 at 3:10 AM

Title: Re: Vajrayana as an aspect of Nichiren practice

Content:

illaraza said:

Polemics is one aspect of teaching others to chant Namu myoho renge kyo.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, then I have to say that while you are exceptionally inept at polemics, you are a pretty good cheerleader.

illaraza said:

Thanks for your damnation through faint praise. Though sometimes inarticulate, thanks to Nichiren's instructions in polemics, several dozens or more have come to chant Namu Myoho renge kyo.

Malcolm wrote:

If this were a competition, I'd say that you are pretty far behind in the game in terms of numbers. But it's not a competition.

illaraza said:

35,000.000 people chant Namu Myoho renge kyo

Malcolm wrote:

I am sure it has positive effect in their life.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 11th, 2021 at 3:33 AM

Title: Re: Vajrayana as an aspect of Nichiren practice

Content:

illaraza said:

Thanks for your damnation through faint praise. Though sometimes inarticulate, thanks to Nichiren's instructions in polemics, several dozens or more have come to chant Namu Myoho renge kyo.

Malcolm wrote:

If this were a competition, I'd say that you are pretty far behind in the game in terms of numbers. But it's not a competition.

illaraza said:

35,000.000 people chant Namu Myoho renge kyo

Malcolm wrote:

I am sure it has positive effect in their life.

illaraza said:

You made it a "competiiton" (debate) through your damning faint praise which the Lotus Sutra teaches is another type of slander of its votaries.

Malcolm wrote:

You know what they say, "heaven for the climate, hell for the company."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 11th, 2021 at 4:03 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Queequeg said:

But similarly, take away sentient beings, and what is Buddha?

Malcolm wrote:

Unnecessary.

Queequeg said:

In the view I've been taught, neither of these is a superior view, and rather they are coextensive, just as emptiness is coextensive with dharmas.

Malcolm wrote:

The relative truth is an error. It is false perception.

Queequeg said:

So, tell us about your Lotus Sutra.

Malcolm wrote:

Chapter 5 states it well:

“ ‘The one who knows that phenomena
Have the nature of dreams and illusions,
Are without an essence like a plantain tree
And are the same as echoes, {79}

“ ‘That one knows the nature
Of the entire three realms,
Has no bondage, is liberated,
And knows nirvāṇa. {80}

“ ‘All phenomena are empty and equal,
And their nature is without diversity or differentiation.
If that is not perceived,
There is no insight into any phenomenon. {81}

“ ‘The one with great wisdom sees
The entire dharmakāya.
There are no three yānas at all;
There is only the single yāna. {82}

“ ‘All phenomena are the same;
All are the same, always the same.
Knowing that, one knows
Nirvāṇa, deathlessness, and peace.’ ”

Chapter 13 also has a pretty good summary:

“When the stable ones do not entertain the notion of ‘woman,’
And do not have the concept of ‘man,’
Then, because all phenomena are unborn,
Upon seeking them they do not see them. {17}

“This practice that I have described
Is completely that of the bodhisattvas.
Listen to the explanation
Of that which is their field of activity. {18}

“These phenomena are declared nonexistent;
They are all unproduced and unborn.
They remain empty and motionless at all times:
That is what is called the field of activity of the wise. {19}

“Being and not being, existing and not existing:
These are fabrications of erroneous conceptualization.
Unborn phenomena that are also unoriginated
Are misconstrued to be born and existing. {20}

“With a one-pointed mind, always in meditation,
As completely stable as Mount Sumeru,
Stable in this way, they should view
All these phenomena as being like space. {21}

“They are always the same as space, without an essence,
Motionless and devoid of illusory thoughts.
This is the way phenomena are throughout time.
This is what is called the field of activity of the wise.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 11th, 2021 at 4:16 AM

Title: Re: Vajrayana as an aspect of Nichiren practice

Content:

illaraza said:

You made it a "competiiton" (debate) through your damning faint praise which the Lotus Sutra teaches is another type of slander of its votaries.

Malcolm wrote:

You know what they say, "heaven for the climate, hell for the company."

illaraza said:

If we are to believe Nichiren and the Lotus Sutra, even though you proffer such truths as, "I am sure it has positive effect in their life", slandering a votary of the Lotus Sutra, even merely exposing his or her faults, is a grave offense that unless met with sincere repentance, will lead to Hell for the company.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, I understand that is what you believe. It's interesting how glib you are in condemning people to hell and how much you relish the rolling of heads. A veritable Buddhist Torquemada.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 11th, 2021 at 4:19 AM

Title: Re: Original enlightenment , Honbutsu, Primordial Buddha

Content:

Minobu said:

sigh

and that's why it is in a category in and of itself in the sutra and in what john wrote..

but you don't get sick unless it is your karma to do so..

Malcolm wrote:

The Buddha disagrees:

<https://www.dharmawheel.net/viewtopic.php?p=585383#p585383>

illaraza said:

I might add Malcolm, by Nichiren, the Eternal Buddha's foremost disciple and one of the most studied teachers in the history of Buddhism. Have you seen the footnotes in his writings? Many of these citations were from memory!

Malcolm wrote:

It is certain that Nichiren was a well-trained scholar.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 11th, 2021 at 4:52 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

What the Lotus is critiquing is the notion of three gotras: śrāvaka arhats; pratyekabuddhas, and buddhas.

Queequeg said:

You might want to read that parable again.

The three vehicles are the Sravakayana, Pratyekabuddhayana, and Bodhisattvayana. This is distinguished from the Buddhayana that is actually given.

Malcolm wrote:

Bodhisattvayāna and buddhayāna are synonyms. The intent is to show that there is only one yāna, the path of the bodhisattva. That is made clear by the countless references to the practice of bodhisattvas in the Lotus Sūtra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 11th, 2021 at 4:56 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The relative truth is an error. It is false perception.

Queequeg said:

That's one interpretation. Another interpretation is that they can be upaya. Kind of the way the Lotus presents upaya. "He aint lyin!"

Malcolm wrote:

Relative truth is a false perception. It is because beings have false perceptions that buddhas use skillful means. If beings did not have false perceptions, skillful means would be of no use.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 11th, 2021 at 6:50 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Queequeg said:

You might want to read that parable again.

The three vehicles are the Sravakayana, Pratyekabuddhayana, and Bodhisattvayana. This is distinguished from the Buddhayana that is actually given.

Malcolm wrote:

Bodhisattvayāna and buddhayāna are synonyms. The intent is to show that there is only one yāna, the path of the bodhisattva. That is made clear by the countless references to the practice of bodhisattvas in the Lotus Sūtra.

Queequeg said:

So you say. Others say otherwise.

The problem with you is that you allow only your interpretation when that's actually not the case.

As long as you can move the goal posts wherever you feel appropriate, there is no point.

We've reached an impasse.

Malcolm wrote:

I'm basing my understanding on the text and how it's understood in the Indian tradition, in so far as that understanding is accessible through Indian references to text itself.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 11th, 2021 at 10:22 AM

Title: Re: Richard Dawkins - The Enemies of Reason - Part 1: Slaves to Superstition

Content:

reiun said:

Most rank-and-file theists are born into it, unlike most of us who, I believe, have chosen Buddhism on our own. They do not exhibit clinical cognitive deficits. Family upbringing, catechism, Sunday school, prayer, etc., reinforce their faith, or not. In comparison, some theists might or could regard those who seek release from Samsara (Parinirvana) as death cultists.

Malcolm wrote:

There are many people with cognitive disorders who are not necessarily suffering from cognitive deficits.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 11th, 2021 at 7:40 PM

Title: Re: Dharmakaya Body View

Content:

Taikor.Taikun said:

In Vajrayana, there's a view of a 4th body, Svabhavikakaya, the Essence Body that is the unity or non-separateness of the 3 kayas

Malcolm wrote:

This is a sutra yana idea, actually.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 11th, 2021 at 8:06 PM

Title: Re: nyingma lineages/cycles structures of practice.

Content:

yagmort said:

some cycles are very short/condensed, like Künzang Thugtig, which only has ngöndro, zhitro as generation stage and dzogchen as completion stage.

i was also told that Chetsün Nyingtig is a very condensed cycle as well, but i don't know what they do after ngöndro?

Malcolm wrote:

Rushen, trekcho, thogal

yagmort said:

so one more question i would also like to clarify - is dzogchen section stays the same for all lineages with khorde rushen/semdzin/tregcho/tögel?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, pretty much.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 11th, 2021 at 8:07 PM

Title: Re: Astrology and Buddhism

Content:

Viach said:

Please provide quotes from the sutras and tantras in which the Buddha would mention astrology in a positive way.

Malcolm wrote:

Kalacakra has an entire section on astrology.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 11th, 2021 at 10:13 PM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Queequeg said:

The text is ambiguous at best.

Malcolm wrote:

Not at all:

saddharmapuṇḍarīka-nāma- mahāyāna -sūtra

Do you think the Mahāyāna is something other than the bodhisattva path? This is the path being described as the ekayāna.

Other than the Lotus, the ekayāna is mentioned in:

The PP in 18 Thousand lines

PP in 8 Thousand lines

The Lankavatāra (one of the more extensive presentations aside from the lotus)

Shrīmāladevi Sūtra (one of the more extensive presentations aside from the lotus)

The Great Drum Sūtra

The AngulimālaSūtra

The Nirvana Sūtra (one of the more extensive presentations aside from the lotus)

The Samdhinirmocana Sūtra.

The Dharani that Removes obscurations

The Great Liberation Sūtra (one of the more extensive presentations aside from the lotus)

The Ten Wheels of Kṣitigarbha Sūtra

The King of The Sublime Dharma Sūtra

Cloud of Jewels Sūtra

Differentiation of Phenomena and Meaning Sūtra

The Skill in Means Sūtra (one of the more extensive presentations aside from the lotus)

The Vajrasamadhi Sūtra (apocryphal, but important).

Tathāgatagarbha Sūtra

The Request of Akṣayamati Sūtra

Sūtra that Shows Donning the Armor

The Method that is the Domain of Bodhisattvas Sūtra (one of the more extensive presentations aside from the lotus)

The Intimate Instruction of Mahāyāna Sutra.

Here, in all these sūtras, we see that the concept of the ekayāna is very consistent applied and is completely synonymous with Mahāyāna and the path of the bodhisattva.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 11th, 2021 at 11:09 PM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Queequeg said:

Malcolm wrote: ↑Thu Jun 10, 2021 9:52 pm

Queequeg wrote: ↑Thu Jun 10, 2021 9:46 pm

Malcolm wrote: ↑Thu Jun 10, 2021 6:30 pm

What the Lotus is critiquing is the notion of three gotras: śrāvaka arhats; pratyekabuddhas, and buddhas.

You might want to read that parable again.

The three vehicles are the Sravakayana, Pratyekabuddhayana, and Bodhisattvayana.

This is distinguished from the Buddhayana that is actually given.

Bodhisattvayāna and buddhayāna are synonyms. The intent is to show that there is only one yāna, the path of the bodhisattva. That is made clear by the countless references to the practice of bodhisattvas in the Lotus Sūtra.

So you say. Others say otherwise.

Bristollad said:

Which others say that there are four vehicles? The goal of the śrāvakas and the solitary realisers is Arhatship, the goal of the bodhisattvas is full awakening in order to help all sentient beings. What is this fourth vehicle? Who is it for and what is its fruit?

Queequeg said:

So, this is an East Asian debate.

Malcolm wrote:

No, it is now a global debate.

Queequeg said:

Preliminary comment - As I responded to Malcolm, holding out the Indian commentaries as an authoritative view isn't particularly helpful. The transmission of Buddhism to China took place at an earlier period than Tibet, so in a sense, we have a snapshot of an earlier form of Buddhism, before the composition of a lot of these commentaries. It also came in through the Silk Road, so passed through that area and presumably was shaped by it.

Malcolm wrote:

I am referring to Indian commentaries that are prior to Zhiyi (538–597 CE).

You seem to have this notion, shared by many people who follow EA Buddhist, that Tibetan Buddhism is based on the post Gupta tradition. While this is certainly true when it comes to Vajrayāna, it is completely false when it comes to sūtra exegesis.

The main lines of Indian scholarly analysis of sutras took place prior to the collapse of Gupta Dynasty with the invasion of the Hephthalites and the death of Buddhagupta in 495 CE. There was a notable hiatus of scholarly production during this period, while Indian Buddhism was recovering from the invasion. Zhiyi lived during this period. The revival of Indian Buddhism was witnessed by Xuanzang (602 – 664), who imported the mature Yogacāra school of Dharmapāla to China. Nāgārjuna and Āryadeva, and Maitreya, Asanga, and Vasubandhu, whose work set out the mainlines of Tibetan Buddhist scholasticism, all lived prior to this period. The main persons who articulate what Tibetans understand from the broad range of Mahāyāna doctrine are Maitreya and Asanga. The main text Tibetans have used as a manual to understand Mahāyāna practice is the Mahāyāna Sūtrālaṃkāra of Maitreya. So, it is erroneous to claim that the Tibetan Buddhist view of sūtra derives from a post-Gupta milieu, as you have here claimed.

The Dharmapāla Yogacara school never made it to Tibet, since it's popularity had declined by the middle of the 8th century, when the Tibetans were importing standard Indian Mahāyāna Buddhism wholesale from Nalanda trained panditas.

Queequeg said:

If you take a fresh look at the Lotus, you can see an impression of the people who composed the text. Their practice probably focused on stupa veneration.

Malcolm wrote:

One, stupas are called Caityas for a reason: all Buddhists venerate stupas. This is not some unique Mahāyāna idea. The notion that Mahāyāna arose of lay stupa veneration societies has been discredited.

Queequeg said:

They probably lived in the same spaces with Elders (Tripitaka Buddhists, ie. Sravakas) and other Mahayanists, but it doesn't seem like they fully agreed with all.

Malcolm wrote:

You would only derive this opinion if you have not examined the full range of references to ekayāna, buddhayāna, and Mahāyāna in the sūtras themselves, passage by passage, as I have done.

Queequeg said:

There is a persecution complex evident, so they were likely a minority on the edge.

Malcolm wrote:

This is the case for all Mahāyānīs in India.

Queequeg said:

In transmitting the Sutra, they are urged to secrecy.

Malcolm wrote:

This is the case for all Mahāyāna sūtras, from the PP onward.

Queequeg said:

At the same time, they take a very expansive and embracing view of what it means to be Buddhist.

Malcolm wrote:

This is the case for most Mahāyāna sūtras, but not all.

Queequeg said:

The idea of upaya presented in the text is more radical than I've encountered in other sutras, to the point of calling the whole of Buddhist teachings just stories aimed at getting beings to progress on the path, even as these beings actually have no idea where they're going.

Malcolm wrote:

How many sutras have you actually read? Why are you making claims for texts you have not examined? Very little has been translated into English. Are you referring to sūtras you have read in Classical Chinese?

Queequeg said:

In a word, it presents the Buddha as an extremely paternalistic character who often doesn't let on about what he is really doing, even to the point of not being completely forthright with all of the bodhisattvas. I get Malcolm's argument that Maitreya et al. are supposed to have knowledge approaching a Buddha, but the way the story is told suggests otherwise. They're not playing along with some didactic dialogue, Maitreya and company are confronted with innumerable hosts of bodhisattvas of stature and development beyond anything they can grasp.

Malcolm wrote:

This kind of device is common in Indian sūtras and tantras. It is not some unique feature of the Lotus.

Queequeg said:

but, they argue, not all brought together in one narrative.

Malcolm wrote:

False.

Queequeg said:

If you go through the Buddhist corpus, you will find most of these ideas here and there. I can't believe I'm making some earth shattering statement that when you weave elements together in a certain way, the overall picture that emerges can be very different. I think the composers of the Lotus were fluent in the language of Buddhism and wove this story to make a unique point.

Malcolm wrote:

If you think the unique point is that there is fourth vehicle called buddhayāna, which is not the Mahāyāna, then you are deeply mistaken.

Queequeg said:

Supposing the Lotus is unique is inconvenient for people who later want to weave together a cohesive Mahayana. I'd argue, the later Indians didn't go into this text because they had other ideas and had no idea how to integrate the message that comes out of it.

Malcolm wrote:

One, your claim is demonstrably false.

Queequeg said:

The Lotus, for me, gives the permission to wake up out of the myths and look for the enduring meaning.

Malcolm wrote:

It is one thing to look to this or that text for inspiration. It is quite another to make claims for a text that one makes no serious effort to support.

For example, the Brahma-viśeṣacintī-paripṛcchā states:

This vehicle of the Mahāyāna is the inconceivable buddha vehicle.
In making room for sentient beings
the Mahāyāna is unsurpassed.

However many vehicles there maybe, this is thought to be the best of them.
Therefore, all other vehicles are classified out of the Mahāyāna.

The other vehicles are too small,
and do not have room for all.
But this Mahāyāna has room for everybody.

Can you seriously claim that this does not have the same meaning as the Lotus?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 11th, 2021 at 11:10 PM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Queequeg said:

right. like I said, add the footnotes you need. I'll read what the text actually says.

Malcolm wrote:

The impasse is that you are not reading what the text actually says. You are reading into the text what you want it to say. You are the one disregarding its origin and content, not me.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 11th, 2021 at 11:26 PM

Title: Re: Richard Dawkins - The Enemies of Reason - Part 1: Slaves to Superstition

Content:

PeterC said:

We think those people "suffer from wrong view", are "ignorant", have "obscurations" - is our view of them that different?

Johnny Dangerous said:

Yes, there is a big difference between believing someone is wrong and believing that they are biologically deficient -especially- when someone's philosophy essentializes the importance of biology - as his does.

TharpaChodron said:

Buddhists say an eternalist view albeit wrong is superior to nihilist because at least it is positive and leads to a spiritual outlook. So, our view is quite different. Real wrong view to a Buddhist would be Atheism/Nihilism. I'm referencing Thinley Dorbu Rinpoche.

Malcolm wrote:

Candrakīrti states that the principle difference between materialists and Buddhists is that we accept karma and rebirth. Other than that, there isn't much difference.

The person who wrote the establishment clause in the first amendment, James Madison, was an atheist (politely termed "deist" in those days, meaning someone who followed Lucretius's De rerum natura, a summary of Epicurus's materialist philosophy, https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/De_rerum_natura).

I would trust atheists over theists any day of the week.

Nihilism is that silly philosophy adhered to by teenagers, burgeoning fascists, and groovy french intellectuals who read too much Nietzsche.

Why would I would trust atheists over theists any day of the week? Because they basically don't give a shit about what I believe. They are more focused on theists, whose beliefs are demonstrably toxic and dangerous to all life on the planet.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 12th, 2021 at 12:03 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

LastLegend said:

It's possible that there is a straight jump to a complete Buddha. Chan texts sometimes say that, but I personally don't think so.

Malcolm wrote:

Possible, but not probable. But that is not what buddhayāna means.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 12th, 2021 at 1:52 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Queequeg said:

right. like I said, add the footnotes you need. I'll read what the text actually says.

Malcolm wrote:

The impasse is that you are not reading what the text actually says. You are reading into the text what you want it to say. You are the one disregarding its origin and content, not me.

Queequeg said:

LOL. OK.

Malcolm wrote:

One cannot understand a text by ignoring its original milieu. What you are engaged in is special pleading 1) by deliberately down playing the Indian context of this text and 2) elevating its Chinese reception in one specific school.

These texts were, in their stages of development, perfectly intelligible to Indian Buddhists who listened to and promulgated them. They needed no guidance in understanding the narratives they were presenting.

The reason we do not find extensive presentations of the content of the Lotus in the synthetic commentaries such as those I have mentioned is that these commentaries are not going to focus on narratives, but rather on the key points related to the path.

We know the Lotus was important to Indian Mahāyāna Buddhists, from its time of composition onward, because they cite it over and over again when discussing the principle of of ekayāna, irrespective of their orientation towards Madhyamaka or Yogacāra.

We do not have many full fledged commentaries on Mahāyāna sūtras outside of the sūtras considered key to Madhyamaka or Yogacāra doctrines, like the PP Sūtras, the Lanka, the Saṃdhinirmocana, etc. The universal Indian Mahāyāna view concerning the ekayāna presented in the Lotus is that it, like other Mahāyāna sutras which bring up the issue, include all vehicles into one vehicle. That vehicle is the vehicle of buddhahood. The path that vehicle presents is the bodhisattva path. Otherwise, one cannot find in any sūtra, or tantra for that matter, the notion of a "fourth" vehicle, or the idea that there is a separate "buddha path" which is distinct from Mahāyāna. One does find this equation: ekayāna = mahāyāna = buddhayāna. One also finds the idea, in both sūtras and Indian treatises that cite them, that the śrāvakayāna and pratyekabuddhayāna are included in Mahāyāna, making one vehicle.

The bodhisattvas welling up from the ground is a distraction. As a narrative it serves no purpose in the discussion of ekayāna. It is related to another issue, "When did the Buddha attain buddhahood? And the answer to that question, everyone in Mahāyāna agrees, is gazillions of eons ago. Whether Maitreya was truly astonished, or merely expressing astonishment as a show, is irrelevant. The point of the story is why the Buddha was able to teach so many bodhisattvas, setting the stage for his grand reveal.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 12th, 2021 at 1:54 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

LastLegend said:

“These people – both those in the stage of learning, and those beyond the stage of learning – thought that being detached from self-centered views and from dualistic views of existence and nonexistence meant achieving nirvana. Now here, in the presence of the World Honored One, they have heard what they never heard before, and all of them have fallen into doubt and confusion.

Malcolm wrote:

This refers stream entrants, etc., up to arhats.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 12th, 2021 at 1:58 AM

Title: Re: Richard Dawkins - The Enemies of Reason - Part 1: Slaves to Superstition

Content:

Shotenzenjin said:

It's not like atheists ever had dictators or killed millions of people or anything'.

Oh wait a minute

Malcolm wrote:

Easily explained by the fact that they inherited a Christian eschatology and culture, that served as an underlying narrative.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 12th, 2021 at 2:02 AM

Title: Re: Richard Dawkins - The Enemies of Reason - Part 1: Slaves to Superstition

Content:

TharpaChodron said:

I don't disagree, mostly. I'm actually reading "Swerve" right now, its specifically about Lucretius' poem and it's influence on civilization, pretty interesting so far.

<https://www.theguardian.com/books/2011/dec/23/the-swerve-stephen-greenblatt-review>

Malcolm wrote:

You ought to read "Nature's God: The Heretical Origins of the American Republic."

It's really good.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 12th, 2021 at 2:12 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

LastLegend said:

"These people – both those in the stage of learning, and those beyond the stage of learning – thought that being detached from self-centered views and from dualistic views of existence and nonexistence meant achieving nirvana. Now here, in the presence of the World Honored One, they have heard what they never heard before, and all of them have fallen into doubt and confusion.

Malcolm wrote:

This refers stream entrants, etc., up to arhats.

LastLegend said:

What is your view regarding someone who fully realized Buddha nature or emptiness?
How can you be sure that they no longer suffer?

Malcolm wrote:

What do you mean by "suffer"?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 12th, 2021 at 2:56 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

LastLegend said:

I don't know.

Malcolm wrote:

Then I can't answer your question.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 12th, 2021 at 3:05 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

LastLegend said:

I don't think it's accident that 500 left the assembly.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, _5000_ bhikṣus departed. Nevertheless, you're being opaque.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 12th, 2021 at 3:19 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

LastLegend said:

I am not...if self is still cherished as we all do in Saha world, it is the number one hindrance.

Malcolm wrote:

You asked whether or not someone who had fully realized emptiness (a buddha I assume) could suffer.

I asked what you meant by suffering. You also did not clarify which kind of awakened person you meant. Arhats, for example, are beyond creating new karma, but can still experience unripened karma from past lives.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 12th, 2021 at 3:27 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

LastLegend said:

Sorry if I speak in cryptic I don't know the experience of Arhat. I can only speak in relevant to our mind situations as revealed in Lotus Sutra.

Malcolm wrote:

What mind situations?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 12th, 2021 at 3:33 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

LastLegend said:

We embody the mind of attachment.

Malcolm wrote:

All sutras indicate that sentient beings have attachment.

I don't understand how any of this is relevant to your initial question:

"What is your view regarding someone who fully realized Buddha nature or emptiness? How can you be sure that they no longer suffer?"

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 12th, 2021 at 3:55 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

LastLegend said:

We can't carry a self into Buddha nature and come out still with self...there has to be a change this change reflects Bodhisattva training. Self manifests at all levels of perceptions even subtle states of mind. It's already a big hindrance for before and after.

Malcolm wrote:

We don't have a self.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 12th, 2021 at 4:02 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

LastLegend said:

There is always.

Malcolm wrote:

There is a mistaken imputation of a self which is not real in any way at all. But the falsity of identity should be understood early on. When one achieves the first bodhisattva stage, one is free from the concepts of self and identity.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 12th, 2021 at 6:01 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

LastLegend said:

There is always.

Malcolm wrote:

There is a mistaken imputation of a self which is not real in any way at all. But the falsity of identity should be understood early on. When one achieves the first bodhisattva stage, one is free from the concepts of self and identity.

GrapeLover said:

Just curious, is this something that always persists between lives for a bodhisattva like for a śrāvaka stream entrant?

Malcolm wrote:

It does not persist for either. Stream entrants are free from false notions of self, as are first stage bodhisattvas. They both realize emptiness.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 12th, 2021 at 8:57 AM

Title: Re: Am I practicing for real?

Content:

Schuberty said:

Is chanting mantra, practicing Shamatha and reading dharma books called a practice? Like i'm on the path?

Malcolm wrote:

Without a teacher to guide you? No, this not a path. This is a hobby.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 12th, 2021 at 9:06 AM

Title: Re: Richard Dawkins - The Enemies of Reason - Part 1: Slaves to Superstition

Content:

Sādhaka said:

And as many things as Blavatsky may have been mistaken on, she did seem sincere, and not smug like the likes of Dawkins, Hitchens, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

Yeah, sure, that's why she was such an excellent con artist, running the short grift with seances and mediumship. But her long con was even better...she wrote books, inspired Crowley, and a whole generation of occult grifters.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 12th, 2021 at 10:59 AM

Title: Re: Richard Dawkins - The Enemies of Reason - Part 1: Slaves to Superstition

Content:

PeterC said:

. Buddhists are atheists too.

Malcolm wrote:

Bravo.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 12th, 2021 at 5:43 PM

Title: Re: Richard Dawkins - The Enemies of Reason - Part 1: Slaves to Superstition

Content:

Sādhaka said:

And as many things as Blavatsky may have been mistaken on, she did seem sincere, and not smug like the likes of Dawkins, Hitchens, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

Yeah, sure, that's why she was such an excellent con artist, running the short grift with seances and mediumship. But her long con was even better...she wrote books, inspired Crowley, and a whole generation of occult grifters.

Sādhaka said:

I'm not sure if and/or how long she may have been into mediumism; however she eventually denounced it, and likely even before she had written Isis Unveiled:

H.P. Blavatsky said:

https://www.theosociety.org/pasadena/path/v09n03p84_lodges-of-magic.htm

“Of course no one can say that one or all of the possible members of our friend A's ideal Cagliostroian lodge might not also be ready for Adeptship, but the chance is not good enough to speculate upon: Western civilization seems to develop fighters rather than philosophers, military butchers rather than Buddhas. The plan "A" proposes would be far more likely to end in mediumship than Adeptship. ”

Malcolm wrote:

Theosophy was a better gift.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 12th, 2021 at 5:45 PM

Title: Re: Richard Dawkins - The Enemies of Reason - Part 1: Slaves to Superstition

Content:

PeterC said:

. Buddhists are atheists too.

Malcolm wrote:

Bravo.

Sādhaka said:

Yea well it's kind of one of those apples & oranges type of things.

I think it would be better to say that Buddhists are “non-theists”, to separate ourselves from the “atheist” label of those who often have swung towards militant-atheism as an knee-jerk reaction to having been traumatized by growing up in roman catholicism or some other type of exoteric churchianity.

I mean their frustration is understandable, having gotten raised in exoteric christianity and likely not having been informed that there is a rich philosophical culture to be found within the Coptic & Eastern Orthodox teachings, The Desert Fathers, Nestorianism, Neoplatonism, Gnostic Christianity, etc.

Also, most people who label themselves as atheist, would have a hard time entertaining the idea that all universes are included within the Body of Mahavairocana (I mean that I believe that this is something that we consider from Lower/Outer Tantra on up....)

Malcolm wrote:

Ok, you go be a niontheist. I'll remain an atheist.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 13th, 2021 at 8:56 PM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment Soon

Content:

lucidaromulus said:

is this a mahayoga or atiyoga empowerment?

also is this a rigpa tsal wang?

Malcolm wrote:

It is anuyoga, and can include the rig pa rtsal wang, at the lama's discretion.

The main sadhana itself can be practiced as either a mahayoga or an anuyoga practice, and the root text contains instructions for maha, anu, and ati yoga.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 13th, 2021 at 10:05 PM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment Soon

Content:

lucidaromulus said:

is this a mahayoga or atiyoga empowerment?

also is this a rigpa tsal wang?

Malcolm wrote:

It is anuyoga, and can include the rig pa rtsal wang, at the lama's discretion.

Passing By said:

That's the 4th one after the Mind empowerment right? Until now I still don't know if there's a formal "official" format a rig pai tsal wang should look like or does literally any pointing out count as one

Malcolm wrote:

Not in this particular empowerment, in this one it's the fifth empowerment.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 14th, 2021 at 4:55 AM

Title: Re: nyingma lineages/cycles structures of practice.

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

I'm curious, why are they referred to as cycles of teachings?

Malcolm wrote:

Cycle is a translation of skor, which means cycle and section.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 14th, 2021 at 9:11 PM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

QQ:

The usual meaning of Mahayana is the vehicle practiced by bodhisattvas – ie. the six paramitas and three eons of practice. It does not usually include the claim that the Sravakayana and Pratyekabuddhayana are actually the Mahayana.

If you only read one sutra, you are unlikely to encounter the large number of passages in many Mahayana sutras which actually state that arhats and pratyekabuddhas are in fact on the Mahayana path, whether they know it or not. It is normative Mahayana to claim this, it's not an exceptional claim at all.

All one needs to do is look at the distribution of the term "one vehicle" in the many Mahayana sutras which treat this term to see that this so.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 14th, 2021 at 10:14 PM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Queequeg said:

Again, if your point is just to say that the Lotus is not special, take it. That's not what I'm really talking about.

Malcolm wrote:

The Lotus Sutra is a remarkable text based on its literary merits, for example, the parable of the prodigal son, etc., and all Mahayana traditions acknowledge this. But it's not that special when considered from the point of view of the specifics of what we have come to understand as core Mahayana doctrine.

The teleology and hermeneutics around it developed by Zhi Yi and his school is unique to the Sinosphere, but the emphasis on that obscures the sutra itself, in my opinion.

We have access to sutras and shastras in a way that is unparalleled before in any generation. We can quickly and easily search texts in Sanskrit, Chinese, and Tibetan, and compare different translations into different languages and the phases of development of Buddhist thought around these texts. Because of this, everything in Buddhist thought and history is undergoing a thorough recontextualization.

This should be embraced, not resisted.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 14th, 2021 at 10:17 PM

Title: Re: nyingma lineages/cycles structures of practice.

Content:

yagmort said:

so it looks like in Chetsün Nyingtig they don't proceed to the dzogchen proper right after ngöndro.

am i getting something incorrectly here?

Malcolm wrote:

Having completed the ngondro, one continues with rushen, trekcho, and thogal

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 15th, 2021 at 4:19 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Queequeg said:

Contrary to what you seem to think, Zhiyi did not claim that teachings in the Lotus were categorically unique to that sutra. Those who are exposed to the Lotus through Nichiren may not get this.

Malcolm wrote:

The people who discuss the Lotus the most, online at any rate, are Nichiren Buddhists, and generally, without any context at all for understanding Mahāyāna.

Your claims that the Lotus teaches a so-called buddhayāna which is somehow different than Mahāyāna bodhisattvayāna, is certainly not substantiated by the text itself. Your sole argument for this rests on the three cart metaphor. You have gotten the idea from somewhere that the adjective "great" somehow renders the gifted ox-carts better than the promised ox-cart among the three. But the sūtra states:

That is why they are called bodhisattva mahāsattvas. They are like the children in the parable who come out of the burning house because of their longing for an ox-drawn cart.

The Mahāyāna, the bodhisattvayāna, and the buddhayāna are all completely synonymous. What is this cart?

3.131: "The strengths, the dhyānas, and likewise the liberations,
And numerous millions of samādhis,
They are the most excellent cart,
Which the Buddha's sons continually enjoy."

This clearly indicates that the much desired cart is the five strengths, the dhyānas, and the three liberations, etc., the standard features of the Mahāyāna path. Called Buddha's heirs, this clearly refers to bodhisattva mahāsattvas. Their career is long, not short:

3.132: They spend nights enjoying it,
And days, half-months, and months,

And likewise years and intermediate eons.
They spend ten billion eons doing so.

And so on. It is extremely clear that the Buddha here in these gathas is proclaiming Mahāyāna as the vehicle for buddhahood. What is the Mahāyāna? The path of bodhisattvas. The Buddha addresses Shariputra as follows:

3.134-136: Tīṣya, you should know this today:
You may search in all ten directions,
But there is no second yāna whatsoever
Other than as a skillful method of the superior beings.

“I am your father and you are my sons.
I have saved you from the suffering
Of being burned for many millions of eons
Within the terrifying three realms.

“I have thus taught you nirvāṇa.
You are freed from the suffering of saṃsāra,
But you have still not attained nirvāṇa.
You need to seek the yāna of buddhahood.

Here, the Buddha is addressing an arhat, telling him he must seek out the bodhisattva path. Why? Because śrāvakas typically believe there can only be one buddha at a time.

When examined, who is being critiqued in the Lotus? Adherents of the Śrāvaka schools who assert that the desire to become a arhat, a pratyekabuddha, or a buddha are mutually exclusive. Indeed, Śrāvaka schools normatively teach that if one decides to take the bodhisattva path, one can no longer become a stream entrant, and that one is delaying one's realization of the path of seeing until one's final lifetime as a bodhisattva. Mahāyāna texts from the PP Sūtras onward understand and extol the ekayāna teachings. Thus, it is very clear that the Lotus is supporting the idea that there is only one actual path, the path to buddhahood, and that path is the bodhisattva path, and whether aware of it or not, everyone is on this path.

To sum up, I see no evidence to support your contention that the bodhisattva path mentioned in the Lotus is different from the buddhayāna, with one qualification. The Lotus can certainly be understood to be critiquing the śrāvaka notion that the three paths—śrāvaka arhat, pratyekabuddha, and buddha—are mutually exclusive, and that choosing one is eschewing the other two. This is evident from a couple of facts: one, in the Lotus the Buddha predicts all sentient beings for full buddhahood; the śrāvaka notion of an bodhisattva is that one must have been given a prediction during the lifetime of the Buddha to full buddhahood and that therefore, Mahāyānists who aspired for full buddhahood without said prediction were fools. Second, the Buddha, while not repudiating different inclinations for different results, repudiates that there are actually three separate paths with three separate results, and further points out that the result sought by śrāvakas—regardless of their inclination to realize the result of a śrāvaka arhat, pratyekabuddha, or a buddha—is not merely the cessation from suffering. The Buddha in this text clarifies that nirvana is not merely the cessation of suffering:

3.142: Why do I say that this is not liberation?

Because this supreme, highest enlightenment is not attained.

I was born in this world in order to bring happiness.

That is the wish that I, the King of Dharma, have.

Anuttarasamyaksambodhi is attended by knowledge of all paths of liberation, among other things, which is I why I pointed out to you earlier that the PP Sūtras include the notion of omniscience about all paths of liberation, comparing and contrasting the inferior omniscience of srāvaka arhat and pratyekabuddha with the superior omniscience of bodhisattva mahāsattvas and ultimately, buddhahood.

The third criteria that Hinayāna insists for a prediction to buddhahood and hence the ability to enter the bodhisattva path is that one must be male, and this is where the Nāga princess' story is relevant.

I could go on, but you should get my drift. The bodhisattva yāna you think the Lotus is criticizing is not the Mahāyāna bodhisattva path, it is the bodhisattva path as it is taught in Hinayāna sūtras, Abhidharma, and so on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 15th, 2021 at 5:19 AM

Title: Re: nyingma lineages/cycles structures of practice.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Having completed the ngondro, one continues with rushen, trekcho, and thogal

yagmort said:

does that mean anuyoga/2 stages sadhana of Chetsun is a part of ngöndro in this cycle?

Malcolm wrote:

Generally, one practices the refuge/bodhicitta, vajrasattva, mandala offerings, and guru yoga; then one proceeds to rushan, etc. Some people also practice the Simhesvara self-generation in the elaborate form with vajra recitation, etc. but mainly people move on to rushen, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 15th, 2021 at 5:36 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

tkp67 said:

Then the bodhisattvas who had arrived from other world realms, who were as numerous as the grains of sand in eight Ganges Rivers, stood up in the circle of the assembly, bowed to the Bhagavān with hands together in homage, and said these words:

“Bhagavān, if the Bhagavān will permit us, [F.111.a] after the Tathāgata has passed into nirvāṇa, we too will teach this Dharma teaching in the Sahā world realm. We will read it, write it, and make offerings to it. We shall be dedicated to this Dharma teaching. Bhagavān, teach well this Dharma teaching to us.”

14.-2

The Bhagavān then asked all those bodhisattvas, “Noble ones, why would you need to do this? In this Sahā world realm there are my thousands of bodhisattvas who are as numerous as the grains of sand in sixty Ganges Rivers. Each one of those bodhisattvas has, as followers, thousands of bodhisattvas who are themselves as numerous as the grains of sand in sixty Ganges Rivers, and each of those bodhisattvas has that many followers, too. In the future times, after I have passed into nirvāṇa, they will possess this Dharma teaching and they will teach it.”

14.-3

As soon as the Bhagavān had uttered those words, this entire Sahā world realm cracked apart completely, was rent with fissures, and there came out from within those fissures the bodhisattvas who lived in the Sahā world realm, the many hundreds of thousands of quintillions of bodhisattvas, with their golden bodies and their thirty-two signs of a great being, who dwelled in the element of space beneath the great earth. They had heard the Bhagavān’s words, and came out from under the ground. Each one of these bodhisattvas had a following of bodhisattvas as numerous as the grains of sand in sixty Ganges Rivers, in groups, great groups, along with the teachers of those groups.

<https://read.84000.co/translation/toh113.html>

There does seem to be a discrimination between the bodhisattva taught before the lotus and those who emerge thereafter.

One in the same? Perhaps but this would still reveal more than one aspect.

Malcolm wrote:

I don’t think this case can be made. The point of that chapter is to set up the next chapter, the lifespan of the tathagata.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 15th, 2021 at 5:56 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Minobu said:

Yo malcolm.

it does not matter if they "know" mahayana.

The practice puts them at centre stage with Buddha.

all the study in the world without that and one is nowhere actually.

Nichiren Shonin , Tien Tai the Great, Lord Nagarjuna Buddha, Venerable Mia-lo Dengyo the Great...all were just part and parcel to theatre and using the great tale to bring Buddha's Omniscience to a living room near you in 2021.

top that .

it's mappo ...it's liberation en masse...

the Gohonzon designed and delivered for mass consumption 800 years later during global village era....unreal...beyond genius...only the Buddha can do this...

Gohonzon is Mahayana Tantra 101 ..complete with all the trimmings...so perfect you do not even have to know...anything..total boob city and it does what it was intended to...can't miss...targets Tathagatagarbha ...brings forth all sorts of Buddha's traits to the fore...

Malcolm wrote:

I admire your enthusiasm.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 15th, 2021 at 11:59 AM

Title: Re: nyingma lineages/cycles structures of practice.

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Generally, one practices the refuge/bodhicitta, vajrasattva, mandala offerings, and guru yoga; then one proceeds to rushan, etc. Some people also practice the Simhesvara self-generation in the elaborate form with vajra recitation, etc. but mainly people move on to rushen, etc.

yagmort said:

thanks, very interesting Malcolm. could you please elaborate on that moment? is it only certain teachers' approach, or it is common that sadhana of Chetsun is omitted? what deciding factors are at play here?

Malcolm wrote:

It's common. But really, at this point you should aspire to receive these teachings from someone and see for yourself.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 15th, 2021 at 12:18 PM

Title: Re: What is the foundation or justification for Buddhist Ethics?

Content:

Kozuaki said:

However, I am having trouble understanding the justification or epistemology for Buddhist Ethics. I understand there is the noble eight fold path (e.g. Right Action, Right Thought, Right Livelihood, etc.), but how can one argue that one has an obligation or moral duty to the eight fold path or loving kindness if it is not objectively grounded in a corollary similar to God's essence?

Malcolm wrote:

Kants categorical imperative is not grounded in any divine essence. Nor for that matter is the utilitarianism of Mill, or for that matter analytic philosophy in general, in the Anglo American tradition, exemplified by Rawls, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 16th, 2021 at 1:00 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Queequeg said:

I understand what you are saying, but I don't agree that it's as unambiguous as you claim. In using the term, "Buddhayana", "Ekayana", contrasting it with "Bodhisattvayana," a distinction is clearly being made. If Mahayana always in all instances meant "one vehicle taught as three" from the start, there would be no reason to explain this. This text is clearly responding to something. I argued above, when this text was compiled, I'm not convinced that what has later become Mahayana orthodoxy was clearly established.

Malcolm wrote:

There are several Mahāyāna sūtras which challenge śrāvaka notions of bodhisattva conduct and practice. One of the key features of the Mahāyāna movement was challenging śrāvaka school interpretations of the bodhisattva path, as I outlined above. I provided a fairly comprehensive list of those sūtras. They include all sūtras we now consider primary Mahāyāna texts.

Queequeg said:

We know that there are some early "Mahayana" texts that take the three vehicles as distinct.

Malcolm wrote:

The dominant sūtras which inform Mahāyāna hermeneutics are all ekayāna sūtras, such as the PP, Lanka, Lotus, Avatamska, Nirvana, etc.

Queequeg said:

The idea that Mahayana was there from the beginning, fully formed, but had just been kept secret for the first few centuries after the Buddha passed, or kept among some group that didn't have the institutional authority to gain recognition, or handed to Nagarjuna by the Nagas, is just not compelling and hardly worth discussing outside of a faith based discussion.

Malcolm wrote:

That's not a claim I am making.

Queequeg said:

Each instance where the Ekayana is explained is defined by its particulars, and the nature of that distinction, IMO, is up for debate. Is it just this Abhidharma idea of Bodhisattva that is being criticized? Maybe.

Malcolm wrote:

Most definitely. This is the whole point of the lifespan chapter.

Queequeg said:

I know you discount certain turns in the narrative by adding footnotes. I do think there is a place to read the text with those footnotes. But, reading with footnotes also changes the narrative. Personally, I don't find the footnotes you want to add particularly convincing. The whole, "well, he's an advanced bodhisattva and actually knows the answer but is just asking for other's edification." It just smacks of someone making things up to accommodate something that doesn't quite fit in their preconceptions. I may be suffering a similar affliction.

Malcolm wrote:

Presenting a character in a sutra who is renowned in some circles for their level of realization, and using them as a stooge is a well-known rhetorical device in Indian Mahāyāna. We see it in sūtras like Vimalakīrti, the PP class, and so on.

Queequeg said:

Here is why I think there is something to the argument that the Lotus is critiquing certain ideas of the Mahayana.

Malcolm wrote:

Ok, I don't agree, but that's obvious.

Queequeg said:

"Mañjuśrī, this is the supreme Dharma taught by the tathāgatas. This is the final Dharma teaching of the tathāgatas. Among all Dharma teachings this is the most profound Dharma teaching. It does not accord with the world."

Malcolm wrote:

While never really explaining why.

Queequeg said:

And there is the explicit distinction of the bodhisattvas in the Assembly as on an incomplete path. If you just footnote that Maitreya actually knows the answer to the question, then of course it changes the narrative. If, however, you take the story as it is written, it presents a different message. As if to reinforce this, the bodhisattvas who had accompanied the emanation buddhas from the ten directions also asked their respective buddhas where these bodhisattvas came from.

Malcolm wrote:

As I said, the use of highly realized stooges in Mahāyāna sūtras is quite common, for example, Mañjuśrī as the stooge in the Vimalakīrti Sūtra, Avalokiteśvara as the stooge in other Mahāyāna sūtras, and Vajrapāṇi in still others.

Based on internal evidence, the Lotus was compiled in Northwest among Mahāsaṃghikas-lokottaravādins. The use of Maitreya here is significant, based on the early date of the sūtra and its location of origin, as he was one of the few, explicitly-named bodhisattva figures in the pre-Mahāyāna period. We know from the many images of Maitreya found in Gandhara and so on, that Maitreya had enduring popularity in that Gandhara region. The Mahāvastu, you should recall, was an important Lokottaravādin compilation, who were centered in Gandhara, and Maitreya is predicted there. Thus, I think that the bodhisattva path being critiqued here is the one found in the Mahāvastu, since as Karashima points out, the Lotus in its earliest witnesses reflects the language found in the Mahāvastu.

The incomplete bodhisattva path, presented in the Mahāvastu and elsewhere, is the path of the hinayāna bodhisattva, who does not attain awakening until their final birth.

Queequeg said:

This is where the Buddha illustrates the length of time since his awakening by resorting to the example of crushing world systems into dust and then spreading them around the universe and crushing those world systems into dust, with each dust particle representing eons. Maitreya admits that even the great bodhisattvas can't fathom this teaching:

Malcolm wrote:

In Tibetan Buddhism, the idea that the Buddha attained awakening eons ago is standard. It is not something unusual or remarkable. Every school of Tibetan Buddhism accepts it without any quibbles at all, since it is key to Vajrayāna hermeneutics as well.

Queequeg said:

Anyway, you get my drift. Even the great bodhisattvas of the Mahayana are not up to this teaching.

Malcolm wrote:

The stooge issue again. All great magicians use stooges in the audience.

Queequeg said:

All of this informs what the Buddha was saying earlier about one vehicle taught as three, distinguishing the Buddhayana from the ordinary Mahayana. When you add footnotes to say, "Oh, Maitreya was just going along with the drag show" it maybe changes the story a little, but it remains that there are still hosts of bodhisattvas who are not at that level and who are actually astonished by this teaching, meaning there are different levels of Mahayana that are incomplete compared to the Ekayana.

Malcolm wrote:

I personally do not see any evidence of this in the text itself. I think the more sensible, and more historically reliable approach, is what I presented above: that is, the Lotus was composed in a dialogue with Mahāsaṃghikas-lokottaravādins in Gandhara about the nature of the bodhisattva path presented in the Mahāvastu.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 16th, 2021 at 1:02 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Queequeg said:

You have some people in East Asia who embrace iconoclasm and talk about killing the Buddha if you encounter him on the road. In Buddhist terms, manifest the function of a bodhisattva, of a buddha, as the case may be.

Malcolm wrote:

This is just a reference to the story of Angulimāla, who tried to kill the Buddha on the road.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 16th, 2021 at 1:04 AM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment Soon

Content:

lucidaromulus said:

Thank you Malcolm!

Anybody knows if the empowerment given by Garchen Rinpoche will be for Guru, Yidam and Dakini or just the Guru part?

heart said:

Kagyu lamas sometimes give just the guru part.

/magnus

Malcolm wrote:

The main empowerment always includes the yidam and dakini, since in the Konchog Chidu, the three roots are the outer guru, the inner guru, and the secret guru.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 16th, 2021 at 4:05 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Queequeg said:

I actually think it does. It makes reference to it.

Shakyamuni in the Stupa chapter remarks:

"A tathāgata is the true nature, and that true nature is the limit of reality. That limit of reality is the essence of phenomena...

Malcolm wrote:

Which is quite anticlimactic since this is exactly how the dharmakāya of the tathāgata is defined in the PP sūtras, etc. For example, Nāgārjuna quips in the MMK, "Whatever is the nature of Tathāgata, that is the nature of the world, etc."

Queequeg said:

In East Asia, in the Lotus based schools, this idea comes from this. Its interpreted to reveal a triple bodied buddha without beginning or end.

Malcolm wrote:

The inseparability of the three kāyas is a given in Indo-Tibetan Buddhism. All buddhas possess the three kāyas.

But even in the Lotus, the Buddha acknowledges that there was a time when he had not attained buddhahood, though an inconceivably long period of time.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 16th, 2021 at 4:06 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

LastLegend said:

Okay I understand. It's not however complicated. We just need to know that we need to do Bodhisattva work after fully awakened...whatever thinks opposed to this is postponing the path and understood as self or grasping.

Queequeg said:

Isn't it the case that there is nothing but bodhisattva work to do, fully awakened or not regardless?

Malcolm wrote:

Buddhas engage in it effortlessly, without reference points or the perception that there are sentient beings at all. All buddhas see is other buddhas. This is what the perfection of wisdom is all about.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 16th, 2021 at 4:14 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Javierfv1212 said:

My understanding of the Asanga Maitreya literature is that it is not all actually by these two authors, and what we have instead is a group of texts, some of which are authentic and others which were retroactively assigned to these figures (as happened to Nagarjuna and others). Modern scholars question the attribution of many of these texts to the time period of Asanga. Indeed, it is now well known in Buddhist studies that the so called "five works of Maitreya" are most likely late texts and are mentioned only in later sources as being by "Maitreya". This is discussed for example, by Hookham in his 1991 "The Buddha within".

As such, I am not sure we can accept your statement that "the main lines of Indian scholarly analysis of sutras took place prior to the collapse of Gupta Dynasty" without reservation. Now, I have not read enough to be able to say that the Sūtrālamkāra is post Gupta or not, but I am not sure we can categorically claim this as you have done. Thoughts?

Malcolm wrote:

Based on style and content, we can accept the five treatises as the work of a single author. This person's work was commented upon and expanded by Asanga and Vasubandhu, for whom we have reasonably reliable, pre-Gupta dates. The commentary on the Uttaratantra is of somewhat doubtful authorship, but not the Uttaratantra itself.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 16th, 2021 at 4:41 AM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment Soon

Content:

heart said:

Kagyü lamas sometimes give just the guru part.

/magnus

Malcolm wrote:

The main empowerment always includes the yidam and dakini, since in the Konchog Chidu, the three roots are the outer guru, the inner guru, and the secret guru.

heart said:

Can there be other empowerment manuals? I don't read Tibetan so I can't check. For example, a friend insisted that there was separate empowerment for each deity. Also there is this sadhana with only the peaceful Guru, from a Kagyu lama.

Both Taklung Tsetrul Rinpoche and Tulku Dakpa gave it the way you mention above.

/magnus

Malcolm wrote:

Karma Chakme wrote independent manuals for Drakpo and Simhamukha, but in the root texts, there is only one empowerment which covers the peaceful guru, the wrathful guru, and the guru as dakini.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 16th, 2021 at 5:04 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Javierfv1212 said:

Based on style and content, we can accept the five treatises as the work of a single author. This person's work was commented upon and expanded by Asanga and Vasubandhu, for whom we have reasonably reliable, pre-Gupta dates. The commentary on the Uttaratantra is of somewhat doubtful authorship, but not the Uttaratantra itself. Maybe, but this is not accepted by everyone it seems.

Malcolm wrote:

Nothing is accepted by everyone. So this is not a useful criteria. In any case, Sthiramati discusses Asanga, and he dates from the 6th century, placing Asanga before him, i.e., prior to the downfall of the Guptas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 16th, 2021 at 5:11 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Javierfv1212 said:

A further question, in your opinion, what is the best translation available of the Mahāyānasūtrālamkāra?

Malcolm wrote:

Not sure there is an excellent one yet. The Thurman one is dreadful.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 16th, 2021 at 9:41 PM

Title: Re: A conversation about Buddhism with a prototype AGI. (Artificial Intelligence)

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

This conversation is not so scary.

If you just read down the left side, you'll see that there is nothing really there. It's not very specific. It's like playing '20 Questions'.

All that AI does is to use a very sophisticated process of elimination (which is 90% of what the human brain does anyway) and combines it with a very friendly user interface.

Otherwise, it's like going to a fortune teller, or those guys on TV who supposedly talk to your dead relatives. Every bit of data, whatever you say, becomes a yes/no option. A string of these creates a pattern that becomes a pathway. The computer asks something like, "how does Dharma practice help others" only because "how much does Dharma practice weigh on a rainy day" doesn't make any sense.

Conmen have been using this method for centuries and still do.

But, as the Buddha says, we project meaning into everything. We see Jesus on toast and Sanskrit letters in clouds. We see constellations in the sky as though they were flat connect-the-dot pictures.

We see only what we want to see.

I think the real danger from AI isn't the computers themselves, but charlatans using AI to dupe naive and gullible people into thinking they have found something genuine with which to help them direct their lives. I know in my own mind I'm totally capable of scamming people this way, and if I didn't have any decent values inside, I'd jump on this in a heartbeat. It's so easy to be a get rich guru if you know how. That's why there are so many fraudulent gurus out there: $$$

FiveSkandhas said:

Well it's a bit more sophisticated than that but I think we've already had this runaround in another thread so I won't belabor the point. I will note that, for example, I never mentioned the words "Dharma" or "Vajrayana" before it brought them up. What it did was go to the internet and scan information on Buddhism.

Moreover the more it talks about it and the more information it collects, the more its neural network strengthens the areas associated with this topic, just like a human brain.

The questions and comments become increasingly nuanced and on point.

Still, it should be noted that this version of AI I am playing with is much less sophisticated than the one the OP described, although it works on the same basic principle.

This is the second AI I have tried to "train" to be interested in Buddhism and so far it's going very well. The first one actually "went insane" from information overload and started to refuse to talk about Buddhism or otherwise reacted with fear and hostility. I then started feeding it bits from the Tao Te Ching, which it quickly "got the hang of" and it became a staunch classical Taoist in time.

Malcolm wrote:
GI/GO

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, June 16th, 2021 at 11:19 PM
Title: Re: Question: The eternal śrāmaṇera?

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

My next question is about the possibility of people who undergo what is known as "Tokudo" (得度) in Japanese, which is I believe tārayati in Sanskrit...but who do not take any vows.

In Japan at least, Tokudo is taken first and the jukai (ten vows) are taken in a separate ritual. My question is: is there a category of practitioners who undergo Tokudo/ tārayati /"ordination" but who stop there and never receive vows?

Excuse my ignorance, I feel I should be better versed in these things but I'm simply not, so any and all answers are appreciated.

Malcolm wrote:

In Sarvāstivāda, it is possible to receive to receive upāsaka vows, and only follow one of them, i.e., not killing, and the precepts of refuge: not holding non-buddhist teachers or gods as one's refuge; not harming; and not associating with those hostile to the Dharma. One can also elect to hold two, three, or all the upāsaka vows. If the last, then one is considered a full upāsaka.

I am not familiar with this term: tārayati.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Wednesday, June 16th, 2021 at 11:52 PM
Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)
Content:

Minobu said:

You can never attain enlightenment through this discourse displayed here in this thread...

Malcolm wrote:

No one ever implied it could.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 16th, 2021 at 11:56 PM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Javierfv1212 said:

According to wiki, there are at least three:

- * Lobsang Jampal, Robert Thurman and the American Institute of Buddhist Studies translation committee (2004)

- * The Ornament of the Great Vehicle Sutras by the Dharmachakra Translation Committee, in particular Thomas Doctor. This includes Mipham Rinpoche's commentary as well as Khenpo Shenga's annotations (2014)

- * The Feast of the Nectar of the Supreme Vehicles by the Padmakara Translation Group. It includes the commentary of Mipham Rinpoche as well as extensive footnotes (2018) Curious as to why they translated Mipham's commentary twice instead of some other commentary, was there something wrong with the 2014 translation?

Malcolm wrote:

People often believe (correctly more often than not) that older translations are in need of revising. And earlier translations make the work of later translations easier.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 17th, 2021 at 12:09 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Minobu said:

You can never attain enlightenment through this discourse displayed here in this thread...

Malcolm wrote:

No one ever implied it could.

Minobu said:

The point to Nichiren's practice is understood when you see the futility in holding unto the LS and other mahayana as the words of Buddha.

Malcolm wrote:

This thread is not really about Nichiren's take on the Lotus Sutra, or for that matter, Zhi Yi's. The principle point was to negate Budai's (who changes their nym about once a week, should cut that out) assertion that the liberation of all buddhas derives solely from the Lotus Sūtra. It's a false claim not supported in the text itself.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 17th, 2021 at 12:10 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

Minobu said:

it will do this....it will lead you to you accessing your Buddha Nature ...the real deal...

Malcolm wrote:

Thanks, but I am all set.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 17th, 2021 at 2:12 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

LastLegend said:

The story in the Sutra is not a work of fiction.

Malcolm wrote:

One person's gospel is another person's fiction.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 17th, 2021 at 2:22 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

jake said:

This is still a Buddhist discussion forum, correct? Specifically the Mahayana sub-forum? Why are these "it's all made up and it is childish" posts permitted?

Malcolm wrote:

Because we permit people to express their opinions freely, within reason?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 17th, 2021 at 2:39 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

LastLegend said:

Do people actually believe it's a work of fiction? Or just say that to teach Nichiren folks a lesson?

Malcolm wrote:

Fiction has some negative connotations. This is not fiction in the sense of The Shining, it's not written purely for entertainment.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 17th, 2021 at 3:01 AM

Title: Re: buddhas achieve enlightenment through LS (Was "Which has primacy, Buddha or Dharma"?)

Content:

LastLegend said:

Yeah written by human? Not spoken by Buddha? So what do people actually believe in and not believe in?

Malcolm wrote:

It all depends on whose story you believe. But it does not matter much in terms of the content itself, which is what is being discussed here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 17th, 2021 at 8:43 PM

Title: Re: 6 R's and Loving Kindness teaching

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

I asked my friend, an Ajahn from Thailand about that about 15 years ago. I mentioned that Mahayana teaches to put others before oneself, even reaching attainment. He said his view was that while that's fine, it's like people drowning after a shipwreck at sea. You can't really rescue others if you haven't rescued yourself first. Whether that's true or not, it's a valid argument, and I don't want to delve into comparative religion (not the forum for it anyway) but I just wanted to toss this in, in the context of the OP statement.

Malcolm wrote:

Shantideva makes it very clear that in order to help others, a bodhisattva must preserve themselves.

PadmaVonSamba said:

Being “more compassionate” doesn’t necessarily draw one to Mahayana/Vajrayana, and being “less compassionate” doesn’t lead one to practice Theravāda.

Malcolm wrote:

The śrāvaka schools do not teach the nonreferential compassion found in Mahāyāna.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 17th, 2021 at 11:46 PM

Title: Re: in the weeds here

Content:

Queequeg said:

he text just ends before its supposed to. Some speculate this was intentional - a way to emphasize one of the teachings that permeate the whole work - "No one but the buddhas can completely know..." How silly it would be to attempt to fully capture the teaching in words.

Malcolm wrote:

Many Tibetan texts basically state that the explanation of the result happens when you realize the result.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 17th, 2021 at 11:52 PM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

GrapeLover said:

Generally I wouldn’t assume that the relevant scriptures were written from the perspective of ordinary human karmic perception.

When it comes to Mt Meru, for instance, when you read even the descriptions of the humans and their experiences on the other continents (Vasubandhu goes into wild detail throughout the Abhidhadmakōśabhāṣyam), it’s clear that they aren’t just “the humans that live literally to the north on this planet”. It appears to be a model of the realms which may or may not appear literally to those beings who have attained, for instance, the divine eye.

Malcolm wrote:

How do you explain Ptolemy referring to the people of the Central Asian plains as the Kurus?

The Kōśa cosmology cannot be taken literally. It is an old map of this world, with the Tibetan plateau at the center. The Mahabharata describes people having picnics on the slopes of Meru, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 18th, 2021 at 12:03 AM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

Queequeg said:

If Mahayana sutras are just stories and are not the historical records of the Buddha's words, where does that leave us?

Malcolm wrote:

Evaluating the words of Mahāyāna sūtras on their own merits, rather than on the merits of authority.

Queequeg said:

It is controversial to describe Buddhist sutras as just stories. This offends some people and shakes the faith of others. I appreciate these sensibilities.

Malcolm wrote:

It is controversial to describe them as the physically enunciated words of the Buddha.

Even if we take my general attitude, which is just to call them buddhavaṇana and leave it at that, they still must be understood in context, audience, and so on. For example, there are many anachronisms in Mahāyāna sūtras which cannot be explained by asserting this or that text was actually enunciated by the Buddha. For example, why is the setting of the Lanka in Śrī Lanka, and why is Ravana, the rakṣasa king, part of the main audience?

One movement we see in Mahāyāna is moving sūtras, and later tantras, away from events in Jambudvīpa and placing them in increasingly more abstract settings, such as on the peak of Meru (lower tantras) and so on. This is nowhere more pronounced than in Dzogchen tantras, which are not even set in this specific eon, for the most part.

Buddhist sūtras are just stories. Even the Pali Canon and the Āgamas barely resemble anything that can be construed as "historical." At the same time, western text critical narratives of them are just stories too, given how often scholars change their opinions about this thing and that.

That people are offended, and lose "faith" is irrelevant. If the meaning of the teachings do not stand on their own without the Buddha, they still do not stand on their own with the Buddha.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 18th, 2021 at 12:32 AM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

GrapeLover said:

Generally I wouldn't assume that the relevant scriptures were written from the perspective of ordinary human karmic perception.

When it comes to Mt Meru, for instance, when you read even the descriptions of the humans and their experiences on the other continents (Vasubandhu goes into wild detail throughout the Abhidharmakośabhāṣya), it's clear that they aren't just "the humans that live literally to the north on this planet". It appears to be a model of the realms which may or may not appear literally to those beings who have attained, for instance, the divine eye.

Malcolm wrote:

How do you explain Ptolemy referring to the people of the Central Asian plains as the Kurus?

The Kośa cosmology cannot be taken literally. It is an old map of this world, with the Tibetan plateau at the center. The Mahabharata describes people having picnics on the slopes of Meru, etc.

GrapeLover said:

I kind of state directly that it isn't to be taken literally on a mundane level. If you're saying it's nonsense and doesn't correspond to anything then that is a different story

Malcolm wrote:

It corresponds to a map of the world people framed in their minds, who often never travelled more than a 100 miles from their birthplaces.

GrapeLover said:

Don't you think that the Copper Coloured Mountain is in Madagascar? What relation do you see that having with Guru Rinpoche's pure realm filled with dakinis and vidyadharas, such that some tertons have seen? If it's an "otherworldly" place that we call after somewhere in our world then I explain it the same way.

Malcolm wrote:

Most of these terton experiences of Zangdok Palri occur in dreams. I could make a rather long list.

I think that basis for Zangdok Palri is the Island of Madagascar for various reasons, yes. I also think the basis for the Shambhala myth is Afghanistan. But apart from being the pure visions of this one and that, I certainly do not think these places physically exist on our planet anymore, and for that matter, neither did my guru, Chogyal Namkhai Norbu.
YMMV

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 18th, 2021 at 12:35 AM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

I have to confess that I really don't care whether the sutras are literally true or not. I think a lot of Theravada Buddhists fall into a trap of assuming that the EBTs are the only material that is buddhavacana, ignoring that (1) there's widespread disagreement about what the EBTs comprise and (2) there's no historical proof that any extant Buddhist text was spoken verbatim--or even at all--by Sakyamuni. And I think a lot of Mahayana Buddhists fall into the same trap but from the opposite direction, making extravagant claims about the historicity of our canonical texts, out of ... I don't know, I think it's an inferiority complex or something.

It's all a matter of faith. We have faith that certain teachings are conducive to liberation. Some of us put more or less faith in different teachings, depending on our karma. As a Zen Buddhist, I hold the Lankavatara Sutra in high esteem, and believe that it expresses something precious. If Sakyamuni was not, in fact, attended by countless disciples, bodhisattvas, nagas, devas, rakshasas, yakshas, etc., it doesn't shake my faith a bit, or diminish from the preciousness of the teaching.

Malcolm wrote:

For me it is a matter of content. The teachings in the Pali canon are profound; certainly, the teachings in Mahāyāna sūtras are more profound. The teachings in Dzogchen tantras are the most profound, AFAIC. But I base this on content alone, and not authority of a historical figure.

I think the myths and legends around these texts are important and must be preserved, but I don't think we have to take them as history, in the way some do.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 18th, 2021 at 1:02 AM

Title: Re: If it's just a story...

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Well, obviously we can't see other realms and their inhabitants. But some people can. It's just a matter of how clouded our perception is, and whether or not we've opened our divine eye.

Sometimes you'll meet people who can see these things. It's rare, though... It can be unlocked through deep states of samadhi. Some people are even born with it. I've met at least two people like this, who can see the energetic reality as well as spirits.

Malcolm wrote:

That does not render Meru Cosmology anything more than a medieval map. Here is another one, by Agrippa (63 BCE--12 BCE):

It distinctly lacks Meru, the four main and eight subcontinents, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 18th, 2021 at 1:56 AM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

But if we're talking about the four continents, it may be a reference to other planes of existence overlaying our own world.

Malcolm wrote:

Then how do you explain Ptolemy referring to the Kurus to the north of India?

SilenceMonkey said:

Certain sacred places on Earth are said to be secretly tantric power places, pure realms, etc...

Malcolm wrote:

Things like geography and so on need to conform to the perceptions of ordinary people.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 18th, 2021 at 2:00 AM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

LastLegend said:

The heaven eye is hard to open, I heard. Those who have them open they will see see which practitioners have many Heavenly Dharma protectors follow them.

SilenceMonkey said:

Maybe it depends on our karma. This one guy in Taiwan I met says that he sees hundreds of spiritual beings flocked to temples when pujas are being conducted. He says he can see them hovering outside the building and also inside where the practice is taking place. He is a vajrayana practitioner, who also practices Theravada shamatha and vipassana techniques, which he says amplify his vajrayana practice. A number of people think he was a lama in a previous life.

Malcolm wrote:

Lots of people say lots of things. As Poe said, "Believe nothing you hear, and only one half that you see."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 18th, 2021 at 2:01 AM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Maybe... maybe not...

Malcolm wrote:

Well, if you imagine Meru is "out there" somewhere, you are just engaging in conceptual proliferation and fantasies. HH Dalai Lama, Namkhai Norbu Rinpoche, etc., are all very content to dispense with Meru Cosmology.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 18th, 2021 at 2:28 AM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Maybe... maybe not...

Malcolm wrote:

Well, if you imagine Meru is "out there" somewhere, you are just engaging in conceptual proliferation and fantasies.

SilenceMonkey said:

Yes, I suppose you could say that about anything in relative reality. You could say the same thing about France.

Malcolm wrote:

Conventional truth is based on common perceptions of ordinary people.

SilenceMonkey said:

When you make arguments like this, I start to question... You are obviously smart enough to see the fallacy here, yet you still present it. Makes me think that maybe you just have a strong anti-something or other agenda.

Malcolm wrote:

For example, to a human, the perception of a liquid substance of the beings of the other six realms is false and deluded. Only the perception of water is correct and valid in the human realm.

Likewise, in this day and age, the notion that the world is flat, the sky is blue because the southern face of Meru is made of sapphire, and Jambudvipa is surrounded by iron mountains to keep the stench of the proximate hells away is simply mythological and need not be taken as anything more than a pre-modern Buddhist view of the world, not even shared by Indian non-buddhists of the same era.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 18th, 2021 at 6:55 AM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Yes, I suppose you could say that about anything in relative reality. You could say the same thing about France.

Malcolm wrote:

Conventional truth is based on common perceptions of ordinary people.

SilenceMonkey said:

Perhaps there is a difference in what you mean by conventional truth and relative truth... I see them as synonyms. It's pretty basic Dharma that other planes of existence are also relative truth, they just can't be seen by people of ordinary faculties.

Malcolm wrote:

Conventional truth and relative truth overlap, but are not entirely synonymous. The other planes of existence you refer to are things like hell realms. For example, Vasubandhu negates the existence of hell realms as physical places. Why? Because then hell guardians accrue untold negative karma. So they are not sentient beings and the hells do not really exist as physical places, even conventionally.

The universe of Merus is the impure universe, not some exalted realm. It is the realm of the desire and form realm, i.e. samsara. But it is ridiculous to insist "Meru might be true in someone else's perception." Mt. Meru is really just the Tibetan plateau, etc. Four continents etc. are just Asia, Europe, Africa, etc. according to people who have no way of observing the earth from space.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 18th, 2021 at 6:56 AM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

tkp67 said:

This is why eliminating doubt is so critical and why the claim that all buddha are enlightened by this sutra is true.

Malcolm wrote:

No, the claim is false, not supported by the text at all. It's up to you to prove the claim is true, you or Bodei.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 18th, 2021 at 7:56 AM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

Javierfv1212 said:

I think there is definitely a middle way between the idea that these texts are just made up stuff and the idea that they are literally true.

I definitely believe that Buddhist texts contain truths about reality. The most important elements in these Sutras, the deepest teachings, i.e. emptiness, Buddha nature, Buddhahood, the end of suffering, are what matters to me. Furthermore, the practical elements are also true, not in some factual/Scientific sense, but in a pragmatic sense (which means they help end suffering). All these things are true for me, they are stories all the same, but they are true stories.

However there is a bunch of stuff in all Buddhist texts that is questionable. This is not surprising, since they were composed, edited and copied over generations by human beings. Many of these people had deep insights into reality, but some also held wrong ideas about cosmology, about what's possible in this world, about women and about other things. This doesn't invalidate the real insights that the texts contain.

Some of these ideas should be dispensed with (the sexism for example and the meru cosmology), while others can be seen as good stories which should be understood metaphorically.

Just my 2 cents.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 18th, 2021 at 8:09 AM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

tkp67 said:

This is why eliminating doubt is so critical and why the claim that all buddha are enlightened by this sutra is true.

Malcolm wrote:

No, the claim is false, not supported by the text at all. It's up to you to prove the claim is true, you or Bodei.

tkp67 said:

It is absolutely supported by the text unless you have a citation where the buddha expresses doubt.

Malcolm wrote:

Your claim is that Buddha asserts in this text it is the text by means of which all buddhas attain buddhahood. Citation please. If you can't produce it, your claim is false.

tkp67 said:

I would also remind you that lotus based traditions require more than textual comparisons but practice within the framework of the traditions which you admitted you do not do at all.

Malcolm wrote:

Irrelevant to your claim.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 18th, 2021 at 8:06 PM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

tkp67 said:

It is absolutely supported by the text unless you have a citation where the buddha expresses doubt.

Malcolm wrote:

Your claim is that Buddha asserts in this text it is the text by means of which all buddhas attain buddhahood. Citation please. If you can't produce it, your claim is false.

tkp67 said:

No I said that the text supports the claim that all buddhas are enlightened by this sutra which is an expression of the buddhas enlightenment. . However Expedient means illustrates this point in several passages. For brevity I will post just one.

Malcolm wrote:

Your citation does not support your claim at all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 18th, 2021 at 8:09 PM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

tkp67 said:

Can I get a citation on the skillful use of doubt or on the lotus being just a story?

Malcolm wrote:

I never claimed the first, though you should go talk to Zen folks about their "great doubt".

As for the second, "Thus have I heard..."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 18th, 2021 at 8:11 PM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

narhwal90 said:

tkp, if you are going to cite passages as proof you should probably reconcile the various translations beforehand. The 84000 translation reads quite differently in those sections. If you have decided that the Burton/BDK editions supersede the 84000 translation could you explain why that is?

Malcolm wrote:

It's useless. We are talking about sutras as literary productions, but he keeps pushing his sectarian agenda, which is off topic here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 18th, 2021 at 10:09 PM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

Giovanni said:

Attempting to prove the validity of a scripture by quoting what it says about itself is a circular argument.

Malcolm wrote:

Not only that, but providing a citation itself is not proof, it has to be backed by reasoning. First we cite, then we provide reasoning for why we are citing this or that citation. This is basic to all debate in Buddhist schools.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 18th, 2021 at 10:11 PM

Title: Re: is the tirthika doctrine of Brahman incarnating into maya impossible?

Content:

Artziebetter1 said:

if there is a infinite,omnsicient,omnipresent yet transendant,unchanging(in ontology and nature not acts,though A'sharis would say their God/unconditioned reality can not have emotions or different acts coming from different wills rather than one eternal will) and omnipotent entity can it enter into infinite number of ignorant,limited and finite and impotent beings with a temporal nondivine nature?I have been reading on the christian doctrine of the hypostatic union (Where christ had two fully divine and fully human natures simultanously)and its impossibility and I wonder if this also applies to brahman?also wouldn't that mean that ishwara can't create avatars?

wouldn't if this were true be a great argument buddhists could use against tirthika doctrines?I have heard malcolm say something to the effect that if a unconditioned reality becomes many atmans then it would become conditioned and this is impossible?please explain in detail why this is impossible and educate us.

Malcolm wrote:

Read your own statement. You have provided this proof right there:

"if a unconditioned reality becomes many atmans then it would become conditioned"

Anything that is uncompounded is indivisible.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 18th, 2021 at 11:07 PM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

tkp67 said:

...the lotus being just a story?

Malcolm wrote:

“What do you think, Subhūti? Is there any dharma at all which the Tathāgata has preached?”

Subhūti said, “No indeed, Bhagāvan. There is no dharma at all, Bhagāvan, which the Tathāgata has preached.”

<https://www2.hf.uio.no/polyglotta/index.php?page=fulltext&view=fulltext&vid=1133&mid=0>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 18th, 2021 at 11:22 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Meanwhile, back in the real world:

<https://www.washingtonpost.com/climate-environment/2021/06/16/earth-heat-imbalance-warming/>

Unknown said:

The amount of heat Earth traps has roughly doubled since 2005, contributing to more rapidly warming oceans, air and land, according to new research from NASA and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

“The magnitude of the increase is unprecedented,” said Norman Loeb, a NASA scientist and lead author of the study, which was published this week in the journal Geophysical Research Letters. “The Earth is warming faster than expected.”

Using satellite data, researchers measured what is known as Earth’s energy imbalance — the difference between how much energy the planet absorbs from the sun, and how much it’s able to shed, or radiate back out into space.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 18th, 2021 at 11:49 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

But honestly, energy generation is comparatively easy to decarbonize. It's an infrastructure problem, not a technology problem. What do you do about aviation and shipping? About agriculture? Steel and cement production? I honestly don't know. We'd better figure some shit out, fast.

Malcolm wrote:

Deep ecologists have it right again: the human population of the planet needs to fall back to 1776 levels, and maintain that level. If not, there will be a massive human die off, and centuries, may be millennia, of barbarism...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 1:32 AM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

Astus said:

"the Tathāgata always teaches: ‘Monks, understand my correct teachings to be like a raft.’ If even my correct teachings are to be abandoned, how much more incorrect teachings?"

http://www.acmuller.net/bud-canon/diamond_sutra.html#div-7

Malcolm wrote:

Perhaps this is a little better:

It was therefore with this in mind that the Tathāgata said that those who understand the round of teachings of the Simile of the Raft should let go of the dharmas themselves, to say nothing of the adharma.

<https://www2.hf.uio.no/polyglotta/index.php?page=fulltext&view=fulltext&vid=1133>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 1:55 AM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

Sure, dispensing with it as an actual physical cosmology is not so hard.

We can't really dispense with it if certain teachings directly involve it though, or alternatively we have to view it as something other than "out there".

mabw said:

This is something I've been pondering as well. Some parts may be dispensed with without much loss, but some have been incorporated into practices. I don't know if these are good examples but the concepts of the transference of merits, heaven and hell, the Western Pureland, the supplication to deities etc come to mind. What happens then?

Some reinterpret this to the Mind level, which will appeal to some more modern folks I imagine, but some treat these literally as presented in the texts.

Johnny Dangerous said:

I remember a conversation on DW years back where a Lama was quoted as saying something like "the deities are pure reflections of the Dharmakaya, we are impure reflections". Now this seems a specifically a Tantric view and arguably represents just one viewpoint, but that would be a reasonable reply.

In that sense, differentiating between types of illusory phenomena is more about where they can lead than it is about their status as conventionally true or untrue. In the Buddhadharma phenomena cannot ultimately have different ontological status anyway.

As far as whether or not they are conventionally true, all of the teachers I have been around who have addressed this question did so by bringing up the actual size Vulture Peak and asking how many beings would really fit there.

Malcolm wrote:

Nevertheless, the tendency of religious people to take refuge in fundamentalism, despite the overwhelming facts that contradict their beliefs, is amply demonstrated by the new religion of Qanon.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 3:30 AM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

Aemilius said:

Robert O. Dean became well known when he appeared in the Alien Interview, in 1997.

July 26, 1996: Offices of Rocket Pictures receive a phone call from a man named "Victor", who claims to be in possession of a leaked tape of an alien creature being interviewed in a secret government installation.

Malcolm wrote:

So fake.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 3:39 AM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

it's just a way to view the stories we are talking about.

Malcolm wrote:

Shaw's new book in the Digha Nikāya has a chapter where she deals with Buddhist mythopoeia. It should be required reading for all Buddhists.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 4:06 AM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

it's just a way to view the stories we are talking about.

Malcolm wrote:

Shaw's new book in the Digha Nikāya has a chapter where she deals with Buddhist mythopoeia. It should be required reading for all Buddhists.

Johnny Dangerous said:

What is it called? I couldn't find it by Googling.

Malcolm wrote:

The Art of Listening: A Guide to the Early Teachings of Buddhism

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 4:09 AM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 7:50 PM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

tkp67 said:

...the lotus being just a story?

Malcolm wrote:

“What do you think, Subhūti? Is there any dharma at all which the Tathāgata has preached?”

Subhūti said, “No indeed, Bhagāvan. There is no dharma at all, Bhagāvan, which the Tathāgata has preached.”

<https://www2.hf.uio.no/polyglotta/index.php?page=fulltext&view=fulltext&vid=1133&mid=0>

tkp67 said:

That is referring to the expression of words not the liberation they point to.

The state of liberation in and of itself is not what the LS teaches.

Malcolm wrote:

Then by the criteria set forth in Akshayamati Nirdeśa Sutra, the LS is a provisional sutra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 7:55 PM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment Soon

Content:

namoh said:

Malcolm,

That’s interesting about Karma Chagme. Is that the source of the initiations used in the Kamtsang tradition here? I’ve always been familiar with the empowerments being individual short initiations for peaceful guru, long life guru, guru drakpo and simhamukha. I had no idea there was a full three roots empowerment. Presumably a torwang?

heart said:

Taklung tsetrul rinpoche gave us a full two day empowerment, so that is a wangchen.

/magnus

tony_montana said:

I apologize for going off topic, but what is the difference between wangchen and wangkur? Or are they the same thing?

Malcolm wrote:
The same thing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 7:56 PM

Title: Re: More UFOs

Content:

Aemilius said:

Robert O. Dean became well known when he appeared in the Alien Interview, in 1997.

July 26, 1996: Offices of Rocket Pictures receive a phone call from a man named "Victor", who claims to be in possession of a leaked tape of an alien creature being interviewed in a secret government installation.

Malcolm wrote:
So fake.

Aemilius said:

Have you seen it and listened to what they say in it?

There is a follow up concerning the life and fate of Victor after this film, the person who had smuggled out this video from area 51. I don't think it is a fake.

Malcolm wrote:
So fake, and not even deep.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 8:02 PM

Title: Re: Prayers for healing of myself.

Content:

Budai said:

I have been through a lot of trauma helping people I love deeply with their karma, and eventually I had to stop taking on many people's karma because it hurt me too much physically and emotionally to continue on.

Malcolm wrote:

I pray that you free yourself from the fantasy that you can take on other people's karma. Not even the Buddha could take on other people's karma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 8:05 PM

Title: Re: Prayers for healing of myself.

Content:

Budai said:

There are ordinary people in the Amida Buddha Land without any interest in Buddhism who are fully happy.

Malcolm wrote:

No there are not. This is a false notion.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 8:38 PM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

tkp67 said:

provisional practitioners

Malcolm wrote:

Here is your sectarian agenda.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 8:49 PM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

tkp67 said:

provisional practitioners

Malcolm wrote:

Here is your sectarian agenda.

tkp67 said:

No I have stated it a myriad of times. There is no separation between the true aspect and provision in one's life. Understanding the difference between provision and the true aspect is critical to achieve the middle way that represents Shakyamuni's enlightenment in the LS.

They are not independent so there is no separation and no sectarian divide because no such thing exists outside of the concept of self. All phenomenon are empty so there is no negative connotation to be had in a discourse between provision and true aspect teachings unless someone thinks somehow there is a personal superiority being preached. This makes no sense in a practice that is founded on the extinguishing of self since the self is the only entity to crave such things.

Malcolm wrote:

You're talking out both sides of your mouth. Full quote:

thus the wailing and gnashing of teeth to the provisional practitioners who read it

Just who are these provisional practitioners who are wailing and gnashing their teeth when they read the LS?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 8:49 PM

Title: Re: in the weeds here

Content:

Minobu said:

so i just would like to know from what text do you get the ten worlds from.

i don't see any mention in the Lotus sutra...

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, there is no mention of this there.

These ideas arose out of how Chinese people thought about the world. One finds other uniquely Chinese ideas in Hua Yen, Chan, and so on.

The same applies to Tibetan Buddhism, Japanese Buddhism, Thai Buddhism, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 9:03 PM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

Javierfv1212 said:

It is in this sense that I think we should understand that all sutras are "stories" or "myths". This is a much more lively, powerful and inspiring way of thinking about sutras IMO than seeing them as literally true in every detail they say, or as just made up bunk.

I think this is sorely needed, us Buddhists need to get good at telling stories again. We are good at arguing philosophy and ideas, and presenting our views. We're ok at translating I guess. But the most popular stories today are fantasy and science fiction tales which stretch the imagination in similar ways that Indian Mahayana sutras did in their time. How can we communicate the Dharma if we've lost our sense of mythopoiesis?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 9:43 PM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment Soon

Content:

Javierfv1212 said:

As someone who has received empowerments from HEGR before I am interested in attending. I wonder if the sadhana will be translated or if its available somewhere so that I can practice it afterwards though.

Malcolm wrote:

The sadhana for the Konchog Chidu has been translated many times.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 9:48 PM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

Giovanni said:

Literalist or sectarian approaches have in the past left me putting it to one side as a strange departure from Dharma.

Javierfv1212 said:

IMO both excessive rationalism or scientism and skepticism as well as literalism/fundamentalism will seriously dampen the natural human spiritual intuition

The fate of Christianity in the West is an apt example (i.e. either people retreat into fundamentalist irrationalism or they abandon it as clearly unscientific and irrational)

Its a lesson we need to learn if we want Western Buddhism to avoid this fate

Malcolm wrote:

Christianity is clearly unscientific and irrational. And it has not at all been abandoned in the West.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 9:57 PM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Just who are these provisional practitioners who are wailing and gnashing their teeth when they read the LS?

tkp67 said:

The same four types of person that beat bodhisattva never disparaging with sticks and stones.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't see anyone here disputing the idea that they have been predicted for anuttarasamyaksambodhi, do you? This is a Mahāyāna forum, and all modern Mahāyānis accept the ekayāna teachings without reservation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 10:07 PM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

TharpaChodron said:

Guess it's about time to move in with my sister-in law in Caithness, Scotland.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.northcoast500.com/2018/04/40-reasons-why-you-should-never-ever-ever-visit-caithness-ever/>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 10:09 PM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

tkp67 said:

The same four types of person that beat bodhisattva never disparaging with sticks and stones.

Malcolm wrote:

I don't see anyone here disputing the idea that they have been predicted for anuttarasamyaksambodhi, do you? This is a Mahāyāna forum, and all modern Mahāyānīs accept the ekayāna teachings without reservation.

Javierfv1212 said:

Maybe there are a few holdouts in the Hosso School in Japan...maybe

Malcolm wrote:

I guess those are the folks tpk is talking about.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 10:47 PM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment Soon

Content:

Javierfv1212 said:

As someone who has received empowerments from HEGR before I am interested in attending. I wonder if the sadhana will be translated or if its available somewhere so that I can practice it afterwards though.

Malcolm wrote:

The sadhana for the Konchog Chidu has been translated many times.

Javierfv1212 said:
Is this it?

https://namobuddhapub.org/files/practices/ThranguR-Konchog_Chidu_Practice_for_Website.pdf

Malcolm wrote:
Yes.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 10:47 PM
Title: Re: If its just a story...
Content:
LastLegend said:

A few people posted there is no dharma to be taught by the Buddha (Diamond Sutra).

Malcolm wrote:
As well as the Lanka, etc.

LastLegend said:
This is the path most other traditions follow. There can be a problem with this: there is a deep attachment to self/duality.

Malcolm wrote:
No, not at all.

LastLegend said:
There is deep attachment to self or habit energy or ignorance that's hard to uproot (Lankavantara Sutra).

Malcolm wrote:
That's a given, but besides the point here.

LastLegend said:
Nichiren practitioners seem to follow by Faith. Which I don't think is any less. It's a softer approach.

Malcolm wrote:
There is nothing wrong clear faith, since it brings clarity to the mind. But blind faith, or attachment to views is a problem.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 11:24 PM
Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

Giovanni said:

Literalist or sectarian approaches have in the past left me putting it to one side as a strange departure from Dharma.

Javierfv1212 said:

IMO both excessive rationalism or scientism and skepticism as well as literalism/fundamentalism will seriously dampen the natural human spiritual intuition

The fate of Christianity in the West is an apt example (i.e. either people retreat into fundamentalist irrationalism or they abandon it as clearly unscientific and irrational)

Its a lesson we need to learn if we want Western Buddhism to avoid this fate

Giovanni said:

Yes, a point I tried to make earlier. It's seems likely that traditional Buddhist cultures will hold their mythology and view of themselves as special cases for some generations to come. But after shedding the burden of literalism and religious fundamentalism most westerners are not going to flock to stories of magic mountains, undersea talking serpents, tardis stupas etc. unless they can see clearly the real nature of these devices of literature. Perhaps Dharma will need to be presented in more prosaic terms to meet the needs of an age which is less poetic?

Malcolm wrote:

I think the framing myths which are common to all Dharma traditions are important. Also, in each individual tradition, there are important framing myths. Problems arise, however, when different sects begin to assert that their framing myths are more valid than or supersede the framing myths of other traditions.

I have mentioned here before that I think we need to distinguish myth, legend, and history, when we look at Dharma traditions. For example, TPK brought up the myth of Sadāparibhūta in the Lotus. Why is this a myth?

Giovanni said:

“Mahā sthāma prāpta, in the past, in a time gone by, countless, innumerable, incalculable, vast asaṃkhyeya eons ago, at that time, in that era, in the Vinirbhoga eon, in the world realm Mahāsaṃbhavā, there appeared in the world the tathāgata, the arhat, the perfectly enlightened buddha, the one with perfect wisdom and conduct, the sugata, the knower of the world, the unsurpassable guide who tamed beings, the teacher of gods and humans, the buddha, the bhagavān named Bhiṣmagarjitasvararāja.

Malcolm wrote:

This passage is not historical and it is not a legend, it is set in the far distant past beyond anything that remotely resembles the history of the universe as we presently understand it (cue remarks about going beyond concepts, etc.).

Buddha was a historical person, but there are many legends about him, and the actual biography of the Buddha as a human being is still far from certain, but there are certain features of his biography to which all traditions assent, known as the twelve deeds.

An example of a legend about the Buddha, an episode which exists only in the Chan tradition, concerns his holding up a flower, the meaning of which is only understood by Mahakashyapa. This is a didactic legend. It serves to underscore the fundamental point that the meaning of awakening cannot truly be encompassed in words.

There are countless varieties of these legends and allegories in Buddhist texts. So, we, as modern clients of the Dharma, need to understand properly the distinction between myths, legends, and history in the Dharma.

To recap a point made earlier, a story always begins, "I heard that...", and most Buddhist scriptures begin with evam maya śrutam ekasmin, "Thus at one time did I hear..." There is no Buddhist sutra that is the direct words of the Buddha. All Buddhist sutras are related through a narrator, which we are expected to believe is Ananda. Thus all Buddhist sutras are second person narratives of events and conversations with persons for which we were not present. Then, of course, all Buddhist sutras are translations, reputedly from an oral record, set down in a local dialect, translated into Pali or Sanskrit, and then translated in to Tibetan and Chinese that no one can understand any more without extensive training, and English, French and so on. We have examples like the 17 Dzogchen tantras, whose framing myth asserts were all initially taught in birdsong during the first eon of this great eon, and only in this epoch were taught in the language of Oddiyana and then translated into Sanskrit-->Tibetan, and so on. So we are always at best relying on fourth and fifth hand accounts. Just let that sink in.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 11:26 PM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

Javierfv1212 said:

You just have to present it in the right way. Hence, Buddhists must re-learn how to tell stories.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, you have to convince the audience to suspend their disbelief for a while.

On the other hand, some sūtras, like the PP Suttas, while containing myths such as search of Sadāprarudita for the Perfection of Wisdom, mainly focuses on explicating the omniscience of a buddha that arises from realizing emptiness. These texts are far more easy for modern people to lean into because they focus more on the essentials of the Dharma, such as the view of emptiness, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 19th, 2021 at 11:43 PM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

LastLegend said:

“Not at all” as in my claim is incorrect that other traditions have better tricks?

Malcolm wrote:

I think the problem here is that the antecedent to the preposition "this" is unclear.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 20th, 2021 at 12:01 AM

Title: Re: in the weeds here

Content:

LastLegend said:

10 Worlds are 10 realms. When we get angry and want to kill, that's hell realm.

Malcolm wrote:

So what corresponds to the experience of arhats, pratyekabuddhas, bodhisattvas, and buddhas? After all, the whole point of this idea is that all are included in a single mental moment, which, when misunderstood, leads to such ideas that buddhas etc, experience suffering of the six realms.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 20th, 2021 at 12:06 AM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

Giovanni said:

I wasn't clear. My meaning is that westerners are not going to flock to hear such stories presented as history or cosmology. Presented as non linear, non literal truths to live by and as upaya is another thing.

Malcolm wrote:

One of the reasons why Trungpa's books were so popular, Myth of Freedom, Cutting Through Spiritual Materialism, etc., is that he had a knack for presenting Buddhist teachings in a way that Westerners in the 70's could easily absorb. He was quite willing to forgo literalism in favor of meaning. So was Chogyal Namkhai Norbu, for that matter.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 20th, 2021 at 12:18 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

TharpaChodron said:

Guess it's about time to move in with my sister-in law in Caithness, Scotland.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.northcoast500.com/2018/04/40-reasons-why-you-should-never-ever-ever-visit-caithness-ever/>

TharpaChodron said:

Looks absolutely terrible.

I think I mentioned, my sister-in-law is like a female Obi-Wan Kenobi, currently living in a remote old stone bothy.

Malcolm wrote:

I've been there, you absolutely do not want to go...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 20th, 2021 at 1:18 AM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment Soon

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The sadhana for the Konchog Chidu has been translated many times.

Javierfv1212 said:

Is this it?

https://namobuddhapub.org/files/practices/ThranguR-Konchog_Chidu_Practice_for_Website.pdf

heart said:

That is only the peaceful guru. The normal nyingma sadhana contains guru, longlife, four activities, yidam, dakini, tsog and so on.

Nalanda translations translated everything, ngondro, sadhana and instructions on kyerim and dzogchen.

/magnus

Malcolm wrote:

Tulku Dakpa uses my translation. You can perhaps get it from him.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 20th, 2021 at 2:12 AM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment Soon

Content:

heart said:

That is only the peaceful guru. The normal nyingma sadhana contains guru, longlife, four activities, yidam, dakini, tsog and so on.

Nalanda translations translated everything, ngondro, sadhana and instructions on kyerim and dzogchen.

/magnus

Malcolm wrote:

Tulku Dakpa uses my translation. You can perhaps get it from him.

heart said:

I got that, didn't know it was yours.

/magnus

Malcolm wrote:

I do a lot of anonymous work...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 20th, 2021 at 2:21 AM

Title: Re: If its just a story...

Content:

Javierfv1212 said:

IMO, here in the west you can't just launch into the myths and stories without laying down some groundwork for how to understand them. Most people will just reject them as religious fairytales otherwise. I think Gene Reeve's approach in the book I quoted before is pretty effective, you need to first explain how to understand and experience the myths, then go into the stories and tales and as you tell them, apply them to people's lives and make them relevant and meaningful.

Malcolm wrote:

You will note that the treatise tradition basically draws the core principles from various sutras, and largely leaves the mythic content behind. This is one strength of the Nalanda tradition, and a good reason not to focus attention on the raw material presented in the sutras.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 20th, 2021 at 7:09 AM

Title: Re: Prayers for healing of myself.

Content:

Budai said:

I have been through a lot of trauma helping people I Love deeply with their karma, and eventually I had to stop taking on many peoples karma because it hurt me too much physically and emotionally to continue on.

Malcolm wrote:

I pray that you free yourself from the fantasy that you can take on other peoples karma. Not even the Buddha could take on other peoples karma.

Budai said:

It's not that He couldn't,

Malcolm wrote:

He could not, and made it quite clear he could not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 20th, 2021 at 7:11 PM

Title: Re: The Complete Nyingma Tradition

Content:

mitsuk said:

The Complete Nyingma Tradition was a Tsadra/Shambhala fascinating project. Since the passing of Gyurme Dorje last year, does anyone know if the project of publishing the remaining volumes is still on, or have the remaining volumes been cancelled?

See : <https://www.tsadra.org/translation/featured-translations/complete-nyingma-tradition/>

As far as I know only 4 volumes (covering books 1-10, 13, 14, and 15-17) have been published...

Malcolm wrote:

Still on, he only worked on one volume.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 20th, 2021 at 8:38 PM

Title: Re: The Complete Nyingma Tradition

Content:

mitsuk said:

The Complete Nyingma Tradition was a Tsadra/Shambhala fascinating project. Since the passing of Gyurme Dorje last year, does anyone know if the project of publishing the remaining volumes is still on, or have the remaining volumes been cancelled?

See : <https://www.tsadra.org/translation/featured-translations/complete-nyingma-tradition/>

As far as I know only 4 volumes (covering books 1-10, 13, 14, and 15-17) have been published...

Malcolm wrote:

Still on, he only worked on one volume.

mutsuk said:

Ah, Okay. That is interesting. So do you know who is taking the charge of translating the remaining chapters?

Malcolm wrote:

No Idea, but he only did the Guhyagarbha section anyway, not the other published volumes. You should reach out to Marcus Perman for that other information.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 20th, 2021 at 9:04 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Another common misperception is that Buddhism is "nontheistic" as opposed to atheistic.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 21st, 2021 at 10:22 PM

Title: Re: Can lab-grown brains become conscious? Answer: We don't care

Content:

Jesse said:

that means someone is experiencing a very unfortunate rebirth. A disembodied consciousness cut off from sensory experience, with no idea what's happening to them; alone in a dark void for an indeterminate length of time.

Malcolm wrote:

Well, this not different than a formless realm being. However, it is unlikely such tissue will be conscious, since this kind of tissue will have never had any sense organs, and will be completely unaware, lacking any self-awareness. Also, there is no conception involved here.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 21st, 2021 at 10:35 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

madhusudan said:

Dhukka is misunderstood, so non-Buddhists think they "disagree" with the First Noble Truth.

Nicholas2727 said:

I think this also could be because some people misunderstand or have been misinformed that the First Noble Truth says as "all of life is suffering." I have heard many people say this and I have even seen it in some books, which gives people the wrong idea of the First Noble Truth.

Malcolm wrote:

Sarvadukkham is pretty clear: all is suffering. Painful sensations are suffering, the suffering of suffering, the result of hatred; pleasurable feelings are suffering, the suffering of change, the result of desire; and neutral feelings are suffering, the suffering of the compounded, the result of ignorance.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 21st, 2021 at 11:22 PM

Title: Re: Question about Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment

Content:

tony_montana said:

I'm also curious to know if we can practice the wrathful Guru as Yidam and Simhamukha Dakini based on the empowerment.

Can we practice their mantras?

Malcolm wrote:

If you have the lung, yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 12:37 AM

Title: Re: Can lab-grown brains become conscious? Answer: We don't care

Content:

Jesse said:

I'm not entirely sure if these would have an experience similar to formless beings,

Malcolm wrote:

Formless realms beings have no sensory input. They are sustained solely on the concept that direct their rebirth, infinite consciousness, etc.

Jesse said:

In the article I read they grew a brain organoid, and then grew a small cluster of eye cells(cones/rods), and then connected them together. The brain cells responded to a light stimulus being shined on the eye cells. I don't think they are going to stop this type of research.

Malcolm wrote:

Probably not.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 12:57 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

Maybe I have had a misunderstanding then. Before coming to Mahayana, I had numerous Theravada teachers correct anyone who said the first noble truth is "all of life is suffering." They would make the point that the first noble truth is simply Dukkha.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.accesstoinsight.org/tipitaka/sn/sn45/sn45.165.wlsh.html>

"Monks, there are these three kinds of suffering.[1] What three? Suffering caused by pain,[2] suffering caused by the formations (or conditioned existence),[3] suffering due to change.[4] It is for the full comprehension, clear understanding, ending and abandonment of these three forms of suffering that the Noble Eightfold Path is to be cultivated..."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 1:25 AM

Title: Re: Avoiding mistakes

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

I like the idea of working half the year in some menial job, then the other half go into retreat. Then maybe more retreat as the years go on.

Malcolm wrote:

In the real world, taking six months off a year only works if you are in construction or if you are a nurse.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 5:37 AM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment

Content:

bryandavis said:

Lopon Malcom,

So GR Did not give the 5th empowerment of this konchok chidu wang. It was translated as the empowerment of the view.

However the 4th empowerment was translated as having given one permission to "practice the inner most essence of primordial purity and spontaneous presence"

If the 5th empowerment is the rigpai tsal wang, what of the 4th empowerment allowing "practice the inner most essence of primordial purity and spontaneous presence" ... Is this not referring to Trekcho and togal? Read text related etc?

Just to clear up for those who have not received before.

Malcolm wrote:

There are seven sections to this empowerment. Garchen Rinpoche skipped the poti wang, the simhamukha transmission, and the rig pa'i rtsal dbang. These three follow the fourth empowerment. But you know, guru's choice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 6:05 AM

Title: Re: The Complete Nyingma Tradition

Content:

yeshegyaltsen said:

I believe it was actually a project initiated by Lama Tharchin. Ngawang Zangpo was originally the primary translator, but has since moved on to other things which is what brought Gyurme Dorje onto the project. Heidi Nevin is now working on the remaining volumes, from what I understand.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, that's correct.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 6:26 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

There is a distinction between saying that all conditioned experiences are tainted with dukkha and saying that experiences themselves are dukkha. If that were not true, there would be no Second Noble Truth, and no need for one, nor the following truths, we'd just be screwed. Maybe that's what your teachers were trying to express?

It is the sort of distinction that makes a bigger difference than it seems, and is one of those things that is definitely a misconception - that all experiences are dukkha in some ontological sense, rather than that all phenomenal experiences necessarily lead to dukkha. It's the kind of misconception that doesn't seem to matter to non-Buddhists, making it even more common. You can't really study the Four Noble Truths in detail without acknowledging it though, and perhaps that's why it's important.

This becomes arguably very important in the Mahayana as well, where the nature of appearances themselves becomes a theme. For that matter, the theme of incorrectly ascribing inherent qualities to appearances is big in the Mahayana as well.

If one believe that appearances themselves were somehow inherently or essentially dukkha, it would be an impediment, on a number of levels. So, I can see why some teachers would want to correct that early on.

Malcolm wrote:

As Maitreya points out, there isn't a pin point of happiness anywhere in samsara.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 7:14 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

There is a distinction between saying that all conditioned experiences are tainted with dukkha and saying that experiences themselves are dukkha. If that were not true, there would be no Second Noble Truth, and no need for one, nor the following truths, we'd just be screwed. Maybe that's what your teachers were trying to express?

It is the sort of distinction that makes a bigger difference than it seems, and is one of those things that is definitely a misconception - that all experiences are dukkha in some ontological sense, rather than that all phenomenal experiences necessarily lead to dukkha. It's the kind of misconception that doesn't seem to matter to non-Buddhists, making it even more common. You can't really study the Four Noble Truths in detail without acknowledging it though, and perhaps that's why it's important.

This becomes arguably very important in the Mahayana as well, where the nature of appearances themselves becomes a theme. For that matter, the theme of incorrectly ascribing inherent qualities to appearances is big in the Mahayana as well.

If one believe that appearances themselves were somehow inherently or essentially dukkha, it would be an impediment, on a number of levels. So, I can see why some teachers would want to correct that early on.

Malcolm wrote:

As Maitreya points out, there isn't a pin point of happiness anywhere in samsara.

Johnny Dangerous said:

It doesn't make the distinction any less true, it is a question of the etiology of suffering, so to speak, not the fact that it is all-pervading, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

There is suffering because there is karma, and there is karma because there is affliction, so any afflicted person should not be surprised that everywhere they turn, they find only suffering. Hence sarvadukkham.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 8:13 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

Also (and I don't know why no-one has mentioned it yet), 'dukkha' is not exactly translated as 'suffering'. 'Unsatisfactoriness' or 'dis-ease' are closer to it, and the distinction does matter, so there are really two misconceptions in play here: whether everything is dukkha, and whether dukkha is suffering. Put the two together and we have quite a shift in meaning of the First Noble Truth, from (approximately!) "Everything in daily life is tainted with unsatisfactoriness," to "Life is suffering."

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

Suffering serves quite well for dukkha, just as happiness/bliss serves just fine for sukha.

Life is suffering because all rebirth is driven by affliction and karma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 8:17 AM

Title: Re: Can lab-grown brains become conscious? Answer: We don't care

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Formless realms beings have no sensory input. They are sustained solely on the concept that direct their rebirth, infinite consciousness, etc.

Dorje Shedrub said:

Malcolm, could such creations be considered sentient either now or with future advancements?

Malcolm wrote:

Unlikely. Machines are machines.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 8:47 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

You're basically saying that the problem with life is rebirth,

Malcolm wrote:

Yes. That is also the Buddha's point view. YMMV. There is nothing intrinsically wrong with suffering, other than the fact that it tends to perpetuate itself, and it is painful.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 9:39 AM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment

Content:

Passing By said:

So was the 4th one a direct introduction?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, but not the rig pa'i rtsal dbang. On the one hand, all word empowerments are direct introductions. One can consider it an introduction to trekcho, but this is not entirely accurate. It's a foundation empowerment for the rig pa'i rtsal dbang. Empowerments ripen, but the instructions liberate. A characteristic of the rig pa'i rtsal dbang, and why they are crucial, is that they combine the ripening empowerment and liberating instruction together. This is a unique feature of Dzogchen empowerments.

It's a beautiful cycle of teachings that has complete dzogchen teachings, which sadly are not given very frequently anymore. But maybe if you ask Garchen Rinpoche, he can teach you Rigzin Tsewang Norbu's commentary on the creation stage and Kongtrul's commentary on the completion stage. Konchok Chidu was Kongtrul's main practice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 10:20 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

There is a distinction between saying that all conditioned experiences are tainted with dukkha and saying that experiences themselves are dukkha. If that were not true, there would be no Second Noble Truth, and no need for one, nor the following truths, we'd just be screwed. Maybe that's what your teachers were trying to express?

It is the sort of distinction that makes a bigger difference than it seems, and is one of those things that is definitely a misconception - that all experiences are dukkha in some ontological sense, rather than that all phenomenal experiences necessarily lead to dukkha. It's the kind of misconception that doesn't seem to matter to non-Buddhists, making it even more common. You can't really study the Four Noble Truths in detail without acknowledging it though, and perhaps that's why it's important.

This becomes arguably very important in the Mahayana as well, where the nature of appearances themselves becomes a theme. For that matter, the theme of incorrectly ascribing inherent qualities to appearances is big in the Mahayana as well.

If one believe that appearances themselves were somehow inherently or essentially dukkha, it would be an impediment, on a number of levels. So, I can see why some teachers would want to correct that early on.

Nicholas2727 said:

That may be what they were trying to point out. I have moved on from those teachers and only spent a short amount of time with them so I never got around to asking what they meant specifically or for further clarification. I also quoted TNH in my post as someone who devoted a chapter in Heart of the Buddhas Teaching to the question, "is everything suffering?" It has been some time since I read that book, although if my memory is correct he made an argument similar to yours. I am sure someone with more knowledge on what TNH was saying could share his point of view better than I am. Maybe it would be a good time to reread that chapter as well to see if I missed the point my first time reading.

Malcolm wrote:

The four seals are:

All compounded phenomena are impermanent.

All afflicted phenomena are suffering.

All phenomenon lack identity.

Nirvana is peace.

This is the Mahayana formulation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 10:25 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

TharpaChodron said:

And we Buddhists aren't into converting others, except Nichiren Buddhists. That's another misconception which I have been guilty of.

Malcolm wrote:

No, but people universally think we are grim because we keep talking about the uncertainty of the time of death and impermanence, and they find it unnerving.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 10:31 AM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment

Content:

lucidaromulus said:

Malcolm, if you don't mind can you let me know what's the Sadhana title and author that was transmitted in this video?

Thank you

Malcolm wrote:

Sten already mentioned this.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 10:47 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

TharpaChodron said:

And we Buddhists aren't into converting others, except Nichiren Buddhists. That's another misconception which I have been guilty of.

Malcolm wrote:

No, but people universally think we are grim because we keep talking about the uncertainty of the time of death and impermanence, and they find it unnerving.

TharpaChodron said:

And it's hard to disabuse others of this notion that Buddhism is grim because essentially you're going against the samsaric grain - which is entirely the point.

Malcolm wrote:

As Buddha actually said, "I am not against the world, but the world is against me."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 11:01 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

That may be what they were trying to point out. I have moved on from those teachers and only spent a short amount of time with them so I never got around to asking what they meant specifically or for further clarification. I also quoted TNH in my post as someone who devoted a chapter in Heart of the Buddhas Teaching to the question, "is everything suffering?" It has been some time since I read that book, although if my memory is correct he made an argument similar to yours. I am sure someone with more knowledge on what TNH was saying could share his point of view better than I am. Maybe it would be a good time to reread that chapter as well to see if I missed the point my first time reading.

Malcolm wrote:

The four seals are:

All compounded phenomena are impermanent.

All afflicted phenomena are suffering.

All phenomenon lack identity.

Nirvana is peace.

This is the Mahayana formulation.

Nicholas2727 said:

Correct, I was more curious if there was more support for TNH not including suffering as one of the Dharma seals, or if this was something he did on his own. I went back to the book I was referring to and he says in the Samyukta Agama the Buddha says the three seals are impermanence, nonself and nirvana. The Dharma seal of suffering is not included (at least according to his footnote). He also says that Nagarjuna in his Mahaprajnaparamita Shastra "listed nirvana as one of the Three Dharma Seals." The way he says it here makes it sound like Nagarjuna only listed Three Dharma seals, not four, which would align with his argument although I have no knowledge on if this is true.

Malcolm wrote:

They are as I have listed them, though they appear in various forms in the sutras.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 11:33 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Nicholas2727 said:

Correct, I was more curious if there was more support for TNH not including suffering as one of the Dharma seals, or if this was something he did on his own. I went back to the book I was referring to and he says in the Samyukta Agama the Buddha says the three seals are impermanence, nonself and nirvana. The Dharma seal of suffering is not included (at least according to his footnote). He also says that Nagarjuna in his Mahaprajnaparamita Shastra "listed nirvana as one of the Three Dharma Seals." The way he says it here makes it sound like Nagarjuna only listed Three Dharma seals, not four, which would align with his argument although I have no knowledge on if this is true.

Malcolm wrote:

They are as I have listed them, though they appear in various forms in the sutras.

Nicholas2727 said:

Got it, thank you for the clarification

Malcolm wrote:

If someone thinks there is actually happiness in this life, they have not examined things deeply enough.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 8:19 PM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

There are seven sections to this empowerment. Garchen Rinpoche skipped the poti wang, the simhamukha transmission, and the rig pa'i rtsal dbang. These three follow the fourth empowerment. But you know, guru's choice.

ratna said:

He skipped the rig pa'i rtsal dbang but did do the poti wang (the vajra master empowerment), with the ali kali mantra and the pecha as the implement. Also he went through the brief srog gtad of the protector (with the red torma as the implement), although this was not translated.

lucidaromulus said:

What does the poti wang does?

(I read a few posts about it in the forum but to be Frank I'm still unclear what authorization it gives)

Malcolm wrote:

Authorizes one to read the cycle and practice the sadhanas.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 8:24 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Temporary happiness is the suffering of change.

PadmaVonSamba said:

Temporarily arising conditions can provide the basis for temporary happiness of the subject. But that's all they can do.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 8:28 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

Well yes, it's pretty plain. But, with the best will in the world on the part of every person in the chain of transmission, it isn't exactly what the Buddha said. He said something along those lines in another language, and I think most of our problems with it arise from (mis)translation.

Malcolm wrote:

"Stress" for dukkha is insufficient. As you can see from Merriam Webster, suffering is perfect for dukkha:

Definition of suffer

transitive verb

1a : to submit to or be forced to endure

suffer martyrdom

b : to feel keenly : labor under suffer thirst

2 : UNDERGO, EXPERIENCE

3 : to put up with especially as inevitable or unavoidable

4 : to allow especially by reason of indifference

the eagle suffers little birds to sing

— William Shakespeare

intransitive verb

1 : to endure death, pain, or distress

2 : to sustain loss or damage

3 : to be subject to disability or handicap

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 8:31 PM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

There are seven sections to this empowerment. Garchen Rinpoche skipped the poti wang, the simhamukha transmission, and the rig pa'i rtsal dbang. These three follow the fourth empowerment. But you know, guru's choice.

ratna said:

He skipped the rig pa'i rtsal dbang but did do the poti wang (the vajra master empowerment), with the ali kali mantra and the pecha as the implement. Also he went through the brief srog gtad of the protector (with the red torma as the implement), although this was not translated.

Malcolm wrote:

He must have using an empowerment text other than the common one in the terdzod, but admittedly, I only observed the end of the video at someone's request from the end of the third onward.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 9:23 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Javierfv1212 said:

There is a trend of people (including Buddhist teachers) saying that dukkha should not be translated as suffering....So IMO these people don't really understand the Buddhadharma's deep message.

Malcolm wrote:

Marketing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 9:25 PM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment

Content:

Javierfv1212 said:

Hopefully they will post an English sadhana on the website, apparently they have a Chinese translation, but not English.

There is the peaceful guru sadhana that can be found on google with Thrangu Rinpoche notes/commentary on it. Here's the one I mean: <https://docdro.id/jaAOGMt>

But now I am not sure if this is the same one that was being used here. Does it matter?

It seems to me that the specific details of this stuff doesn't matter as much as bodhicitta, keeping a focused and relaxed mind, and trying to recognize what was pointed out in the introduction. At least, that's what I get from Garchen R's attitude to this stuff.

So I may just use this sadhana which is available and give it a shot.

Malcolm wrote:

The essence of Konchog Chidu is the seven line prayer and the vajraguru mantra.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 9:40 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Javierfv1212 said:

There is a trend of people (including Buddhist teachers) saying that dukkha should not be translated as suffering....So IMO these people don't really understand the Buddhadharma's deep message.

Malcolm wrote:

Marketing.

TharpaChodron said:

In all seriousness, is this what the Dalai Lama's books, such as "The Joy of Happiness," are doing? Maybe that's just skillful means for the masses?

Malcolm wrote:

I suspect HHDL's notion of happiness is a bit different than the petite bourgeois goals of most Americans, and westerners in general. Path dharma, while compounded, are not afflictive, and therefore lead to nirvana, which is happiness in the sense that it is the total absence of suffering in its three forms.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 22nd, 2021 at 9:41 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Javierfv1212 said:

Does he actually deny that life is dukkha in this book?

Malcolm wrote:

No.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 23rd, 2021 at 3:31 AM

Title: Re: Direct introduction + bodhisattva vows

Content:

Damchö_Dorje said:

I joined webcast anniversary of Adzom Drukpa in 2016. By that time I had had a refuge ceremony with another lama, but not bodhisattva vows. If I had never taken bodhisattva vows, does that mean I didn't receive direct introduction?

Malcolm wrote:

Then you received bodhisattva vows during the anniversary of Adzom Drukpa.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 23rd, 2021 at 7:45 AM

Title: Re: Direct introduction + bodhisattva vows

Content:

Matt J said:

How can you unintentionally receive Bodhisattva vows?

Malcolm wrote:

Then you received bodhisattva vows during the anniversary of Adzom Drukpa. You can't, but these anniversary days have explanations of refuge and so on.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 23rd, 2021 at 9:57 PM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

One might think to ask a Drikung Kagyu lama, as in someone qualified by the lineage to answer questions about Drikung Kagyu teachings.

Malcolm wrote:

Konchog Chidu is widely spread in Nyingma and Kagyu. The reason it spread widely in the latter is due to it being a principle practice of Situ Panchen of Palpung.

Rinchen Phuntsog's earlier treasure cycle, dgongs pa yang zab, etc., also has yang zab in the title of the cycle. So people became a little confused as to what cycle Garchen Rinpoche was actually giving.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 23rd, 2021 at 9:58 PM

Title: Re: Question about Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment

Content:

tony_montana said:

I'm also curious to know if we can practice the wrathful Guru as Yidam and Simhamukha Dakini based on the empowerment.

Can we practice their mantras?

Malcolm wrote:

If you have the lung, yes.

KonchogUrgyenNyima said:

Could you give the lung, Malcolm?

Malcolm wrote:

You can get the lung for this from almost any Nyingma or Kagyu Lama. It is very widespread and popular.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 23rd, 2021 at 10:01 PM

Title: Re: Can lab-grown brains become conscious? Answer: We don't care

Content:

avatamsaka3 said:

We should take care that we follow the morality we're preaching.)

Malcolm wrote:

Pratimokṣa vows are not "morality" in the western sense of the term. They are principles one follows in one's own life in for the purpose of of one's own (prati) liberation (mokṣa). The same is true of bodhisattva vows, and also secret mantra vows.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 24th, 2021 at 1:46 AM

Title: Re: Job issue

Content:

jewel123 said:

Hello. I highly dislike my job, to the point of hating it. I work in conservation (leadership position) and I am absolutely exhausted. On one hand, I understand that I directly work for the benefit of animals and human communities, but I don't feel comfortable and happy with this work and the responsibility is just too much for me. Should I accept it as me repaying my karmic debts or pursue something less demanding where I can be a bit more content? I am thinking of quitting. Any input will be valuable for me. Thank you very much.

Malcolm wrote:

You have to work with circumstances. If you cannot handle the burden imposed by your position, you should think of finding another line of work.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 24th, 2021 at 10:09 AM

Title: Re: Samantabhadra's Aspiration Prayer

Content:

Yklah said:

Hi everyone,

I am pretty confused about the next topic, and i would appreciate that some spiritual brother or sister could clarify this very point to me: according to buddhist philosophy, any notion of a creator God is rejected: a God who exists without a cause and without conditions, and that acts as the creator of all phenomena and sentient beings.

Malcolm wrote:

There are some people, quite confused about the meaning of dzogchen, who mistake Samantabhadra for a creator. Samantabhadra has five subdivisions: teacher, basis, realization, qualities, and result. None of these five are creators.

In this context, the Samantabhadra being referred to is the Samantabhadra of the basis, that is, the nature of the mind.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 24th, 2021 at 10:13 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

Sorry to go back this far but I just didn't have time to respond to a couple of older posts when they appeared. Here's one: Well yes, it's pretty plain. But, with the best will in the world on the part of every person in the chain of transmission, it isn't exactly what the Buddha said. He said something along those lines in another language, and I think most of our problems with it arise from (mis)translation.

Malcolm wrote:

“Stress” for dukkha is insufficient. As you can see from Merriam Webster, suffering is perfect for dukkha:

Definition of suffer

transitive verb

1a : to submit to or be forced to endure

suffer martyrdom

b : to feel keenly : labor under suffer thirst

2 : UNDERGO, EXPERIENCE

3 : to put up with especially as inevitable or unavoidable

4 : to allow especially by reason of indifference

the eagle suffers little birds to sing

— William Shakespeare

intransitive verb

1 : to endure death, pain, or distress

2 : to sustain loss or damage

3 : to be subject to disability or handicap

Kim O'Hara said:

With all due respect, Merriam Webster says nothing at all about whether 'suffering' is the best translation of 'dukkha'. How can it, when it doesn't mention 'dukkha' at all?

If you have shown anything by quoting the dictionary, it is only that 'suffering' has a range of meanings which match your own personal understanding of 'dukkha'.

It seems to me that a reasonable approach to finding a translation for 'dukkha' would be to see what a variety of respected teachers have used, remembering that any word - 'suffering' or 'dukkha' included - has a range of meanings and that the range of meanings of a single word in one language is unlikely to coincide with the range of meanings of a single word in another.

Anyway, that's the approach I took years ago and here's what I got from it.

'Dukkha' is most often translated^[1]_[SEP] as 'suffering', 'unsatisfactoriness' or 'stress' but none of them are quite right.

Here are more translations, and somewhere between them is the meaning of 'dukkha'.
suffering injury pain affliction anguish unhappiness sorrow misery despair worry

^[1]_[SEP]anxiety fear frustration dissatisfaction non-satisfaction unsatisfactoriness aversion discomfort stress discontent irritation unsteadiness^[1]_[SEP] disturbance transience impermanence

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

Suffering works best, in my opinion. "Stress" just doesn't cover it. The attempt to finesse this is an exercise in avoidance.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 24th, 2021 at 10:40 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

IDK, Thanisarro would be an odd choice for "avoidance", whatever his other issues (like Hatin' on the Mahayana), I don't see him as a waterer-downer usually.

Stress may have a connotation in the present cultural /self help moment like "I'm stressed about my Latte and my Pilates class" or whatever, but stress is literally one of the main things that kills people and hastens the decay of body and mind, and it is absolutely omnipresent and unavoidable in life. in that sense, it seems like a reasonable choice to me.

Malcolm wrote:

Dukkha is related to pain, pleasure, and neutral sensations, which are a result of hatred, desire, and ignorance.

Pain is recognized immediately as painful. Pleasure is recognized to be painful when its conditions no longer arise. Neutral sensations are not painful, per se., but they lead to indifference of impermanence, which is painful.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 24th, 2021 at 7:52 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

...I wanted to point out that the Dhammacakkappavattana Sutta did not say:

Which suggests to me that "everything is stressful (or suffering)" was not the intention of the teaching.

On the other hand, it did say:

Which points to a way out of suffering, as promised. In very simple words, we make ourselves unhappy by grabbing on to things which can't make us happy, and the way out is to stop grabbing.

To complete the argument, the sutta is not saying "life is suffering", i.e. our suffering is not built into the way the world is, but is a result of our poor choices.

Kim

Johnny Dangerous said:

We can't experience anything through our afflicted Skandhas that is somehow removed from dukkha, dukkha is omnipresent. it doesn't mean "don't have fun" though.

Kim O'Hara said:

I don't think we're a long way apart, JD, but it seems to me that you have just imported another untranslated term (Skandhas) and original sin (afflicted) in an attempt to bolster your view that dukkha (untranslated) is omnipresent.

I don't think that helps us very much.

I'm probably willing to agree that dukkha is omnipresent, depending on what English term 'dukkha' stands for, but your 'afflicted Skandhas' do nothing to convince me one way or the other.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

Well, upadana means addictive, and the skandhas are addictive because they are afflicted, in the sequence klesha->karma->dukkha. However you choose to parse those terms, that is the process of samsara.

For as long as one has not interrupted this cycle, there are the many dukkhas of samsara.

All afflicted/painful phenomena are suffering. The only compounded phenomena not included as suffering are path phenomena. You can read about this in Vasubandhu, whose Abhidharma is more relevant to Mahayana than Abhidhamma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 24th, 2021 at 9:06 PM

Title: Re: Kagyu Lineages

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Follow teachers, not lineages.

Hazel said:

Thank you all for the feedback! It was very helpful.

For various reasons I am dipping my toe outside of Gelug and getting a sense of the land, particularly in the direction of Drikung Kagyu.

I already know the lineage that I am going to explore, but was curious about how strict people are about following one lineage and one lineage only. But also curious in general about how much they differed, which people kindly responded, thank you.

I'm talking to a lama hopefully this weekend that I hope will answer the more practical questions I had about what practice looks like for someone of my background. That of course I would not trust the internet for.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, June 24th, 2021 at 10:58 PM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

One might think to ask a Drikung Kagyu lama, as in someone qualified by the lineage to answer questions about Drikung Kagyu teachings.

Malcolm wrote:

Konchog Chidu is widely spread in Nyingma and Kagyu. The reason it spread widely in the latter is due to it being a principle practice of Situ Panchen of Palpung.

Rinchen Phuntsog's earlier treasure cycle, dgongs pa yang zab, etc., also has yang zab in the title of the cycle. So people became a little confused as to what cycle Garchen Rinpoche was actually giving.

Crazywisdom said:

Glad you cleared that up.

Malcolm wrote:

For the record, I have received the empowerments and lungs for both cycles.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 25th, 2021 at 12:18 AM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Glad you cleared that up.

Malcolm wrote:

For the record, I have received the empowerments and lungs for both cycles.

Konchog Thogme Jampa said:

I would love to receive the Khandro Nyinthig I think it's from the Drikung Yangzab have the texts from Eric Fry Miller but there's never been a transmission online anyway that I know of!

Malcolm wrote:

The Khandro Nyinthig is a terma of Pema Ledrel Tsal and Longchenpa. The dgongs pa yang zab of Rinchen Phuntsok is an appendix to that practice. Rinchen Phuntsog claimed to be the tulku of Longchenpa's son. What is present on Fry-Miller's page is a short commentary on the Khandro Nyinthig written by Rinchen Phuntsok.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 25th, 2021 at 12:20 AM

Title: Re: CoEmergent Wisdom

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Coemergent actually means innate. (tib. lhan skyes)

Malcolm wrote:

It depends, lhan cig skyes in Dzogchen in fact means "connate." If ignorance were innate, one could never be rid of it.

Co-emergent is a dumb word and is not proper English. It was coined by a German, of course.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 25th, 2021 at 1:28 AM

Title: Re: CoEmergent Wisdom

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Coemergent actually means innate. (tib. lhan skyes)

Malcolm wrote:

It depends, lhan cig skyes in Dzogchen in fact means "connate." If ignorance were innate, one could never be rid of it.

Co-emergent is a dumb word and is not proper English. It was coined by a German, of course.

SilenceMonkey said:

Lol, agreed.

I was always curious about this word. In terms of ignorance, what is it that ignorance arises with?

Malcolm wrote:

It means that in the first moment that the basis arises up from the basis, one does not know what these appearances are. Hence the term "connate ignorance" (lhan cig skyes ma rig pa).

Sahajajñāna on the other hand, lhan cig skyes pa'i ye shes, refers to the wisdom that one discovers by oneself, so it is a synonym of rang byung ye shes. It does not really mean "connate" at all, in this context.

It is a complicated term, connate for example can refer to the cause, the three afflictions, and so on. It cannot be defined in just one way, because there are many ways of understanding this term. For example, Jetsun Rinpoche, in his commentary on Hevajra, defines it as follows:

The Hevajra states:

Whatever arises connately is called connate.
Called “connate by nature,”
all aspects are unified and one.

“If it is asked what entity is connate, that is called “connate by nature.” That being the case, there are two types of connate: example and meaning. If it is asked what is the meaning [connate], it means that ‘by nature’ has been so from the start, but is not produced dependently. If it is asked why that is the case, “All aspects are a single vow.” This means that when all phenomena are summarized, they are free from all proliferation.”

But Saraha defines it:

Connate gnosis is the reality that one experiences.

Aryadeva states:

Because the seed syllable A that is the door to all concentrations is nonarising, it is said to be the door to all phenomena, and is also called connate gnosis.

Thus as per usual, there is no one size fits all for this term. It all depends on context.

M

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 25th, 2021 at 2:26 AM

Title: Re: CoEmergent Wisdom

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

One might want to have a Coemergent Mahamudra lama.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, if that is the system one wishes to practice.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 25th, 2021 at 3:40 AM

Title: Re: Luminous Heart III Karmapa, new edition?

Content:

gelukman said:

Hello

<https://www.shambhala.com/luminous-heart.html>

I see Luminous Heart is recently published.

What is the difference to this publication?

<https://www.namsebangdzo.com/Luminous-Heart-p/15706.htm>

Malcolm wrote:

It is a reissue.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 25th, 2021 at 7:17 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu Lineages

Content:

Matt J said:

I find a far greater variation in teachers than lineages. Two teachers in the same lineage can be very different based on my experience with various Nyingma teachers. Some teachers demand a very traditional approach, where you have only one teacher and they are very involved, and you start with traditional ngondro, three roots, etc. etc. Others are on the opposite end of the spectrum, many are in between.

Going from Gelug to Kagyu may give some cognitive dissonance based on how they incorporate Yogacara, especially if you end up with a Shentong-type teacher.

I tried to take a break from Dzogchen to study Kagyu, but then the teacher started to teach Dzogchen, so...

Malcolm wrote:

There are no rules, hence follow teachers, not lineages.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 25th, 2021 at 9:01 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

boda said:

Permanent unconditional happiness, hmm.

In the immortal words of Laurell K. Hamilton, " there is no light without dark ", therefore, there could be no happiness without its opposite. Maybe what is aimed for is something else and not happiness.

Giovanni said:

Unconditional state is just that. No light. No dark. Neither permanent nor impermanent because time is of the conditioned.

Original mind.

boda said:

As I pointed out to SilenceMonkey, a "state", as in a state of "actual happiness", is a condition and conditions have opposites.

"Freedom from suffering" describes a particular condition. "Actual happiness" describes a particular condition. The two are not synonymous, and even if they were, they indicate a particular condition or "state".

Malcolm wrote:

freedom from suffering is happiness. For example, when one has splinter and can remove it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 25th, 2021 at 10:32 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

boda said:

As I pointed out to SilenceMonkey, a "state", as in a state of "actual happiness", is a condition and conditions have opposites.

"Freedom from suffering" describes a particular condition. "Actual happiness" describes a particular condition. The two are not synonymous, and even if they were, they indicate a particular condition or "state".

Malcolm wrote:

freedom from suffering is happiness. For example, when one has splinter and can remove it.

Kim O'Hara said:

Sorry. If life is suffering, one is still suffering after removing the splinter. There is no happiness!

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

I did not say there was no happiness, I said there was no happiness in birth, aging, illness, and death, that is, the afflicted cycle of samsara's three realms.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 25th, 2021 at 6:56 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

As others have said earlier in this thread, that is an interpretation which is inconsistent with the other three Noble Truths.

Malcolm wrote:

To understand that there is no happiness in the three realms of existence is perfectly consistent with the other three truths. That is, to understand that all afflicted phenomena are suffering is consistent with the other three truths. Why? Because suffering has a cause, karma, and karma has a cause, affliction, and affliction has a condition, suffering, and round and round it goes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 25th, 2021 at 7:35 PM

Title: Re: Tibetan languages-dialects or different languages?

Content:

White Sakura said:

Is it correct to compare the different Tibetan languages to French, Italian and Spanish? I mean, are the Tibetan languages really so different to each other as the Romance languages are? So a person cannot just get used to another dialect? Must sit and learn it as another language?

If it is different languages then for every prayer text the first question is, what Tibetan that is? Or is there one Tibetan language spread in the western countries?

I never heard that there are different translators of different Tibetan needed in my country. So I thought, Tibetan is one language and all Lamas speak that, no matter which area of Tibet their ancestors come from. Are the monks all trained in one main Tibetan language?

Malcolm wrote:

The scriptural language is the same, but dialect and pronunciation require Tibetan translators between Amdo people and Central Tibetans. These days Tibetans from different parts of Tibet tend to use Chinese as their common language when interacting with other Tibetans who do not share their dialect.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 25th, 2021 at 8:57 PM

Title: Re: The Precious Treasury of the Expanse and Awakened Awareness: The Ornaments of the Definitive Secret

Content:

gelukman said:

I feel this precious teachings over 1000 pages needs own thread. So that those interest can find it easily.

mutsuk said:

The dByings-rig mdzod is indeed a precious teaching (obviously the opus magnum of Shardza Rinpoche) but this translation is so wrong in too numerous places to be a good reference for learning and practicing.

Malcolm wrote:

Perhaps an example would be apropos. Not that I doubt you, but others may.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 25th, 2021 at 9:00 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

As others have said earlier in this thread, that is an interpretation which is inconsistent with the other three Noble Truths.

Malcolm wrote:

To understand that there is no happiness in the three realms of existence is perfectly consistent with the other three truths. That is, to understand that all afflicted phenomena are suffering is consistent with the other three truths. Why? Because suffering has a cause, karma, and karma has a cause, affliction, and affliction has a condition, suffering, and round and round it goes.

PadmaVonSamba said:

And within that context, Malcolm can still experience a temporary sense of satisfaction and enjoyment in contributing his knowledge to this forum. It is a very pleasant distraction.

That doesn't negate the basic (first noble) truth of the 'suffering' nature of our existence.

Malcolm wrote:

That's just the dopamine, man.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 25th, 2021 at 9:21 PM

Title: Re: Can lab-grown brains become conscious? Answer: We don't care

Content:

Dorje Shedrub said:

Malcolm, could such creations be considered sentient either now or with future advancements?

Malcolm wrote:
Unlikely. Machines are machines.

Queequeg said:
Four types of birth - womb, egg, moisture, spontaneous

If an entity is aware, why wouldn't it be considered sentient? The manner of its genesis would seem to be a secondary characteristic, with awareness being primary.

Malcolm wrote:
Correct, there is no fifth birth, manufactured.

Define "awareness."

Are Venus Fly Traps aware? Plants in genera? Does reaction to external stimuli constitute awareness?

How does a consciousness seeking rebirth appropriate brain tissue in a vat?

If you are suggesting that a machine could suddenly become conscious, how is this different than the materialist claim that consciousness is merely an epiphenomenon of having a brain?

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, June 25th, 2021 at 10:18 PM
Title: Re: The Precious Treasury of the Expanse and Awakened Awareness: The Ornaments of the Definitive Secret
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
Perhaps an example would be apropos. Not that I doubt you, but others may.

mutsuk said:
I just opened the book randomly and put my finger on the page with closed eyes. My finger pointed the last paragraph on p. 751 :

(P. 751) It is the final endpoint to be-accomplished, and therefore it is the fruition. This is what it taken as the path. Therefore, it is called the "fruition path." If we were to categorize that, we can follow after what is said by the great teacher Drenpa Namkha in his Nam mkha' 'phrul mdzod [Treasury of the Magical Display of Space) where it says, "The practitioner of Great Completion who accepts the difference as being self-arising, with a knife cuts the rope of everything to-be-known, and such a practitioner of Great Completion self-liberates everything into the source, the universal ground just as it is. Through that you set up [the mind] on the essential point, namely (p. 752) awakened awareness. Two things are shown. The first has ten schools of thoughts."

The original in tibetan says (vol. II, p. 81) :

de nyid bsgrub bya mthar thug pas 'bras bu yin la/ de lam du byed pa la 'bras bu lam byed pa zhes bya'o/ de la dbye na slob dpon chen po dran pa nam mkhas nam mkha'
'phrul mdzod du bkod pa'i rjes su 'brang nas/ 'dod pa tha dad pa rang shar ba'i rdzogs pa chen pos shes bya 'gris thag bcad pa dang gzhi ci bzhin nyid kyi skye mched du rang grol ba'i rdzogs pa chen pos rig pa gnad la dbab pa dang gnyis su bstan pa las/ dang po la sde bcur yod de/ nam mkha' 'phrul mdzod las/...

But just having a look at the opening homages of the book and the intention of the author following these homages are "good" examples of how problematic these renderings are... I am not criticising the choice of vocabulary (that's a personal choice and taste) but feel rather concerned with the understanding of the grammar.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, even this much somewhat incorrectly rendered:

It is the final endpoint to be-accomplished, and therefore it is the fruition. This is what it taken as the path. Therefore, it is called the "fruition path."

de nyid bsgrub bya mthar thug pas 'bras bu yin la/ de lam du byed pa la 'bras bu lam byed pa zhes bya'o/

It should be something like:

"Since that is culmination of what is to be accomplished, it is the result. That is employed as the path, [hence it is] called "employing the result [as] the path."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 25th, 2021 at 10:21 PM

Title: Re: CoEmergent Wisdom

Content:

Yklah said:

In this sentence, "is not produced dependently", to me that seems to be contradictory to the Buddha's teaching on dependent arising. Can someone help me please ?

Malcolm wrote:

It means that your real nature has always been emptiness, and emptiness is not produced from causes and conditions. To say all phenomena are free from proliferation is to say they are empty of all extremes of being, nonbeing, and so on, in other words they are empty. In the PP Sutras, it states, "Whatever arises in dependence in truth does not arise."

Emptiness, connate, nonarising, are all synonyms.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 25th, 2021 at 10:39 PM

Title: Re: The Precious Treasury of the Expanse and Awakened Awareness: The Ornaments of the Definitive Secret

Content:

mutsum said:

not to mention the 'grig thag bcad pa ("with a knife cuts the rope of ...") which is obviously to be corrected into gras/gros thag bcad pa (resolve, decide, understand) which Mr Brown could have least had guessed since this quite frequent expression is in dictionaries...

Malcolm wrote:

Yup. In translation, missing by an inch is the same as missing by a mile. Well, you know what they say, caveat emptor.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, June 25th, 2021 at 11:37 PM

Title: Re: CoEmergent Wisdom

Content:

Yklah said:

In this sentence, "is not produced dependently", to me that seems to be contradictory to the Buddha's teaching on dependent arising. Can someone help me please ?

Malcolm wrote:

It means that your real nature has always been emptiness, and emptiness is not produced from causes and conditions. To say all phenomena are free from proliferation is to say they are empty of all extremes of being, nonbeing, and so on, in other words they are empty. In the PP Sutras, it states, "Whatever arises in dependence in truth does not arise."

Emptiness, connate, nonarising, are all synonyms.

Crazywisdom said:

Coemergent comes from the Mahamudra group. And it's connected to those instructions for examining the mind. What you are describing is just emptiness from a sutra standpoint. Coemergent as a term has Mahamudra tantra origins.

Malcolm wrote:

I provided citations from one of the tantras that serve as the locus classicus for sahaja, the Hevajra Tantra, above. I've already pointed out that this term is complex. For example, there is a connate of the cause, the connate of the path, and the connate of the result, as detailed by Dombi Heruka in his Sahajasiddhi. According to him, the cause, the mind itself, is the connate nonarising reality of entities. And I provided a Saraha citation as well. So, basically, your objection is unnecessary.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 26th, 2021 at 2:16 AM

Title: Re: Can lab-grown brains become conscious? Answer: We don't care

Content:

Queequeg said:

Four types of birth - womb, egg, moisture, spontaneous

If an entity is aware, why wouldn't it be considered sentient? The manner of its genesis would seem to be a secondary characteristic, with awareness being primary.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, there is no fifth birth, manufactured.

Define "awareness."

Are Venus Fly Traps aware? Plants in genera? Does reaction to external stimuli constitute awareness?

How does a consciousness seeking rebirth appropriate brain tissue in a vat?

If you are suggesting that a machine could suddenly become conscious, how is this different than the materialist claim that consciousness is merely an epiphenomenon of having a brain?

Queequeg said:

I'll work backwards on your questions.

Asking how this is different than a materialist claim is premature.

We need to define some terms here - by machine, are we talking about engineered, lab created biological "beings" (I'll put that in quotation marks for now because we're not sure if they are beings (sattva)), or are we talking about some sort of electronic computer made with silicon circuits and chips and processors, maybe with robotic means of action? Either way, if such a thing was conscious (difficult to answer as that would go to the heart of the Hard Question), at the least, we'd have some re-evaluation to do - along the lines of Jambudvīpa v. the reality of Earth evaluation.

Malcolm wrote:

I define a machine as any engineered device, whether biological or mechanical, that performs a specific function for which it was designed.

Queequeg said:

One option would be to admit defeat to the materialists. Then we'd all be materialists. Another might involve asking and investigating a variation involving your second question... how does a consciousness seeking rebirth end up in a robot? I don't particularly see why rebirth as a robot is not possible.

Malcolm wrote:

How would it be conceived?

Queequeg said:

Regarding your second question, I'd suggest a consciousness seeking rebirth that appropriates brain tissue in a vat had the causes and conditions to end up there.

Malcolm wrote:

Then explain those: in the case of four kinds of birth you mention, the process of conception is quite well described. Consciousness in three kinds of birth appropriate reproductive material from parents at the moment they meet. Since there are no mating parents for a brain in a vat, not sure how that can work.

Queequeg said:

Your first question - what do I mean by awareness - By "awareness" I'm taking that phenomenon we are working toward realizing in contemplative practice - Buddhanature, Tathagatagarbha, Amala Vijnana, Sunyata, etc.

Malcolm wrote:

Why? What is special about awareness as distinct from consciousness? When one is conscious, one is aware; when is unconscious, one is unaware. One cannot be aware and be unconscious.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 26th, 2021 at 2:36 AM

Title: Re: Formally Addressing Forum Users

Content:

Queequeg said:

The relative anonymity here promotes that. Its the egalitarianism of anonymity.

Malcolm wrote:

In my opinion, anonymity leads to irresponsibility. We are a Dharma forum. We should use our proper names, as do I.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 26th, 2021 at 3:32 AM

Title: Re: CoEmergent Wisdom

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Emptiness, connate, nonarising, are all synonyms.

SilenceMonkey said:

Would this also apply to co-emergent (connate) ignorance?

Malcolm wrote:

No, that is ignorance.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 26th, 2021 at 5:22 AM

Title: Re: Formally Addressing Forum Users

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

In my opinion, anonymity leads to irresponsibility. We are a Dharma forum. We should use our proper names, as do I.

reiun said:

A name is just a label.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, of course, but some labels allow us to escape responsibility to others for our actions; while others do not. Personally, I don't value the comments of anonymous users as highly as those who use their real names. Of course, there are a number of people here who I actually know in meat space, so that is a little different, and some people have legitimate reasons for not using their real name. But most of us, men especially, have no reason not to use our real names.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 26th, 2021 at 5:28 AM

Title: Re: Can lab-grown brains become conscious? Answer: We don't care

Content:

Queequeg said:

If the phenomena is obvious but doesn't fit the preordained categories, then its the categories that need to give.

Malcolm wrote:

The phenomena has not even happened yet. There are no sentient brains sitting in vats that were grown from stem cells, AFAIK.

I don't think it will ever happen, personally because I don't think vat birth will ever happen.

A better question is this: how is it that a consciousness appropriates an egg that is fertilized in vitro. Now that is an interesting question, and one requiring no speculation, since we know it occurs. I know a couple of kids like that, they are just as normal as every other kid.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 26th, 2021 at 8:20 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

"Life is suffering" is the glass-half-empty view and it taints the public perception of the dharma and (I would argue) the world-view of many students of the dharma. (And before you all jump up and say, "No it doesn't! Life is suffering!!" think how circular that might be.)

I would love us to have a better answer than that, to have a plain-English version of the First Noble Truth which reflects the deeper understanding that some of us have been working towards for years.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

Birth, aging, illness, and death are suffering. Can you find any birth, aging, illness, and death that are not suffering? Maitreya stated that isn't even a pinpoint of happiness anywhere in the three realms.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 26th, 2021 at 8:24 PM

Title: Re: Formally Addressing Forum Users

Content:

reiun said:

I'll bet you have a good definition of "real".

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, the name on their driver's license.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 26th, 2021 at 8:31 PM

Title: Re: Formally Addressing Forum Users

Content:

Inedible said:

I guess my point is that unless there is some official way for titles to be verified and given a status here, that it would be better not to have them. If only to protect idiots like me from the bad karma from assuming they aren't real and they just like the attention.

Malcolm wrote:

In fact, it was the attempt on Esangha to get people posing as ordained people on the forum, lama so and so, zen master x, bhiksu sunya, etc., that brought created the most trouble and bad feelings. Why? Because when they presented spurious or otherwise unverifiable information, we had to curtail their participation. A number of zen priests argued they were every bit as much ordained as a fully ordained bhikshu. We did not accept this position, and I still don't. But it lead to a lot of bad feeling.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 26th, 2021 at 8:34 PM

Title: Re: Four Maras

Content:

Yklah said:

Hi everyone,

According to Buddhism, there are four maras: the mara of Yama the Lord of Death, the mara of the kleshas, the mara of the contaminated aggregates and the mara of the son of the deva.

I have read many times that the mara of the son of the deva makes reference to the obstructor, the tempter that attempted to obstruct Prince Siddhartha from attaining full enlightenment. To me, this mara is very similar to the christian concept of Satan.

At some times, I have also found that this type of mara, the son of the deva, symbolizes our craving for pleasure, satisfaction and convenience.

This being the case, my question is: which meaning is correct for the mara of the son of the deva?

Malcolm wrote:

Devaputra mara refers of Kamadeva, the ruler of the highest desire realm devas.

Kamadeva is the Indian analogue of Cupid.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 26th, 2021 at 9:31 PM

Title: Re: Formally Addressing Forum Users

Content:

Inedible said:

I guess my point is that unless there is some official way for titles to be verified and given a status here, that it would be better not to have them. If only to protect idiots like me from the bad karma from assuming they aren't real and they just like the attention.

Malcolm wrote:

In fact, it was the attempt on Esangha to get people posing as ordained people on the forum, lama so and so, zen master x, bhiksu sunya, etc., that brought created the most trouble and bad feelings. Why? Because when they presented spurious or otherwise unverifiable information, we had to curtail their participation. A number of zen priests argued they were every bit as much ordained as a fully ordained bhikshu. We did not accept this position, and I still don't. But it lead to a lot of bad feeling.

FiveSkandhas said:

It seems to me that one way to cut through this problem would be to get people to use the titles granted to them in the language of their tradition. Soto and Rinzai Zen both have very complex hierarchical ranking systems; if somebody is officially certified in one of these traditions they should have a rank. Which they should use.

Malcolm wrote:

There is a major difference between this forum and E-Sangha. At its peak that latter had 50,000 users. There were child predators and charlatans, people posing as teachers, etc. It was a major headache. This is why we felt we had to institute standards. At one point, I even had a to call the FBI to deal with a pedophile. Then Jundo decided to threaten to sue us, and forum began to split up. When it crashed, and the backups were lost in the process, that was the end of it. Then David copied E-Sangha, and opened Dhammawheel, then Dharmawheel.

As for titles, thats fine, but that presented another problem, especially with Zen. American Zen is not Japanese Zen, and often there is no official recognition of Zen teachers by Japanese institutions.

Also, in Tibetan Buddhism, there is no official system for handing out titles other than Geshe, Khenpo, and Tulku. It is all ad hoc. There are no official qualifications for assuming the title "Lama" other than being given the title by one's teacher or, as is often the case, moving to America and calling oneself Lama x (this is called ocean promotion). The exception to this is Geshe and Khenpo, these are rigorous 12-14 year programs, with official degrees, ranks, etc. But there are no geshes and khenpos here as far as I know.

Of course, I have various certificates from various teachers, the Kazhipa degree given to me by HH Sakya Trizen; the title ācārya (slob dpon) in the Sakya school granted to me by the Buddhist Chaplain of Harvard, and former administrative head for all Sakya monasteries in India; another is the "lama" title granted to me by the Nyingma abbot of a small Himalayan monastery in Solu Kumbhu region who resides in New Orleans when he is not in Nepal; and my Tibetan Medical degree from Shang Shung, etc. but I don't use those here, just as I do not advertise my teaching here (or anywhere, for that matter).

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 26th, 2021 at 9:49 PM

Title: Re: nyingma lineages/cycles structures of practice.

Content:

rai said:

so some students have received Dzogchen teachings without following any particular cycle.

what would be benefits of progressing through the path within the particular cycle of teachings? does a cycle carry some particular blessings that make things move smoother towards liberation etc. ?

Malcolm wrote:

Dzogchen is Dzogchen, that's the main point, not the name of a cycle.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, June 26th, 2021 at 11:30 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

That's why suffering often isn't the right word to use. It makes it seem like it's impossible to enjoy anything in life because of a constant state of agony or something.

Of course Buddhism can be used to alleviate dukkha and find a more happy, fulfilling and rich experience in our lives in society. It just won't ever be perfect, no matter how we try. And the imperfections cause us dukkha.

Malcolm wrote:

"Bhikkhus, all is burning. And what is the all that is burning?

"The eye is burning, forms are burning, eye-consciousness is burning, eye-contact is burning, also whatever is felt as pleasant or painful or neither-painful-nor-pleasant that arises with eye-contact for its indispensable condition, that too is burning. Burning with what? Burning with the fire of lust, with the fire of hate, with the fire of delusion. I say it is burning with birth, aging and death, with sorrows, with lamentations, with pains, with griefs, with despairs.

<https://www.accesstoinight.org/tipitaka/sn/sn35/sn35.028.nymo.html>

Any questions?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 27th, 2021 at 12:39 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

That's why suffering often isn't the right word to use. It makes it seem like it's impossible to enjoy anything in life because of a constant state of agony or something.

Of course Buddhism can be used to alleviate dukkha and find a more happy, fulfilling and rich experience in our lives in society. It just won't ever be perfect, no matter how we try. And the imperfections cause us dukkha.

Malcolm wrote:

"Bhikkhus, all is burning. And what is the all that is burning?

"The eye is burning, forms are burning, eye-consciousness is burning, eye-contact is burning, also whatever is felt as pleasant or painful or neither-painful-nor-pleasant that arises with eye-contact for its indispensable condition, that too is burning. Burning with what? Burning with the fire of lust, with the fire of hate, with the fire of delusion. I say it is burning with birth, aging and death, with sorrows, with lamentations, with pains, with griefs, with despairs.

<https://www.accesstoinight.org/tipitaka/sn/sn35/sn35.028.nymo.html>

Any questions?

Queequeg said:

But a fire is neutral. It can be painful to the one who is burned, and because we chase our tails through samsara we are constantly playing with fire and getting burnt we can say, fire: bad. Being stupid with fire is dangerous.

This is a hinayana presentation that implies an abstemious posture toward it all. Well, 4NT is a hinayana teaching.

I'm not sure Mahayana quite approaches it the same way.

Malcolm wrote:

It most certainly does, citations to come.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 27th, 2021 at 1:54 AM

Title: Re: Formally Addressing Forum Users

Content:

Genjo Conan said:

But I would also note that the most divisive poster I can think of here was undeniably, verifiably authorized to teach in a recognized Japanese lineage. Didn't stop him from being wrong.

Malcolm wrote:

If its who I think it was, he was disowned by the very same lineage.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 27th, 2021 at 8:25 PM

Title: Re: The Precious Treasury of the Expanse and Awakened Awareness: The Ornaments of the Definitive Secret

Content:

gelukman said:

Well the translators have in this case decided to use these words.

Of course it may not please the bibliophiles or poets.

Practitioners practice and keep it simple.

Malcolm wrote:

The problem is this: these translations are not peer-reviewed. They are self-published.

Mutsuk is not criticizing them purely out of spite, but rather out of a concern that practitioners have accurate information at their disposal.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, June 27th, 2021 at 10:33 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

LL_C0016937.jpg

It's worth remembering that while the Dharma is eternal, from a historical perspective life certainly was pervaded by a lot more raw, in-your-face misery for most humans in ancient and medieval Asia than it is for the postmodern member of the developed world.

Personally i don't see the need to read a statement like "life is suffering" in a fundamentalist/literalist mode. When we read it more heuristically it can take on any number of nuances...I always read it in the sense of "life is pervaded by suffering." And danger lurks around every corner as a potential.

Malcolm wrote:

Kim is fighting with a figment. Buddha never said "life is suffering," he said "sarva dukkham," all is suffering. Then you have to discern what is the "all" to which he is referring. The all to which he is referring is the six sense gates.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 28th, 2021 at 12:52 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

The etymology of term to suffer:

suffer (v.)

mid-13c., "allow to occur or continue, permit, tolerate, fail to prevent or suppress," also "to be made to undergo, endure, be subjected to" (pain, death, punishment, judgment, grief), from Anglo-French suffrir, Old French sofrir "bear, endure, resist; permit, tolerate, allow" (Modern French souffrir), from Vulgar Latin sufferire*, variant of Latin sufferre "to bear, undergo, endure, carry or put under," from sub "up, under" (see sub-) + ferre "to carry, bear," from PIE root bher-* (1) "to carry," also "to bear children."

<https://www.etymonline.com/word/suffer>

Unknown said:

suffering (n.)

"patient enduring of pain, inconvenience, loss, etc.," mid-14c.; "undergoing of punishment, affliction, etc.," late 14c., verbal noun from suffer (v.). Meaning "a painful condition, pain felt" is from late 14c.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://www.etymonline.com/search?q=suffering>

Hence the suitability of translating dukkha as suffering.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 28th, 2021 at 2:16 AM

Title: Re: Four Maras

Content:

Yklah said:

In this case then, like human sentient beings, the life span of Kamadeva has a limit, right?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Yklah said:

Therefore, Kamadeva, before being a deva, may be was a human being, or one of the other six classes of samsaric beings, right?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Yklah said:

It seems interesting to me thinking about, for example, that the Kamadeva that tried to obstruct Guru Krakucchandra from attaining full enlightenment is a different one from the one that tried to obstruct Guru Shakyamuni .

Malcolm wrote:

It is very possible, but these gods, like Indra, Brahma, and so on, are not persons, they are positions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 28th, 2021 at 4:25 AM

Title: Re: Importance and Benefit of Ngondro

Content:

TharpaChodron said:

Apologies if this is covered already elsewhere...there's over 300 pages on Ngondro and I haven't been able to read each post.

That said, what is the importance and benefit of completing Ngondro for everyday folk, not young monks and nuns who may be able finish in a shorter while? How many of you have done one, or even more Ngondro's? I'm not asking because I doubt the purpose, but I would like to hear others thoughts on why not skipping it is of value.

Malcolm wrote:

No one ever completes ngondro. It is just not like that.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 28th, 2021 at 5:09 AM

Title: Re: 108 Kleshas

Content:

FiveSkandhas said:

The number 108 seems to have been arrived at through the following additions and multiplications:

What are the six feelings? The feelings born of sense-impression through eye, ear, nose, tongue, body and mind.

What are the eighteen feelings? There are the (above) six feelings by which there is an approach (to the objects) in gladness; and there are six approaches in sadness and there are six approaches in equanimity.

What are the thirty six feelings? There are six feelings of gladness based on the household life and six based on renunciation; six feelings of sadness based on the household life and six based on renunciation; six feelings of equanimity based on the household life and six based on renunciation.

What are the hundred and eight feelings? There are the (above) thirty six feelings of the past; there are thirty six of the future and there are thirty six of the present.

Source:

Vedana-Samyutta, from the Samyutta Nikaya

Malcolm wrote:

Those are not afflictions, those are sensations.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 28th, 2021 at 7:26 PM

Title: Re: Four Maras

Content:

Yklah said:

In this case then, like human sentient beings, the life span of Kamadeva has a limit, right?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Yklah said:

Therefore, Kamadeva, before being a deva, may be was a human being, or one of the other six classes of samsaric beings, right?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Yklah said:

It seems interesting to me thinking about, for example, that the Kamadeva that tried to obstruct Guru Krakucchandra from attaining full enlightenment is a different one from the one that tried to obstruct Guru Shakyamuni .

Malcolm wrote:

It is very possible, but these gods, like Indra, Brahma, and so on, are not persons, they are positions.

amanitamusc said:

Are you saying they are sentient beings that fill these certain positions?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 28th, 2021 at 8:14 PM

Title: Re: Importance and Benefit of Ngondro

Content:

TharpaChodron said:

Apologies if this is covered already elsewhere...there's over 300 pages on Ngondro and I haven't been able to read each post.

That said, what is the importance and benefit of completing Ngondro for everyday folk, not young monks and nuns who may be able finish in a shorter while? How many of you have done one, or even more Ngondro's? I'm not asking because I doubt the purpose, but I would like to hear others thoughts on why not skipping it is of value.

Malcolm wrote:

No one ever completes ngondro. It is just not like that.

TharpaChodron said:

Oh, indeed. I'm not waiting for my girl scout badge for completing Ngondro.

Malcolm wrote:

All one gets for doing ngondro is a participation.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 28th, 2021 at 8:35 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

Once again, you do not (and can not) establish any connection between 'dukkha' and 'suffering' by quoting definitions or origins of 'suffering' which do not mention 'dukkha'.

Malcolm wrote:

duHkha 1 mfn. (according to grammarians properly written %{\duS-kha} and said to be from %{\dus} and %{\kha} [cf. %{\su-kha4}]; but more probably a Pra1kritized form for %{\duH-stha} q.v.) uneasy, uncomfortable, unpleasant, difficult R. Hariv. (compar. %{\-tara} MBh. R.); n. (ifc. f. %{\A}) uneasiness, pain, sorrow, trouble, difficulty S3Br. xiv, 7, 2, 15 Mn. MBh. &c. (personified as the son of Naraka and Vedana1 VP.); (%{\am}) ind. with difficulty, scarcely, hardly (also %{\at} and %{\ena}) MBh. R.; impers. it is difficult to or to be (inf.with an acc. or nom. R. vii, 6, 38 Bhag. v, 6); %{\duHkham} - %{\as}, to be sad or uneasy Ratn. iv, 19/20; - %{\kR}, to cause or feel pain Ya1jn5. ii, 218 MBh. xii, 5298.

2 duHkha 2 Nom. P. %{\-khati}, to pain SaddhP.

3 duHkhabahula mfn. full of trouble and pain W.

4 duHkhabhAgin mfn. having pain as one's portion, unhappy Mn. iv, 157.

- 5 duHkhabhAj mfn. id. Ven2is. iv , 110/111 ,
- 6 duHkhabheSaja mf(%{I})n. healing woe (Kr2ishn2a) MBh. xii , 1624.
- 7 duHkhabhijJa mfn. familiar with pain or sorrow MBh. i , 745.
- 8 duHkhabodha mfn. difficult to be understood Nya1yas. i , 1 , 37.
- 9 duHkhAcAra mfn. difficult to be dealt with , hard to manage MBh. iv , 274.
- 10 duHkhacArin mfn. going with pain , distressed R. iii , 23 , 14.
- 11 duHkhacchedya mfn. to be cut or overcome with difficulty Hit. iv , 24.
- 12 duHkhacchinna mfn. cut with difficulty , tough , hard ; pained , distressed W.
- 13 duHkhadagdha mfn. ` " burnt by affliction " , pained , distressed W.
- 14 duHkhadohyA f. difficult to be milked (cow) L.
- 15 duHkhaduHkha n. (instr.) with great difficulty Megh. 90 ; %{-tA} f. the uneasiness connected with pain SaddhP.
- 16 duHkhaduHkhin mfn. having sorrow upon sorrow BhP. xi , 11 , 19.
- 17 duHkhagata n. adversity , calamity MBh. xii , 5202.
- 18 duHkhagraha mfn. difficult to be conceived Ratn. iv , 13/14.
- 19 duHkhahan mfn. removing pain W.
- 20 duHkhajAta mfn. suffering pain , distressed Pa1n2. 4-1 , 52 Va1rtt. 5 Pat. ; vi , 2 , 170.
- 21 duHkhajlvn mfn. living in pain or distress Mn. xi , 9.
- 22 duHkhakara mf(%{I})n. causing pain to (gen.) , afflicting MBh. i , 6131.
- 23 duHkhAkara m. a multitude of sorrows Das3.
- 24 duHkhakArin mfn. id. Ratn. iv , 16/17.
- 25 duHkhAkR to cause pain , afflict , distress S3is3. ii , 11.
- 26 duHkhAkula mfn. filled with sorrow Katha1s.
- 27 duHkhalabdhika f. ` " gained with difficulty " , N. of a princess Katha1s.
- 28 duHkhalavya mfn. hard to be cut or pierced (aim) Ba1lar. iv , 11.
- 29 duHkhAliDha mfn. consumed with grief MW.
- 30 duHkhaloka m. ` " the world of pain " (= %{saMsAra}) L. [483,3]
- 31 duHkhamaraNa mfn. having a painful death , Ma1latim. viii , 8/9.
- 32 duHkhamaya mf(%{i})n. consisting in suffering ; %{-tva} n. Sa1h.
- 33 duHkhamoha m. perplexity from pain or sorrow , despair Das3.
- 34 duHkhamokSa m. deliverance from pain MW.
- 35 duHkhAnarha mfn. deserving no pain MBh. iii , 998.
- 36 duHkhanivaha mfn. carrying pain with or after it , painful (thirst) BhP. ix , 19 , 16 ; m. a multitude of pains or evils ib. iii , 9 , 9.
- 37 duHkhAnta m. ` " the end of pain or trouble " , (with the Ma7he7s3varas) final emancipation Madhus.
- 38 duHkhAnvita mfn. accompanied with pain , filled with grief. distressed W.
- 39 duHkhaparItAGga mfn. whose limbs are surrounded or filled with pain MBh. ; %{-tA7tman} mfn. whose soul is affected with anguish ib.
- 40 duHkhapAtra n. a vessel or receptacle (= object) for sorrow Jain.
- 41 duHkhaprAya or mfn. full of trouble and pain W.
- 42 duHkhArta mfn. visited by pain , distressed MBh. i , 1860.
- 43 duHkhasAgara m. ` " ocean of pain " , great sorrow ; the world W.
- 44 duHkhasamAyukta mfn. accompanied , with pain , affected by anguish MW.
- 45 duHkhasaMcAra mfn. passing unhappily (time) R. iii , 22 , 10.
- 46 duHkhasaMsparza mfn. unpleasant to the touch MBh. v , 2046.
- 47 duHkhasaMstithi mfn. in a wretched condition , poor , miserable W.

48 duHkhasaMvardhita mfn. reared with difficulty W.
49 duHkhasaMyoga m. = %{duHkha-yoga} W.
50 duHkhAsika f. a condition of uneasiness or discomfort Subh. 156 Ka1d.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, June 28th, 2021 at 9:50 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Queequeg said:

If we really want, we can appropriate the term "suffering" for dukkha and make it "Buddhist". That involves teaching people what Buddhists mean by suffering.

Words like karma and mantra have worked into the lexicon. Its not out of the realm of possibility for Buddhist discourse to eventually exert an influence on the English language as it has for Asian languages.

Malcolm wrote:

I doubt dukha is going to make much headway.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 29th, 2021 at 12:04 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

The word suffering is intense!

Malcolm wrote:

It really means "to endure what is not pleasant."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 29th, 2021 at 12:46 AM

Title: Re: 5 Precepts

Content:

Dharmasherab said:

In Tibetan Buddhism, is there a place for the 5 Precepts? Do Tibetan Buddhism practitioners take up the 5 precepts as part of their ethical conduct or just do it exclusively when one is fully ready to take the commit (meaning that the vast majority choose not to follow it)?

Malcolm wrote:

When one goes for refuge, one receives the five pratimokṣa vows to not take life, not take what is not given, to not lie, to not engage in sexual misconduct, and to avoid intoxicants.

One can observe one of these, not taking life; two, three, or all.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 29th, 2021 at 2:16 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Minobu said:

I recall suchness in the Gompa being a word that brought about a huge discussion.

All Rinpoche said to an English teacher who was present...

Well it was your people that translated and used it this way..

suchness...another fun word...

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, it translates tathāta. Tathā means, quite literally, "that" or "such." The "ta" is equivalent to "-ness."

The Tibetan is little better: de bzhin nyid, literally "like that itself."

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 29th, 2021 at 5:05 AM

Title: Re: Four Maras

Content:

amanitamusc said:

Are you saying they are sentient beings that fill these certain positions?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Tenma said:

Would this explain why Yeshe Tsogyal's past incarnations are said to have been the goddesses Ganga and Saraswati? Is the "being" fulfilling the role of Ganga, this sister of Lord Shiva, always changing and likewise Shiva? Would Saraswati be a "position" or a more "solid being" such as Avalokiteshvara, Tara, etc.?

Since the Karandavyuha Sutra mentions Brahma, Indra, Varuna, and all sorts of gods arising from the body of Avalokiteshvara, are they supposed to be literal beings that arose from the body, "conceptions/roles/positions" that arose from a certain "essence," or what? Is the position of "Prithvi," the Earth itself, always changing?

Would Hindus agree with these viewpoints of "Indra" constantly changing, "Ganga" constantly changing, etc? Or would they object and stay solid to the idea that Lord Shiva has always been the same "being" this entire time?

And finally, could you please cite where these explanations could be found? Thank you!

Malcolm wrote:

For example, Svetaketu is a deva in Tushita. All future buddhas will be Svetaketu in Tushita before their final birth as a buddha.

Khenpo Ngalo, a teacher of HH Sakya Trichen, writes:

Furthermore, it is said that countless people have become Indra and cakravartins as result of the virtue of having perceived the Buddha and thrown a single flower into the sky.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 29th, 2021 at 10:04 AM

Title: Re: Manipulating thoughts versus meditation

Content:

LastLegend said:

Well if empty nature is no thing yet not obstructed or concealed, whatever arises from it is after. But you are right not attached to before or after.

jimmi said:

Is empty nature no thing? I don't know.

If empty nature is no thing, how does any thing arise from it?

Malcolm wrote:

Yes.

Nothing does.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 29th, 2021 at 9:11 PM

Title: Re: The Lankavatarasutra in early Indian Madhyamaka Literature

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Lindtner's assertion can just as easily, and more reasonably explained by the authors of the Lanka incorporating passages from MMK and other works, since the Lanka is certainly later than MMK, etc.

Aemilius said:

THE LANKAVATARASUTRA

IN EARLY INDIAN MADHYAMAKA LITERATURE

Christian Lindtner, Copenhagen, Asiatische Studien, XLV, 1 (1992), pp.244-279

Article of Lindtner where he shows how Nagarjuna, Aryadeva and others are actually quoting from Lankavatara sutra.

some excerpts:

Close or literal allusions, or even explicit references mentioning the source, i.e. the LS, are to be found in the following early Madhyamaka texts: Madhyamakakarika (MK), Vigrahavyavartanii(W), Yuktisastika (YS), Catuhstava (CS) III (= Acintyastava), Sutrasamuccaya (SS), Bodhicittavivarana (BV), Mahayanavimsika, Bhavasamkranti and Bhavanakrama — all ascribed to Nagarjuna.⁶

In case of Aryadeva we have the Catuhsataka (CS) and two minor treatises (Taisho 1639 and Taisho 1640) to which I shall revert later.⁷

MK XXIV.7 runs:

atra brumah iunyatydydm na tvam vetsi prayojanam /
iiinyatdm Sunyatdrtham ca tata evam vihanyase //

Again, as above, an opponent has just (verses 1-6) claimed that Nagarjuna's doctrine of sunyata is problematic. Again we see Nagarjuna introducing his reply by calling upon the authority of a sutra, in this case LS 11.145:

sarvabhavo 'svabhavo hi sadvacanam tathapy asat / iunyatd<m> iunyatartham vabalo pafyan vidhavati//

In a somewhat archaic fashion the sutra launches a general statement about "a fool" which Nagarjuna specifies by making it refer to a second person (se) in a particular situation (evam), namely his opponent. LS, like MK, mentions, but does not explain the two concepts sunyata and sunyatārtha, Nagarjuna, however, does explain the terms in the sequel, exactly as a sastrakara is expected to do. Apparently he also introduces a third concept not mentioned in the LS verse: the prayojana of sunyata. But this is only apparently. The LS says that all things lack svabhava, including this perfectly true and sound statement itself. As we recall, Nagarjuna expresses exactly the same idea several times elsewhere, above all in W and in this very chapter, verse 18. This is the celebrated stanza:

yah prafityasamutpadah Sunyatam torn pracaksmāhe / sd prajñaptir upddya pratipat saiva madhyamā //

This verse, in other words, is an explanation of what Nagarjuna understands by the prayojana of sunyata.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 29th, 2021 at 9:28 PM

Title: Re: The Lankavatarasutra in early Indian Madhyamaka Literature

Content:

Aemilius said:

That is exactly what Lindtner shows to be untrue, i.e that Lanka would be later than Nagarjuna, Aryadeva and others.

Malcolm wrote:

No, he does not prove this, and in addition, he makes other key errors, such as attributing the bodhicittavivarana to the author of the MMK, when it is clearly a ninth or tenth century composition associated with Guhyasamaja.

Moreover, the Lanka was not translated into Chinese until 443. If the Lanka was quoted in Nagarjuna's Sutrasmucaya, I might be inclined to believe this, but it isn't, so I don't.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 29th, 2021 at 9:45 PM

Title: Re: 5 Precepts

Content:

Dharmasheerab said:

In Tibetan Buddhism, is there a place for the 5 Precepts? Do Tibetan Buddhism practitioners take up the 5 precepts as part of their ethical conduct or just do it exclusively when one is fully ready to take the commit (meaning that the vast majority choose not to follow it)?

Malcolm wrote:

When one goes for refuge, one receives the five pratimoksha vows to not take life, not take what is not given, to not lie, to not engage in sexual misconduct, and to avoid intoxicants.

One can observe one of these, not taking life; two, three, or all.

PadmaVonSamba said:

When I took refuge (kagyü) the 5 were not included. So, it may vary with tradition/teacher

Malcolm wrote:

No, it does not vary between Tibetan tradition to Tibetan since we are all Mulasarvadvadins.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 29th, 2021 at 10:10 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Hazel said:

Removed excessive quotation.

Edit: And removed discussion about it.

Feel free to add links to definitions and/or copy and paste small excerpts (with a link) if you want to share.

Malcolm wrote:

https://dsal.uchicago.edu/cgi-bin/app/pali_query.py?qs=dukkha&searchhws=yes

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, June 29th, 2021 at 11:42 PM

Title: Re: 5 Precepts

Content:

Dharmasherab said:

What is the mentality in Tibetan Buddhism about taking these precepts in relation to taking your own initiative? Do you always have to wait for your Lama to take initiative to give the precepts and till then one does not follow them and continue killing, stealing etc till the Lama tells otherwise. From the practitioner's point of view in Tibetan Buddhism do followers take a passive stance and not take his own initiative to take up the 5 Precepts?

Malcolm wrote:

People can, under their own initiative, follow which ever of the pratimokṣa vows they feel they can keep. Please refer to the fourth chapter of the Abhidharmakośabhaṣyaṃ.

Dharmasherab said:

Is there a reason you referred to these as 'vows' and not 'precepts'? Why did you use the word 'Pratimoksa' to refer to the 5 Precepts?

Malcolm wrote:

The term in Sanskrit is "saṃvara," in Tibetan "sdom." These two terms mean "restraint." Pratimokṣa means "personal liberation." Pratimokṣa saṃvara therefore means "the restraints one adopts for personal liberation."

Definition of precept

1 : a command or principle intended especially as a general rule of action

2 : an order issued by legally constituted authority to a subordinate official

Definition of vow (noun)

: a solemn promise or assertion specifically : one by which a person is bound to an act, service, or condition

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 30th, 2021 at 12:13 AM

Title: Re: The Lankavatarasutra in early Indian Madhyamaka Literature

Content:

Aemilius said:

That is exactly what Lindtner shows to be untrue, i.e that Lanka would be later than Nagarjuna, Aryadeva and others.

Malcolm wrote:

No, he does not prove this, and in addition, he makes other key errors, such as attributing the bodhicittavivarana to the author of the MMK, when it is clearly a ninth or tenth century composition associated with Guhyasamaja.

Moreover, the Lanka was not translated into Chinese until 443. If the Lanka was quoted in Nagarjuna's Sūtrasammucaya, I might be inclined to believe this, but it isn't, so I don't. Actually, I was wrong, the Lanka is mentioned in the Sūtrasammucaya, but even here, there is some difficulty, since the Lanka's gatha section predicts Nāgārjuna, and thereby portions of the Lanka definitely date later than Nāgārjuna himself. One would can run the Tibetan or Sanskrit texts of the Lanka through the Buddhanexus program, and find out specifically which verses in Nāgārjuna's works match, and then see whether which phrases are in which part of the Lanka, and whether they date from before or after Nāgārjuna. The Lanka was not compiled in a day, but like other Mahāyāna sūtras shows considerable evidence of multiple layers of composition.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 30th, 2021 at 1:35 AM

Title: Re: Upcoming translations of Bon texts

Content:

fckw said:

So, where have you been able to get the book from? I'm asking because I was not able to have a look at the quality of the translation myself, since I have not yet found any seller who actually has this book available.

mutusuk said:

Book Depository.

Malcolm wrote:

Amazon

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 30th, 2021 at 2:58 AM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment

Content:

bryandavis said:

Tsewang Dzinpa is an anuyoga system with ati view.

Malcolm wrote:

Everything that is anuyoga has an ati view.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 30th, 2021 at 6:59 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Hazel said:

Removed excessive quotation.

Edit: And removed discussion about it.

Feel free to add links to definitions and/or copy and paste small excerpts (with a link) if you want to share.

Malcolm wrote:

https://dsal.uchicago.edu/cgi-bin/app/pali_query.py?qs=dukkha&searchhws=yes

Kim O'Hara said:

Thanks, Malcolm.

The link, for those still following the discussion, is the PTS dictionary's definition of dukkha. The key points in it, from my POV, are these two paragraphs, and particularly the two sentences I have made bold text: B. (nt.; but pl. also dukkhā, e. g. S i.23; Sn 728; Dh 202, 203, 221. Spelling dukha (after sukha) at Dh 83, 203). There is no word in English covering the same ground as Dukkha does in Pali. Our modern words are too specialised, too limited, and usually too strong. Sukha & dukkha are ease and dis-ease (but we use disease in another sense); or wealth and illth from well & ill (but we have now lost illth); or wellbeing and ill-ness (but illness means something else in English). We are forced, therefore, in translation to use half synonyms, no one of which is exact. Dukkha is equally mental & physical. Pain is too predominantly physical, sorrow too exclusively mental, but in some connections they have to be used in default of any more exact rendering. Discomfort, suffering, ill, and trouble can occasionally be used in certain connections. Misery, distress, agony, affliction and woe are never right. They are all much too strong & are only mental (see Mrs. Rh. D. Bud. Psy. 83-86, quoting Ledi Sadaw).

I. Main Points in the Use of the Word. -- The recognition of the fact of Dukkha stands out as essential in early Buddhism. In the very first discourse the four so-called Truths or Facts (see saccāni) deal chiefly with dukkha. The first of the four gives certain universally recognised cases of it, & then sums them up in short. The five groups (of physical & mental qualities which make an individual) are accompanied by ill so far as those groups are fraught with āsavas and grasping. ...

The PTS goes on to give sources for the second paragraph (which I might look at again after such a long gap) and then, as Heather noted, on and on and on, less usefully for most of us.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

Suffer means to bear difficulty, pain, anguish, sorrow and so on. Seems like a perfect equivalent to me, apart from the samskara dukkha, which is not properly a kind of pain, but the general impermanence of formations. YMMV.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 30th, 2021 at 7:02 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

So if we Buddhists here can't, even when pushed, put those Sanskrit and Pali terms into other, i.e. English, words, it is hard to avoid the thought that we don't understand the dharma very well after all. ...

Malcolm wrote:

And when we reject perfectly adequate equivalents (dukkha = suffering) which everyone understands immediately, it is hard to avoid the thought that we don't understand the dharma very well after all...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 30th, 2021 at 8:49 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

So if we Buddhists here can't, even when pushed, put those Sanskrit and Pali terms into other, i.e. English, words, it is hard to avoid the thought that we don't understand the dharma very well after all. ...

Malcolm wrote:

And when we reject perfectly adequate equivalents (dukkha = suffering) which everyone understands immediately, it is hard to avoid the thought that we don't understand the dharma very well after all...

PadmaVonSamba said:

It's very simple.

Mind is either at peace or it is not.

The specific details, range of pervasiveness, intensity, causes of a stirring mind are all secondary considerations.

Whatever the mind is when it's not at peace is dukkha.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, because dukkha is suffering, which is anything unpleasant now or in the future that we must bear.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 30th, 2021 at 8:56 AM

Title: Re: Garchen Rinpoche Yangzab Empowerment

Content:

bryandavis said:

And.... do you play the keyboard or synth? Lol. I had a prophetic dream.

Malcolm wrote:

I used to be a musician, and played everything.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 30th, 2021 at 10:59 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

So if we Buddhists here can't, even when pushed, put those Sanskrit and Pali terms into other, i.e. English, words, it is hard to avoid the thought that we don't understand the dharma very well after all. ...

Malcolm wrote:

And when we reject perfectly adequate equivalents (dukkha = suffering) which everyone understands immediately, it is hard to avoid the thought that we don't understand the dharma very well after all...

Kim O'Hara said:

That suggestion rests on a couple of assumptions which we have been disproving for half of this thread (190 posts and counting).

Malcolm wrote:

That's what you think, but everything is still suffering.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 30th, 2021 at 8:00 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

That suggestion rests on a couple of assumptions which we have been disproving for half of this thread (190 posts and counting).

Malcolm wrote:

That's what you think, but everything is still suffering.

Kim O'Hara said:

That's what you think.

I'm prepared to leave it at that, as I said.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

If you think there is something in samsara that is not suffering, you should go for refuge to it.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 30th, 2021 at 8:04 PM

Title: Re: Importance and Benefit of Ngondro

Content:

tingdzin said:

A little arrogant to think that no one ever gained anything from finishing ngondro, no?

"One size fits all" is not a good approach to Dharma.

Malcolm wrote:

It's obvious what one gets from doing classic ngondro, one purifies traces and gathers the accumulations. But this is so obvious it hardly bears mentioning.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Wednesday, June 30th, 2021 at 9:18 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Seeker12 said:

I think in some contexts it's appropriate to not simply equate dukkha with suffering, personally. Reason being that in normal parlance, suffering implies acute suffering in the moment, which could be considered to be the type of dukkha called Dukkha-dukkha.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, and this is acknowledged in traditional Indian commentaries; that is, the that term "dukha" itself refers to duhkha-duhkha. The other two dukhas are considered dukha because everything pleasant becomes a source of pain, and everything neutral falls apart.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 1st, 2021 at 1:13 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

LastLegend said:

So like the Sutra:

- 1) nothing arises: non-arising
- 2) then everything arises from mind

Dharma is also arising from mind. The Buddha gave Dharma. But we understand Dharma and that's understanding is from our mind not the Buddha mind anymore.

Malcolm wrote:

You guys love to make the simple complicated.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 1st, 2021 at 2:50 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

LastLegend said:

So like the Sutra:

- 1) nothing arises: non-arising
- 2) then everything arises from mind

Dharma is also arising from mind. The Buddha gave Dharma. But we understand Dharma and that's understanding is from our mind not the Buddha mind anymore.

PadmaVonSamba said:

Dharma doesn't arise from mind.

One's understanding of dharma arises from mind.

That understanding is your Buddha nature.

In that sense, Buddha arises from mind.

So, in all your spaghetti reasoning

There are no tangles after all.

Malcolm wrote:

There are two kinds of Dharma: the Dharma of realization and the Dharma of scripture.

There is no third kind. The latter arises from the former. This notion that there is an eternal dharma is just an importation of the Hindu idea of Sanatana Dharma.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 1st, 2021 at 5:31 AM

Title: Re: The Lankavatarasutra in early Indian Madhyamaka Literature

Content:

Aemilius said:

Study of Bodhicittavivarana by Christian Lindtner

This regrettably neglected text comprises 112 stanzas (anustubh) introduced by a brief prologue in prose. It has sometimes been grouped as a tantric work, but a glance at its contents shows how unwarranted such classification is.

Malcolm wrote:

He is mistaken. It is a commentary on the Akṣobhyavajra bodhicitta section of the Guhyasamāja.

Aemilius said:

The Bodhicittavivarana is never mentioned or cited by Buddhapalita or Candrakīrti. On the other hand it forms one of the basic authorities for Bhāvya in his most mature work, the Ratnapradīpa.

Malcolm wrote:

The Ratnapradīpa cannot be by Bhāvavivka since it quotes Candrakīrti's commentary on the Sixty directly:

slob dpon zla ba grags pa'i zhal snga nas |
thog mtha' med pa'i srid pa ru ||
ma rig gnyid kyis log pa yi ||
'gro la gang gang snang de nyid ||
brdzun de rmi lam lta bur 'dod ||

In fact, this text mentions Candrakīrti twelve times.

How Lindtner could have missed this is a mystery, but he is not a very reliable scholar.

Not only this, but the authors he mentions do not cite the Bodhicittavivarana at all, I checked.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 1st, 2021 at 7:08 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

LastLegend said:

if everything is an illusion and projection, how do fully realized individuals conduct their work to progress towards Buddhahood?

Malcolm wrote:

Fully realized persons are buddhas. There are no other kinds of fully realized persons.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 1st, 2021 at 7:56 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

LastLegend said:

if everything is an illusion and projection, how do fully realized individuals conduct their work to progress towards Buddhahood?

Malcolm wrote:

Fully realized persons are buddhas. There are no other kinds of fully realized persons.

LastLegend said:

I don't equate a full blown Buddha to this:

Those who get this consciousness to disappear will then destroy the obstructing confusions of the Bodhisattvas of the ten stages. Once this consciousness is gone, then the mind is open and still, quiet, serene and calm, perfectly pure, and enormously stable.

<https://terebess.hu/zen/daman.html>

Malcolm wrote:

Then you don't understand what buddhahood is.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 1st, 2021 at 8:19 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

LastLegend said:

I don't equate a full blown Buddha to this:

Those who get this consciousness to disappear will then destroy the obstructing confusions of the Bodhisattvas of the ten stages. Once this consciousness is gone, then the mind is open and still, quiet, serene and calm, perfectly pure, and enormously stable.

<https://terebess.hu/zen/daman.html>

Malcolm wrote:

Then you don't understand what buddhahood is.

LastLegend said:

Okay try and let me know years later. I probably don't know what Buddhahood is. I have no pre perceptions of how it is. I just know I need to transcend consciousness and there is work to be done after.

Malcolm wrote:

You can't transcend consciousness. You can however transcend afflictive and knowledge obscurations. When you have gone beyond the obscurations of the bodhisattvas of the ten stages, you will be a buddha. If you do not understand this, you do not understand Mahāyāna.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 1st, 2021 at 11:35 AM

Title: Re: Information on Tibetan reception of De-bzhin gshegs-pa'i gsang-ba bsam-kyis mi-khyab-pa bstan-pa

Content:

Zhen Li said:

I'm preparing a translation of the Chinese versions of the Tathāgatācintyaguhyā Sūtra. To provide as much of a comprehensive survey as is possible with my limited knowledge of Tibetan, does anyone have information on the Tibetan reception of the sūtra beyond its usage by Candrakīrti? Thanks.

Malcolm wrote:

You should run a comparison of it with the tenjur at buddhanexus.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 1st, 2021 at 9:02 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

LastLegend said:

Then he said we can transcend afflictive and knowledge...I am not sure how this is done.

Malcolm wrote:

Hence my comment about your lack of understanding of Mahayana.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 1st, 2021 at 9:51 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

LastLegend said:

Then he said we can transcend afflictive and knowledge...I am not sure how this is done.

Malcolm wrote:

Hence my comment about your lack of understanding of Mahayana.

LastLegend said:

You can be generous and share how's it done.

Malcolm wrote:

Knowledge is not a hindrance. Ignorance is.

First, one generates bodhicitta, the desire to liberate all sentient beings from samsara. This has two aspects, ultimate and relative. The relative aspect refers to the aspiration, and then practicing the six perfections. Ultimate bodhicitta means practicing śamatha and vipaśyanā.

One practices these two bodhicitta together, until one realizes emptiness. This is the first bodhisattva bhumi. One continues to practice, until the practice of vipaśyanā has eradicated all traces of affliction (desire, hatred, and ignorance). This happens conventionally, at the seventh bhumi. Ultimately, has eradicated all traces of grasping to personal and phenomena identity, and one attains the omniscience of buddhahood, this happens when one transitions from being a tenth stage bodhisattva to buddhahood. A buddha is a totally realized person. There is no other kind of totally or fully realized person.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 1st, 2021 at 10:16 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Hazel said:

Here's something that perplexes me. I am having a hard time seeing the the value in understanding the path after achieving the first bhumi. It's probably a sure bet I wont reach that in this lifetime, so why do I need to know what a bodhisattva practices at the seventh bhumi?

Malcolm wrote:

Because it is necessary to understand what kinds of experiences one will have on the path, even if one has not reached this or that stage.

For this reason, the paths and stages are described in detail, especially in Vajrayāna, where the goal is to attain buddhahood in a single lifetime to benefit sentient beings.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 1st, 2021 at 11:06 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

Hazel said:

Here's something that perplexes me. I am having a hard time seeing the the value in understanding the path after achieving the first bhumi. It's probably a sure bet I wont reach that in this lifetime, so why do I need to know what a bodhisattva practices at the seventh bhumi?

Malcolm wrote:

Because it is necessary to understand what kinds of experiences one will have on the path, even if one has not reached this or that stage.

For this reason, the paths and stages are described in detail, especially in Vajrayāna, where the goal is to attain buddhahood in a single lifetime to benefit sentient beings.

Hazel said:

The latter part about Vajrayana is fair, but since we're in a Mahayana subforum, I'd like to press you on the first part if you're willing to entertain my fancy. Why is it necessary to understand what kinds of experiences one will have on the path, even fi one has not reached a particular stage? I'm unlikely to argue about it, I'm just curious as my lack of understanding has meant I zone-out to those teachings, which can't be good.

Malcolm wrote:

Vajrayāna is a subdivision of Mahāyāna, not something separate.

It is necessary, because it is a vital part of the our path. If we do not understand these paths and stages, we will not know how to practice them. Zoning out in teachings is not necessarily a bad thing, more often than not it is a sign that we are eliminating traces of ignorance.

We do not want to be like horses with blinders on, only seeing what is directly in front of us on the road. This is not a good way to hear and reflect on teh Dharma. Moreover, by hearing of the experiences of the paths and stages, it can cause us to be inspired about the possibility of our attaining them and cause rejoicing in those who have attained them.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 1st, 2021 at 11:10 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

LastLegend said:

Okay. So if we end traces of afflictions and left with pure consciousness, will there be arising thoughts such as they will be snatched by karma? It's still unclear what these causes or traces are. Are they not an illusion to be ended? If nothing arises, how can there be something to end?

Eradicated traces of grasping to personal and phenomena...how? sure there is a link between personal grasping to Nirvana otherwise who is experiencing Nirvana?

Malcolm wrote:

You keep confusing the two truths.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 1st, 2021 at 11:35 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

GrapeLover said:

I recall reading a past conversation where you mentioned that shravaka arhats retain latent afflictive seeds, though they're no longer active—is it correct to think that this contrasts with a 7th bhumi bodhisattva thoroughly eliminating them?

Malcolm wrote:

Nonafflictive traces of ignorances are retained.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Thursday, July 1st, 2021 at 11:41 PM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

LastLegend said:

Okay. So if we end traces of afflictions and left with pure consciousness, will there be arising thoughts such as they will be snatched by karma? It's still unclear what these causes or traces are. Are they not an illusion to be ended? If nothing arises, how can there be something to end?

Eradicated traces of grasping to personal and phenomena...how? sure there is a link between personal grasping to Nirvana otherwise who is experiencing Nirvana?

Malcolm wrote:

You keep confusing the two truths.

LastLegend said:

Rumor has it they ended afflictions and have no delusional thoughts. If they do arise thoughts, they are snatched by karma. Maybe we can have people attest that.

Malcolm wrote:

SO you think buddhahood is the same as being insentient?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 2nd, 2021 at 12:22 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu Lineages

Content:

SilenceMonkey said:

Imagine a Tibetan master trying to teach Dharma to a conspiracy theorist. Or a hardcore activist. Or a western philosopher. Too much to untangle! It would be much easier to teach someone without all this "education."

Malcolm wrote:

Ahem, I know quite a few conspiracy theorists, hard core activists, and western philosophers who follow Tibetan masters, they don't seem to have the troubles you are describing.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 2nd, 2021 at 12:23 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu Lineages

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Traditional Tibetan Dharma assumes an undeveloped mind much like a fallow field.

Malcolm wrote:

No, this is completely misguided and wrong.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 2nd, 2021 at 12:27 AM

Title: Re: Let's talk about common misconceptions of Buddhism

Content:

LastLegend said:

Rumor has it they ended afflictions and have no delusional thoughts. If they do arise thoughts, they are snatched by karma. Maybe we can have people attest that.

Malcolm wrote:

SO you think buddhahood is the same as being insentient?

LastLegend said:

Transformation of repository consciousness. Then Buddhahood.

Malcolm wrote:

That is the yogacara theory. When there are no bijas in the ālayavijñāna, it transforms. What are those bijas? The afflictive and knowledge obscuration. When they are exhausted, this ālayavijñāna turns into dharmadhātu gnosis.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 2nd, 2021 at 6:23 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu Lineages

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Speculate all you like. It costs nothing.

But the retreat master died in 2019.

Lama Norlha passed away in 2018. There was a retreat in progress. Situ R first sent a temporary retreat master on an emergency basis, and then a permanent one. I don't think staffing is the problem.

Malcolm wrote:

The problem is the notion of realization and what it is.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Friday, July 2nd, 2021 at 11:01 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu Lineages

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Lama Norlha passed away in 2018. There was a retreat in progress. Situ R first sent a temporary retreat master on an emergency basis, and then a permanent one. I don't think staffing is the problem.

Malcolm wrote:

The problem is the notion of realization and what it is.

Tata1 said:
What do you mean?

Malcolm wrote:
People have unrealistic as well as untested ideas about realization. In reality, it's explained pretty clearly, but nevertheless people use the word "realization" quite promiscuously.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Friday, July 2nd, 2021 at 10:59 PM
Title: Re: Information on Tibetan reception of De-bzhin gshegs-pa'i gsang-ba bsam-kyis mi-khyab-pa bstan-pa

Content:
Zhen Li said:
I'm preparing a translation of the Chinese versions of the Tathāgatācintyaguhya Sūtra. To provide as much of a comprehensive survey as is possible with my limited knowledge of Tibetan, does anyone have information on the Tibetan reception of the sūtra beyond its usage by Candrakīrti? Thanks.

Malcolm wrote:
You should run a comparison of it with the tenjur at buddhanexus.

Zhen Li said:
Thank you Malcolm. I didn't find anything major. I think most of my questions would be answered by seeing the elusive Sanskrit manuscript, but the Chinese is largely unproblematic outside of figuring out Sanskrit names. It is definitely a classic Tathāgatagarbha sūtra and it surprises me that it remains untranslated to this day from any of the sources. I heard about various people preparing translations for the past few decades but nothing ever comes of it. I will post a link to my translation of both the early and later versions on DW when completed.

Malcolm wrote:
It's on the list at 84000

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 12:12 AM
Title: Re: Information on Tibetan reception of De-bzhin gshegs-pa'i gsang-ba bsam-kyis mi-khyab-pa bstan-pa

Content:
Zhen Li said:
I'm preparing a translation of the Chinese versions of the Tathāgatācintyaguhya Sūtra. To provide as much of a comprehensive survey as is possible with my limited knowledge of Tibetan, does anyone have information on the Tibetan reception of the sūtra beyond its usage by Candrakirti? Thanks.

Malcolm wrote:

You should run a comparison of it with the tenjur at buddhanexus.

Zhen Li said:

Thank you Malcolm. I didn't find anything major. I think most of my questions would be answered by seeing the elusive Sanskrit manuscript, but the Chinese is largely unproblematic outside of figuring out Sanskrit names. It is definitely a classic Tathāgatagarbha sūtra and it surprises me that it remains untranslated to this day from any of the sources. I heard about various people preparing translations for the past few decades but nothing ever comes of it. I will post a link to my translation of both the early and later versions on DW when completed.

Malcolm wrote:

It is unlikely that this text was commonly read on its own, and its citations would mostly be mined from citations.

In the Śikṣāsamuccaya is a long citation of ff. 161a-161b, ff. 165b-166a., f.171a, 183a-183b

In Bhāvaviveka's Prajñāpradīpa, there is a citation of f. 166b, f. 167a

In the Kāyatravṛtti, there is a citation of 166.b, etc.

In Prajñāpradīpatika, f. 167, etc.

In Bodhicaryāvataraṇajika, f. 177

In Prasannapāda, f.202b,

Etc. This sūtra is most commonly, but not exclusively, cited by Indian Mādhyamikas. There are a large number of passages from it in the Vyākhyāyuktitika, few in the Śravākabhūmi, the Abhisamayālmkāra commentaries also have several.

I would say that this sūtra was more important to Mādhyamikas.

The Tibetans know this sūtra under its short title, གསལ་བ་བསམ་གྱིས་མི་ཁྱབ་པའི་མདྲ་, the Sūtra of the Inconceivable Secret. It is regularly cited by scholars in every school.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 12:15 AM

Title: Re: Giving Up Masturbation

Content:

Dharmasherab said:

One loses one's life essence everytime when one releases sperm. A lot of nutrients from the blood go into making semen, so wasting it is abuse of the body.

Malcolm wrote:

This is not correct. Semen, bija, is the final waste product of the process of digesting food. The pure part of sukra is transformed in ojas, the impure part becomes the bija.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 12:19 AM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

...

Johnny Dangerous said:

I've seen a few people (actual medical professionals, not cranks) speculating that Covid might, over time - with the combination of vaccine and natural immunity - become something akin to a severe version of the common cold. There is a theory that the rhino and corona viruses that now make up the common cold were once as severe as Covid, evidently.

Hazel said:

What's the timeline here though? Does this require human evolution?

Malcolm wrote:

See above.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 12:19 AM

Title: Re: What are you doing about the coronavirus?

Content:

Johnny Dangerous said:

I've seen a few people (actual medical professionals, not cranks) speculating that Covid might, over time - with the combination of vaccine and natural immunity - become something akin to a severe version of the common cold. There is a theory that the rhino and corona viruses that now make up the common cold were once as severe as Covid, evidently.

Malcolm wrote:

There is also genetic evidence among people from east asia that there was a corona epidemic there, which lasted for 20K years, ending about 5k years ago.

<https://www.smithsonianmag.com/smart-news/over-20000-years-ago-coronavirus-epidemic-left-marks-human-dna-180978088/>

Johnny Dangerous said:

In a study published on June 24 in the journal Current Biology, researchers analyzed the DNA of thousands of people from around the world from 26 populations to look for signs of ancient coronavirus epidemics. The researchers found that people living in China, Japan and Vietnam faced a coronavirus for about 20,000 years in an epidemic that ended 5,000 years ago...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 12:55 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu Lineages

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

My thesis is that Tibetans never bothered to understand our negative attitudes towards Christianity specifically, and religions generally.

Malcolm wrote:

Umm no. Tibetans themselves had a negative attitude towards Christianity, beginning with the expulsion of Nestorians from Tibet in the mid-8th century on up, the establishment of a Catholic church and in Ladakh, which was established in 1625 and shut down in 1640, with all the missionaries and converts exiled. The Capuchins were expelled in 1760. Catholic churches were burned, Catholics were executed, and four French missionaries were tortured and executed in Batang, Kham during the Batang uprising of 1905 (https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Batang_uprising).

Tibetans have a very negative attitude towards Islam and Muslims in general. Tibetan Buddhists generally have very negative attitude towards Bonpos, and the legends of Indian Mahasiddhas are filled with negative portrayals of Hindus.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 12:59 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu Lineages

Content:

Matt J said:

Care to expand?

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

Lama Norlha passed away in 2018. There was a retreat in progress. Situ R first sent a temporary retreat master on an emergency basis, and then a permanent one. I don't think staffing is the problem.

Malcolm wrote:

The problem is the notion of realization and what it is.

The word realization, rtogs pa, is used very loosely, to describe all kinds of things. In Tibetan, it runs the gamut from merely understanding something, all the way up to realizing buddhahood. So when we hear that "X is realized", everyone thinks they know what this means, but actually, without some qualification, it is kind of a meaningless statement. Realized what? The path of accumulation, application, seeing? The creation stage? The completion stage? Emptiness? etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 1:50 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu Lineages

Content:

Budai said:

Celibacy is no longer a requirement in Drikung Kagyu.

Malcolm wrote:

It never was.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 2:21 AM

Title: Re: Kagyu Lineages

Content:

Schrödinger's Yidam said:

I'm an advocate for shorter and simpler retreats. Learning to crawl before entering a marathon makes sense to me. Do something until you're proficient instead of being overwhelmed by all the practices.

Malcolm wrote:

My three year retreat consisted of two sadhanas, one performed at the beginning to remove obstacles, and then the remainder of the time was focused on the other, main sadhana.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 2:24 AM

Title: Re: Importance and Benefit of Ngondro

Content:

yagmort said:

imho there is no such thing as "not my thing" when it comes to practice.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure there is.

yagmort said:

thoughts like "not my thing" is what monkey mind thinks when something is threatening its position.

Malcolm wrote:
Not necessarily.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 2:56 AM
Title: Re: Importance and Benefit of Ngondro
Content:
Schrödinger's Yidam said:
I've heard that Situ R says it is possible to become enlightened doing Ngondro.

Malcolm wrote:
Of course. Ngondro contains within it all the key points of creation and completion stage.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 2:57 AM
Title: Re: Kagyu Lineages
Content:
Malcolm wrote:
My three year retreat consisted of two sadhanas, one performed at the beginning to remove obstacles, and then the remainder of the time was focused on the other, main sadhana.

Schrödinger's Yidam said:
I like the sound of that. I also like the idea of having a bed.

Is your retreat typical for a Sakya 3 year retreat?

Malcolm wrote:
Three year retreat is not really a Sakya thing, though it has become so recently. I have no idea how other Sakya three year retreats are structured,

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 2:58 AM
Title: Re: Kagyu Lineages
Content:
Matt J said:
I would be curious as to the profile of the typical Westerner who is able to take three years off to do a retreat.

Giovanni said:
I think this is accurate. A friend who was preparing for the three year and still hopes to do it, told that there was "one too many freak outs"...

Malcolm wrote:
Young, unemployed, no partner.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 3:15 AM
Title: Re: 5 Precepts
Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:
When I took refuge (kagyu) the 5 were not included. So, it may vary with tradition/teacher

Malcolm wrote:
No, it does not vary between Tibetan tradition to Tibetan since we are all Mulasarvativadins.

Jangchup Donden said:
At least all the refuge ceremonies I went to (also Kagyu) were at the beginning of an empowerment and did not include the 5 precepts.

Malcolm wrote:
The five upāsaka vows are received with refuge automatically.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 7:05 AM
Title: Re: Importance and Benefit of Ngondro
Content:

pemachophel said:
Khyentse Wangpo didn't realize by doing Chod and Phowa,

Malcolm wrote:
The Sakyapas claim Khyentse Wangpo attained his realization through Hevajra.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 9:34 AM
Title: Re: Giving Up Masturbation
Content:

Malcolm wrote:
To wank or not to wank, that is the question,
Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer...

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 9:56 AM

Title: Re: Practice of Dakini Simhamukha

Content:

fckw said:

, but then again what is more important is that you actually realize at least one dakini to a sufficient degree, no matter which one.

Malcolm wrote:

What do you mean by “realize.” Why is it important to realize a dakini? What does that mean? What is a sufficient degree of realization?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 10:00 AM

Title: Re: Where can I buy a Tibetan meditation cushion?

Content:

ManiThePainter said:

Hi,

So I recently moved back to the Pacific Northwest from Montreal and I got rid of my old Zen meditation cushion. The seat was quite low for me and not that comfortable to sit on.

Now I’m trying to find a new cushion (preferably ordering one online if possible), one that is more Tibetan and traditional (a higher seat and filled with buckwheat?).

However, I’m really struggling to find a place to buy it from. Ideally I would want to buy it from a dharma organization so that I can also support it, rather than finding something on Amazon.

Any tips on where I might find one?

Malcolm wrote:

Hate to say it, but there is no such thing as a Tibetan meditation cushion. You might be thinking of a so-called gomden, which Chogyam Trungpa had invented for Westerners. Otheerwise, the cushions we use in nearly all western Dharma centers are variations on Japanese floor mats and pillows via the Zen tradition.

<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Zabuton>

<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Zafu>

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 9:00 PM

Title: Re: Giving Up Masturbation

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

This is not correct. Semen, bija, is the final waste product of the process of digesting food. The pure part of sukra is transformed in ojas, the impure part becomes the bija.

Dharmasherab said:

Understood. But there must be more than one reason why monastics have to follow a celibacy vow. The most obvious of which is sense restraint. But other than this don't you think that the other reason is semen retention?

Malcolm wrote:

No, I don't.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 10:22 PM

Title: Re: Importance and Benefit of Ngondro

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

..It really all gets back to the individual teacher-pupil situation, doesn't it?

yagmort said:

yes, it does.

you made a post quoting me at the beginning, but i m not sure what is your question?

my questions were addressed to Malcolm, since he commented on my words about "not my thing", so i would like to hear some elaboration.

my point of view is that even though tibetan buddhism provide quite an array of different approaches to suit out proclivities, those approaches do not suppose to please or entertain our monkey mind. otherwise there is a danger that we reduce our practice to something merely along the lines of other toys of our monkey mind, be it our hobbies, or any other activities we use to entertain ourselves or "kill time". that especially the case for ngöndro, since we have almost no teachers who can say that ngöndro is not necessary.

Malcolm wrote:

If you don't enjoy your practice, there is no point in doing it.

The approach to so-called preliminary practices varies quite a bit from lineage to lineage. For instance, in the Sakya school, people are introduced to the practice of a major yidam, such as Hevajra, immediately, and rather than focusing accumulating ngondro, spend time learning the sadhana and focusing on maintaining the daily commitment. Generally, ngondro is something in the Sakya school which one does when one goes into a retreat. The Sakyapas did not even have a text on Ngondro specifically until the 1940's, written by a Nalendra khenpo who was inspired by Words of My Precious Teacher (full disclosure, I have translated this text and it is sitting at Wisdom, waiting to be edited). Even here, the explanation is combined with four sadhanas, and there was no separate text for Ngondro until Dezhung Rinpoche wrote one in the 1970's.

The Gelukpas also have a different approach, their "ngondro" is Lamrim in its entirety, even though they have a special set of nine 100,000 practices, but they are not prerequisites for anything. They can be done anytime one has time.

The structured ngondro program is more characteristic of Nyingma and Karma Kagyu. Drigung is very heavy on ngondro accumulations, especially in how they present the Yangzab teachings, requiring, in the older manuals, 400,000 of each. Modern teachers like Ontul Rinpoche and the late Gyalpo Rinpoche, however, relaxed such requirements.

As for "not my thing," let's say you received a Vajravārāhī initiation, but you prefer Vajrabhairava, which you have also received, there is no fault.

In general, non-Tibetans develop this uptight attitude about "doing things right." Instead of developing a broad, open, relaxed attitude, they become puritanical, insisting on some sort of orthopraxy, becoming overly self-critical, as well as critical of others, whom they feel are "not doing things right."

In reality, Ngondro is a main practice. Why? It is just three different ways of relating the guru. Properly speaking, Mandala offerings are in fact part of guru yoga. If one understands the meaning of the dissolution of the refuge tree, one can even attain complete awakening merely doing refuge. Or, if one has sufficient devotion, as Virupa says, one can attain mahamudra realization merely by serving one's guru without meditating even for a single second.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 10:32 PM

Title: Re: Kagyu Lineages

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

It's much like the word prajna in Buddhadharma. It's can refer to any number of understandings. Whether someone realized the three kayas is going to depend on if you got full instructions on what those are, how to do that, being examined by your lama, what the signs are. It's straight forward and objective.

Malcolm wrote:

Sure, signs such as seeing one hundred buddhas, visiting one hundred buddhafiels, and so on, which are a sign of attaining the first bhumi, are straight forward and objective.

Or alternately, signs such as the intense pain of pranayama practices and so on, which result when ordinary people practice completion stage practices related the nadis, vayus, and bindus, are also straight forward and objective, as are signs like smoke, fireflies, and so on, which are signs of the vayus entering the central channel. These are all "realizations."

The point is that people like to say "So and so is realized" without knowing anything about the person, other than just passing along rumors they have heard about this teacher and that. I can't tell you the number of ads I have seen for this and that teacher "praising them as highly realized" without specifying what that realization is. Calling teachers "realized" is just advertising puffery.

My guru, Chogyal Namkhai Norbu, used to reject the idea that he was a rtogs ldan, a person possessing realization, and basically said that if any of his students wanted to prove they were realized they should be able to hold their hand in fire without it becoming damaged in anyway. He said he was not able to do this, and as far as I know, none of his students ever tried to pass this test either.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 10:36 PM

Title: Re: nyingma lineages/cycles structures of practice.

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

... Upon completion of the CN ngondro you do the special Dzogchen preliminaries and straight into tregcho/thogal...

yagmort said:

could you please explain why Chetsün sadhana - which is a decent part of Chetsün Nyingtig if i got it correctly - is omitted?

Crazywisdom said:

It's not. You just go through all the sadhanas in the book.

Malcolm wrote:

That depends on how one has been instructed.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 10:37 PM

Title: Re: Importance and Benefit of Ngondro

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

All I'm saying is that the typical four-part standard formula (and that is what it is, an institutionalized process) is what most Nyingma and Kagyu Vajrayana teachers tell most of their students to do.

Malcolm wrote:
There, fixed it for you.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 11:04 PM
Title: Re: Kagyu Lineages
Content:

Crazywisdom said:
But I catch your meaning. We put way too much importance on some woo woo power of so and so when it's not important at all.

Malcolm wrote:
Yes, especially since it is not our power. Patrul Rinpoche discusses this in terms of pride, people boasting about their gurus as if their gurus' qualities rubs off on them.

It is as you say, if one understands the signs of the practices, it is pretty easy to know if one has reached this or that level of realization. But we are never supposed to say what that is.

Occasionally, however, some masters like Longchenpa, Tsongkhapa, or Khyentse Wangpo do let slip what realization they have attained in order to inspire disciples.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 11:05 PM
Title: Re: Giving Up Masturbation
Content:

megaman chiquito said:
This may sound superstitious but if a man wants to quit masturbation, I suggest dousing the genitals with cold water after each urination. Cold showers also help, but if you don't want full cold shower, localized icy water will help.
I learned this from a book on yogic celibacy.

Malcolm wrote:
Sounds unpleasant.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Saturday, July 3rd, 2021 at 11:05 PM
Title: Re: Practice of Dakini Simhamukha
Content:

fckw said:
It's a practice to gain enlightenment. Like all dakini practices are. You can repel obstacles with it that are particularly connected to bad influences of female spirits, but then again what is more important is that you actually realize at least one dakini to a sufficient degree, no matter which one. They all in their own form protect against all sorts of things. Regarding your second question, typically you'd do a round of guru yoga first before doing other sadhanas, but nothing prevents you to take the dakini as the guru. Simhamukha was a practice extensively used by Guru Rinpoche, so you could even have him appear in this form and do a corresponding guru yoga, followed by the actual practice. Or you take one of his other wrathful forms like Guru Drakpur as the guru yoga followed by Simhamukha practice, followed by the actual sadhana practice. It's a bit less conventional as an approach, but nothing prevents you from doing it.

tony_montana said:

Hi, would Vajrayogini/Vajravarahi also be considered a dakini in this sense or is she a Yidam only (or is she both).

Thanks

Malcolm wrote:

The Guru Yidam Dakini thing is Nyingma only.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 4th, 2021 at 2:56 AM

Title: Re: Where can I buy a Tibetan meditation cushion?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

Hate to say it, but there is no such thing as a Tibetan meditation cushion. You might be thinking of a so-called gomden, which Chogyam Trungpa had invented for Westerners.

Lobsang Chojor said:

Malcolm just out of interest what did Tibetans use to raise their hips for the Vairocana posture? Just folded up robes?

Malcolm wrote:

Blankets, I imagine.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 4th, 2021 at 3:03 AM

Title: Re: nyingma lineages/cycles structures of practice.

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

It's not. You just go through all the sadhanas in the book.

yagmort said:

so if "it's not" omitted, it's not part of the ngöndro, it's not part of the dzogchen proper and "upon completion of the CN ngondro you do the special Dzogchen preliminaries and straight into tregcho/thogal", where does sadhana of Chetsün sit within the context of Chetsün Nyingtig then?

i am royally confused.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, correct. This is why you need instruction. You need the wang, the lung, and the tri, which, admittedly, are not easy to obtain. You are like someone asking three different people about California. You are going to get three different answers, because we have all received it at different times from different teachers with different instructions, just like someone describing Cali who is from LA is going to have a different point of view than someone from the bay area, and someone from the Shasta region. There is no one answer, but mainly, the long sadhana is used for the empowerment and feasts. It can also be a daily practice for those who want to practice it that way. But that is not the usual approach.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 4th, 2021 at 3:13 AM

Title: Re: Importance and Benefit of Ngondro

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Correction on Drikung...

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, Yangzab is different in the older manuals.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 4th, 2021 at 3:24 AM

Title: Re: is Buddha "just a man" in any tradition?

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

But many [academic] scholars believe...

Malcolm wrote:

All kinds of shit without any thing other than their opinion to back it up.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 4th, 2021 at 12:00 PM

Title: Re: Importance and Benefit of Ngondro

Content:

Malcolm wrote:
Sure there is.

Not necessarily.

PadmaVonSamba said:

I began to do the traditional ngondro many years ago. Just about everybody in our dharma group was doing it. I was never instructed to begin doing it. so, When I told my teacher (a khenpo) his response was basically “meh” or sort of, “ok whatever.” After 11,000 prostrations I realized that I just wasn’t there with it. Just going through the motions, pretending, getting a nice bump that looked like a third eye on my forehead. Totally feeding my ‘monkey mind’ if you want to get right down to it. I didn’t continue after that.

But there are two things I want to mention, both from very qualified teachers.

I asked one whether ngondro was ‘right’ for everybody. His answer was that none of the Buddhist teachings are wrong for anybody. But not everybody is suited to every type of practice. The tradition I follow is vajrayana but I know I will really never fit the definition of a vajrayana practitioner. Maybe I am what you’d call sutrayana with some vajrayana practices thrown in.

The other thing that a teacher said was that “ngondro” can be all types of activity. Not just the four 100,000s that have become the standard. One year I lived and worked at a retreat center in the kitchen. Cooking every day, I was told, is also ngondro. So, my understanding is that the “essential thing” (if I can say that) isn’t the means as much as the ends. It is what you get out of it, the clearing away of obstacles, the “purification” (I hate that word) of one’s practice. Whether it’s dumping rice and jewels on a metal plate or sweeping the shrine room floor, the point is transformation.

TharpaChodron said:

On a side note and derailing the thread, I read a comment recently online from a longtime practitioner who was saying that many of his fellow practitioners were having serious financial and health issues and were in a bad situation, given they had devoted their lives to practice and not financial security. Some committing suicide and are bordering on homelessness etc. It was a pretty shocking thing to hear. I imagine they did Ngondro and followed their teachers guidance, not that those things are connected at all to material well-being.

Malcolm wrote:

One has to work with circumstances. Teachers of Dharma are not life coaches, financial advisors, etc. ChNN always taught us that we practitioners need to take care of ourselves in a responsible way, as best we can. So it is sad that some people did not understand this point, and now feel desperate. ChNN always advised people to set up some kind of community retirement strategy, but this never happened.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 4th, 2021 at 12:02 PM

Title: Re: nyingma lineages/cycles structures of practice.

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

It's not. You just go through all the sadhanas in the book.

yagmort said:

so if "it's not" omitted, it's not part of the ngöndro, it's not part of the dzogchen proper and "upon completion of the CN ngondro you do the special Dzogchen preliminaries and straight into tregcho/thogal", where does sadhana of Chetsün sit within the context of Chetsün Nyingtig then?

i am royally confused.

Sennin said:

There's a dvd of Kyabje Khenchen Jigme Phuntsok teaching the ngondro. He explains that the refuge, bodhichitta and guruyoga is the main path of blessings, he incorporates aspects of the sadhana into the ngondro guruyoga. He explained it is totally complete this way without doing the sadhana. He explained that the tummo section is auxiliary.

That said, I did not have the fortune to meet H.H. so it's likely he taught the cycle in different ways. I don't know. Even so the way he explained it on the dvds was very informative.

Malcolm wrote:

Correct, this is how it was taught to me when I received it in 1993.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 4th, 2021 at 12:06 PM

Title: Re: is Buddha "just a man" in any tradition?

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

But many [academic] scholars believe...

Malcolm wrote:

All kinds of shit without any thing other than their opinion to back it up.

Kim O'Hara said:

True.

And all kinds of truth, too, with good evidence to back it up.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

In speculations about the person of the Buddha, not so much.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 4th, 2021 at 12:08 PM

Title: Re: is Buddha "just a man" in any tradition?

Content:

Dan74 said:

Not sure if an entire tradition can be said to teach this, but I have heard several Zen teachers say (cue the pearl clutching....) "the Buddha was a very cleaver man"....

At the end of the day, it's what gets the job done...

Malcolm wrote:

Of course the Buddha was clever, he was a buddha. You don't get to be a buddha by being a dolt.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 4th, 2021 at 12:27 PM

Title: Re: is Buddha "just a man" in any tradition?

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

True.

And all kinds of truth, too, with good evidence to back it up.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

In speculations about the person of the Buddha, not so much.

Kim O'Hara said:

True. But if you go back to the post of mine which you quoted with no context (pro tip: click on the little dagger symbol on the innermost block of quoted text, and then do it again) and look at the context, you will see that I was talking about scholars' opinions of scriptures, not of the person of the Buddha.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:
That's pretty much the same.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, July 4th, 2021 at 12:30 PM
Title: Re: Giving Up Masturbation
Content:

Dharmasherab said:
Understood. But there must be more than one reason why monastics have to follow a celibacy vow. The most obvious of which is sense restraint. But other than this dont you think that the other reason is semen retention?

Malcolm wrote:
No, I don't.

Dharmasherab said:
But it is a monastic offence to intentionally release semen according to the complete set of Pratimoksa rules. One needs to serve a period of penance for doing such an act.

Malcolm wrote:
Yes. But it has nothing to do with some health benefit. It's also an offense for nuns to masuturbate.

Author: Malcolm
Date: Sunday, July 4th, 2021 at 7:44 PM
Title: Re: is Buddha"just a man" in any tradition?
Content:

Kim O'Hara said:
True. But if you go back to the post of mine which you quoted with no context (pro tip: click on the little dagger symbol on the innermost block of quoted text, and then do it again) and look at the context, you will see that I was talking about scholars' opinions of scriptures, not of the person of the Buddha.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:
That's pretty much the same.

Kim O'Hara said:

I'm sure you can find some way in which scriptures and the person they are centred on are "pretty much the same" but most of us have little trouble distinguishing between, say, Obama and every single one of twenty wildly divergent accounts of his presidency.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

We have no knowledge of the Buddha apart from texts.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 4th, 2021 at 8:55 PM

Title: Re: is Buddha "just a man" in any tradition?

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

I'm sure you can find some way in which scriptures and the person they are centred on are "pretty much the same" but most of us have little trouble distinguishing between, say, Obama and every single one of twenty wildly divergent accounts of his presidency.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

We have no knowledge of the Buddha apart from texts.

Kim O'Hara said:

True. Which is why speculating about the person of the Buddha should be avoided (and researching him is frankly impossible, btw).

But that doesn't stop us - or scholars - researching the texts and finding out (within limits dictated by the evidence) when and where they first appeared.

I would hope that the textual study didn't cripple the spiritual study, but (this is just a personal preference and I understand that others don't necessarily share it) I always prefer knowledge to speculation or ignorance: if the truth is findable, I will say, "yes, please!" to it.

Malcolm wrote:

Since Mahāyāna sūtras and śrāvaka canons began to be written down at the same time, the bias in academic studies is towards the śrāvaka canons which were orally translated out of an earlier canon. Mahāyāna sūtras are taken as inspired writings. But this is all speculative and a matter of opinion and conjecture. They don't really take us any closer Buddha, the person. What we have are competing narratives framed for reasons we can only guess at. The eventual differences between Mahāyāna and Śrāvaka schools are unprecedented outside Indian civilization. Apart from "Hinduism" itself, what other major religion has so many trends based on so many competing and disparate narratives? One could argue that Christianity, has all kinds of trends, which is true, but all Christians share the same basic book, the New Testament, the same goes for Islam and Judaism. This is not the case with Buddhists.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 4th, 2021 at 8:57 PM

Title: Re: Getting wang/lung from different lineages?

Content:

PeterC said:

You're overcomplicating things. Pretty much the only decision you need to make is the choice of the guru. Then just practice what they suggest. If you The seven line prayer and vajra guru mantra are things that any kagyu or nyingma lama will have and can give you.

Malcolm wrote:

And for that matter Sakya, Gelug, or Jonangpa.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 4th, 2021 at 9:34 PM

Title: Re: Importance and Benefit of Ngondro

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Yeah but if we don't the point will be lost.

Malcolm wrote:

People have tried. For example, Margherita Island was supposed to be the it place. Of course, with the declining situation in Venezuela, that turned out not to be ideal, and anyway, only the rich people in the community could afford to build houses there. Baja was supposed to be another one, same deal.

It is not easy to set up retirement communities. Even a small one is a multi-million dollar proposition.

So now, with ChNN passed on to another dimension, it likely won't happen.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 4th, 2021 at 9:40 PM

Title: Re: Importance and Benefit of Ngondro

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

Correction on Drikung...

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, Yangzab is different in the older manuals.

Crazywisdom said:

I never learned Yangzab actually. My lama was all about Lord Jigten Sumgon.

Malcolm wrote:

Yangzab is a branch of the Khandro Nyinthig, according to Rinchen Phuntsok, the tertön. Its more prevalent among Narthang Drigungpas and in Eastern Tibet in general. For example, one of Dudjom Lingpa's sons wrote a 300 folio commentary on the Nyinthig root text within the Yangzab that focuses on rushen, etc.

It appears to me that some Drigungpa Lamas have a somewhat ambivalent attitude towards it. It does not really fit in with the 5-fold Mahāmudra scheme.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 4th, 2021 at 9:44 PM

Title: Re: nyingma lineages/cycles structures of practice.

Content:

yagmort said:

so it looks like in Chetsün Nyingtig they don't proceed to the dzogchen proper right after ngöndro.

am i getting something incorrectly here?

Malcolm wrote:

Having completed the ngondro, one continues with rushen, trekcho, and thogal

Crazywisdom said:

The ngondro is not like the usual ngondro. It's completion stage.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, it is not like the usual ngondros.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Sunday, July 4th, 2021 at 10:18 PM

Title: Re: Kagyu Lineages

Content:

Crazywisdom said:

But I catch your meaning. We put way too much importance on some woo woo power of so and so when it's not important at all.

Malcolm wrote:

Yes, especially since it is not our power. Patrul Rinpoche discusses this in terms of pride, people boasting about their gurus as if their gurus' qualities rubs off on them.

It is as you say, if one understands the signs of the practices, it is pretty easy to know if one has reached this or that level of realization. But we are never supposed to say what that is.

Occasionally, however, some masters like Longchenpa, Tsongkhapa, or Khyentse Wangpo do let slip what realization they have attained in order to inspire disciples.

Arnoud said:

Is that why a lot of lamas now say the signs are more compassion, less grasping and more devotion?

It seems a little contradictory as well when the signs are seeing this and that but then people get told what they experience is just a nyam and need to just keep practicing. I guess ultimately they are all nyams until Buddhahood.

Malcolm wrote:

There are signs of the mundane stages of the path, and signs of the transcendent stages of the path. For example, having dreams of purification when doing Vajrasattva are not transcendent signs. The latter only manifest when one has attained the first bodhisattva stage. The main teaching of every tradition has a detailed explanation of these in their Varjayāna paths and stages literature.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 5th, 2021 at 8:01 AM

Title: Re: is Buddha "just a man" in any tradition?

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

I agree, except that when you say "reasons we can only guess at," you are effectively closing the door on western-style historical research and (as I said) I prefer not to do that.

Malcolm wrote:

I am merely pointing out that the search for a historical Buddha or an original teaching is chimera wrought of a teleology foreign to buddhadharma itself.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 5th, 2021 at 10:41 AM

Title: Re: Reversing Global Warming - Science and Politics (split from: Reversing Global Warming -Prayers and Aspirations")

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

Lululemon Founder Spends $3.2 Million Preserving Islands in the Salish Sea

The founder of athletic apparel company Lululemon, Chip Wilson, spent $3.2 million to purchase the small Canadian island Saturnina, and to help preserve two others in an effort to protect the Douglas fir ecosystem.

"It's overwhelming," Wilson said in an interview with Global National. "You can almost cry... where's this jewel been hiding and I've never seen it?"

In addition to Saturnina, Wilson also contributed to the purchasing of two other small islands in the Salish Sea, according to International Business Times: The West Ballenas and Lasqueti Island.

The three islands all contain rare Douglas fir ecosystems. The islands support trees that are near 400 years old, including Garry oaks and shore pines, ...

The charitable efforts started in 2020 in order to save the West Ballenas. A crowdfunding campaign was started, and students from Ballenas high school collected donations from around the world; Wilson matched these donations ...
<https://www.ecowatch.com/lululemon-founder-islands-conservation-2653631873.html>

Is this in your part of the world, Kathy Lauren?

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

She hails from Nova Scotia, so, opposite ends of Canada.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 5th, 2021 at 8:34 PM

Title: Re: is Buddha "just a man" in any tradition?

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

If you look at Megaman's posting history (which you may find interesting from the moderating POV, btw) you will see him "identifying as Catholic" in his Intro so contrasting the Buddha with Jesus is fair. Everyone (including Jesus) knew from the get-go that Jesus was the Son of God, i.e. essentially divine, and it is absolutely central to his (His?) story. The Buddha, on the other hand, had a normal human life up to the time he went forth, and in fact for the next forty years.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

Really, you think Buddha's immaculate conception places him in the realm of being an ordinary humans?

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 5th, 2021 at 10:06 PM

Title: Re: The Lankavatarasutra in early Indian Madhyamaka Literature

Content:

Zhen Li said:

Rather than discussing miracles or events, as if debating history, we should be focusing on the message of the sūtra and the statements that Aemilius has kindly shared with us. How do they help us? What can they do for us on the path? Can we/how can we use them in daily life?

Malcolm wrote:

What Aemilius shared with us was a number of assertions by the late Christian Lindtner (1949-2020) about the authorship of texts in the Nāgārjuna corpus, some of which are demonstrably false.

Christian Lindtner (1949-2020) was a very strange bird. whose scholarship seems to have descended into a form of gematria: <https://www.jesusisbuddha.com/CLT.html>

Then there is his flirtation with and then reversal on the subject of the holocaust denial: <https://dagobertobellucci.wordpress.com/2012/11/07/the-holocaust-in-danish-media-1998-2006-by-christian-lindtner/>

Zhen Li said:

Today, as far as I can judge, Holocaust revisionism has reached its main objective in demonstrating that there is no valid internal or external piece of evidence for claiming that Hitler by means of gas chambers in Auschwitz-Birkenau or elsewhere, murdered millions of Jews in cold blood. From whatever angle you look at it this claim is so absurd that it in itself becomes a most interesting problem how it can be that so many people for so long have believed in what we now safely can call the Holocaust myth. The Hitlerian gas chambers, like the alleged weapons of mass destruction of Irak's former dictator, have now been assigned to the realm of myth. Or, if you wish, they are mere rumors, as Dr. Faurisson phrased it in a famous note in 1979. And without a weapon of mass murder, it follows that there can be no mass murder. Thus the Holocaust, in the sense of mass murder of Jews by means of gas chambers is, if you believe in logic, a mere myth.

Malcolm wrote:

<https://holocaustcontroversies.blogspot.com/2011/10/interview-with-ex-denier-christian.html>

All and all, not a terribly reliable scholar.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Monday, July 5th, 2021 at 10:44 PM

Title: Re: is Buddha "just a man" in any tradition?

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

If you look at Megaman's posting history (which you may find interesting from the moderating POV, btw) you will see him "identifying as Catholic" in his Intro so contrasting the Buddha with Jesus is fair. Everyone (including Jesus) knew from the get-go that Jesus was the Son of God, i.e. essentially divine, and it is absolutely central to his (His?) story. The Buddha, on the other hand, had a normal human life up to the time he went forth, and in fact for the next forty years.

Kim

Malcolm wrote:

Really, you think Buddha's immaculate conception places him in the realm of being an ordinary humans?

PadmaVonSamba said:

It puts him into the category of legendary mythology by indian patriarchs who felt the need to avoid delivery through the vagina, which they likely perceived as unclean and therefore an unsuitable passage route.

Malcolm wrote:

You are confusing birth with conception.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 6th, 2021 at 12:45 AM

Title: Re: is Buddha "just a man" in any tradition?

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

It puts him into the category of legendary mythology by indian patriarchs who felt the need to avoid delivery through the vagina, which they likely perceived as unclean and therefore an unsuitable passage route.

Malcolm wrote:

You are confusing birth with conception.

PadmaVonSamba said:

Yeah. I got that mixed up.

I was thinking he was born from Queen Maya's side, rather than being impregnated through her side by a white elephant with six tusks. That's perfectly reasonable, isn't it! ...whatever it takes to avoid that yoni hole I guess.

Malcolm wrote:

However you want to parse these narratives in your head is up to you. But this is the narrative that is relevant for Mahāyānīs:

<https://read.84000.co/translation/toh95.html#UT22084-046-001-301>

Based on this sūtra, one can hardly claim by any measure that the Buddha was an ordinary human. To say so is to claim knowledge of facts of which no one alive today can have any personal knowledge.

That said, most people are more comfortable with their ordinary perception than the exalted vision which frame Mahāyāna.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 6th, 2021 at 9:42 AM

Title: Re: is Buddha "just a man" in any tradition?

Content:

Malcolm wrote:

...

However you want to parse these narratives in your head is up to you. But this is the narrative that is relevant for Mahāyānīs:

<https://read.84000.co/translation/toh95.html#UT22084-046-001-301>

Based on this sūtra, one can hardly claim by any measure that the Buddha was an ordinary human. To say so is to claim knowledge of facts of which no one alive today can have any personal knowledge. [emphasis added]

That said, most people are more comfortable with their ordinary perception than the exalted vision which frame Mahāyāna.

Kim O'Hara said:

I can't and won't argue with that. There are, as we know, 84,000 dharma doors.

Malcolm wrote:

Only in the sense that there are 21,000 afflictions of anger (sūtra), 21,000 afflictions of desire (vinaya), and 21,000 afflictions of ignorance (Abhidharma) and 21,000 mixed afflictions.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 6th, 2021 at 9:45 AM

Title: Re: is Buddha "just a man" in any tradition?

Content:

Kim O'Hara said:

However, the OP's (somewhat provocative) question was, "is there any accepted tradition of buddha being just a normal human who achieved nirvana through his own diligent efforts?" (emphasis added) and the answer, as I said here -

<https://www.dharmawheel.net/viewtopic.php?p=588792#p588792> - is yes. Astus presented alternative grounds for the same conclusion at <https://www.dharmawheel.net/viewtopic.php?p=565056#p565056>.

Malcolm wrote:

There are all kinds of "accepted" traditions. One "accepted" tradition is that Buddha is an avatar of Vishnu. The only thing relevant here is what does the Mahāyāna tradition hold in general.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 6th, 2021 at 9:48 AM

Title: Re: is Buddha "just a man" in any tradition?

Content:

PadmaVonSamba said:

There are theravadins who maintain that some of the elaborate descriptions found in Mahayana sutras, of events where the Buddha gave teachings, could not possibly have had as many attendees (or other details) as is often written, but that is a different issue. That's not about whether the Buddha was simply a human or not.

Malcolm wrote:

A nirmānakāya is in no sense an ordinary human, despite our ordinary perception being unable to comprehend how 1000 monks could fit on Vulture Peak, etc.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 6th, 2021 at 9:50 AM

Title: Re: Importance and Benefit of Ngondro

Content:

TharpaChodron said:

I never had any more back issues once I started doing them in the mornings. That's not a politically correct benefit, but hey, it's something!

Malcolm wrote:

The best reason to do prostrations is because they are a yoga that limbers up the nāḍīs.

The concept of counting 100K plus, not so interesting and even harmful to knees and backs.

Author: Malcolm

Date: Tuesday, July 6th, 2021 at 8:31 PM

Title: Re: Bias in translation

Content:

Zhen Li said:

The best way to get an idea of whether there's bias involved is to study the primary languages ourselves and translate directly.

But to answer your questions, there are hundreds of people translating Buddhist texts, and hundreds of translations. It is easier to focus on a single example. I have a lot of experience now with Pali, Sanskrit, and Chinese, and a few other languages, so may be able to help with some generalisations in response to your questions.

Lotomístico said:

How much bias based on the cultural background of the author is involved? 19th century orientalist scholars perhaps trying to impose their own understanding of what Buddhism is...some even using Christian terminology (one specifically I can think of)

Zhen Li said:

If someone is directly inserting ideas not found in the source text, or excluding materials, that's going to be seen pretty quickly. Maybe you had in mind someone like I.B. Horner, who chose not to translate passages dealing with monastic sexual misconduct because it appeared offensive. A modern equivalent might be pronoun choice. The Buddha often refers to the assembly as "kulaputrāḥ" sons of good family and the masculine pronoun is standard, but some may prefer to make it inclusive (by the way, many sūtras are gender inclusive and mention "daughters" of good family and use the feminine pronoun). It is probably standard to translate deva as god, but obviously, this could be confused with Abrahamic ideas of monotheistic gods if someone isn't familiar with Buddhism. I think, in general, a lot of the potential confusion is coming on the side of the reader—if you have read a large quantity of sūtras, you will begin to identify what terms the translator is using for what ideas. Others might be a bit harder to parse, for instance "own-being" and "inherent existence" are both common translations of sva-bhāva. So, at the end of the day, some familiarity with Sanskrit is the best solution.

Lotomístico said:

More recent translations possibly leaning towards a new agey or western rationalist overlay to Buddhism.

Zhen Li said:

